This Court's previous order scheduling the instant motion/petition for a conference/hearing dated October 28, 2017 (J. Greco) is hereby vacated sua sponte, and, upon the foregoing papers, as well as oral arguments by the parties', petitioner appearing pro se, the following is this Court's decision:

This proceeding arises from a determination by the respondent, without a hearing regarding a compliant filed by petitioner on March 28, 2016. The Determination and Order finding "no probable cause to believe that respondent [Fortune Society] has engaged in, or is engaging in the unlawful discriminatory practice complained of" was a three page document signed by Director Yearwood-Drury on September 23, 2016. It was supported by a Final Investigation Report and Basis of Determination dated August 17, 2016, submitted by Rodlind Purrini a Human Rights Specialist I and reviewed and approved by Cynthia B. Mendoza-Garcia a Human Rights Specialist II. Petitioner argues that this determination was arbitrary, capricious and biased especially in light of the investigator's knowledge that he and one of his interviewers had an acrimonious relationship.

The court notes that respondent Fortune Society does not seem to have appeared in this proceeding and did not appear for the conference/hearing.

Briefly, petitioner's complaint to the Division of Human Rights ("The Division") was precipitated by a job interview that did not result in his hire by the Fortune Society ("Fortune"). His complaint alleges that Fortune subjected him to unlawful discriminatory practices in relation to employment and that it did not hire him based on his age, arrest and conviction record, and disability. However, he also indicates that he and one of his interviewers had a history; an acrimonious one at that, in which they shared a common criminal past, addiction and disability. He likens this to a conflict of interest and states that the interviewer should have recused himself from the process. The court opines that this relationship is actually at the heart of this matter.

As noted in the Determination and Order petitioner was not hired because Fortune found that he "did not have the depth of work experience in case management, counseling, and group facilitation that... was necessary to succeed in [the] challenging position" (see Determination and Order, supra). Further, petitioner's past work experience was only as a trainee or intern and the presumed support and assistance that he had in those positions was not available to him with respect to the open position. The Determination and Order indicated that both parties acknowledged they knew each other and petitioner never requested recusal nor voiced his uneasiness in continuing with the interview. It was noted that petitioner did not allege that he was asked any questions that would imply a discriminatory animus.

"Where, as here, the New York State Division of Human Rights... renders a determination of no probable cause without holding a hearing, the appropriate standard of review is whether the probable cause determination was arbitrary and capricious or lacked a rational basis" (Gordon v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 126 AD3d 697, 698 [2nd Dept. 2015] citing Ramirez v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 4 NY3d 789 [2005], Matter of Pora v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 103 AD3d 739 [2nd Dept. 2013], Matter of Orosz v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 88 AD3d 798 [2nd Dept. 2011]). The Court finds respondent's determination of no probable cause was not arbitrary and capricious and was rational. The record reflects a well reasoned determination based upon a review of documents submitted as well as conferences with both parties involved, and a review of other comparative data.

"To the extent that the petitioner contends that the Division's investigation was one-sided..., the Division has broad discretion in the conduct of its investigations, (see Matter of Orosz, supra at 798 citing 9 NYCRR 465.6, Matter of Malisev v New York State Division of Human Rights, 31 AD3d 641 [2nd Dept. 2005], Matter of Brzile v Actnapura, 225 AD2d 764 [2nd Dept. 1996]). The record reflects here petitioner had a full opportunity to present his case, make submissions and participate in a conference, (see e.g. Matter of Orosz, supra, Matter of Rauch v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 73 AD3d 930 [2nd Dept. 2010], Matter of Malisev, supra at 641, Matter of Cornelius v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 286 AD2d 329 [2nd Dept. 2001]). This Court rejects petitioner's bias argument.

The court notes that The Division's "determinations are entitled to considerable deference due to its expertise in evaluating discrimination claims" (Matter of Cornelius, supra at 330; see also Matter of Sldoti v New York State Div. of Human Rights, 212 AD2d 537, 538 [2nd Dept. 1995]). This Court affords The Division such deference.

The petition is denied in its entirety and this proceeding is dismissed. This court also notes petitioner's requests for a public hearing and transfer of this matter to federal court are unsupported. There is no basis cited upon which this relief can be granted.

A copy of this decision with notice of entry shall be served upon respondents within twenty (20) days of the date of entry hereof.
