12) Petitioner,) 13) v.) ORDER ACCEPTING FINDINGS AND
14) JIM ROBERTSON, Warden,) RECOMMENDATIONS OF U.S.
15)) MAGISTRATE JUDGE
16) Respondent.)

16 The Court has reviewed the Petition, records on file, and 17 Report and Recommendation of U.S. Magistrate Judge. On October
18 15, 2021, Petitioner filed Objections to the R. & R.; Respondent 19 didn't respond. Although the Objections are largely 20 unintelligible, the Court attempts to address them nonetheless.

21 Petitioner continues to insist that the state court admitted
22 codefendant Akuna's statements without deciding the "factual 23 existence of a conspiracy to commit murder." (Objs. at 2; see 24 id. at 4-5.) He is apparently arguing that it didn't properly 25 admit them under the federal or state coconspirator exception to 26 the hearsay rule. (See R. & R. at 27 & n.14; see also Objs. at 27 3-5 (citing state and federal evidence rules and Carbo v. United 28 States, 314 F.2d 718, 735 n.21 (9th Cir. 1963) (discussing coconspirator exception), and United States v. Ellsworth, 481

1 F.2d 864, 871 (9th Cir. 1973) (same).) But as the Magistrate 2 Judge correctly noted, claims that a state court violated federal 3 or state evidence rules aren't cognizable on federal habeas 4 review. (See R. & R. at 27; see also id. at 16-17.) In any 5 event, as the Magistrate Judge also observed, the state court 6 didn't admit the statements under the coconspirator exception.
7 (See id. at 27 (citing 1 Rep.'s Tr. at 36-54).) For that reason
8 and others, Dutton v. Evans, 400 U.S. 74, 88-89 (1970) (plurality 9 opinion), on which Petitioner relies (see Objs. at 3-4), doesn't 10 apply.

11 Further, the Supreme Court has since held that the 12 constitutional right of confrontation extends only to testimonial 13 statements. (See R. & R. at 29 (citing Crawford v. Washington, 14 541 U.S. 36, 68 (2004); Davis v. Washington, 547 U.S. 813, 821 15 (2006)).) As the Magistrate Judge correctly found, the court of 16 appeal was not objectively unreasonable in concluding that 17 Akuna's statements weren't testimonial and thus that their 18 admission didn't violate the Confrontation Clause. (See id. at 19 37-38.)

20 Petitioner's next argument fares even worse: the Magistrate 21 Judge should have reviewed grounds one through three under 22 Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 52(b)'s plain-error standard, 23 not de novo. (See Objs. at 5-6, 11; R. & R. at 14-16.) But 24 plain error applies only on direct appeal and is "out of place"
25 on habeas review. United States v. Frady, 456 U.S. 152, 164 26 (1982). In any event, it's a more deferential standard than the 27 de novo review the Magistrate Judge engaged in and Petitioner 28 thus couldn't possibly have been prejudiced. See, e.g., United 1 States v. Lindsey, 680 F. App'x 563, 565-66 (9th Cir. 2017).

2 Petitioner states that the Magistrate Judge "ma[de] an 3 astounding effort to not mention . . . [the] jury inquiry about 4 whether finding him not guilty of murder." (Objs. at 7 (citing 2 5 Clerk's Tr. at 263-64); see also id. at 10.) During 6 deliberations, the jury asked if "someone [can] be found not 7 guilty of murder [and] gui[l]ty of conspiracy or does it have to 8 be all or none." (2 Clerk's Tr. at 263.) The judge responded, 9 "[A] defendant may be found not guilty of murder and guilty of 10 conspiracy." (Id. at 264.) Petitioner does not explain how the 11 jury's question or the judge's answer bears on any of his claims, 12 however, and the Magistrate Judge therefore made no mistake in 13 not discussing the issue.¹

