UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SIXTH CIRCUITFILED

DEBORAH S. HUNT, Clerk

WILLIAM SIM SPENCER (22-1318),

Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

JOSEPH M. GASPER, Director, Michigan
Department of State Police,

Defendant-Appellee.

ORDER_____
In re: WILLIAM SIM SPENCER (22-1412/1473),

Petitioner.

Before: GRIFFIN, NALBANDIAN, and READLER, Circuit Judges.

In Case No. 22-1318, William Sim Spencer appeals from the district court's order granting Joseph M. Gasper's motion to dismiss Spencer's complaint brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Spencer's complaint alleges violations of his constitutional rights stemming from his "invalid" 2001 state conviction for eight counts of sexual contact with a person under the age of thirteen. Due to his conviction, Spencer must register as a sex offender under Michigan's Sex Offender Registration Act ("SORA"). In Case Nos. 22-1412 and 22-1473, Spencer petitions for a writ of mandamus, asking that we direct Joseph Gasper, Director of the Michigan State Police, to protect Spencer's constitutional rights by removing Spencer's personal information from the Michigan state sex offender registry and the federal sex offender registry.

Spencer presents several accompanying motions. In Case No. 22-1412, he moves for leave to file a first amended complaint and tenders that complaint, which is essentially the same as his petition for a writ of mandamus in Case No. 22-1473. He moved to consolidate all three actions, and the clerk consolidated the two mandamus actions. In all three cases, Spencer moves for a preliminary injunction and temporary restraining order, seeking essentially the same relief he seeks in his mandamus petitions. He also moves to proceed in forma pauperis in Case Nos. 22-1412 and 22-1473

"This Court has the power to grant an injunction pending appeal to prevent irreparable harm to the party requesting such relief during the pendency of the appeal." Overstreet v. Lexington-Fayette Urb. Cnty. Gov't, 305 F.3d 566, 572 (6th Cir. 2002). "A preliminary injunction is an extraordinary remedy which should be granted only if the movant carries his or her burden of proving that the circumstances clearly demand it." Id. at 573. Four factors guide the preliminary injunction analysis: "(1) whether the movant has shown a strong likelihood of success on the merits; (2) whether the movant will suffer irreparable harm if the injunction is not issued; (3) whether the issuance of the injunction would cause substantial harm to others; and (4) whether the public interest would be served by issuing the injunction." Id.

Spencer does not carry this burden. Put simply, Spencer argues that he has the right to challenge his 2001 conviction, upon which Gasper would apply SORA to Spencer in the future. The remainder of Spencer's arguments on this point attack the validity of his 2001 conviction on various grounds. Yet as we explained in Spencer's prior lawsuit against Gasper asserting similar claims, “[t]o the extent that [he] seeks to challenge the validity of the underlying convictions that gave rise to the registration requirement, his remedy lies in habeas corpus.” Spencer v. Gasper, No. 20-2069, 2021 WL 5346665, at *2 (6th Cir. June 16, 2021); see also Wilkinson v. Dotson, 544 U.S. 74, 81–82 (2005).

Appendix B

Nos. 22-1318/1412/1473

Spencer also argues that the district court wrongfully concluded that the relief he seeks is barred by Heck v. Humphrey, 512 U.S. 477 (1994), because Heck applies only to prisoners. However, this court has specifically applied Heck in a case involving a former prisoner. See Hobbs v. Faulkner, No. 19-3303, 2020 WL 12933850, at *1 (6th Cir. June 9, 2020) (order); see also Powers v. Hamilton Cnty. Pub. Def. Comm’n, 501 F.3d 592, 603 (6th Cir. 2007). Like the plaintiff in Hobbs, Spencer pursued habeas review; that he was unsuccessful does not entitle him to a Heck exception now. See Harrison v. Michigan, 722 F.3d 768, 773–74, 773 n.1 (6th Cir. 2013); see also Spencer v. Pratt, No. 2:08-CV-12327 (E.D. Mich. Dec. 11, 2019); Spencer v. Harry, No. 10-1478 (6th Cir. Nov. 12, 2010); In re Spencer, No. 13-1445 (6th Cir. Oct. 7, 2013) (order); see also Hobbs v. Faulkner, No. 19-9903, 2020 WL 12933850, at *1–2 (6th Cir. June 9, 2020) (order).

