

No.

IN THE
Supreme Court of the United States

BANK MELLI,
Petitioner,

v.

MICHAEL BENNETT, et al.,
Respondents.

On Petition for a Writ of Certiorari
to the United States Court of Appeals
for the Ninth Circuit

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI

LISA W. BOHL
MOLOLAMKEN LLP
300 N. LaSalle St.
Chicago, Illinois 60654
(312) 450-6700

JEFFREY A. LAMKEN
ROBERT K. KRY
Counsel of Record
MOLOLAMKEN LLP
The Watergate, Suite 660
600 New Hampshire Ave., N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037
(202) 556-2000
rkry@mololamken.com

Counsel for Petitioner

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

The Terrorism Risk Insurance Act (“TRIA”) provides that “the blocked assets of [a] terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party)” are subject to execution to satisfy certain terrorism judgments. 28 U.S.C. §1610 note §201(a). In the decision below, the Ninth Circuit allowed plaintiffs with default judgments against Iran to execute against funds that Visa owes to Bank Melli, an Iranian state-owned bank. It did so even though Visa rather than Bank Melli is the owner of the assets, and even though Bank Melli is a separate entity distinct from the Iranian government that had no role in the underlying disputes. The questions presented are:

1. Whether TRIA requires that the respondent actually own the assets at issue, as the D.C. Circuit has held and as the United States has repeatedly urged, or whether the statute instead permits execution even absent ownership, as the Ninth Circuit held below.
2. Whether TRIA permits plaintiffs to execute judgments against a foreign sovereign’s juridically separate instrumentalities, contrary to the presumption of separate status established by this Court’s precedents and the Nation’s treaty obligations.

PARTIES TO THE PROCEEDINGS BELOW

Petitioner Bank Melli was a third-party defendant in the district court and appellant in the court of appeals.

Respondents Michael Bennett and Linda Bennett, individually and as co-administrators of the Estate of Marla Ann Bennett, were plaintiffs in the district court and appellees in the court of appeals.

Respondents Carlos Acosta, Maria Acosta, Irving Franklin, Estate of Irma Franklin, Libby Kahane, Estate of Sonya Kahane, Cipporah Kaplan, Tova Ettinger, Baruch Kahane, Ethel Griffin as administrator of Binyamin Kahane's Estate, Rabbi Norman Kahane, and Estate of Meir Kahane were third-party defendants and counterclaimants in the district court and appellees in the court of appeals.

Respondents Steven Greenbaum, Alan Hayman, Shirlee Hayman, and Estate of Judith Greenbaum were third-party defendants and counterclaimants in the district court and appellees in the court of appeals.

Respondents Estate of Michael Heiser, Gary Heiser, Francis Heiser, Estate of Leland Timothy Haun, Ibis S. Haun, Milagritos Perez-Dalis, Senator Haun, Estate of Justin R. Wood, Richard W. Wood, Kathleen M. Wood, Shawn M. Wood, Estate of Earl F. Cartrette, Jr., Denise M. Eichstaedt, Anthony W. Cartrette, Lewis W. Cartrette, Estate of Brian McVeigh, Sandra M. Wetmore, James V. Wetmore, Estate of Millard D. Campbell, Marie R. Campbell, Bessie A. Campbell, Estate of Kevin J. Johnson, Shyrl L. Johnson, Che G. Colson, Kevin Johnson, Nicholas A. Johnson, Laura E. Johnson, Bruce Johnson, Estate of Joseph E. Rimkus, Bridget Brooks, James R. Rimkus, Anne M. Rimkus, Estate of Brent E. Marthaler, Katie L. Marthaler, Sharon Marthaler, Herman C. Marthaler, Matthew Marthaler, Kirk Marthaler, Estate of Thanh Van Nguyen, Christopher R. Nguyen, Estate of Joshua E. Woody, Dawn Woody, Bernadine R. Beekman, George M. Beekman, Tracy M. Smith, Jonica L. Woody, Timothy Woody, Estate of Peter J. Morgera, Michael Morgera, Thomas Morgera, Estate of Kendall Kitson, Jr., Nancy R. Kitson, Kendall K. Kitson, Steven K. Kitson, Nancy A. Kitson, Estate of Christopher Adams, Catherine Adams, John E. Adams, Patrick D. Adams, Michael T. Adams, Daniel Adams, Mary Young, Elizabeth Wolf, William Adams, Estate of Christopher Lester, Cecil H. Lester, Judy Lester, Cecil H. Lester, Jr., Jessica F. Lester, Estate of Jeremy A. Taylor, Lawrence E. Taylor, Vickie L. Taylor, Starlina D. Taylor, Estate of Patrick P. Fennig, Thadeus C. Fennig, Catherine Fennig, Paul D. Fennig, and Mark Fennig were third-party defendants and counterclaimants in the district court and appellees in the court of appeals.

Respondents Visa Inc. and Franklin Resources, Inc. were defendants and third-party plaintiffs in the district court and appellees in the court of appeals.

The United States was a third-party defendant in the district court.

The Islamic Republic of Iran and the Iranian Ministry of Information and Security were defendants in the district court.

RELATED PROCEEDINGS

Proceedings below:

Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 19-15101 (9th Cir. Sept. 30, 2019).

Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 11-cv-05807-CRB (N.D. Cal. Dec. 19, 2018).

Related proceedings:

Bank Melli v. Bennett, No. 16-334 (U.S. Mar. 5, 2018).

Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, Nos. 13-15442, 13-16100 (9th Cir. June 14, 2016).

Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 11-cv-05807-CRB (N.D. Cal. Feb. 28, 2013).

Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 03-1486 (RCL) (D.D.C. Aug. 30, 2007).

Acosta v. Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 06-745 (RCL) (D.D.C. Aug. 26, 2008).

Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, Nos. 00-2329 (RCL), 01-2104 (RCL) (D.D.C. Dec. 22, 2006).

Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, Nos. 00-2329 (RCL), 01-2104 (RCL) (D.D.C. Sept. 30, 2009).

Greenbaum v. Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 02-2148 (RCL) (D.D.C. Aug. 10, 2006).

TABLE OF CONTENTS

| | Page |
|---|------|
| Opinions Below..... | 1 |
| Statement of Jurisdiction | 1 |
| Statutory and Treaty Provisions Involved..... | 2 |
| Preliminary Statement | 2 |
| Statement..... | 3 |
| I. Statutory Framework..... | 3 |
| A. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act..... | 3 |
| B. This Court’s Decision in Bancec | 4 |
| C. The Terrorism Amendments to the FSIA | 5 |
| II. Proceedings Below | 7 |
| A. Background | 7 |
| B. District Court Proceedings..... | 8 |
| C. The Court of Appeals’ Prior Opinions.... | 9 |
| D. Proceedings in This Court | 11 |
| E. District Court Proceedings on Remand..... | 12 |
| F. The Court of Appeals’ Decision..... | 14 |
| Reasons for Granting the Petition | 14 |
| I. The Ninth Circuit’s Rejection of TRIA’s Ownership Requirement Warrants Review..... | 15 |
| A. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Conflicts with the D.C. Circuit’s Decision in Heiser | 16 |

TABLE OF CONTENTS—Continued

| | Page |
|--|------|
| B. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Rejects the Executive Branch’s Position on an Important Foreign Relations Matter..... | 18 |
| C. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Is Incorrect..... | 21 |
| D. This Is an Appropriate Case for Review..... | 22 |
| II. The Ninth Circuit’s Holding That TRIA Abrogates Separate Juridical Status Warrants Review..... | 25 |
| A. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Conflicts with Bancec and the Treaty of Amity..... | 25 |
| B. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Is Incorrect..... | 28 |
| C. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Exposes the United States to Liability in Ongoing Proceedings Before the International Court of Justice..... | 31 |
| Conclusion..... | 33 |
| Appendix A – Decision of the Court of Appeals (Sept. 30, 2019)..... | 1a |
| Appendix B – Order of the District Court Granting Motion for Summary Judgment and Granting Motion for Stay (Dec. 19, 2018)..... | 4a |
| Appendix C – Order and Amended Opinion of the Court of Appeals (June 14, 2016)..... | 26a |
| Appendix D – Order and Amended Opinion of the Court of Appeals (Feb. 22, 2016)..... | 60a |

TABLE OF CONTENTS—Continued

| | Page |
|---|------|
| Appendix E – Opinion of the Court of Appeals (Aug. 26, 2015) | 92a |
| Appendix F – Order of the District Court Denying Motion to Dismiss (Feb. 28, 2013)..... | 106a |
| Appendix G – Annual Report of Blocked Property (Sept. 29, 2010) (C.A. E.R. 250-252) | 130a |
| Appendix H – Annual Report of Blocked Property (Sept. 27, 2011) (C.A. E.R. 253-255) | 134a |
| Appendix I – Relevant Statutory and Treaty Provisions..... | 138a |

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

| | Page(s) |
|--|---------------|
| CASES | |
| Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc. , 477 U.S. 242 (1986)..... | 23 |
| Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino , 376 U.S. 398 (1964)..... | 20 |
| Bd. of Trs. of Leland Stanford Junior Univ. v. Roche Molecular Sys., Inc. , 563 U.S. 776 (2011)..... | 16, 21 |
| Calderon-Cardona v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon , 770 F.3d 993 (2d Cir. 2014)..... | 17, 18 |
| Certain Iranian Assets (Iran v. U.S.) , No. 164, Judgment on Preliminary Objections (I.C.J. Feb. 13, 2019)..... | 31, 32 |
| Chickasaw Nation v. United States , 534 U.S. 84 (2001)..... | 29, 30 |
| Christopher v. Harbury , 536 U.S. 403 (2002)..... | 20 |
| County of Los Angeles v. Mendez , 137 S. Ct. 1539 (2017)..... | 24 |
| F. Hoffmann-La Roche Ltd. v. Empagran S.A. , 542 U.S. 155 (2004)..... | 28 |
| First Nat’l City Bank v. Banco Para El Comercio Exterior de Cuba , 462 U.S. 611 (1983)..... | passim |
| Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran , 735 F.3d 934 (D.C. Cir. 2013) | 2, 14, 16, 17 |
| JPMorgan Chase Bank v. Traffic Stream (BVI) Infrastructure Ltd. , 536 U.S. 88 (2002)..... | 20 |

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

| | Page(s) |
|---|---------|
| Kolovrat v. Oregon , 366 U.S. 187 (1961)..... | 20 |
| Marmet Health Care Ctr., Inc. v. Brown , 565 U.S. 530 (2012)..... | 24 |
| Montello Salt Co. v. Utah , 221 U.S. 452 (1911)..... | 29 |
| Murray v. Schooner Charming Betsy , 6 U.S. (2 Cranch) 64 (1804) | 28 |
| Poe v. Seaborn , 282 U.S. 101 (1930) | 21 |
| Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran , 138 S. Ct. 816 (2018)..... | 12, 13 |
| Sumitomo Shoji Am., Inc. v. Avagliano , 457 U.S. 176 (1982)..... | 26 |
| Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Franklin Mint Corp. , 466 U.S. 243 (1984)..... | 28 |
| Tucker v. Alexandroff , 183 U.S. 424 (1902)..... | 26 |
| United States v. Rodrigues , 159 F.3d 439 (9th Cir. 1998)..... | 21 |
| Verlinden B.V. v. Cent. Bank of Nigeria , 461 U.S. 480 (1983)..... | 3 |
| Villoldo v. Castro Ruz , 821 F.3d 196 (1st Cir. 2016) | 17 |
| Weinstein v. Islamic Republic of Iran , 609 F.3d 43 (2d Cir. 2010) | 10 |
| Whitman v. Am. Trucking Ass'ns , 531 U.S. 457 (2001)..... | 30 |
| Whole Woman's Health v. Hellerstedt , 136 S. Ct. 2292 (2016)..... | 24 |

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

Page(s)

STATUTES

| | |
|--|---------------|
| Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976, Pub. L. No. 94-583, 90 Stat. 2891 (codified as amended at 28 U.S.C. §§ 1602 et seq.) | passim |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1604 | 3 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1605 | 3 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(2) | 4 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1605A | 6, 7 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1605A(a) | 5 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1609 | 4 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610 | 4 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610(a) | 4 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610(a)(7) | 5 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610(b) | 4 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610(b)(3) | 5 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610(f) | 19, 27 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610(f)(1) | 6 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610(f)(3) | 6 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610(g) | passim |
| Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-132, § 221(a), 110 Stat. 1214, 1241 (formerly codified at 28 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(7)) | 5 |
| Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999, Pub. L. No. 105-277, § 117, 112 Stat. 2681, 2681-491 (1998) (codified at 28 U.S.C. § 1610(f)(1)) | 5 |

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

| | Page(s) |
|---|---------------|
| § 117(d), 112 Stat. at 2681-492 | 6 |
| Victims of Trafficking and Violence | |
| Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. No. | |
| 106-386, § 2002, 114 Stat. 1464, 1541..... | 6, 28 |
| § 2002(f)(1)(B), 114 Stat. at 1543..... | 6 |
| § 2002(f)(2), 114 Stat. at 1543..... | 6 |
| Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002, | |
| Pub. L. No. 107-297, § 201, | |
| 116 Stat. 2322, 2337 | |
| (28 U.S.C. § 1610 note)..... | passim |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610 note § 201(a) | 6, 10, 21, 28 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1610 note § 201(b)..... | 6 |
| Pub. L. No. 107-297, sec. 201(c), | |
| § 2002(d)(4), 116 Stat. at 2339 | 22 |
| National Defense Authorization Act for | | | Fiscal Year 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-181, | |
| § 1083, 122 Stat. 3, 338 | 7 |
| 28 U.S.C. § 1254(1) | 1 |
| TREATY PROVISIONS | |
| Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations, | |
| and Consular Rights, U.S.-Iran, | |
| Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899 | passim |
| Art. III, 8 U.S.T. at 902-903 | 26 |
| Art. III.1, 8 U.S.T. at 902..... | 3, 15, 26 |
| Art. IV, 8 U.S.T. at 903-904 | 26 |
| Art. XXI.2, 8 U.S.T. at 913..... | 31 |
| LEGISLATIVE MATERIALS | |
| H.R. 3485, 106th Cong. (Nov. 18, 1999)..... | 27 |
| H.R. Rep. No. 94-1487 (1976) | 3, 4, 26 |

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

| | Page(s) |
|---|------------|
| Terrorism: Victims' Access to Terrorist Assets: Hearing Before the S. Comm. on the Judiciary, S. Hr'g No. 106-941 (Oct. 27, 1999) | 28 |
| Justice for Victims of Terrorism Act: Hearing on H.R. 3485 Before the Subcomm. on Immigration and Claims of the H. Comm. on the Judiciary, 106th Cong. (Apr. 13, 2000) | 27, 28, 32 |
| Benefits for U.S. Victims of International Terrorism: Hearing Before the S. Comm. on Foreign Relations, S. Hr'g No. 108-214 (July 17, 2003) | 20, 32 |
| EXECUTIVE MATERIALS | |
| 63 Fed. Reg. 59,201 (Oct. 21, 1998)..... | 6, 19 |
| 65 Fed. Reg. 66,483 (Oct. 28, 2000)..... | 6, 19 |
| 1998 Pub. Papers 1843 (Oct. 23, 1998)..... | 20, 32 |
| 2002 Pub. Papers 1697 (Sept. 30, 2002)..... | 20 |
| Letter from R. Armitage, Deputy Sec'y of State, to R. Cheney (June 12, 2002) | 20 |
| Michael R. Pompeo, Sec'y of State, U.S. Dep't of State, Remarks to the Media (Oct. 3, 2018), https://www.state.gov/remarks-to-the-media-3 | 32 |
| U.S. Br. in Bank Melli Iran N.Y. Rep. Office v. Weinstein , No. 10-947 (U.S. filed May 2012) | 31 |

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

| | Page(s) |
|--|---------|
| U.S. Br. in Calderon-Cardona v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon , No. 12-75 (2d Cir. filed Sept. 21, 2012)..... | 19 |
| U.S. Br. in Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran , No. 12-7101 (D.C. Cir. filed Mar. 11, 2013) | 19 |
| U.S. Br. in JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. v. Hausler , No. 12-1264 (2d Cir. filed July 9, 2012) | 19 |
| U.S. Br. in Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran , No. 11-2144 (1st Cir. filed June 7, 2012) | 18 |
| U.S. Br. in Villoldo v. Ruz , No. 15-1808 (1st Cir. filed Dec. 24, 2015)..... | 19 |
| U.S. Br. in Weinstein v. Islamic Republic of Iran , No. 14-7193 (D.C. Cir. filed Dec. 29, 2015)..... | 19 |
| OTHER AUTHORITIES | |
| Bank Melli, Annual Report 2014-15 | 7 |
| Certain Iranian Assets (Iran v. U.S.) , No. 164, Application Instituting Proceedings (I.C.J. filed June 14, 2016) | 31 |

IN THE
Supreme Court of the United States

BANK MELLI,
Petitioner,

v.

MICHAEL BENNETT, et al.,
Respondents.

On Petition for a Writ of Certiorari
to the United States Court of Appeals
for the Ninth Circuit

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI

Bank Melli respectfully petitions for a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in this case.

OPINIONS BELOW

The court of appeals' decision (App., infra, 1a-3a) is reported at 778 F. App'x 541 (9th Cir. 2019). The district court's opinion (App., infra, 4a-25a) is reported at 360 F. Supp. 3d 972 (N.D. Cal. 2018).

STATEMENT OF JURISDICTION

The court of appeals entered judgment on September 30, 2019. App., infra, 1a. This Court has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1254(1).

STATUTORY AND TREATY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

Relevant provisions of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976, 28 U.S.C. §§ 1602 et seq.; the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002, 28 U.S.C. § 1610 note; and the Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations, and Consular Rights, U.S.-Iran, Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899; are set forth in the Appendix (App., infra, 138a-171a).

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

The Terrorism Risk Insurance Act (“TRIA”) permits certain plaintiffs holding terrorism judgments to execute against assets of a foreign state that have been frozen or “blocked” under economic sanctions statutes. In the decision below, the Ninth Circuit allowed plaintiffs with default judgments against Iran to seize funds that Visa owes to Bank Melli, an Iranian state-owned bank. It did so even though Visa rather than Bank Melli is the owner of the funds, and even though Bank Melli is a separate entity distinct from the Iranian government that had no role in the underlying disputes.

The Ninth Circuit reached that result by construing TRIA to apply even where the foreign sovereign lacks any ownership interest in the assets. That ruling conflicts with the D.C. Circuit’s decision in Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 735 F.3d 934 (D.C. Cir. 2013), as well as the repeatedly expressed position of the Executive Branch. The D.C. Circuit and the Executive Branch both interpret TRIA to apply only where the foreign sovereign actually owns the assets at issue.

The Ninth Circuit also construed TRIA to abrogate Bank Melli’s separate status, contrary to both this Court’s precedents and the Nation’s treaty obligations. In First National City Bank v. Banco Para El Comercio Exterior de Cuba, 462 U.S. 611 (1983) (“Bancec”), this Court held that “government instrumentalities established as juridical entities distinct and independent from their sovereign should normally be treated as such.” Id. at 626-627. The United States specifically agreed to respect the juridical status of Iranian companies in the Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations, and Consular Rights, U.S.-Iran, art. III.1, Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899, 902. The Ninth Circuit’s construction of TRIA to abrogate those principles draws the country into a violation of its international obligations and exposes it to liability in pending proceedings in the International Court of Justice.

STATEMENT

I. STATUTORY FRAMEWORK

A. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act

For most of this Nation’s history, foreign sovereigns were completely immune from suit. See Verlinden B.V. v. Cent. Bank of Nigeria, 461 U.S. 480, 486 (1983). In 1952, however, the State Department adopted the “restrictive theory” of immunity, which denies immunity to a state’s “strictly commercial” acts. See id. at 486-487. Two decades later, Congress enacted the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976 (“FSIA”), Pub. L. No. 94-583, 90 Stat. 2891 (codified as amended at 28 U.S.C. §§1602 et seq.), which largely codifies that restrictive theory. See H.R. Rep. No. 94-1487, at 7 (1976).

The FSIA addresses the immunity of foreign sovereigns from suit, as well as the immunity of sovereign property from attachment and execution. With respect to immunity from suit, the FSIA preserves the general rule that “a foreign state [or agency or instrumentality] shall be immune from the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States and of the States.” 28 U.S.C. §1604. Section 1605 then lists carefully circumscribed exceptions. Id. §1605. Under the Act’s “commercial activity” exception, for example, a foreign sovereign is not immune from an action “based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state.” Id. § 1605(a)(2).

The FSIA separately addresses the immunity of sovereign property from attachment and execution. Before the FSIA’s enactment, sovereign property “enjoy[ed] absolute immunity from execution,” even under the restrictive theory. H.R. Rep. No. 94-1487, at 8. Plaintiffs who obtained judgments against foreign sovereigns had to rely on sovereign grace for their satisfaction. Ibid. The FSIA retains the general rule that “property in the United States of a foreign state [or agency or instrumentality] shall be immune from attachment arrest and execution.” 28 U.S.C. § 1609. But Section 1610 provides exceptions for sovereign property “used for a commercial activity in the United States” that meets one of certain enumerated conditions. Id. § 1610(a). Section 1610(b) provides additional exceptions for property of agencies or instrumentalities. Id. § 1610(b).

B. This Court’s Decision in Bancec

As a general matter, the FSIA does not address when a sovereign’s agencies or instrumentalities may be held liable for judgments against the sovereign itself. This Court resolved that issue in First National City Bank v. Banco Para El Comercio Exterior de Cuba, 462 U.S. 611 (1983) (“Bancec”). That case concerned whether a bank owned by the Cuban government was automatically liable for claims against Cuba itself despite the bank’s status as a separate entity. The Court held that it was not: “[G]overnment instrumentalities established as juridical entities distinct and independent from their sovereign should normally be treated as such.” Id. at 626-627.

The Court explained that the FSIA does not govern the question. That statute, it held, “was not intended to affect the substantive law determining the liability of a foreign state or instrumentality, or the attribution of liability among instrumentalities of a foreign state.” 462 U.S. at 620. Instead, such matters depend on substantive principles “common to both international law and federal common law.” Id. at 623.

The Court recognized only two narrow exceptions to the rule that sovereigns and their juridically separate instrumentalities should be treated as distinct. First, “where a corporate entity is so extensively controlled by its owner that a relationship of principal and agent is created”—i.e., where the sovereign and instrumentality are alter egos—“one may be held liable for the actions of the other.” 462 U.S. at 629. Second, an instrumentality’s status may be disregarded where the corporate form is abused to “work fraud or injustice.” Id. at 629-630.

C. The Terrorism Amendments to the FSIA

Over the last two decades, Congress has repeatedly amended the FSIA in connection with terrorism claims.

1. In 1996, Congress added a terrorism exception to jurisdictional immunity. See Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-132, § 221(a), 110 Stat. 1214, 1241 (formerly codified at 28 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(7)). That exception permits suits against certain sovereigns for acts of terrorism or material support for terrorism. 28 U.S.C. § 1605A(a). Congress also added exceptions for execution of the resulting judgments. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 1610(a)(7), 1610(b)(3).

2. Two years later, Congress added another exception for assets the Executive Branch had “blocked” (i.e., frozen) under economic sanctions statutes. See Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999, Pub. L. No. 105-277, § 117, 112 Stat. 2681, 2681-491 (1998) (codified at 28 U.S.C. § 1610(f)(1)). Congress authorized the President to waive the provision “in the interest of national security.” Pub. L. No. 105-277, § 117(d), 112 Stat. at 2681-492. The President immediately issued a blanket waiver. 63 Fed. Reg. 59,201 (Oct. 21, 1998).

In 2000, Congress repealed the provision authorizing that waiver. See Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. No. 106-386, § 2002(f)(2), 114 Stat. 1464, 1543. Following Executive Branch opposition, however, a new waiver provision was added to the bill before enactment. See id. § 2002(f)(1)(B), 114 Stat. at 1543 (codified at 28 U.S.C. § 1610(f)(3)). The President then promptly issued another blanket waiver. 65 Fed. Reg. 66,483 (Oct. 28, 2000).

3. In 2002, Congress responded to those waivers by enacting the provision at issue here, Section 201(a) of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002 (“TRIA”), Pub. L. No. 107-297, 116 Stat. 2322, 2337 (reproduced as amended at 28 U.S.C. § 1610 note). That statute provides:

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, * * * in every case in which a person has obtained a judgment against a terrorist party on a claim based upon an act of terrorism, or for which a terrorist party is not immune under section 1605A or 1605(a)(7) * * * , the blocked assets of that terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution or attachment in aid of execution in order to satisfy such judgment * * * .

TRIA § 201(a). TRIA includes only limited presidential waiver authority for certain diplomatic and consular property. Id. § 201(b).

4. In 2008, Congress amended the FSIA's terrorism provisions yet again. See National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-181, § 1083, 122 Stat. 3, 338. That amendment revised § 1605(a)(7)'s terrorism exception and recodified it as § 1605A. See 28 U.S.C. § 1605A. It also added § 1610(g), which permits execution against certain "property of" a foreign state or its instrumentalities without regard to the instrumentalities' separate status under Bancec. 28 U.S.C. § 1610(g).

II. PROCEEDINGS BELOW

A. Background

Bank Melli is a commercial bank based in Tehran, Iran. C.A. E.R. 230. It is Iran's largest financial institution, offering a variety of banking services and holding deposits and investments for members of the public. App., infra, 6a; Bank Melli, Annual Report 2014-15. Although Bank Melli's stock is currently wholly owned by the Iranian government, Bank Melli is a juridically separate entity, with its own share capital and board of directors. C.A. E.R. 299-300.

In 1991, Bank Melli applied to become a member of Visa's bank card program. App., infra, 8a. Under that program, Bank Melli contracted with merchants in Iran for the acceptance of Visa cards. C.A. E.R. 227-228. Bank Melli would pay merchants for transactions they handled and then settle the transactions with Visa. Ibid. Visa would periodically determine the amounts that were "due and owing to Bank Melli" and make payments to Bank Melli's settlement account. Ibid.

In 1995, following the imposition of sanctions against Iran, Visa informed Bank Melli that it could no longer settle Bank Melli's transactions. App., infra, 9a. As a result, Visa retained "certain sums owing to Bank Melli's settlement account." Ibid. Visa invested those funds in a Franklin-affiliated mutual fund. Ibid. By May 2012, “the total amount due and owing (but not paid to) Bank Melli * * * was $17,648,962.76.” Id. at 10a.

B. District Court Proceedings

Respondents are four groups of plaintiffs who hold default judgments against Iran for terrorist attacks by organizations that allegedly received support from the Iranian government. App., infra, 108a. Bank Melli is not a party to any of the judgments and was not alleged to have been involved in the underlying events. Id. at 109a.

In December 2011, one group of plaintiffs sought to satisfy its default judgment against Iran by executing against the blocked assets that Visa and Franklin owed Bank Melli. App., infra, 109a. Visa and Franklin responded by filing an interpleader complaint against Bank Melli and other parties with potential claims to the assets. Ibid.

The district court denied Bank Melli’s motion to dismiss the interpleader complaint. App., infra, 106a-129a. The court did not dispute that plaintiffs hold judgments against Iran, not Bank Melli. Nor did it dispute that Bank Melli is juridically distinct from the Iranian government. Nonetheless, the court held that plaintiffs could seek to satisfy their judgments against Bank Melli because TRIA and §1610(g) “abrogat[e] Bancec as to terrorism-based judgments against foreign state sponsors of terrorism.” Id. at 111a.

The district court further held that plaintiffs could seek to execute against the blocked assets even though the complaint alleged only that the assets were “due and owing by contract to Bank Melli,” not that Bank Melli actually “owns” them. App., infra, 122a. The court acknowledged that, “[f]or TRIA or section 1610(g) to apply, the funds at issue must be ‘assets of’ or ‘property of’ Bank Melli.” Ibid. But the court deemed that requirement met because “California enforcement law authorizes a court to ‘order the judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor * * * all or part of a right to payment due or to become due.’” Id. at 124a.

Acknowledging “substantial ground for difference of opinion,” the court certified its order for interlocutory appeal. App., infra, 128a-129a & n.15.

C. The Court of Appeals’ Prior Opinions

The Ninth Circuit affirmed. App., infra, 92a-105a. When Bank Melli petitioned for rehearing, the United States filed an amicus brief supporting Bank Melli’s positions on both the TRIA ownership issue and the proper construction of § 1610(g). No. 13-15442, Dkt. 82 (9th Cir. filed Oct. 23, 2015). The Ninth Circuit then withdrew its opinion and replaced it with a new one that reached the same result, with one judge dissenting. App., infra, 60a-91a. After Bank Melli filed another rehearing petition, the Ninth Circuit withdrew that opinion and replaced it with a third one, again over a dissent. Id. at 26a-59a.

In that third opinion, the court of appeals ruled that Bank Melli could be held liable for judgments against Iran despite its separate status. App., infra, 35a-37a. The court acknowledged that, under Bancec, a juridically separate instrumentality ordinarily cannot be held liable for its sovereign’s debts. Id. at 36a-37a. But the court held that TRIA “overrode the Bancec presumption in this context.” Id. at 37a.

The court invoked TRIA’s statutory text. TRIA provides that “the blocked assets of [a] terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party)” are subject to execution. TRIA §201(a) (emphasis added). According to the Ninth Circuit, “[t]his wording demonstrates that Congress knew that the blocked assets of an instrumentality might otherwise have been excluded from the phrase ‘blocked assets of [the] terrorist party’ and that Congress acted to ensure that, instead, the instrumentality’s blocked assets were included.” App., infra, 36a. The court acknowledged Bank Melli’s argument that “‘including’ is a term of illustration,” so that the clause reaches instrumentality assets only when there is some basis for treating them as the sovereign’s own—for example, an alter ego relationship. Id. at 37a. But the court deemed the principle “of no assistance to Bank Melli” because, in its view, “Congress clearly instructed courts to allow the instrumentality’s blocked assets to be reached.” Ibid. The court claimed support from a Second Circuit decision, Weinstein v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 609 F.3d 43 (2d Cir. 2010), cert. denied, 567 U.S. 934 (2012). App., infra, 36a.

The court reached the same result under §1610(g). App., infra, 37a-45a. Although Bank Melli argued that §1610(g) merely overrode Bancec in cases where there was an otherwise applicable exception to immunity, the Ninth Circuit held to the contrary that “subsection (g) contains a freestanding provision for attaching and executing against assets of a foreign state or its agencies or instrumentalities.” Id. at 38a. The court “acknowledge[d] that the United States, appearing as amicus curiae, disagrees with our interpretation.” Id. at 43a n.7. But it refused to “defer to the government’s view.” Ibid.

The court rejected Bank Melli’s argument that execution would violate the Treaty of Amity. App., infra, 44a-45a. According to the court, that treaty merely put “foreign corporations * * * on equal footing with domestic corporations.” Id. at 45a. In any event, “when a treaty and a later-enacted federal statute conflict, the subsequent statute controls.” Ibid.

Finally, the Ninth Circuit held that the blocked assets were “assets of” or “property of” Bank Melli for purposes of TRIA and §1610(g). App., infra, 46a-49a. The court “look[ed] to state law to determine the ownership of assets in this context.” Id. at 47a. California law, it noted, “authorizes a court to order a judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor a right to payments that are due or will become due.” Ibid. Because “Bank Melli has a contractual right to obtain payments from Visa and Franklin,” “those assets are property of Bank Melli and may be assigned to judgment creditors.” Id. at 47a-48a.

Even if federal law applied, the Ninth Circuit added, “Bank Melli would not succeed.” App., infra, 48a. In the court’s view, “Congress has used expansive wording to suggest that immediate and outright ownership of assets is not required.” Ibid. The court pointed in particular to a provision stating that “[n]othing in this subsection shall bar * * * enforcement of any judgment to which this subsection applies * * * against assets otherwise available under this section or under any other provision of law.” Ibid. (emphasis omitted). In light of that expansive wording, “attachment and execution are allowed here because Bank Melli is the intended contractual beneficiary of the contested funds.” Id. at 49a.

D. Proceedings in This Court

Bank Melli sought this Court’s review. Bank Melli v. Bennett, No. 16-334. Plaintiffs opposed review primarily on the ground that the case was interlocutory, as it arose on appeal from the district court’s denial of Bank Melli’s motion to dismiss. Br. in Opp. in No. 16-334, at 17-19. “The petition should be denied,” they urged, “because the case comes to this Court in an interlocutory posture and is not ripe for review.” Id. at 17.

This Court called for the views of the Solicitor General. 137 S. Ct. 707 (2017). The United States agreed with Bank Melli on the merits. “Insofar as the question is whether TRIA and Section 1610(g) have an ‘ownership’ requirement,” the government explained, “the United States agrees with petitioner that they do.” U.S. Br. in No. 16-334, at 19. But the government advised against review based on the case’s “interlocutory posture,” which “itself alone furnishe[s] sufficient ground for the denial’ of a petition.” Id. at 18. The government also claimed that the Ninth Circuit’s opinion was ambiguous in that, “in part of its opinion, the court appears to have assumed that [TRIA] require[s] ownership.” Id. at 19.

This Court then granted review in Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 16-534, a Seventh Circuit case presenting the same §1610(g) issue in which undersigned counsel also represented the respondent. In Rubin, the Court unanimously rejected the Ninth Circuit’s interpretation of §1610(g). See Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 138 S. Ct. 816, 821 n.3, 827 (2018). The Court held this case pending Rubin, but ultimately denied the petition. 138 S. Ct. 1260 (2018).

E. District Court Proceedings on Remand

On remand, the parties engaged in discovery. Visa produced two regulatory reports it had filed with the Office of Foreign Assets Control in 2010 and 2011 in which it described the status of the assets at issue. App., infra, 130a-133a, 134a-137a (reproducing reports).

Each report was prepared on a form that instructed Visa to “[i]dentify the owner of the property.” App., infra, 132a, 136a (emphasis added). Visa submitted charts listing its holdings, including one row for the assets at issue here. Id. at 133a, 137a. Under the column labeled “Owner,” Visa wrote: “Visa International Service Association.” Ibid. In the “Description” column, the 2010 chart includes the notation “[a]ccount holds Bank Melli funds,” while the 2011 chart states simply “[s]hares in mutual fund.” Ibid. Both forms include an attestation from Visa’s Associate General Counsel that the information is “true and accurate” to the best of his knowledge. Id. at 131a, 135a.

Following discovery, plaintiffs moved for summary judgment. App., infra, 4a. In light of Rubin, they no longer relied on § 1610(g)—only TRIA. Id. at 13a.

The district court granted the motion. App., infra, 4a-25a. Despite Visa’s express representations of ownership in its regulatory reports, the court deemed the assets subject to execution under TRIA. The court asserted that Bank Melli had previously claimed ownership by using words like “borne” and “recover” in prior court filings. Id. at 14a. It claimed that “the Ninth Circuit held unambiguously at the motion to dismiss phase of the case that Bank Melli owns the funds.” Id. at 14a-15a. And it held that the fact that “two Annual Reports list Visa as the ‘owner’ of the funds does not undermine the conclusion that the Blocked Assets are Bank Melli’s property.” Id. at 15a. In the court’s view, because one of the reports also referred to the assets as “Bank Melli funds,” a “common sense reading” established that Bank Melli was the owner. Ibid.

The district court thus saw “no genuine dispute about the ownership of the funds.” App., infra, 15a. It granted summary judgment to plaintiffs but stayed its ruling pending appellate and Supreme Court review. Id. at 25a.

F. The Court of Appeals' Decision

The Ninth Circuit affirmed in an unpublished memorandum disposition. App., infra, 1a-3a.

The court acknowledged Bank Melli's argument that "a genuine issue of material fact exists as to whether [Bank Melli] 'owns' the funds, because two of Visa's regulatory filings listed Visa as 'owner' of the funds." App., infra, 3a. But the court deemed that dispute over ownership "not material." Ibid. "Bank Melli has a contractual right to obtain payments from Visa," it explained, and thus "an interest in the funds" and a "right to receive payment of the debt that Visa owes." Ibid. In the court's view, those facts were sufficient under its prior opinion, which was "now the law of the circuit." Ibid.

The court also invoked an alternative ground. "[E]ven if we were to consider the 'ownership' facts to be material," it held, "the documents on which Bank Melli relies do not create a genuine issue of fact." App., infra, 3a. That was so, it asserted, because "[r]eading the documents as a whole and in context, they describe the accounts as 'hold[ing] Bank Melli funds.'" Ibid.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

The Ninth Circuit held that TRIA permits execution even where the respondent does not own the property. In that court's view, "'ownership' facts" are simply "not material" under the statute. App., infra, 3a. That ruling squarely conflicts with the D.C. Circuit's holding in Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 735 F.3d 934 (D.C. Cir. 2013), that "plaintiffs [can]not attach [assets] under [TRIA] without an Iranian ownership interest in the accounts." Id. at 941 (emphasis added). It also conflicts with the Executive Branch's repeatedly expressed position that TRIA imposes an "'ownership' requirement." U.S. Br. in No. 16-334, at 19.

