

In the Supreme Court of the United States

— ◆ —
CEDAR POINT NURSERY and
FOWLER PACKING COMPANY, INC.,
Petitioners,

v.

VICTORIA HASSID, in her official capacity as Chair of the Agricultural Labor Relations Board, et al., Respondents.

— ◆ —
On Petition For Writ Of Certiorari To The United States Court Of Appeals For The Ninth Circuit

— ◆ —
AMICUS CURIAE BRIEF OF
MOUNTAIN STATES LEGAL FOUNDATION
IN SUPPORT OF PETITIONERS

— ◆ —
Cristen Wohlgemuth
Counsel of Record
David C. McDonald
Mountain States Legal Foundation
2596 South Lewis Way
Lakewood, Colorado 80227
(303) 292-2021
cristen@mslegal.org
dmcdonald@mslegal.org

Counsel for Amicus Curiae
September 2, 2020

QUESTION PRESENTED

California law forces agricultural businesses to allow labor organizers onto their property three times a day for 120 days each year. The regulation provides no mechanism for compensation. A divided panel below held that, although the regulation takes an uncompensated easement, it does not effect a per se physical taking of private property because it does not allow occupation for “24 hours a day, 365 days a year.” As an eight-judge dissent from denial of rehearing en banc noted, the panel “decision not only contradicts Supreme Court precedent but also causes a circuit split.”

The question presented is whether the uncompensated appropriation of an easement that is limited in time effects a per se physical taking under the Fifth Amendment.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
QUESTION PRESENTED	i
TABLE OF AUTHORITIES	iv
IDENTITY AND INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE.....	1
INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT	2
ARGUMENT	4
REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION	4
I. UNDER BACKGROUND PRINCIPLES OF PROPERTY LAW, UNION ORGANIZERS HAVE NO RIGHT TO ENTER PRIVATE PROPERTY.....	4
II. A PHYSICAL OCCUPATION OF ANY PORTION OF GROWERS' PROPERTIES VIOLATES GROWERS' RIGHT TO EXCLUDE AND IS A CATEGORICAL TAKING FOR WHICH JUST COMPENSATION IS OWED	9

III. A PHYSICAL OCCUPATION OF ANY DURATION VIOLATES GROWERS' RIGHT TO EXCLUDE AND IS A CATEGORICAL TAKING FOR WHICH JUST COMPENSATION IS OWED	14
IV. EXCLUSIVE OWNERSHIP IS FUNDAMNETAL TO THE DEFINITION OF PROPERTY PROTECTED BY THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION.....	18
CONCLUSION.....	21

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

	Page
Cases
Alden v. Maine , 527 U.S. 706 (1999).....	19
Andrus v. Glover Const. Co. , 446 U.S. 608 (1980).....	7
Arkansas Game & Fish Comm’n v. United States , 568 U.S. 23 (2012).....	passim
Arkansas Game & Fish Comm’n v. United States , 736 F.3d 1364 (Fed. Cir. 2013).....	16
Brandt v. United States , 710 F.3d 1369 (Fed. Cir. 2013).....	1
Brown v. Legal Found. of Washington , 538 U.S. 216 (2003).....	10, 12, 19
Chicago, B. & Q.R. Co. v. City of Chicago , 166 U.S. 226 (1897).....	8
Continental Casualty Co. v. United States , 314 U.S. 527 (1942).....	8
District of Columbia v. Heller , 554 U.S. 570 (2008).....	19
Dolan v. City of Tigard , 512 U.S. 374 (1994).....	1

Fletcher v. Peck , 10 U.S. (6 Cranch) 87 (1810)	20
Hansen v. United States , 65 Fed. Cl. 76 (2005)	6-7
Hendler v. United States , 952 F.2d 1364 (Fed. Cir. 1991)	17, 18, 20-21
Horne v. Dep't of Agric. , 576 U.S. 350 (2015)	passim
Int'l News Serv. v. Associated Press , 248 U.S. 215 (1918)	20
Kaiser Aetna v. United States , 444 U.S. 164 (1979)	passim
Klemic v. Dominion Transmission, Inc. , 138 F. Supp. 3d 673 (W.D. Va. 2015)	7
Klemic v. Dominion Transmission, Inc. , No.15-2338 (4 th Cir. 2015)	7
Laguna Gatuna, Inc. v. United States , 50 Fed. Cl. 336 (2001)	1
Lingle v. Chevron U.S.A. Inc. , 544 U.S. 528 (2005)	21
Loretto v. Teleprompter Manhattan CATV Corp. , 458 U.S. 419 (1982)	passim

Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council , 505 U.S. 1003 (1992).....	1, 5
Members of Peanut Quota Holders Ass’n v. United States , 421 F.3d 1323 (Fed. Cir. 2005).....	10
Mountain States Legal Foundation v. Hodel , 799 F.2d 1423 (10th Cir. 1986).....	1, 2, 3
Nollan v. California Coastal Comm’n , 483 U.S. 825 (1987).....	12, 13, 18
Palmer v. Atlantic Coast Pipeline , 801 S.E.2d 414 (Va. 2017).....	7
Penn Central Transp. Co. v. City of New York , 438 U.S. 104 (1978).....	9
Prop. Reserve, Inc. v. Superior Court , 375 P.3d 887 (Cal. 2016).....	5, 6, 7
Tahoe-Sierra Pres. Council, Inc. v. Tahoe Reg’l Planning , 535 U.S. 302 (2002).....	9, 12, 19
Wilson v. Interlake Steel Co. , 649 P.2d 922 (Cal. 1982).....	6-7
Yee v. City of Escondido , 503 U.S. 519 (1992).....	11

Constitutional ProvisionU.S. Const. Amend V. *passimStatutes

Cal. Lab. Code § 1152 2

Rule

Sup. Ct. R. 37.3 1

Regulations

Cal. Code Regs. Tit. 8, § 20900(e)..... 2, 14, 16

§ 20201–02..... 18

§ 20216..... 18

§ 20218–20..... 18

§ 20279..... 18

Other Authorities1 WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, COMMENTARIES
ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND (1769)..... 19J.E. Penner, The “Bundle of Rights” Picture of Property, 43 UCLA L. REV. 711 (1996) 5

Restatement (Second) of Torts § 158..... 7

Restatement (Second) of Torts §§ 202–07	7
RICHARD A. EPSTEIN, TAKINGS: PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE POWER OF EMINENT DOMAIN 65 (1985).....	20
Richard Epstein, The Ebbs and Flows in Takings Law: Reflections on the Lake Tahoe Case , 2002 CATO SUP. CT. REV. 5 (2002).....	19, 21
Thomas W. Merrill, Property and the Right to Exclude , 77 NEB. L. REV. 730 (1998)	21
William M. Treanor, The Original Understanding of the Takings Clause and the Political Process , 95 COLUM. L. REV. 782 (1995).....	18, 19

IDENTY AND INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE¹

Mountain States Legal Foundation (“MSLF”) is a nonprofit, public-interest legal foundation organized under the laws of the State of Colorado. MSLF is dedicated to bringing before the courts those issues vital to the defense and preservation of individual liberties, the right to own and use property, the free enterprise system, and limited and ethical government. Since its creation in 1977, MSLF attorneys have defended individual liberties and been active in litigation regarding the proper interpretation and application of the Takings Clause. See, e.g., Brandt v. United States, 710 F.3d 1369 (Fed. Cir. 2013) (represented Plaintiff); Horne v. Dep’t of Agric., 576 U.S. 350 (2015) (as amicus curiae); Laguna Gatuna, Inc. v. United States, 50 Fed. Cl. 336 (2001) (represented Plaintiff); Dolan v. City of Tigard, 512 U.S. 374 (1994) (as amicus curiae); Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council, 505 U.S. 1003 (1992) (as amicus curiae); Mountain States Legal Foundation v. Hodel, 799 F.2d 1423 (10th Cir. 1986) (en banc) (Plaintiff).

The right to own and use property includes, at its core, the right to exclude others. Defense of the right to exclude is central to MSLF’s mission. Indeed, if the government may utilize a private business’s property at any time without payment of just compensation—or authorize third parties to do so—businesses such as those run by Cedar Point Nursery and Fowler Packing Company (collectively, “Growers”) would be thrown into disarray and significant money and productivity would be lost. Therefore, MSLF respectfully submits this amicus curiae brief, urging the Court to grant certiorari and reverse the Ninth Circuit’s judgment below.

¹ Pursuant to Supreme Court Rule 37.3(a), all parties were given notice of Amicus’s intent to file this amicus curiae brief more than 10 days prior the filing deadline and all parties provided consent to the filing of this amicus curiae brief. No counsel for a party authored this brief in whole or in part, and no person or entity, other than MSLF, its members, or its counsel, made a monetary contribution specifically for the preparation or submission of this brief.