14 Finally, Petitioner maintains that he didn't "freely" waive 15 his right to testify. (Objs. at 9.) That claim appears nowhere 16 in the Petition. Even if the Court could consider habeas claims, 17 as opposed to arguments, raised for the first time in objections 18 to an R. & R., see Akhtar v. Mesa, 698 F.3d 1202, 1208 (9th Cir.
19 2012); but see Cacoperdo v. Demosthenes, 37 F.3d 504, 507 (9th 20 Cir. 1994) (court need not consider habeas claims raised for 21 first time in traverse), his new claim has not been exhausted in 22 state court and is likely time barred and therefore not 23 appropriate for review, see Marquez-Ortiz v. Sullivan, No. SACV
24 08-552 ABC (FFM), 2012 WL 294741, at *1 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 1, 2012)

26 ¹ Petitioner asserts that the jury inquiry required the 27 state court to give CALJIC 6.24 (see Objs. at 19), contrary to 28 the Magistrate Judge's finding that the court had no reason to give it (see R. & R. at 23-28). But he doesn't explain why the jury question required the court to do so.

1 (declining to consider habeas petitioner's additional claims
2 raised for first time in objections to report and recommendation 3 in part because they were not exhausted in state court). The 4 Court therefore declines to consider it.

5 Having reviewed de novo those portions of the R. & R. to 6 which Petitioner objects, the Court agrees with and accepts the 7 findings and recommendations of the Magistrate Judge. IT 8 THEREFORE IS ORDERED that the Petition is denied and Judgment be 9 entered dismissing this action.

17 This Report and Recommendation is submitted to the Honorable 18 Ronald S.W. Lew, U.S. District Judge, under 28 U.S.C. § 636 and 19 General Order 05-07 of the U.S. District Court for the Central 20 District of California.

21 PROCEEDINGS

22 On June 26, 2019, Petitioner filed pro se a Petition for 23 Writ of Habeas Corpus by a Person in State Custody, challenging 24 his 2015 convictions for first-degree murder, conspiracy to 25 commit murder, and firearm possession as well as related 26 enhancements. On January 9, 2020, Respondent answered.
27 Petitioner filed a Traverse on May 1, 2020. For the reasons
28 discussed below, the Court recommends that the Petition be denied

1 and this action be dismissed with prejudice.

2 PETITIONER'S CLAIMS

3 I. The trial court violated Bourjaily v. United States,
4 483 U.S. 171 (1987), by admitting codefendant Noah Akuna's
5 recorded jailhouse conversation with confidential informants.
6 (See Pet. at 9, 20-32 (throughout, the Court uses the pagination 7 generated by its Case Management/Electronic Case Filing system).)

8 II. The trial court violated state law and Brady v.
9 Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), by admitting a stipulation that 10 Petitioner's girlfriend was found dead. (See id. at 9, 32-36.)

11 III. The trial court deprived Petitioner of due process by 12 erroneously giving two jury instructions concerning conspiracy
13 and omitting another. (See id. at 10, 36-38.)

14 IV. The admission of Akuna's statements violated 15 Petitioner's rights to due process and a fair trial because they 16 were coerced. (See id. at 10, 73-75.)

17 V. The trial court violated Petitioner's constitutional 18 right to confrontation by admitting Akuna's statements
19 implicating Petitioner in the murder. (See id. at 10, 76-92.)

20 BACKGROUND

21 In April 2015, a Los Angeles County Superior Court jury
22 convicted Petitioner and codefendant Akuna¹ of first-degree 23 murder, conspiracy to commit murder, and firearm possession by a 24
25

26
27 ¹ Akuna has a habeas petition pending in this Court. See 28 Akuna v. Pfeiffer, No. 2:19-cv-03611-RSWL (JPR) (C.D. Cal. filed April 30, 2019).

1 felon. (See 4 Rep.'s Tr. at 699-705.)² The jury found that the 2 murder was committed by personal discharge of a firearm; a 3 principal discharged a firearm, causing death; and the murder was 4 intended to benefit a criminal street gang. (See id. at 703-05.)
5 Petitioner was sentenced to an aggregate term of 80 years to life
6 in state prison. (See Supp. Clerk's Tr. at 88, 94-96, July 31, 7 2015.)

8 Petitioner appealed (see id. at 107), raising grounds four 9 and five of the Petition, among others (see Lodged Doc. 1 at 30-10 34, 36-56). On August 2, 2017, the court of appeal affirmed the 11 judgment in a reasoned decision. (See Lodged Doc. 7.) He filed 12 a petition for review in the state supreme court, which summarily
13 denied it on November 15, 2017. (See Lodged Doc. 9.)

