13 United States Attorney for the 16 Appeal from a judgment of the United States District Court for the Northern 17 District of New York (Thomas J. McAvoy, Judge).

18 UPON DUE CONSIDERATION, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED, ADJUDGED,
19 AND DECREED that the judgment of the District Court is AFFIRMED.

20 Ryan T. Root appeals from a judgment of the District Court (McAvoy, L), 21 sentencing Root principally to a term of 78 months' imprisonment following his 22 guilty plea to conspiracy to possess a controlled substance with intent to distribute

* The Clerk of Court is directed to un-consolidate this case from 17-2364 and to amend the caption of this case as set forth above.

1 in violation of 21 U.S.C. §§ 841 & 846 and international money laundering
2 conspiracy in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 1956(a)(2)(A) & (h). Root's plea was entered 3 pursuant to a plea agreement in which he agreed to waive his right to appeal his 4 conviction and sentence, except for claims based on ineffective assistance of 5 counsel, if the District Court imposed a sentence of 87 months' imprisonment or 6 less. We assume the parties' familiarity with the underlying facts and the record 7 of prior proceedings, to which we refer only as necessary to explain our decision to 8 affirm.

9 I. The Validity of the Waiver

10 "[W]aivers of the right to appeal a sentence are presumptively enforceable."

11 United States v. Burden, 860 F.3d 45, 51 (2d Cir. 2017) (quotation marks omitted).

12 As relevant here, appeal waivers may be deemed unenforceable if "the waiver was 13 not made knowingly, voluntarily, and competently," or if "the government 14 breached the agreement containing the waiver." Id. (quotation marks omitted).

15 First, Root argues that his appeal waiver was not knowing or voluntary
16 because he was not informed that the District Court could adopt the higher offense 17 level of 27 contained in the Presentence Investigation Report (PSR) instead of the

1 offense level of 23 contained in the parties' plea agreement. This argument is 2 belied by the record. The plea agreement stated that "[t]he Court is neither a party
3 to, nor bound by this Plea Agreement." Gov't App'x 21. The agreement also 4 warned Root that "[a]ny estimate of the defendant's offense level . . . and 5 sentencing guidelines range provided before sentencing is preliminary and is not 6 binding on . . . the Court." Gov't App'x 23. In signing the agreement, Root 7 "acknowledge[d] reading each of the provisions of this plea agreement with the 8 assistance of counsel and underst[ood] its provisions." Gov't App'x 32. At his 9 plea hearing, furthermore, Root stated that he spoke to his attorney about the plea 10 agreement, that his attorney explained it to him, and that he understood it when he 11 signed it. The District Court also advised Root that it was "not bound by any 12 sentencing recommendation contained in the plea agreement." Gov't App'x 50.
13 For these reasons, we reject Root's argument that he was not informed that the 14 District Court may find a different offense level than the offense level contained in 15 the plea agreement.

16 Second, Root claims that the Government breached the plea agreement by 17 failing to advocate for the lower offense level contained in the plea agreement.

1 Because Root did not object, we review this claim for plain error. Puckett v.
2 United States, 556 U.S. 129, 133–34, 143 (2009). The Government’s sentencing
3 memorandum stated that it “agree[d] with the calculations and the analysis set 4 forth in the [PSR], which scores a total offense level [of] 27.” Gov’t App’x 55. But 5 it acknowledged that it had “stipulated to an offense level of 26 before acceptance
6 of responsibility credit in the plea agreement.” Id. The sentencing memorandum 7 then made clear that its “analysis is based upon that stipulated offense level for 8 purposes of this sentencing alone.” Id. At sentencing, the Government rested on 9 its sentencing memorandum. The Government did not advocate for an offense 10 level different than the level reflected in the parties’ plea agreement. The 11 Government thus complied with the plea agreement. See United States v. Salcido-
12 Contreras, 990 F.2d 51, 53 (2d Cir. 1993).¹ In any event, Root has not shown, to the