◆

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

The Agricultural Labor Relations Act provides that “[e]mployees shall have the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection” Cal. Lab. Code § 1152. The Agricultural Labor Relations Board enacted a regulation under the Act, which provides that employees have “the right of access by union organizers to the premises of an agricultural employer for the purposes of meeting and talking with employees and soliciting their support” Cal. Code Regs. Tit. 8, § 20900(e) (“Access Regulation”). In fact, upon written notice, union organizers can enter the property for three hours per day: An hour before work, an hour after work, and an hour during lunch for up to four 30-day periods each year. Id. Growers have been subject to either actual or attempted entries by union organizers pursuant to the Access Regulation. On one occasion, United Farm Workers organizers entered Cedar Point Nursery's property and accessed their trim sheds, where hundreds of employees were preparing strawberry plants during the busy harvest season. Petition for Writ of Certiorari ("Pet. Br.") at 7. The union organizers disrupted the employees' work by moving through the trim sheds with bullhorns, distracting and intimidating workers. Id.

Growers filed an as-applied challenge to the Access Regulation against members of the Agricultural Labor Relations Board (collectively, "Board"), arguing that, inter alia, the Access Regulation effectuated a taking of Growers' property without just compensation in violation of the Taking Clause of the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution, as applied to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment. Id. at 8–9. The district court dismissed the case, reasoning that the Access Regulation permitted only a temporary physical occupation of Growers' property, and therefore no "categorical taking[]" had occurred. Id. at 9. The Ninth Circuit affirmed, over the spirited dissent of Judge Leavy, and denied en banc review, again over spirited dissent from Judge Ikuta. Id. at 9–11.

The district court and Ninth Circuit erred in permitting the physical invasion of Growers' private property without just compensation.² The right to exclude others is the sine qua non of property rights; not some inconsequential element of the whole that can be tossed aside without thought. Depriving Growers of the right to exclude union organizers is, standing alone, a taking, and the provision to union organizers of an ongoing right of access, regardless of the limited restrictions placed upon it by the Access Regulation demands just compensation.

ARGUMENT

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

I. UNDER BACKGROUND PRINCIPLES OF PROPERTY LAW, UNION ORGANIZERS HAVE NO RIGHT TO ENTER PRIVATE PROPERTY

The Ninth Circuit's chief error in affirming the district court's dismissal of this case was the Circuit's failure to ground its analysis in longstanding background principles of state property law. While the district court did properly recognize that property rights are defined by state law, it ended its inquiry without determining whether the Access Regulation deprived Growers of property rights they previously had under state law. Pet. App. C-11 n.6. Any law or decree that deprives a property owner of a previously held right “cannot be newly legislated or decreed (without compensation), but must inhere in the title itself, in the restrictions that background principles of the State’s law of property and nuisance already place upon land ownership.” Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council, 505 U.S. 1003, 1029 (1992).

² While not at issue in the Petition currently before this Court, and thus not discussed in this brief, amicus notes that it is far from certain that the Access Regulation in fact serves a public use as required by the Fifth Amendment. The granting of an easement over private property for the purposes of subsidizing union activity is an improper use of government authority, regardless of the level of compensation awarded.

Inherent in Growers’ private property rights is the right to exclude others from entering their properties. In fact, this Court has recognized that the right to exclude is inherent in, and essential to, the “bundle of rights that are commonly characterized as property.” Loretto v. Teleprompter Manhattan CATV Corp., 458 U.S. 419, 433 (1982) (quoting Kaiser Aetna v. United States, 444 U.S. 164, 176 (1979)). Put simply, the bundle of rights that makes up property necessarily includes the right to exclude. J.E. Penner, The “Bundle of Rights” Picture of Property, 43 UCLA L. REV. 711, 719 (1996) (“[T]he concept of property is often said to refer to a ‘bundle of rights’ that may be exercised with respect to that object—principally the right to possess the property, to use the property, to exclude others from the property, and to dispose of the property by sale or gift . . .”).

Accordingly, state law may define property rights to allow a right of access to property for certain persons and purposes, but it must compensate the property owner for the taking—a fact recognized under California law. In Prop. Reserve, Inc. v. Superior Court, 375 P.3d 887 (Cal. 2016), the California Supreme Court reviewed a challenge to a state law that granted the California Department of Water Resources a right of access to private properties in order to conduct environmental and geological studies on land that the state, in the future, might seek to acquire by negotiation or eminent domain for a water project. Id. at 892. The statute provided for a “precondemnation” proceeding, which required the agency to obtain a court order prior to entering the properties and deposit with the court an amount sufficient to cover any damages that may result from conducting such environmental and geological studies. Id. at 924. The California Supreme Court determined that the statute sufficiently provided just compensation for any taking of property that occurred because it not only required the agency to deposit with the court an amount the court determined would be the probable actual damages, but also permitted the property owner to obtain compensation in the same proceeding for any actual damages after-the-fact. Id. at 893. In so holding, the court assumed that any physical trespass onto private property by the state, or authorized by the state, would constitute a taking. Id.