14 On March 9, 2018, the court of appeal supplemented its 15 decision under Senate Bill 620³ but didn't alter its factual or 16 legal findings on Petitioner's claims. See People v. Akuna, No.
17 B264806, 2018 WL 1223995 (Cal. Ct. App. Mar. 9, 2018).⁴

19 20 ² The clerk's and reporter's transcripts were submitted in 21 Akuna's case as lodged documents one through four and lodged
22 document five, respectively. See Akuna, No. 2:19-cv-03611-RSWL (JPR).

23 ³ Senate Bill 620 "amended [California Penal Code] section 24 12022.5, subdivision (c), and section 12022.53, subdivision (h), 25 effective January 1, 2018, to give the trial court discretion to 26 strike, in the interest of justice, a firearm enhancement imposed 27 under those two statutes." People v. Billingsley, 22 Cal. App. 5th 28 1076, 1079-80 (2018) (as modified).

⁴ The court of appeal remanded the case to the trial court to consider whether to strike Petitioner's firearm enhancement under Senate Bill 620. Akuna, 2018 WL 1223995, at *11-12. The record does not show what the trial court did on remand.

1 Petitioner again petitioned the state supreme court for review
2 (see Lodged Doc. 8), and the court summarily denied the petition
3 on June 13, 2018, see Cal. App. Cts. Case Info., http://
4 appellatecases.courtinfo.ca.gov/ (search for "Frank" with 5 "Escalante" in supreme court) (last visited Sept. 23, 2021).

6 On August 13, 2018, Petitioner filed a petition for writ of 7 habeas corpus in Los Angeles County Superior Court, raising
8 grounds one through three of the Petition. (See Lodged Doc. 10.) 9 The court denied the petition a week later, reasoning that the 10 claims were procedurally barred and meritless. (See Lodged Doc.
11 11 at 1.) He filed a habeas petition in the state court of 12 appeal alleging the same claims. (See Lodged Doc. 12.) In 13 January 2019, that court denied it on procedural grounds and on 14 the merits. (See Lodged Doc. 13.) He then filed a habeas 15 petition in the state supreme court, again raising the same 16 claims. (See Lodged Doc. 14.) On June 12, 2019, that court 17 denied the petition only on procedural grounds, ruling that some 18 claims were impermissibly duplicative of those raised on direct 19 appeal and the others should have been raised on appeal but 20 weren't. (See Lodged Doc. 15 (citing In re Waltreus, 62 Cal. 2d 21 218, 225 (1965), & In re Dixon, 41 Cal. 2d 756, 759 (1953)).)

22 SUMMARY OF THE EVIDENCE

23 The factual summary in a state appellate-court opinion is 24 entitled to a "presumption of correctness" under 28 U.S.C.
25 § 2254(e)(1). See Crittenden v. Chappell, 804 F.3d 998, 1010
26 (9th Cir. 2015). Although Petitioner does not challenge the 27 sufficiency of the evidence, the Court has nonetheless
28

1 independently reviewed the state-court record.⁵ See Nasby v.
2 McDaniel, 853 F.3d 1049, 1054-55 (9th Cir. 2017). Based on that 3 review, the Court finds that the following statement of facts
4 from the court-of-appeal decision fairly and accurately 5 summarizes the relevant evidence.

6 In 2008, Jack Hicks ("Sugar Bear"), a member of the 7 El Monte Hays (EMH) gang, was murdered. Around the 8 neighborhood, it was rumored that a fellow EMH gang 9 member, German Palacios ("Triste"), killed Hicks.
10 Approximately four years later, on June 14, 2012, around 11 9:30 p.m., Palacios was gunned down outside Daisy's Meat
12 Market at 11532 Medina Court, the heart of EMS⁽⁶⁾
13 territory. Defendants Akuna ("Shadow") and [Petitioner]
14 ("Smokey"), both EMS members, were convicted of planning 15 and committing the murder. They were assisted by Michael 16 Dominguez ("Pitbull") and Richard Sanchez ("Shark"),⁽⁷⁾
17 who were charged but accepted plea agreements. The key 18 evidence in the case was Akuna's recorded confession to 19 two paid informants while in custody on an unrelated 20 case, which implicated himself and [Petitioner] (as well 21 as Dominguez and Sanchez).

