Notice: PLEASE REFER TO FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE RULE 32.1 GOVERNING THE CITATION TO UNPUBLISHED OPINIONS.

Prior History: [*371] Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas. USDC No. 4:11-CR-192-3.

United States v. Coronado, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8905 \(N.D. Tex., Jan. 11, 2012\)

Disposition: AFFIRMED.

Counsel: For United States of America, Plaintiff - Appellee: Leigha Amy Simonton, U.S. Attorney's Office Northern District of Texas, Dallas, TX.

For Jason Alfred Martinez, Defendant - Appellant: Brandon Elliott Beck, Jaidee Serrano, Federal Public Defender's Office, Fort Worth, TX.

Judges: Before HAYNES, WILLETT, and HO, Circuit Judges.

Jason Alfred Martinez appeals the 12-month sentence imposed following the revocation of his supervised release. He contends that the district court's upward variance amounted to a clear error of judgment in balancing the sentencing factors because it failed to give adequate weight to the fact that Martinez primarily complied with his supervised release conditions prior to his mother's death, which affected him significantly.

We review a revocation sentence to determine whether it is "plainly unreasonable." See United States v. Miller, 634 F.3d 841, 842-43 \(5th Cir. 2011\). Martinez must show that the sentence was not only an abuse of discretion but also that "the error was obvious under existing law." United States v. Winding, 817 F.3d 910, 913 \(5th Cir. 2016\) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). A revocation sentence is substantively unreasonable where the [*372] district court did not account for a sentencing factor that should have received [*372] significant weight, gave significant weight to an irrelevant or improper factor, or made a clear error in judgment when balancing the sentencing factors. United States v. Warren, 720 F.3d 321, 332 \(5th Cir. 2013\).

At the revocation hearing, the district court considered the policy-statement range, stated that the sentence was based on the need for deterrence and to address the violation conduct, and, as Martinez admits, directly addressed his mitigation argument. In light of Martinez's multiple violations of his supervised release conditions, it found that a sentence two-months above the advisory range was necessary. Martinez fails to show that the district court made a clear error in