In identifying the sorts of physical entry that may constitute a taking, California Courts have looked to the Restatement (Second) of Torts, which provides additional insight into how the common law defines Growers’ property rights by explaining the exceptions to liability for the tort of trespass.³ See, e.g., Wilson v.

³ The Court of Federal Claims has aptly explained the relationship between takings jurisprudence and tort law in defining property rights:

[T]he common law of property relie[s] on tort principles, particularly trespass and nuisance, to help define the Interlake Steel Co., 649 P.2d 922, 925 (Cal. 1982) (en banc); Prop. Reserve Inc., 375 P.3d at 909, 909 (looking to the Restatement (Second) of Torts in determining whether common law granted the agency a license to enter onto private property). The Restatement prohibits third parties from trespassing onto private property and provides only limited exceptions to a landowner's right to exclude. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 158. Those exceptions allow third parties to enter onto private property for certain traditionally accepted purposes, such as abating a nuisance or executing an arrest warrant. Id. §§ 202–07. None of the Restatement's common-law exceptions would grant union organizers a right to enter onto private property for any purpose. Cf., Klemic v. Dominion Transmission, Inc., 138 F. Supp. 3d 673, 688 (W.D. Va. 2015) (state law that merely codified existing common-law right of natural gas company to enter onto private property to service their gas line within their easement was not a taking), appeal filed, No. 15-2338 (4th Cir. Oct. 30, 2015).⁴ Indeed, the existence of such limited common-law exceptions demonstrates that Growers have the right to exclude in the first concept of property itself and the scope of property interests. The development of takings law was, in effect, an extension of the principles of trespass and nuisance to the actions of the government.

Hansen v. United States, 65 Fed. Cl. 76, 96 (2005).

⁴ Appeal voluntarily dismissed after being held in abeyance pending decision by the Virginia Supreme Court in Palmer v. Atlantic Coast Pipeline, 801 S.E.2d 414 (Va. 2017), which similarly found a common-law right for utility company employees to enter private property to conduct survey work in conjunction with lawful eminent domain proceedings.

place. See Andrus v. Glover Const. Co., 446 U.S. 608, 616–17 (“Where Congress explicitly enumerates certain exceptions to a general prohibition, additional exceptions are not to be implied, in the absence of a contrary legislative intent.”) (citing Continental Casualty Co. v. United States, 314 U.S. 527, 533 (1942)).

Thus, Growers continue to have the right to exclude union organizers from their private property as part of the “bundle of sticks” that makes up their property. See Loretto, 458 U.S. at 433. Growers’ must, therefore, be compensated when union organizers exercise the right of access granted them by the Access Regulation, regardless of the Access Regulation’s provision of procedures for union organizers to follow when accessing Growers’ properties. Compare Pet. App. A-17–A-18 (panel emphasizing that the Access Regulation does not give union organizers “24 hours a day, 365 days a year” access to Growers’ properties), with Chicago, B. & Q.R. Co. v. City of Chicago, 166 U.S. 226, 236 (1897) (“The legislature may prescribe a form of procedure to be observed in the taking of private property for public use, but it is not due process of law if provision be not made for compensation.”). The Ninth Circuit erred in failing to analyze how Growers’ property rights were defined by state law prior to the Access Regulation and specifically in failing to recognize the significant violation of the “bundle of sticks” that make up Growers’ property rights when the state rescinds their right to exclude.

II. A PHYSICAL OCCUPATION OF ANY PORTION OF GROWERS' PROPERTIES VIOLATES GROWERS' RIGHT TO EXCLUDE AND IS A CATEGORICAL TAKING FOR WHICH JUST COMPENSATION IS OWED

The Takings Clause provides that “private property [shall not] be taken for public use, without just compensation.” U.S. CONST. Amend. V. This Court has long differentiated between physical takings and regulatory takings. Tahoe-Sierra Pres. Council, Inc. v. Tahoe Reg’l Planning Auth., 535 U.S. 302, 321–22 (2002). “When the government physically takes possession of an interest in property for some public purpose, it has a categorical duty to compensate the former owner, regardless of whether the interest that is taken constitutes an entire parcel or merely a part thereof . . . even [if] that use is temporary.” Id. at 322. In contrast, the Court’s regulatory takings jurisprudence “is of more recent vintage and is characterized by ‘essentially ad hoc, factual inquiries.’” Id. (quoting Penn Central Transp. Co. v. City of New York, 438 U.S. 104, 124 (1978)). Only regulatory takings that deprive the landowner of “all economically valuable use” are categorical, or “per se” takings. Id. at 320–21. All physical takings, however, are categorical takings. Id. at 321–22. In Horne, the Court treated physical takings and categorical takings as one and the same, emphasizing that the lower courts should not “confuse our inquiry concerning per se takings with our analysis for regulatory takings.” Horne v. Dep’t of Agric., 576 U.S. 350, 364 (2015).