In short, Spencer’s underlying § 1983 claims attack the validity of his conviction and are barred by Heck, and he is therefore unlikely to succeed on the merits of those claims.

Accordingly, it is not necessary to consider the remaining preliminary injunction factors. Cf. Tiger Lily, 992 F.3d at 524.

We turn next to his mandamus petitions. Mandamus “is a ‘drastic and extraordinary’ remedy ‘reserved for really extraordinary causes.’” Cheney v. U.S. Dist. Ct. for the Dist. of Columbia, 542 U.S. 367, 380 (2004) (citation omitted). “As the writ is one of the most potent weapons in the judicial arsenal, three conditions must be satisfied before it may issue.” Id. (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). “First, the party seeking issuance of the writ [must] have no other adequate means to attain the relief he desires—a condition designed to ensure that the writ will not be used as a substitute for the regular appeals process.” Id. at 380–81 (alteration in original) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). “Second, the petitioner must satisfy the burden of showing that [his] right to issuance of the writ is clear and indisputable.” Id. at 381 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). “Third, even if the first two prerequisites have been met, the issuing court, in the exercise of its discretion, must be satisfied that the writ is appropriate under the circumstances.” Id. (citation omitted); cf. John B. v. Goetz, 531 F.3d 448, 457 (6th Cir. 2008) (relying on a five-factor test set forth in a pre-Cheney decision).

Spencer satisfies none of these factors. First, as courts have pointed out in several of his prior cases, Spencer had other adequate remedies to obtain the requested relief: direct appeal, collateral attack, and through his membership in the classes represented in Doe v. Snyder, 449 F. Supp. 3d 719 (E.D. Mich. 2020). To the extent that he has been unsuccessful at obtaining relief by an alternative means, that is not a basis for issuance of a writ of mandamus. Cf. Charles v. Chandler, 180 F.3d 753, 756 (6th Cir. 1999) (per curiam). Spencer was denied leave to file his direct appeal out of time and was denied habeas relief because his challenges were not collateral attacks. And in Doe v. Snyder, Spencer was granted much of the relief he now seeks—a clear indication that mandamus is not the only option. Spencer’s present attempts to obtain a writ of mandamus to “invalidate” his 2001 conviction for SORA registration purposes are poorly disguised direct and collateral attacks on his decades-old conviction. Thus, he had adequate remedies to obtain the relief he seeks.

Nos. 22-1318/1412/1473

Second, Spencer has not shown that his right to the writ is clear and indisputable. “Traditionally, writs of mandamus were used ‘only to confine an inferior court to a lawful exercise of its prescribed jurisdiction or to compel it to exercise its authority when it is its duty to do so.’” In re Pros. Direct Ins. Co., 578 F.3d 432, 437 (6th Cir. 2009) (quoting Kerr v. U.S. Dist. Ct. for the N. Dist. of Cal., 426 U.S. 394, 402 (1976)). Now, in limited circumstances, federal courts can also order government officials to take certain actions. For instance, “[a] mandamus action may be brought under 28 U.S.C. § 1361 to compel an employee of the United States to perform a duty owed, but the duty owed must be mandatory and not discretionary.” Jarrett v. Ashcroft, 24 F. App’x 503, 504 (6th Cir. 2001) (order) (citing Ryon v. O’Neill, 894 F.2d 199, 205 (6th Cir. 1990)).

Gasper is a state employee, however, and in such cases, a federal court’s authority is limited to issuing a writ ordering him “to enforce rights protected by federal law.” Hoffman v. Stump, No. 97-2177, 1998 WL 869972, at *6 (6th Cir. Dec. 2, 1998) (unpublished table decision). Even then, the Mandamus Act grants original jurisdiction to the district courts—not the Courts of Appeals. 28 U.S.C. § 1361; cf. In re Sutton, 652 F.3d 678, 679–80 (6th Cir. 2011) (per curiam).

