OPINION

The State of Tennessee appeals from the Houston County Circuit Court's order granting the Defendant, Trevor Wallace's, motion to dismiss the indictment charging him with driving under the influence. See T.C.A. § 55-10-401(a) (Supp. 2014) (amended 2015). The trial court granted the motion on the basis that the indictment failed to state an offense. The State contends that the trial court erred in granting the motion to dismiss. We reverse the judgment of the trial court and remand the case for further proceedings.

The indictment charged the Defendant with the following conduct:

That TREVOR WALLACE heretofore, to-wit: on or about April 05, 2015, and prior to the finding of this indictment, in the County of Houston aforesaid, then and there, did unlawfully, while under the influence of an intoxicant, and/or drug, and while having an alcohol concentration in his blood or breath of ten hundredths of eight-hundredths of one percent (.08%) or greater, did drive and/or physically control an automobile and/or motorized vehicle upon a public highway and/or an area frequented by the public at large in said Houston County, Tennessee, in violation of T.C.A. 55-10-401, a Class A Misdemeanor, all of which is against the peace and dignity of the State of Tennessee.

At the time of the alleged offense, Tennessee Code Annotated section 55-10-401 provided, in pertinent part:

(a) It is unlawful for any person to drive or be in physical control of any automobile or other motor driven vehicle on any of the public roads and highways of the state, any shopping center, trailer park, apartment house complex or any other location which is generally frequented by the public at large, while:

(1) Under the influence of any intoxicant, marijuana, controlled substance, controlled substance analogue, drug, substance affecting the central nervous system or combination thereof that impairs the driver's ability to safely operate a motor vehicle by depriving the driver of the clearness of mind and control of himself which he would otherwise possess;

(2) The alcohol concentration in the person's blood or breath is eight-hundredths of one percent (0.08%) or more[.]

T.C.A. § 55-10-401(a)(1)-(2) (Supp. 2014) (amended 2015).

After the jury had been sworn at the Defendant's trial, the defense moved for a dismissal of the indictment on the basis that the "ten hundredths of eight-hundredths of one percent (.08%)" wording regarding the amount of alcohol in his blood or breath was confusing and failed to state the facts of the alleged offense in a manner which enabled "a person of common understanding to know what is intended" as required by Tennessee Code Annotated section 40-13-202. Defense counsel argued that the indictment did not state a crime because it stated that that the Defendant operated a motor vehicle "with an alcohol concentration of one tenth (.1%) [sic] of the current legal limit." The trial transcript reflects that, although the indictment had not yet been read to the jury when the defense made its motion to dismiss, the parties and the court considered the indictment to charge or attempt to charge driving under the influence with an alcohol concentration of 0.08% or more, pursuant to subsection (a)(2) of the statute (DUI per se), and did not consider it to charge or attempt to charge driving while under the influence of an intoxicant, pursuant to subsection (a)(1).

In granting the Defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment, the trial court stated:

Number one, the Jurors, now having been sworn, would be advised as to the law and they would also be given the definitions of the elements of the crime, which would include in the charge the fact that he was charged with . . . having operated a motor vehicle with a breath or blood alcohol of .08 or greater and that would have been spelled out as eight one-hundredths of one percent.

The State certainly had the election to indict, as is often done, count I just as the common law [offense] of driving under the influence, and count II [as] the per se violation of .08 percent. In this case there was no count I. There was no common law part (a) of the statute charged, it was only on the presumption or the offense of having a blood alcohol of .08 or greater. That was charged in order to comply with that the Defendant in my opinion would have been entitled—or rather the Jurors would have been entitled to have the indictment taken back to the Jury room with them. That's typically the case. They have the right to have the indictment. And if they take the indictment back there and they see ten one-hundredths of eight one-hundredths of one percent, I think it is likely to cause confusion or difficulty in them understanding it.

In view of the fact that if we had a count I per se—or rather count I common law indictment I would allow it to go to trial on that and grant the Motion as to count II for the per se violation. Since we only have the per se violation, it's my finding that the wording of the indictment would likely lead to confusion or prevent the Defendant from being able to obtain a fair trial. And unfortunately, the Jury has now been sworn, and as a result of that this case is dismissed.

In its appeal, the State contends that the trial court erred in granting the motion to dismiss because the Defendant waived any challenge to the wording of the indictment by failing to raise an objection before the jury was sworn, that the indictment provided sufficient notice to the Defendant of the offense of which he was charged, and that double jeopardy does not bar a second trial despite the court's dismissal of the indictment after the jury had been sworn. The Defendant contends that the trial court did not err in granting his motion to dismiss the indictment.