In Kaiser Aetna, this Court unequivocally held that the “right to exclude,’ so universally held to be a fundamental element of the property right, falls within this category of interests that the Government cannot take without compensation.” 444 U.S. at 179–80. Deprivation of the right to exclude can, standing alone, constitute a taking. Loretto, 458 U.S. at 433; Kaiser Aetna, 444 U.S. at 179–80. And while the amount of just compensation due may vary depending on “whether a part or a whole of that interest has been appropriated by the government for the benefit of the public,” Members of Peanut Quota Holders Ass’n v. United States, 421 F.3d 1323, 1330 (Fed. Cir. 2005), the Ninth Circuit here wrongly focused on Growers’ failure to allege a permanent physical invasion, Pet. App. A-15–A-18. Additionally, this Court has “solidly established” that physical takings need not be “permanent” to be compensable. Arkansas Game & Fish Comm’n v. United States, 568 U.S. 23, 32–37 (2012) (collecting cases).

Ignoring this Court’s precedent, the Ninth Circuit panel assumed that, regardless of whether Growers’ right to exclude was taken, only permanent physical occupations (and regulatory takings depriving the property of all economically beneficial use) can qualify as per se takings. Pet. App. A-14–A-15. That decision cannot be squared with this Court’s takings jurisprudence.

As demonstrated supra, there is a “settled difference” in this Court’s takings jurisprudence “between appropriation and regulation.”⁵ Horne, 576 U.S. at 362. A physical occupation “is qualitatively more severe than a regulation of the use of property, even a regulation that imposes affirmative duties on the owner, since the owner may have no control over the timing, extent, or nature of the [physical] invasion.” Loretto, 458 U.S. at 436 (emphasis in original). There are straightforward differences between regulatory and physical takings: Regulatory takings limit a property owner’s use of private property, whereas physical takings effectuate an appropriation of private property. Horne, 576 U.S. at 363; see Yee v. City of Escondido, 503 U.S. 519, 528 (1992) (explaining that a categorical taking occurs whenever the government authorizes a “physical invasion” of private property, thus taking away the right to exclude). The Access Regulation falls under the latter category.

In Loretto, this Court stated that a physical taking is one which “require[s] the landlord to suffer the physical occupation of a portion of his building by a third party” 458 U.S. at 440. In Horne, the Court explained that a regulation allowing the government to take “possession and control” of property (in that case, raisins subject to a marketing order) is a physical taking, not a regulatory one.⁶ 576 U.S. at 362. In Brown, the Court reiterated that “[w]hen the government physically takes possession of an interest in property for some public purpose, it has a categorical duty to compensate the former owner, regardless of whether the interest that is taken constitutes an entire parcel or merely a part thereof.” 538 U.S. at 233 (internal citation omitted);⁷ see Nollan

⁵ It is “the text of the Fifth Amendment itself” which “provides a basis for drawing a distinction between physical takings and regulatory takings.” Brown v. Legal Found. of Washington, 538 U.S. 216, 233 (2003). Thus, this Court’s jurisprudence regarding physical takings “is as old as the Republic and, for the most part, involves the straightforward application of per se rules.” Id.

⁶ It is worth noting that, in Horne, this Court soundly rejected the government’s argument that a categorical taking had not occurred because the plaintiffs retained an interest in their property. 576 U.S. at 362–64. It is similarly irrelevant here that Growers were not completely dispossessed of their property. Compare Pet. App. A-17–A-18 (Ninth Circuit panel emphasizing the limits on union organizers’ access to Growers’ properties and erroneously analogizing its decision that evisceration of the right to exclude cannot alone constitute a taking with the regulatory takings “parcel as a whole” doctrine), with Horne, 576 U.S. at 364 (emphasizing the difference between “[a] regulatory restriction on use that does not entirely deprive an owner of property rights[, which] may not be a taking under Penn Central” and “a physical appropriation, [where] ‘we do not ask . . . whether it deprives the owner of all economically valuable use’ of the item taken.”) (quoting Tahoe-Sierra Pres. Council, Inc., 535 U.S. at 323).