Finally, a writ of mandamus is not otherwise appropriate. Spencer has spent the last twenty years attempting to overturn or “invalidate” his 2001 conviction. His mandamus petitions are yet another attempt. Spencer has not shown entitlement to the writ or, indeed, that the writ is the proper vehicle to achieve his desired relief.

Accordingly, the motions for a preliminary injunction and temporary restraining order in Case Nos. 22-1318/1412/1473 are DENIED. The petitions for a writ of mandamus in Case Nos. 22-1412/1473 are DENIED, and the motions to proceed in forma pauperis in Case Nos. 22-

Appendix B

Nos. 22-1318/1412/1473

-6-

1412/1473 are DENIED AS MOOT. The motion to file an amended complaint in No. 22-1412 is DENIED AS MOOT.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN
SOUTHERN DIVISION

WILLIAM SIM SPENCER,

Plaintiff,

v.

JOSEPH GASPER,

Defendant.

Case No. 1:21-cv-653

HON. JANET T. NEFF

OPINION AND ORDER

Plaintiff William Spencer initiated this pro se civil rights action against the Director of the Michigan State Police, Joseph Gasper, in his official capacity, seeking declaratory and injunctive relief. Defendant subsequently filed a motion to dismiss (ECF No. 13). The matter was referred to the Magistrate Judge, who issued a Report and Recommendation (R & R), recommending that Defendant's motion be granted, and Plaintiff's pending motions be denied as moot (ECF No. 21). Before the Court are Plaintiff's objections to the Report and Recommendation (ECF No. 22)¹, Plaintiff's motion for leave to file an amended complaint (ECF No. 23), and Plaintiff's motion to amend his motion for a temporary restraining order (ECF No. 25). In accordance with 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) and FED. R. CIV. P. 72(b)(3), the Court has performed de novo consideration of those portions of the Report and Recommendation to which objections have been made. For the reasons stated below, the Court adopts the R & R and denies Plaintiff's motions and objections.

¹ The Magistrate Judge issued the R & R on January 12, 2022. The Court received Plaintiff's objections on February 22, 2022. Although Plaintiff filed his objections outside the 14-day period to object, he alleges that he did not receive the R & R until February 9, 2022 (ECF No. 22-1). Therefore, the Court will consider Plaintiff's objections as timely.

The Magistrate Judge recommends granting Defendant's motion to dismiss because (1) Plaintiff was a member of the class in John Does #1-6 v. Snyder, et al., No. 2:16-cv-13137 (E.D. Mich.) ("Does II"), and (2) this action is not a proper basis to collaterally attack his state conviction. In his twenty-six pages of rambling objections, Plaintiff attempts to explain why the Magistrate Judge's reasoning is incorrect. He argues: (1) "Plaintiff's fundamental right to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation protected by the Sixth Amendment was denied as a means to usurp the statutory authority to render an order to register," (2) "Plaintiff's fundamental right to the effective assistance of counsel protected by the Sixth Amendment was denied as a means to usurp the statutory authority to render an order to register under SORA [the Sex Offender Registration Act]," (3) "Plaintiff's right to suppression of unconstitutionally obtained evidence outranks the government's right to finality of judgments," (4) "the order to register is inadmissible in state Court under MRE 404(b) because it is irrelevant, immaterial, prejudicial, and incapable of being enforced," and (5) "the SORA is unconstitutionally vague" (ECF No. 22).

Having reviewed Plaintiff's objections and the Report and Recommendation, the Court finds no error in the Magistrate Judge's analysis. This lawsuit is essentially an attempt to collaterally attack Plaintiff's 2001 conviction. Plaintiff does not want to register as required by Michigan's Sex Offender Registration Act, see Mich. Comp. Laws § 28.721 et seq. He has filed several lawsuits in both state and federal court on this same subject matter (see ECF No. 21 at PageID.314-318). In this lawsuit, Plaintiff contends that he received ineffective assistance of counsel when he pled guilty in 2001 because his trial attorney did not inform him that he would have to comply with SORA. Plaintiff's 2001 conviction has never been overturned and the conviction still requires him to comply with SORA. Plaintiff asks this Court to declare SORA unconstitutional “generally or as applied,” declare that the order to register is inadmissible evidence in future criminal proceedings, and permanently enjoin Defendant from displaying his personal information on any electronic database (ECF No. 1 at PageID.5). Although Plaintiff says that he seeks only prospective relief as to the effect, he is really seeking retrospective relief to invalidate his prior conviction.

