LIST OF PROCEEDINGS BELOW

1. United States v. Edgar Ivan Lira Estrada, 3:19-CR-342, United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas. Judgment and sentence entered on Judgment entered March 19, 2020. (Appendix B).
2. United States v. Edgar Ivan Lira Estrada, 829 F. App'x 72 (5th Cir. Nov. 13, 2020), CA No. 20-10336, Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Judgment affirmed on November 13, 2020. (Appendix A).

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner Edgar Ivan Lira Estrada was indicted on one count of illegal reentry after removal, (ROA.7), a count to which he pled guilty. See (ROA.41, 78–117). The signed factual resume stated that Mr. Perales-Perez faced a statutory maximum sentence of twenty years' imprisonment and three years of supervised release. (ROA.30). The same assertions were made in the Presentence Report, (ROA.129), and during the admonishment at his rearraignment hearing. (ROA.72). The defense made no objection to these assertions, see (ROA.133), and the district court sentenced Mr. Perales-Perez to 90 months' imprisonment and three years of supervised release. (ROA.42–43).

On appeal, Petitioner argued that the district court committed plain error because the sentence should not have included a term of imprisonment greater than two years or more than one year of supervised release unless the fact of his prior conviction was placed in the indictment and proven to a jury beyond a reasonable doubt, although he admitted that the position was foreclosed by Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224, 235 (1998). The Fifth Circuit rejected the argument because it is foreclosed by controlling precedent. See [Appendix A].

REASON FOR GRANTING THIS PETITION

I. This Court should reconsider Almendarez-Torres v. United States.

Petitioner was subjected to an enhanced statutory maximum under 8 U.S.C. §1326(b) because the removal charged in the indictment followed a prior aggravated felony conviction. Petitioner's sentence thus depends on the judge's ability to find the existence and date of a prior conviction and to use that date to increase the statutory maximum. It further depends on the judge's power to enhance a defendant's sentence beyond the statutory maximum on the basis of facts that have not been pleaded in the indictment. This power was affirmed in Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224 (1998), which held that the enhanced maximums of 8 U.S.C. § 1326 represent sentencing factors rather than elements of an offense and that they may be constitutionally determined by judges rather than juries. See Almendarez-Torres, 523 U.S. at 244.

This Court, however, has repeatedly limited Almendarez-Torres. See Alleyne v. United States, 133 S. Ct. 2151, 2160 n.1 (2013) (characterizing Almendarez-Torres as a narrow exception to the general rule that all facts that increase punishment must be alleged in the indictment and proved to a jury beyond a reasonable doubt); Descamps v. United States, 133 S. Ct. 2276, 2295 (Thomas, J., concurring) (stating that Almendarez-Torres should be overturned); Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 490 (2000) (stressing that Almendarez-Torres represented “a narrow exception” to the prohibition on judicial fact-finding to increase a defendant's sentence); United States v. Shepard, 544 U.S. 13 (2005) (Souter, J., controlling plurality opinion) (“While the disputed fact here can be described as a fact about a prior conviction, it is too far removed from the conclusive significance of a prior judicial record, and too much like the findings subject to Jones and Apprendi, to say that Almendarez-Torres clearly authorizes a judge to resolve the dispute.”); Dretke v. Haley, 541 U.S. 386, 395-396 (2004) (concluding that the application of Almendarez-Torres to the sequence of a defendant’s prior convictions represented a difficult constitutional question to be avoided if possible); Nijhawan v. Holder, 129 S.Ct. 2294, 2302 (2009) (agreeing with the Solicitor General that the loss amount of a prior offense would represent an element of an 8 U.S.C. §1326(b) offense, to the extent that it boosted the defendant’s statutory maximum).

Further, any number of opinions, some authored by Justices among the Almendarez-Torres majority, have expressed doubt about whether it was correctly decided. See Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 490; Haley, 541 U.S. at 395-396; Shepard, 544 U.S. at 26 & n.5 (Souter, J., controlling plurality opinion); Shepard, 544 U.S. at 26-28 (Thomas, J., concurring); Rangel-Reyes v. United States, 547 U.S. 1200, 1201 (Stevens, J., concurring in denial of certiorari); Rangel-Reyes, 547 U.S. at 1202-1203 (Thomas, J., dissenting from denial of certiorari); James v. United States, 550 U.S. 192, 231-232 (2007) (Thomas, J., dissenting). And this Court has also repeatedly cited authorities as exemplary of the original meaning of the constitution that do not recognize a distinction between prior convictions and facts about the instant offense. See Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 301-302 (2004) (quoting W. Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 343 (1769), 1 J. Bishop, Criminal Procedure § 87, p 55 (2d ed. 1872)); Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 478-479 (quoting J. Archbold, Pleading and Evidence in Criminal Cases 44 (15th ed. 1862), 4 Blackstone 369-370).

