PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI

Petitioner Pedro Fermin Barajas seeks a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

OPINIONS BELOW

The Fifth Circuit's opinion is unpublished but is reprinted in the appendix. See United States v. Pedro Fermin Barajas, 810 Fed. Appx. 356 (5th Cir. June 25, 2020)

JURISDICTION

The Fifth Circuit issued its written judgment on June 25, 2020. (Appendix A). The 90-day deadline for filing a petition for writ of certiorari provided for in Supreme Court Rule 13 has been extended to 150 days from the date of the lower court judgment by order of this Court on March 19, 2020. This Court has jurisdiction to review the judgment under 28 U.S.C. § 1254(1).

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

Title 18, 3553(a) of the United States Code provides:

(a) Factors to be considered in imposing a sentence. The court shall impose a sentence sufficient, but not greater than necessary, to comply with the purposes set forth in paragraph (2) of this subsection. The court, in determining the particular sentence to be imposed, shall consider –

(1) the nature and circumstances of the offense and the history and characteristics of the defendant;

(2) the need for the sentence imposed –

(A) to reflect the seriousness of the offense, to promote respect for the law, and to provide just punishment for the offense;

(B) to afford adequate deterrence to criminal conduct;

(C) to protect the public from further crimes of the defendant; and

(D) to provide the defendant with needed educational or vocational training, medical care, or other correctional treatment in the most effective manner . . .

(3) the kinds of sentences available;

(4) the kinds of sentence and the sentencing range established for—

(A) the applicable category of offense committed by the applicable category of defendant as set forth in the guidelines —

(i) issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(1) of title 28, United States Code, subject to any amendments made to such guidelines by act of Congress (regardless of whether such amendments have yet to be incorporated by the Sentencing Commission into amendments issued under section 994(p) of title 28); and

(ii) that, except as provided in section 3742(g), are in effect on the date the defendant is sentenced; or

(B) in the case of a violation of probation or supervised release, the applicable guidelines or policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(3) of title 28, United States Code, taking into account any amendments made to such guidelines or policy statements by act of Congress (regardless of whether such amendments have yet to be incorporated by the Sentencing Commission into amendments issued under section 994(p) of title 28);

(5) any pertinent policy statement —

(A) issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(2) of title 28, United States Code, subject to any amendments made to such policy statement by act of Congress (regardless of whether such amendments have yet to be incorporated by the Sentencing Commission into amendments issued under section 994(p) of title 28); and

(B) that, except as provided in section 3742(g), is in effect on the date the defendant is sentenced.

(6) the need to avoid unwarranted sentence disparities among defendants with similar records who have been found guilty of similar conduct; and

(7) the need to provide restitution to any victims of the offense.

The Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides the following:

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

1. United States v. Pedro Fermin Barajas, 4:19-CR-00119-A-1, United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas, Fort Worth Division. Judgement and sentence entered on October 28, 2019.
2. United States v. Pedro Fermin Barajas, CA No.19-11190, Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Judgment affirmed on June 25, 2020.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

I. Facts and Proceedings in District Court

In District Court

On April 17, 2019, Pedro Fermin Barajas was charged in a one count indictment with felon in possession of a firearm, a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(1). (ROA.10).<sup>1</sup> On May 10, 2019, Barajas plead guilty to the one count indictment without a written plea agreement. (ROA.52). As a part of the guilty plea, Barajas entered in to a written stipulation of facts, which purported to establish the factual basis for the guilty plea. (ROA.53-54).

The pre-sentence report (PSR), applying U.S.S.G. §2K2.1, determined the total offense level was a level 15 (ROA.154), the criminal history category was a category V (ROA.160), and the advisory imprisonment range was 37-46 months. (ROA.167). The PSR found no grounds that warranted an upward departure or upward variant sentence. (ROA.168-169). Barajas requested a downward variance from the advisory imprisonment range. (ROA.116-117). The district court sentenced Barajas to a 60-month term of imprisonment, a $100 mandatory special assessment and a three-year term of supervised release. (ROA.109). The Court identified the sentence as an upward variance. (ROA.120-121).

