

The United States Supreme Court
Justice Neil Gorsuch

United States of America

Case No.: 19-1193

v.

Quincy Tremayne Bloodworth.

Motion for Extension of Time to File Petition

COMES NOW, Quincy Tremayne Bloodworth, pro se, respectfully requesting an additional sixty (60) days
to file his petition for a writ of certiorari.

Bloodworth seeks review of the Sixth Circuit's
December 6, 2019 Opinion denying his appeal.

The reason(s) for this request for an extension of time to file are as follows:

1. Mr. Bloodworth is currently incarcerated at USP Hazelton in West Virginia. This is a notoriously bad prison, and as such, is routinely "locked down." Specifically, this prison was recently "locked down" from December 13, 2019 until February 11, 2020.
2. "Lock down" status means that inmates are completely restricted to their cells. Access to their personal legal papers, a law library, and assistance from other prisoners is not possible during this time.

Quincy T. Bloodworth
22221 - 040
United States Penitentiary, Hazelton
P.O. Box #2000
Bruceton Mills, WV 26525
February 21, 2020

Re: Application to Extend Time to File

Dear Justice Gorsuch:

Greetings! Enclosed is my motion/application to extend my time to file my petition for certiorari. I have not been able to perfect my petition because my prison is always "locked down," and I cannot access a law library, or assistance from another knowledgeable prisoner. Please take this into consideration and grant me some additional sixty (60) days to file my petition. Thank you very much in advance.

Respectfully,
Quincy T. Bloodworth
Quincy T. Bloodworth