RENARD CORTEZ MURRAY,

Petitioner-Appellant,

versus

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Respondent-Appellee.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Middle District of Alabama

(May 1, 2020)

Before WILSON, WILLIAM PRYOR and LAGOA, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM:

Renard Murray appeals the denial of his motion to vacate his sentence, 28 U.S.C. § 2255, for aiding and abetting another to possess a firearm during a bank robbery, 18 U.S.C. § 924(c). The district court granted a certificate of appealability for whether Murray’s conviction based on a guilty plea is constitutional in the light of the decisions in United States v. Davis, 139 S. Ct. 2319 (2019), and Johnson v. United States, 135 S. Ct. 2551 (2015). Murray contends that the predicate offense to which he pleaded guilty, aiding and abetting an armed bank robbery, is not a “crime of violence” under § 924(c)(3). Our precedents hold otherwise. We affirm.

In an appeal of a denial of a motion to vacate, we review questions of law de novo and factual findings for clear error. Lynn v. United States, 365 F.3d 1225, 1232 (11th Cir. 2004). We may affirm for any reason supported by the record. Castillo v. United States, 816 F.3d 1300, 1303 (11th Cir. 2016).

As Murray concedes, our precedents control this appeal. Although in Davis the Supreme Court held that the residual clause of section 924(c)(3)(B) is unconstitutionally vague, 139 S. Ct. at 2323, 2336, our precedents establish that aiding and abetting a Hobbs Act robbery is categorically a crime of violence under the elements clause of section 924(c)(3)(A). In re Sams, 830 F.3d 1234, 1239 (11th Cir. 2016); In re Colon, 826 F.3d 1301, 1305 (11th Cir. 2016). So we affirm the denial of Murray’s motion to vacate.

AFFIRMED.

OPINION

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255, petitioner, a federal inmate, filed this lawsuit seeking habeas relief. This lawsuit is now before the court on the recommendation of the United States Magistrate Judge that the § 2255 petition be denied. Also before the court are petitioner's objections to the recommendation. After an independent and de novo review of the record, the court concludes that petitioner's objections should be overruled and the magistrate judge's recommendation adopted.

An appropriate judgment will be entered.

DONE, this the 25th day of September, 2019.

RECOMMENDATION OF THE MAGISTRATE JUDGE

Before the court is federal inmate Renard Cortez Murray's motion under 28 U.S.C. § 2255 to vacate, set aside, or correct sentence. See Docs. # 2 & 7.¹

I. INTRODUCTION

On April 30, 2003, Murray pleaded guilty to one count of aiding and abetting armed bank robbery, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a), (d), (e) (Count 1); one count of brandishing a firearm during a crime of violence, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1)(A)(ii) (Count 2); and one count of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g) (Count 3). The aiding and abetting armed bank robbery conviction served as the predicate "crime of violence" for Murray's § 924(c) conviction. See Doc. # 11-1 at 1–3. After a sentencing hearing on July 22, 2003, the district court sentenced Murray to 294 months in prison, consisting of 210 months on Count 1 and 120 months on Count 3, to be served concurrently with each other, and 84 months on Count 2, to be served consecutively to the terms imposed on Counts 1 and 3. See Doc. # 2-2 at 2. Murray did not appeal.

On June 27, 2016, Murray filed this § 2255 motion arguing that, in light of the Supreme Court’s decision in Johnson v. United States, 135 S. Ct. 2551 (2015), his armed bank robbery convictions cannot qualify as predicate “crimes of violence” for his § 924(c) convictions, and therefore his convictions and sentence under § 924(c) are invalid. See Docs. # 2, 3 & 7.

For the reasons that follow, the Magistrate Judge finds that Murray’s § 2255 motion should be denied and this case dismissed with prejudice.

II. DISCUSSION

Title 18 § 924(c) provides in part that a defendant who uses or carries a firearm “during and in relation to any crime of violence or drug trafficking crime,” or possesses a firearm in furtherance of such crimes, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime, be sentenced to a separate and consecutive term of imprisonment. If, as here, the firearm is brandished during the crime, the consecutive sentence shall be “not less than 7 years.” 18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(1)(A)(ii).

For purposes of § 924(c), a “crime of violence” is defined as a felony offense that:

- (A) has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or
- (B) that by its nature, involves a substantial risk that physical force against the person or property of another may be used in the course of committing the offense.

18 U.S.C. § 924(c)(3). Subsection (A) of § 924(c)(3) is referred to as the “use-of-force clause,” and subsection (B) is referred to as the “§ 924(c)(3)(B) residual clause.” See In re Saint Fleur, 824 F.3d 1337, 1339 (11th Cir. 2016).

A separate but similar sentencing provision, the Armed Career Criminal Act (“ACCA”), 18 U.S.C. § 924(e),² defines the term “violent felony” as any crime punishable by a term of imprisonment exceeding one year that:

- (i) has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person of another; or
- (ii) is burglary, arson, or extortion, involves use of explosives; or otherwise involves conduct that presents a serious potential risk of physical injury to another.

18 U.S.C. § 924(e)(2)(B). The first part of this definition, § 924(e)(2)(B)(i), is known as the “elements clause.” See In re Sams, 830 F.3d 1234 (11th Cir. 2016). The second part, § 924(e)(2)(B)(ii), is itself split into two clauses. The first, listing burglary, arson, extortion, or an offense involving the use of explosives, is known as the “enumerated offenses clause,” and the second is known as the “residual clause.” Id.