While this Court denied review of the TRIA ownership issue when the case was previously before it, the factors that formerly weighed against review no longer exist. The previous petition arose in an interlocutory posture, but the case has now reached final judgment. And whatever ambiguity may have inhered in the Ninth Circuit's prior decision has now been eliminated: The court held in no uncertain terms that "'ownership' facts" are simply "not material." App., infra, 3a.

The Ninth Circuit's refusal to respect Bank Melli's separate juridical status also warrants review. In First National City Bank v. Banco Para El Comercio Exterior de Cuba, 462 U.S. 611 (1983) ("Bancec"), this Court made clear that "government instrumentalities established as juridical entities distinct and independent from their sovereign should normally be treated as such." Id. at 626-627. The United States reaffirmed that presumption specifically for Iranian companies in the Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations, and Consular Rights, U.S.-Iran, art. III.1, Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899, 902. By finding a congressional repudiation of those principles in oblique parenthetical language, the Ninth Circuit not only disregarded settled canons of construction but also exposed the United States to liability in ongoing proceedings before the International Court of Justice.

I. THE NINTH CIRCUIT'S REJECTION OF TRIA'S OWNERSHIP REQUIREMENT WARRANTS REVIEW

The Ninth Circuit's holding that ownership is "not material" under TRIA conflicts with the positions of both the D.C. Circuit and the Executive Branch. That conflict warrants review.

A. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Conflicts with the D.C. Circuit’s Decision in Heiser

The decision below directly conflicts with the D.C. Circuit’s decision in Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 735 F.3d 934 (D.C. Cir. 2013). In that case, plaintiffs with a default judgment against Iran sought to attach electronic funds transfers that had been blocked under sanctions programs. Id. at 935. Iranian banks, although neither the originators nor the beneficiaries of the transfers, had a “contingent future possessory interest” because the recipients maintained their accounts at those banks. Id. at 936-937. The plaintiffs urged that TRIA should apply to those assets. Id. at 938.

The D.C. Circuit rejected that argument. TRIA, the court noted, applies to “‘blocked assets’ of Iran.” 735 F.3d at 938. This Court had “defin[ed] ‘of’ in various statutes as requiring ownership.” Ibid. (citing Bd. of Trs. of Leland Stanford Junior Univ. v. Roche Molecular Sys., Inc., 563 U.S. 776 (2011)). “Nothing in the legislative histor[y] * * * suggests that Congress intended judgment creditors of foreign states to be able to attach property those states do not own.” Ibid. Plaintiffs therefore “could not attach the contested accounts under [TRIA] * * * without an Iranian ownership interest in the accounts.” Id. at 941 (emphasis added). “[B]ecause Iran lacked an ownership interest,” TRIA did not apply. Ibid.

The Ninth Circuit took the opposite approach here. In its prior opinion, the court held that the blocked assets qualified as property “of” Bank Melli under TRIA without regard to ownership. “California law,” it explained, “authorizes a court to order a judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor a right to payments that are due or will become due, even if the right is conditioned on future developments.” App., infra, 47a. Bank Melli had “a contractual right to obtain payments from Visa and Franklin,” and “[u]nder California law, those assets are property of Bank Melli and may be assigned to judgment creditors.” Id. at 47a-48a. The court reached the same result under federal law. “Congress has used expansive wording to suggest that immediate and outright ownership of assets is not required.” Id. at 48a. “[A]ttachment and execution are allowed here because Bank Melli is the intended contractual beneficiary of the contested funds.” Id. at 49a (emphasis added).

Whatever ambiguity might have existed in that earlier opinion was put to rest by the Ninth Circuit’s most recent decision. The court has now expressly refused to consider Bank Melli’s evidence regarding “whether it ‘owns’ the funds.” App., infra, 3a. In the Ninth Circuit’s view, “that issue of fact is not material.” Ibid. (emphasis added); see also ibid. (court did not “consider the ‘ownership’ facts to be material”). In the Ninth Circuit, the mere fact that “Bank Melli has a contractual right to obtain payments from Visa” is enough. Ibid. That holding is irreconcilable with Heiser.

Other courts of appeals have similarly diverged over the scope of TRIA’s “assets of” requirement. In Villoldo v. Castro Ruz, 821 F.3d 196 (1st Cir. 2016), the First Circuit agreed with the D.C. Circuit’s holding in Heiser: “TRIA * * * tells us that the property that is owned by a foreign state should be used to pay such judgments.” Id. at 203 (emphasis added). By contrast, in Calderon-Cardona v. Bank of New York Mellon, 770 F.3d 993 (2d Cir. 2014), cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 893 (2016), the Second Circuit construed §1610(g)’s parallel “property of” requirement not to impose any federal ownership requirement. The court deemed the statute “silent as to what interest in property the foreign state * * * must have in order for that property to be subject to execution,” and held that state law governs the issue. Id. at 1000-1001.

The Circuits are thus sharply divided over whether TRIA requires ownership. That conflict warrants this Court’s review.

B. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Rejects the Executive Branch’s Position on an Important Foreign Relations Matter

The Ninth Circuit’s decision also conflicts with the United States’ longstanding interpretation of TRIA. The Executive Branch made its position clear in the brief it filed in this Court in connection with Bank Melli’s prior petition. TRIA, it explained, “applies to the ‘assets of’ a terrorist party.” U.S. Br. in No. 16-334, at 19. “Insofar as the question is whether TRIA * * * ha[s] an ‘ownership’ requirement, the United States agrees with [Bank Melli] that [it] do[es].” Ibid. (emphasis added).

That brief was just one of many times the government has taken that position. In the court below, the government similarly explained that TRIA “only authorize[s] plaintiffs to attach assets that are ‘owned’ by the relevant foreign state.” U.S. Br. in No. 13-15442, Dkt. 82 at 2-3 (9th Cir. filed Oct. 23, 2015). “The assets ‘of’ an entity are not naturally understood to include all assets in which it has any interest of any nature whatsoever. Rather, the Supreme Court has repeatedly observed that the ‘use of the word “of” denotes ownership.’” Id. at 14. “[T]he mere fact that state law authorizes attachment is insufficient,” because “federal law has an affirmative requirement that the assets actually be owned by the debtor state or instrumentality.” Id. at 17.

The United States has taken that same position in at least a half-dozen other cases. See U.S. Br. in Rubin v.

Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 11-2144, at 13 (1st Cir. filed June 7, 2012) (TRIA applies only to “assets owned by the relevant terrorist party”); U.S. Br. in JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. v. Hausler, No. 12-1264, at 15 (2d Cir. filed July 9, 2012) (similar); U.S. Br. in Calderon-Cardona v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, No. 12-75, at 16, 24 (2d Cir. filed Sept. 21, 2012); U.S. Br. in Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 12-7101, at 2 (D.C. Cir. filed Mar. 11, 2013); U.S. Br. in Villoldo v. Ruz, No. 15-1808, at 15 (1st Cir. filed Dec. 24, 2015); U.S. Br. in Weinstein v. Islamic Republic of Iran, No. 14-7193, at 14 (D.C. Cir. filed Dec. 29, 2015).

The conflict with the position of the Executive Branch is particularly serious, as it trenches on important foreign relations matters. By holding that TRIA applies even where the sovereign does not own the property, the Ninth Circuit has greatly expanded the range of blocked assets subject to execution to pay private plaintiffs, contrary to the Executive Branch’s express foreign policy priorities.

The Executive Branch has repeatedly opposed using blocked assets to pay private plaintiffs. Congress initially tried to make such assets available to private plaintiffs in § 1610(f), TRIA’s predecessor. But the President twice exercised his statutory authority to render the provision inoperative, concluding that the statute would “impede [his] ability * * * to conduct foreign policy in the interest of national security” and “impede the effectiveness” of blocking orders. 63 Fed. Reg. 59,201 (Oct. 21, 1998); 65 Fed. Reg. 66,483 (Oct. 28, 2000). Using blocked assets to pay private plaintiffs, he explained, would “effectively eliminate” an “important source of leverage” in negotiations with accused terrorist states; “seriously affect [the United States’] ability to enter into global claims settlements”; and threaten liability for U.S. taxpayers where assets were also subject to international arbitrations. 1998 Pub. Papers 1843, 1847 (Oct. 23, 1998).

The State Department echoed those concerns in a 2002 letter to congressional leadership. “The Administration,” it explained, “opposes the use of blocked assets * * * to satisfy judgments.” Letter from R. Armitage, Deputy Sec’y of State, to R. Cheney 3 (June 12, 2002). Diverting blocked assets to pay judgments would “preclude their use to pressure regimes to improve their policies on terrorism, risk taxpayer liability for third-party claims against the assets, eliminate their availability to satisfy current U.S. Government claims (currently more than $2 billion), and put at risk diplomatic property.” Ibid.; see also Benefits for U.S. Victims of International Terrorism: Hearing Before the S. Comm. on Foreign Relations, S. Hr’g No. 108-214, at 8 (July 17, 2003) (statement of William H. Taft, IV, Legal Adviser, Dep’t of State) (“Using blocked assets to pay claims and judgments will not deter terrorism, but will reduce the incentive that blocking property provides to end support for terrorism.”). The President similarly urged that using blocked assets to pay judgments would infringe on “the prerogatives of the President in the area of foreign affairs.” 2002 Pub. Papers 1697, 1699 (Sept. 30, 2002).

This Court routinely recognizes a case’s importance to the Nation’s foreign relations as a basis for review. See, e.g., Christopher v. Harbury, 536 U.S. 403, 412 (2002) (granting review because of the “importance of th[e] issue to the Government in its conduct of the Nation’s foreign affairs”); JPMorgan Chase Bank v. Traffic Stream (BVI) Infrastructure Ltd., 536 U.S. 88, 91 (2002) (“serious issues of foreign relations”); Banco Nacional de Cuba v. Sabbatino, 376 U.S. 398, 407 (1964); Kolovrat v.

Oregon, 366 U.S. 187, 191 (1961). The Ninth Circuit’s rejection of the government’s construction thus weighs sharply in favor of review.¹

C. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Is Incorrect

The Ninth Circuit’s decision is also wrong. TRIA applies only to “assets of” the sovereign respondent. TRIA §201(a). As this Court has explained, “[t]he use of the word ‘of’ denotes ownership.” Bd. of Trs. of Leland Stanford Junior Univ. v. Roche Molecular Sys., Inc., 563 U.S. 776, 788 (2011) (quoting Poe v. Seaborn, 282 U.S. 101, 109 (1930)). The statute’s plain language thus requires ownership.

The Ninth Circuit insisted that a mere right to receive funds was sufficient because “California law authorizes a court to order a judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor a right to payments that are due or will become due.” App., infra, 47a. But the fact that Visa owes Bank Melli money does not mean Bank Melli already owns those funds. See United States v. Rodrigues, 159 F.3d 439, 448 (9th Cir. 1998) (“An entitlement or right to receive is an interest distinct from ownership.”). And the mere fact that California law permits judgment creditors to recover even absent ownership does not mean TRIA’s federal ownership requirement is met. See U.S. Br. in No. 13-15442, Dkt. 82 at 17 (9th Cir. filed Oct. 23, 2015) (“[T]he mere fact that state law authorizes attachment is insufficient,” because “federal law has an affirmative requirement that the assets actually be owned by the debtor state or instrumentality.”).

¹ The United States’ previous submissions already explain why Bank Melli’s construction of TRIA is correct. U.S. Br. in No. 16-334, at 19; U.S. Br. in No. 13-15442, Dkt. 82 at 14-19 (9th Cir. filed Oct. 23, 2015). Nonetheless, to the extent the Court has any doubts about the government’s views, it should invite a further submission, as it did previously. See 137 S. Ct. 707 (2017).

The Ninth Circuit asserted that federal law supported its interpretation because “Congress has used expansive wording to suggest that immediate and outright ownership of assets is not required.” App., infra, 48a. But the only “expansive wording” the court identified was a provision in a related compensation fund program stating that “[n]othing in this subsection shall bar * * * enforcement of any judgment to which this subsection applies * * * against assets otherwise available under this section or under any other provision of law.” Pub. L. No. 107-297, sec. 201(c), §2002(d)(4), 116 Stat. 2322, 2339 (2002) (erroneously cited as TRIA §201(d)(4)). A generic saving clause that merely clarifies that a statute does not repeal any other execution mechanism has no conceivable relevance to whether TRIA itself requires ownership.

TRIA’s plain language requires ownership. The Ninth Circuit has excised that requirement from the statute.

D. This Is an Appropriate Case for Review

This case is an appropriate vehicle for review of the important question decided below. Plaintiffs previously objected that “the case comes to this Court in an interlocutory posture and is not ripe for review.” Br. in Opp. in No. 16-334, at 17. The United States likewise faulted the case’s “interlocutory posture.” U.S. Br. in No. 16-334, at 18. Those concerns have been extinguished. The case now returns to the Court from the district court’s judgment of execution—a final judgment by any standard.

The government’s concerns about ambiguity in the Ninth Circuit’s prior opinion have also been addressed. The government previously claimed that the Ninth Circuit may require ownership after all because, “in part of its opinion, the court appears to have assumed that [TRIA] require[s] ownership.” U.S. Br. in No. 16-334, at 19. But the Ninth Circuit has now rejected that view. The decision below interpreted the prior opinion as holding that “‘ownership’ facts” are simply “not material,” a ruling that is “now the law of the circuit.” App., infra, 3a.

The unpublished status of the Ninth Circuit’s latest decision does not weigh against review. The reason the court issued an unpublished memorandum was that it had already resolved the important statutory question in its earlier published opinion. App., infra, 46a-49a. The later decision merely applied that precedent as “law of the circuit.” Id. at 3a. Where this Court denies review of a published opinion as interlocutory, the later decision following final judgment will often be unpublished, because the court of appeals will have already decided the important question in the earlier opinion. Having postponed review until final judgment, this Court should not decline review altogether merely because the later decision happens to be unpublished.

Finally, the Ninth Circuit’s alternative holding based on assertions about the factual record is no basis for denying review. Despite multiple regulatory reports in which Visa’s in-house counsel certified that Visa was the “Owner” of the assets, the court claimed that there was no “genuine issue of fact” over ownership because, “[r]eading the documents as a whole and in context, they describe the accounts as ‘hold[ing] Bank Melli funds.’” App., infra, 3a. That holding is flatly erroneous.

At summary judgment, “the weighing of the evidence, and the drawing of legitimate inferences from the facts, are jury functions, not those of a judge.” Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 255 (1986). While one report does refer ambiguously to “Bank Melli funds”—a notation that could simply reflect that Visa owes the money to Bank Melli—both reports explicitly list Visa as the “Owner” of the assets. App., infra, 133a, 137a (reproducing reports). At most, the one isolated reference to “Bank Melli funds” is the sort of ambiguity or internal conflict within a document that creates rather than eliminates a genuine dispute of fact at summary judgment. The Ninth Circuit’s contrary holding—that there is no genuine dispute that Bank Melli rather than Visa is the owner of the assets despite multiple regulatory reports in which Visa explicitly identifies itself as the “Owner”—is a blatant departure from summary judgment standards.

The Ninth Circuit’s alternative holding is so facially implausible that it smacks of an intentional effort to avoid this Court’s review. This Court has not hesitated to grant review in comparable circumstances. See, e.g., County of Los Angeles v. Mendez, 137 S. Ct. 1539, 1548–1549 (2017) (granting review to address Ninth Circuit’s “provocation” theory for excessive-force claims despite factbound alternative holding on proximate cause); Whole Woman’s Health v. Hellerstedt, 136 S. Ct. 2292, 2304–2309 (2016) (granting review to address constitutionality of admitting-privileges requirement despite narrow alternative holding on preclusion); Marmet Health Care Ctr., Inc. v. Brown, 565 U.S. 530 (2012) (per curiam) (granting review to address state-court refusal to enforce arbitration agreement despite purported alternative holding on unconscionability). This case is no different: The Ninth Circuit’s alternative holding flouts settled summary judgment standards, and the need to spend a paragraph or two dispatching that obviously erroneous ruling should not dissuade the Court from addressing the important question of federal law the Ninth Circuit also decided.

II. THE NINTH CIRCUIT’S HOLDING THAT TRIA ABROGATES SEPARATE JURIDICAL STATUS WARRANTS REVIEW

The Ninth Circuit construed TRIA to permit execution against assets of a juridically separate instrumentality to satisfy judgments against the sovereign. That holding disregards settled canons of construction and draws an Act of Congress into conflict with international law, treaty obligations, and this Court’s precedents. It likewise warrants review.

A. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Conflicts with Bancec and the Treaty of Amity

The default judgments that plaintiffs seek to execute were not entered against Bank Melli. They were entered against the Iranian government. App., infra, 108a. “Bank Melli is not named as a party to any of the judgments and is not alleged to have been involved in any of the events underlying them.” Id. at 109a. Bank Melli is juridically separate from the Iranian government, with its own share capital and board of directors. C.A. E.R. 299-300. Plaintiffs have never attempted to show that Bank Melli is a mere alter ego of the government, nor any other traditional basis for piercing the corporate veil.

The Ninth Circuit’s holding that Bank Melli may nonetheless be held liable for Iran’s debts is a matter of grave concern. In Bancec, this Court held that “government instrumentalities established as juridical entities distinct and independent from their sovereign should normally be treated as such.” 462 U.S. at 626-627. The Court derived that presumption from “international law,” “[d]ue respect for the actions taken by foreign sovereigns,” and “comity between nations.” Id. at 623, 626-627.

“Freely ignoring the separate status of government instrumentalities,” the Court explained, “would result in substantial uncertainty over whether an instrumentality's assets would be diverted to satisfy a claim against the sovereign," which could cause other parties to "hesitate before extending credit." 462 U.S. at 626. "As a result, the efforts of sovereign nations to structure their governmental activities in a manner deemed necessary to promote economic development and efficient administration would surely be frustrated." Ibid. The United States' own interests would also suffer: "If U.S. law did not respect the separate juridical identities of different agencies or instrumentalities, it might encourage foreign jurisdictions to disregard the juridical divisions between different U.S. corporations or between a U.S. corporation and its independent subsidiary.'" Id. at 628 (quoting H.R. Rep. No. 94-1487, at 29-30 (1976)).

Those principles have special force in this case due to the Nation's treaty obligations. Article III.1 of the Treaty of Amity requires the United States to respect the "juridical status" of companies organized under Iranian law. See Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations, and Consular Rights, U.S.-Iran, art. III.1, Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899, 902. Other provisions require the United States to provide Iranian companies with access to courts and administrative agencies on terms no less favorable than those provided to other parties, to refrain from applying unreasonable or discriminatory measures, and to protect the companies' property as required by international law. Id. arts. III, IV, 8 U.S.T. at 902-904. The decision below violates all those provisions. The Ninth Circuit's repudiation of those "solemn engagements" is serious cause for alarm. See Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U.S. 424, 437 (1902); cf. Sumitomo Shoji Am., Inc. v. Avagliano, 457 U.S. 176, 182 n.7 (1982) (question concerning similar Friendship, Commerce, and Navigation treaty was “clearly of widespread importance” because “treaty provisions similar to that invoked by [petitioner] are in effect with many other countries”).

The Executive Branch has emphasized the importance of respecting the presumption of separate status. When Congress proposed in 1999 to amend § 1610(f) to provide that “all [blocked] assets of any agency or instrumentality of a foreign state shall be treated as assets of that foreign state,” H.R. 3485, 106th Cong. § 1(e) (Nov. 18, 1999), the State, Treasury, and Defense Departments submitted a joint statement expressing grave concerns. See Justice for Victims of Terrorism Act: Hearing on H.R. 3485 Before the Subcomm. on Immigration and Claims of the H. Comm. on the Judiciary, 106th Cong. 48-54 (Apr. 13, 2000) (“Joint Statement”). The proposal, they warned, was “fundamentally flawed” and would “seriously damag[e] * * * important U.S. interests.” Id. at 48.

The agencies explained that, by “direct[ing] courts to ignore the separate legal status of states and their agencies and instrumentalities,” the proposal would “overturn[] Supreme Court precedent and basic principles of corporate law and international practice.” Joint Statement 49. Even though the bill was “limited * * * to terrorism-list states and their majority owned entities,” the proposal could “create the perception that the United States is unreliable as a location for banking or investment.” Id. at 53. Moreover, the proposal would set a “dangerous precedent” for American instrumentalities. Id. at 49. “[I]f the United States were to ‘pierce the corporate veil’ in this manner,” foreign courts may similarly “disregard the separate status of private, U.S. owned companies” abroad. Id. at 53-54. “U.S. citizens, corporations, the United States government, and taxpayers have far more money invested abroad than those of any other country, and thus have more to lose if investment protections such as those provided by the presumption of separate status [are] eroded.” Id. at 54 (emphasis omitted); see also Terrorism: Victims’ Access to Terrorist Assets: Hearing Before the S. Comm. on the Judiciary, S. Hr’g No. 106-941, at 21-39 (Oct. 27, 1999) (Treasury Department expressing similar concerns).

Congress omitted the objectionable provision from the bill ultimately enacted in 2000. See Pub. L. No. 106-386, § 2002, 114 Stat. 1464, 1541 (2000). But the Ninth Circuit has now construed TRIA to do precisely what Congress refused to do in that earlier statute. That holding puts the statute at war with both precedent and treaty obligations, creating profound cause for concern.

B. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Is Incorrect

The Ninth Circuit’s construction disregards fundamental interpretive principles. This Court has long made clear that “an act of Congress ought never to be construed to violate the law of nations if any other possible construction remains.” Murray v. Schooner Charming Betsy, 6 U.S. (2 Cranch) 64, 118 (1804); see also F. Hoffmann-La Roche Ltd. v. Empagran S.A., 542 U.S. 155, 164 (2004). Similarly, “[a] treaty will not be deemed to have been abrogated or modified by a later statute unless such purpose on the part of Congress has been clearly expressed.” Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Franklin Mint Corp., 466 U.S. 243, 252 (1984). Nothing in TRIA remotely satisfies that “clear expression” rule.

The Ninth Circuit relied on TRIA’s statement that “the blocked assets of [a] terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party)” are subject to execution. TRIA § 201(a) (emphasis added). That “including” parenthetical, however, does not expand the statute beyond the sovereign’s own assets. It merely clarifies that the statute reaches instrumentality assets when they are included within the sovereign's own assets—for example, because the sovereign and instrumentality are alter egos.

This Court has made clear that “including” is a word of illustration, not expansion. In Montello Salt Co. v. Utah, 221 U.S. 452 (1911), for example, the Court construed a statute granting Utah “one hundred and ten thousand acres of land, to be selected and located as provided [elsewhere in the statute], and including all saline lands in said state.” Id. at 459 (emphasis altered). The Court rejected the argument that the statute granted Utah all saline lands. Explaining that “including” is not a “word of enlargement,” the Court construed the provision merely to clarify that saline lands were included within the one hundred and ten thousand acres to be selected, not to expand the statute beyond those lands. Id. at 463, 465.

Similarly, in Chickasaw Nation v. United States, 534 U.S. 84 (2001), the Court considered a tax provision that applied to “reporting and withholding” requirements, defined parenthetically to “includ[e]” various sections, some of which did not even address reporting or withholding. Id. at 89. Because the parenthetical clause was “prefaced with the word ‘including,’” the Court held that it did not expand the statute beyond “reporting and withholding” provisions. Ibid.

The same reasoning applies here. By stating that the assets subject to execution are “the blocked assets of th[e] terrorist party,” TRIA makes clear that the only assets subject to execution are those of the alleged terrorist party itself—in this case, the Iranian government. Adding the phrase “(including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party)” merely clarifies that instrumentality assets are subject to execution when they are “includ[ed]” within the terrorist party’s own assets. The statute thus extends to instrumentality assets only when there is some basis for treating them as the sovereign’s own—for example, when the sovereign and instrumentality are alter egos. See Bancec, 462 U.S. at 628-630. The “including” clause does not expand the statute to reach assets that are not the sovereign’s property at all.

Congress’s placement of the “including” language in a parenthetical clause only underscores its limited function. “The use of the parentheses emphasizes the fact that that which is within is meant simply to be illustrative, hence redundant * * * .” Chickasaw Nation, 534 U.S. at 89. Congress, after all, does not “hide elephants in mouseholes.” Whitman v. Am. Trucking Ass’ns, 531 U.S. 457, 468 (2001). Courts should not presume that Congress meant to jettison fundamental precepts of international law based on oblique parenthetical language.

Had Congress wanted to authorize execution against instrumentality assets regardless of Bancec, it could have phrased the statute broadly to cover assets of a terrorist party “and,” or “as well as,” instrumentality assets. Congress did precisely that in §1610(g), which permits execution against “the property of a foreign state * * * , and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state,” where other requirements are met. 28 U.S.C. §1610(g) (emphasis added). In TRIA, by contrast, Congress added a parenthetical “including” clause that merely acknowledges Bancec’s customary exceptions. At the very least, that is one reasonable construction. The canon that statutes should be construed to be consistent with international law and treaty obligations requires that reading, not the Ninth Circuit’s contrary one.

C. The Ninth Circuit’s Decision Exposes the United States to Liability in Ongoing Proceedings Before the International Court of Justice

The court of appeals’ decision threatens tangible consequences for the United States. The Treaty of Amity provides that “[a]ny dispute between the High Contracting Parties as to the interpretation or application of the present Treaty * * * shall be submitted to the International Court of Justice.” Art. XXI.2, 8 U.S.T. at 913. Invoking that provision, Iran instituted proceedings against the United States in 2016. See Certain Iranian Assets (Iran v. U.S.), No. 164, Application Instituting Proceedings (I.C.J. filed June 14, 2016). Iran alleges violations of the Treaty of Amity based on, among other things, the United States’ disregard for the separate status of Iranian entities in TRIA and other statutes. Id. ¶¶16, 28, 32(a). Iran cites this very case as one example. Id. ¶28(a). It seeks “full reparations” for the treaty violations. Id. ¶33(f).

Earlier this year, the ICJ largely denied the United States’ jurisdictional objections. See Certain Iranian Assets (Iran v. U.S.), No. 164, Judgment on Preliminary Objections (I.C.J. Feb. 13, 2019) (“ICJ Judgment”). The Court specifically rejected the United States’ argument that another Iranian financial institution was not a “company” protected by the Treaty. Id. ¶¶81-97.

The Ninth Circuit’s decision exposes the United States to liability in those proceedings. The Ninth Circuit denied any such prospect on the ground that the Treaty “is intended simply to ensure that foreign corporations are on equal footing with domestic corporations.” App., infra, 45a; see also U.S. Br. in Bank Melli Iran N.Y. Rep. Office v. Weinstein, No. 10-947, at 15-16. But the Ninth Circuit’s construction of TRIA hardly puts Iranian companies on an “equal footing.” It singles them out for discriminatory, automatic veil-piercing precisely because of their Iranian status.

Last year, the United States announced its intent to withdraw from the Treaty of Amity. See Michael R. Pompeo, Sec’y of State, U.S. Dep’t of State, Remarks to the Media (Oct. 3, 2018), <https://www.state.gov/remarks-to-the-media-3>. But the Treaty remained in force at the time of the Ninth Circuit’s opinion. Moreover, the ICJ has already ruled that “the denunciation of the Treaty announced by the United States on 3 October 2018 has no effect on the jurisdiction of the Court in the present case.” ICJ Judgment ¶30. The United States’ announcement thus does nothing to undermine the specter of liability the Ninth Circuit’s decision creates.

The Executive Branch has warned that “disregarding separate legal personality” could “lead to substantial U.S. taxpayer liability for takings claims * * * before international [tribunals].” Joint Statement 53. The State Department noted in a related context that “[v]irtually all of the Iranian blocked property that has been the subject of attachments * * * is the subject of claims against the U.S. government before the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal in The Hague, where we will have to account for it.” S. Hr’g No. 108-214, at 8; see also 1998 Pub. Papers at 1847 (expressing similar concerns). The ongoing proceedings at the ICJ confirm that those warnings are well placed. The Ninth Circuit’s expansive construction of TRIA exposes the United States to additional treaty claims without a clear directive from Congress. For that reason too, the Court should grant review.

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted.

LISA W. BOHL
MOLOLAMKEN LLP
300 N. LaSalle St.
Chicago, Illinois 60654
(312) 450-6700

JEFFREY A. LAMKEN
ROBERT K. KRY
Counsel of Record
MOLOLAMKEN LLP
The Watergate, Suite 660
600 New Hampshire Ave., N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037
(202) 556-2000
rkry@mololamken.com

Counsel for Petitioner

DECEMBER 2019

APPENDIX A
UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

DOCKET No. 19-15101

MICHAEL BENNETT, CO-ADMINISTRATORS OF THE ESTATE OF MARLA ANN BENNETT; LINDA BENNETT, AS CO-ADMINISTRATORS OF THE ESTATE OF
MARIA ANN BENNETT,

Plaintiffs-Appellees,

v.

THE ISLAMIC REPUBLIC OF IRAN; THE IRANIAN MINISTRY OF INFORMATION AND SECURITY,

Defendants,

v.

FRANKLIN RESOURCES, INC.; VISA INC.,

Third-party-plaintiffs-Appellees,

v.

BANK MELLI,

Third-party-defendant-Appellant,

v.

ESTATE OF MEIR KAHANE; et al.,

Third-party-defendants-Appellees.

MEMORANDUM*

September 30, 2019

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of California
Charles R. Breyer, District Judge, Presiding

Argued and Submitted
September 23, 2019—San Francisco, California

Before: THOMAS, Chief Judge, and GRABER and BERZON, Circuit Judges.

This case comes before us for the second time. We previously affirmed the denial of Bank Melli’s motion to dismiss. We recognized that, for blocked assets “to be subject to execution or attachment” under §201(a) of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act (“TRIA”), “the blocked assets must be ‘assets of’ the instrumentality.” Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 825 F.3d 949, 963 (9th Cir. 2016), abrogated on other grounds by Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 138 S. Ct. 816 (2018). As relevant here, we then held that, on the facts alleged, the blocked assets in dispute are property of Bank Melli and so may be assigned to judgment creditors. Id. at 963-964.

Subsequently, the district court granted Plaintiffs’ motion for summary judgment, holding that the funds that Visa deposited in the district court’s registry are Bank

* This disposition is not appropriate for publication and is not precedent except as provided by Ninth Circuit Rule 36-3.

Melli's property and, therefore, are subject to attachment under TRIA §201(a). On Bank Melli's timely appeal from the resulting judgment, we affirm.

Bank Melli argues that a genuine issue of material fact exists as to whether it "owns" the funds, because two of Visa's regulatory filings listed Visa as "owner" of the funds. That argument is unavailing for two reasons.

First, that issue of fact is not material. Bank Melli does not dispute any of the facts alleged in the complaint, on which we rested our holding that the blocked assets are property of Bank Melli. For example, Bank Melli has a contractual right to obtain payments from Visa. Bank Melli concedes that it has "an interest in the funds" and a "right to receive payment of the debt that Visa owes." Our previous holding is now the law of the circuit, and it controls here. See Gonzalez v. Arizona, 677 F.3d 383, 389 n.4 (9th Cir. 2012) (en banc) (holding that exceptions to the law of the case doctrine do not apply when the prior decision was a published opinion from this circuit, "which must be followed unless and until overruled by a body competent to do so" (internal quotation marks omitted)).

Second, even if we were to consider the "ownership" facts to be material, the documents on which Bank Melli relies do not create a genuine issue of fact. Reading the documents as a whole and in context, they describe the accounts as "hold[ing] Bank Melli funds."

Given our disposition of this issue, we need not reach the remaining arguments.

AFFIRMED.

APPENDIX B

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

DOCKET No. 11-05807

MICHAEL BENNETT, et al.,
Plaintiffs,

v.

FRANKLIN RESOURCES, INC., et al.,
Defendants.

ORDER GRANTING MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT, GRANTING MOTION FOR STAY

December 19, 2018

In this case, four groups of judgment creditors (“Plaintiffs” or “Judgment Creditors”) who hold judgments against Iran seek to recover $17.6 million in assets (“the Blocked Assets”) held by Third Party Plaintiffs Visa and Franklin. Although the assets are “due and owing to” Bank Melli, an Iranian instrumentality, they are blocked by executive orders issued by the President and regulations issued by the Department of the Treasury, Office of Foreign Assets Control (“OFAC”). The time has come for summary judgment. As the Court indicated at the motion hearing, it now GRANTS Plaintiffs’ Motion for Summary Judgment (dkt. 172), and GRANTS Bank Melli’s Motion to Stay (dkt. 180).

I. BACKGROUND

A. The Judgment Creditors

The Judgment Creditors are United States citizens, or representatives of their estates, who hold unsatisfied money judgments against Iran for injuries sustained in multiple terror attacks carried out with Iran’s material support and assistance. See Acosta v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 574 F. Supp. 2d 15 (D.D.C. 2008); Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 466 F. Supp. 2d 229 (D.D.C. 2006); Greenbaum v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 451 F. Supp. 2d 90 (D.D.C. 2006); Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 507 F. Supp. 2d 117 (D.D.C. 2007). Their judgments are based on claims against Iran for which Iran was not immune under section 1605A and/or section 1605(a)(7) of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976 (“FSIA”), Pub. L. No. 94-583, 90 Stat. 2891 (codified as amended at 28 U.S.C. §§1602 et seq.); Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 825 F.3d 949, 955 (9th Cir. 2016) (discussing FSIA exceptions to general rule of immunity).

The Acostas’ judgment is for $50,172,000.00; the Bennetts’ judgment is for $12,904,548.00; the Greenbaums’ judgment is for $19,879,023.00; and the Heisers’ judgment is for $286,089,966.00. Mechling Decl. Ex. E. (dkt. 172-6) at 2-4.¹ Their combined judgments total $369,045,537.00. The Judgment Creditors have collected approximately $195,900,000.00 in partial satisfaction of their judgments. See Mechling Decl. (dkt. 172) ¶10; Norman Decl. (dkt. 172-10) ¶7; Kremen Decl. ¶9. Their unpaid compensatory damage judgments therefore far exceed the value of the Blocked Assets.

¹ The Judgment Creditors have also been awarded punitive damages in the amount of $600,000,000.00 in aggregate. Mechling Decl. (dkt. 172-1) ¶8; Kremen Decl. (dkt. 172-7) ¶7.

B. Bank Melli

Bank Melli, Iran’s largest financial institution, is wholly owned by Iran. Bennett, 825 F.3d at 957; Mechling Decl. Ex. D (dkt. 172-5) ¶7. On August 10, 1995, OFAC recognized this, issuing a notice that Bank Melli “and all [its] offices worldwide” are “owned or controlled by the Government of Iran.” Implementation of Executive Order No. 12,959 with Respect to Iran, 60 Fed. Reg. 40,881, 40,884 (Aug. 10, 1995).

1. EO 13,382

On June 28, 2005, acting pursuant to, inter alia, the authority vested in him by the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (“IEEPA”), Pub. L. No. 95-223, §202, 91 Stat. 1626 (codified as amended at 50 U.S.C. §1601 et seq.), President Bush issued Executive Order 13,382. EO 13,382 blocked all property located in the United States owned by any entity “determined by the Secretary of State, in consultation with the Secretary of Treasury, the Attorney General, and other relevant agencies, to have engaged, or attempted to engage, in activities or transactions that have materially contributed to, or pose a risk of materially contributing to, the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction or their means of delivery.” Blocking Property of Weapons of Mass Destruction Proliferators and Their Supporters, 70 Fed. Reg. 38,567, 38,567, §1 (June 28, 2005). On October 25, 2007, Bank Melli was designated an entity “whose property and interests in property are blocked pursuant to Executive Order 13382.” Additional Designation of Entities Pursuant to Executive Order 13,382, 72 Fed. Reg. 62,520, 62,521 (Nov. 5, 2007).

On January 16, 2016, Bank Melli’s Executive Order 13,382 designation was removed. See Changes to Sanctions Lists Administered by the Office of Foreign Assets Control on Implementation Day Under the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action, 81 Fed. Reg. 13,562, 13,562, 13,564 (Mar. 14, 2016).

2. EO 13,599

On February 5, 2012, acting pursuant to the authority vested in him by, inter alia, IEEPA, President Obama issued Executive Order 13,599, which blocked “[a]ll property and interests in property of the Government of Iran, including the Central Bank of Iran, that are in the United States, that hereafter come within the United States, or that are or hereafter come within the possession or control of any United States person.” Blocking Property of the Government of Iran and Iranian Financial Institutions, 77 Fed. Reg. 6659, 6659, §1(a) (Feb. 5, 2012). EO 13,599 defines “Government of Iran” to “mean[] the Government of Iran, any political subdivision, agency, or instrumentality thereof, including the Central Bank of Iran, and any person owned or controlled by, or acting for or on behalf of, the Government of Iran.” Id. at 6660, §7(d). OFAC then promulgated the Iranian Transactions and Sanctions Regulations (“ITSRs”) pursuant to IEEPA in order to implement the EO. See Iranian Transactions Regulations, 77 Fed. Reg. 64,664 (Oct. 22, 2012); 31 C.F.R. Part 560. The ITSRS similarly both define “Government of Iran” and block its property. See 31 C.F.R. §§560.211(a), 560.304(a)-(c).