In Spencer v. State Police Director, No. 19-180, 2020 WL 6814649 (Mich. Ct. Cl. Nov. 19, 2020) (unpublished), the Michigan Court of Claims considered and rejected a nearly identical argument from Plaintiff:

Plaintiff has repeatedly asserted that he is not trying to collaterally attack his 2001 convictions. However, the effective gravamen of his argument is that he should be able to show that he should not have been convicted in 2001 or that he was actually innocent of the charges in 2001. That is exactly the definition of a collateral attack: “[a]n impermissible collateral attack occurs whenever challenge is made to judgment in any manner other than through a direct appeal.” People v. Iannucci, 314 Mich. App. 542, 544-545; 887 N.W.2d 817 (2016). Thus, plaintiff’s argument is really that he should have a right to collaterally attack his plea-based convictions. We agree in part. However, collateral attacks are only permitted under narrow circumstances, none of which are present in this matter.

Id. at *9.

Regardless of how Plaintiff phrases his legal claims in this case, the remedy that he seeks is to have this Court invalidate his 2001 conviction and/or “necessarily imply that the . . . conviction was wrongful.” Heck v. Humphry, 512 U.S. 477, 487 n.6 (1994); Dunning v. Yuetter, 12 F. App’x 282, 284 (6th Cir. 2001). This requested relief is barred by Heck. Furthermore, “[t]he SORA is not unconstitutional for failing to provide plaintiff with an unlimited number of collateral ‘bites at the apple.’” Spencer, 2020 WL 6814649, at *9. In sum, Plaintiff’s argument fails to demonstrate any factual or legal error in the Magistrate Judge’s analysis or conclusion.

Plaintiff has also filed a motion for leave to file an amended complaint. Rule 15 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure mandates that the Court “freely give leave” to amend when it is in the interests of justice. FED. R. CIV. P. 15(a)(2). However, courts may deny a request to amend if there has been undue delay in filing, if the amendment would cause undue prejudice to the opposing party, or if the amendment would be futile. Brumbalough v. Camelot Care Centers, 427 F.3d 996, 1001 (6th Cir. 2005).

Plaintiff's proposed amended complaint does not alter Plaintiff's claims in any material way. He simply seeks to "amend his complaint where it has come to light that the Court's jurisdiction to render a declaratory judgment in this matter has not been invoked under 28 U.S.C. § 1331, 1343a(3), 2201 & 2202" (ECF No. 23). The proposed amended complaint does not change the fact that Plaintiff continues his attempt to collaterally attack his state conviction. Thus, the Magistrate Judge's analysis remains the same, and the Court denies Plaintiff's motion to amend because it is futile.

Accordingly, this Court adopts the Magistrate Judge's Report and Recommendation as the Opinion of this Court. A Judgment will be entered consistent with this Opinion and Order. See FED. R. CIV. P. 58.

Therefore:

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Objections (ECF No. 22) are DENIED and the Report and Recommendation of the Magistrate Judge (ECF No. 21) is APPROVED and ADOPTED as the Opinion of the Court.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Motion to Dismiss (ECF No. 13) is GRANTED.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Plaintiff's motions (ECF Nos. 2, 3, 23 and 25) are DENIED.

v.

Case No. 1:21-cv-653

JOSEPH GASPER, in his official capacity
As Director of the Michigan State Police,

Defendant.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

Plaintiff William Spencer, a convicted sex offender subject to Michigan's Sex Offender Registration Act, see Mich. Comp. Laws § 28.721 et seq. (SORA), filed a pro se civil rights complaint against Defendant Col. Joseph Gasper, Director of the Michigan State Police, in his official capacity seeking declaratory and injunctive relief. Essentially, Spencer seeks a declaration that his prior conviction is invalid, and that SORA is unconstitutional because it fails to provide "a predeprivation-of-rights remedy [sic]" that allows a defendant to contest a prior invalid order to register under SORA in a failure-to-register prosecution. (ECF No. 1 at PageID.5.) This is the latest in a series of federal lawsuits in which Spencer contests the constitutionality of SORA.