⁷ Brown illustrated the difference between physical and regulatory takings:

[C]ompensation is mandated when a leasehold is taken and the government occupies the property for its own purposes, even though that use is temporary. Similarly, when the government appropriates part of a rooftop in order to provide cable TV access for apartment tenants, or when its planes use private airspace to approach a government airport, it is required to pay for that share no matter how small. But a government regulation that merely prohibits landlords from evicting tenants unwilling to pay a higher rent; that bans certain private uses of a portion of an owner’s property, or that forbids

v. California Coastal Comm'n, 483 U.S. 825, 831 (1987) (“To say that the appropriation of a public easement across a landowner’s premises does not constitute the taking of a property interest but rather . . . ‘a mere restriction on its use,’ is to use words in a manner that deprives them of all their ordinary meaning.”). The Court’s bright-line rule that physical invasions constitute a categorical taking “avoids otherwise difficult line-drawing problems” and respects both the letter and the spirit of the Takings Clause. See Loretto, 458 U.S. at 436 (“[C]onstitutional protection for the rights of private property cannot be made to depend on the size of the area permanently occupied.”).

The Access Regulation is not a mere regulatory limit on Growers’ use of their property, such as a rule requiring Growers to provide employees a certain number of breaks in an eight-hour workday or imposing safety measures on the use of equipment in their packing facilities. A regulation authorizing union organizers to enter Growers’ properties for up to three hours per day, for four 30-day periods per year, is fundamentally different than regulations that limit the manner in which Growers may use their property. The Access Regulation has far more in common with the beach access easement taken in Nollan than it does with, for example, the temporary development moratoria at issue in Tahoe-Sierra. As in Nollan, the Access Regulation simply cannot be characterized as a “restriction on . . . use.” 483 U.S. at the private use of certain airspace, does not constitute a taking.

538 U.S. at 233–34 (emphasis added) (citations omitted).

831. It “require[s] [Growers] to suffer the physical occupation [of their properties],” Loretto, 458 U.S. at 440, and it is that “physical invasion” that places this case in the categorical takings category. See Arkansas Game & Fish Comm’n, 568 U.S. at 38.

Finally, the invasion sanctioned by the Access Regulation is both intended and foreseeable. Arkansas Game & Fish Comm’n, 568 U.S. at 39 (“Also relevant to the takings inquiry is the degree to which the invasion is intended or is the foreseeable result of authorized government action.”). Indeed, the entire purpose of the Access Regulation is to grant union organizers access to private property that they did not previously have. See Cal. Code Regs. Tit. 8, § 20900(e) (declaring “the right of access by union organizers to the premises of an agricultural employer for the purpose of meeting and talking with employees and soliciting their support”).

III. A PHYSICAL OCCUPATION OF ANY DURATION VIOLATES GROWERS’ RIGHT TO EXCLUDE AND IS A CATEGORICAL TAKING FOR WHICH JUST COMPENSATION IS OWED

The Ninth Circuit’s focus on whether the Access Regulation grants union organizers “permanent” access to Growers’ private properties is misguided. Pet. App. A-15–A-18. The court’s confusion seemed to stem from the inappropriate characterization of physical takings as required to be permanent in nature. Id. The panel started with the erroneous premise that a physical taking of property does not always constitute a categorical taking, and suggested that, because the Access Regulation does not allow union organizers to permanently move onto Growers' property, no categorical taking occurred. Id. (determining that anything short of a "permanent physical occupation" must be analyzed under Penn Central's balancing test). This analysis was in grave error and conflicts directly with this Court's precedent.

Put simply, this Court's decisions "confirm that takings temporary in duration can be compensable." Arkansas Game & Fish Comm'n, 568 U.S. at 32–33 ("[W]e have rejected the argument that government action must be permanent to qualify as a taking."). The general rule is not that Penn Central's regulatory takings analysis applies whenever a government occupation is temporary. Rather, the rule is "if government action would qualify as a taking when permanently continued, temporary actions of the same character may also qualify as a taking." Id. at 515. In Kaiser Aetna, marina owners had formed a bay by dredging a shallow lagoon and a connecting outlet into contiguous navigable waters. 444 U.S. at 164. The government claimed that the property owners were required to open the lagoon to public use since it was now subject to a "navigational servitude." Id. at 179–80. In rejecting that argument, this Court relied on the fact that "the imposition of the navigational servitude in this context will result in an actual physical invasion of the privately owned marina And even if the Government physically invades only an easement in property, it must nonetheless pay just compensation." Id. (citations omitted). It was irrelevant that the public's use would be only intermittent; the most determinative fact was the government's contention that "the owner has somehow lost one of the most essential sticks in the bundle of rights that are commonly characterized as property—the right to exclude others.” Id. at 176. The government’s attempt to create a “right of access” to the landowners’ private property went “so far beyond ordinary regulation or improvement for navigation as to amount to a taking” Id. at 178.