On January 16, 2016, the same day Bank Melli’s Executive Order 13,382 designation was removed, OFAC published a “list of persons identified by OFAC as meeting the definition of the term Government of Iran or the term Iranian financial institution as set forth in, respectively, sections 560.304 and 560.321 of the ITSR.” Office of Foreign Assets Control, List of Persons Identified as Blocked Solely Pursuant to Executive Order 13,599 at 1 (Aug. 15, 2018), available at <https://www.treasury.gov/ofac/downloads/13599/13599list.pdf> (hereinafter “13599 List”). OFAC identified Bank Melli on the 13599 List as an entity meeting the definition of Government of Iran. Id. at 5. EO 13,599 is self-executing: “[t]he property and interests in property falling within the definition of the terms Government of Iran and Iranian financial institutions are blocked pursuant to this section regardless of whether the names of such persons are” identified on the EO 13599 List. See 31 C.F.R. § 560.211 Note 1.

3. EO 13,244

In addition, on November 5, 2018, the United States announced that it had added Bank Melli to the Specially Designated Nationals and Blocked Persons List (“SDN List”), designating it a Specially Designated Global Terrorist (“SDGT”). See Mechling Reply Decl. Ex. A (dkt. 184-2) at 2-3 & Ex. B (dkt. 184-3) at 3. President Bush issued Executive Order 13244 pursuant to, inter alia, IEEPA; that Order blocks all property of foreign persons designated as an SDGT. See Executive Order 13224, 66 Fed. Reg. 49,079, 49,079 (Sept. 23, 2001); see also 31 C.F.R. § 594.201, 594.310.

C. The Blocked Assets

On April 15, 1991, Bank Melli applied to Visa International Service Association (“Visa International”) to become a principal member in Visa International’s “common bank card and/or travelers cheque program.” Bailey Decl. Ex. 1 (dkt. 172-13). As part of the application, Bank Melli entered into a Membership Agreement with Visa International. Id. Visa is a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware with a principal place of business in Foster City, California. Bailey Decl. (dkt. 172-12) ¶3. Bank Melli admits that “it is or was a party to an agreement with Visa or a Visa affiliate pursuant to which Bank Melli agreed to accept Visa cards in Iran through its branches in that country, and that certain amounts are due and owing to Bank Melli pursuant to that agreement.” Mechling Decl. Ex. D.

In or about April 1995, OFAC “informed Visa that, owing to sanctions imposed against [Iran], Visa could no longer accept transactions acquired by Bank Melli.” Bailey Decl. ¶8. On July 4, 1995, Visa International informed Bank Melli that, because Bank Melli’s accounts at Bank of New York had been frozen, Visa International transferred funds due to Bank Melli “to a separate settlement account.” Bailey Decl. Ex. 3 (dkt. 172-15); Bailey Decl. ¶8. “Shortly thereafter, all . . . transactions [acquired by Bank Melli] ceased, leaving certain sums owing to Bank Melli’s settlement account.” Bailey Decl. ¶8. On March 15, 1996, “Visa International invested the $2,570,465.26 then due and owing to Bank Melli in securities issued by the Institutional Fiduciary Trust.” Id. ¶9. Subsequently, “[a]dditional funds due and owing to Bank Melli were invested in securities issued by the Institutional Fiduciary Trust up until January 9, 1998.” Id. ¶10. Bank Melli wrote to Visa on January 25, 2004, stating, “our funds for acquiring transactions made by VISA cardholders in Iran from 6/6/95 till cease of operations are $11,587,627.02 which are held with [Visa International].” Bailey Decl. Ex. 4 (dkt. 172-16) (emphasis added). Visa International held the funds in an account named Visa International Special Account 5. Bailey Decl. ¶11.

On September 29, 2010, Visa International submitted an Annual Report of Blocked Property, as required by OFAC regulations. Bailey Decl. Ex. 6 (dkt. 172-18). In that report, Visa International reported to OFAC that it had blocked Visa International Special Account 5. Id. Visa International reported that the value of the blocked account was $17,648,962.76. Id. The report lists Visa International as the “owner” but states, “Account holds Bank Melli funds.” Id. Visa International submitted a second Annual Report on September 27, 2011. See Bailey Decl. Ex. 7 (dkt. 172-19). That report also lists Visa International as the “owner” but includes the same account number as the 2010 report, the same “Visa International Special Account 5” name, and the same value of $17,648,962.76. Id.

As of May 9, 2012, “the total amount due and owing (but not paid to) Bank Melli, including interest and return on investment, was $17,648,962.76.” Bailey Decl. ¶10. On that date, “Visa deposited the outstanding funds due and owing to Bank Melli, plus interest and any return on investment, in the Court’s Registry amounting to $17,648,962.76.” Bailey Decl. ¶12; Mechling Decl. Ex. C; Notice (dkt. 89). Visa and Franklin have disclaimed any interest in the funds. Compl. (dkt. 16) ¶4.

D. Procedural History

Visa and Franklin brought this interpleader action “to obtain a determination as to which [of the groups of judgment creditors], if any, has priority with respect to [the Blocked Assets] to satisfy their judgments or their claims.” Id. In February of 2014, this Court denied Bank Melli’s motion to dismiss, but certified the matter for interlocutory appeal. See generally MTD (dkt. 112); Order Denying MTD (dkt. 128). The Ninth Circuit affirmed in a series of orders, the Supreme Court denied certiorari, and now the case is back in this Court. See Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 799 F.3d 1281 (9th Cir. 2015); Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 817 F.3d 1131 (9th Cir. 2016); Bennett, 825 F.3d 949; Bank Melli v. Bennett, 138 S. Ct. 1260 (2018).

The Judgment Creditors have moved for summary judgment “directing the turnover to the Judgment Creditors of the [Blocked Assets] deposited with the Court’s Registry.” See MSJ at 2. Visa and Franklin also moved for discharge and for an award of $324,130.60 in attorneys’ fees. See Fees Mot. (dkt. 175). Bank Melli opposed both motions, see Opp’n to Fees Mot. (dkt. 181); Opp’n to MSJ (dkt. 179) and moved to stay enforcement during appeal, see Motion to Stay. Plaintiffs replied and opposed the Stay, see Reply re MSJ (dkt. 185, 186); and Bank Melli filed a reply in support of its Motion to Stay, see Reply re Stay (dkt. 189). The Court granted the discharge and fees motion on the papers, see Order re Discharge and Fees (dkt. 190), though stayed disbursement of the fees until after hearing the Motion to Stay, see Order re Ex Parte Mot. (dkt. 192). Accordingly, the two pending motions are the Motion for Summary Judgment and the Motion to Stay.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

A. Summary Judgment

Summary judgment is appropriate “if the movant shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). A fact is material if it could affect the outcome of the case under governing law. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). A dispute of material fact is genuine if the evidence, viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, “is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party.” Id.

The party moving for summary judgment bears the initial burden of identifying those portions of the pleadings, discovery, and affidavits that demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). On an issue on which it will have the burden of proof at trial, the moving party must affirmatively show that no reasonable jury could find other than in the moving party's favor. Id. at 331 (Brennan, J., dissenting).

Once the moving party meets its initial burden, the nonmoving party must go beyond the pleadings and show that there is a genuine issue for trial. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 250. The nonmoving party does this by citing to specific parts of the materials in the record or by showing that the materials cited by the moving party do not compel a judgment in the moving party's favor. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). Because the court has no obligation to "scour the record in search of a genuine issue of triable fact," the nonmoving party must "identify with reasonable particularity the evidence that precludes summary judgment." Kenman v. Allan, 91 F.3d 1275, 1279 (9th Cir. 1996). If the nonmoving party fails to raise a genuine issue as to any material fact, the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 250. In determining whether there is a genuine issue for trial, the court does not weigh the evidence, assess the credibility of witnesses, or resolve issues of fact. Id. at 249.

B. Stay

Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 62(b) (formerly 62(d)²), "[a]t any time after judgment is entered, a party may obtain a stay by providing a bond or other security. The stay takes effect when the court approves the bond or other security and remains in effect for the time specified in the bond or other security.” When a litigant complies with the rule by appealing “and post[ing] a supersedeas bond with the district court, it [is] entitled to a stay as a matter of right.” See American Civil Liberties Union of Nevada v. Masto, 670 F.3d 1046, 1066 (9th Cir. 2012).

² See Fed. R. Civ. P. advisory committee note to 2018 amendment ("Subdivisions (a), (b), (c), and (d) of former Rule 62 are reorganized Subdivision 62(b) carries forward in modified form the supersedeas bond provisions of former Rule 62(d).").

III. DISCUSSION

Plaintiffs argue that Bank Melli’s legal challenges have been resolved, that all of the requirements of TRIA have been satisfied, and that the time has come for the Court to enter judgment in their favor. See generally MSJ. Bank Melli opposes, arguing that the Court should deny summary judgment because (A) the Blocked Assets are not “assets of” Bank Melli; (B) the Blocked Assets are not validly blocked; (C) there are other arguments that Bank Melli would like the Supreme Court to address; and (D) even if the Court is inclined to grant summary judgment, the Court should stay enforcement pending appellate review. See generally Opp’n to MSJ; Reply re Stay. This Order addresses each argument in turn, finding persuasive only the argument for a stay.

A. “Assets of” Bank Melli

Bank Melli’s first argument opposing summary judgment is that TRIA requires ownership, and that Plaintiffs have not met their burden of demonstrating ownership here, because (1) there is a dispute over the ownership of the funds; and (2) Bank Melli’s intangible right to receive payment is not a property right subject to this Court’s jurisdiction. See Opp’n to MSJ at 7-11. The Court rejects both points.

1. Dispute over Ownership of Funds

Bank Melli argues that the Court cannot grant summary judgment for Plaintiffs because there is a genuine factual dispute about who owns the funds in the Court’s

Registry. See id. at 7-8. Bank Melli argues that “TRIA permits execution only against ‘blocked assets of [a] terrorist party,’” and that the “evidence produced in discovery makes clear that Visa, not Bank Melli, is the owner of the funds.” Id. at 7 (citing TRIA §201(a)). It bolsters this argument by adding that Visa’s repeated assertion that the funds are “due and owing” to Bank Melli “necessarily means that Bank Melli does not already own them.” Id. at 8 (citing United States v. Rodrigues, 159 F.3d 439 (9th Cir. 1998), amended on denial of reh’g, 170 F.3d 881 (9th Cir. 1999); Broad. Music, Inc. v. Hirsch, 104 F.3d 1163, 1166 (9th Cir. 1997)).³

Bank Melli has asserted repeatedly that it owns the funds. See, e.g., Opp’n to Fees Mot. at 12 (arguing that Visa and Franklin should not be awarded legal fees from the Blocked Assets because Visa and Franklin’s “legal fees . . . should be borne by them—not by Bank Melli”); Opp’n to MSJ at 19 (emphasis added) (seeking stay because if Blocked Assets “in the Court’s registry are distributed to the hundreds of Judgment Creditors in this case, as a practical matter Bank Melli will never be able to recover them”); Bailey Decl. Ex. 4 (emphasis added) (Bank Melli 1/25/04 letter to Visa: “our funds for acquiring transactions made by VISA cardholders in Iran from 6/6/95 till cease of operations are $11,587,627.02 which are held with [Visa International].”). Visa, for its part, “claims no beneficial ownership in the $17,648,962.76 (and any interest thereon) in the Court’s Registry.” See Bailey Decl. ¶13.

Moreover, the Ninth Circuit held unambiguously at the motion to dismiss phase of the case that Bank Melli owns the funds. See Bennett, 825 F.3d at 963 (“The blocked assets are property of Bank Melli”; discussing Bank Melli argument “that TRIA §201(a) . . . [does] not permit attachment of the assets here because Visa and Franklin own the blocked assets” and concluding under California and federal law that “those assets are property of Bank Melli and may be assigned to judgment creditors.”). That ruling took into account Bank Melli’s argument that the money is only “due and owing” and not currently in Bank Melli’s possession. See id. at 963-964 (discussing California law re right to funds “that are due or will become due” and “money owed to Bank Melli”).

³ The Court already rejected this authority at the motion to dismiss phase, ruling that these cases “support[] the uncontroversial point that having an interest in property is not necessarily the same thing as owning property.” See Order Denying MTD at 14.

That two Annual Reports list Visa as the “owner” of the funds does not undermine the conclusion that the Blocked Assets are Bank Melli’s property. Those same reports identify the accounts as holding Bank Melli funds—explicitly in the 2010 report, and by referencing the same account name and value in the 2011 report. See Bailey Decl. Exs. 6, 7. Indeed, this Court just held, in granting discharge to Visa and Franklin, that “Bank Melli’s contention that Visa is the true owner of the funds is foreclosed by the Ninth Circuit’s ruling . . . and by a common sense reading of the Annual Reports.” See Order re Discharge and Fees at 6. Put in terms of summary judgment, there is no genuine dispute about the ownership of the funds, because a reasonable jury could not find that they belong to Visa. See Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248.

2. Intangible Property Rights

Bank Melli next argues that even if it has a “contractual right to obtain payments from Visa and Franklin,” which is a type of property that satisfies TRIA, “that would not mean that the blocked assets . . . are property of Bank Melli.” Opp’n to MSJ at 8-9. Bank Melli asserts that this is an interpleader action relating only to the Blocked Assets—and that its “intangible property right” is beyond the jurisdiction of an interpleader. Opp’n to MSJ at 9-10 (citing, inter alia, State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Tashire, 386 U.S. 523, 534 (1967) (“the fund itself is the target of the claimants”)). It maintains that even if “an intangible right to receive payment could be seized in some other case, that would not support the relief sought here,” because this is an interpleader. Id. at 9.

There are a few problems with this argument. As a threshold matter, the contention that Bank Melli’s “contractual right to obtain payments” does “not mean that the blocked assets” are Bank Melli’s property, see id. at 8-9, flies in the face of the Ninth Circuit holding to the contrary. See Bennett, 825 F.3d at 963. Needless to say, the Judgment Creditors are not trying to seize an intangible property right; they are trying to seize the $17,648,962.76 in the Court’s Registry. See MSJ at 7 (“The Blocked Assets are subject to execution in partial satisfaction of the Judgment Creditors’ judgments.”). As for Visa and Franklin’s interpleader complaint, it does not separate out Bank Melli’s “right . . . to receive payment,” see Opp’n to MSJ at 10, from the Blocked Assets themselves; rather, it defines the Blocked Assets as “funds due and owing by contract to Bank Melli pursuant to a contractual relationship with that bank,” see Compl. ¶16. This definition did not trouble the Ninth Circuit, which held that the Blocked Assets are the property of Bank Melli because “Bank Melli has a contractual right to obtain payments from Visa and Franklin” and “[u]nder California law, those assets are property of Bank Melli and may be assigned to judgment creditors.” See Bennett, 825 F.3d at 964.

A further problem is that the State Farm case that Bank Melli relies on (the only controlling authority it cites), which held that “the fund itself is the target,” was explaining that the district court could not take the occasion of an interpleader to enjoin claimants from litigating related suits in different forums. See State Farm, 386 U.S. at 533; see also id. at 535 (interpleader “cannot be used to solve all the vexing problems of multiparty litigation arising out of a mass tort.”). The Court cautioned that “the mere existence of such a fund cannot, by use of interpleader, be employed to accomplish purposes that exceed the needs of orderly contest with respect to the fund.” Id. at 534. Here, of course, the only thing taking place is a contest with respect to the fund. The Bennett Judgment Creditors filed a complaint in this Court seeking a turnover of the Blocked Assets, held in this district by Visa and Franklin for the benefit of Iran, see Bennett Compl. (dkt. 1); Visa and Franklin brought this interpleader action “to obtain a determination as to which [of the groups of judgment creditors], if any, has priority with respect to [the Blocked Assets] to satisfy their judgments or their claims,” Compl. ¶4; and the Greenbaum Judgment Creditors, Acosta Judgment Creditors, and Heiser Judgment Creditors all filed answers asserting their own entitlement to the Blocked Assets, see Answers (dkt. 40, 41, 91). As Plaintiffs point out, Bank Melli’s authority does not stand for the proposition “that a district court presiding over an interpleader proceeding lacks authority to decide whether particular claimants to a fund are entitled to those funds . . . where they have voluntarily decided to litigate their rights as part of that proceeding.” See Reply re MSJ at 5-6. The Court therefore rejects Bank Melli’s argument that there is no interpleader jurisdiction.

Bank Melli also argues that its “intangible right to receive payment” is beyond the Court’s territorial jurisdiction, because that right is located outside of the United States. Opp’n to MSJ at 10-11 (quoting Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 830 F.3d 470, 475 (7th Cir. 2016) (“property subject to execution ‘must be within the territorial jurisdiction of the district court.’”)). Relying on two Fifth Circuit cases, Bank Melli contends that where there is “‘an overriding national concern,’ federal law may require that the situs ‘be in still a different place.’” Id. at 11 (citing Tabacalera Severiano Jorge, S.A. v. Standard Cigar Co., 392 F.2d 706, 714-715 (5th Cir. 1968); Callejo v. Bancomer, S.A., 764 F.2d 1101, 1122 (5th Cir. 1985)). Bank Melli contends that, like the act of state doctrine at issue in Tabacalera and Callejo, sovereign immunity implicates an overriding national concern, and so the Court should find that the situs of the debt is Iran. Id.

A Ninth Circuit case forecloses Bank Melli’s territorial jurisdiction argument. In Peterson v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 627 F.3d 1117, 1130 (9th Cir. 2010), a case arising under FSIA, the Ninth Circuit addressed the question of whether “Iran’s rights to payment from [a French debtor] constitute ‘property in the United States.’” The court explained that “[e]nforcement proceedings in federal district court are governed by the law of the state in which the court sits” unless there is an applicable federal law. Id. The court then explained that California law holds that “the location of a right to payment . . . is the location of the debtor,” and that therefore a right to payment is “assignable only if [the debtor resides] in the United States.” Id. at 1131. Because the debtor in that case was a French corporation, “the debt obligation it owe[d] to Iran [was] located in France.” Id. Here, because Visa International, Bank Melli’s debtor, resides in the United States, see Bailey Decl. ¶3, Bank Melli’s ownership interest in the Blocked Assets is located in the United States. The Court therefore rejects Bank Melli’s argument that there is no territorial jurisdiction.

B. Funds Invalidly Blocked

Bank Melli next argues that “TRIA allows execution only against ‘blocked assets’” and that the funds here have not been not validly blocked. Opp’n to MSJ at 11 (quoting TRIA §201(d)(2)). It argues that EO 13,382 is no longer in effect, and that EO 13,599 violates its due process rights. Id. at 11-15. It did not respond to Plaintiffs’ assertion in their Reply brief that EO 13,244 is a separate and independent ground for the Court to find the Blocked Assets blocked under TRIA. See Reply re MSJ at 14-15. The Court holds that the funds are validly blocked.

1. Executive Order 13,382 and Section 544.402

First, Plaintiffs concede that “Bank Melli’s Executive Order 13,382 designation was removed,” but they argue that it still has effect in this case, because of OFAC regulation 31 C.F.R. §544.402. See MSJ at 12. Section 544.402 provides:

Unless otherwise specifically provided, any . . . revocation of any provision in or appendix to this part or chapter or of any order, regulation, ruling, instruction, or license issued by or under the direction of the Director of the Office of Foreign Assets Control does not affect any act done or omitted, or any civil or criminal suit or proceeding commenced or pending prior to such . . . revocation.

31 C.F.R. §544.402 (emphasis added). Plaintiffs’ interpretation of section 544.402 is that the revocation of an order does not affect a pending civil suit, like this one.

See MSJ at 12. Bank Melli’s interpretation of the same section is that it applies “only to revocation of orders by OFAC.” See Opp’n to MSJ at 14. It argues that EO 13,382 was not revoked by OFAC, but as a result of the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (“JCPOA”). Id. (citing JCPOA annex II, §4.8.1 & attach. 3).

The section is not altogether clear, but it does not matter. While the JCPOA was the means by which the United States “commit[ted] to cease the application of, and to seek such legislative action as may be appropriate to terminate, or modify to effectuate the termination of, all nuclear-related sanctions,” such as Bank Melli’s 13,382 designation, see JCPOA annex II, §§4, 4.8.2 & attach. 3, available at <https://www.state.gov/documents/organization/245320.pdf>, it was OFAC that effectuated the revocation, see Changes to Sanctions Lists Administered by the Office of Foreign Assets Control on Implementation Day Under the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action, 81 Fed. Reg. 13,562, 13,562 (Mar. 14, 2016) (“On January 16, 2016, OFAC determined,” among other things, that Bank Melli “was no longer blocked pursuant to . . . E.O. 13382.”). Accordingly, even Bank Melli’s interpretation of 544.402 has been met.

Bank Melli argues, however, that section 544.402 is “ineffective as contrary to TRIA.” Id. (quoting Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 842-843 (1984) (“agency regulation has no effect when it conflicts with the ‘unambiguously expressed intent of Congress.’”). It contends that TRIA states only that “blocked assets” are subject to execution, but says nothing about “formerly blocked assets.” Id. No matter. If assets are blocked pursuant to Executive Order 13,382 and then remain blocked by operation of section 544.402, then they remain “blocked assets,” not “formerly blocked assets.” There is no conflict.

Accordingly, the Blocked Assets are blocked by EO 13,382.

2. Executive Order 13,599

Second, Plaintiffs contend that EO 13,599 also operates to block the funds at issue here. See MSJ at 11-12. The same day that Bank Melli’s EO 13,382 designation was removed, OFAC identified Bank Melli on the EO 13,599 List as an entity whose property was blocked. See 81 Fed. Reg. at 13,562 n.1, 13,591 (“The purpose of the E.O. 13599 list is to clarify that, regardless of their removal from the SDN list, persons that OFAC previously identified as meeting the definition of the terms ‘Government of Iran’ or ‘Iranian financial institution’ continue to meet those definitions and continue to be persons whose property and interests in property are blocked pursuant to Executive Order 13599”); see also 60 Fed. Reg. at 40,884 (identifying Bank Melli as a bank “determined to be owned and controlled by the Government of Iran.”). Bank Melli argues that EO 13,599 is invalid, however, because it violates Bank Melli’s due process rights. See Opp’n to MSJ at 12-13. It argues that EO 13,599 “left the President no discretion at all,” “did not result from any OFAC determination,” “was not based on any findings unique to Bank Melli,” and denied Bank Melli a chance to contest its designation. Id. at 13.

Plaintiffs demonstrate that the applicable blocking provision here, blocking “property and interests in property of the Government of Iran,” is actually not the blocking provision that Congress mandated. See Reply re MSJ at 10 (citing EO 13599, 77 Fed. Reg. at 6660, § 7(d); 22 U.S.C. § 8513a(c) (“The President shall . . . block and prohibit all transactions in all property and interests in property of an Iranian financial institution.”)). This does away with Bank Melli’s discretion argument. Moreover, it appears that various entities did make findings specific to Bank Melli. See id. at 10-11 (collecting quotations from Congress, Secretary of Treasury, President Obama). Even the language cited above reflects that Bank Melli’s 13,599 designation is based on OFAC’s previous determination that Bank Melli continued to meet the definition of “Government of Iran” or “Iranian financial institution.” See 81 Fed. Reg. at 13,562 n.1, 13,591. Particularly illogical is Bank Melli’s complaint that it was denied a chance to contest its designation: there is no dispute that Bank Melli is an instrumentality of the Government of Iran. Bank Melli admitted as much in its Answer in this case. See Mechling Ex. D (Answer) ¶7 (“Bank Melli admits that it is currently wholly owned by the Islamic Republic of Iran and that it is an instrumentality of the Islamic Republic of Iran within the meaning of [FSIA] § 1603(b).”).

Accordingly, the Blocked Assets are blocked by EO 13,599.

3. Executive Order 13,224

Third, Plaintiffs also assert that the very recent EO 13,224 blocks the assets in this case. See Reply re MSJ at 14-15. This is also true. See Mechling Reply Decl. Ex. A (dkt. 184-2) at 2 (“Bank Melli is being designated pursuant to E.O. 13224 for assisting in, sponsoring, or providing financial, material, or technological support for, or financial or other services to or in support of, the IRGC-QF, which was previously designated pursuant to E.O. 13224 on October 25, 2007.”); 66 F.R. 49079 (blocking “all property and interests in property of the following persons . . .” in light of “grave acts of terrorism . . . constitut[ing] an unusual and extraordinary threat”). EO

13,224 is therefore a third independent basis for finding that the Blocked Assets are validly blocked.

C. Other Reasons

Bank Melli next argues that there are numerous arguments it could make for why the Court should deny summary judgment, but that the Ninth Circuit has already rejected those arguments. See Opp'n to MSJ at 15-17. "Bank Melli acknowledges that this Court is bound by the Ninth Circuit's decision." Id. at 15. It lists the arguments nonetheless to preserve them for Supreme Court review. Id. at 16. Accordingly, this Court does not reach Bank Melli's "Other Reasons."

Because Plaintiffs have satisfied the requirements of TRIA, and because Bank Melli's arguments are unpersuasive, the Court GRANTS summary judgment for Plaintiffs.

D. Stay of Enforcement

Lastly, Bank Melli asks the Court to stay any enforcement or execution until after appellate and Supreme Court review. See Mot. to Stay at 17-20. Bank Melli argues that it is entitled to a stay as a matter of right, and, in the alternative, that the Court should grant a discretionary stay. Id.

The Court does not grant a discretionary stay, nor would it. But Bank Melli is entitled to a stay as a matter of right. Rule 62(b) states that "[a]t any time after judgment is entered, a party may obtain a stay by providing a bond or other security. The stay takes effect when the court approves the bond or other security and remains in effect for the time specified in the bond or other security." When a litigant complies with that rule by appealing "and post[ing] a supersedeas bond with the district court, it [is] entitled to a stay as a matter of right." See Masto, 670 F.3d at 1066; see also Matter of Combined Metals Reduction Co., 557 F.2d 179, 193 (9th Cir. 1977) (“[s]ince no bond was posted, the grant or denial of the stays was a matter strictly within the judge’s discretion.”).

Bank Melli argues that “the funds already deposited in the Court’s registry satisfy [the Rule’s] bond requirement.” Mot. to Stay at 17 (citing Rachel v. Banana Republic, Inc., 831 F.2d 1503, 1505 n.1 (9th Cir. 1987) (“purpose of a supersedeas bond is to secure the appellees from a loss resulting from the stay of execution”)). Plaintiffs do not really disagree. See Opp’n to Mot. to Stay at 16 (conceding that “ordinarily, courts waive the posting of a supersedeas bond where the funds at issue in a litigation are deposited with the Court’s Registry.”). Indeed, Rule 62(b) makes explicit that something like a bond—a “bond or other security”—will do. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(b). Plaintiffs argue, however, that ordinarily the party requesting the stay claims to own the funds deposited with the court, and that, “[b]ecause Bank Melli refuses to acknowledge any ownership interest in or right to the Blocked Assets . . . the Court should deny Bank Melli’s motion for a stay.” Opp’n to Mot. to Stay at 16.

But the Rule does not actually require that the party seeking a stay be, or claim to be, the “owner” of the contested funds. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(b). What is important is that the funds deposited with the Court be sufficient to protect Plaintiffs from loss while the execution is stayed. See Rachel, 831 F.2d at 1505 n.1. The Blocked Assets in the Registry will do so, to the same extent that a supersedeas bond would.⁴ Yes, there remains the possibility, however remote, that some future operation of law will retroactively undo all three of the Executive Orders that the Court today holds are blocking the funds. See 31 C.F.R. § 544.402. But it strikes the Court that if that indeed takes place, then Plaintiffs would not be entitled to the funds. The Court is sympathetic to Plaintiffs' argument that they are presently entitled to the funds and that such entitlement should not be jeopardized through delay, but the Court cannot short-circuit the appellate process or the requirements of civil procedure. Because Rule 62(b) is met, see Masto, 670 F.3d at 1066, the Court GRANTS the motion to stay execution until after appellate and Supreme Court review.

⁴ At the motion hearing, the Court raised the question of Plaintiffs’ fees on appeal. However, in the absence of an applicable fee-shifting statute, Bank Melli need not deposit additional funds to cover such fees.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court GRANTS the Motion for Summary Judgment and GRANTS the Motion to Stay.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: December 19, 2018

CHARLES R. BREYER
United States District Judge

APPENDIX C

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

DOCKET NOS. 13-15442, 13-16100

MICHAEL BENNETT; LINDA BENNETT,
AS CO-ADMINISTRATORS OF THE ESTATE OF
MARIA ANN BENNETT,
Plaintiffs-Appellees,

v.

THE ISLAMIC REPUBLIC OF IRAN,
Defendant,

v.

VISA INC.; FRANKLIN RESOURCES, INC.,
*Defendants-third-party-
plaintiffs-Appellees,*

v.

GREENBERG AND ACOSTA JUDGMENT CREDITORS,
*Plaintiff-third-party-
defendant-Appellee,*

HEISER JUDGMENT CREDITORS,
*Plaintiff-fourth-party-
defendant-Appellee,*

v.

BANK MELLI,
*Plaintiff-third-party-
defendant-Appellant.*

ORDER AND AMENDED OPINION

June 14, 2016

Appeals from the United States District Court
for the Northern District of California
Charles R. Breyer, Senior District Judge, Presiding

Argued and Submitted
April 15, 2015—San Francisco, California

Before: Sidney R. Thomas,* and Susan P. Graber, Circuit
Judges, and Dee V. Benson, Senior District Judge.

Order;
Opinion by Judge Graber;
Partial Concurrence and Partial Dissent by Judge Benson

ORDER

The opinion and partial dissent filed February 22, 2016, and reported at 817 F.3d 1131, are amended by the

* Chief Judge Thomas was drawn to replace Judge Kozinski. He has read the briefs, reviewed the record, and listened to the audio-recording of oral argument held on April 15, 2015.

 The Honorable Dee V. Benson, Senior District Judge for the U.S. District Court for the District of Utah, sitting by designation.

opinion and partial dissent filed concurrently with this order.

With these amendments, Judges Thomas and Graber have voted to deny Appellant's petition for panel rehearing and petition for rehearing en banc. Judge Benson has voted to grant the petition for panel rehearing and has recommended granting the petition for rehearing en banc.

The full court has been advised of the petition for rehearing en banc, and no judge of the court has requested a vote on it.

Appellant's petition for panel rehearing and petition for rehearing en banc are DENIED. No further petitions for panel rehearing or for rehearing en banc may be filed.

OPINION

GRABER, Circuit Judge:

Approximately 90 United States citizens (or the representatives of their estates) are attempting to collect on unsatisfied money judgments that they hold against the Islamic Republic of Iran for deaths and injuries suffered in terrorist attacks sponsored by Iran. The assets that are the subject of this interpleader action are monies contractually owed to Bank Melli by Visa Inc. and Franklin Resources Inc. ("Franklin"). Bank Melli is an instrumentality of Iran. It asserts that Plaintiffs cannot execute on the assets (1) because Bank Melli enjoys sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976 ("FSIA"), (2) because the relevant statutory exceptions to sovereign immunity may not be applied retroactively, (3) because the blocked assets are not property of Bank Melli, and (4) because Bank Melli is a required party that cannot be joined, thus requiring dismissal under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19. We disagree and, accordingly, affirm the judgment of the district court.

BACKGROUND LEGAL PRINCIPLES

The jurisdiction of the United States over persons and property within its territory “is susceptible of no limitation not imposed by itself.” Schooner Exch. v. McFaddon, 11 U.S. (7 Cranch) 116, 136 (1812). Accordingly, foreign sovereign immunity is “a matter of grace and comity rather than a constitutional requirement.” Republic of Austria v. Altmann, 541 U.S. 677, 689 (2004). Courts consistently “defer[] to the decisions of the political branches” on whether to take actions against foreign sovereigns and their instrumentalities. Id. (quoting Verlinden B.V. v. Cent. Bank of Nigeria, 461 U.S. 480, 486 (1983)).

The FSIA, 28 U.S.C. §§ 1330, 1602-1611, establishes a default rule that foreign states are immune from suit in United States courts. Id. at § 1604. Congress enacted the statute to provide a “comprehensive . . . ‘set of legal standards governing claims of immunity in every civil action against a foreign state or its political subdivisions, agencies, or instrumentalities.’” Altmann, 541 U.S. at 691 (quoting Verlinden B.V., 461 U.S. at 488). The FSIA provides the exclusive vehicle for subject matter jurisdiction in all civil actions against foreign state defendants. Bank Markazi v. Peterson, 136 S. Ct. 1310, 1317 n.1 (2016); OBB Personenverkehr AG v. Sachs, 136 S. Ct. 390, 393 (2015); Flatow v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 308 F.3d 1065, 1069 (9th Cir. 2002).

The FSIA includes many exceptions to its general rule of immunity. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1605-1607. Relevant here, in 1996, Congress added a new exception, stripping a foreign state of its sovereign immunity when (1) the United States officially designates the foreign state a state sponsor of terrorism and (2) the foreign state is sued “for personal injury or death that was caused by an act of torture, extrajudicial killing, aircraft sabotage, hostage taking, or the provision of material support or resources for such an act.” Id. at § 1605A.

Iran was designated a terrorist party pursuant to section 6(j) of the Export Administration Act of 1979, 50 U.S.C. app. § 2405(j) (effective Jan. 19, 1984). Peterson v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 627 F.3d 1117, 1123 (9th Cir. 2010); Weinstein v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 609 F.3d 43, 48 (2d Cir. 2010). That designation means that Iran is not entitled to sovereign immunity for claims under § 1605A.

Separately, the FSIA addresses the immunity of sovereign property from execution and attachment. Subject to enumerated exceptions, a foreign state’s property in the United States is immune from attachment and execution. 28 U.S.C. § 1609.

In First National City Bank v. Banco Para el Comercio Exterior de Cuba (“Bancec”), 462 U.S. 611, 620-621 (1983), the Supreme Court concluded that the FSIA did not control whether and to what extent instrumentalities could be held liable for the debts of their sovereigns. Applying international law and federal common law, the Court held that “government instrumentalities established as juridical entities distinct and independent from their sovereign should normally be treated as such.” Id. at 626-627. That rule, referred to as the “Bancec presumption,” may be overcome only in limited circumstances. Id. at 628-634. The federal courts later described five “Bancec factors” that may be considered in determining whether the presumption has been overcome in any given case. E.g., Flatow, 308 F.3d at 1071 n.9.¹

Even after Congress added § 1605(a)(7) (now § 1605A) to the FSIA in 1996, successful plaintiffs struggled to enforce judgments against Iran when they were harmed by its terrorist activities. See, e.g., In re Islamic Republic of Iran Terrorism Litig., 659 F. Supp. 2d 31, 49-58 (D.D.C. 2009) (describing “The Never-Ending Struggle to Enforce Judgments Against Iran”). Once again, Congress responded by enacting new statutes, this time designed to facilitate the satisfaction of such judgments by expanding successful plaintiffs’ ability to attach and execute on the property of agencies and instrumentalities of terrorist states. Bank Markazi, 136 S. Ct. at 1318.

First, in 2002, Congress enacted the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002 (“TRIA”), Pub. L. No. 107-297, 116 Stat. 2322. Section 201(a) of the TRIA provides:

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as provided in subsection (b) [of this note, pertaining to Presidential waiver], in every case in which a person has obtained a judgment against a

¹The five factors are:

- (1) the level of economic control by the government;
- (2) whether the entity’s profits go to the government;
- (3) the degree to which government officials manage the entity or otherwise have a hand in its daily affairs;
- (4) whether the government is the real beneficiary of the entity’s conduct; and
- (5) whether adherence to separate identities would entitle the foreign state to benefits in United States courts while avoiding its obligations.

Flatow, 308 F.3d at 1071 n.9 (quoting Walter Fuller Aircraft Sales, Inc. v. Republic of the Philippines, 965 F.2d 1375, 1380 n.7 (5th Cir. 1992)).

terrorist party on a claim based upon an act of terrorism, or for which a terrorist party is not immune under section 1605A or 1605(a)(7) . . . , the blocked assets^[2] of that terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution or attachment in aid of execution in order to satisfy such judgment to the extent of any compensatory damages for which such terrorist party has been adjudged liable.

TRIA §201(a) was codified as a statutory note to 28 U.S.C. § 1610 on “Treatment of Terrorist Assets.”

Second, in 2008, Congress amended the FSIA as part of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-181, § 1083, 122 Stat. 3, 338. Among other changes, Congress added a new subsection to the FSIA, which provides in part that the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under section 1605A, and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, including property that is a separate juridical entity or is an interest held directly or indirectly in a separate juridical entity, is subject to attachment in aid of execution, and execution, upon that judgment as provided in this section, regardless of [the same five factors described by the federal courts as the “Bancec factors”].

² “Blocked assets” refers to “any asset seized by the Executive Branch pursuant to either the Trading With the Enemy Act or the International Emergency Economic Powers Act. See TRIA §201(d)(2).” Bank Markazi, 135 S. Ct. at 1318 (citations omitted).

