

APPENDIXLIST OF AMICI CURIAE

Barbara Cosens is a University Distinguished Professor of Law at the University of Idaho College of Law. She teaches and writes in the areas of environmental and natural resources law, with a particular emphasis on water law in the western United States.

Debra Donahue is an Emeritus Professor of Law at the University of Wyoming College of Law, where she has taught since 1992. Professor Donahue teaches Public Land Law, Natural Resources Law, and Federal Indian Law. She has written numerous articles and books addressing the use of public lands, particularly western lands, for grazing, wildlife, and mining.

Angelique EagleWoman is a Visiting Professor of Law at Mitchell Hamline School of Law. She teaches in the areas of federal Indian law, Native American natural resources law, and civil procedure. She is co-author of Mastering American Indian Law (Carolina Academic Press, 2013) (with S. Leeds), and has written many other articles and book chapters. Prior to joining Mitchell Hamline, Professor EagleWoman served as the Dean of the Bora Laskin Faculty of Law at Lakehead University in Ontario, Canada.

Dylan R. Hedden-Nicely is an Associate Professor of Law and Director of the Native American Law Program at the University of Idaho College of Law. His teaching and research focus on Native American natural resources law, water law, tribal treaty rights, and cooperative management (federal-state-tribal) of natural resources.

Christine Klein is the Chesterfield Smith Professor of Law at the University of Florida College of Law, where she has taught since 2003. Professor Klein is one of the nation's leading natural resources law scholars. She wrote Natural Resources Law: A Place-Based Book of Problems and Cases (with Cheever, Birdsong, Klass & Biber) (Aspen Publishers, 4th ed. 2018), and Property: Cases, Problems, and Skills (Aspen Publishers, 2016).

Elizabeth Kronk Warner is a Professor of Law and Associate Dean for Academic Affairs at the University of Kansas School of Law. Her teaching and scholarship focus on the intersection of Indian law and environmental law. She wrote the casebook Native American Natural Resources Law (Carolina Academic Press, 3d ed. 2013) (with Royster & Blumm).

John LaVelle is the Dickason Professor of Law at the University of New Mexico School of Law, where he teaches courses in natural resources law in Indian country, administrative law, and federal Indian law. He is a member of the executive committee for Cohen's Handbook of Federal Indian Law, the leading treatise in the field of Indian Law.

Dr. Jessica Owley Lippmann is an Associate Professor of Law and Director of the Environmental Law Program at the University of Buffalo School of Law. Professor Owley Lippmann holds a PhD in Environmental Science, Policy and Management from the University of California, Berkeley, and she writes and teaches about public and private management of natural resources in the United States.

Justin Pidot is a Professor of Law at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law, where he has taught since 2011. Professor Pidot teaches and writes in the areas of environmental law, property law, and federal courts. He previously served as Deputy Solicitor for Land Resources in the U.S. Department of Justice.

Ezra Rosser is a Professor of Law at the American University Washington College of Law, where he has taught since 2006. He teaches courses in property, land use and federal Indian law. He edited Tribes, Land and the Environment (Routledge Press, 2012).

Michalyn Steele is an Associate Professor of Law at Brigham Young University's J. Reuben Clark Law School, where she has taught since 2014. She teaches and writes in the areas of federal Indian law and environmental law.

Jeanette Wolfley is a Professor of Law at the University of New Mexico College of Law where she teaches doctrinal courses including Indian natural resources law and Indian water rights, as well as teaching in the Natural Resources and Environmental Law Clinic.

Sandi Zellmer is a Professor of Law and Director of Natural Resources Clinics at the Alexander Blewett III School of Law, University of Montana. She teaches courses and clinics on public lands, water law, and wildlife law. Professor Zellmer is one of the nation's leading natural resources law scholars. She is the author of several books, including Legal Control of Water Resources (West, 6th ed. 2018) (with Thompson, Leshy & Abrams), Water Law in a Nutshell (West 2015) (with Getches & Amos), Natural Resources Law: Hornbook Series (West 2015) (with Laitos), and Natural Resources Law (West, 2d ed. 2012) (with Laitos & Wood).
