CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

AMENDMENT XIV:

No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner Kimbel was charged with possession of controlled substance with intent to deliver, PGI (methamphetamine), in the amount of four grams or more, but less than 200 grams.

On September 12, 2017, the jury found Kimbel guilty and sentenced him to LIFE in prison, plus a $10,000 fine. Kimbel was habitualized under Sec. 12.42(d), Texas Penal Code.

Kimbel filed a motion for new trial, which was denied. He then filed a timely Notice of Appeal.

On June 15, 2018, Kimbel's appointed appellate counsel filed an Anders Brief. Kimbel then filed a Pro Se Direct Appeal Brief to the Fourth Court of Appeals. He presented two grounds alleging trial court erred in: (1) admitting into evidence photographs of text messages from Kimbel's cell phone regarding previous (alleged) sales of methamphetamine; and (2) denying his motion for mistrial, which was based on the assertion that jurors saw Kimbel in a holding cell during the trial.

On May 15, 2019, the Fourth Court of Appeals issued a memorandum Opinion denying Kimbel relief. Although the Court of Appeals acknowledges that Kimbel filed pro Se claims, beyond stating simply that they agreed with counsel that the appeal was without merit, the Court of Appeals did not address any of Kimbel's pro Se claims or arguments.

On August 6, 2019, Kimbel filed a Petition For Discretionary Review with the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals. Kimbel argued that the Court of Appeals erred by failing to address his Pro Se claims and provide the basic reasons for the Court's decision. As such, his cause should be remanded so that the Court of Appeals could address all issues and claims presented in the pro Se Direct Appeal.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals denied Discretionary Review, and Kimbel filed a Motion For Rehearing. This Motion was denied October 23, 2019.

Kimbel now files this Petition For Writ of Certiorari.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

- Q. When an Appellant files an Appellate Brief raising Pro Se claims after appointed counsel submits an Anders Brief, is the reviewing appellate court constitutionally required to address the Pro Se claims and provide the basic reasons for the court's decision to deny relief?

The Texas Courts have decided an important federal question in a way that conflicts with relevant decisions of this Court [Rule 10(c)]. To wit, the constitutional requirements of appellate review pursuant to Anders v. California, 386 U.S. 738, 87 S.Ct. 1396 (1967).

In the case at hand, after court appointed appellate counsel filed an Anders Brief, Kimbel filed a Pro Se beief in which he raised the claims that the trial court erred in:

- 1) admitting into evidence photographs of text messages from Kimbel's cell phone regarding alleged previous sale of methamphetamine; and,
- 2) denying his motion for mistrial, which was based on the assertion that jurors saw Kimbel in a holding cell during the trial.

Beyond agreeing with Anders Counsel that "the appeal is without merit", the Court of Appeals absolutely failed to address any issues raised and necessary to the final disposition of the appeal, and neglected to give the basic reasons for the Court's decision.

Kimbel filed a timely Petition For Discretionary Review (PDR) with the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals and argued:

- 1) It is impossible to perfect a PDR on the denial of the Pro Se claims raised on the Direct Appeal because the Memorandum Opinion is silent as to the rationale and legal authority of the Court's decision - that it would be a futile pursuit to assume the Court of Appeals adopted the Anders Counsel's argument as their own because Kimbel raised issues and arguments unaddressed by the Anders Brief; and,

- 2) Texas Rules of Appellate Procedures, Rule 47.1 and/or 47.4 required the Court of Appeals to hand down a written opinion that addresses every issue that is raised, and necessary to the final disposition of the appeal - and that his cause should be remanded back to the Court of Appeals so they may address his Pro Se claims presented in his Direct Appeal.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals refused Kimbel's PDR.

In Anders v. California, 386 U.S. 738 (1967), this Court held that after appointed counsel submits an Anders Brief, a copy of that brief should be furnished to the Appellant and time allowed for him to raise any points that he chooses. Id at 744.

But when the Appellant raises Pro Se claims and arguments unaddressed in the Anders Brief, how is he afforded the constitutional requirement of substantial equality and fair process when the Court simply agrees with Anders Counsel that "the appeal is without merit" but does not explain how or why they came to that conclusion, nor address the Pro Se claims and arguments?

How can he legitimately pursue further appeal on those Pro Se claims?

Kimbel has identified numerous Texas caselaw holding that the Court of Appeals is required to address a defendant's claims squarely presented to it - but none of these cases address a situation where an Anders Brief was filed. See, Smith v. State, 463 S.W.3d 890 (Tex. Crim. App. 2015); Light v. State, 15 S.W.3d 104 (Tex. Crim. App. 2000); McFarland v. State, 930 S.W.2d 99 (Tex. Crim. App. 1996); Weatherford v. State, 828 S.W.2d 12 (Tex. Crim. App. 1993).

It appears Texas does not recognize the same constitutional protections for Pro Se Litigants as they do for licensed attorneys. Logic dictates that if Texas did, they would have reviewed all of Kimbel's claims and arguments and provided the reasons for their decision like they would have if he was represented by appellate counsel.

Pro Se Litigants are being deliberately railroaded by taking away the ability to effectively argue their claims.

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

Date: 13th January 2020