28 U.S.C. § 1610(g)(1); see also Bank Markazi, 136 S. Ct. at 1318 n.2. For ease of reference, we refer to this section as “FSIA § 1610(g).”

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Four groups of individuals sued the Islamic Republic of Iran for damages arising from deaths and injuries suffered in terrorist attacks sponsored by Iran; in each case, a final money judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiffs and against Iran. In Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 659 F. Supp. 2d 20 (D.D.C. 2009), and Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 466 F. Supp. 2d 229 (D.D.C. 2006), the plaintiffs secured judgments for more than $590 million for the 1996 bombing of the Khobar Towers in Saudi Arabia. In Acosta v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 574 F. Supp. 2d 15 (D.D.C. 2008), the plaintiffs received a judgment of more than $350 million because of a 1990 mass shooting. In Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 507 F. Supp. 2d 117 (D.D.C. 2007), the plaintiffs obtained a judgment for damages of nearly $13 million for Iran’s role in the 2002 bombing of a cafeteria at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. And in Greenbaum v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 451 F. Supp. 2d 90 (D.D.C. 2006), the plaintiffs were awarded almost $20 million for damages suffered as a result of the bombing of a Jerusalem restaurant in 2001. Collectively, the judgments total nearly $1 billion. Although all the judgments were taken by default, it is undisputed that all are valid final judgments and that Iran owes the amounts of those judgments to the respective plaintiffs.

Bank Melli, Iran’s largest financial institution, is wholly owned by the government of Iran. It is undisputed that Bank Melli qualifies as an instrumentality of Iran under the FSIA. Bank Melli was not named as a defendant in any of the four cases described above and was not itself alleged to have been involved in the underlying terrorist events. On October 25, 2007, the United States Department of the Treasury, Office of Foreign Assets Control exercised its authority under Executive Order No. 13,382, 70 Fed. Reg. 38,567 (June 28, 2005), to block Bank Melli's assets in the United States because of its involvement in Iran's nuclear and missile industries. Bank Melli's assets also are blocked pursuant to a 2012 Executive Order blocking the property of Iran and of Iranian financial institutions. Exec. Order No. 13,599, 77 Fed. Reg. 6659 (Feb. 8, 2012).³

Visa and Franklin owe about $17.6 million to Bank Melli pursuant to a commercial relationship that involves the use of Visa credit cards in Iran. Visa and Franklin have not turned the funds over to Bank Melli only because the funds are blocked. The Bennett judgment creditors filed a complaint against Visa and Franklin, seeking to attach and execute against the blocked assets. Visa and Franklin responded by initiating this interpleader action, naming as defendants Bank Melli and the three other sets of judgment creditors. Visa and Franklin sought a determination of the rights to the blocked assets in their possession and a discharge of Visa and Franklin with regard to those assets. After Bank Melli entered its appearance, it moved to dismiss the action.

Bank Melli made four arguments for dismissal, each of which the district court rejected. The court held: (1) TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) enable the judgment creditors to attach the monies owed to Bank Melli; (2) TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) do not impose retroactive liability; (3) the blocked assets constitute property of Bank Melli; and (4) Bank Melli was not a required party under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19. Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 927 F. Supp. 2d 833 (N.D. Cal. 2013). The district court denied the motion to dismiss and certified the order for interlocutory appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). Bennett, 927 F. Supp. 2d at 845-846.

³The recent lifting of a portion of the sanctions imposed on Iran does not render this interpleader action moot, nor does it affect our analysis of the issues raised here.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

We review de novo: questions of statutory construction, Miranda v. Anchondo, 684 F.3d 844, 849 (9th Cir. 2012); a district court’s ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim or for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, Colony Cove Props., LLC v. City of Carson, 640 F.3d 948, 955 (9th Cir. 2011); the question whether a statute may be applied retroactively, Scott v. Boos, 215 F.3d 940, 942 (9th Cir. 2000); and legal determinations underlying a district court’s decision whether an action can proceed in the absence of a required party under Rule 19, Kescoli v. Babbitt, 101 F.3d 1304, 1309 (9th Cir. 1996).

DISCUSSION

A. TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) permit attachment and execution of the monies owed to Bank Melli.

1. TRIA § 201(a)

We hold that TRIA § 201(a) permits judgment creditors to attach assets held by the instrumentalities of state sponsors of terrorism. As always, when interpreting a statute, we begin with its text. Metro One Telecomms., Inc. v. Comm’r, 704 F.3d 1057, 1061 (9th Cir. 2012). Section 201(a) of the TRIA applies “[n]otwithstanding any other provision of law,” “in every case in which a person has obtained a judgment against a terrorist party on a claim based upon an act of terrorism, or for which a terrorist party is not immune under section 1605A or 1605(a)(7),” and “in order to satisfy such judgment to the extent of any compensatory damages for which such terrorist party has been adjudged liable.” TRIA §201(a) (emphases added). The statute provides that, in cases such as this one, “the blocked assets of [the] terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution or attachment in aid of execution.” Id. (emphasis added). This wording demonstrates that Congress knew that the blocked assets of an instrumentality might otherwise have been excluded from the phrase “blocked assets of [the] terrorist party” and that Congress acted to ensure that, instead, the instrumentality’s blocked assets were included. Cf. Alejandre v. Telefonica Larga Distancia de P.R., Inc., 183 F.3d 1277, 1287, 1288 n.25 (11th Cir. 1999) (stating that a proposed amendment to the FSIA that would have applied to property that “belongs to an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state” demonstrated that Congress “knows how to express clearly an intent to make instrumentalities substantively liable for the debts of their related foreign governments” (internal quotation marks omitted)). Accordingly, we agree with the Second Circuit when it held that it is “clear beyond cavil that Section 201(a) of the TRIA provides courts with subject matter jurisdiction over post-judgment execution and attachment proceedings against property held in the hands of an instrumentality of the judgment-debtor, even if the instrumentality is not itself named in the judgment.” Weinstein, 609 F.3d at 50.

Bank Melli disputes this reading of §201(a), arguing instead that it applies only to instrumentalities that are alter egos of the state; that is, Bank Melli argues that the Bancec presumption against the attachment of assets held by state instrumentalities applies. Bank Melli reasons that, because “including” is a term of illustration, the words that follow are merely an example of the main preceding principle. That observation is true but is of no assistance to Bank Melli. By listing “the blocked assets of any . . . instrumentality of that terrorist party” as a specific example of assets that are “subject to execution or attachment . . . in order to satisfy” a money judgment obtained under § 1605A or § 1605(a)(7), Congress clearly instructed courts to allow the instrumentality’s blocked assets to be reached. Congress also instructed courts to allow these assets to be reached “[n]otwithstanding any other provision of law”—that is, regardless of the usual fiction embodied in Bancec. Congress purposely overrode the Bancec presumption in this context and abrogated attachment immunity with respect to the blocked assets of instrumentalities of designated state sponsors of terrorism. Section 201(a) permits the judgment creditors to attach the assets of an instrumentality of a state sponsor of terrorism. Accordingly, the blocked assets of Bank Melli that are at issue in this case may be attached.

2. FSIA § 1610(g)

FSIA § 1610(g) allows attachment of and execution against property held by a foreign terrorist state’s instrumentality “that is a separate juridical entity,” “regardless of” five factors. As noted above, those enumerated factors are the same five factors identified by the federal courts as the “Bancec factors” that may be used to decide whether an instrumentality is an alter ego under Bancec. E.g., Flatow, 308 F.3d at 1071-1072, 1071 n.9. It is clear from the text of the statute that Congress was referring to, and abrogating, not just the presumption of separate juridical status, but also Bancec specifically. Therefore, §1610(g) also permits attachment in this case.

But Bank Melli contends that, because §1610(g) makes assets subject to attachment and execution only “as provided in this section,” it is not an independent exception to the immunity granted by 28 U.S.C. §1609. Bank Melli reasons that subsection (g) applies only if some other part of §1610 provides for attachment and execution. Bank Melli argues that its assets cannot be attached or executed upon because the assets at issue in this case were not “used for a commercial activity in the United States,” a requirement in §1610(a), and Bank Melli has not itself “engaged in commercial activity in the United States,” a requirement in §1610(b). We are not persuaded.

We hold that subsection (g) contains a freestanding provision for attaching and executing against assets of a foreign state or its agencies or instrumentalities. Subsection (g) covers a different subject than §1610(a) through (e): by its express terms, it applies only to “certain actions,” specifically, judgments “entered under section 1605A.” (Emphasis added.) In turn, §1605A revokes sovereign immunity for damages claims against a foreign state for personal injury or death caused by “torture, extrajudicial killing, aircraft sabotage, hostage taking, or the provision of material support” for such an act. By definition, such claims do not arise from commercial activity; they arise from acts of torture (and the like). Section 1610(g) requires only that a judgment under §1605A have been rendered against the foreign state; in that event, both the property of the foreign state and the property of an agency or instrumentality of that state are subject to attachment and execution. See Peterson, 627 F.3d at 1123 n.2 (stating that §1610(g) “expanded the category of foreign sovereign property that can be attached; judgment creditors can now reach any U.S. property in which Iran has any interest, whereas before they could reach only property belonging to Iran”). To the extent that subsection (g) is inconsistent with subsection (a) or (b), subsection (g) governs because the particular (judgments entered under §1605A) controls over the general (all judgments entered after a certain date). Morales v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 504 U.S. 374, 384-385 (1992).

When subsection (g) refers to attachment and execution of the judgment “as provided in this section,” it is referring to procedures contained in §1610(f).⁴ Section 1610(f), like §1610(g), relates to judgments obtained under §1605A and its predecessor, §1605(a)(7). Subsection (f)(1)(A) permits attachment and execution of property that might otherwise be blocked; subsection (f)(1)(B) prohibits attachment or execution against property of a foreign state that it expropriated from a natural person; and subsection (f)(2)(A) provides that the Secretary of State and Secretary of Treasury will make every effort to assist a court or creditor in locating property awarded pursuant to §1605A. In light of Congress’ mandate to the executive branch to assist in the collection of judgments in such cases, 28 U.S.C. §1610(f), we cannot impute to Congress an empty statutory gesture. See Gates v. Syrian Arab Republic, 755 F.3d 568, 576 (7th Cir. 2014) (stating that Congress intended the 2008 amendments to the FSIA “to make it easier for terrorism victims to obtain judgments and to attach assets”).⁵ Given both the text of the statute and Congress’ intention to make it easier for victims of terrorism to recover judgments, we hold that § 1610(g) is a freestanding provision for attaching and executing against assets to satisfy a money judgment premised on a foreign state’s act of terrorism.

⁴ When Congress enacted subsection (g), subsection (f) already was in place. Subsection (g) was added to the statute in 2008. Pub. L. No. 110-181, div. A, tit. X, §1083(b)(3), 122 Stat. 3, 341 (2008). Subsection (f) was enacted in 1998. Pub. L. No. 105-277, §101(h), 112 Stat. 2681-491 (1998).

Bank Melli argues, and our colleague agrees, that our reading of § 1610(g) renders § 1610(a)(7) and (b)(3) superfluous.⁶ But the tension works in the opposite direction.

⁵ In its Petition for Rehearing or Rehearing En Banc, Bank Melli argues that our reading of the statute must be wrong because, in 2000, President Clinton waived the enforcement of § 1610(f)(1); it reasons that “as provided in this section” therefore cannot refer to § 1610(f). That argument fails for at least three reasons. First, only subsection (f)(1) is not being enforced. Pres. Determ. No. 2001-03, 65 Fed. Reg. 66,483 (Oct. 28, 2000). Several other parts of subsection (f)—described in text—have always remained fully enforced, so subsection (g) refers, at a minimum, to the enforced portions. Second, our search is only for congressional intent when subsection (g) was enacted. A partial waiver does not reflect congressional intent; if anything, it demonstrates presidential disagreement with congressional intent. And non-enforcement by the executive branch does not equal repeal by Congress; regardless of the partial waiver, all of subsection (f) remains the law. Third, the blinders-on, technical focus of this argument loses sight of Congress’ main aim, which is for private plaintiffs who suffered torture and obtained tort judgments to get their money from terrorist states.

⁶ Our colleague gives two other reasons for disagreeing with us on this point. The first is that § 1610(b)(3) does not require property “to be involved in terrorism to abrogate attachment immunity.” Partial dissent at 36. We do not suggest to the contrary. The other reason is that it would be “an unjustified and unfortunate result,” id. at 38, to allow attachment and execution of non-commercial property, such as museum artifacts belonging to Iran. But it is not our province to decide whether the policy choices embodied in a statute are wise or unwise; our task is, rather, to discern congressional intent. Day-Brite Lighting, Inc. v. Missouri, 342 U.S. 421, 423 (1952).

If § 1610(g) is interpreted to require that, to be subject to attachment and execution, property must be used by the foreign state for a “commercial activity,” § 1610(a), or that the instrumentality must be “engaged in commercial activity in the United States,” § 1610(b), then we would have to read into § 1610(g) a limitation that Congress did not insert. See United States v. Temple, 105 U.S. (9 Otto) 97, 99 (1881) (holding that the court has “no right to insert words and phrases, so as to incorporate in the statute a new and distinct provision”). Section 1610(g)(1) provides that “the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under section 1605A, and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, . . . is subject to attachment in aid of execution, and execution.” (Emphases added.) Thus, Congress did not limit the type of property subject to attachment and execution under § 1610(g) to property connected to commercial activity in the United States. The only requirement is that property be “the property of” the foreign state or its instrumentality.

Two Seventh Circuit cases support our conclusion in this regard. In Wyatt v. Syrian Arab Republic, 800 F.3d 331, 343 (7th Cir. 2015), cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 1721 (2016), the court held that the plaintiffs need not comply with § 1608(e) when proceeding under § 1610(g). The court noted that § 1608(e) is part of a “more general process” applicable to “suits other than those for state-sponsored terrorism, such as more ordinary contract or tort cases arising out of a foreign state’s commercial activities.” Id. at 333. Section 1610(g), the court noted, “contains provisions specific to claims for state-sponsored terrorism.” Id. Those specific provisions allow plaintiffs with a judgment against a state sponsor of terrorism, obtained pursuant to § 1605A, to attach and execute the judgment against property of the foreign state and against property of any agency and instrumentality of the state. Id. The other provisions of § 1610, contained in subsections (a) through (c), establish a general process for judgments against a foreign state not necessarily resting on state-sponsored terrorism. Id.

Similarly, the court held in Gates that a plaintiff proceeding under § 1610(g) need not comply with § 1610(c). The court wrote in part:

Sections 1610(a) and (b) are available to satisfy a wide variety of judgments, but they allow attachment of only specific categories of assets to satisfy those judgments. See, e.g., § 1610(a) (allowing attachment of foreign state property located in the United States and used for commercial activity there); § 1610(b) (allowing attachment of property of foreign state agency or instrumentality engaged in United States commercial activity).

By contrast, § 1610(g) is available only to holders of judgments under the § 1605A exception for state-sponsored terrorism, but it allows attachment of a much broader range of assets to satisfy those judgments.

Gates, 755 F.3d at 576.

Regardless of canons of construction—such as the principle that a specific statute takes precedence over a general one—our ultimate search is for congressional intent. Chickasaw Nation v. United States, 534 U.S. 84, 94 (2001). And it is quite clear that Congress meant to expand successful plaintiffs' options for collecting judgments against state sponsors of terrorism.

We acknowledge that § 1610 as a whole is ambiguous.⁷ In that circumstance, we may consider legislative history. Id. at 91-92; United States v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 345 U.S. 295, 315 (1953). That history suggests that § 1610(g) was meant to allow attachment and execution with respect to any property whatsoever of the foreign state or its instrumentality. Senator Lautenberg, one of the sponsors of the bill that became § 1610(g), stated that the provision would “allow[] attachment of the assets of a state sponsor of terrorism to be made upon the satisfaction of a ‘simple ownership’ test.” 154 Cong. Rec. S54-01 (Jan. 22, 2008) (statement of Sen. Lautenberg). The House Conference Report for a substantially similar earlier version of the bill noted that the provision “would . . . expand the ability of claimants to seek recourse against the property of that foreign state,” in part “by permitting any property in which the foreign state has a beneficial

⁷ We also acknowledge that the United States, appearing as amicus curiae, disagrees with our interpretation. We are not required to defer to the government’s view because, in deciding this case, we “are not being asked to supplant a foreign policy decision of the political branches with the courts’ own unmoored determination.” Zivotofsky ex rel. Zivotofsky v. Clinton, 132 S. Ct. 1421, 1427 (2012). To the contrary, the executive branch has approved the building blocks of the statutory criteria for execution on the property in question, which we are applying in a routine exercise of statutory interpretation. The President signed the legislation that became § 1610(g), Pub. L. No. 110-181, President Bush Signs the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008, 2008 U.S.C.C.A.N. S3 (Jan. 28, 2008); the President has not sought to waive enforcement as was done with respect to § 1610(f)(1); the Secretary of State listed Iran as a terrorist state, 49 Fed. Reg. 2836-02 (Jan. 23, 1984); and the President imposed monetary sanctions on Iran, Exec. Order No. 13,599, 77 Fed. Reg. 6659 (Feb. 5, 2012). And, finally, in “[e]nacting the FSIA in 1976, Congress transferred from the Executive to the courts the principal responsibility for determining a foreign state’s amenability to suit.” Bank Markazi, 136 S. Ct. at 1329.

ownership to be subject to execution of that judgment.” H.R. Rep. No. 11-447, at 1001 (2007) (Conf. Rep.). The bill, it continued, “is written to subject any property interest in which the foreign state enjoys a beneficial ownership to attachment and execution.” Id. We have already noted that the basic purpose of adding §1610(g) was to enable plaintiffs who have established a foreign state’s liability under §1605A and its predecessor, for terrorist acts, to collect on their judgments. As Senator Lautenberg put it, the bill was meant “to facilitate victims’ collection of their damages from state sponsors of terrorism.” 154 Cong. Rec. S54-01 (Jan. 22, 2008) (statement of Sen. Lautenberg). Our interpretation of §1610(g) more fully furthers that fundamental aim.

Bank Melli also makes three other arguments regarding §1610(g). We can dispose of those arguments easily.

(1) The district court’s failure to discuss expressly whether to grant Bank Melli discretionary relief under the “innocent party” provision of §1610(g)(3) does not mean that the court failed to consider whether that provision applied. Bank Melli made its §1610(g)(3) argument to the district court, and we presume that the court understood its authority but declined to exercise discretion in Bank Melli’s favor. Cf. United States v. Davis, 264 F.3d 813, 816-817 (9th Cir. 2001) (so holding in the context of a district court’s silence regarding a requested downward departure under the United States Sentencing Guidelines).

(2) There is no conflict between §1610(g) and the 1955 Treaty of Amity between the United States and Iran, which requires that the United States respect the juridical status of Iranian companies, protect their property in accordance with international law, and not discriminate against them. Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations and Consular Rights Between the United States of America and Iran, Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899, 902-903. As the Second Circuit held, that treaty provision is intended simply to ensure that foreign corporations are on equal footing with domestic corporations. Weinstein, 609 F.3d at 53. Even if the two provisions were inconsistent, when a treaty and a later-enacted federal statute conflict, the subsequent statute controls to the extent of the conflict. Breard v. Greene, 523 U.S. 371, 376 (1998) (per curiam).

(3) Allowing the Heiser plaintiffs to obtain relief under § 1610(g) by converting their § 1605(a)(7) judgment to a § 1605A judgment does not violate separation of powers principles. Bank Melli's reliance on Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, Inc., 514 U.S. 211, 219 (1995), is misplaced. There, the court held that Congress could not require federal courts to reopen final judgments. But here, the judgment was not reopened. Instead, the Heiser plaintiffs have a new collection tool; they can enforce their final judgment against Iran by attaching and executing on the property of Iran's instrumentality. In essence, the statute gives more effect to the final judgment, rather than attempting to revise or rescind that judgment.

B. The statutes do not impermissibly impose retroactive liability.

Bank Melli next argues that the judgment creditors cannot use TRIA § 201(a) or FSIA § 1610(g) because the terrorist acts that underlie the judgments occurred before the enactment of those statutes. The general default rule is that a law that increases substantive liability for past conduct does not operate retroactively. Landgraf v. USI Film Prods., 511 U.S. 244, 280 (1994).

But the statutes do not impose new liability on Iran. Section 1605(a)(7) was in effect at the time of the terrorist acts in question. Rather, the statutes simply permit additional methods of collection. See id. at 275 (noting that the default rule does not apply to rules of procedure because of “diminished reliance interests”).

Even if TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) are viewed as imposing new liability retroactively, the default rule is different for statutes that govern foreign sovereign immunity. In Altmann, 541 U.S. at 692, the Supreme Court concluded that the Landgraf presumption does not apply to such statutes. To the contrary, when it comes to sovereign immunity for both foreign states and their agencies and instrumentalities, there is a presumption in favor of retroactivity “absent contraindications” from Congress. Id. at 696.

Here, there are no such contraindications. In fact, the opposite is true. The purpose of the statutes at issue was to enable not just future litigants, but also current judgment creditors to collect on the final judgments that they already held—which, as a matter of logic, arose from past acts. Congress chose to make TRIA § 201(a) applicable in “every case in which a person has obtained a judgment” under either the former statute, § 1605(a)(7), or the current statute, § 1605A. TRIA § 201(a) (emphases added). Similarly, Congress chose to make § 1610(g) applicable to all judgments entered under § 1605A. Accordingly, these statutes apply even if they are seen as imposing liability retroactively, because Congress so intended.

C. The blocked assets are property of Bank Melli.

Bank Melli also contends that TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) do not permit attachment of the assets here because Visa and Franklin own the blocked assets; Bank Melli does not. Under TRIA § 201(a), to be subject to execution or attachment, the blocked assets must be “assets of” the instrumentality. Similarly, § 1610(g) applies to “the property of” the instrumentality.

Like most courts, we look to state law to determine the ownership of assets in this context. Peterson, 627 F.3d at 1130-1131; see also Calderon-Cardona v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 770 F.3d 993, 1000-1001 (2d Cir. 2014) (looking to New York law to determine what type of interest rendered property attachable under §1610(g)), cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 893 (2016); Walker Int'l Holdings, Ltd. v. Republic of Congo, 415 F.3d 413, 415 (5th Cir. 2005) (applying Texas law to determine attorney fees award in FSIA action); Hegna v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 380 F.3d 1000, 1007 (7th Cir. 2004) (applying Illinois law to decide whether property interest was open to challenge in action under FSIA); Karaha Bodas Co. v. Perusahaan Pertambangan Minyak Dan Gas Bumi Negara ("Pertamina"), 313 F.3d 70, 83 (2d Cir. 2002) (applying New York law to determine what actions are subject to enforcement and available to judgment creditors). Here, California law applies. As we held in Peterson, California law authorizes a court to order a judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor a right to payments that are due or will become due, even if the right is conditioned on future developments. 627 F.3d at 1130-1131; Cal. Civ. Proc. Code §482.080(a)(2) (providing that a court may order a defendant subject to a writ of attachment to turn over either "evidence of title to property of or a debt owed to the defendant"); id. at §680.310 ("'Property' includes real and personal property and any interest therein."); id. at §708.210 (permitting a judgment creditor to bring an action against a third party to whom the judgment debtor owes money "to have the interest or debt applied to the satisfaction of the money judgment"); id. at §708.510(a) (authorizing a court to "order the judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor . . . all or part of a right to payment due"). That is precisely the situation in the present case: Bank Melli has a contractual right to obtain payments from Visa and Franklin. Under California law, those assets are property of Bank Melli and may be assigned to judgment creditors.

But even if federal law should govern this question, see Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 735 F.3d 934, 940 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (creating federal rule of decision to interpret ownership requirements in FSIA, based in part on U.C.C. Article 4A and common law principles), Bank Melli would not succeed. Federal law and California law are aligned.

First, we note that Congress has used expansive wording to suggest that immediate and outright ownership of assets is not required. In the TRIA, Congress provided that “[n]othing in this subsection shall bar . . . enforcement of any judgment to which this subsection applies . . . against assets otherwise available under this section or under any other provision of law.” TRIA §201(d)(4) (emphasis added). In FSIA §1610(g), Congress specified that “the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under section 1605A, and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, including property that is a separate juridical entity or is an interest held directly or indirectly in a separate juridical entity, is subject to attachment in aid of execution, and execution, upon that judgment as provided in this section.” (Emphases added.) Thus, interests held by the instrumentality of a terrorist state, as is the case here, are subject to attachment under federal law.

Second, in Heiser, only foreign nationals, and not a foreign country, had an interest in the blocked funds held by intermediary banks. “Iranian entities were not the originators of the funds transfers. Nor were they the ultimate beneficiaries.” Heiser, 735 F.3d at 936 (footnote omitted). By contrast, here, Bank Melli is the ultimate beneficiary; Visa and Franklin owe money to Bank Melli for services rendered pursuant to an agreement between them. Accordingly, Bank Melli has an interest in the blocked assets.

In summary, California law applies. Under California law, money owed to Bank Melli may be assigned to judgment creditors. Even if federal law applies, under the Heiser court's rationale, attachment and execution are allowed here because Bank Melli is the intended contractual beneficiary of the contested funds.

D. Because Bank Melli does not enjoy sovereign immunity, Rule 19 presents no barrier.

Finally, Bank Melli relies on Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19 to support its request for dismissal. That rule provides that a person must be joined as a party if the person “claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that disposing of the action in the person’s absence may . . . impair or impede the person’s ability to protect the interest.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a). And, if the “person who is required to be joined if feasible cannot be joined, the court must determine whether, in equity and good conscience, the action should proceed among the existing parties or should be dismissed.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

Bank Melli argues that this case must be dismissed because it is a required party that cannot be joined and, further, that the action cannot proceed without it “in equity and good conscience.” But, because TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) confer jurisdiction by creating exceptions to sovereign immunity, Bank Melli can be joined in this action. Thus it does not matter whether Bank Melli is otherwise a required party under Rule 19(a); dismissal is not required. See 28 U.S.C. § 1330 (providing jurisdiction over a foreign state or its instrumentality when it is not entitled to immunity); Weinstein, 609 F.3d at 49-50 (holding that TRIA §201(a) removes jurisdictional immunity, as well as immunity from attachment and execution).⁸

According to Bank Melli, Republic of the Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S. 851 (2008), requires dismissal. We disagree. A class of victims of human rights abuses in the Republic of the Philippines won a $2 billion default judgment against the Estate of Ferdinand Marcos, the former president of that country. Id. at 857-858. The class attempted to enforce the judgment by attaching assets owed to Merrill Lynch by a bank incorporated by Marcos personally. Id. at 858. The Philippines claimed ownership of the bank, and therefore the disputed assets, because the bank had been incorporated through a misuse of public office. Id. The Philippines also claimed immunity from the suit. Id. Merrill Lynch initiated an interpleader action naming, among other parties, the Republic of the Philippines and one of its agencies. Id. at 845-855. The Supreme Court held that the case should be dismissed because “it was improper [for the district court] to issue a definitive holding regarding a nonfrivolous, substantive claim made by an absent, required entity that was entitled by its sovereign status to immunity from suit.” Id. at 868.

⁸ Bank Melli’s citations to Ministry of Defense & Support for Armed Forces of Islamic Republic of Iran v. Cubic Defense Systems, Inc., 385 F.3d 1206 (9th Cir. 2004), vacated and remanded on other grounds sub nom. Ministry of Def. & Support for Armed Forces of Islamic Republic of Iran v. Elahi, 546 U.S. 450 (2006) (per curiam); and Peterson v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 627 F.3d 1117 (9th Cir. 2010), are inapposite. Neither of those cases addressed the question whether TRIA §201(a) or FSIA §1610(g) confers jurisdiction when property owned by a terrorist state’s instrumentality is subject to execution in satisfaction of judgments entered against that terrorist state.

This case plainly is distinguishable. In Pimentel, the Republic was a required party that could not be joined because of sovereign immunity. Here, Bank Melli does not enjoy sovereign immunity, so it can be joined as a party, whether or not it is a required party. Unlike the Republic in Pimentel, therefore, Bank Melli is able to adjudicate its claim to the contested assets.

CONCLUSION

We hold: (1) TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) authorize attachment and execution of the monies owed to Bank Melli. (2) Those statutes do not impose liability retroactively but, even if they are viewed as doing so, Altmann establishes a presumption in favor of retroactivity for statutes governing sovereign immunity, which is not rebutted here. (3) California law governs the ownership question; the blocked assets are property of Bank Melli under principles of California law and, thus, are subject to attachment and execution under TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g). The same result would obtain even if federal law governed. (4) Because Bank Melli can be joined in this action, the dismissal provision of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19 does not apply.

AFFIRMED.

BENSON, Senior District Judge, concurring in part and dissenting in part:

I concur with the majority that § 201(a) of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act (“TRIA”) and § 1610 of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (“FSIA”) permit the judgment creditors in this case to attach and execute against monies owed to Bank Melli. However, I respectfully believe the majority erred in finding § 1610(g) to be a freestanding immunity exception under FSIA. In my view, judgment creditors relying on § 1610(g) are able to proceed, regardless of Bank Melli’s sovereign immunity, because the judgment creditors have sufficiently alleged Bank Melli is engaged in commerce in the United States within the meaning of § 1610(b)(3) of FSIA.

FSIA contains “extensive procedural protections for foreign sovereigns in United States courts.” Wyatt v. Syrian Arab Republic, 800 F.3d 331, 333 (7th Cir. 2015). Specifically, § 1609 of FSIA provides a general presumption that property of a foreign state and the property of an instrumentality or agency of a foreign state is immune from execution and attachment in United States courts. See 28 U.S.C. § 1609; 28 U.S.C. § 1603(a). In turn, § 1610 provides a series of exceptions to this general rule.

Prior to 2008, § 1610 provided different rules for attachment immunity depending on whether the party was seeking immunity as the foreign state or as an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state. Regarding foreign states, § 1610(a) denied immunity where: (1) a judgment creditor obtained a judgment against the foreign state; (2) the property of the foreign state is located in the United States; (3) the property is used for “a commercial activity” in the United States; and (4) one of § 1610(a)’s seven avenues for abrogating immunity applied. See 28 U.S.C. § 1610(a). Similarly, with respect to agencies and instrumentalities, § 1610(b) denied immunity where: (1) a judgment creditor obtained a judgment against an agency or instrumentality of foreign state; (2) the agency or instrumentality is engaged in commercial activity in the United States; (3) the property of the agency or instrumentality is located in the United States; and (4) one of § 1610(b)'s three avenues for abrogating immunity applied. See 28 U.S.C. § 1610(b).

Prior to 2008, the judgment creditors in this case would have been required to obtain a judgment against Bank Melli to utilize the immunity waiver provisions under § 1610(b) to attach Bank Melli's property.

In 2008, Congress amended FSIA, adding § 1610(g) and § 1605A. National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-181, § 1083, 122 Stat. 3, 338 (2008). The purpose of the amendments was to relax the protections of § 1610 in cases of state sponsored terrorism to "make it easier for terrorism victims to obtain judgments and to attach assets." Gates v. Syrian Arab Republic, 755 F.3d 568, 576 (7th Cir. 2014); In re Islamic Republic of Iran Terrorism Litig., 659 F. Supp. 2d 31, 62 (D.D.C. 2009) (noting, "these latest additions to . . . FSIA demonstrate that Congress remains focused on eliminating those barriers that have made it nearly impossible for plaintiffs in these actions to execute civil judgments against Iran or other state sponsors of terrorism").

Under § 1610(g), if a judgment creditor obtains a judgment under § 1605A, the property of the foreign state and "the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, including property that is a separate juridical entity . . . is subject to attachment . . . and execution, upon that judgment as provided in this section, regardless" of five factors. 28 U.S.C. § 1610(g)(1) (emphasis added). The five factors enumerated in § 1610(g)(A) through (E) reflect the Bancec presumption, which requires this Court to treat government entities established as separate juridical entities distinct from their sovereigns. See First Nat'l City Bank v. Banco Para el Comercio Exterior de Cuba, 462 U.S. 611, 620-621 (1983); Flatow v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 308 F.3d 1065, 1071 n.9 (9th Cir. 2009) (outlining the Bancec factors (citing Walter Fuller Aircraft Sales, Inc. v. Republic of the Philippines, 965 F.2d 1375, 1380 n.7 (5th Cir. 1992))).

Section 1610(g) leads to two straightforward conclusions under FSIA. First, if a party obtains a §1605A judgment against a state sponsor of terror, the Bancec presumption is eliminated, which permits a court to attach and execute against the property of the agency or instrumentality to satisfy the judgments against the foreign state. See Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 885 F. Supp. 2d 429, 442 (D.D.C. 2012) (“Section §1610(g) subparagraphs (A)-(E) explicitly prohibit consideration of each of the five Bancec factors.”), aff'd sub nom. Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 735 F.3d 934 (D.C. Cir. 2013). Second, the language “as provided in this section” requires a judgment creditor to find an existing mechanism of attachment under §1610. Section 1610(g) does not create a new avenue for attachment under FSIA; rather, §1610(g) broadens the force of §1610's existing avenues for attachment by eliminating the legal fiction that Bank Melli is a separate juridical entity from Iran.

In this case, judgment creditors relying on §1610(g) may proceed to attach Bank Melli's property because Bank Melli's property is not immune from attachment by virtue of §1610(b)(3). Section 1610(b)(3) eliminates attachment immunity if an agency or instrumentality is “engaged in commercial activity in the United States” and “the judgment relates to a claim for which the agency or instrumentality is not immune by virtue of section 1605A of this chapter . . . regardless of whether the property is or was involved in the act upon which the claim is based.” 28 U.S.C. § 1610(b)(3). The judgment creditors can attach Bank Melli’s property because: (1) the judgment creditors have obtained a judgment against Iran pursuant to § 1605A; (2) § 1610(g) eliminates the Bancec presumption, allowing this Court to attach and execute against Bank Melli’s assets to satisfy the judgment against Iran; and (3) the judgment creditors have sufficiently ple[d] that Bank Melli is engaged in commercial activity in the United States.

Section 1603(c) of FSIA defines commercial activity as: “either a regular course of commercial conduct or a particular commercial transaction or act. The commercial character of an activity shall be determined by reference to the nature of the course of conduct or particular transaction or act, rather than by reference to its purpose.” 28 U.S.C. § 1603(c) (emphasis added). Bank Melli entered into a contract with an American company to provide an American company a commercial service. [ER, p. 82-83, ¶2; ER, p. 64, ¶16 (“Visa holds the Blocked Assets, funds due and owing by contract to Bank Melli pursuant to a commercial relationship with that bank . . .”).] At this stage in the litigation, the Court can conclude that the judgment creditors relying on § 1610(g) have sufficiently alleged Bank Melli is engaged in commercial activity in the United States.

The majority disagrees with the aforementioned interpretation and concludes that § 1610(g) creates a free-standing immunity exception under FSIA. The majority believes a § 1605A judgment creditor may attach Bank Melli’s property regardless of any commercial component under § 1610(a) or § 1610(b). In my view, respectfully, the majority misses the mark in three important respects.

First, the majority erroneously finds that § 1610(g) is a freestanding exception to immunity by concluding:

Subsection (g) covers a different subject than § 1610(a) through (e): by its express terms, it applies only to ‘certain actions,’ specifically, judgments ‘entered under section 1605A.’ (Emphasis added.) In turn, § 1605A revokes sovereign immunity for damages claims against a foreign state for personal injury or death caused by ‘torture, extrajudicial killing, aircraft sabotage, hostage taking, or the provision of material support’ for such an act. By definition, such claims do not arise from commercial activity; they arise from acts of torture (and the like).

[Maj. Op., p. 17.] In doing so, the majority misinterprets the operation of § 1610(a) and (b) waivers in the context of § 1605A judgments. Under § 1610(b)(3), a judgment creditor can attach property where the instrumentality is engaged in commercial activity in the United States. Furthermore, § 1610(b)(3) provides that attachment immunity is eliminated “regardless of whether the property is or was involved with the act upon which the claim is based.” 28 U.S.C. § 1610(b)(3) (emphasis added). Therefore, a § 1605A judgment allows a judgment creditor to get immunity waived for any property where the instrumentality is engaged in commerce in the United States, regardless whether the property was involved in the actions that gave rise to the § 1605A waiver of immunity against the foreign state. Therefore, Bank Melli’s property does not need to be involved in terrorism to abrogate attachment immunity under § 1610(b)(3).

Second, the majority concludes that the “as provided in this section” language found in § 1610(g) refers to the procedural aspects of § 1610, namely § 1610(f). Fair enough. But, the majority’s conclusion does not mean the language “as provided in this section” refers only to § 1610(f). Indeed, the majority’s piecemeal reading of § 1610(g) renders other portions of § 1610 inoperable. “It is ‘a cardinal principle of statutory construction’ that ‘a statute ought, upon the whole, to be so construed that, if it can be prevented, no clause, sentence, or word shall be superfluous, void, or insignificant.’” TRW Inc. v. Andrews, 534 U.S. 19, 31 (2001) (quoting Duncan v. Walker, 533 U.S. 167, 174 (2001)). This Court should adopt the interpretation of § 1610 that “‘gives effect to every clause and word.’” Marx v. Gen. Revenue Corp., ___ U.S. ___, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 1177 (2013) (citing Microsoft Corp. v. i4i Ltd. P’ship, 564 U.S. 91 (2011)).