This matter is now before the me on Defendants' Motion to Dismiss. (ECF No. 13.) Also before me are Spencer's Motion for Temporary Restraining Order and Motion to Expedite. (ECF Nos. 2 and 3.) Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(B), I recommend that Defendants' motion be GRANTED, and the case be DISMISSED. I further recommend that Spencer's motions be DENIED.

Appendix D

I. Background

A. Prior State-Court Actions

In 2001, Spencer pled guilty to eight counts of Criminal Sexual Conduct, Mich. Comp. Laws § 750.520(c)(1), in the Oakland County Circuit Court and was sentenced to a term of imprisonment.¹ The offenses required SORA registration. In August 2016, after he had been discharged from prison, Spencer filed a civil action in the Benzie County Circuit Court against the Benzie County Prosecuting Attorney and the Director of the State Police (the 2016 civil case), alleging that SORA's reporting requirements, as applied to him, were unconstitutional under Does #1–5 v. Snyder, 834 F.3d 696 (6th Cir. 2016), (“Does I”), which held that the Ex Post Facto Clause prohibited retroactive enforcement of the 2006 and 2011 amendments to SORA. The case was split between the circuit court, as to the prosecutor, and the Michigan Court of Claims, as to the State Police Director. On November 29, 2016, the circuit judge denied Spencer's motion for a temporary restraining order based on Does I. Spencer appealed, and on November 14, 2017, the Michigan Court of Appeals reversed, concluding that Spencer was entitled to a TRO to the extent he argued that the prosecutor should be enjoined from charging him for violating the requirements of the 2006 and 2011 SORA amendments. Spencer v. Benzie Cnty. Prosecuting Attorney, No. 337827, 2017 WL 5493183 (Mich. Ct. App. Nov. 14, 2017). Following that appeal, the Court of Claims granted the Director's motion for summary disposition on the ground that Spencer's claim was moot in light of the appeal in Case No. 337827, and the Michigan Court Appeals affirmed. Spencer

¹ The facts set forth herein are taken from Spencer's complaint in this action, Magistrate Judge Kent's August 31, 2020 Report and Recommendation in Spencer v. Gasper, No. 1:19-cv-201—which contains a detailed recitation of the state-court cases—see 2020 WL 5665238 (W.D. Mich. Aug. 31, 2020), report and recommendation adopted, 2020 WL 5757383 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 28, 2020), and unpublished opinions from the Michigan Court of Appeals in the various state-court actions.

v. Director of the Dep't of State Police, Nos. 341769, 341777, 2018 WL 4927108 (Mich. Ct. App. Oct. 9, 2018).

In December 2016, while the 2016 civil case was pending, Spencer was charged in a criminal case in Benzie County for failing to verify his address pursuant to SORA. Spencer contested the charge at the preliminary examination, but was bound over for trial. After Spencer moved to quash the bindover on the ground that the registration scheme he allegedly violated was created by the 2011 SORA amendments and was thus inapplicable under Does I, the circuit court remanded the matter to the district court for clarification because that court had stated that Spencer was bound by the 1999 version of SORA, but then bound him over based on a requirement that was not in that version. The district court held its second preliminary examination on November 16, 2017, two days after the Michigan Court of Appeals reversed the circuit court's denial of a TRO in the 2016 civil case, and again bound Spencer over because it found he failed to verify his address between October 1 and October 15, as required by the 1999 version of SORA. Subsequently, the circuit court granted Spencer's motion to quash the new bindover because the provision the district court cited existed only in the current version of SORA rather than in the 1999 version. Spencer and the prosecution both moved for reconsideration, with Spencer arguing that the court should have granted him additional relief by discontinuing his SORA registration. The court denied both motions.