In Johnson v. United States, decided on June 26, 2015, the United States Supreme Court held that the residual clause of the ACCA is unconstitutionally vague. See 135 S.Ct. at 2557–59, 2563. Based on that holding, the Court concluded that “imposing an increased [ACCA] sentence under the residual clause ... violates the Constitution’s guarantee of due process.” Id. at 2563. The Court also held, “Today’s decision does not call into question application of the [ACCA] to the four enumerated offenses, or the remainder of the [ACCA's] definition of a violent felony.” Id. at 2563.

² Under the ACCA, a defendant who violates 18 U.S.C. § 922(g) (by possessing a firearm as a convicted felon) and has three prior convictions for a “violent felony” or a serious drug offense is subject to a mandatory minimum sentence of 15 years’ imprisonment. 18 U.S.C. § 924(e)(1).

In April 2016, the Supreme Court held that Johnson announced a new substantive rule that applies retroactively to cases on collateral review. Welch v. United States, 136 S.Ct. 1257, 1264–65 (2016). In the wake of Johnson and Welch, inmates sentenced as armed career criminals based on prior convictions deemed “violent felonies” under the ACCA’s residual clause could challenge their ACCA sentences through § 2255 motions.

Johnson did not address the definition of a crime of violence found in 18 U.S.C. § 924(c). However, Murray argues that the holding in Johnson applies to § 924(c); that Johnson invalidates the “924(c)(3)(B) residual clause” (whose language is similar to that of the ACCA’s unconstitutionally vague residual clause); and that 18 U.S.C. § 2113 armed bank robbery does not meet the definition of a crime of violence under the “use-of-force clause” in § 924(c)(3)(A). Thus he argues that his § 924(c) conviction, which relied on his aiding and abetting armed bank robbery conviction as the predicate “crime of violence,” cannot stand. See Docs. # 2, 3 & 7.

Whether the holding in Johnson extends to the residual clause in § 924(c)(3)(B) is currently an open question in the Eleventh Circuit. Until recently, that question seemed to be resolved by Ovalles v. United States, 861 F.3d 1257 (11th Cir. 2017), where the Eleventh Circuit held that Johnson did not apply to § 924(c) and concluded expressly that “Johnson’s void-for-vagueness ruling does not apply to or invalidate the ‘risk-of-force’ clause [i.e., the residual clause] in § 924(c)(3)(B).” 861 F.3d at 1265. On May 15, 2018, however, the Eleventh Circuit vacated its panel opinion in Ovalles and ordered that the case be reheard en banc. Ovalles v. United States, 889 F.3d 1259 (11th Cir. 2018); see Eleventh Circuit General Order No. 43, May 17, 2018.

Nevertheless, the Eleventh Circuit has stated: “Even assuming that Johnson invalidated § 924(c)’s residual clause [§ 924(c)(3)(B)], that conclusion would not assist [a defendant whose] underlying conviction on which his § 924(c) conviction was based ... [met] the requirements that the force clause in § 924(c)(3)(A) sets out for a qualifying underlying offense.” In re Smith, 829 F.3d 1276, 1280 (11th Cir. 2016). The Eleventh Circuit has held that 18 U.S.C. § 2113 armed bank robbery is categorically a crime of violence under § 924(c)(3)(A)’s use-of-force clause. In re Hines, 824 F.3d 1334, 1336–37 (11th Cir. 2016) (“[Petitioner’s] § 924(c) conviction on Count 2 was explicitly based on his companion Count 1 conviction for armed bank robbery, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2113(a) and (d). And a conviction for armed bank robbery clearly meets the requirement for an underlying felony offense, as set out in § 924(c)(3)(A), which requires the underlying offense to include as an element, ‘the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another.’”); see also Sams, 830 F.3d at 1239 (holding expressly that “a bank robbery conviction under § 2113(a) by force and violence or by intimidation qualifies as a crime of violence under the § 924(c)(3)(A) use-of-force clause”). The Eleventh Circuit has further held that where the companion substantive conviction qualifies as a crime of violence under the use-of-force clause in § 924(c)(3)(A), a conviction for aiding and abetting the companion substantive conviction equally qualifies as a crime of violence under the use-of-force clause. In re Colon, 826 F.3d 1301, 1305 (11th Cir. 2016) (holding aiding and abetting Hobbs Act robbery was crime of violence under 924(c)(3)(A)'s use-of-force clause because companion substantive conviction for Hobbs Act robbery was a crime of violence under the use-of-force clause).

Because Eleventh Circuit precedent holds that § 2113 armed bank robbery is categorically a crime of violence under § 924(c)(3)(A)'s use-of-force clause—and because a conviction for aiding and abetting the companion substantive conviction equally qualifies as a crime of violence under the use-of-force clause where the companion substantive conviction qualifies as a crime of violence under that clause—Murray's conviction and sentence under § 924(c) are still valid following Johnson, and Murray's instant claim is foreclosed.

III. CONCLUSION

Accordingly, it is the RECOMMENDATION of the Magistrate Judge that the 28 U.S.C. § 2255 motion be DENIED and his case DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

It is further

ORDERED that the parties shall file any objections to this Recommendation or before August 22, 2018. A party must specifically identify the factual findings and legal conclusions in the Recommendation to which objection is made; frivolous, conclusive, or general objections will not be considered. Failure to file written objections to the Magistrate Judge's findings and recommendations under the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) will bar a party from a de novo determination by the District Court of legal and factual issues covered in the Recommendation and waives the right of the party to challenge on appeal the District Court's order based on unobjected-to factual and legal conclusions accepted or adopted by the District Court except upon grounds of plain error or manifest injustice. Nettles v. Wainwright, 677 F.2d 404 (5th Cir. 1982); 11th Cir. R. 3-1. See Stein v. Lanning Securities, Inc., 667 F.2d 33 (11th Cir. 1982). See also Bonner v. City of Prichard, 661 F.2d 1206 (11th Cir. 1981) (en banc).