The majority ignores the avenues for exemption under § 1610(a)(7) and § 1610(b)(3). Section 1610(a)(7) and § 1610(b)(3) provide immunity, in addition to requiring some interplay with commerce, where “the judgment relates to a claim for which the foreign state is not immune under section 1605A” If a § 1605A judgment creditor can waive attachment immunity under § 1610(g) without proving the property is used in commerce or the instrumentality is engaged in commerce in the United States, § 1610(a)(7) and § 1610(b)(3) are rendered superfluous and obsolete. Conversely, recognizing § 1610(g)’s limited purpose was to eliminate the Bancec presumption ensures this Court gives effect to every clause and word in § 1610 while honoring the purpose of the 2008 FSIA amendments.

Finally, the majority’s holding ignores the practical limitation the commerce requirement places on § 1605A

judgments. Reading § 1610(g) as a freestanding immunity exception does not just relax FSIA in the context of terrorism—it eliminates any immunity protection under FSIA for state sponsors of terror and their instrumentalities. For example, in Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran, American citizens sued and obtained default judgments against Iran for injuries and losses that arose out of a suicide bombing carried out by Hamas in Israel. 33 F. Supp. 3d 1003, 1006 (N.D. Ill. 2014). The Rubin plaintiffs sought to “attach and execute on numerous ancient Persian artifacts” in possession of two museums in the United States to satisfy their default judgments against Iran. Id. Like the judgment creditors in this case, the Rubin plaintiffs argued that § 1610(g) is a freestanding immunity exception and, therefore, the plaintiffs may attach Iran’s artifacts to satisfy their judgments. Id. at 1013.

The court disagreed, finding: “The plain language indicates that Section 1610(g) is not a separate basis of attachment, but rather qualifies the previous subsections.” Id. The court concluded, “the purpose of Section 1610(g) is to counteract the Supreme Court’s decision in Bancec, and to allow execution against the assets of separate juridical entities regardless of the protections Bancec may have offered.” Id. Currently, the Rubin case is pending appeal in the Seventh Circuit. Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 33 F. Supp. 3d 1003 (N.D. Ill. 2014), appeal docketed, No. 14-1935 (7th Cir. Apr. 25, 2014).

Surely this Court’s holding will be argued as precedent to allow the Rubin plaintiffs to seize Persian artifacts to be auctioned off to satisfy the Rubin plaintiffs’ default judgments. This would be an unjustified and unfortunate result. When Congress amended FSIA, the intention was to eliminate the Bancec presumption and relax the rigidity of § 1610 to make it easier for victims of terrorism to satisfy judgments against state sponsors of terror. Congress did not, however, intend to open the floodgates and allow terrorism plaintiffs to attach any and all Iranian property in the United States. Rather, Congress intended the commerce limitation to remain in place.¹ If a foreign state is designated as a state sponsor of terror, the state and the instrumentalities and agencies of the state lose the privilege of doing business in the United States without running the risk of property being seized to satisfy judgments.

In sum, I would require judgment creditors relying on § 1610(g) to satisfy one of § 1610's existing avenues for abrogating attachment immunity. In this case, the judgment creditors have done that. The judgment creditors have sufficiently alleged Bank Melli is engaged in commerce in the United States within the meaning of § 1610(b)(3).

¹TRIA § 201 similarly contains a limitation on attachment and execution. TRIA § 201 requires attachable assets to be defined as “blocked assets.” Section 201(d)(2)(A) defines a “blocked asset” as any asset “seized or frozen by the United States under section 5(b) of the Trading With the Enemy Act (50 U.S.C. App. 5(b)) or under sections 202 and 203 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701; 1702).”

60a

APPENDIX D

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

DOCKET NOS. 13-15442, 13-16100

MICHAEL BENNETT; LINDA BENNETT,
AS CO-ADMINISTRATORS OF THE ESTATE OF
MARIA ANN BENNETT,
Plaintiffs-Appellees,

v.

THE ISLAMIC REPUBLIC OF IRAN,
Defendant,

v.

VISA INC.; FRANKLIN RESOURCES, INC.,
*Defendants-third-party-
plaintiffs-Appellees,*

v.

GREENBERG AND ACOSTA JUDGMENT CREDITORS,
*Plaintiff-third-party-
defendant-Appellee,*

HEISER JUDGMENT CREDITORS,
*Plaintiff-fourth-party-
defendant-Appellee,*

v.

BANK MELLI,
*Plaintiff-third-party-
defendant-Appellant.*

ORDER AND AMENDED OPINION

February 22, 2016

Appeals from the United States District Court
for the Northern District of California
Charles R. Breyer, Senior District Judge, Presiding

Argued and Submitted
April 15, 2015—San Francisco, California

Before: Sidney R. Thomas,* and Susan P. Graber, Circuit
Judges, and Dee V. Benson, Senior District Judge.

Opinion by Judge Graber;
Partial Concurrence and Partial Dissent by Judge Benson

ORDER

The opinion filed August 26, 2015, and reported at 799 F.3d 1281, is withdrawn. Because the court's opinion is withdrawn, Appellant Bank Melli's petition for panel rehearing and petition for rehearing en banc is moot. A superseding opinion will be filed concurrently with this order. Further petitions for rehearing and petitions for rehearing en banc may be filed.

* Chief Judge Thomas was drawn to replace Judge Kozinski. He has read the briefs, reviewed the record, and listened to the audio-recording of oral argument held on April 15, 2015.

 The Honorable Dee V. Benson, Senior District Judge for the U.S. District Court for the District of Utah, sitting by designation.

OPINION

GRABER, Circuit Judge:

Approximately 90 United States citizens (or the representatives of their estates) are attempting to collect on unsatisfied money judgments that they hold against the Islamic Republic of Iran for deaths and injuries suffered in terrorist attacks sponsored by Iran. The assets that are the subject of this interpleader action are monies contractually owed to Bank Melli by Visa Inc. and Franklin Resources Inc. (“Franklin”). Bank Melli is an instrumentality of Iran. It asserts that Plaintiffs cannot execute on the assets (1) because Bank Melli enjoys sovereign immunity under the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976 (“FSIA”), (2) because the relevant statutory exceptions to sovereign immunity may not be applied retroactively, (3) because the blocked assets are not property of Bank Melli, and (4) because Bank Melli is a required party that cannot be joined, thus requiring dismissal under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19. We disagree and, accordingly, affirm the judgment of the district court.

BACKGROUND LEGAL PRINCIPLES

The jurisdiction of the United States over persons and property within its territory “is susceptible of no limitation not imposed by itself.” Schooner Exch. v. McFaddon, 11 U.S. (7 Cranch) 116, 136 (1812). Accordingly, foreign sovereign immunity is “a matter of grace and comity rather than a constitutional requirement.” Republic of Austria v. Altmann, 541 U.S. 677, 689 (2004). Courts consistently “defer[] to the decisions of the political branches” on whether to take actions against foreign sovereigns and their instrumentalities. Id. (quoting Ver- linden B.V. v. Cent. Bank of Nigeria, 461 U.S. 480, 486 (1983)).

The FSIA, 28 U.S.C. §§ 1330, 1602-1611, establishes a default rule that foreign states are immune from suit in United States courts. Id. at § 1604. Congress enacted the statute to provide a “comprehensive . . . ‘set of legal standards governing claims of immunity in every civil action against a foreign state or its political subdivisions, agencies, or instrumentalities.’” Altmann, 541 U.S. at 691 (quoting Verlinden B.V., 461 U.S. at 488). The FSIA provides the exclusive vehicle for subject matter jurisdiction in all civil actions against foreign state defendants. OBB Personenverkehr AG v. Sachs, 136 S. Ct. 390, 393 (2015); Flatow v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 308 F.3d 1065, 1069 (9th Cir. 2002).

The FSIA includes many exceptions to its general rule of immunity. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1605-1607. Relevant here, in 1996, Congress added a new exception, stripping a foreign state of its sovereign immunity when (1) the United States officially designates the foreign state a state sponsor of terrorism and (2) the foreign state is sued “for personal injury or death that was caused by an act of torture, extrajudicial killing, aircraft sabotage, hostage taking, or the provision of material support or resources for such an act.” 28 U.S.C. § 1605.

Iran was designated a terrorist party pursuant to section 6(j) of the Export Administration Act of 1979, 50 U.S.C. app. § 2405(j) (effective Jan. 19, 1984). Peterson v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 627 F.3d 1117, 1123 (9th Cir. 2010); Weinstein v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 609 F.3d 43, 48 (2d Cir. 2010). That designation means that Iran is not entitled to sovereign immunity for claims under § 1605A.

Separately, the FSIA addresses the immunity of sovereign property from execution and attachment. Subject to enumerated exceptions, a foreign state's property in the United States is immune from attachment and execution. 28 U.S.C. § 1609.

In First National City Bank v. Banco Para el Comercio Exterior de Cuba (“Bancec”), 462 U.S. 611, 620-621 (1983), the Supreme Court concluded that the FSIA did not control whether and to what extent instrumentalities could be held liable for the debts of their sovereigns. Applying international law and federal common law, the Court held that “government instrumentalities established as juridical entities distinct and independent from their sovereign should normally be treated as such.” Id. at 626-627. That rule, referred to as the “Bancec presumption,” may be overcome only in limited circumstances. Id. at 628-634. The federal courts later described five “Bancec factors” that may be considered in determining whether the presumption has been overcome in any given case. E.g., Flatow, 308 F.3d at 1071 n.9.¹

¹ The five factors are:

- (1) the level of economic control by the government;
- (2) whether the entity's profits go to the government;
- (3) the degree to which government officials manage the entity or otherwise have a hand in its daily affairs;
- (4) whether the government is the real beneficiary of the entity's conduct; and
- (5) whether adherence to separate identities would entitle the foreign state to benefits in United States courts while avoiding its obligations.

Flatow, 308 F.3d at 1071 n.9 (quoting Walter Fuller Aircraft Sales, Inc. v. Republic of the Philippines, 965 F.2d 1375, 1380 n.7 (5th Cir. 1992)).

Even after Congress added § 1605(a)(7) (now § 1605A) to the FSIA in 1996, successful plaintiffs struggled to enforce judgments against Iran when they were harmed by its terrorist activities. See, e.g., In re Islamic Republic of Iran Terrorism Litig., 659 F. Supp. 2d 31, 49-58 (D.D.C. 2009) (describing “The Never-Ending Struggle to Enforce Judgments Against Iran”). Once again, Congress responded by enacting new statutes, this time designed to facilitate the satisfaction of such judgments by expanding successful plaintiffs’ ability to attach and execute on the property of agencies and instrumentalities of terrorist states.

First, in 2002 Congress enacted the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002 (“TRIA”), Pub. L. No. 107-297, 116 Stat. 2322. Section 201(a) of the TRIA provides:

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as provided in subsection (b) [of this note, pertaining to Presidential waiver], in every case in which a person has obtained a judgment against a terrorist party on a claim based upon an act of terrorism, or for which a terrorist party is not immune under section 1605A or 1605(a)(7) . . . , the blocked assets² of that terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution or attachment in aid of execution in order to satisfy such judgment to the extent of any compensatory damages for which such terrorist party has been adjudged liable.

TRIA §201(a) was codified as a statutory note to 28 U.S.C. § 1610 on “Treatment of Terrorist Assets.”

² The term “blocked assets” refers generally to assets that have been seized or frozen by the United States. TRIA § 201(d)(2)(A).

Second, in 2008, Congress amended the FSIA as part of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-181, § 1083, 122 Stat. 3, 338. Among other changes, Congress added a new subsection to the FSIA, which provides in part that the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under section 1605A, and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, including property that is a separate juridical entity or is an interest held directly or indirectly in a separate juridical entity, is subject to attachment in aid of execution, and execution, upon that judgment as provided in this section, regardless of [the same five factors described by the federal courts as the “Bancec factors”].

28 U.S.C. § 1610(g)(1). For ease of reference, we refer to this section as “FSIA § 1610(g).”

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Four groups of individuals sued the Islamic Republic of Iran for damages arising from deaths and injuries suffered in terrorist attacks sponsored by Iran; in each case, a final money judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiffs and against Iran. In Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 659 F. Supp. 2d 20 (D.D.C. 2009), and Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 466 F. Supp. 2d 229 (D.D.C. 2006), the plaintiffs secured judgments for more than $590 million for the 1996 bombing of the Khobar Towers in Saudi Arabia. In Acosta v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 574 F. Supp. 2d 15 (D.D.C. 2008), the plaintiffs received a judgment of more than $350 million because of a 1990 mass shooting. In Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 507 F. Supp. 2d 117 (D.D.C. 2007), the plaintiffs obtained a judgment for damages of nearly $13 million for Iran’s role in the 2002 bombing of a cafeteria at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. And in Greenbaum v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 451 F. Supp. 2d 90 (D.D.C. 2006), the plaintiffs were awarded almost $20 million for damages suffered as a result of the bombing of a Jerusalem restaurant in 2001. Collectively, the judgments total nearly $1 billion. Although all the judgments were taken by default, it is undisputed that all are valid final judgments and that Iran owes the amounts of those judgments to the respective plaintiffs.

Bank Melli, Iran's largest financial institution, is wholly owned by the government of Iran. It is undisputed that Bank Melli qualifies as an instrumentality of Iran under the FSIA. Bank Melli was not named as a defendant in any of the four cases described above and was not itself alleged to have been involved in the underlying terrorist events. On October 25, 2007, the United States Department of the Treasury, Office of Foreign Assets Control exercised its authority under Executive Order No. 13,382, 70 Fed. Reg. 38,567 (June 28, 2005), to block Bank Melli's assets in the United States because of its involvement in Iran's nuclear and missile industries. Bank Melli's assets also are blocked pursuant to a 2012 Executive Order blocking the property of Iran and of Iranian financial institutions. Executive Order No. 13,599, 77 Fed. Reg. 6659 (Feb. 8, 2012).³

Visa and Franklin owe about $17.6 million to Bank Melli pursuant to a commercial relationship that involves the use of Visa credit cards in Iran. Visa and Franklin have not turned the funds over to Bank Melli only because the funds are blocked. The Bennett judgment creditors filed a complaint against Visa and Franklin, seeking to attach and execute against the blocked assets. Visa and Franklin responded by initiating this interpleader action, naming as defendants Bank Melli and the three other sets of judgment creditors. Visa and Franklin sought a determination of the rights to the blocked assets in their possession and a discharge of Visa and Franklin with regard to those assets. After Bank Melli entered its appearance, it moved to dismiss the action.

³ The recent lifting of a portion of the sanctions imposed on Iran does not render this interpleader action moot, nor does it affect our analysis of the issues raised here.

Bank Melli made four arguments for dismissal, each of which the district court rejected. The court held: (1) TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) enable the judgment creditors to attach the monies owed to Bank Melli; (2) TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) do not impose retroactive liability; (3) the blocked assets constitute property of Bank Melli; and (4) Bank Melli was not a required party under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19. Bennett v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 927 F. Supp. 2d 833 (N.D. Cal. 2013). The district court denied the motion to dismiss and certified the order for interlocutory appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). Bennett, 927 F. Supp. 2d at 845-846.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

We review de novo: questions of statutory construction, Miranda v. Anchondo, 684 F.3d 844, 849 (9th Cir. 2012); a district court's ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim or for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, Colony Cove Props., LLC v. City of Carson, 640 F.3d 948, 955 (9th Cir. 2011); the question whether a statute may be applied retroactively, Scott v. Boos, 215 F.3d 940, 942 (9th Cir. 2000); and legal determinations underlying a district court's decision whether an action can proceed in the absence of a required party under Rule 19, Kescoli v. Babbitt, 101 F.3d 1304, 1309 (9th Cir. 1996).

DISCUSSION

A. TRIA §201(a) and FSIA §1610(g) permit attachment and execution of the monies owed to Bank Melli.1. TRIA §201(a)

We hold that TRIA §201(a) permits judgment creditors to attach assets held by the instrumentalities of state sponsors of terrorism. As always, when interpreting a statute, we begin with its text. Metro One Telecomms., Inc. v. Comm’r, 704 F.3d 1057, 1061 (9th Cir. 2012). Section 201(a) of the TRIA applies “[n]otwithstanding any other provision of law,” “in every case in which a person has obtained a judgment against a terrorist party on a claim based upon an act of terrorism, or for which a terrorist party is not immune under section 1605A or 1605(a)(7),” and “in order to satisfy such judgment to the extent of any compensatory damages for which such terrorist party has been adjudged liable.” TRIA §201(a) (emphases added). The statute provides that, in cases such as this one, “the blocked assets of [the] terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution or attachment in aid of execution.” Id. (emphasis added). This wording demonstrates that Congress knew that the blocked assets of an instrumentality might otherwise have been excluded from the phrase “blocked assets of [the] terrorist party” and that Congress acted to ensure that, instead, the instrumentality’s blocked assets were included. Cf. Alejandro v. Telefonica Larga Distancia de P.R., Inc. 183 F.3d 1277, 1287-1288, 1287 n.25 (11th Cir. 1999) (stating that a proposed amendment to the FSIA that would have applied to property that “belongs to an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state” demonstrated that Congress “knows how to express clearly an intent to make instrumentalities substantively liable for the debts of their related foreign governments” (internal quotation marks omitted). Accordingly, we agree with the Second Circuit when it held that it is “clear beyond cavil that Section 201(a) of the TRIA provides courts with subject matter jurisdiction over post-judgment execution and attachment proceedings against property held in the hands of an instrumentality of the judgment-debtor, even if the instrumentality is not itself named in the judgment.” Weinstein, 609 F.3d at 50.

Bank Melli disputes this reading of §201(a), arguing instead that it applies only to instrumentalities that are alter egos of the state; that is, Bank Melli argues that the Bancec presumption against the attachment of assets held by state instrumentalities applies. Bank Melli reasons that, because “including” is a term of illustration, the words that follow are merely an example of the main preceding principle. That observation is true but is of no assistance to Bank Melli. By listing “the blocked assets of any . . . instrumentality of that terrorist party” as a specific example of assets that are “subject to execution or attachment . . . in order to satisfy” a money judgment obtained under §1605A or 1605(a)(7), Congress clearly instructed courts to allow the instrumentality’s blocked assets to be reached. Congress also instructed courts to allow these assets to be reached “[n]otwithstanding any other provision of law”—that is, regardless of the usual fiction embodied in Bancec. Congress purposely overrode the Bancec presumption in this context and abrogated attachment immunity with respect to the blocked assets of instrumentalities of designated state sponsors of terrorism. Section 201(a) permits the judgment creditors to attach the assets of an instrumentality of a state sponsor of terrorism. Accordingly, the blocked assets of Bank Melli that are at issue in this case may be attached.

2. FSIA §1610(g)

FSIA §1610(g) allows attachment of and execution against property held by a foreign terrorist state's instrumentality "that is a separate juridical entity," "regardless of" five factors. As noted above, those enumerated factors are the same five factors identified by the federal courts as the "Bancec factors" that may be used to decide whether an instrumentality is an alter ego under Bancec. E.g., Flatow, 308 F.3d at 1071-1072, 1071 n.9. It is clear from the text of the statute that Congress was referring to, and abrogating, not just the presumption of separate juridical status, but also Bancec specifically. Therefore, §1610(g) also permits attachment in this case.

But Bank Melli contends that, because §1610(g) makes assets subject to attachment and execution only "as provided in this section," it is not an independent exception to the immunity granted by 28 U.S.C. §1609. Bank Melli reasons that subsection (g) applies only if some other part of §1610 provides for attachment and execution. Bank Melli argues that its assets cannot be attached or executed upon because the assets at issue in this case were not "used for a commercial activity in the United States," a requirement in §1610(a), and Bank Melli has not itself "engaged in commercial activity in the United States," a requirement in §1610(b). We are not persuaded.

We hold that subsection (g) contains a freestanding provision for attaching and executing against assets of a foreign state or its agencies or instrumentalities. Subsection (g) covers a different subject than §1610(a) through (e): by its express terms, it applies only to "certain actions,” specifically, judgments “entered under section 1605A.” (Emphasis added.) In turn, §1605A revokes sovereign immunity for damages claims against a foreign state for personal injury or death caused by “torture, extrajudicial killing, aircraft sabotage, hostage taking, or the provision of material support” for such an act. By definition, such claims do not arise from commercial activity; they arise from acts of torture (and the like). Section 1610(g) requires only that a judgment under §1605A have been rendered against the foreign state; in that event, both the property of the foreign state and the property of an agency or instrumentality of that state are subject to attachment and execution. See Peterson, 627 F.3d at 1123 n.2 (stating that §1610(g) “expanded the category of foreign sovereign property that can be attached; judgment creditors can now reach any U.S. property in which Iran has any interest, whereas before they could reach only property belonging to Iran”). To the extent that subsection (g) is inconsistent with subsection (a) or (b), subsection (g) governs because the particular (judgments entered under §1605A) controls over the general (all judgments entered after a certain date). Morales v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 504 U.S. 374, 384-385 (1992).

When subsection (g) refers to attachment and execution of the judgment “as provided in this section,” it is referring to procedures contained in §1610(f).⁴ Section 1610(f), like §1610(g), relates to judgments obtained under § 1605A and its predecessor, § 1605(a)(7). Subsection (f)(1)(A) permits attachment and execution of property that might otherwise be blocked; subsection (f)(1)(B) prohibits attachment or execution against property of a foreign state that it expropriated from a natural person; and subsection (f)(2)(A) provides that the Secretary of State and Secretary of Treasury will make every effort to assist a court or creditor in locating property awarded pursuant to § 1605A. In light of Congress' mandate to the executive branch to assist in the collection of judgments in such cases, 28 U.S.C. § 1610(f), we cannot impute to Congress an empty statutory gesture. See Gates v. Syrian Arab Republic, 755 F.3d 568, 576 (7th Cir. 2014) (stating that Congress intended the 2008 amendments to the FSIA “to make it easier for terrorism victims to obtain judgments and to attach assets”). Given both the text of the statute and Congress' intention to make it easier for victims of terrorism to recover judgments, we hold that § 1610(g) is a freestanding provision for attaching and executing against assets to satisfy a money judgment premised on a foreign state's act of terrorism.

⁴ When Congress enacted subsection (g), subsection (f) already was in place. Subsection (g) was added to the statute in 2008. Pub. L. No. 110-181, div. A, tit. X, §1083(b)(3), 122 Stat. 3, 341 (2008). Subsection (f) was enacted in 1990, when the exceptions to the FSIA were first codified. Pub. L. No. 101-650, tit. III, §325(b)(9), 104 Stat. 5089, 5121 (1990).

Bank Melli argues, and our colleague agrees, that our reading of § 1610(g) renders § 1610(a)(7) and (b)(3) superfluous.⁵ But the tension works in the opposite direction.

⁵ Our colleague gives two other reasons for disagreeing with us on this point. The first is that § 1610(b)(3) does not require property “to be involved in terrorism to abrogate attachment immunity under § 1610(b)(3).” (Partial dissent at 33.) We do not suggest to the contrary. The other reason is that it would be “an unjustified and unfortunate result,” id. at 9, to allow attachment and execution of non-commercial property, such as museum artifacts belonging to Iran. But it is not our province to decide whether the policy choices embodied in a statute are wise or unwise; our task is, rather, to discern

If § 1610(g) is interpreted to require that, to be subject to attachment and execution, property must be used by the foreign state for a “commercial activity,” § 1610(a), or that the instrumentality must be “engaged in commercial activity in the United States,” § 1610(b), then we would have to read into § 1610(g) a limitation that Congress did not insert. See United States v. Temple, 105 U.S. (9 Otto) 97, 99 (1881) (holding that the court has “no right to insert words and phrases, so as to incorporate in the statute a new and distinct provision”). Section 1610(g)(1) provides that “the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under section 1605A, and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, . . . is subject to attachment in aid of execution, and execution.” (Emphases added.) Thus, Congress did not limit the type of property subject to attachment and execution under § 1610(g) to property connected to commercial activity in the United States. The only requirement is that property be “the property of” the foreign state or its instrumentality.

Two Seventh Circuit cases support our conclusion in this regard. In Wyatt v. Syrian Arab Republic, 800 F.3d 331, 343 (7th Cir. 2015), the court held that the plaintiffs need not comply with § 1608(e) when proceeding under § 1610(g). The court noted that § 1608(e) is part of a “more general process” applicable to “suits other than those for state-sponsored terrorism, such as more ordinary contract or tort cases arising out of a foreign state’s commercial activities.” Id. at 333. Section 1610(g), the court noted, “contains provisions specific to claims for state-sponsored terrorism.” Id. Those specific provisions allow plaintiffs with a judgment against a state congressional intent. Day-Brite Lighting, Inc. v. Missouri, 342 U.S. 421, 423 (1952).

sponsor of terrorism, obtained pursuant to § 1605A, to attach and execute the judgment against property of the foreign state and against property of any agency and instrumentality of the state. Id. The other provisions of § 1610, contained in subsections (a) through (c), establish a general process for judgments against a foreign state not necessarily resting on state-sponsored terrorism. Id.

Similarly, the court held in Gates that a plaintiff proceeding under § 1610(g) need not comply with § 1610(c). The court wrote in part:

Sections 1610(a) and (b) are available to satisfy a wide variety of judgments, but they allow attachment of only specific categories of assets to satisfy those judgments. See, e.g., § 1610(a) (allowing attachment of foreign state property located in the United States and used for commercial activity there); § 1610(b) (allowing attachment of property of foreign state agency or instrumentality engaged in United States commercial activity).

By contrast, § 1610(g) is available only to holders of judgments under the § 1605A exception for state-sponsored terrorism, but it allows attachment of a much broader range of assets to satisfy those judgments.

Gates, 755 F.3d at 576.

Regardless of canons of construction—such as the principle that a specific statute takes precedence over a general one—our ultimate search is for congressional intent. Chickasaw Nation v. United States, 534 U.S. 84, 94 (2001). And it is quite clear that Congress meant to expand successful plaintiffs' options for collecting judgments against state sponsors of terrorism.

We acknowledge that § 1610 as a whole is ambiguous. In that circumstance, we may consider legislative history. Id. at 91-92; United States v. Pub. Utils. Comm'n, 345 U.S. 295, 315 (1953). That history suggests that § 1610(g) was meant to allow attachment and execution with respect to any property whatsoever of the foreign state or its instrumentality. Senator Lautenberg, one of the sponsors of the bill that became § 1610(g), stated that the provision would “allow[] attachment of the assets of a state sponsor of terrorism to be made upon the satisfaction of a ‘simple ownership’ test.” 154 Cong. Rec. S54-01 (Jan. 22, 2008) (statement of Sen. Lautenberg). The House Conference Report for a substantially similar earlier version of the bill noted that the provision “would . . . expand the ability of claimants to seek recourse against the property of that foreign state,” in part “by permitting any property in which the foreign state has a beneficial ownership to be subject to execution of that judgment.” H.R. Rep. No. 11-447, at 1001 (2007) (Conf. Rep.). The bill, it continued, “is written to subject any property interest in which the foreign state enjoys a beneficial ownership to attachment and execution.” Id. We have already noted that the basic purpose of adding § 1610(g) was to enable plaintiffs who have established a foreign state’s liability under § 1605A and its predecessor, for terrorist acts, to collect on their judgments. As Senator Lautenberg put it, the bill was meant “to facilitate victims’ collection of their damages from state sponsors of terrorism.” 154 Cong. Rec. S54-01 (Jan. 22, 2008) (statement of Sen. Lautenberg). Our interpretation of § 1610(g) more fully furthers that fundamental aim.

Bank Melli also makes three other arguments regarding § 1610(g). We can dispose of those arguments easily.

(1) The district court’s failure to discuss expressly whether to grant Bank Melli discretionary relief under the “innocent party” provision of §1610(g)(3) does not mean that the court failed to consider whether that provision applied. Bank Melli made its §1610(g)(3) argument to the district court, and we presume that the court understood its authority but declined to exercise discretion in Bank Melli’s favor. Cf. United States v. Davis, 264 F.3d 813, 816-817 (9th Cir. 2001) (so holding in the context of a district court’s silence regarding a requested downward departure under the Sentencing Guidelines).

(2) There is no conflict between §1610(g) and the 1955 Treaty of Amity between the United States and Iran, which requires that the United States respect the juridical status of Iranian companies, protect their property in accordance with international law, and not discriminate against them. Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations and Consular Rights Between the United States of America and Iran, Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899, 902-903. As the Second Circuit held, that treaty provision is intended simply to ensure that foreign corporations are on equal footing with domestic corporations. Weinstein, 609 F.3d at 53. Even if the two provisions were inconsistent, when a treaty and a later-enacted federal statute conflict, the subsequent statute controls to the extent of the conflict. Breard v. Greene, 523 U.S. 371, 376 (1998) (per curiam).

(3) Allowing the Heiser plaintiffs to obtain relief under §1610(g) by converting their §1605(a)(7) judgment to a §1605A judgment does not violate separation of powers principles. Bank Melli’s reliance on Plaut v. Spendthrift Farm, Inc., 514 U.S. 211, 219 (1995), is misplaced. There, the court held that Congress could not require federal courts to reopen final judgments. But here, the judgment was not reopened. Instead, the Heiser plaintiffs have a new collection tool; they can enforce their final judgment against Iran by attaching and executing on the property of Iran's instrumentality. In essence, the statute gives more effect to the final judgment, rather than attempting to revise or rescind that judgment.

B. The statutes do not impermissibly impose retroactive liability.

Bank Melli next argues that the judgment creditors cannot use TRIA § 201(a) or FSIA § 1610(g) because the terrorist acts that underlie the judgments occurred before the enactment of those statutes. The general default rule is that a law that increases substantive liability for past conduct does not operate retroactively. Landgraf v. USI Film Prods., 511 U.S. 244, 280 (1994).

But the statutes do not impose new liability on Iran. Section 1605(a)(7) was in effect at the time of the terrorist acts in question. Rather, the statutes simply permit additional methods of collection. See id. at 275 (noting that the default rule does not apply to rules of procedure because of “diminished reliance interests”).

Even if TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) are viewed as imposing new liability retroactively, the default rule is different for statutes that govern foreign sovereign immunity. In Altmann, 541 U.S. at 692, the Supreme Court concluded that the Landgraf presumption does not apply to such statutes. To the contrary, when it comes to sovereign immunity for both foreign states and their agencies and instrumentalities, there is a presumption in favor of retroactivity “absent contraindications” from Congress. Id. at 696.

Here, there are no such contraindications. In fact, the opposite is true. The purpose of the statutes at issue was to enable not just future litigants, but also current judgment creditors to collect on the final judgments that they already held—which, as a matter of logic, arose from past acts. Congress chose to make TRIA § 201(a) applicable in “every case in which a person has obtained a judgment” under either the former statute, § 1605(a)(7), or the current statute, § 1605A. TRIA § 201(a) (emphases added). Similarly, Congress chose to make § 1610(g) applicable to all judgments entered under § 1605A. Accordingly, these statutes apply even if they are seen as imposing liability retroactively, because Congress so intended.

C. The blocked assets are property of Bank Melli.

Bank Melli also contends that TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) do not permit attachment of the assets here because Visa and Franklin own the blocked assets; Bank Melli does not. Under TRIA § 201(a), to be subject to execution or attachment, the blocked assets must be “assets of” the instrumentality. Similarly, § 1610(g) applies to “the property of” the instrumentality.

Like most courts, we look to state law to determine the ownership of assets in this context. Peterson, 627 F.3d at 1130-1131; see also Calderon-Cardona v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 770 F.3d 993, 1000-1001 (2d Cir. 2014) (looking to New York law to determine what type of interest rendered property attachable under § 1610(g)), cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 893 (2016); Walker Int’l Holdings, Ltd. v. Republic of Congo, 415 F.3d 413, 415 (5th Cir. 2005) (applying Texas law to determine attorney fees award in FSIA action); Hegna v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 380 F.3d 1000, 1007 (7th Cir. 2004) (applying Illinois law to decide whether property interest was open to challenge in action under FSIA); Karaha Bodas Co. v. Perusahaan Pertambangan Minyak Dan Gas Bumi Negara (“Pertamina”), 313 F.3d 70, 83 (2d Cir. 2002) (applying New York law to determine what actions are subject to enforcement and available to judgment creditors). Here, California law applies. As we held in Peterson, California law authorizes a court to order a judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor a right to payments that are due or will become due, even if the right is conditioned on future developments. 627 F.3d at 1130-1131; Cal. Civ. Proc. Code §482.080(a)(2) (providing that a court may order a defendant subject to a writ of attachment to turn over either “evidence of title to property of or a debt owed to the defendant”); id. at §680.310 (“‘Property’ includes real and personal property and any interest therein.”); id. at §708.210 (permitting a judgment creditor to bring an action against a third party to whom the judgment debtor owes money “to have the interest or debt applied to the satisfaction of the money judgment”); id. at §708.510(a) (authorizing a court to “order the judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor . . . all or part of a right to payment due”). That is precisely the situation in the present case: Bank Melli has a contractual right to obtain payments from Visa and Franklin. Under California law, those assets are property of Bank Melli and may be assigned to judgment creditors.

But even if federal law should govern this question, see Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 735 F.3d 934, 940 (D.C. Cir. 2013) (creating federal rule of decision to interpret ownership requirements in FSIA, based in part on U.C.C. Article 4A and common law principles), Bank Melli would not succeed. Federal law and California law are aligned.

First, we note that Congress has used expansive wording to suggest that immediate and outright ownership of assets is not required. In the TRIA, Congress provided that “[n]othing in this subsection shall bar . . . enforcement of any judgment to which this subsection applies . . .

against assets otherwise available under this section or under any other provision of law.” TRIA §201(d)(4) (emphasis added). In §1610(g), Congress specified that “the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under section 1605A, and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, including property that is a separate juridical entity or is an interest held directly or indirectly in a separate juridical entity, is subject to attachment in aid of execution, and execution, upon that judgment as provided in this section.” (Emphases added.) Thus, interests held by the instrumentality of a terrorist state, as is the case here, are subject to attachment under federal law.

Second, in Heiser, only foreign nationals, and not a foreign country, had an interest in the blocked funds held by intermediary banks. “Iranian entities were not the originators of the funds transfers. Nor were they the ultimate beneficiaries.” Heiser, 735 F.3d at 936 (footnote omitted). By contrast, here, Bank Melli is the ultimate beneficiary; Visa and Franklin owe money to Bank Melli for services rendered pursuant to an agreement between them. Accordingly, Bank Melli has an interest in the blocked assets.

In summary, California law applies. Under California law, money owed to Bank Melli may be assigned to judgment creditors. Even if federal law applies, under the Heiser court’s rationale, attachment and execution are allowed here because Bank Melli is the intended contractual beneficiary of the contested funds.

D. Because Bank Melli does not enjoy sovereign immunity, Rule 19 presents no barrier.

Finally, Bank Melli relies on Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19 to support its request for dismissal. That rule provides that a person must be joined as a party if the person “claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that disposing of the action in the person’s absence may . . . impair or impede the person’s ability to protect the interest.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a). And, if the “person who is required to be joined if feasible cannot be joined, the court must determine whether, in equity and good conscience, the action should proceed among the existing parties or should be dismissed.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).

Bank Melli argues that this case must be dismissed because it is a required party that cannot be joined and, further, that the action cannot proceed without it “in equity and good conscience.” But, because TRIA § 201(a) and FSIA § 1610(g) confer jurisdiction by creating exceptions to sovereign immunity, Bank Melli can be joined in this action. Thus it does not matter whether Bank Melli is otherwise a required party under Rule 19(a); dismissal is not required.

According to Bank Melli, Republic of the Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S. 851 (2008), requires dismissal. We disagree. A class of victims of human rights abuses in the Republic of the Philippines won a $2 billion default judgment against the Estate of Ferdinand Marcos, the former president of that country. Id. at 857-858. The class attempted to enforce the judgment by attaching assets owed to Merrill Lynch by a bank incorporated by Marcos personally. Id. at 858. The Philippines claimed ownership of the bank, and therefore the disputed assets, because the bank had been incorporated through a misuse of public office. Id. The Philippines also claimed immunity from the suit. Id. Merrill Lynch initiated an interpleader action naming, among other parties, the Republic of the Philippines and one of its agencies. Id. at 845-855. The Supreme Court held that the case should be dismissed because “it was improper [for the district court] to issue a definitive holding regarding a nonfrivolous, substantive claim made by an absent, required entity that was entitled by its sovereign status to immunity from suit.” Id. at 868.