22
23 ⁵ This includes listening to the recording of Akuna's 24 jailhouse discussion with the two informants, which was lodged in Akuna, No. 2:19-cv-03611-RSWL (JPR).

25 ⁶ The court's references to "EMS" appear to be transcription
26 errors; presumably the court of appeal meant to refer to EMH.

27 ⁷ As Petitioner notes (Traverse at 8-9), in fact, Dominguez
28 apparently went by the moniker "Shark" (see 1 Clerk's Tr. at 39) and Sanchez by "Pitbull" (id. at 22).

1 On the night of the killing, Juan Ignacio Ruiz
2 Sanchez, who was with some friends on the patio of a
3 house on Medina Court, heard two or three people arguing 4 in front of Daisy's Meat Market, followed by four or five 5 gunshots. At trial, he testified that he saw one muzzle 6 flash and heard gunfire from a single gun. He had 7 earlier told a sheriff's detective that he saw two 8 separate muzzle flashes and, based on the sound, thought 9 there were two different guns. He saw two silhouettes 10 run through a gate next door to the right of the market, 11 but was unable to identify anyone.

12 At around 9:38 p.m., El Monte Police Sergeant Doug 13 Knight responded to the scene, and found Palacios lying 14 partly in the street outside the market. He had been 15 shot multiple times and was unresponsive. He was 16 transported to County USC Hospital, w[h]ere he died after 17 surgery. An autopsy later confirmed that he had been 18 shot 16 times, with fatal wounds to the neck, abdomen and 19 other areas, piercing internal organs and causing massive 20 bleeding. Approximately thirteen projectiles were 21 recovered from his body during the autopsy.

22 Los Angeles County Sheriff's Detective Steven Blagg
23 arrived at the scene at around 12:15 a.m. the next 24 morning, and supervised the collection of twelve .40
25 caliber Smith and Wesson shell casings from the area
26 where Palacios was found. He also went to County USC 27 Hospital and received a projectile that had been removed 28 from Palacios during surgery.

1 Sheriff's firearm examiner Marco Iezza examined the 2 12 casings recovered at the scene and determined that 3 they were all fired from a single Glock firearm. He also 4 examined the projectiles and fragments recovered from 5 Palacios. All but one were consistent with being 6 Winchester .40-caliber Smith and Wesson projectiles fired
7 from a Glock firearm. A fully loaded .40-caliber Glock
8 would have a total of 16 rounds – 15 in the clip and one 9 in the chamber (although in California, the legal 10 magazine limit is 10 or less). One projectile removed 11 from Palacios['s] body was consistent with being fired 12 from either a .38- or .357-caliber revolver.

13 On July 18, 2012, Sheriff's Deputies and El Monte 14 Police Officers executed a search warrant at Akuna's 15 residence on Currier Street in Pomona. They found a 16 newspaper article identifying German Palacios as a 17 suspect in the shooting death of Jack Hicks, and a 18 printout from the Los Angeles Times Homicide Report
19 website (a service that chronicles Los Angeles County 20 murders) reporting the death of Jack Hicks. They also 21 found items (including clothing and photographs)
22 associated with the EMH gang. A search of [Petitioner's] 23 residence turned up no evidence. On the date of the 24 searches, A[k]una and [Petitioner] were arrested, but 25 were later released pending further investigation.

26 On March 20, 2013, A[k]una was arrested on an 27 unrelated burglary charge, and booked at the Norwalk 28 Sheriff's Station. About a week before the arrest,

1 Detective Blagg met with two informants (Hispanic gang 2 members who had prior records and were paid $1,500 plus 3 $50 for food for participating) and provided them with 4 information relating to the Palacios' [sic] murder, 5 including the gang monikers of suspects and the area 6 where the shooting took place. After A[k]una's arrest on 7 the unrelated burglary, Detective Blagg transported the 8 informants to the Norwalk station, activated recording 9 devices they were wearing, and had them brought into the 10 booking area. While A[k]una was being booked and in the 11 presence of the informants, Detective B[l]agg told him
12 that the Palacios murder investigation was still ongoing 13 and that his DNA was found on a shell casing. A[k]una 14 was placed in a cell with the two informants, and their 15 conversation was recorded. At trial, the recording was 16 played for the jury and a transcript was provided.

