I begin to receive Social Security retirement benefits mid-way through 2023.

I am unemployed although I am awaiting the outcome of job applications. I was being paid to learn software development on a particular platform as a career change. But, perhaps due to a technology infringement court judgement against the platform company, there was a drop in demand for entry level developers using that platform. Currently, I am in a project management learning program which, coupled with the experience from my normal profession, could open more opportunity to me.