On Appeal

On Appeal, Fermin Barajas argued that the 60-month sentence, which was an upward variance from the advisory Guideline range of 37-46 months was substantively unreasonable. He argued that the district court did not address the motion for downward variance or mitigating factors presented by the defendant and therefore failed to consider proper sentencing factors, and that the upward variance was greater than necessary to achieve the purposes of sentence set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553 and was an abuse of discretion. The Fifth Circuit affirmed the sentence without conducting any reweighing of the sentencing factors, stating “this court will not engage in a reweighing of the 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) factors.” United States v. Fermin Barajas, 810 Fed. Appx. at 357. The failure of the Fifth Circuit to conduct any reweighing of the sentencing factors conflicts with the demands of due process and the Supreme Court case law.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

I. THE COURT BELOW AND OTHER FEDERAL COURTS OF APPEALS HAVE REACHED SUBSTANTIALLY DIFFERENT CONCLUSIONS REGARDING THE APPROPRIATE LEVEL OF DEFERENCE TO BE ACCORDED THE DISTRICT COURT IN SUBSTANTIVE REASONABLENESS REVIEW.

A. The circuits are in conflict.

The length of a federal sentence is determined by the district court's application of 18 U.S.C. §3553(a). United States v. Booker, 543 U.S. 220, 261 (2005). A district court must impose a sentence that is adequate, but no greater than necessary, to achieve the goals set forth in 18 U.S.C. §3553(a)(2). See 18 U.S.C. §3553(a)(2). The district court's compliance with this requirement is reviewed for reasonableness. See Rita v. United States, 551 U.S. 338, 359. (2007).

In Gall v. United States, 552 U.S. 38 (2007), this Court emphasized that all federal sentences, “whether inside, just outside, or significantly outside the Guidelines range” are reviewed on appeal “under a deferential abuse-of-discretion standard.” Gall, 552 U.S. at 41. It expanded further on this theme in Kimbrough v. United States, 552 U.S. 85 (2007), holding that district courts enjoyed the power to disagree with policy decisions of the Guidelines where those decisions were not empirically founded. See Kimbrough, 552 U.S. at 109.

Nonetheless, the courts of appeals have taken divergent positions regarding the extent of deference owed district courts when federal sentences are reviewed for reasonableness. The Fifth Circuit flat-out prohibits “substantive second-guessing of the sentencing court.” United States v. Cisneros-Gutierrez, 517 F.3d 751, 767 (5th Cir. 2008).

This approach contrasts sharply with the position of several other courts of appeals. The Second Circuit has emphasized that it is not the case that “district courts have a blank check to impose whatever sentences suit their fancy.” See United States v. Jones, 531 F.3d 163, 174 (2d Cir. 2008). The Eleventh and Third Circuits have likewise read Gall to “leave no doubt that an appellate court may still overturn a substantively unreasonable sentence, albeit only after examining it through the prism of abuse of discretion, and that appellate review has not been extinguished.” United States v. Pugh, 515 F.3d 1179, 1191 (11th Cir. 2008); accord United States v. Levinson, 543 F.3d 190, 195-196 (3d Cir. 2008). These cases conform to the consensus among the federal circuits that it remains appropriate to reverse at least some federal sentences after Gall as substantively unreasonable. See United States v. Ofrey-Campos, 534 F.3d 1, 44 (1st Cir. 2008); United States v. Abu Ali, 528 F.3d 210, 269 (4th Cir. 2008); United States v. Funk, 534 F.3d 522, 530 (6th Cir. 2008); United States v. Shy, 538 F.3d 933 (8th Cir. 2008).

These approaches cannot be squared. The Fifth Circuit understands Gall to prohibit substantive second guessing; the majority of other circuits have issued opinions that understand their roles as to do precisely that, albeit deferentially.

B. The present case is the appropriate vehicle.

The present case is an appropriate vehicle to consider this conflict, as Fermin Barajas’s case involves a plausible claim of unreasonableness under §3553(a). Fermin Barajas presented compelling mitigating factors in a sentencing memorandum and at the sentencing hearing and filed a motion for downward variance based upon these mitigating factors. In justifying the upward variant sentence, the district court merely recited Fermin Barajas's criminal history from the PSR. The district court failed to address any of the mitigating factors presented by the defense.

Title 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) requires that. "The court shall impose a sentence sufficient, but not greater than necessary, to comply with the purposes set forth in paragraph (2) of this subsection." Section 3553(a) also requires a district court to consider, "[T]he need to avoid unwarranted sentencing disparities among defendants with similar records who have been found guilty of similar conduct . . ." 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)(2)(G). This Court has instructed courts of appeals to review a district court's compliance with Section 3553 by the "reasonableness" standard.