17 The transcript of Akuna's conversation with the 18 informants is approximately 73 pages long.^[8] The 19 conversation began with Akuna denying involvement in the 20 murder of Palacios. He said that he wanted to "see what 21 they're booking [him] on" because it had been a "DA 22 reject" but now "they're gonna take it to the DA and the 23 DA's probably going to file He said my DNA
24 . . . came back on a casing, which is bullshit

25
26 ⁸ The full transcript is some 140 pages long. (See Supp.
27 Clerk's Tr. at 15-153, Nov. 20, 2015.) But the actual discussion 28 in the cell between Akuna and the informants without others present takes up only 107 of those pages.

1 Impossible. I wasn't even there. It was one of my 2 homeboys that got shot." Akuna told the informants that 3 he was at a banquet and had witnesses.

4 The informants talked with Akuna as if they knew 5 vague details of the murder – that a gang member (who at 6 one point Akuna volunteered might have been Palacios) was 7 collecting rent when he should not have, and there was 8 "supposed to be a hit on [Akuna's] neighborhood." Akuna
9 said that the last time he was arrested for the Palacios 10 murder, the police said witnesses had identified him, 11 Sanchez, and [Petitioner] as being involved, but later 12 released them. The informants said that Sanchez was in 13 county jail, and asked about [Petitioner]. Akuna said 14 that [Petitioner] was currently out of custody. The 15 informants then prodded Akuna, saying that the police 16 must have something on him and Sanchez. They urged him 17 to think about whether, if he was involved, the others 18 might say something to the police. They asked if he had 19 a phone when the crime occurred, because the police could 20 track his whereabouts. They also urged him to come up 21 with an explanation for his DNA being on a shell casing.
22 The informants then talked about knowing some other 23 details of the killing, and Akuna talked about his 24 earlier arrest for the crime with Sanchez and 25 [Petitioner]. The informants suggested that it was 26 illegal to record them speaking in the cell.

27 At one point, Akuna was removed from the cell for 28 eight minutes, then returned and said he had been told

1 they were adding a murder charge to his arrest. The 2 informants returned to the subject of Akuna's phone and 3 asked if he knew where it was. Akuna said that the 4 police had it. The informants reiterated that a witness
5 must have put Akuna at the scene and the police could use 6 the phone to "seal the deal."^[9]

7 At that point, Akuna asked them what they thought 8 was the best thing to do. They said it depended on how 9 his DNA got on a shell casing and urged him to be smart 10 and come up with an explanation. After some additional 11 conversation, Akuna asked, "What if I touched the 12 bullets?" He suggested "I sold the gun or what you're 13 saying like." The informants urged him to rehearse his 14 story. They said that they were all "homies," that they 15 wanted to help him, and that he should not be afraid to 16 ask.

17 After additional conversation, the informants again
18 asked about Akuna's phone. Akuna said that he had not 19 received his phone back, and that "it'll probably show" 20 that he was in the area of the killing. He said that a 21 Glock and a revolver had been used in the murder. He 22 said that he had loaded the revolver but had not loaded 23 [the] Glock, and suggested that maybe his DNA got on the 24 expended shell casings from perspiration through his

25
26 ⁹ This exact quote does not appear in the transcript, but the 27 informants conveyed similar messages throughout the conversation.
28 (See, e.g., Supp. Clerk's Tr. at 106, Nov. 20, 2015 (stating that phone information will "put [Akuna] right there" at crime scene).)

1 shirt.