This case plainly is distinguishable. In Pimentel, the Republic was a required party that could not be joined because of sovereign immunity. Here, Bank Melli does not enjoy sovereign immunity, so it can be joined as a party, whether or not it is a required party. Unlike the Republic in Pimentel, therefore, Bank Melli is able to adjudicate its claim to the contested assets.

CONCLUSION

We hold: (1) TRIA §201(a) and FSIA §1610(g) authorize attachment and execution of the monies owed to Bank Melli. (2) Those statutes do not impose liability retroactively but, even if they are viewed as doing so, Altmann establishes a presumption in favor of retroactivity for statutes governing sovereign immunity, which is not rebutted here. (3) California law governs the ownership question; the blocked assets are property of Bank Melli under principles of California law and, thus, are subject to attachment and execution under TRIA §201(a) and FSIA §1610(g). The same result would obtain even if federal law governed. (4) Because Bank Melli can be joined in this action, the dismissal provision of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19 does not apply.

AFFIRMED.

BENSON, Senior District Judge, concurring in part and dissenting in part:

I concur with the majority that § 201(a) of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act (“TRIA”) and § 1610 of the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (“FSIA”) permit the judgment creditors in this case to attach and execute against monies owed to Bank Melli. However, I respectfully believe the majority erred in finding § 1610(g) to be a freestanding immunity exception under FSIA. In my view, judgment creditors relying on § 1610(g) are able to proceed, regardless of Bank Melli’s sovereign immunity, because the judgment creditors have sufficiently alleged Bank Melli is engaged in commerce in the United States within the meaning of § 1610(b)(3) of FSIA.

FSIA contains “extensive procedural protections for foreign sovereigns in United States courts.” Wyatt v. Syrian Arab Republic, 800 F.3d 331, 333 (7th Cir. 2015). Specifically, § 1609 of FSIA provides a general presumption that property of a foreign state and the property of an instrumentality or agency of a foreign state is immune from execution and attachment in United States courts. See 28 U.S.C. § 1609; 28 U.S.C. § 1603(a). In turn, § 1610 provides a series of exceptions to this general rule.

Prior to 2008, § 1610 provided different rules for attachment immunity depending on whether the party was seeking immunity as the foreign state or as an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state. Regarding foreign states, § 1610(a) denied immunity where: (1) a judgment creditor obtained a judgment against the foreign state; (2) the property of the foreign state is located in the United States; (3) the property is used for “a commercial activity” in the United States; and (4) one of § 1610(a)’s seven avenues for abrogating immunity applied. See 28 U.S.C. § 1610(a). Similarly, with respect to agencies and instrumentalities, § 1610(b) denied immunity where: (1) a judgment creditor obtained a judgment against an agency or instrumentality of foreign state; (2) the agency or instrumentality is engaged in commercial activity in the United States; (3) the property of the agency or instrumentality is located in the United States; and (4) one of § 1610(b)'s three avenues for abrogating immunity applied. See 28 U.S.C. § 1610(b).

Prior to 2008, the judgment creditors in this case would have been required to obtain a judgment against Bank Melli to utilize the immunity waiver provisions under § 1610(b) to attach Bank Melli's property.

In 2008, Congress amended FSIA, adding § 1610(g) and § 1605A. National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-181, § 1083, 122 Stat. 3, 338 (2008). The purpose of the amendments was to relax the protections of § 1610 in cases of state sponsored terrorism to "make it easier for terrorism victims to obtain judgments and to attach assets." Gates v. Syrian Arab Republic, 755 F.3d 568, 576 (7th Cir. 2014); In re Islamic Republic of Iran Terrorism Litig., 659 F. Supp. 2d 31, 62 (D.D.C. 2009) (noting, "these latest additions to . . . FSIA demonstrate that Congress remains focused on eliminating those barriers that have made it nearly impossible for plaintiffs in these actions to execute civil judgments against Iran or other state sponsors of terrorism").

Under § 1610(g), if a judgment creditor obtains a judgment under § 1605A, the property of the foreign state and "the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, including property that is a separate juridical entity . . . is subject to attachment . . . and execution, upon that judgment as provided in this section, regardless" of five factors. 28 U.S.C. § 1610(g)(1) (emphasis added). The five factors enumerated in § 1610(g)(A)

through (E) reflect the Bancec presumption, which requires this Court to treat government entities established as separate juridical entities distinct from their sovereigns. See First Nat'l City Bank v. Banco Para el Comercio Exterior de Cuba, 462 U.S. 611, 620-621 (1983); Flatow v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 308 F.3d 1065, 1071 n.9 (9th Cir. 2009) (outlining the Bancec factors (citing Walter Fuller Aircraft Sales, Inc. v. Republic of the Philippines, 965 F.2d 1375, 1380 n.7 (5th Cir. 1992))).

Section 1610(g) leads to two straightforward conclusions under FSIA. First, if a party obtains a §1605A judgment against a state sponsor of terror, the Bancec presumption is eliminated, which permits a court to attach and execute against the property of the agency or instrumentality to satisfy the judgments against the foreign state. See Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 885 F. Supp. 2d 429, 442 (D.D.C. 2012) (“Section §1610(g) subparagraphs (A)-(E) explicitly prohibit consideration of each of the five Bancec factors.”), aff'd sub nom. Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 735 F.3d 934 (D.C. Cir. 2013). Second, the language “as provided in this section” requires a judgment creditor to find an existing mechanism of attachment under §1610. Section 1610(g) does not create a new avenue for attachment under FSIA; rather, §1610(g) broadens the force of §1610's existing avenues for attachment by eliminating the legal fiction that Bank Melli is a separate juridical entity from Iran.

In this case, judgment creditors relying on §1610(g) may proceed to attach Bank Melli's property because Bank Melli's property is not immune from attachment by virtue of §1610(b)(3). Section 1610(b)(3) eliminates attachment immunity if an agency or instrumentality is “engaged in commercial activity in the United States” and “the judgment relates to a claim for which the agency or instrumentality is not immune by virtue of section 1605A of this chapter . . . regardless of whether the property is or was involved in the act upon which the claim is based.” 28 U.S.C. § 1610(b)(3). The judgment creditors can attach Bank Melli’s property because: (1) the judgment creditors have obtained a judgment against Iran pursuant to § 1605A; (2) § 1610(g) eliminates the Bancec presumption, allowing this Court to attach and execute against Bank Melli’s assets to satisfy the judgment against Iran; and (3) the judgment creditors have sufficiently ple[d] that Bank Melli is engaged in commercial activity in the United States.

Section 1603(c) of FSIA defines commercial activity as: “either a regular course of commercial conduct or a particular commercial transaction or act. The commercial character of an activity shall be determined by reference to the nature of the course of conduct or particular transaction or act, rather than by reference to its purpose.” 28 U.S.C. § 1603(c) (emphasis added). Bank Melli entered into a contract with an American company to provide an American company a commercial service. At this stage in the litigation, the Court can conclude that the judgment creditors relying on § 1610(g) have sufficiently alleged Bank Melli is engaged in commercial activity in the United States.

The majority disagrees with the aforementioned interpretation and concludes that § 1610(g) creates a free-standing immunity exception under FSIA. The majority believes a § 1605A judgment creditor may attach Bank Melli’s property regardless of any commercial component under § 1610(a) or § 1610(b). In my view, respectfully, the majority misses the mark in three important respects.

First, the majority erroneously finds that § 1610(g) is a freestanding exception to immunity by concluding:

Subsection (g) covers a different subject than § 1610(a) through (e): by its express terms, it applies only to ‘certain actions,’ specifically, judgments ‘entered under section 1605A.’ (Emphasis added.) In turn, § 1605A revokes sovereign immunity for damages claims against a foreign state for personal injury or death caused by ‘torture, extrajudicial killing, aircraft sabotage, hostage taking, or the provision of material support’ for such an act. By definition, such claims do not arise from commercial activity; they arise from acts of torture (and the like).

[Maj. Op., p. 16.] In doing so, the majority misinterprets the operation of § 1610(a) and (b) waivers in the context of § 1605A judgments. Under § 1610(b)(3), a judgment creditor can attach property where the instrumentality is engaged in commercial activity in the United States. Furthermore, § 1610(b)(3) provides that attachment immunity is eliminated “regardless of whether the property is or was involved with the act upon which the claim is based.” 28 U.S.C. § 1610(b)(3) (emphasis added). Therefore, a § 1605A judgment allows a judgment creditor to get immunity waived for any property where the instrumentality is engaged in commerce in the United States, regardless whether the property was involved in the actions that gave rise to the § 1605A waiver of immunity against the foreign state. Therefore, Bank Melli’s property does not need to be involved in terrorism to abrogate attachment immunity under § 1610(b)(3).

Second, the majority concludes that the “as provided in this section” language found in § 1610(g) refers to the procedural aspects of § 1610, namely § 1610(f). Fair enough. But, the majority’s conclusion does not mean the language “as provided in this section” refers only to § 1610(f). Indeed, the majority’s piecemeal reading of § 1610(g) renders other portions of § 1610 inoperable. “It is ‘a cardinal principle of statutory construction’ that ‘a statute ought, upon the whole, to be so construed that, if it can be prevented, no clause, sentence, or word shall be superfluous, void, or insignificant.’” TRW Inc. v. Andrews, 534 U.S. 19, 31 (2001) (quoting Duncan v. Walker, 533 U.S. 167, 174 (2001)). This Court should adopt the interpretation of § 1610 that “‘gives effect to every clause and word.’” Marx v. Gen. Revenue Corp., ___ U.S. ___, 133 S. Ct. 1166, 1177 (2013) (citing Microsoft Corp. v. i4i Ltd. P’ship, 564 U.S. 91 (2011)).

The majority ignores the avenues for exemption under § 1610(a)(7) and § 1610(b)(3). Section 1610(a)(7) and § 1610(b)(3) provide immunity, in addition to requiring some interplay with commerce, where “the judgment relates to a claim for which the foreign state is not immune under section 1605A” If a § 1605A judgment creditor can waive attachment immunity under § 1610(g) without proving the property is used in commerce or the instrumentality is engaged in commerce in the United States, § 1610(a)(7) and § 1610(b)(3) are rendered superfluous and obsolete. Conversely, recognizing § 1610(g)’s limited purpose was to eliminate the Bancec presumption ensures this Court gives effect to every clause and word in § 1610 while honoring the purpose of the 2008 FSIA amendments.

Finally, the majority’s holding ignores the practical limitation the commerce requirement places on § 1605A judgments. Reading § 1610(g) as a freestanding immunity exception does not just relax FSIA in the context of terrorism—it eliminates any immunity protection under FSIA for state sponsors of terror and their instrumentalities. For example, in Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran, American citizens sued and obtained default judgments against Iran for injuries and losses that arose out of a suicide bombing carried out by Hamas in Israel. 33 F. Supp. 3d 1003, 1006 (N.D. Ill. 2014). The Rubin plaintiffs sought to “attach and execute on numerous ancient Persian artifacts” in possession of two museums in the United States to satisfy their default judgments against Iran. Id. Like the judgment creditors in this case, the Rubin plaintiffs argued that § 1610(g) is a freestanding immunity exception and, therefore, the plaintiffs may attach Iran’s artifacts to satisfy their judgments. Id. at 1013.

The court disagreed, finding: “The plain language indicates that Section 1610(g) is not a separate basis of attachment, but rather qualifies the previous subsections.” Id. The court concluded, “the purpose of Section 1610(g) is to counteract the Supreme Court’s decision in Bancec, and to allow execution against the assets of separate juridical entities regardless of the protections Bancec may have offered.” Id. Currently, the Rubin case is pending appeal in the Seventh Circuit. Rubin v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 33 F. Supp. 3d 1003 (N.D. Ill. 2014), appeal docketed, No. 14-1935 (7th Cir. Apr. 25, 2014).

Surely this Court’s holding will be argued as precedent to allow the Rubin plaintiffs to seize Persian artifacts to be auctioned off to satisfy the Rubin plaintiffs’ default judgments. This would be an unjustified and unfortunate result. When Congress amended FSIA, the intention was to eliminate the Bancec presumption and relax the rigidity of § 1610 to make it easier for victims of terrorism to satisfy judgments against state sponsors of terror. Congress did not, however, intend to open the floodgates and allow terrorism plaintiffs to attach any and all Iranian property in the United States. Rather, Congress intended the commerce limitation to remain in place.¹ If a foreign state is designated as a state sponsor of terror, the state and the instrumentalities and agencies of the state lose the privilege of doing business in the United States without running the risk of property being seized to satisfy judgments.

In sum, I would require judgment creditors relying on § 1610(g) to satisfy one of § 1610's existing avenues for abrogating attachment immunity. In this case, the judgment creditors have done that. The judgment creditors have sufficiently alleged Bank Melli is engaged in commerce in the United States within the meaning of § 1610(b)(3).

¹TRIA § 201 similarly contains a limitation on attachment and execution. TRIA § 201 requires attachable assets to be defined as “blocked assets.” Section 201(d)(2)(A) defines a “blocked asset” as any asset “seized or frozen by the United States under section 5(b) of the Trading With the Enemy Act (50 U.S.C. App. 5(b)) or under sections 202 and 203 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701; 1702).”

APPENDIX E
UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

DOCKET NOS. 13-15442, 13-16100

MICHAEL BENNETT; LINDA BENNETT,
AS CO-ADMINISTRATORS OF THE ESTATE OF
MARIA ANN BENNETT,
Plaintiffs-Appellees,

v.

THE ISLAMIC REPUBLIC OF IRAN,
Defendant,

v.

VISA INC.; FRANKLIN RESOURCES, INC.,
*Defendants-third-party-
plaintiffs-Appellees,*

v.

GREENBERG AND ACOSTA JUDGMENT CREDITORS,
*Plaintiff-third-party-
defendant-Appellee,*

HEISER JUDGMENT CREDITORS,
*Plaintiff-fourth-party-
defendant-Appellee,*

v.

BANK MELLI,
*Plaintiff-third-party-
defendant-Appellant.*

OPINION

August 26, 2015

Appeals from the United States District Court
for the Northern District of California
Charles R. Breyer, Senior District Judge, Presiding

Argued and Submitted
April 15, 2015—San Francisco, California

Before: Alex Kozinski and Susan P. Graber, Circuit
Judges, and Dee V. Benson,* Senior District Judge.

Opinion by Judge Kozinski

KOZINSKI, Circuit Judge:

Congress has enacted two statutes to help victims of terrorism collect on money judgments against the foreign states responsible for sponsoring the attacks. We consider whether victims can collect from an instrumentality of a state that has sponsored terrorism when the instrumentality is a separate juridical entity that wasn't a party to the underlying lawsuit.

I. Background

The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA) is the sole basis for jurisdiction over foreign states in U.S.

* The Honorable Dee V. Benson, Senior District Judge for the U.S. District Court for the District of Utah, sitting by designation.

courts. 28 U.S.C. § 1330. Under the FSIA, foreign sovereigns are generally immune from jurisdiction, except for a few carefully delineated exceptions. One such exception is for claims arising out of acts of state-sponsored terrorism. See id. at § 1605A.

Four groups of individuals—the Bennett, Greenbaum, Acosta and Heiser creditors—hold separate judgments obtained in U.S. courts against the Republic of Iran, based on various terrorist attacks that occurred between 1990 and 2002. The Bennett creditors are owed almost $13 million in damages for Iran’s role in the 2002 bombing of a cafeteria at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. The Greenbaum creditors are owed almost $20 million for a 2001 bombing of a Jerusalem restaurant. The Acosta creditors are owed over $350 million for Iran’s part in a 1990 mass shooting. And, finally, the Heiser creditors are owed over $590 million for the 1996 bombing of the Khobar Towers in Saudi Arabia. All judgments were by default, but no one disputes that they are valid and that all four sets of creditors are owed money by Iran.

However, winning a money judgment against a foreign state isn’t the end of the story, because sovereign immunity separately protects the assets of a foreign sovereign from attachment. For years, the state-sponsored terrorism exception to the FSIA created an anomaly—it abrogated a foreign sovereign’s immunity from judgment, but not its immunity from collection. Terrorism victims therefore had a right without a meaningful remedy.

Congress subsequently enacted two statutes closing this loophole: section 201(a) of the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act (TRIA) and 28 U.S.C. § 1610(g). Section 201 was enacted to “deal comprehensively with the problem of enforcement of judgments rendered on behalf of victims of terrorism . . . by enabling them to satisfy such judgments through the attachment of blocked assets of terrorist parties.” H.R. Rep. No. 107-779, at 27 (2002) (Conf. Rep). “Blocked assets” are those that have been seized or frozen by the federal government. The TRIA provides that “the blocked assets of [a] terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution.” Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-297, §201(a), 116 Stat. 2322, 2337 (codified at 28 U.S.C. §1610 Note “Satisfaction of Judgments from Blocked Assets of Terrorists, Terrorist Organizations, and State Sponsors of Terrorism”).

Section 1610(g), enacted in 2008 as an amendment to the FSIA, extended the TRIA’s abrogation of asset immunity to funds that were not blocked. It provides that “the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under [this statute], and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, including property that is a separate juridical entity or is an interest held directly or indirectly in a separate juridical entity, is subject to attachment in aid of execution . . . upon that judgment as provided in this section.” 28 U.S.C. §1610(g).

These two statutes give creditors a theoretical avenue to collect on the judgments they’ve obtained. But, of course, they have to find the money first—and Iranian assets within the United States are notoriously hard to come by. An opportunity arose in 2007, when the Department of Treasury issued a blocking order prohibiting certain Iranian assets in the United States from being transferred back to Iran. That blocking order was based on Iran’s illicit nuclear program, not its state-sponsored terrorism. Nonetheless, it meant that various financial institutions had money owed to Iran sitting in accounts within the United States. The creditors here saw a rare chance to collect on their judgments and filed a complaint seeking access to $17.6 million in blocked assets held by Visa and Franklin¹ but owed to Bank Melli—Iran’s national bank. Fearing they might be liable to Bank Melli if they simply handed the money over to the creditors, Visa and Franklin responded by filing a third-party complaint to interplead Bank Melli and obtain final resolution of who was entitled to the funds. Visa and Franklin deposited the funds into the district court’s registry. Bank Melli made an appearance and moved to dismiss. The district court denied that motion but certified its order for interlocutory appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). We review de novo. See Colony Cove Props., LLC v. City of Carson, 640 F.3d 948, 955 (9th Cir. 2011).

II. Discussion

Bank Melli makes four distinct arguments as to why the creditors shouldn’t be able to collect from the funds held by Visa and Franklin. First, it argues that the assets are protected by sovereign immunity notwithstanding the TRIA and section 1610(g), because those statutes waive sovereign immunity only for the “terrorist party”—Iran—and Bank Melli is a separate juridical entity from Iran. Second, it asserts that Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19 requires dismissal of this entire action, because Bank Melli is an indispensable party that cannot be joined. Third, it argues that applying the TRIA and section 1610(g) to the judgments at issue here would be impermissibly retroactive, because the creditors obtained their judgments against Iran before the statutes’ enactment. And, finally, Bank Melli claims that the frozen assets aren't subject to the TRIA or section 1610(g) because those statutes extend only to assets "owned" by the foreign entity. Because the assets here are technically in the possession of Visa and Franklin, Bank Melli argues that they aren't yet "owned" by Bank Melli.

¹ Visa allegedly owes Bank Melli the money for the bank’s facilitation of Visa cards in Iran. When the blocking order was issued, Visa invested the assets owed to Bank Melli in a mutual fund held by Franklin, an investment company.

1. Foreign Sovereign Immunity

Bank Melli argues that the TRIA and section 1610(g) do not abrogate the asset immunity of all of a terrorist state's instrumentalities, only those that are alter egos of the state. For this proposition, Bank Melli relies principally on the Supreme Court's holding in First National City Bank v. Banco Para El Comercio Exterior de Cuba ("Bancec"), that "government instrumentalities established as juridical entities distinct and independent from their sovereign should normally be treated as such." 462 U.S. 611, 626-627 (1983). Under Bancec, the only conditions under which an instrumentality may be equated with the sovereign are (1) when it is "so extensively controlled by its owner that a relationship of principal and agent is created" or (2) when failure to regard them as equivalent "would work fraud or injustice." Id. at 629 (internal quotation marks omitted). Bank Melli contends that the TRIA and section 1610(g) incorporate Bancec's distinction between instrumentalities that are separate juridical entities and those that are alter egos, and abrogates immunity only as to those instrumentalities that, unlike Bank Melli, fall within Bancec's two exceptions.

We cannot reconcile Bank Melli's argument with the plain text of either statute. Section 201(a) of the TRIA specifically states that "the blocked assets of [a] terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution." §201(a) (emphasis added). Bank Melli argues that the parenthetical phrase is merely illustrative and does not purport to expand the meaning of “terrorist party” beyond Bancec. But we must assume Congress meant what it said when it used the term “any agency or instrumentality.” See United States v. Gonzales, 520 U.S. 1, 5 (1997). “Read naturally, the word ‘any’ has an expansive meaning, that is, ‘one or some indiscriminately of whatever kind.’” Id. (quoting Webster’s Third New International Dictionary 97 (1976)). Because “Congress did not add any language limiting the breadth of that word,” we must read the statute as referring to all instrumentalities. Id.

Furthermore, Bank Melli’s interpretation “flouts the rule that a statute should be construed so that effect is given to all its provisions, [and] no part will be inoperative or superfluous.” Clark v. Rameker, 134 S. Ct. 2242, 2248 (2014) (internal quotation marks omitted). Because an alter ego under Bancec is the terrorist party, there would be no need for Congress to separately provide for attachment against instrumentalities unless it sought to extend coverage to those instrumentalities that cannot be equated with the terrorist party itself.

We therefore agree with the Second Circuit that it is “clear beyond cavil that Section 201(a) of the TRIA provides courts with subject matter jurisdiction over post-judgment execution and attachment proceedings against property held in the hands of an instrumentality of the judgment-debtor, even if the instrumentality is not itself named in the judgment.” Weinstein v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 609 F.3d 43, 50 (2d Cir. 2010).

Congress spoke even more clearly in section 1610(g). Section 1610(g) allows attachment against property held by an instrumentality “that is a separate juridical entity,” “regardless of” the five factors that several courts—including ours—have considered when deciding whether an instrumentality is an alter ego under Bancec. See Flatow v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 308 F.3d 1065, 1071-1072 & n.9 (9th Cir. 2002). By specifically referencing—and disavowing—Bancec’s test, section 1610(g) makes unmistakably clear that whether or not an instrumentality is an alter ego is irrelevant to determining whether its assets are attachable.

Bank Melli argues that section 1610(g) doesn’t permit attachment because the 1955 Treaty of Amity between the U.S. and Iran requires that Iranian companies “have their juridical status recognized,” prohibits “unreasonable or discriminatory measures” against them and requires that their property be protected in accordance with international law. Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations and Consular Rights Between the United States of America and Iran, Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899, 902-903. But we cannot read a 60-year-old treaty provision as barring application of the plain text of a later-enacted federal law. See Breard v. Greene, 523 U.S. 371, 376 (1998) (per curiam). In any event, there’s nothing unreasonable, discriminatory or in violation of international law about waiving sovereign immunity for terrorism-based judgments. Bank Melli’s assets aren’t subject to attachment because it’s an Iranian company, but because it’s an instrumentality of a state that has sponsored terrorism.

Finally, Bank Melli reads section 1610(g)—which allows attachment in aid of execution upon judgments “as provided in this section”—to mean that attachment immunity is abrogated only if some other provision of section 1610 independently authorizes the attachment. But the other provisions of section 1610 that abrogate attachment immunity already apply to instrumentalities with separate juridical status. See 28 U.S.C. §1610(a) (abrogating attachment immunity of property of a foreign state when the property is “used for commercial activity in the United States”); id. (defining “foreign state” by reference to section 1603(a), which states that a “foreign state” includes an instrumentality “which is a separate legal person”); id. at §1610(b) (abrogating attachment immunity of an instrumentality “engaged in commercial activity in the United States”). And the plain text of section 1610(g) requires only that the foreign state be subject to a section 1605A judgment before the property of an instrumentality becomes available for collection. Id. at §1610(g) (subjecting to attachment “the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under section 1605A, and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state” (emphasis added)). Thus, reading section 1610(g) to require attachment immunity to be grounded in some other subsection of section 1610 would render section 1610(g) a nullity.

In short, both the TRIA and section 1610(g) provide independently sufficient grounds for abrogating Bank Mellé’s asset immunity for terrorism-based judgments.

2. Rule 19

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19 requires that a person be joined if he “claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that disposing of the action in the person’s absence may . . . impair or impede the person’s ability to protect the interest[] or . . . leave an existing party subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of the interest.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a). “If a person who is required to be joined if feasible cannot be joined, the court must determine whether, in equity and good conscience, the action should proceed among the existing parties or should be dismissed.” Id. at 19(b).

Bank Melli argues that this case must be dismissed because it is an indispensable party to the lawsuit that cannot be joined, and the action cannot “in equity and good conscience” proceed without it. According to Bank Melli, the case is controlled by the Supreme Court’s holding in Republic of Philippines v. Pimentel, that when “sovereign immunity is asserted, and the claims of the sovereign are not frivolous, dismissal of the action must be ordered where there is a potential for injury to the interests of the absent sovereign.” 553 U.S. 851, 867 (2008).

Pimentel is inapposite. In Pimentel, the judgment at issue wasn’t against the sovereign—the Republic of Philippines—but rather against the estate of its former dictator, Ferdinand Marcos. The Philippines asserted a right to certain of Marcos’s assets being held in the United States, out of which various creditors were trying to satisfy their judgments against Marcos. No one disputed that the Philippines was a required party, because—as a type of creditor itself—it clearly had a legal interest in how the funds were disposed of. Nor was there a dispute that the Philippines was sovereignly immune and therefore couldn’t be joined.

Here, by contrast, the sovereign is a judgment debtor, not a creditor. Iran has already had a full and fair opportunity to assert its interests in court. It is undisputed that Iran owes money to the creditors and that the money held by Visa and Franklin is owed to Iran. Iran, therefore, has no further interests to assert. Nor does Bank Melli have an independent interest to assert: Because its attachment immunity with respect to the funds held by Visa and Franklin is abrogated by the TRIA and section 1610(g), Bank Melli is Iran for the limited purposes of this interpleader action. This is solely a collection proceeding, and a judgment debtor isn’t generally considered an indispensable party to an action to enforce its debts. See Restatement (Second) of Judgments §8 (1982) (suggesting courts may enforce attachment of property absent the judgment debtor because he “may make an appearance to contest the court’s jurisdiction over the property without thereby submitting to the jurisdiction of the court”); cf. Cal. Civ. Proc. Code §708.220 (“judgment debtor . . . [is] not an indispensable party” to an enforcement proceeding). Therefore, none of Rule 19(a)’s prerequisites for dismissal has been met: The court can “accord complete relief among existing parties”; Bank Melli’s ability to protect its interests isn’t impaired; and there’s no “substantial risk of an existing party incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

Even if that were not so, Rule 19(a) is inapposite because Bank Melli can be joined in this action. Unlike the Philippines in Pimentel, Bank Melli is not protected by sovereign immunity in this proceeding, because, as discussed above, Congress has abrogated the immunity of instrumentalities of terrorist parties in collection actions.

Finally, to hold, as Bank Melli urges, that Rule 19 requires dismissal in this case would effectively eviscerate section 201 of the TRIA and section 1610(g). A collection action against a state inherently involves attempting to obtain funds owned by an entity capable of asserting sovereign immunity. If dismissal is required every time such an entity sets forth a “non-frivolous” argument as to why it shouldn’t have to pay, collection will be impossible as a practical matter. Nothing in Pimentel or Rule 19 dictates such an absurd result.

3. Retroactivity

Bank Melli next argues that the creditors cannot use the TRIA and section 1610(g) to collect on their judgments because those judgments predated the enactment of the two collection statutes. When, as here, Congress has not explicitly provided for a statute's retroactive effect, we must ask whether retroactive application "would impair rights a party possessed when he acted, increase a party's liability for past conduct, or impose new duties with respect to transactions already completed." Landgraf v. USI Film Prods., 511 U.S. 244, 280 (1994). Bank Melli argues that if the TRIA and section 1610(g) permit attachment of its assets, it "would go from having no liability for [conduct predating the statutes'] enactment to being liable for the entirety of the resulting judgments."

But the TRIA and section 1610(g) do not impose retroactive liability on Iran—they merely provide a means of collection for judgments where liability has already been established. Iran was liable for its terrorism-related conduct long before the TRIA and section 1610(g) were enacted. Iran's liability results from the former 28 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(7) (now section 1605A), which permitted U.S. citizen terrorism victims to bring suit against Iran in federal court. That statute was in force at the time of Iran's unlawful conduct. The TRIA and section 1610(g) do not attach any additional penalty to that conduct—they only create an avenue for creditors to obtain money they are already owed.

Bank Melli's real argument, therefore, must be that, even though Iran knew its conduct was unlawful and subject to liability in U.S. courts at the time it sponsored the relevant terrorist attacks, it did not know that victims would have the precise avenue for collection they now have. That hardly implicates the central concern of Landgraf: that the conduct a defendant engaged in was innocent at the time it occurred. Here, Iran knew it was violating the law and that it could be liable; it just believed that the procedures that existed when it acted would be insufficient to permit victims to collect on their judgments. There is no permissible reliance interest in the inadequacy of enforcement procedures. Iran assumed the risk that the money it owed in damages based on its sponsorship of terrorism would eventually be collected upon. Indeed, it's clear that the TRIA and section 1610(g) were designed precisely to provide an avenue to recovery for existing claimants with judgments against terrorist states. See Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 807 F. Supp. 2d 9, 26 (D.D.C. 2011). To say that all terrorist attacks prior to the enactment of the collection statutes cannot result in collectible judgments finds no basis in the Supreme Court's retroactivity cases and runs counter to Congress's clear intent.

4. Ownership of the Assets

Bank Melli argues that the TRIA and section 1610(g) apply only to assets "owned" by Bank Melli and—while it concedes it has a 100% beneficial interest in the assets held by Visa and Franklin—it claims it doesn't "own" them yet because the funds have been blocked.

But there's more to ownership than physical possession. The question of how to determine the funds' ownership is controlled by our holding in Peterson v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 627 F.3d 1117, 1130 (9th Cir. 2010). There, we noted that "[e]nforcement proceedings in federal district court are governed by the law of the state in which the court sits" unless a federal statute dictates otherwise. Id. We held that the "FSIA does not provide methods for the enforcement of judgments against foreign states, only that those judgments may not be enforced by resort to immune property." We therefore concluded that "California law on the enforcement of judgments applies." Id. Finally, we noted that "California enforcement law authorizes a court to ‘order the judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor . . . all or part of a right to payment due or to become due, whether or not the right is conditioned on future developments.’” Id. at 1130-1131 (quoting Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 708.510(a)) (emphasis added).

Those holdings collectively dispose of Bank Melli’s argument here. Because the FSIA doesn’t provide a method for enforcement, California law applies to this proceeding and, under California law, money “owed to” Bank Melli may be assigned to judgment creditors. The fact that Bank Melli is not yet in physical possession of the funds is immaterial.

* * * * *

Bank Melli has set forth numerous creative arguments as to why it shouldn’t be liable for Iran’s debt. But this is an arena in which Congress has spoken with unmistakable clarity. Section 201 of the TRIA and 28 U.S.C. § 1610(g) permit victims of terrorism to collect money they’re owed from instrumentalities of the state that sponsored the attacks. Nothing in the text of the FSIA, Rule 19 or the Supreme Court’s retroactivity cases compels a different result. The district court correctly denied Bank Melli’s motion to dismiss.

AFFIRMED.

APPENDIX F

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

DOCKET No. 3:11-CV-05807 (CRB)

MICHAEL BENNETT, et al.,
Plaintiffs,

v.

THE ISLAMIC REPUBLIC OF IRAN, et al.,
Defendants.

ORDER DENYING MOTION TO DISMISS

February 28, 2013

This case involves an Iranian instrumentality that seeks to avoid payment to American victims of Iranian terrorist acts. Specifically, four groups of judgment creditors (“Plaintiffs”) who hold judgments against Iran seek to recover assets (“the Blocked Assets”) held by Third Party Plaintiffs Visa and Franklin.¹ Those assets are owed to an Iranian instrumentality, Bank Melli, but have been blocked by executive orders issued by the President of the United States and blocking regulations issued by the United States Department of the Treasury, ¹ Visa is a financial services company that had a commercial relationship with Third Party Defendant Bank Melli. Compl. (dkt. 16) ¶16. A Franklin subsidiary distributed shares in the mutual fund in which the Blocked Assets were invested. Id. ¶18.

Office of Foreign Assets Control (“OFAC”). Visa and Franklin brought this interpleader action “to obtain a determination as to which [of the groups of judgment creditors], if any, has priority with respect to those assets to satisfy their judgments or their claims.” Compl. ¶4. Bank Melli has appeared in the case, and now moves to dismiss it in its entirety. See generally MTD (dkt. 112).

I. BACKGROUND

A. Bank Melli and the Blocked Assets

Bank Melli is Iran’s largest financial institution. MTD at 2. Its stock is wholly owned by the Iranian government. Id. The Blocked Assets at issue in this case are “funds due and owing by contract to Bank Melli pursuant to a commercial relationship with [Visa].” Compl. ¶16. In 1984, the United States designated Iran a terrorist party pursuant to section 6(j) of the Export Administration Act of 1797, and, pursuant to the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, the President directed that “all property and interests in property in the United States of persons and entities listed in the order or subsequently listed are blocked and may not be transferred, paid, exported, withdrawn, or otherwise dealt in.” Id. ¶17. The United States added Bank Melli to the list, freezing its assets, in October 2007, upon finding that from 2002 to 2006, Bank Melli had “facilitated numerous purchases of sensitive materials for Iran’s nuclear and missile programs,” “provided a range of financial services on behalf of Iran’s nuclear and missile industries,” and “employed deceptive banking practices to obscure its involvement from the international banking system.” Id.; Fact Sheet: Designation of Iranian Entities and Individuals for Proliferation Activities and Support for Terrorism, U.S. Dep’t of the Treasury Press Ctr. (Oct. 25, 2007), <http://www.treasury.gov/press-center/press-releases/pages/hp644.aspx> (hereinafter “10/25/07 Fact Sheet”).

Visa and Franklin claim no ownership interest in the Blocked Assets and “only continue[] to hold them because, pursuant to OFAC regulations, the assets cannot be released to Bank Melli or to anyone else without a license from OFAC or an appropriate court order.” Compl. ¶18.²

B. Procedural History

Plaintiffs are four groups of individuals (the Bennett Plaintiffs, the Greenbaum Plaintiffs, the Acosta Plaintiffs, and the Heiser Plaintiffs) who obtained default judgments against the government of Iran. See MTD at 2. The Bennett Plaintiffs sued Iran over the July 31, 2002 bombing of a cafeteria at Hebrew University in Jerusalem. MTD at 3 n.2. On August 30, 2007, they obtained a default judgment of almost $13 million under 28 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(7). Id. The Greenbaum Plaintiffs sued Iran over the August 9, 2001 bombing of a Jerusalem restaurant. Id. On August 10, 2006, they obtained a default judgment of almost $20 million under 28 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(7). Id. The Acosta Plaintiffs sued Iran over the November 5, 1990 shooting of various individuals, including U.S. Postal Officer Carlos Acosta. Id. On August 26, 2008, they obtained a default judgment exceeding $350 million under 28 U.S.C. § 1605A. Id. The Heiser Plaintiffs sued Iran over the June 25, 1996 bombing of the Khobar Towers in Saudi Arabia. Id. On December 22, 2006, they obtained a default judgment of over $254 million under 28 U.S.C. § 1605(a)(7); on September 30, 2009, ² Bank Melli does not dispute this, arguing that “[i]f this Court rules in favor of Bank Melli, the assets will go back to Visa and Franklin.” Opp’n to Discharge Mot. (dkt. 119) at 2-3.

they obtained a further default judgment of almost $337 million under 28 U.S.C. §1605A. Id. Bank Melli is not named as a party to any of the judgments and is not alleged to have been involved in any of the events underlying them. Id. at 4.

On December 2, 2011, the Bennett Plaintiffs filed a complaint against Visa and Franklin, seeking to execute against the Blocked Assets in order to satisfy their judgment. Id. On February 3, 2012, Visa and Franklin filed their Third Party Complaint in the nature of an interpleader, naming as defendants Bank Melli and other third-party defendants with potential claims to the Blocked Assets. See generally Compl. Visa and Franklin subsequently deposited the assets into this Court's registry. See dkts. 88-89.

On April 26, 2012, the Clerk entered a default against Bank Melli. See dkt. 79. On June 12, 2012, however, Bank Melli entered its appearance, see dkt. 96, and on July 5, 2012, this Court entered a stipulated order vacating the default, see dkt. 109. Bank Melli then moved to dismiss the case. See generally MTD.

The Court discharged Visa and Franklin at the November 16, 2012 hearing, and heard preliminary argument on the merits of Bank Melli's motion to dismiss. The parties each filed supplemental briefs, see Bank Melli Br. (dkt. 124); Pls. Br. (dkt. 125), and then, on December 13, 2012, participated in a second and more fulsome hearing on the motion to dismiss. See Mins. (dkt. 127). The Court then took the motion under submission.

