UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT

The following two case citing's, along with the restoration of rights form from Florida department of corrections and Florida Statute sentencing procedures not previously presented support that this petition should not be denied.

Pace vs Evans 709 F.2d 1428 11th circuit 1983

Court determined a claim cannot should not be dismissed if when a plaintiff can prove a set of facts. My initial claim was determined not enough to prove set of facts until motion entered by interstate commission for adult offenders. Stating in detail how it was done.

US Supreme Court's ruling Johnson vs city of Shelby

Found the frame work for Twombly was applied too strongly and that plaintiff brought forth straight forward claim alleging allegations in detail.

My claim was straight forward and detailed.

Interstate commission for adult offenders supplied further legal detail proving allegations.

Attached is a form sent to me from Florida department of corrections. A restoration of rights request form. Further Proving deprivation of rights. Even if rights were restored it would not fix the felony conviction. Current governor has not been in favor of restoring rights.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT

The following Florida Statute Proves that I would have never been convicted of a felony offense.
No judge applying the law would have approved such a conviction.

FLORIDA STATUTE XLVII. criminal punishment code.ch. 900-985

Governs sentencing procedures for state of Florida. Section 921.0022 criminal punishment ranking chart proves that although 3 time dui offenders in Florida are initially charged with a felony offense. It does not constitute a felony conviction. So long as offender is being charged with 1st felony offense of a non violent nature and there are no violent or felony priors. One is considered a misdemeanor.

My felony conviction is a lawless conviction. If petition is denied it will support future lawless convictions.