Similarly, in Arkansas Game & Fish Comm’n, this Court considered whether temporary government action in flooding plaintiffs’ property seasonally over a six-year period constituted a categorical taking. Id. at 517–18. In holding that the temporary flooding could constitute a taking, the Court explained, “[w]e do not read so much into the word ‘permanent’” Id. at 520. On remand, the Federal Circuit determined that the temporary flooding of plaintiffs’ property did indeed constitute a taking, given that such flooding was the foreseeable result of the government’s actions and that the flooding “effected a wholesale change” in the plaintiffs’ property rights. Arkansas Game & Fish Comm’n v. United States, 736 F.3d 1364, 1372–75 (Fed. Cir. 2013).

Here, the Board created a right of access that did not exist prior to the Access Regulation, depriving Growers of the right to exclude union organizers for up to three hours per day, for four 30-day periods per year. Cal. Code Regs. Tit. 8, § 20900(e). This grant of a right to union organizers effected a “wholesale change” to Growers’ property rights. See Arkansas Game & Fish Comm’n, 736 F.3d at 1374. The extent of union organizers’ use of that right is immaterial except to measure damages—it is the indefinite deprivation of the right to exclude union organizers that constitutes a taking of Growers’ property rights.

Hendler v. United States, 952 F.2d 1364, 1364 (Fed. Cir. 1991), is instructive on this point. In that case, landowners challenged the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency’s (“EPA”) entry onto landowner’s property to install groundwater wells and conduct groundwater monitoring. Id. at 1374–75. Similar to Growers here, there landowners faced penalties for interfering with the EPA’s activities. Id. at 1374. The EPA argued that its entries onto landowners’ properties were temporary in nature, and the district court agreed that more evidence was needed to determine the extent of the intrusion. Id. at 1375–76. In reversing, the Federal Circuit explained that “[a]ll takings are ‘temporary,’ in the sense that the government can always change its mind at a later time,” but “the concept of permanent physical occupation does not require that in every instance the occupation be exclusive, or continuous and uninterrupted.” Id. at 1376, 1378. The government’s use of the landowners’ property “for whatever duration was necessary to conduct their activities” and the risk of them returning at any time was simply different in kind from a “common law trespass quare clausum fregit” (such as a “truckdriver parking on someone’s vacant land to eat lunch”). Id. at 1376–77.

Even if the Ninth Circuit were correct in focusing on the duration of the invasion rather than the physical nature of the encroachment, the Access Regulation permanently grants union organizers access to Growers’ properties—in essence, the government is “behave[ing] as if it ha[s] acquired an easement . . .” Hendler, 952 F. 2d at 1378. The union organizers may return multiple times per day, for up to 30 days in a row; and may decide to return at any time in the future. Indeed, if Growers exercise their property rights to exclude union organizers, they can face legal action. See Cal. Code Regs. Tit. 8, §§ 20201–02, 20216, 20218–20, 20279. Such a deprivation of Growers’ property rights is indistinguishable from the easement granted to the public in Nollan. See 483 U.S. at 831–32 (“We think a ‘permanent physical occupation’ has occurred . . . where individuals are given a permanent and continuous right to pass to and fro, so that the real property may continuously be traversed, even though no particular individual is permitted to station himself permanently upon the premises.”) (emphasis added); see also Hendler, 952 F.2d at 1378 (where the government entered plaintiffs’ land “at its convenience,” there was “little doubt that such activity, even though temporally intermittent, is not ‘temporary.’ It is a taking of the plaintiffs’ right to exclude . . .”). The Ninth Circuit erred in finding the duration of the union organizers’ occupation of Growers’ property determinative, rather than considering the ongoing and permanent deprivation of Growers’ right to exclude effectuated by the Access Regulation.