II. DISCUSSION

Bank Melli's motion makes four arguments for dismissal: (A) that under First National City Bank v. Banco Para El Comercio Exterior de Cuba, 462 U.S. 611 (1983) ("Bancec"), it cannot be held liable for Iran's debts;

(B) that the statutes on which Plaintiffs rely to pursue the Blocked Assets, the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002 (TRIA), Pub. L. No. 107-297, §201(a), 116 Stat. 2322, 2337 (hereinafter “TRIA”), and the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA), 28 U.S.C. §1610(g) (hereinafter “section 1610(g)”), do not apply retroactively; (C) that TRIA and section 1610(g) only apply where the assets at issue are “assets of” and “property of” Bank Melli, allegations that are missing here; and (D) that Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19 requires dismissal. See generally MTD. This Order addresses each argument in turn.

A. Bancec

Bank Melli argues first that it cannot be held liable for the debts of Iran, because, although it is an instrumentality of Iran, it is juridically distinct. See MTD at 6. No doubt, the Supreme Court held in Bancec, 462 U.S. at 626-627, that “government instrumentalities established as juridical entities distinct and independent from their sovereign should normally be treated as such.” In addition, the Treaty of Amity between the United States and Iran states that “[c]ompanies constituted under the applicable laws” of each country must “have their juridical status recognized within the territories of the other.” Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations, and Consular Rights, U.S.-Iran, Art. III ¶1, Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899.³

³ But see Weinstein v. Islamic Rep. of Iran, 609 F.3d 43, 53 (2d Cir. 2010), cert. denied, 133 S. Ct. 21 (June 25, 2012) (explaining that the Supreme Court found in Sumitomo Shoji America, Inc. v. Avagliano, 457 U.S. 176 (1982), that this language is found in a number of treaties, and was not designed to give separate juridical status to instrumentalities).

However, two statutes permit judgment creditors to execute on Blocked Assets in this context, abrogating Bancec as to terrorism-based judgments against foreign state sponsors of terrorism. Section 1610(g)⁴ states that “the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under section 1605A, and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, including property that is a separate juridical entity . . . is subject to attachment in aid of execution, and execution, upon that judgment.” TRIA⁵ similarly provides:

Notwithstanding any other provision of law . . . in every case in which a person has obtained a judgment against a terrorist party on a claim based upon an act of terrorism, or for which a terrorist party is not immune under section 1605(a)(7) of title 28 United States Code, the blocked assets of that terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution or attachment in aid of execution in order to satisfy such judgment.

Neither of these statutes is the least bit ambiguous—both allow for attaching the blocked assets of a terrorist instrumentality.⁶ The Court therefore agrees with the Second Circuit’s holding in Weinstein that the statutes’ plain language defeats Bank Melli’s argument. 609 F.3d at 49 (“If this did not constitute an independent grant of jurisdiction over the agencies and instrumentalities, the parenthetical would be a nullity.”).

⁴ Emphasis added.

⁵ Emphasis added.

⁶ Bank Melli makes various arguments for a strained interpretation of this language in which instrumentalities’ assets are not subject to attachment, including relying on cases decided before these statutes were enacted; the Court rejects such arguments as unpersuasive.

Incidentally, the Second Circuit went on to explain that its interpretation was also supported by a floor statement by one of TRIA’s sponsors.⁷ Id. at 50. Bank Melli mischaracterizes Weinstein as having “based its holding on” that legislative history—not so. See Reply (dkt. 117) at 6; Weinstein, 609 F.3d at 50 (“even if, contrary to fact, there were an ambiguity here, it would be resolved in plaintiff’s favor by the legislative history”). Bank Melli then makes much of the fact that Senator Harkin’s words “were never uttered on the Senate floor” but were added to the congressional record after the vote. See Reply at 6-7. As Plaintiffs note, “Senators can, and routinely do, revise and extend their on-floor remarks for inclusion in the Congressional Record.” Pls.’ Opp’n to MTD (dkt. 115) at 9 n.7. Regardless of the weight to which the floor statement is entitled, however, the plain language of the statutes is unambiguous and dispositive. The Court therefore rejects this argument for dismissal.

B. Retroactivity

Bank Melli next argues that, even if the statutes mean what the Court understands them to mean, they cannot be applied to this case without rendering them impermissibly retroactive. MTD at 15-17. A statute “is retroactive if it alters the legal consequences of acts completed before its effective date.” Chang v. United States, 327 F.3d 911, 920 (9th Cir. 2003) (citing Miller v. Florida, 482 U.S. 423, 430 (1987)). To determine whether a statute is retroactive, courts apply the two-part test set out in Landgraf v. USI Film Products, 511 U.S. 244, 280 (1994).

⁷ That statement included the language: “for purposes of enforcing a judgment against a terrorist state, title II does not recognize any juridical distinction between a terrorist state and its agencies or instrumentalities.” 148 Cong. Rec. S11524-01 (daily ed. Nov. 19, 2002) (statement of Sen. Harkin).

“First, courts must ‘determine whether Congress has expressly prescribed the statute’s proper reach,’” in which case the language used by Congress controls. See Ctr. For Biological Diversity v. U.S. Dep’t of Agric., 626 F.3d 1113, 1117 (9th Cir. 2010) (quoting Landgraf, 511 U.S. at 280). The Court rejects Plaintiffs’ argument that TRIA’s plain language expresses Congress’ intent that it apply retroactively. See Pls. Br. at 4. Plaintiffs note that Section 201 of TRIA states that it applies “in every case” in which a person “has obtained a judgment” against a terrorist party . . . and renders the terrorist party’s blocked assets subject to execution to the extent of any compensatory damages for which the terrorist party “has been adjudged liable.” Id. While that language might support Plaintiffs’ interpretation, it falls quite short of an “‘unambiguous directive’ or ‘express command’ that the statute . . . be applied retroactively.” See Ctr. for Biological Diversity, 626 F.3d at 1118 (quoting Martin v. Hadix, 527 U.S. 343, 354 (1999)).

Second, under Landgraf, “absent such express language, courts must ‘determine whether the new statute would have retroactive effect, i.e., whether it would impair rights a party possessed when he acted, increase a party’s liability for past conduct, or impose new duties with respect to transactions already completed.’” Id. at 1117 (quoting Landgraf, 511 U.S. at 280). If a statute would operate retroactively at step two, it does not apply. Id. Bank Melli states, and Plaintiffs do not dispute, that at the time of the conduct underlying Plaintiffs’ judgments, Bank Melli’s assets could not have been seized to satisfy Iranian government debts. MTD at 15. Accordingly, Bank Melli contends, seizing Bank Melli’s assets now to satisfy a judgment based on “conduct that occurred before Congress enacted [the laws] would clearly ‘increase [Bank Melli’s] liability for past conduct.’” Id. at 16. Although this argument holds some initial appeal, the Court finds that it falters under close scrutiny, for two alternative reasons.

1. Bank Melli’s Conduct Post-TRIA

Bank Melli’s argument depends upon a simplified narrative in which the only significant events, for example, in the case of the Bennett Plaintiffs, are: (1) the bombing at Hebrew University, in July 2002; (2) TRIA’s enactment, in November 2002; and (3) the Bennett Plaintiffs’ default judgment against Iran, in August 2007. Such a narrative enables Bank Melli to argue that, as a statute’s retroactivity turns on “when the primary conduct at issue in the suit took place,” the primary conduct at issue here is the bombing. See MTD at 16 (citing Scott v. Boos, 215 F.3d 940, 949 (9th Cir. 2000)). But Bank Melli’s narrative omits an additional event of great significance: the freezing of Bank Melli’s assets in October 2007 in light of OFAC’s findings that, from 2002 to 2006, “Bank Melli . . . provided a range of financial services on behalf of Iran’s nuclear and missile industries.” See 10/25/07 Fact Sheet. Plaintiffs therefore argue that, because “the illicit conduct underlying the blocking of Bank Melli’s property and subjecting such property to execution in satisfaction of judgments against Iran[] occurred years after TRIA’s enactment,” Bank Melli should have understood that “its nefarious conduct could and would result in its U.S. property being blocked and executed against pursuant to TRIA.” Pls.’ Opp’n to MTD at 16.

Bank Melli responds that “later secondary conduct—even if wrongful—does not eliminate a statute’s retroactive effect.” Bank Melli Br. at 2. In support of this as-sersion, Bank Melli relies on three cases, Johnson v. United States, 529 U.S. 694 (2000), Vartelas v. Holder, 132 S. Ct. 1479 (2012), and Tyson v. Holder, 670 F.3d 1015 (9th Cir. 2012). See Reply at 11; Bank Melli Br. at 2-3. None apply here.

In Johnson, 529 U.S. at 697-698, Congress had enacted a statute authorizing a court to impose an additional term of supervised release if a defendant violated conditions of his initial release; the defendant had been convicted before Congress enacted the statute, but he violated the conditions of his release after Congress enacted the statute. Johnson appealed his sentence, arguing that applying the new statute to him violated the Ex Post Facto Clause. Id. at 698. The Sixth Circuit found that the application of the statute was not retroactive, because it punished Johnson's violations of the conditions of supervised release, which occurred after the statute was amended. Id. at 698-699. The Supreme Court disagreed, concluding that the "postrevocation penalties relate to the original offense," and that "to sentence Johnson to a further term of supervised release under [the statute] would be to apply this section retroactively." Id. at 701.

Importantly, the Court's conclusion in Johnson was driven by "the serious constitutional questions that would be raised by construing revocation and reimprisonment as punishment for the violation of the conditions of supervised release." Id. at 700. The Court noted that conduct violating supervised release need not be criminal and need only be found by a judge under a preponderance of the evidence standard; in addition, where the conduct is criminal, it could form the basis for a separate prosecution, which would trigger double jeopardy concerns. Id. It is for those reasons that the Court "attribute[d] postrevocation penalties to the original conviction.” Id. at 701. None of those reasons are present here: proof beyond a reasonable doubt, double jeopardy, and the myriad of weighty constitutional issues that surround criminal sentencing have no bearing on this civil matter.

Vartelas and Tyson, though not criminal cases, are similarly inapposite.⁸

In Vartelas, 132 S. Ct. at 1485, a legal permanent resident had pled guilty to conspiracy to make or possess counterfeit securities in 1994, for which he received a short sentence. He traveled regularly thereafter to visit his aging parents in Greece, but in 2003, he was stopped upon his return and an immigration officer classified him as an alien seeking admission under the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act (IIRIRA), a statute enacted in 1996. Id. at 1483, 1485. The Second Circuit rejected Vartelas’s argument that IIRIRA operated prospectively. Id. at 1486. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that neither Vartelas’s sentence nor the immigration law in effect in 1994 prevented Vartelas from visiting his parents in Greece, and so applying IIRIRA to him attached “‘a new disability’ to conduct over and done well before the provision’s enactment.” Id. at 1487. As in Johnson, the Court’s conclusion was based on the principle that it was unfair to attach additional penalties to the original crime. Rejecting the government’s argument that “the relevant event” was Vartelas’s “post-IIRIRA act of returning to the United States,” id. at 1488, the Court held that Vartelas’s “past misconduct . . . not present travel, is the wrongful activity Congress targeted,” id. at 1489.

⁸ The case law has long recognized a relationship between criminal and immigration cases. See Bridges v. Wixon, 326 U.S. 135, 154 (1945) (“Though deportation is not technically a criminal proceeding, it visits a great hardship on the individual and deprives him of the right to stay and live and work in this land of freedom. That deportation is a penalty—at times a most serious one—cannot be doubted.”).

In so holding, the Court drew a sharp distinction between cases in which the subsequent act was illegal and/or dangerous, and those in which the subsequent act was “innocent.” See id. at 1489-1490. Thus it distinguished Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) prosecutions that encompassed pre-enactment conduct, because “those prosecutions depended on criminal activity . . . occurring after the provision’s effective date,” as opposed to IIRIRA, which does not. Id. at 1489. And it distinguished Fernandez-Vargas v. Gonzales, 548 U.S. 30 (2006), in which the Court held that an IIRIRA provision, providing that an alien who re-enters the country after having been removed can be removed again under the same removal order, could be applied to an alien who returned illegally before IIRIRA’s enactment. Id. The Court explained that it was an “alien’s choice to continue his illegal presence . . . after the effective date of the new la[w],” and “not a past act that he is helpless to undo” that subjected him to the new law. Id. (quoting Fernandez-Vargas, 548 U.S. at 44). The Court contrasted the alien in Fernandez-Vargas with Vartelas, whom it “several times stressed, engaged in no criminal activity after IIRIRA’s passage.” Id. (emphasis added). The Court likewise distinguished cases dealing with laws that prevent felons from possessing firearms, laws that prevent persons convicted of sex crimes against minors from working in jobs involving contact with minors, and laws that prevent a person who has been adjudicated as mentally defective from possessing guns; those laws “target a present danger,” while “[t]he act of flying to Greece” did not make Vartelas “hazardous.” Id.; id. at n.7. Deeming Vartelas’s travel and return “innocent” acts that “involved no criminal infraction,” the Court concluded that applying IIRIRA to bar Vartelas from traveling abroad “rested not on any continuing criminal activity, but on a single crime committed years before IIRIRA’s enactment.” Id. at 1490. Bank Melli cannot argue that its assistance in Iran’s nuclear proliferation efforts is either an “innocent act,” akin to visiting one’s elderly parents in Greece, or something Bank Melli was “helpless to undo.” The Court’s concerns in Vartelas are absent here.

Moreover, Tyson is analogous to Vartelas. In Tyson, 670 F.3d at 1017, a lawful permanent resident was convicted in 1980 of importing heroin, following her consent to a bench trial with stipulated facts and testimony. Twenty-four years later, she left the United States and was denied re-entry. Id. She sought a waiver of inadmissibility under former §212(c), which had been repealed in 1996. Id. In so doing, she relied on INS v. St. Cyr., 533 U.S. 289 (2001), in which the Supreme Court had held that §212(c) relief remained available to aliens who entered plea bargains with the expectation that they would remain eligible for a waiver. Id. The Ninth Circuit concluded that Tyson was entitled to invoke St. Cyr. Id. at 1020. The court explained that applying the repeal of §212(c) to Tyson would impose “an impermissible retroactive effect on aliens . . . who in reliance on the possibility of discretionary relief, agreed to a stipulated facts trial.” Id. at 1022.

Tyson turned on a lawful permanent resident’s settled expectations about the impact of a criminal conviction. See id. at 1021-1022. In light of St. Cyr., it is no surprise that the court found it unfair to prevent Tyson from applying for a §212(c) waiver. And, consistent with Var-telas, it is no surprise that the court would not wish to add to the consequences of Tyson's original conviction by denying her re-entry based only on the innocuous act of travel. See id. at 1021 (identifying the only two consequences of Tyson's stipulated facts trial in 1980).

All three of Bank Melli's cases therefore involve, and reject, attempts to attach extra penalties to an individual's original criminal conviction based on subsequent innocuous or non-criminal behavior. That is not this case. This case involves, instead: (1) terrorist act(s) by the government of Iran; (2) the enactment of TRIA, which did not make Bank Melli's assets subject to attachment for Iranian debts, but should have put Bank Melli on notice of that possibility; and (3) default judgment(s) against Iran; followed by (4) Bank Melli's support for Iran's nuclear and missile industries; and (5) this government's resulting decision to freeze Bank Melli's assets. There is no original criminal conviction against Bank Melli. Bank Melli's assets are subject to attachment in this case because of Bank Melli's own actions, post-TRIA, in supporting Iran's nuclear and missile industries. Those actions are not innocuous or harmless. Accordingly, the Court rejects Bank Melli's retroactivity argument.

2. Post-Judgment Enforcement Action

In the alternative, Bank Melli's retroactivity argument fails because Bank Melli misconstrues what TRIA does. Bank Melli argues that Plaintiffs seek to use TRIA to make it liable for something for which it was not liable pre-TRIA. MTD at 15. In both motion hearings and in its supplemental briefing, Bank Melli has maintained that liability and collectability are interchangeable concepts; that is, that collecting money from Bank Melli in connection with Iran's actions is the equivalent of holding Bank

Melli liable for Iran's actions. See, e.g., Bank Melli Br. at 3-4 (citing snippets from various cases using terms like "liability for a money judgment"). The Court disagrees. This case is not about holding Bank Melli liable for Iran's actions, it is simply about collecting money from Iran, wherever that money can be found.⁹

Neither TRIA nor section 1610(g) speak of shifting liability from a terrorist party to its instrumentality. Both speak of attaching an instrumentality's assets in aid of executing a judgment against a terrorist party. See section 1610(g) (stating that "the property of an . . . instrumentality of such a state . . . is subject to attachment in aid of execution, and execution, upon that judgment"); TRIA (stating that "(. . . the blocked assets of any . . . instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution or attachment in aid of execution in order to satisfy such judgment"). These laws "merely provide[] an exception to foreign sovereign immunity from execution for assets of . . . instrumentalities of foreign sovereign terrorist parties in the post-judgment context of execution and attachment proceedings to satisfy judgments against such foreign sovereign terrorist parties 'for which there was original jurisdiction under the FSIA.'" Pls.' Opp'n to MTD at 13 (citing Bennett, et al., v. Islamic Rep. of Iran, et al., No. 11-80065, 2011 WL 3157089, at *5 (N.D. Cal. July 26, 2011)).

⁹ By way of analogy, it is as if, after Plaintiffs had obtained their default judgments against Iran, Iran had gone out and purchased Bank Melli. Like shares in Bank Melli, the law recognizes the Blocked Assets as assets of Iran, to which Iran's judgment creditors are entitled. Cf. Pls. Br. at 3-4 ("Iran's liability for the amounts owed under the Judgments remains the same; the scope of the assets subject to execution in satisfaction of the Judgments, however, has increased.").

Bank Melli’s argument to the contrary presupposes that Bancec, 462 U.S. at 626-627, which held that “government instrumentalities established as juridical entities distinct and independent from their sovereign should normally be treated as such,” stands for an immutable principle of law. But Congress created the presumption of separateness in the first place, see Bancec, 462 U.S. at 627 (in enacting FSIA, “Congress clearly expressed its intention that duly created instrumentalities of a foreign state are to be accorded a presumption of independent status”), and it had the power to revoke that presumption. As discussed above, Congress revoked that presumption in this context through TRIA and section 1610(g). See Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Rep. of Iran, 807 F. Supp. 2d 9, 15 (D.D.C. 2011) (section 1610(g) abrogates Bancec in the context of terrorism-related judgments); Weinstein, 609 F.3d at 51 (TRIA overrides presumption of separateness in Bancec).

Thus in Weinstein, 609 F.3d at 50, where (as here) plaintiffs sought to recover assets from Bank Melli to satisfy a judgment against Iran, the Second Circuit rejected Bank Melli’s argument¹⁰ that the court should “read the TRIA as applying, prospectively, only to judgments rendered final after the TRIA’s enactment, and thus not to” judgments pre-dating TRIA. The Second Circuit explained that “[t]he effect of the TRIA . . . was simply to render a judgment more readily enforceable against a related third party. The judgment itself was in no way tampered with.” Id. at 51. Here, too, the Court is not altering the judgment against Iran in order to hold Bank Melli liable; it is allowing Iran’s judgment creditors to recover from Iran’s instrumentality because that instrumentality is no longer presumed to be separate from Iran.¹¹ The Court therefore also rejects Bank Melli’s retroactivity argument because TRIA relates to collectability, not liability.

¹⁰ As counsel for Bank Melli candidly conceded at the motion hearing, Bank Melli did not make a retroactivity argument in Weinstein, and so the Second Circuit did not squarely address that issue. Nonetheless, Bank Melli argued there that TRIA violated the separation of powers doctrine, and, in connection with that argument, that TRIA should only be applied prospectively. Id.

C. “Assets of” Bank Melli

Bank Melli also urges dismissal because, it argues, it does not actually own the Blocked Assets. See MTD at 18-20. For TRIA or section 1610(g) to apply, the funds at issue must be “assets of” or “property of” Bank Melli. See TRIA; section 1610(g)(1); Calderon-Cardona v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A., 867 F. Supp. 2d 389, 400 (S.D.N.Y. 2011) (“For the accounts at respondent banks to be attachable, then, North Korea or one of its agencies or instrumentalities must actually own it.”). In the Complaint, however, Plaintiffs allege only that the Blocked Assets are “due and owing by contract to Bank Melli,” not that Bank Melli “owns” them. See Compl. ¶16.

No matter. As Plaintiffs note in their briefing, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 69 provides that enforcement proceedings in federal courts are governed by the law of the state in which the Court sits, although a federal statute governs if applicable. Pls.’ Opp’n to MTD at 19; Fed. R. Civ. P. 69(a)(1). The Ninth Circuit explained in Peterson, 627 F.3d at 1130, that “[t]he FSIA does not provide methods for the enforcement of judgments against foreign states, only that those judgments may not be enforced by resort to immune property Therefore, California law on the enforcement of judgments applies to this suit insofar as it does not conflict with the FSIA.”¹²

¹¹ That this case is not about Bank Melli’s liability is further supported by the case law on joinder (discussed below). Where plaintiffs have secured default judgments against Iran, its instrumentalities need not even be served with post-judgment motions, which suggests that collecting assets from those instrumentalities is not about the instrumentalities’ liability. See Peterson v. Islamic Rep. of Iran, 627 F.3d 1117, 1130 (9th Cir. 2010) (“[s]ervice of post-judgment motions is not required”); Estate of Heiser, 807 F. Supp. 2d at 23 (“Congress did not [intend] to require service of garnishment writs on agencies or instrumentalities of foreign states responsible for acts of state-sponsored terrorism”).

California law treats the Blocked Assets as subject to execution. In California, all property of a judgment debtor, regardless of the type of interest, is subject to enforcement of a money judgment. See Cal. Civ. Proc. Code §§680.310 (“‘Property’ includes real and personal property and any interest therein.”), 695.010(a) (“Except as otherwise provided by law, all property of the judgment debtor is subject to enforcement of a money judgment.”), 699.710 (all property subject to enforcement of money judgment also subject to levy). This includes property of a judgment debtor that is held by a third party. See id. at § 708.210 (“If a third person has possession or control of property in which the judgment debtor has an interest or is indebted to the judgment debtor, the judgment creditor may bring an action against the third person”). Thus, in Peterson, 627 F.3d at 1130-1131 (quoting Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 708.510(a)), the court noted that “California enforcement law authorizes a court to ‘order the judgment debtor to assign to the judgment creditor . . . all or part of a right to payment due or to become due, whether or not the right is conditioned on future developments.’”

¹² Neither party has argued that federal law conflicts with state law in this case, or preempts it, as some courts have concluded. See, e.g., Hausler v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, 845 F. Supp. 2d 553, 563 (S.D.N.Y. 2012) (“the use of state property law to dictate the range of assets that are executable under the TRIA would generate absurd results”); cf. Calderon-Cardona, 867 F. Supp. 2d at 399-405 (applying state law “because [TRIA] provides no guidance for determining which blocked assets are ‘of that terrorist party,’” but discussing federal law “for the sake of argument”). Bank Melli’s argument on this subject is based, instead, on language from a variety of cases, and from a couple of amicus briefs, supporting the uncontroversial point that having an interest in property is not necessarily the same thing as owning property. See MTD at 19-20. Nonetheless, the Court is aware of no federal law that would alter its conclusion. Certainly, Bank Melli does not cite to any authority, federal or otherwise, holding that a party’s 100% beneficial interest in an asset, or a vested right to receive a sum certain that has been reduced to cash, does not constitute an “asset of” that party. Moreover, the cases dealing with entitlement to mid-stream electronic fund transfers are distinguishable on their facts. See, e.g., Estate of Heiser v. Islamic Rep. of Iran, No. 00-2329, 01-2104, 2012 WL 3776705, at *16 (D.D.C. Aug. 31, 2012) (describing “Iran’s indefinite, ephemeral interest” in blocked EFTs).

Here, there is no dispute that Bank Melli has a 100% beneficial interest in the Blocked Assets, and that the Blocked Assets are already “due and owing” to Bank Melli from Visa. See Compl. ¶ 16. Those funds—in an amount certain—have been deposited into the Court’s registry. See dkts. 88-89. Visa has disclaimed any beneficial ownership interest in the Blocked Assets, explaining that it only continued to hold them because the assets were blocked. See Compl. ¶ 18; Pls.’ Opp’n to MTD at 21 (“[B]ut for the fact that such funds are blocked, Bank Melli would be entitled to payment of those funds today.”). Under such circumstances, the Court concludes that the Blocked Assets are “assets of” or “property of” Bank Melli. The Court therefore rejects this argument for dismissal.

D. Rule 19¹³

Finally, Bank Melli argues that it is a required party that cannot be joined due to its sovereign immunity. MTD at 20-22. Bank Melli's argument relies almost entirely on Republic of Philippines v. Pimentel, 553 U.S.

¹³ Rule 19 provides, in part:

(a) Persons Required to Be Joined if Feasible.

(1) Required Party. A person who is subject to service of process and whose joinder will not deprive the court of subject-matter jurisdiction must be joined as a party if:

(A) in that person's absence, the court cannot accord complete relief among existing parties; or

(B) that person claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that disposing of the action in the person's absence may:

(i) as a practical matter impair or impede the person's ability to protect the interest; or

(ii) leave an existing party subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of the interest

(b) When Joinder Is Not Feasible. If a person who is required to be joined if feasible cannot be joined, the court must determine whether, in equity and good conscience, the action should proceed among the existing parties or should be dismissed. The factors for the court to consider include:

(1) the extent to which a judgment rendered in the person's absence might prejudice that person or the existing parties;

(2) the extent to which any prejudice could be lessened or avoided by:

(A) protective provisions in the judgment;

(B) shaping the relief; or

(C) other measures;

(3) whether a judgment rendered in the person's absence could be adequate; and

(4) whether the plaintiff would have an adequate remedy if the action were dismissed for nonjoinder.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)-(b).

851 (2008). Pimentel, 553 U.S. at 854-858, involved an interpleader action in which human rights victims who had obtained a judgment against Ferdinand Marcos sought to attach property held by a bank. Two of the entities in the suit, the Republic of the Philippines and the Philippine Presidential Commission on Good Governance (“the Commission”), invoked sovereign immunity, and were dismissed; however, the district court allowed the action to proceed. Id. The Ninth Circuit held that dismissal of the interpleader suit was not necessary because, although the Philippines and the Commission were “necessary parties” under Rule 19, their claim had so little merit that the interpleader action could proceed without them. Id. at 860. The Supreme Court reversed, explaining that the Court of Appeals had not given the necessary weight to the absent entities’ assertion of sovereign immunity: “where sovereign immunity is asserted, and the claims of the sovereign are not frivolous, dismissal of the action must be ordered where there is a potential for injury to the interests of the absent sovereign.” Id. at 864-867. Bank Melli argues that, as in Pimentel, it is a foreign sovereign not amenable to suit, and so the Court must dismiss. See MTD at 21-22.

Bank Melli assumes that it is a required party. It is not. Bank Melli is a mere instrumentality of Iran, and as such its presence is not central to this case. That conclusion is supported by Estate of Heiser, 807 F. Supp. 2d at 12, in which victims of state-sponsored terrorism sought to direct Sprint to turn over funds owed to the Telecommunication Infrastructure Company of Iran (“TIC”), an instrumentality of Iran. Sprint argued that it should be permitted to interplead TIC into the proceeding. Id. at 23. The court explained that “Congress did not [intend] to require service of garnishment writs on agencies or instrumentalities of foreign states responsible for acts of state-sponsored terrorism” and that, accordingly, “TIC [was] not a necessary party to [the] action under applicable law.”¹⁴ Id.; cf. Peterson, 627 F.3d at 1130 (under FSIA, plaintiff need not serve post-judgment motions on foreign state). Here, the Blocked Assets are owed to an instrumentality of judgment debtor Iran; such property is therefore stripped of immunity and subject to execution as a matter of law. See TRIA; section 1610(g). Bank Melli has failed to demonstrate either that “in [its] absence, the court cannot accord complete relief among existing parties” or that “disposing of the action in [its] absence may (i) . . . impair or impede [its] ability to protect the interest; or (ii) leave an existing party subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations.” See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a).

This case is therefore distinguishable from Pimentel, where there was no dispute that the Philippines and the Commission were required parties. See 553 U.S. at 863 (“[t]he application of subdivision (a) of Rule 19 is not contested”). The dispute in Pimentel centered on Rule 19(b), “whether the action may proceed without the Republic and the Commission, given that the Rule requires them to be parties.” Id. at 864. Because this Court finds that Bank Melli is not a required party, it need not reach Rule 19(b), and the question of whether Bank Melli can be joined. The Court notes, however, that, unlike in Pimentel, 553 U.S. at 865, where “[i]mmunity . . . [was] uncontested,” here there are two applicable statutory exceptions to immunity, which alleviate any concerns about prejudice to Bank Melli or about the adequacy of a judgment rendered in Bank Melli's absence. See TRIA; section 1610(g); see also Weinstein, 609 F.3d at 50 (“[W]e find it clear beyond cavil that Section 201(a) of the TRIA provides courts with subject matter jurisdiction over post-judgment execution and attachment proceedings against property held in the hands of an instrumentality of the judgment-debtor, even if the instrumentality is not itself named in the judgment.”). Bank Melli's response, that the exceptions to immunity pertain to the property, and not to Bank Melli, see Bank Melli Br. at 7, only reinforces the Court's conclusion that the statutory scheme is not about Bank Melli's liability, but about Plaintiffs' ability to collect from Iran. This case could proceed without Bank Melli.

¹⁴ The court added that Sprint had also not established a risk of being subjected to double liability over the funds, but that was not the basis for its conclusion that TIC was not a necessary party. See id. at 23-24.

Because Bank Melli is not a required party that cannot be joined under Rule 19, the Court rejects this argument for dismissal as well.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court DENIES Bank Melli's Motion to Dismiss. The Court further finds that the standards of 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b) have been met,¹⁵ and CERTIFIES this Order for interlocutory appeal.

¹⁵ Specifically, the Court finds that the issues raised by Bank Melli in favor of dismissal are controlling issues of law, and could “materially affect the outcome of the litigation in the district court.” In re Cement Antitrust Litig., 673 F.2d 1020, 1026 (9th Cir. 1982). If Bank Melli is correct that Bancec applies, or that the statutes are impermissibly retroactive, or that Plaintiffs have not adequately alleged that the assets are Bank Melli's property, or that it is a required party that cannot be joined, Bank Melli is entitled to dismissal. Moreover, in light of the paucity of authority on these issues, particularly as to TRIA, there is substantial ground for difference of opinion. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b); Levine v. United Healthcare Corp., 285 F. Supp. 2d 552, 560 (N.J. 2003) (“[T]he issue on this motion is whether there

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: February 28, 2013

CHARLES R. BREYER
United States District Judge

is substantial ground for debate on this issue and this Court finds that the question involved here is admittedly complicated and sufficiently close that reasonable minds could disagree with this Court's conclusion."). Finally, "an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation," 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b), as it "would conserve judicial resources and spare the parties from possibly needless expense if it should turn out that this Court's rulings are reversed," APCC Servs. v. Sprint, 297 F. Supp. 2d 90, 1000 (D.D.C. 2003).

130a

APPENDIX G

ANNUAL REPORT OF BLOCKED PROPERTY

[C.A. E.R. 250-252]

TD F 90—22.50

Office of Foreign Assets Control

Department of the Treasury

Washington, D.C. 20220

The Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) requires an annual report of all property blocked or funds retained under OFAC Regulations found in Title 31 of the Code of Federal Regulations, Parts 500 through 599. This information is needed by the United States Government for planning purposes and to verify compliance with OFAC Regulations. The report is to be submitted annually by September 30 to the Compliance Programs Division, OFAC, Department of the Treasury, Washington, D.C. 20220.

General Instructions

Any person holding property blocked or funds retained under OFAC Regulations is required to submit a report on this form concerning such property. Reports filed in accordance with OFAC Regulations are regarded as containing commercial and financial information which is privileged and confidential. Requests to submit reports in alternative formats will be considered on a case-by-case basis. For additional copies of the form, as well as other information of interest to holders of blocked property, call OFAC's fax-on-demand service at (202) 622-0077.

Part A – U.S. Person Holding Property.

State reporter's corporate name and address and the name and telephone number of an individual corporate official to contact regarding this report.

Name: Visa International Service Association

Address: P.O. Box 8999

San Francisco, CA 94128

Individual to contact regarding this report:

Russell Schrader

Associate General Counsel

(650) 432-1167

Total number of accounts or items reported on Part B: 3

Complete the certification where applicable. The report is not valid without the certification.

I, Russell Schrader, certify that I am the Associate General Counsel – Global Enterprise Risk of the Visa International Service Association, that I am authorized to make this certification, and that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, the statements set forth in this report, including any papers attached hereto or filed herewith, are true and accurate and that all material facts in connection with said report have been set forth herein.

s/ Russell Schrader

9/29/2010

* * * * *

Part B – Property Reported

Identify each account or item of property separately in the spaces provided below. Use additional photocopies of Part B as needed. Use supplemental attachments if the space provided is inadequate. Be sure to indicate the number of accounts or items reported on Part B in the appropriate space on Part A.

Owner. Identify the owner of the property.

Description. Provide a brief but comprehensive description of the property. Include account type, number, and currency (if other than U.S. Dollars) where applicable.

Value. Provide the value (or an estimate) of the property as of June 30. If a value date other than June 30 is reported, so indicate.

Location. List the location or branch where the property is held, if different than the address shown in Part A.

Regulations. Identify the Part of Title 31 of the Code of Federal Regulations under which this property is blocked.

* * * * *

Part B – supplemental attachment

| Owner | Description | Value (as of June 30, 2010) | Location | Regulations |
|--|---|------------------------------------|--|--------------------|
| | [REDACTED] | | | |
| Visa International Service Association | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Account No 41405200 • Name of Account: “Visa re. Bank Melli – BLOCKED FUNDS” • Account holds Bank Melli funds | $94,078.52 | JP Morgan Chase Bank, London | 544 |
| Visa International Service Association | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Account No. 140-14000855747, asset summary number 03396229 • In the records of Franklin Institutional Fiduciary Trust Money Market Portfolio as “Visa International Special Account 5” • Account holds Bank Melli funds | $17,648,962.76 | Franklin Institutional Fiduciary Trust Money Market Portfolio, Franklin Parkway, San Mateo branch, USA | 544 |

134a

APPENDIX H

ANNUAL REPORT OF BLOCKED PROPERTY

[C.A. E.R. 253-255]

TD F 90—22.50

Office of Foreign Assets Control

Department of the Treasury

Washington, D.C. 20220

The Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) requires an annual report of all property blocked or funds retained under OFAC Regulations found in Title 31 of the Code of Federal Regulations, Parts 500 through 599. This information is needed by the United States Government for planning purposes and to verify compliance with OFAC Regulations. The report is to be submitted annually by September 30 to the Compliance Programs Division, OFAC, Department of the Treasury, Washington, D.C. 20220.

General Instructions

Any person holding property blocked or funds retained under OFAC Regulations is required to submit a report on this form concerning such property. Reports filed in accordance with OFAC Regulations are regarded as containing commercial and financial information which is privileged and confidential. Requests to submit reports in alternative formats will be considered on a case-by-case basis. For additional copies of the form, as well as other information of interest to holders of blocked property, call OFAC's fax-on-demand service at (202) 622-0077.

Part A – U.S. Person Holding Property.

State reporter's corporate name and address and the name and telephone number of an individual corporate official to contact regarding this report.

Name: Visa International Service Association

Address: P.O. Box 8999

San Francisco, CA 94128

Individual to contact regarding this report:

Russell Schrader

Associate General Counsel

(650) 432-1167

Total number of accounts or items reported on Part B: 7

Complete the certification where applicable. The report is not valid without the certification.

I, Russell Schrader, certify that I am the Associate General Counsel – Global Enterprise Risk of the Visa Inc., that I am authorized to make this certification, and that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, the statements set forth in this report, including any papers attached hereto or filed herewith, are true and accurate and that all material facts in connection with said report have been set forth herein.

s/ Russell Schrader

9/27/11

* * * * *

Part B – Property Reported

Identify each account or item of property separately in the spaces provided below. Use additional photocopies of Part B as needed. Use supplemental attachments if the space provided is inadequate. Be sure to indicate the number of accounts or items reported on Part B in the appropriate space on Part A.

Owner. Identify the owner of the property.

Description. Provide a brief but comprehensive description of the property. Include account type, number, and currency (if other than U.S. Dollars) where applicable.

Value. Provide the value (or an estimate) of the property as of June 30. If a value date other than June 30 is reported, so indicate.

Location. List the location or branch where the property is held, if different than the address shown in Part A.

Regulations. Identify the Part of Title 31 of the Code of Federal Regulations under which this property is blocked.