Regarding the wording of an indictment, Tennessee Code Annotated states:

The indictment must state the facts constituting the offense in ordinary and concise language, without prolixity or repetition, in a manner so as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended and with that degree of certainty which will enable the court, on conviction, to pronounce the proper judgment. In no case are the words “force and arms” or “contrary to the form of the statute” necessary.

T.C.A. § 40-13-202 (2012).

Tennessee Rule of Criminal Procedure 12(b)(2)(B) states that “a motion alleging a defect in the indictment, presentment, or information” must be raised before the trial, “but at any time while the case is pending, the court may hear a claim that the indictment, presentment, or information fails to show jurisdiction in the court or to charge an offense.”

Defects which may be challenged at any time during the pendency of the proceedings include objections which challenge lack of jurisdiction in the court and those objections contending that the indictment failed to charge an offense. “Lack of jurisdiction” refers to subject matter jurisdiction which a defendant has no power to waive. Pon v. U.S., 168 F.2d 373, 374 (1948) (interpreting Rule 12 of the Fed. R. Crim. P., which is virtually identical to our Rule 12). See also State v. Seagraves, 837 S.W.2d 615, 618 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1992). Subject matter jurisdiction is the power of the court to hear and decide a particular type of action. . . . In reference to objections alleging failure to state an offense, the rationale is that if the indictment fails to include an essential element of the offense, no crime is charged and, therefore, no offense is before the court. See State v. Perkinson, 867 S.W.2d 1, 5–6 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1992).

State v. Nixon, 977 S.W.2d 119, 120–21 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1997). An objection which is required to be raised pretrial is waived if it is not timely made. Tenn. R. Crim. P. 12(f)(1).

The Defendant’s motion to dismiss alleged that (1) the wording of the indictment was confusing and failed to comply with Code section 40–13–202 and (2) the indictment failed to allege a crime. In Nixon, this court explained that the objections which are subject to waiver include “defects in the indictment that go to matters of form rather than substance,” including statutory requirements such as that the indictment must be signed by the district attorney general and that the indictment identify the person charged, the time of the offense, and the location of the offense. See Nixon, 977 S.W.2d at 121. In contrast, objections to a lack of jurisdiction and to the failure of an indictment to charge an offense are not waivable because a defendant may not waive a lack of subject matter jurisdiction by the court and, in the case of failure to charge an offense, no offense is before the court. See id.; see also State v. Lindsey, 208 S.W.3d 432, 438 (Tenn. Crim. App. 2006).

Regarding the alleged failure to state an offense, the Defendant argues that the indictment specified that he committed the offense because his breath or blood contained one-tenth of the threshold amount required for DUI per se. The question of whether an indictment is valid is a question of law, which is reviewed de novo by an appellate court. Lindsey, 208 S.W.2d at 438.

Upon review of the single-count indictment in the present case, we note that it describes two modes of committing the offense of driving under the influence, both of which are proscribed by Code section 55-10-401. First, it describes the mode of DUI that is committed while driving while under the influence of an intoxicant, and second, it describes, or at least attempts to describe, the mode of DUI that is committed by driving while the person's blood or breath alcohol content is 0.08% or greater, albeit describing the latter in confusing and imperfect language. "When the offense may be committed by different forms, by different means or with different intents, the forms, means or intents may be alleged in the same count in the alternative." T.C.A. § 40-13-206(a) (2012); see State v. Jefferson, 529 S.W.2d 674, 678 (Tenn. 1975), overruled on other grounds by State v. Mitchell, 593 S.W.2d 280, 286 (Tenn. 1980); Davis v. State, 250 S.W.2d 534, 535 (Tenn. 1952); Griffin v. State, 70 S.W. 61, 61-62 (Tenn. 1902); State v. Edward Jerome Harbison, No E2017-00520-CCA-R3-CD, 2018 WL 674002, at

We discern from our review of the record that neither the trial court nor the attorneys in the present case considered the indictment to charge or attempt to charge two alternative means of committing DUI. Rather, they considered it to charge or attempt to charge a single mode of DUI per se by driving with a blood or breath alcohol level of 0.08% or greater, as proscribed by Code section 55–10–401(a)(2) (DUI per se). Thus, no issue was raised with respect to the adequacy of the indictment in charging DUI while under the influence of an intoxicant, as proscribed by Code section 55–10–401(a)(1), and no flaws in the indictment in this regard are apparent. Because the indictment charges the offense of DUI by at least one means, it was not subject to dismissal for failure to state an offense, and the trial court erred in dismissing the indictment on this basis.

