QUESTION(S) PRESENTED

1. Why is the right to petition the government for grievances not being honored in this case, along with others, in accordance with the First Amendment and further why are decisions being made by lower courts without hearings or in front of a jury, which is contrary to the Seventh Amendment?
2. Why are companies being allowed to advertise and sell dangerous substances, such as those manufactured by the defendants of this case, to the public without any government regulation of said substances and why are they not being ordered by lower courts to pay damages to injured persons who consumed their products, as is the right of petitioners under the First Amendment?
3. Red Bull claims it "gives wings" to the one who buys it. Petitioner, Zachary James McAlexander, has not received any wings from Red Bull despite purchasing their product. Are companies allowed to make false claims to the American people, harm them, and subsequently escape by using attorneys who care nothing for other people or our country and by having no juries in our courts?
4. Defendants deprived Petitioner of liberty and property without due process of law. They harmed him physically without consent and interfered with his wealth. The lower courts violated the Seventh Amendment. Can companies in the US harm unsuspecting citizens and deprive them of life, liberty, and property without due process of law using attorneys and lower courts that violate the Seventh Amendment?

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This is a case involving personal injury suffered by Petitioner, Zachary James McAlexander, after consuming products manufactured by defendants in April 2013. Petitioner was on the receiving end of advertisements by defendants and was promised by Red Bull's advertisement that he would receive "wings". Petitioner never received any wings. Red Bull made false claims and harmed Petitioner. Less than 24 hours after consuming products by D.G Yuengling & Son and Red Bull North America, Inc. Petitioner was hospitalized for atrial fibrillation. It is obvious to anyone with scientific or medical inquiries that defendants caused the injury. Petitioner has provided a letter from MD stating the dangers of Red Bull specifically. There is no debate. Petitioner is correct.

However, the case was decided on by Federal Court in Northern District of Georgia and later by United States Court of Appeals without a single hearing or jury, in violation of the Seventh Amendment. Additionally, lawyers for defendants repeatedly tried to focus on an alleged statute of limitations barring recovery for damages. Petitioner does not believe any such statute of limitations should be applied to this case and that statute of limitations can be tolled even if it were to be used for reasons of delayed discovery of cause and effect, which was the case for Petitioner. It was through years of medical treatments that Petitioner discovered the defendants' liability, which culminated in his filing of the Complaint first in Fulton County Superior Court. Furthermore, Petitioner made it clear that not only is he still affected by what defendants did in 2013, he is continuously being harmed by them by their presence in stores, lacking of adequate warnings to the public, and dangerous products. Petitioner still has to list what happened on health forms and have traumatic discussions. None of the lower courts have done anything to address the dangers of defendants to the public.

Bullock v. Philip Morris, Anderson v. Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., and Anderson v. General Motors are all examples of what Petitioner suffered, a dangerous product produced and sold by negligent defendants.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

The Petition should be granted because Petitioner is correct. The products manufactured by defendants are dangerous to the public. Petitioner was harmed immediately after consuming them. Defendants and their attorneys are dangerous to the public for trying to hide the dangers of defendants' products. They are all a threat to the public. Additionally, their arguments regarding statute of limitations are invalid. Statute of limitations does not apply to current claims and statute of limitations can be waived based on the discovery principle anyway, so all of the defense attorneys' arguments were moot. The lower courts just followed the defense attorneys and violated the Seventh Amendment by preventing a jury trial, as is the right guaranteed by the Seventh Amendment. Therefore, Petitioner's Seventh Amendment constitutional right to a jury was violated by defendants and the lower courts, and he has suffered significant harm by all of them.

The Seventh Amendment states:

"In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law."

There was no jury in any of the previous rulings, so all of the lower court rulings were invalid.

Additionally, the First Amendment states:

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

The defendants, their attorneys, and the lower courts are in violation of the First Amendment right, which is to petition the Government for a redress of grievances. The Government needs to redress Petitioner's grievances and award him damages in accordance with his suffering from defendants' negligence, fraud, and their defective, dangerous products.

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.