* * * * *

Part B – supplemental attachment

| Owner | Description | Value (as of June 30, 2011) | Location | Regulations |
|--|--|------------------------------------|---|--------------------|
| | [REDACTED] | | | |
| Visa International Service Association | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Account No. 41405200 • Name of Account: “Visa re. Bank Melli – BLOCKED FUNDS” • Account holds Bank Melli funds | $94,121.15 | JP Morgan Chase Bank, London, United Kingdom | 544 |
| Visa International Service Association | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Account No. 140-14000855747, asset summary number 03396229 • In the records of Franklin Institutional Fiduciary Trust Money Market Portfolio as “Visa International Special Account 5” • Shares in mutual fund | $17,648,962.76 | Franklin Institutional Fiduciary Trust Money Market Portfolio San Mateo, CA | 544 |
| | [REDACTED] | | | |

APPENDIX I
RELEVANT STATUTORY AND
TREATY PROVISIONS

1. The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act of 1976, Pub. L. No. 94-583, 90 Stat. 2891, as amended and codified at 28 U.S.C. §§ 1602 et seq., provides as follows:

§ 1602. Findings and declaration of purpose

The Congress finds that the determination by United States courts of the claims of foreign states to immunity from the jurisdiction of such courts would serve the interests of justice and would protect the rights of both foreign states and litigants in United States courts. Under international law, states are not immune from the jurisdiction of foreign courts insofar as their commercial activities are concerned, and their commercial property may be levied upon for the satisfaction of judgments rendered against them in connection with their commercial activities. Claims of foreign states to immunity should henceforth be decided by courts of the United States and of the States in conformity with the principles set forth in this chapter.

§ 1603. Definitions

For purposes of this chapter—

(a) A “foreign state”, except as used in section 1608 of this title, includes a political subdivision of a foreign state or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state as defined in subsection (b).

(b) An “agency or instrumentality of a foreign state” means any entity—

(1) which is a separate legal person, corporate or otherwise, and

(2) which is an organ of a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, or a majority of whose shares or other ownership interest is owned by a foreign state or political subdivision thereof, and

(3) which is neither a citizen of a State of the United States as defined in section 1332(c) and (e) of this title, nor created under the laws of any third country.

(c) The “United States” includes all territory and waters, continental or insular, subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

(d) A “commercial activity” means either a regular course of commercial conduct or a particular commercial transaction or act. The commercial character of an activity shall be determined by reference to the nature of the course of conduct or particular transaction or act, rather than by reference to its purpose.

(e) A “commercial activity carried on in the United States by a foreign state” means commercial activity carried on by such state and having substantial contact with the United States.

§ 1604. Immunity of a foreign state from jurisdiction

Subject to existing international agreements to which the United States is a party at the time of enactment of this Act a foreign state shall be immune from the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States and of the States except as provided in sections 1605 to 1607 of this chapter.

§ 1605. General exceptions to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case—

(1) in which the foreign state has waived its immunity either explicitly or by implication, notwithstanding any withdrawal of the waiver which the foreign state may purport to effect except in accordance with the terms of the waiver;

(2) in which the action is based upon a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or upon an act performed in the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere; or upon an act outside the territory of the United States in connection with a commercial activity of the foreign state elsewhere and that act causes a direct effect in the United States;

(3) in which rights in property taken in violation of international law are in issue and that property or any property exchanged for such property is present in the United States in connection with a commercial activity carried on in the United States by the foreign state; or that property or any property exchanged for such property is owned or operated by an agency or instrumentality of the foreign state and that agency or instrumentality is engaged in a commercial activity in the United States;

(4) in which rights in property in the United States acquired by succession or gift or rights in immovable property situated in the United States are in issue;

(5) not otherwise encompassed in paragraph (2) above, in which money damages are sought against a foreign state for personal injury or death, or damage to or loss of property, occurring in the United States and caused by the tortious act or omission of that foreign state or of any official or employee of that foreign state while acting within the scope of his office or employment; except this paragraph shall not apply to—

141a

(A) any claim based upon the exercise or performance or the failure to exercise or perform a discretionary function regardless of whether the discretion be abused, or

(B) any claim arising out of malicious prosecution, abuse of process, libel, slander, misrepresentation, deceit, or interference with contract rights; or

(6) in which the action is brought, either to enforce an agreement made by the foreign state with or for the benefit of a private party to submit to arbitration all or any differences which have arisen or which may arise between the parties with respect to a defined legal relationship, whether contractual or not, concerning a subject matter capable of settlement by arbitration under the laws of the United States, or to confirm an award made pursuant to such an agreement to arbitrate, if (A) the arbitration takes place or is intended to take place in the United States, (B) the agreement or award is or may be governed by a treaty or other international agreement in force for the United States calling for the recognition and enforcement of arbitral awards, (C) the underlying claim, save for the agreement to arbitrate, could have been brought in a United States court under this section or section 1607, or (D) paragraph (1) of this subsection is otherwise applicable.

(b) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States in any case in which a suit in admiralty is brought to enforce a maritime lien against a vessel or cargo of the foreign state, which maritime lien is based upon a commercial activity of the foreign state: Provided, That—

(1) notice of the suit is given by delivery of a copy of the summons and of the complaint to the person, or his agent, having possession of the vessel or cargo against which the maritime lien is asserted; and if the vessel or cargo is arrested pursuant to process obtained on behalf of the party bringing the suit, the service of process of arrest shall be deemed to constitute valid delivery of such notice, but the party bringing the suit shall be liable for any damages sustained by the foreign state as a result of the arrest if the party bringing the suit had actual or constructive knowledge that the vessel or cargo of a foreign state was involved; and

(2) notice to the foreign state of the commencement of suit as provided in section 1608 of this title is initiated within ten days either of the delivery of notice as provided in paragraph (1) of this subsection or, in the case of a party who was unaware that the vessel or cargo of a foreign state was involved, of the date such party determined the existence of the foreign state's interest.

(c) Whenever notice is delivered under subsection (b)(1), the suit to enforce a maritime lien shall thereafter proceed and shall be heard and determined according to the principles of law and rules of practice of suits in rem whenever it appears that, had the vessel been privately owned and possessed, a suit in rem might have been maintained. A decree against the foreign state may include costs of the suit and, if the decree is for a money judgment, interest as ordered by the court, except that the court may not award judgment against the foreign state in an amount greater than the value of the vessel or cargo upon which the maritime lien arose. Such value shall be determined as of the time notice is served under subsection (b)(1). Decrees shall be subject to appeal and revision as provided in other cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. Nothing shall preclude the plaintiff in any proper case from seeking relief in personam in the same action brought to enforce a maritime lien as provided in this section.

(d) A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States in any action brought to foreclose a preferred mortgage, as defined in section 31301 of title 46. Such action shall be brought, heard, and determined in accordance with the provisions of chapter 313 of title 46 and in accordance with the principles of law and rules of practice of suits in rem, whenever it appears that had the vessel been privately owned and possessed a suit in rem might have been maintained.

(e), (f) Repealed.

(g) LIMITATION ON DISCOVERY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—(A) Subject to paragraph (2), if an action is filed that would otherwise be barred by section 1604, but for section 1605A or section 1605B, the court, upon request of the Attorney General, shall stay any request, demand, or order for discovery on the United States that the Attorney General certifies would significantly interfere with a criminal investigation or prosecution, or a national security operation, related to the incident that gave rise to the cause of action, until such time as the Attorney General advises the court that such request, demand, or order will no longer so interfere.

(B) A stay under this paragraph shall be in effect during the 12-month period beginning on the date on which the court issues the order to stay discovery. The court shall renew the order to stay discovery for additional 12-month periods upon motion by the United States if the Attorney General certifies that discovery would significantly interfere with a criminal investigation or prosecution, or a national security operation, related to the incident that gave rise to the cause of action.

(2) SUNSET.—(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), no stay shall be granted or continued in effect under paragraph (1) after the date that is 10 years after the date on which the incident that gave rise to the cause of action occurred.

(B) After the period referred to in subparagraph (A), the court, upon request of the Attorney General, may stay any request, demand, or order for discovery on the United States that the court finds a substantial likelihood would—

(i) create a serious threat of death or serious bodily injury to any person;

(ii) adversely affect the ability of the United States to work in cooperation with foreign and international law enforcement agencies in investigating violations of United States law; or

(iii) obstruct the criminal case related to the incident that gave rise to the cause of action or undermine the potential for a conviction in such case.

(3) EVALUATION OF EVIDENCE.—The court's evaluation of any request for a stay under this subsection filed by the Attorney General shall be conducted ex parte and in camera.

(4) BAR ON MOTIONS TO DISMISS.—A stay of discovery under this subsection shall constitute a bar to the granting of a motion to dismiss under rules 12(b)(6) and 56 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

(5) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall prevent the United States from seeking protective orders or asserting privileges ordinarily available to the United States.

(h) JURISDICTIONAL IMMUNITY FOR CERTAIN ART EXHIBITION ACTIVITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If—

(A) a work is imported into the United States from any foreign state pursuant to an agreement that provides for the temporary exhibition or display of such work entered into between a foreign state that is the owner or custodian of such work and the United States or one or more cultural or educational institutions within the United States;

(B) the President, or the President's designee, has determined, in accordance with subsection (a) of Public Law 89-259 (22 U.S.C. 2459(a)), that such work is of cultural significance and the temporary exhibition or display of such work is in the national interest; and any activity in the United States of such foreign state, or of any carrier, that is associated with the temporary exhibition or display of such work shall not be considered to be commercial activity by such foreign state for purposes of subsection (a)(3).

(C) the notice thereof has been published in accordance with subsection (a) of Public Law 89-259 (22 U.S.C. 2459(a)),

(2) EXCEPTIONS.—

(A) NAZI-ERA CLAIMS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply in any case asserting jurisdiction under subsection (a)(3) in which rights in property taken in violation of international law are in issue within the meaning of that subsection and—

(i) the property at issue is the work described in paragraph (1);

(ii) the action is based upon a claim that such work was taken in connection with the acts of a covered government during the covered period;

(iii) the court determines that the activity associated with the exhibition or display is commercial activity, as that term is defined in section 1603(d); and

(iv) a determination under clause (iii) is necessary for the court to exercise jurisdiction over the foreign state under subsection (a)(3).

(B) OTHER CULTURALLY SIGNIFICANT WORKS.— In addition to cases exempted under subparagraph (A), paragraph (1) shall not apply in any case asserting jurisdiction under subsection (a)(3) in which rights in property taken in violation of international law are in issue within the meaning of that subsection and—

(i) the property at issue is the work described in paragraph (1);

(ii) the action is based upon a claim that such work was taken in connection with the acts of a foreign government as part of a systematic campaign of coercive confiscation or misappropriation of works from members of a targeted and vulnerable group;

(iii) the taking occurred after 1900;

(iv) the court determines that the activity associated with the exhibition or display is commercial activity, as that term is defined in section 1603(d); and

(v) a determination under clause (iv) is necessary for the court to exercise jurisdiction over the foreign state under subsection (a)(3).

(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) the term “work” means a work of art or other object of cultural significance;

(B) the term “covered government” means—

(i) the Government of Germany during the covered period;

(ii) any government in any area in Europe that was occupied by the military forces of the Government of Germany during the covered period;

(iii) any government in Europe that was established with the assistance or cooperation of the Government of Germany during the covered period; and

(iv) any government in Europe that was an ally of the Government of Germany during the covered period; and

(C) the term “covered period” means the period beginning on January 30, 1933, and ending on May 8, 1945.

§ 1605A. Terrorism exception to the jurisdictional immunity of a foreign state

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) NO IMMUNITY.—A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of courts of the United States or of the States in any case not otherwise covered by this chapter in which money damages are sought against a foreign state for personal injury or death that was caused by an act of torture, extrajudicial killing, aircraft sabotage, hostage taking, or the provision of material support or resources for such an act if such act or provision of material support or resources is engaged in by an official, employee, or agent of such foreign state while acting within the scope of his or her office, employment, or agency.

(2) CLAIM HEARD.—The court shall hear a claim under this section if—

(A)(i)(I) the foreign state was designated as a state sponsor of terrorism at the time the act described in paragraph (1) occurred, or was so designated as a result of such act, and, subject to subclause (II), either remains so designated when the claim is filed under this section or was so designated within the 6-month period before the claim is filed under this section; or

(II) in the case of an action that is refiled under this section by reason of section 1083(c)(2)(A) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2008 or is filed under this section by reason of section 1083(c)(3) of that Act, the foreign state was designated as a state sponsor of terrorism when the original action or the related action under section 1605(a)(7) (as in effect before the enactment of this section) or section 589 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1997 (as contained in section 101(c) of division A of Public Law 104-208) was filed;

(ii) the claimant or the victim was, at the time the act described in paragraph (1) occurred—

(I) a national of the United States;

(II) a member of the armed forces; or

(III) otherwise an employee of the Government of the United States, or of an individual performing a contract awarded by the United States Government, acting within the scope of the employee's employment; and

(iii) in a case in which the act occurred in the foreign state against which the claim has been brought, the claimant has afforded the foreign state a reasonable opportunity to arbitrate the claim in accordance with the accepted international rules of arbitration; or

(B) the act described in paragraph (1) is related to Case Number 1:00CV03110 (EGS) in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—An action may be brought or maintained under this section if the action is commenced, or a related action was commenced under section 1605(a)(7) (before the date of the enactment of this section) or section 589 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1997 (as contained in section 101(c) of division A of Public Law 104-208) not later than the latter of—

(1) 10 years after April 24, 1996; or

(2) 10 years after the date on which the cause of action arose.

(c) PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION.—A foreign state that is or was a state sponsor of terrorism as described in subsection (a)(2)(A)(i), and any official, employee, or agent of that foreign state while acting within the scope of his or her office, employment, or agency, shall be liable to—

(1) a national of the United States,

(2) a member of the armed forces,

150a

(3) an employee of the Government of the United States, or of an individual performing a contract awarded by the United States Government, acting within the scope of the employee's employment, or

(4) the legal representative of a person described in paragraph (1), (2), or (3), for personal injury or death caused by acts described in subsection (a)(1) of that foreign state, or of an official, employee, or agent of that foreign state, for which the courts of the United States may maintain jurisdiction under this section for money damages. In any such action, damages may include economic damages, solatium, pain and suffering, and punitive damages. In any such action, a foreign state shall be vicariously liable for the acts of its officials, employees, or agents.

(d) ADDITIONAL DAMAGES.—After an action has been brought under subsection (c), actions may also be brought for reasonably foreseeable property loss, whether insured or uninsured, third party liability, and loss claims under life and property insurance policies, by reason of the same acts on which the action under subsection (c) is based.

(e) SPECIAL MASTERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The courts of the United States may appoint special masters to hear damage claims brought under this section.

(2) TRANSFER OF FUNDS.—The Attorney General shall transfer, from funds available for the program under section 1404C of the Victims of Crime Act of 1984 (42 U.S.C. 10603c), to the Administrator of the United States district court in which any case is pending which has been brought or maintained under this section such funds as may be required to cover the costs of special masters appointed under paragraph (1). Any amount paid in compensation to any such special master shall constitute an item of court costs.

151a

(f) APPEAL.—In an action brought under this section, appeals from orders not conclusively ending the litigation may only be taken pursuant to section 1292(b) of this title.

(g) PROPERTY DISPOSITION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In every action filed in a United States district court in which jurisdiction is alleged under this section, the filing of a notice of pending action pursuant to this section, to which is attached a copy of the complaint filed in the action, shall have the effect of establishing a lien of lis pendens upon any real property or tangible personal property that is—

(A) subject to attachment in aid of execution, or execution, under section 1610;

(B) located within that judicial district; and

(C) titled in the name of any defendant, or titled in the name of any entity controlled by any defendant if such notice contains a statement listing such controlled entity.

(2) NOTICE.—A notice of pending action pursuant to this section shall be filed by the clerk of the district court in the same manner as any pending action and shall be indexed by listing as defendants all named defendants and all entities listed as controlled by any defendant.

(3) ENFORCEABILITY.—Liens established by reason of this subsection shall be enforceable as provided in chapter 111 of this title.

(h) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) the term “aircraft sabotage” has the meaning given that term in Article 1 of the Convention for the Suppression of Unlawful Acts Against the Safety of Civil Aviation;

(2) the term “hostage taking” has the meaning given that term in Article 1 of the International Convention Against the Taking of Hostages;

(3) the term “material support or resources” has the meaning given that term in section 2339A of title 18;

(4) the term “armed forces” has the meaning given that term in section 101 of title 10;

(5) the term “national of the United States” has the meaning given that term in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22));

(6) the term “state sponsor of terrorism” means a country the government of which the Secretary of State has determined, for purposes of section 6(j) of the Export Administration Act of 1979 (50 U.S.C. App. 2405(j)), section 620A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2371), section 40 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2780), or any other provision of law, is a government that has repeatedly provided support for acts of international terrorism; and

(7) the terms “torture” and “extrajudicial killing” have the meaning given those terms in section 3 of the Torture Victim Protection Act of 1991 (28 U.S.C. 1350 note).

§ 1605B. Responsibility of foreign states for international terrorism against the United States

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term “international terrorism”—

(1) has the meaning given the term in section 2331 of title 18, United States Code; and

(2) does not include any act of war (as defined in that section).

(b) RESPONSIBILITY OF FOREIGN STATES.—A foreign state shall not be immune from the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States in any case in which money damages are sought against a foreign state for physical injury to person or property or death occurring in the United States and caused by—

(1) an act of international terrorism in the United States; and

(2) a tortious act or acts of the foreign state, or of any official, employee, or agent of that foreign state while acting within the scope of his or her office, employment, or agency, regardless where the tortious act or acts of the foreign state occurred.

(c) CLAIMS BY NATIONALS OF THE UNITED STATES.—Notwithstanding section 2337(2) of title 18, a national of the United States may bring a claim against a foreign state in accordance with section 2333 of that title if the foreign state would not be immune under subsection (b).

(d) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—A foreign state shall not be subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States under subsection (b) on the basis of an omission or a tortious act or acts that constitute mere negligence.

§ 1606. Extent of liability

As to any claim for relief with respect to which a foreign state is not entitled to immunity under section 1605 or 1607 of this chapter, the foreign state shall be liable in the same manner and to the same extent as a private individual under like circumstances; but a foreign state except for an agency or instrumentality thereof shall not be liable for punitive damages; if, however, in any case wherein death was caused, the law of the place where the action or omission occurred provides, or has been construed to provide, for damages only punitive in nature, the foreign state shall be liable for actual or compensatory damages measured by the pecuniary injuries resulting from such death which were incurred by the persons for whose benefit the action was brought.

§ 1607. Counterclaims

In any action brought by a foreign state, or in which a foreign state intervenes, in a court of the United States or of a State, the foreign state shall not be accorded immunity with respect to any counterclaim—

(a) for which a foreign state would not be entitled to immunity under section 1605 or 1605A of this chapter had such claim been brought in a separate action against the foreign state; or

(b) arising out of the transaction or occurrence that is the subject matter of the claim of the foreign state; or

(c) to the extent that the counterclaim does not seek relief exceeding in amount or differing in kind from that sought by the foreign state.

§ 1608. Service; time to answer; default

(a) Service in the courts of the United States and of the States shall be made upon a foreign state or political subdivision of a foreign state:

155a

(1) by delivery of a copy of the summons and complaint in accordance with any special arrangement for service between the plaintiff and the foreign state or political subdivision; or

(2) if no special arrangement exists, by delivery of a copy of the summons and complaint in accordance with an applicable international convention on service of judicial documents; or

(3) if service cannot be made under paragraphs (1) or (2), by sending a copy of the summons and complaint and a notice of suit, together with a translation of each into the official language of the foreign state, by any form of mail requiring a signed receipt, to be addressed and dispatched by the clerk of the court to the head of the ministry of foreign affairs of the foreign state concerned, or

(4) if service cannot be made within 30 days under paragraph (3), by sending two copies of the summons and complaint and a notice of suit, together with a translation of each into the official language of the foreign state, by any form of mail requiring a signed receipt, to be addressed and dispatched by the clerk of the court to the Secretary of State in Washington, District of Columbia, to the attention of the Director of Special Consular Services—and the Secretary shall transmit one copy of the papers through diplomatic channels to the foreign state and shall send to the clerk of the court a certified copy of the diplomatic note indicating when the papers were transmitted.

As used in this subsection, a “notice of suit” shall mean a notice addressed to a foreign state and in a form prescribed by the Secretary of State by regulation.

156a

(b) Service in the courts of the United States and of the States shall be made upon an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state:

(1) by delivery of a copy of the summons and complaint in accordance with any special arrangement for service between the plaintiff and the agency or instrumentality; or

(2) if no special arrangement exists, by delivery of a copy of the summons and complaint either to an officer, a managing or general agent, or to any other agent authorized by appointment or by law to receive service of process in the United States; or in accordance with an applicable international convention on service of judicial documents; or

(3) if service cannot be made under paragraphs (1) or (2), and if reasonably calculated to give actual notice, by delivery of a copy of the summons and complaint, together with a translation of each into the official language of the foreign state—

(A) as directed by an authority of the foreign state or political subdivision in response to a letter rogatory or request or

(B) by any form of mail requiring a signed receipt, to be addressed and dispatched by the clerk of the court to the agency or instrumentality to be served, or

(C) as directed by order of the court consistent with the law of the place where service is to be made.

(c) Service shall be deemed to have been made—

(1) in the case of service under subsection (a)(4), as of the date of transmittal indicated in the certified copy of the diplomatic note; and

(2) in any other case under this section, as of the date of receipt indicated in the certification, signed and returned postal receipt, or other proof of service applicable to the method of service employed.

(d) In any action brought in a court of the United States or of a State, a foreign state, a political subdivision thereof, or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state shall serve an answer or other responsive pleading to the complaint within sixty days after service has been made under this section.

(e) No judgment by default shall be entered by a court of the United States or of a State against a foreign state, a political subdivision thereof, or an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state, unless the claimant establishes his claim or right to relief by evidence satisfactory to the court. A copy of any such default judgment shall be sent to the foreign state or political subdivision in the manner prescribed for service in this section.

§ 1609. Immunity from attachment and execution of property of a foreign state

Subject to existing international agreements to which the United States is a party at the time of enactment of this Act the property in the United States of a foreign state shall be immune from attachment arrest and execution except as provided in sections 1610 and 1611 of this chapter.

§ 1610. Exceptions to the immunity from attachment or execution

(a) The property in the United States of a foreign state, as defined in section 1603(a) of this chapter, used for a commercial activity in the United States, shall not be immune from attachment in aid of execution, or from execution, upon a judgment entered by a court of the United States or of a State after the effective date of this Act, if—

(1) the foreign state has waived its immunity from attachment in aid of execution or from execution either explicitly or by implication, notwithstanding any withdrawal of the waiver the foreign state may purport to effect except in accordance with the terms of the waiver, or

(2) the property is or was used for the commercial activity upon which the claim is based, or

(3) the execution relates to a judgment establishing rights in property which has been taken in violation of international law or which has been exchanged for property taken in violation of international law, or

(4) the execution relates to a judgment establishing rights in property—

(A) which is acquired by succession or gift, or

(B) which is immovable and situated in the United States: Provided, That such property is not used for purposes of maintaining a diplomatic or consular mission or the residence of the Chief of such mission, or

(5) the property consists of any contractual obligation or any proceeds from such a contractual obligation to indemnify or hold harmless the foreign state or its employees under a policy of automobile or other liability or casualty insurance covering the claim which merged into the judgment, or

(6) the judgment is based on an order confirming an arbitral award rendered against the foreign state, provided that attachment in aid of execution, or execution, would not be inconsistent with any provision in the arbitral agreement, or

(7) the judgment relates to a claim for which the foreign state is not immune under section 1605A or section 1605(a)(7) (as such section was in effect on January 27, 2008), regardless of whether the property is or was involved with the act upon which the claim is based.

(b) In addition to subsection (a), any property in the United States of an agency or instrumentality of a foreign state engaged in commercial activity in the United States shall not be immune from attachment in aid of execution, or from execution, upon a judgment entered by a court of the United States or of a State after the effective date of this Act, if—

(1) the agency or instrumentality has waived its immunity from attachment in aid of execution or from execution either explicitly or implicitly, notwithstanding any withdrawal of the waiver the agency or instrumentality may purport to effect except in accordance with the terms of the waiver, or

(2) the judgment relates to a claim for which the agency or instrumentality is not immune by virtue of section 1605(a)(2), (3), or (5) or 1605(b) of this chapter, regardless of whether the property is or was involved in the act upon which the claim is based; or

(3) the judgment relates to a claim for which the agency or instrumentality is not immune by virtue of section 1605A of this chapter or section 1605(a)(7) of this chapter (as such section was in effect on January 27, 2008), regardless of whether the property is or was involved in the act upon which the claim is based.

(c) No attachment or execution referred to in subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall be permitted until the court has ordered such attachment and execution after having determined that a reasonable period of time has elapsed following the entry of judgment and the giving of any notice required under section 1608(e) of this chapter.

(d) The property of a foreign state, as defined in section 1603(a) of this chapter, used for a commercial activity in the United States, shall not be immune from attachment prior to the entry of judgment in any action brought in a court of the United States or of a State, or prior to the elapse of the period of time provided in subsection (c) of this section, if—

(1) the foreign state has explicitly waived its immunity from attachment prior to judgment, notwithstanding any withdrawal of the waiver the foreign state may purport to effect except in accordance with the terms of the waiver, and

(2) the purpose of the attachment is to secure satisfaction of a judgment that has been or may ultimately be entered against the foreign state, and not to obtain jurisdiction.

(e) The vessels of a foreign state shall not be immune from arrest in rem, interlocutory sale, and execution in actions brought to foreclose a preferred mortgage as provided in section 1605(d).

(f)(1)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, including but not limited to section 208(f) of the Foreign Missions Act (22 U.S.C. 4308(f)), and except as provided in subparagraph (B), any property with respect to which financial transactions are prohibited or regulated pursuant to section 5(b) of the Trading with the Enemy Act (50 U.S.C. App. 5(b)), section 620(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2370(a)), sections 202 and 203 of the International Emergency Economic Powers

161a

Act (50 U.S.C. 1701-1702), or any other proclamation, order, regulation, or license issued pursuant thereto, shall be subject to execution or attachment in aid of execution of any judgment relating to a claim for which a foreign state (including any agency or instrumentality or such state) claiming such property is not immune under section 1605(a)(7) (as in effect before the enactment of section 1605A) or section 1605A.

(B) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply if, at the time the property is expropriated or seized by the foreign state, the property has been held in title by a natural person or, if held in trust, has been held for the benefit of a natural person or persons.

(2)(A) At the request of any party in whose favor a judgment has been issued with respect to a claim for which the foreign state is not immune under section 1605(a)(7) (as in effect before the enactment of section 1605A) or section 1605A, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of State should make every effort to fully, promptly, and effectively assist any judgment creditor or any court that has issued any such judgment in identifying, locating, and executing against the property of that foreign state or any agency or instrumentality of such state.

(B) In providing such assistance, the Secretaries—

(i) may provide such information to the court under seal; and

(ii) should make every effort to provide the information in a manner sufficient to allow the court to direct the United States Marshall's office to promptly and effectively execute against that property.

(3) WAIVER.—The President may waive any provision of paragraph (1) in the interest of national security.

(g) PROPERTY IN CERTAIN ACTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (3), the property of a foreign state against which a judgment is entered under section 1605A, and the property of an agency or instrumentality of such a state, including property that is a separate juridical entity or is an interest held directly or indirectly in a separate juridical entity, is subject to attachment in aid of execution, and execution, upon that judgment as provided in this section, regardless of—

(A) the level of economic control over the property by the government of the foreign state;

(B) whether the profits of the property go to that government;

(C) the degree to which officials of that government manage the property or otherwise control its daily affairs;

(D) whether that government is the sole beneficiary in interest of the property; or

(E) whether establishing the property as a separate entity would entitle the foreign state to benefits in United States courts while avoiding its obligations.

(2) UNITED STATES SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY INAPPLICABLE.—Any property of a foreign state, or agency or instrumentality of a foreign state, to which paragraph (1) applies shall not be immune from attachment in aid of execution, or execution, upon a judgment entered under section 1605A because the property is regulated by the United States Government by reason of action taken against that foreign state under the Trading With the Enemy Act or the International Emergency Economic Powers Act.

(3) THIRD-PARTY JOINT PROPERTY HOLDERS.— Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to supersede the authority of a court to prevent appropriately the impairment of an interest held by a person who is not liable in the action giving rise to a judgment in property subject to attachment in aid of execution, or execution, upon such judgment.

* * * * *

[NOTE]

SATISFACTION OF JUDGMENTS FROM BLOCKED ASSETS
OF TERRORISTS, TERRORIST ORGANIZATIONS, AND STATE SPONSORS OF TERRORISM

Pub. L. No. 107-297, § 201(a), (b), (d), 116 Stat. 2337 (2002), as amended, provides that:

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as provided in subsection (b), in every case in which a person has obtained a judgment against a terrorist party on a claim based upon an act of terrorism, or for which a terrorist party is not immune under section 1605A or 1605(a)(7) (as such section was in effect on January 27, 2008) of title 28, United States Code, the blocked assets of that terrorist party (including the blocked assets of any agency or instrumentality of that terrorist party) shall be subject to execution or attachment in aid of execution in order to satisfy such judgment to the extent of any compensatory damages for which such terrorist party has been adjudged liable.

(b) PRESIDENTIAL WAIVER.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), upon determining on an asset-by-asset basis that a waiver is necessary in the national security interest, the President may waive the requirements of subsection (a) [of this note] in connection with (and prior to the enforcement of) any judicial order directing attachment in aid of execution or execution against any property subject to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations or the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations.

(2) EXCEPTION.—A waiver under this subsection shall not apply to—

(A) property subject to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations or the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations that has been used by the United States for any nondiplomatic purpose (including use as rental property), or the proceeds of such use; or

(B) the proceeds of any sale or transfer for value to a third party of any asset subject to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations or the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) ACT OF TERRORISM.—The term ‘act of terrorism’ means—

(A) any act or event certified under section 102(1) [Pub. L. No. 107-297, set out in a note under section 6701 of Title 15, Commerce and Trade]; or

(B) to the extent not covered by subparagraph (A), any terrorist activity (as defined in section 212(a)(3)(B)(iii) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(3)(B)(iii))).

(2) BLOCKED ASSET.—The term ‘blocked asset’ means—

(A) any asset seized or frozen by the United States under section 5(b) of the Trading With the Enemy Act (50 U.S.C. App. 5(b)) [now 50 U.S.C.

4305(b)] or under sections 202 and 203 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701; 1702); and

(B) Does not include property that—

(i) is subject to a license issued by the United States Government for final payment, transfer, or disposition by or to a person subject to the jurisdiction of the United States in connection with a transaction for which the issuance of such license has been specifically required by statute other than the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) or the United Nations Participation Act of 1945 (22 U.S.C. 287 et seq.); or

(ii) in the case of property subject to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations or the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, or that enjoys equivalent privileges and immunities under the law of the United States, is being used exclusively for diplomatic or consular purposes.

(3) CERTAIN PROPERTY.—The term ‘property subject to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations or the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations’ and the term ‘asset subject to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations or the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations’ mean any property or asset, respectively, the attachment in aid of execution or execution of which would result in a violation of an obligation of the United States under the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations or the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations, as the case may be.

(4) TERRORIST PARTY.—The term ‘terrorist party’ means a terrorist, a terrorist organization (as defined in section 212(a)(3)(B)(vi) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(3)(B)(vi)), or a foreign state designated as a state sponsor of terrorism under section 6(j) of the Export Administration Act of 1979 (50 U.S.C. App. 2405(j)) [now 50 U.S.C. § 4605(j)] or section 620A of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2371).

* * * * *

§ 1611. Certain types of property immune from execution

(a) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1610 of this chapter, the property of those organizations designated by the President as being entitled to enjoy the privileges, exemptions, and immunities provided by the International Organizations Immunities Act shall not be subject to attachment or any other judicial process impeding the disbursement of funds to, or on the order of, a foreign state as the result of an action brought in the courts of the United States or of the States.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1610 of this chapter, the property of a foreign state shall be immune from attachment and from execution, if—

(1) the property is that of a foreign central bank or monetary authority held for its own account, unless such bank or authority, or its parent foreign government, has explicitly waived its immunity from attachment in aid of execution, or from execution, notwithstanding any withdrawal of the waiver which the bank, authority or government may purport to effect except in accordance with the terms of the waiver; or

(2) the property is, or is intended to be, used in connection with a military activity and

(A) is of a military character, or

167a

(B) is under the control of a military authority or defense agency.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1610 of this chapter, the property of a foreign state shall be immune from attachment and from execution in an action brought under section 302 of the Cuban Liberty and Democratic Solidarity (LIBERTAD) Act of 1996 to the extent that the property is a facility or installation used by an accredited diplomatic mission for official purposes.

2. The Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations, and Consular Rights, U.S.-Iran, Aug. 15, 1955, 8 U.S.T. 899, provides in relevant part as follows:

The United States of America and Iran, desirous of emphasizing the friendly relations which have long prevailed between their peoples, of reaffirming the high principles in the regulation of human affairs to which they are committed, of encouraging mutually beneficial trade and investments and closer economic intercourse generally between their peoples, and of regulating consular relations, have resolved to conclude, on the basis of reciprocal equality of treatment, a Treaty of Amity, Economic Relations, and Consular Rights * * * :

* * * * *

Article III

1. Companies constituted under the applicable laws and regulations of either High Contracting Party shall have their juridical status recognized within the territories of the other High Contracting Party. It is understood, however, that recognition of juridical status does not of itself confer rights upon companies to engage in the activities for which they are organized. As used in the present Treaty, "companies" means corporations, partnerships, companies and other associations, whether or not with limited liability and whether or not for pecuniary profit.

2. Nationals and companies of either High Contracting Party shall have freedom of access to the courts of justice and administrative agencies within the territories of the other High Contracting Party, in all degrees of jurisdiction, both in defense and pursuit of their rights, to the end that prompt and impartial justice be done. Such access shall be allowed, in any event, upon terms no less favorable than those applicable to nationals and companies of such other High Contracting Party or of any third country. It is understood that companies not engaged in activities within the country shall enjoy the right of such access without any requirement of registration or domestication.

3. The private settlement of disputes of a civil nature, involving nationals and companies of either High Contracting Party, shall not be discouraged within the territories of the other High Contracting Party; and, in cases of such settlement by arbitration, neither the alienage of the arbitrators nor the foreign situs of the arbitration proceedings shall of themselves be a bar to the enforceability of awards duly resulting therefrom.

Article IV

1. Each High Contracting Party shall at all times accord fair and equitable treatment to nationals and companies of the other High Contracting Party, and to their property and enterprises; shall refrain from applying unreasonable or discriminatory measures that would impair their legally acquired rights and interests; and shall assure that their lawful contractual rights are afforded effective means of enforcement, in conformity with the applicable laws.

2. Property of nationals and companies of either High Contracting Party, including interests in property, shall receive the most constant protection and security within the territories of the other High Contracting Party, in no case less than that required by international law. Such property shall not be taken except for a public purpose, nor shall it be taken without the prompt payment of just compensation. Such compensation shall be in an effectively realizable form and shall represent the full equivalent of the property taken; and adequate provision shall have been made at or prior to the time of taking for the determination and payment thereof.

3. The dwellings, offices, warehouses, factories and other premises of nationals and companies of either High Contracting Party located within the territories of the other High Contracting Party shall not be subject to entry or molestation without just cause. Official searches and examinations of such premises and their contents, shall be made only according to law and with careful regard for the convenience of the occupants and the conduct of business.

4. Enterprises which nationals and companies of either High Contracting Party are permitted to establish or acquire, within the territories of the other High Contracting Party, shall be permitted freely to conduct their activities therein, upon terms no less favorable than other enterprises of whatever nationality engaged in similar activities. Such nationals and companies shall enjoy the right to continued control and management of such enterprises; to engage attorneys, agents, accountants and other technical experts, executive personnel, interpreters and other specialized employees of their choice; and to do all other things necessary or incidental to the effective conduct of their affairs.

* * * * *

Article XXI

1. Each High Contracting Party shall accord sympathetic consideration to, and shall afford adequate opportunity for consultation regarding, such representations as the other High Contracting Party may make with respect to any matter affecting the operation of the present Treaty.

2. Any dispute between the High Contracting Parties as to the interpretation or application of the present Treaty, not satisfactorily adjusted by diplomacy, shall be submitted to the International Court of Justice, unless the High Contracting Parties agree to settlement by some other pacific means.

* * * * *

Article XXIII

1. The present Treaty shall be ratified, and the ratifications thereof shall be exchanged at Tehran as soon as possible.

2. The present Treaty shall enter into force one month after the day of exchange of ratifications. It shall remain in force for ten years and shall continue in force thereafter until terminated as provided herein.

3. Either High Contracting Party may, by giving one year's written notice to the other High Contracting Party, terminate the present Treaty at the end of the initial ten-year period or at any time thereafter.

* * * * *