2 The informants pressed him to tell what happened,
3 saying that otherwise they could not help him.
4 Subsequently, over the next 19 pages of transcript, Akuna
5 confessed to the murder and implicated [Petitioner],
6 Dominguez, and Sanchez. According to Akuna, Dominguez 7 set up Palacios to be at Daisy's Meat Market on the 8 pretense of talking with him, apparently about gang 9 business. Akuna was at a banquet and received a call 10 from Dominguez that the "fool [Palacios] was there."
11 Akuna said "they came and picked us [Akuna and 12 Petitioner] up." Akuna had a revolver ("like a .38 or 13 something"), which he gave to [Petitioner]. Dominguez
14 had a "[G]lock 40" which he gave to Akuna. They intended 15 to kill Palacios, because he had "smoked" Akuna's "homey"
16 Jack Hicks over gang politics.

17 Akuna and [Petitioner] "rolled over there" to the 18 market. Akuna explained: "[S]o like I . . . just walked 19 up to him [Palacios] and [Petitioner] like came out from 20 behind me and tried to like dump But the gun 21 [the revolver] that fool had just went click. Like the 22 hammer just dropped and that was it. Nothin' happened.
23 So . . . that's when I just unloaded on the fool 24 [Palacios]." Palacios fell, and Akuna approached him as 25 he lay on the ground and "started pumpin' that shit 26 All 16 shots" from the "[G]lock 40."
27 [Petitioner] eventually was able to fire a couple of 28 times at Palacios. After the shooting, Akuna returned

1 the Glock to Dominguez.

2 After the conversation, Detective Blagg obtained a 3 search warrant for Akuna's cell phone data. The data
4 showed that on June 14, 2012, from 8:53 p.m. to 9:46
5 p.m., several calls were made and received by that phone 6 from cell towers in and around the area of the murder, 7 including a call to [Petitioner's] phone.

8 . . . Akuna, [Petitioner], Sanchez, and Dominguez
9 were all EMH members.

11 STANDARD OF REVIEW

12 Under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d), as amended by the Antiterrorism
13 and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996:

14 An application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf 15 of a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a 16 State court shall not be granted with respect to any 17 claim that was adjudicated on the merits in State court 18 proceedings unless the adjudication of the 19 claim – (1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, 20 or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly 21 established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme 22 Court of the United States; or (2) resulted in a decision 23 that was based on an unreasonable determination of the 24 facts in light of the evidence presented in the State 25 court proceeding.

26 Under AEDPA, the "clearly established Federal law" that 27 controls federal habeas review consists of holdings of Supreme 28 Court cases "as of the time of the relevant state-court

1 decision." Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 412 (2000). As the 2 Supreme Court has "repeatedly emphasized, . . . circuit precedent 3 does not constitute 'clearly established Federal law, as 4 determined by the Supreme Court.'" Glebe v. Frost, 574 U.S. 21, 5 24 (2014) (per curiam) (quoting § 2254(d)(1)). Further, circuit 6 precedent "cannot 'refine or sharpen a general principle of 7 Supreme Court jurisprudence into a specific legal rule that [the] 8 Court has not announced.'" Lopez v. Smith, 574 U.S. 1, 7 (2014)
9 (per curiam) (quoting Marshall v. Rodgers, 569 U.S. 58, 64 (2013) 10 (per curiam)).

11 A state-court decision is "contrary to" clearly established 12 federal law if it either applies a rule that contradicts 13 governing Supreme Court law or reaches a result that differs from 14 the result the Supreme Court reached on "materially 15 indistinguishable" facts. Early v. Packer, 537 U.S. 3, 8 (2002) 16 (per curiam) (citation omitted). A state court need not cite or 17 even be aware of the controlling Supreme Court cases, "so long as 18 neither the reasoning nor the result of the state-court decision 19 contradicts them." Id.

20 State-court decisions that are not "contrary to" Supreme 21 Court law may be set aside on federal habeas review only "if they 22 are not merely erroneous, but 'an unreasonable application' of 23 clearly established federal law, or based on 'an unreasonable
24 determination of the facts' (emphasis added)." Id. at 11 25 (quoting § 2254(d)). To obtain federal habeas relief for such an 26 "unreasonable application," however, a petitioner must show that 27 the state court's application of Supreme Court law was 28 "objectively unreasonable." Williams, 529 U.S. at 409. In other

1 words, habeas relief is warranted only if the state court's 2 ruling was "so lacking in justification that there was an error 3 well understood and comprehended in existing law beyond any 4 possibility for fairminded disagreement." Harrington v. Richter, 5 562 U.S. 86, 103 (2011). "[E]ven clear error will not suffice."
6 Woods v. Donald, 575 U.S. 312, 316 (2015) (per curiam) (citation 7 omitted).