As we have stated, the question of whether an indictment charged an offense is not a matter which was required to be raised before the trial began. See Tenn. R. Crim. P. 12(b)(2)(B), (f)(1). Although the trial court erred in concluding that the indictment failed to state an offense, it did not err in addressing the issue after the Defendant’s trial began. See Tenn. R. Crim. P. 12(b)(2)(B), 12(f); Nixon, 977 S.W.2d at 121; State v. Hilliard, 906 S.W.2d 466, 470 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1995)

(stating that the defendant did not waive an objection to an indictment which failed to charge the element of the offense requiring possession of one-half gram or more of cocaine because the defendant did not raise the issue before the trial).

Because the indictment charges or attempts to charge the offense of DUI by two distinct modes, the question becomes whether the Defendant waived any challenge to the disputed language in the indictment relative to the description of the DUI per se mode of the offense. The Defendant's allegation that the indictment was confusing and did not comply with Code section 40-13-202 speaks to the form of the indictment. Because we have determined that the indictment charges DUI by driving while under the influence of an intoxicant pursuant to Code section 55-10-401(a)(1), any deficiency of the indictment to charge DUI per se pursuant to Code section 55-10-401(a)(2) would not be fatal, in and of itself, to the indictment's showing of jurisdiction or charging of the offense of DUI. See State v. Culp, 891 S.W.2d 232, 236 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1994) (stating that "[a]n indictment is not bad or fatal if it is unnecessarily prolix, or if it contains surplus words" and that surplus words may be disregarded if, in their absence, the offense remains sufficiently charged (citing State v. Bellville, 66 Tenn. 548, 549 (1874))). Therefore, the Defendant's objection to the verbiage of the DUI per se allegations is the type of objection which Tennessee Rule of Criminal Procedure 12(b)(2)(B) requires to be raised before the trial. See State v. Bowers, 673 S.W.2d 887, 888 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1984) (stating that a citation to an erroneous statute was surplusage and that, absent a showing the defendant was misled by the erroneous language, any objection to a defect in the indictment which was ascertainable before the trial is waived if the objection is not raised before the trial); cf. Lindsey, 208 S.W.3d at 437–39 (holding that by not objecting before the trial began, the defendant waived any objection to a defective indictment which charged two distinct offenses in a single count).

The Defendant argues that the language of the indictment would have confused the jury during its deliberations, had they occurred. Because the Defendant elected to wait until after the jury was sworn to object to the form of the indictment, any confusing or imprecise language could have been amended with his consent pursuant to Tennessee Rule of Criminal Procedure 7(b)(1). Dismissal based upon the form of an indictment which charged an offense and conferred jurisdiction upon the trial court, however, was not a remedy available to him after the trial began. See Tenn. R. Crim. P. 12(b)(2)(B).

Finally, we address the State's contention that double jeopardy does not bar a second trial.

Retrial is . . . permissible . . . if the defendant through his counsel actively sought or consented to premature termination of the proceedings. United States v. Scott, 437 U.S. 82, 98 S.Ct. 2187, 57 L.Ed.2d 65 (1978); Seiber v. State, 542 S.W.2d 381, 385 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1976). In such a case the accused has deliberately elected to forego his right to have guilt or innocence determined by the first trier of fact.

State v. Knight, 616 S.W.2d 593, 596 (Tenn. 1981); see United States v. Scott, 437 U.S. 82, 94-101 (1978) (holding that double jeopardy does not bar a subsequent trial of a defendant who sought and successfully obtained termination of the trial on a basis other than insufficiency of the evidence); State v. Mounce, 859 S.W.2d 319, 321 (Tenn. 1993). The trial court dismissed the indictment on the Defendant's motion. As such, the Defendant elected to forego his right to have a jury determination of his guilt or innocence, and double jeopardy does not bar a subsequent trial due to the trial court's error in dismissing the indictment.

In consideration of the foregoing and the record as a whole, the judgment is reversed. The indictment is reinstated, and the case is remanded for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

[2] EXCERPT OF TRIAL

THE COURT: All right. That brings us back to 2016-CR-83, State vs. Trevor Wallace, and I believe this is our trial; is that correct?

MR. RUNYON: Yes, Your Honor.

(WHEREUPON, Jury selection is commenced and completed.)

THE COURT: Ladies and Gentlemen, you will be our Jury for this trial today. So if you will please stand and face our Clerk and let her administer the oath.