IV. EXCLUSIVE OWNERSHIP IS FUNDAMENTAL TO THE DEFINITION OF PROPERTY PROTECTED BY THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION

The Framers of the United States Constitution recognized that a secure system of private property rights was absolutely fundamental to a system of ordered liberty in which the People govern themselves. William M. Treanor, The Original Understanding of the Takings Clause and the Political Process, 95 COLUM. L. REV. 782, 821–22 (1995). The Framers' conception of private property rights, informed by the English common law tradition, included "the free use, enjoyment, and disposal of all his acquisitions, without any control of diminution, save only by the laws of the land." 1 WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, COMMENTARIES *134 (referring to property as an "absolute" and "inherent" right).⁸ The Framers also "believed that physical possession of property was particularly vulnerable to process failure"—that is, that the political process would not always adequately protect an individual's private property rights. Treanor, The Original Understanding of the Takings Clause, 95 COLUM. L. REV. at 833–34. Accordingly, the Framers included the Takings Clause in the Fifth Amendment to safeguard against such inevitable government abuses. Id. at 854–55; Richard A. Epstein, The Ebbs and Flows in Takings Law: Reflections on the Lake Tahoe Case, 2002 CATO SUP. CT. REV. 5, 5 (2002) ("For the Framers of our Constitution, the principles of good government started with the protection of private property—that guardian of all other rights.").

Even as this Court's regulatory takings jurisprudence has evolved, the Court's physical takings jurisprudence has remained largely unchanged. Compare Tahoe-Sierra Pres. Council, Inc., 535 U.S. at 322 with Brown, 538 U.S. at 233. The principle that even takings "temporary in duration" are compensable was "solidly established in the World War II era,” when the government took temporary possession of many properties incident to wartime necessity. See Arkansas Game and Fish Comm’n, 568 U.S. at 33 (collecting cases). Since then, the Court has continued to zealously protect private property owners against physical invasions of their property by the government. See Horne, 576 U.S. at 362 (the government’s physical taking of raisins was unlike a regulatory limit on production of raisins because “[t]he Constitution . . . is concerned with means as well as ends,” and a physical invasion always constitutes a per se taking). In our system of constitutional governance, it has long been recognized that “if the property of an individual, fairly and honestly acquired, may be seized without compensation[,]” then “[i]t may well be doubted whether the nature of society and of government . . . prescribe[s] [any] limits to the legislative power.” Fletcher v. Peck, 10 U.S. (6 Cranch) 87, 135 (1810).

⁸ Blackstone's Commentaries were often cited as a resource by the Framers and "constituted the preeminent authority on English law for the founding generation . . ." District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 593–94 (2008) (quoting Alden v. Maine, 527 U.S. 706, 715 (1999)).

Exclusivity is the defining element that renders property “private” in the first instance. See Int’l News Serv. v. Associated Press, 248 U.S. 215, 250 (1918) (Brandeis, J., dissenting) (“An essential element of individual property is the legal right to exclude others from enjoying it.”); RICHARD A. EPSTEIN, TAKINGS: PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE POWER OF EMINENT DOMAIN 65 (1985) (“[T]he idea of property embraces the absolute right to exclude.”). As the Federal Circuit succinctly stated in Hendler:

The notion of exclusive ownership as a property right is fundamental to our theory of social organization. In addition to its central role in protecting the individual’s right to be let alone, the importance of exclusive ownership . . . is now essential to economic development, and to the avoidance of the wasting of resources found under common property systems.

952 F.2d at 1375. There is no conception of private property rights that allows the government to snatch the right to exclude from the property owner's bundle of sticks with impunity. Without the right to exclude, private property would not exist. Thomas W. Merrill, Property and the Right to Exclude, 77 NEB. L. REV. 730 (1998) (Arguing that the right to exclude is not only the "essential stick" in the bundle of rights that comprise property, it is the "sine qua non" of property.). That is why this Court has consistently and repeatedly affirmed that a physical invasion of a property owner's right to exclude always constitutes a categorical taking. Epstein, The Ebbs and Flows in Takings Law, 2002 CATO SUP. CT. REV. at 6 ("[I]n all cases of occupation, the courts have adhered to a well-nigh per se rule that requires compensation whenever government occupies land, including some tiny fraction of a larger holding."). In holding otherwise, the Ninth Circuit has set a dangerous precedent that imperils the right to exclude—"perhaps the most fundamental of all property interests." Lingle v. Chevron U.S.A. Inc., 544 U.S. 528, 539 (2005). Accordingly, this Court should take up grant certiorari and reverse the decision below.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should grant the Petition.

DATED September 2, 2020

Respectfully submitted,

Cristen Wohlgemuth
Counsel of Record
David C. McDonald
Mountain States Legal Foundation
2596 South Lewis Way
Lakewood, Colorado 80227
(303) 292-2021
cristen@mslegal.org
dmcdonald@mslegal.org

Counsel for Amicus Curiae