Spencer and the prosecutor both appealed the circuit court's order. In his appeal, Spencer asserted that the trial court erred in denying his request to discontinue his SORA registration. On January 22, 2019, the Michigan Court of Appeals issued an unpublished opinion affirming the circuit court's order to quash the bindover without granting Spencer further relief. People v.

Spencer, Nos. 343367, 343468, 2019 WL 286954 (Mich. Ct. App. Jan. 22, 2019). As to Spencer's appeal, the court stated:

[D]efendant argues that the circuit court should have held that he need not verify his address under SORA because the court in his initial criminal case failed to comply with SORA's mandatory presentencing procedures. We conclude that the circuit court did not err by declining to consider defendant's improper collateral attack on his CSC-II judgment of sentence.

In this case, defendant had the opportunity to challenge on direct appeal his CSC-II judgment's requirement that he comply with SORA. This Court denied defendant's application for leave to appeal. People v. Spencer, unpublished order of the Court of Appeals, entered September 21, 2012 (Docket No. 308103). Because this case is not on direct appeal, the circuit court properly declined to allow defendant to collaterally attack his prior judgment of sentence.

Id. at *3. The Michigan Supreme Court denied leave to appeal. People v. Spencer, 504 Mich. 894 (2019).

The 2016 civil action having concluded in both courts, Spencer filed a new civil lawsuit in October 2019 against the Benzie County Prosecuting Attorney and the State Police Director, which was again split between the circuit court as to the prosecutor and the Court of Claims as to the State Police Director. Spencer alleged constitutional challenges to Mich. Comp. Laws. § 769.12 (enhanced punishment for three or more felonies) and to SORA. In particular, he maintained that both statutes were unconstitutional because they permitted the prosecution to use a prior conviction without affording the defendant an opportunity to challenge the prior conviction. In addition, Spencer raised challenges to his 2001 convictions. The Court of Claims granted the State Police Director's motion for summary disposition, and Spencer appealed. On November 19, 2020, the Michigan Court of Appeals affirmed. Spencer v. State Police Director, No. 352539, 2020 WL 6814649 (Mich. Ct. App. Nov. 19, 2020). Regarding Spencer's argument that he should be able to rebut the prosecution's evidence in a prosecution for violating SORA, the court noted that Spencer would not be precluded from rebutting the prosecution's evidence, but could not collaterally attack his 2001 convictions. The court reasoned that Spencer's "arguments—to the effect that he should be able to revisit his conviction—are entirely arguments that could only have been made on direct appeal, not on collateral review." Id. at *10. The court agreed that a defendant is entitled to put the prosecution to its proofs in a SORA prosecution, but said that "SORA is not unconstitutional for failing to provide [Spencer] with an unlimited number of collateral 'bites at the apple.'" Id.

B. Prior Federal Actions

Spencer has previously filed three pro se federal actions in this Court in connection with the 2016 criminal prosecution. First, in Spencer v. Snyder, et al., No. 1:16-cv-1465, Spencer alleged that the 2016 criminal prosecution violated his constitutional rights and requested an injunction as to enforcement of the 2006 and 2011 SORA amendments. The court granted the defendants' motions to dismiss on the grounds that Spencer's arrest raised no ex post facto concerns, and Spencer otherwise failed to allege any wrongdoing by any of the named defendants. 2017 WL 2472599 (W.D. Mich. June 8, 2017).

Next, in Spencer v. Schuette, et al., No. 1:18-cv-229, Spencer sued a number of defendants in connection with the 2016 civil case and sought several forms of relief, including an injunction directing the defendants to discontinue his SORA registration. ECF No. 154 at PageID.2771. On September 15, 2020, Magistrate Judge Kent, to whom the parties had consented for entry of a final judgment, granted the defendants' motions for summary judgment. With regard to Spencer's requests for declaratory and injunctive relief regarding the constitutionality of SORA, Magistrate Judge Kent dismissed those claims because they were part of a class action pending in the Eastern District of Michigan, captioned John Does #1–6 v. Snyder, et al., No. 2:16-cv13137 (E.D. Mich.) ("Does I"). Id. at PageID.2782–85. The Sixth Circuit affirmed the judgment on July 20, 2021. ECF No. 164.

