IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 20-6425

SCOTT MEECE, PETITIONER

v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS
FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

MEMORANDUM FOR THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION

Petitioner contends (Pet. 6-15) that armed bank robbery, in violation of 18 U.S.C. 2113(a) and (d), does not qualify as a "crime of violence" within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. 924(c)(3)(A). The district court correctly rejected that contention, and the court of appeals appropriately declined to issue a certificate of appealability.

A conviction for armed bank robbery requires proof that the defendant (1) took or attempted to take money from the custody or control of a bank "by force and violence, or by intimidation," 18 U.S.C. 2113(a); and (2) either committed an "assault[]" or endangered “the life of any person” through “the use of a dangerous weapon or device” in committing the robbery, 18 U.S.C. 2113(d). For the reasons stated in the government’s brief in opposition to the petition for a writ of certiorari in Johnson v. United States, No. 19-7079 (Apr. 24, 2020), armed bank robbery qualifies as a crime of violence under Section 924(c) because it “has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another,” 18 U.S.C. 924(c) (3) (A). See Br. in Opp. at 7-25, Johnson, supra (No. 19-7079).¹

Petitioner contends that armed bank robbery does not qualify as a crime of violence under Section 924(c) (3) (A), asserting that robbery by “intimidation” does not require a threat of violent force. See Pet. 11-15. That contention lacks merit for the reasons explained at pages 9 to 15 of the government’s brief in opposition in Johnson, supra (No. 19-7079). Every court of appeals with criminal jurisdiction, including the court below, has recognized that Section 924(c) (3) (A) and similarly worded provisions encompass federal bank robbery and armed bank robbery. See id. at 7-8. This Court has recently and repeatedly denied petitions for a writ of certiorari challenging the circuits’ consensus on that issue, see id. at 8-9 & n.1, and the same result is warranted here.

¹ We have served petitioner with a copy of the government’s brief in opposition in Johnson, which is also available from this Court’s online docket.

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be denied.²

Respectfully submitted.