¹ The Government also advocated for a sentence at the “upper end of the Guidelines range . . . including a term of incarceration of 87 months,” even though the Guidelines range for an offense level of 23 at criminal history category II is 51–63 months. Gov’t App’x 54, 56. Although Root argues that this discrepancy resulted in a breach, this apparent mistake resulted in the Government in effect advocating for a sentence — namely 70–87 months — “above the applicable guidelines range.” The plea agreement explicitly permitted the Government to do so. Gov’t App’x 25 (“[T]his agreement does not prevent the government from . . . recommending that the Court impose a sentence above the applicable guidelines

1 extent that the Government breached the agreement, that the breach was “clear or 2 obvious, rather than subject to reasonable dispute.” Puckett, 556 U.S. at 135.

3 II. Ineffective Assistance of Counsel Claims

4 Root also claims that his counsel was ineffective. To prevail on an 5 ineffective assistance of counsel claim, Root must show (1) his “counsel’s 6 representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness” and (2) “there is 7 a reasonable probability that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result of 8 the proceeding would have been different.” Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S.
9 668, 688, 694 (1984).

10 Root first argues that his counsel was ineffective for “fail[ing] to negotiate 11 against” the money laundering count, “where the charges are unsubstantiated and 12 multiplicitous to” the distribution count. Root Reply Br. 11. To the extent Root 13 challenges his counsel’s negotiation skills, this claim is without merit, as “[a]n 14 ineffective assistance of counsel claim survives the guilty plea . . . only where the 15 claim concerns the advice [the defendant] received from counsel.” Parisi v. United 16 States, 529 F.3d 134, 138 (2d Cir. 2008) (quotation marks omitted). Even if Root’s range.”).

1 attack on his lawyer's negotiating strategy was not waived by his guilty plea, see
2 United States v. Lasaga, 328 F.3d 61, 63 (2d Cir. 2003), his argument is not 3 persuasive. Root argues that a money laundering conviction under 18 U.S.C.
4 § 1956(a)(2)(A) requires conduct that is "analytically distinct from the underlying 5 criminal activity that it promotes." Root Br. 7. But § 1956(a)(2)(A) contains no
6 such requirement. See 18 U.S.C. § 1956(a)(2)(A) (imposing liability on individuals 7 who "transport[], transmit[], or transfer[]" monetary instruments from the United 8 States to a place outside the United States "with the intent to promote the carrying 9 on of specified unlawful activity"); Regalado Cuellar v. United States, 553 U.S. 550,
10 561 n.3 (2008); United States v. Piervinanzi, 23 F.3d 670, 680 (2d Cir. 1994). Root's 11 counsel was thus not ineffective for failing to raise this argument.

12 Next, Root claims that the money laundering and distribution conspiracy 13 charges "merge," that certain Guidelines enhancements resulting from aspects of 14 the drug conspiracy are "subsumed" within the base offense level, and that the 15 Guidelines enhancement for a conviction under 18 U.S.C. § 1956 violates the 16 Double Jeopardy Clause. These claims are also without merit. See United States
17 v. Maloney, 406 F.3d 149, 152 (2d Cir. 2005); Piervinanzi, 23 F.3d at 679. Root's

1 counsel was not ineffective for failing to raise them.

2 Finally, Root criticizes his counsel for not providing him with discovery and 3 not objecting to his criminal history category. Root fails to describe the discovery
4 he requested of counsel, and he raises his argument regarding his criminal history
5 category only in his reply brief on appeal. These arguments are therefore 6 abandoned. See Presidential Gardens Assocs. v. U.S. ex rel. Sec'y of Hous. &
7 Urban Dev., 175 F.3d 132, 141 (2d Cir. 1999); Norton v. Sam's Club, 145 F.3d 114, 8 117 (2d Cir. 1998).

9 We have considered Root's remaining arguments and conclude that they are 10 without merit. For the foregoing reasons, the judgment of the District Court is 11 AFFIRMED. Root's motion to expedite the appeal is DENIED as moot.