Finally, on March 18, 2019, Spencer sued Defendant Gasper in his official capacity in an action captioned Spencer v. Gasper, No. 1:19-cv-201 (Spencer III). In Spencer III, Spencer sought a declaratory judgment that SORA was unconstitutional on various grounds and that it was unconstitutional as applied to him because it assessed new penalties for failing to register as a sex offender without affording him an opportunity to challenge the court order requiring him to register under SORA. In addition, Spencer alleged that his 2001 guilty plea was invalid for a number of reasons, including ineffective assistance of his trial and appellate counsel. On August 31, 2020, Magistrate Judge Kent issued a report and recommendation that defendant Gasper's motion to dismiss be granted on the basis that Spencer was a member of the classes certified in Does II that sought the same relief. See Spencer v. Gasper, No. 1:19-cv-201, 2020 WL 5665238, at *8–10 (W.D. Mich. Aug. 31, 2020), report and recommendation adopted, 2020 WL 5757383 (W.D. Mich. Sept. 28, 2020.) The Sixth Circuit affirmed the judgment on June 16, 2021. Spencer v. Gasper, No. 20-2069, 2021 WL 5346665 (6th Cir. June 16, 2021).

C. Present Action

In his present action, Spencer alleges that his 2001 guilty plea, which formed the basis for the order to register under SORA, was invalid because, among other things: (1) the prosecution provided “no specific factual accusation or evidence to connect the requisite elements of MCL § 750.520c (the offense charged) to either the CSC-2 statute or any alleged act by [Spencer];” (2) the record in the criminal case “shows that neither Plaintiff, the prosecution, defense counsel, or even the judge, knew that sufficient constitutional notice to Plaintiff of a felony charge under MCL § 750.520c required an allegation of a ‘touching’ of the victim’s or actor’s genital area, groin, inner thigh, buttock, breast or clothing covering those areas;” and (3) “the trial judge failed to explain to [Spencer] that a consequence of his decision to accept the government’s offer to plead guilty would-be mandatory lifetime sex-offender registration.” (ECF No. 1 at PageID.4.) Spencer further alleges that his attorney was ineffective in failing to advise him that his guilty plea would require that he register as a sex offender. (Id.) Spencer further alleges that, in 2016, he was arrested and prosecuted for violating SORA, without being afforded an opportunity to challenge the 2001 order requiring him to register as a sex offender. (Id. at PageID.5.) For relief, Spencer requests that the Court: (1) declare that SORA is unconstitutional on the ground that it fails to provide the defendant an opportunity to challenge a prior conviction and/or order to register; (2) declare that the 2001 order directing Spencer to register under SORA is inadmissible as evidence in future criminal proceedings because his plea was invalid for a number of reasons; and (3) enjoin Defendant Gasper from displaying Spencer's personal information on any SORA electronic database. (Id.)

II. Motion Standard

A Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted tests the legal sufficiency of a complaint by evaluating its assertions in a light most favorable to Plaintiff to determine whether it states a valid claim for relief. See In re NM Holdings Co., LLC, 622 F.3d 613, 618 (6th Cir. 2010).

Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), a claim must be dismissed for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted unless the “[f]actual allegations [are] enough to raise a right for relief above the speculative level on the assumption that all of the complaint’s allegations are true.” Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 545 (2007). As the Supreme Court more recently held, to survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain “sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 677-78 (2009). This plausibility standard “is not akin to a ‘probability requirement,’ but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.” Id. If the complaint simply pleads facts that are “merely consistent with” a defendant’s liability, it “stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility of ‘entitlement to relief.’” Id. As the Court further observed, “[t]hreadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice.” Id. at 678-79.

When resolving a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), the Court may consider the complaint and any attached exhibits, public records, items appearing in the record of the case, and exhibits attached to the defendant’s motion to dismiss provided they are referenced in the complaint and central to the claims therein. See Bassett v. Nat’l Collegiate Athletic Ass’n., 528 F.3d 426, 430 (6th Cir. 2008).

