UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS

FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

FEB 10 2022

MOLLY C. DWYER, CLERK U.S. COURT OF APPEALS

TEDDY BRIAN SANCHEZ,

Petitioner-Appellant,

v.

RONALD DAVIS, Warden, San Quentin State Prison,

Respondent-Appellee.

No. 16-99005

D.C. No. 1:97-cv-06134-AWI-SAB Eastern District of California, Fresno

ORDER

Before: GOULD, CALLAHAN, and BEA, Circuit Judges.

The Memorandum Disposition filed on April 22, 2021, is WITHDRAWN and REPLACED with an amended Memorandum Disposition filed concurrently with this order.

With that amendment, the panel unanimously votes to deny the petition for panel rehearing. Judges Gould and Callahan vote to deny the petition for rehearing en banc and Judge Bea so recommends.

The full court was advised of the petition for rehearing en banc. A judge requested a vote on whether to rehear the matter en banc, and the matter failed to receive a majority of the votes of the nonrecused active judges in favor of en banc consideration. Fed. R. App. P. 35.

The petition for panel rehearing and rehearing en banc is DENIED. Future petitions for rehearing are PERMITTED under the deadlines set out in Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure 35(c) and 40(a)(1).

IT IS SO ORDERED.

v.

RONALD DAVIS, Warden, San Quentin State Prison,

MEMORANDUM*

Respondent-Appellee.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of California Anthony W. Ishii, District Judge, Presiding

Argued and Submitted July 13, 2020 San Francisco, California

Before: GOULD, CALLAHAN, and BEA, Circuit Judges.

Teddy Sanchez appeals the district court's denial of his petition for a writ of habeas corpus under 28 U.S.C. § 2254. We grant Certificates of Appealability on the previously uncertified issues pertaining to ineffective assistance of counsel. 28

U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2); see Browning v. Baker, 875 F.3d 444, 471 (9th Cir. 2017). We have jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1291 and 28 U.S.C. § 2253, and we affirm. We address each of Sanchez's ineffective assistance of counsel claims in turn.

First, Sanchez argues that his counsel was ineffective in failing to investigate the shoeprint evidence from the Bocanegra home ("Claim 10"). The evidence of three sets of shoeprints found in the house, rather than two, however, does not demonstrate that counsel's failure to introduce it constituted ineffective assistance. See Matylinsky v. Budge, 577 F.3d 1083, 1097 (9th Cir. 2009) (a habeas petitioner "cannot show prejudice for [counsel's] failure to present what is most likely cumulative evidence."). The evidence suggests that three perpetrators participated in the murders, a fact already known to the trial court through the handprint evidence. People v. Sanchez, 12 Cal. 4th 1, 18 (1995). Under our doubly deferential review, Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. 86, 105 (2011), we cannot say that counsel's performance was deficient.

Sanchez also argues that counsel provided ineffective assistance when he declined to cross-examine news reporter Michael Trihey after Trihey testified that Sanchez claimed to be a "triple murderer" ("Claim 15"). Sanchez reportedly told Trihey that he did not kill anyone but nevertheless believed that he was equally responsible because he assisted and made no effort to stop the murders. If counsel had cross-examined Trihey further, there is not a reasonable probability of a abetter. See Sanchez, 12 Cal. 4th at 33–36; see also Fields v. Woodford, 309 F.3d 1095, 1107–08 (9th Cir. 2002) (requiring that a petitioner "demonstrate that the errors actually prejudiced him") (internal citation omitted) (emphasis in original).

Sanchez argues that his attorney provided ineffective assistance during the guilt phase by failing to investigate and present a mental state defense, including information regarding a history of substance abuse ("Claim 6"). Counsel interviewed two mental experts, whose reports came to similar conclusions, neither of which was helpful to the defense. There is a reasonable argument that counsel satisfied Strickland's deferential standard here. Richter, 562 U.S. at 105. Counsel cannot be faulted for not considering other possible mental state defenses when the experts he hired did not do so. See Turner v. Calderon, 281 F.3d 851, 876 (9th Cir. 2002).

Sanchez asserts that his counsel was ineffective for failing to challenge Hernandez's credibility and memory by presenting his history of drug use ("Claim 7"). But Sanchez's statements to the police and Trihey, his sale and possession of items from the Bocanegra residence, and his desire to plead guilty demonstrate that even if counsel had known of Hernandez's drug use and cross-examined him about it, it is still likely that the trial court would have convicted Sanchez and would have found the multiple-murder special circumstance true. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 688 (1984).

Next, Sanchez argues that counsel was ineffective for failing to submit evidence regarding lingering doubt or to counter the prosecution's evidence of Sanchez's culpability during the penalty phase ("Claim 44"). But fairminded jurists could conclude that Sanchez's defense counsel acted reasonably in declining to present the lingering-doubt defense that Sanchez now says should have been presented. The United States Supreme Court has stated that there are "countless ways to provide effective assistance in any given case." Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689. Jurists of reason could conclude that Sanchez's defense counsel acted reasonably in presenting a defense theory that accounted for Sanchez's consistent desire to plead guilty and accept the death penalty, which was inconsistent with a lingering-doubt defense. See id. at 673 (stating that counsel reasonably may "decide[] not to present and hence not to look further for evidence" on an issue).

Nor has Sanchez "demonstrate[d] that the [decision not to present a lingering-doubt defense] actually prejudiced him" in this case. Fields, 309 F.3d at 1107–08. To demonstrate prejudice, Sanchez must show a "reasonable probability" of a different result. See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. Put differently, in circumstances where a habeas petitioner challenges a death sentence, "the question is whether there is a reasonable probability that, absent the errors, the sentencer . . . would have concluded that the balance of aggravating and mitigating circumstances did not warrant death." Id. at 695. There is no "reasonable probability" of a different result in this case where Sanchez had substantial involvement in the murder of three people, laughed with his co-conspirators about the murders, and told the press he was a triple murderer. The testimony Sanchez now argues should have been introduced would have given only a slightly different version of events: one in which Sanchez did not participate in "stabbing" the victim Mrs. Bocanegra, but instead just bashed her head with a metal bar in order to quiet her.

Despite Sanchez's contentions to the contrary ("Claim 46"), counsel's failure to object or introduce Sanchez's proposed evidence of remorse was not objectively unreasonable and does not demonstrate deficient performance.

Strickland, 466 U.S. at 686–88. Attorneys need not engage in activities that would be fruitless, much less harmful to the defense. Richter, 562 U.S. at 108. The news articles Sanchez pointed to contain aggravating information and demonstrate that there was little evidence of Sanchez's remorse, other than his own statements.

Although Detective Boggs erroneously attributed an incriminating statement by Reyes to Sanchez, Sanchez could not show prejudice. See Fields, 309 F.3d at 1107–08. Alleged juror statements suggested that Sanchez's demeanor at trial had a significant impact on their belief that Sanchez showed no remorse.