However, the Fifth Circuit has made it clear that it prohibits "substantive second-guessing of the sentencing court." United States v. Cisneros-Gutierrez, 517 F.3d at 767. The Fifth Circuit has simply refused to conduct any reasonableness review by re-visiting the weighing of sentencing factors. See United States v. Malone, 828 F.3d 331, 342 (5th Cir. 2016); United States v. Hernandez, 876 F.3d 161, 167 (5th Cir. 2017); United States v. Cotten, 650 Fed. Appx. 175, 178 (5th Cir. 2016) (unpublished); United States v. Mosqueda, 437 Fed. Appx. 312, 312 (5th Cir. 2011) (unpublished); United States v. Turcios-Rivera, 583 Fed. Appx. 375, 376-377 (5th Cir. 2014); United States v. Douglas, 667 Fed. Appx. 508, 509 (5th Cir. 2016) (unpublished).

The problem in this case, and the reason this Court should grant review, is that the Petitioner received no reasonableness review from the court of appeals.

Fermin Barajas fully preserved the sentencing issue at the trial court and presented this issue for abuse of discretion – or reasonableness – review on appeal. The Fifth Circuit affirmed the sentence without conducting any kind of reasonableness analysis or weighing of the sentencing factors. Accordingly, the outcome of the case likely turns on an appellate court’s refusal to engage in meaningful review of the reasonableness of a criminal sentence. Review is warranted to address the practice of the Fifth Circuit to refuse to apply the reasonableness review required by this Court, and to resolve the division in the circuit courts in applying reasonableness review.

Moreover, this Court’s recent decision in Holguin-Hernandez v. United States, ___ U.S.__, 140 S.Ct. 762 (2020), makes clear that the task of reasonableness review is precisely to reweigh the sentencing factors, though under a deferential standard of review. In Holguin-Hernandez, the defense requested a sentence of fewer than 12 months for violating the terms of his release. See Holguin-Hernandez, 140 S.Ct. at 764. When he did not object to a greater term as unreasonable, the Fifth Circuit applied plain error review to his substantive reasonableness claim on appeal. See id. at 765.

This Court, however, found that no such objection was necessary. See id. at 764. Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 51 states that “[a] party may preserve a claim of error by informing the court ... of [1] the action the party wishes the court to take, or [2] the party’s objection to the court’s action and the grounds for that objection.” Fed. Rule Crim. Proc. 51(b). Applying this standard, this Court held that a request for a lesser sentence presented the same claim to the district court that a defendant might assert in an appellate reasonableness claim. Both forms of advocacy claimed that the sentence exceeded what is necessary to satisfy the §3553(a) factors. See Holguin-Hernandez, 140 S. Ct. at 766–767. As this Court explained, “[a] defendant who, by advocating for a particular sentence, communicates to the trial judge his view that a longer sentence is ‘greater than necessary’ has thereby informed the court of the legal error at issue in an appellate challenge to the substantive reasonableness of the sentence.” Id. at 766-767.

The core of the Holguin-Hernandez holding is thus that the defendant asserting a reasonableness claim is doing the same thing in the court of appeals that he or she does when requesting leniency in the district court—arguing the weight of the 3553(a) factors. If the courts of appeals faithfully undertake reasonableness review, then, they must to some extent “reweigh the sentencing factors”, “substantively second guess” the district court, and entertain mere “disagreement with the district court’s weighing of the § 3553(a) factors.” As noted, this overturns the view of substantive reasonableness review applied below.

As an alternative remedy, this Court could grant certiorari, vacate the judgment below, and remand for reconsideration (GVR) in light of developments following an opinion below when those developments “reveal a reasonable probability that the decision below rests upon a premise that the lower court would reject if given the opportunity for further consideration, and where it appears that such a redetermination may determine the ultimate outcome of the litigation...” Lawrence v. Chater, 516 U.S. 163, 167 (1996). In the absence of its misguided view of reasonableness review, it is reasonably probable that the court of appeals would have reversed the sentence.

CONCLUSION

For all the foregoing reasons, the Petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted this 20th day of November, 2020.