In Alleyne, this Court applied Apprendi's rule to mandatory minimum sentences, holding that any fact that produces a higher sentencing range—not just a sentence above the mandatory maximum—must be proved to a jury beyond a reasonable doubt. 133 S. Ct. at 2162–63. In its opinion, the Court apparently recognized that Almendarez-Torres's holding remains subject to Fifth and Sixth Amendment attack. Alleyne characterized Almendarez-Torres as a “narrow exception to the general rule” that all facts that increase punishment must be alleged in the indictment and proved to a jury beyond a reasonable doubt. Id. at 2160 n.1. But because the parties in Alleyne did not challenge Almendarez-Torres, this Court said that it would “not revisit it for purposes of [its] decision today.” Id.

The Court's reasoning nevertheless demonstrates that Almendarez-Torres's recidivism exception may be overturned. Alleyne traced the treatment of the relationship between crime and punishment, beginning in the Eighteenth Century, repeatedly noting how “[the] linkage of facts with particular sentence ranges . . . reflects the intimate connection between crime and punishment.” Id. at 2159 (“[i]f a fact was by law essential to the penalty, it was an element of the offense”); see id. (historically, crimes were defined as “the whole of the wrong to which the law affixes [] punishment ... includ[ing] any fact that annexes a higher degree of punishment”) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted); id. at 2160 (“the indictment must contain an allegation of every fact which is legally essential to the punishment to be inflicted”) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). This Court concluded that, because “the whole of the” crime and its punishment cannot be separated, the elements of a crime must include any facts that increase the penalty. The Court recognized no limitations or exceptions to this principle.

Alleyne’s emphasis that the elements of a crime include the “whole” of the facts for which a defendant is punished seriously undercuts the view, expressed in Almendarez-Torres, that recidivism is different from other sentencing facts. See Almendarez-Torres, 523 U.S. at 243–44; see also Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 490 (“Other than the fact of a prior conviction, any fact that increases the penalty for a crime beyond the prescribed statutory maximum must be submitted to a jury, and proved beyond a reasonable doubt.”). Apprendi tried to explain this difference by pointing out that, unlike other facts, recidivism “‘does not relate to the commission of the offense’ itself[.]” 530 U.S. at 496 (quoting Almendarez-Torres, 523 U.S. at 230). But this Court did not appear committed to that distinction; it acknowledged that Almendarez-Torres might have been “incorrectly decided.” Id. at 489; see also Shepard v. United States, 544 U.S. 13, 26 n.5 (2005) (acknowledging that Court’s holding in that case undermined Almendarez-Torres); Cunningham v. California, 549 U.S. 270, 291 n.14 (2007) (rejecting invitation to distinguish between “facts concerning the offense, where Apprendi would apply, and facts [like recidivism] concerning the offender, where it would not,” because “Apprendi itself ... leaves no room for the bifurcated approach”).

Three concurring justices in Alleyne provide additional reason to believe that the time is ripe to revisit Almendarez-Torres. See Alleyne, 133 S. Ct. at 2164 (Sotomayor, Ginsburg, Kagan, J.J., concurring). Those justices noted that the viability of the Sixth Amendment principle set forth in Apprendi was initially subject to some doubt, and some justices believed the Court “might retreat” from it. Id. at 2165. Instead, Apprendi’s rule “has become even more firmly rooted in the Court’s Sixth Amendment jurisprudence.” Id. Reversal of precedent is warranted when “the reasoning of [that precedent] has been thoroughly undermined by intervening decisions.” Id. at 2166.

The validity of Almendarez-Torres is accordingly subject to reasonable doubt. If Almendarez-Torres is overruled, the result will obviously undermine the use of Petitioner’s prior conviction to increase his statutory maximum term of supervised release. He has received a 70-month incarceration sentence and a three-year term of supervised release; thus, the matter cannot become moot during the pendency of the case. This Court should grant certiorari to decide whether Almendarez-Torres should be overruled.

CONCLUSION

Petitioner respectfully submits that this Court should grant certiorari to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Respectfully submitted this 9th day of April, 2021.