(WHEREUPON, the Jury is administered the oath and all Jurors are sworn.)

THE COURT: All right, Ladies and Gentlemen, those of you who were not selected for this Jury trial, and you all can have a seat, just understand that you are still on the hook for our trial tomorrow. So if you will call after – Let's see, you need to call the Clerk's office after five o'clock PM for further instructions about whether or not we will need you tomorrow morning, and if you need an excuse for your work you can pick one up in the Clerk's office. And you may do that. If you would like to stay and watch this proceeding and you are able to do so, it's a public [3] trial, or if you would like to leave and go about your business you may do that now.

(WHEREUPON, other matters on the docket for the day are taken up by the Court.)

THE COURT: Ladies and Gentlemen, those of you who are on the Jury for this trial, we are running off the copies for you of our initial charge. That's a fairly lengthy document that you know from having served on Juries before that I am going to have to read to you. So if you would like to take a recess before we begin doing that, we'll give you a 15 minute recess. If you want to go outside, do whatever you want to do, go to the restroom, if you smoke you can go smoke.

There are a couple of rules that you will be advised of in the charge. Those rules are, as Mr. Runyon alluded to, you should not discuss this case with anyone, nor should you talk to any of the witnesses or any of the parties in this case, even to say good morning or hello. Just ignore them.

The second thing is, don't let anyone talk to you about this case. If anyone attempts to do that you should talk to me or let our baliff, Mr. Coffelt know. I had a case over in Dickson County not too long ago where we did this very thing. Actually, it was Stewart County. But we were at this point in the trial, [4] we had already sworn the Jury, and then one of the Jurors started talking about the case and apparently did not tell us that he knew all about the case and he started telling all of the other Jurors. So that resulted in a mistrial and everything that we had done to that point was for naught. So don't talk about the case among yourselves, don't talk about general theories about driving under the influence cases. Just talk about the weather, or sports or anything else.

Now, if you would like to take your mid-morning recess under those instructions, we will give you more complete instructions when we return at 10:15. Court will be in recess until 10:15.

(WHEREUPON, the Jury has exited the courtroom and a recess is taken.)

THE COURT: Are we ready for the Jury?

MR. RUNYON: May I pass forward a Motion, Judge?

THE COURT: You may.

MR. RUNYON: As I told General Woodall, I realized very recently that the indictment in this case alleges that my client had one-tenth of the – it reads ten-hundredths of eight-hundredths of one percent of alcohol. Now, it does have the .08. However, the indictment also includes the fact that it alleges drugs [5] also in the indictment.

The 40-13-202 says, “The indictment must state the facts constituting the offense in ordinary and concise language, without prolixity or repetition, in a manner so as to enable a person of common understanding to know what is intended,” and it goes forward. And it states two different amounts. I think the indictment does not allege a crime.

The law that I have looked at, briefly albeit in this matter, though sometimes there is relief from inadvertent, unintentional drafting errors, this, because T. C. A. 55-10-401 does have under subsection (1), “under the influence of intoxicant, controlled substance,” et cetera, and then subsection (2), “.08 or more,” the State did not – they elected to indict him only on the per se count. He is not indicted on the general count. The Jury has been sworn and the Defendant does not consent to an amendment of the indictment.

GENERAL WOODALL: Your Honor, this is a typo regarding this case, but it clearly states in the indictment that it’s .08 percent or greater. The language refers I guess to the old statute which used to be .10 percent. But again, I would just stress that it does say .08 percent in the indictment. That is the law [6] in the State of Tennessee and that’s what they will be charged today.

As far as the and/or under the influence of an intoxicant and/or drug, –

THE COURT: When you read the indictment to the Jury what are you going to read to them? Are you going to read the wording of the indictment?

GENERAL WOODALL: I was going to. Now that I have been aware of this I was going to read, “While having an alcohol concentration in his blood or breath of eight-hundredths of one percent.”

THE COURT: That’s not what the indictment says, though, is it? You would be reading them something that the indictment does not reflect.

GENERAL WOODALL: But I also in all of these cases, too, have to redact feloniously, or class A.

felony, or – I can't say class A. misdemeanor and that is in the indictment as well.

Your Honor, I believe even though there is a typo in this indictment it is not fatal. Therefore, his Motion to Dismiss should be denied. The fact that it does clearly state eight-hundredths of one percent or greater, that is the law in Tennessee and it's in the indictment, and I believe this Motion to Dismiss should be denied.