III. Discussion

A. Defendant’s Motion

Defendant Gasper contends that the complaint is subject to dismissal on numerous grounds, but there is no need to address them all. Gasper contends that Spencer’s action is subject to dismissal because Spencer is part of both classes in the Does II class action, in which a final judgment has now been entered. (ECF No. 13-8.) Spencer’s allegations here essentially mirror those in Spencer III, which were dismissed on the basis of his membership in the ex post facto subclass in Does II, and the fact that the relief he sought had already been granted in Does II. 2020 WL 5757383, at *2. The same result should obtain here. In affirming the judgment in Spencer III, the Sixth Circuit noted:

[Spencer] alleged that SORA violated the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments, both on its face and as applied, because it did not permit defendants to argue that a conviction requiring registration was tainted by the ineffective assistance of trial or appellate counsel. Spencer, who pleaded guilty in 2001 to offenses that required SORA registration, specifically alleged that the attorney who represented him in his original criminal proceeding did not inform him that his guilty pleas would require him to register under SORA or that he would be unable to argue in defense of a failure-to-register charge that his original criminal proceedings were tainted by the ineffective assistance of counsel.

2021 WL 5346665, at *1. The court held that the district court properly dismissed Spencer's claims in favor of the Does II litigation because "[t]he claims that Spencer raises and the relief that he seeks largely overlap with those of the class plaintiffs." Id. at *2. More specifically, the court observed that the class plaintiffs had argued that SORA's strict liability violated due process, while Spencer argued that he should not be required to register under SORA because he did not know (due to counsel's ineffectiveness) at the time he pled guilty that he would be required to register under SORA. Id. Again, Spencer's claims in this action do not differ materially from those in Spencer III. Therefore, this action should be dismissed for same reasons for the dismissal in Spencer III.

Apart from the foregoing basis for dismissal, a Section 1983 action is not a proper basis to collaterally attack a state conviction. Dunning v. Yuetter, 12 F. App'x 282, 284 (6th Cir. 2001) ("A state prisoner does not have a cognizable claim under § 1983 if a ruling on his claim would necessarily render his sentence or conviction invalid.") (citing Heck v. Humphrey, 512 U.S. 477, 486–87 (1994)). Instead, to the extent that Spencer seeks to challenge the validity of the conviction that gave rise to the registration requirement as being a result of ineffective assistance of counsel or an involuntary or unknowing guilty plea, his remedy lies in some manner of habeas relief or collateral attack on the prior conviction. See Spencer, 2021 WL 5346665, at *2.

B. Spencer's Motions

As noted, Spencer has filed a motion for a temporary restraining order and a motion to expedite consideration of his motion for temporary restraining order. In light of the foregoing recommendation to grant Gasper's motion to dismiss, I recommend that the Court deny Spencer's motions for a temporary restraining order and expedited consideration as moot. See Miller v. Hurst, No. 3:17-0791, 2020 WL 3871143, at *10 (M.D. Tenn. July 9, 2020), report and recommendation adopted, 2020 WL 5757907 (M.D. Tenn. Sept. 28, 2020) ("[T]he Court's conclusion that each of the claims in the Complaint is subject to dismissal renders Plaintiff's request for a preliminary injunction moot."").

IV. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, I recommend that Defendant Gasper's motion to dismiss (ECF No. 13) be granted and that this case be dismissed. I further recommend that Spencer's motions for temporary restraining order and to expedite (ECF Nos. 2 and 3) be denied as moot.

WILLIAM SIM SPENCER,

Plaintiff-Appellant,

v.

JOSEPH M. GASPER, DIRECTOR, MICHIGAN
DEPARTMENT OF STATE POLICE,

Defendant-Appellee.

ORDER

BEFORE: GRIFFIN, NALBANDIAN, and READLER, Circuit Judges.

The court received a petition for panel rehearing and a petition rehearing en banc. The original panel has reviewed the petitions for rehearing and concludes that the issues raised in the petitions were fully considered upon the original submission and decision of the case. The petitions then were circulated to the full court. No judge has requested a vote on the suggestion for rehearing en banc.

Therefore, the petitions are denied.