[7] THE COURT: So, Mr. Runyon, do you have any case law that reflects your –

MR. RUNYON: I couldn't find any on DUI. Like I said, there's some case law on unintentional drafting errors. There's some cases that show if the T. C. A. was cited, you know, it can be permissible in certain situations. I couldn't find it on the DUI. And again, because there's different ways for my client to be charged with DUI, I think this is distinguished from that in that – for the reasons I have already stated.

If you look at 40-13-202, "The facts constituting the offense in ordinary and concise language in a manner so as to enable a person of common understanding." This indictment doesn't do that. It alleges ten-hundredths of eight-hundredths of one percent, and then the .08. At best, you have got two different allegations.

THE COURT: Let me go ahead and make a ruling on this.

Number one, the Jurors, now having been sworn, would be advised as to the law and they would also be given the definitions of the elements of the crime, which would include in the charge the fact that he was charged with point, you know, having operated a motor vehicle with a breath or blood alcohol of .08 or [8] greater and that would have been spelled out as eight one-hundredths of one percent.

The State certainly had the election to indict, as is often done, count I is just the common law of driving under the influence, and count II is to the per se violation of .08 percent. In this case there was no count I. There was no common law part (a) of the statute charged, it was only on the presumption or the offense of having a blood alcohol of .08 or greater. That was charged in order to comply with that the Defendants in my opinion would have been entitled – or rather the Jurors would have been entitled to have the indictment taken back into the Jury room with them. That's typically the case. They have the right to have the indictment. And if they take the indictment back there and they see ten one-hundredths of eight one-hundredths of one percent, I think it is likely to cause confusion or difficulty in them understanding it.

In view of the fact that if we had a count I per se – or rather count I common law indictment I would allow it to go to trial on that and grant the Motion as to count II for the per se violation. Since we only have the per se violation, it's my finding that the wording of the indictment would likely lead to confusion or prevent the Defendant from being able to [9] obtain a fair trial. And unfortunately, the Jury has now been sworn, and as a result of that this case is dismissed.

MR. RUNYON: Thank you, Your Honor.

GENERAL WOODALL: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Bring the Jury back. Don't leave and let me explain this to the Jury, please.

(WHEREUPON, the Jury is reentering the courtroom.)

THE COURT: All right, Ladies and Gentlemen, let me talk to you for a moment.

Essentially my job as your Judge is to be an arbiter of the rules. I'm kind of a referee. And we have rules that our lawsuits proceed on and we have technical requirements that the law has to be met. And it's my job when somebody makes what is called an objection or a motion to make a ruling on the law. It doesn't necessarily reflect what I personally believe, it doesn't reflect whether I think this is a good outcome or not, but it requires me to make a ruling that I think is correct under the law.

There are certain things that happen in cases that we don't always anticipate. For example, in this case the Defendant was charged with having a blood alcohol – with driving under the influence of an [10] intoxicant with a blood alcohol of .08 or greater. That's what the statute requires. The inadvertent wording of the indictment in this case, which you would have been read and would have been able to take the indictment back with you, has different language in that. It has ten one-hundredths of eight one-hundredths of one percent. Confusing at the very least.

In order to insure that the Defendant is given a fair trial and that there's no confusion about what the charge is and what the State's burden is, that has to be correct. In other words, it has to tell you what the charge is and what you are required to find.

In this case after you have been sworn as a Jury then what we call jeopardy attaches, which means that now you are sworn to try this case. So therefore, the Defendant has now made a Motion to Dismiss the Indictment based upon the fact that there's a technical error in the indictment. Whether I agree that that's a good outcome or not doesn't matter. I'm required to enforce the law, and the law in my opinion does state that you have to have clear and concise language in the indictment that states that.

It's an understandable mistake, it's an understandable technical error by somebody who prepared the indictment. I don't fault the lawyers involved in [11] the case, except for the fact that they haven't brought this to our attention until now. As a tactical strategy the Defendant has every right to wait until the Jury is sworn because that means this case can never be brought back again.

So I am just simply advising you that I thank you for your time this morning. I hope you all have something that you want to do on a beautiful day. But I have granted the Defendant's Motion to Dismiss the Indictment because of the fact that the language of the indictment does not comport with the statute that we have to deal with. It is my responsibility to make those decisions. The State does not agree with my decision, I can tell you that, but it is a situation where I'm required to do what I think is correct.

So thank you for your time, call after five o'clock today to see whether or not we are going to need you for tomorrow, and we will go from there. This case is dismissed, Court is adjourned.

(WHEREUPON, Court is adjourned.)