8 Petitioner raised grounds four and five on direct appeal.
9 (See Lodged Doc. 1 at 30-34, 36-56.) In a reasoned decision, the 10 court of appeal rejected ground four as forfeited and on the 11 merits and ground five on the merits. (See Lodged Doc. 7 at 9-12 22); Akuna, 2018 WL 1223995, at *4-8. The supreme court 13 summarily denied his petition for review raising those claims.
14 (See Lodged Docs. 8, 9); Cal. App. Cts. Case Info., 15 <http://appellatecases.courtinfo.ca.gov/> (search for "Frank" with 16 "Escalante" in supreme court) (last visited Sept. 23, 2021).
17 Under Wilson v. Sellers, 138 S. Ct. 1188, 1192 (2018), a 18 rebuttable presumption exists that a higher state court's 19 unexplained ruling "adopted the same reasoning" as the last 20 reasoned state-court decision. Id. The parties have not tried 21 to rebut that presumption here, and the Court therefore looks 22 through the supreme court's silent denial to the court of 23 appeal's decision as the basis for the state court's judgment on 24 grounds four and five. See id. at 1196-97. Because these claims 25 were adjudicated on the merits, AEDPA's deferential review
26 applies. See Richter, 562 U.S. at 100.

27 Petitioner presented grounds one through three in habeas 28 petitions to the superior court (see Lodged Doc. 10) and court of 1 appeal (see Lodged Doc. 12), and both courts denied them on the 2 merits and on procedural grounds (see Lodged Docs. 11, 13). He 3 then raised the claims in a habeas petition to the supreme court 4 (see Lodged Doc. 14), which denied it only on procedural grounds

5 (see Lodged Doc. 15).

6 Respondent contends that the Court should look through that 7 procedural denial to the court of appeal's merits decision. (See 8 Answer, Mem. P. & A. at 9-10; id. at 10 (citing Ramsey v.
9 Yearwood, 231 F. App'x 623, 624-25 (9th Cir. 2007)).) In Ramsey, 10 the Ninth Circuit gave AEDPA deference to a superior court's 11 merits decision even though it was followed by a procedural 12 denial by the court of appeal and a summary denial by the 13 California Supreme Court. 231 F. App'x at 624-25. Ramsey, 14 however, is unpublished, and its application of Ylst v.
15 Nunnemaker, 501 U.S. 797 (1991), differs from published Ninth 16 Circuit cases. See Mejia v. Foulk, No. CV 13-9465-AB (RNB)., 2015 WL 391688, at *8 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 28, 2015) (finding Ramsey 17 unpersuasive and declining to look through higher court's 18 procedural denial to lower court's merits denial); see also 19 Seeboth v. Allenby, 789 F.3d 1099, 1103-04 (9th Cir. 2015)
20 (construing California Supreme Court's decision to be on merits 21 but noting in dictum that if decision had been procedural, Ninth 22 Circuit would have reviewed claims de novo even though lower 23 court issued reasoned merits decision).

24
25 The supreme court never reached the merits of grounds one 26 through three but found them procedurally barred. (See Lodged 27 Doc. 15.) When the last reasoned decision in a state habeas 28 proceeding has denied a claim on procedural grounds, the claim has not been “adjudicated on the merits in a State court proceeding” and AEDPA’s deferential standard of review does not apply; rather, review is de novo. See Cone v. Bell, 556 U.S. 449, 472 (2009); Chaker v. Crogan, 428 F.3d 1215, 1221 (9th Cir. 2005). In any event, the Supreme Court has instructed federal habeas courts to engage in de novo review when the appropriate standard of review is uncertain but the lack of merit under de novo review is clear, as is the case here. See Berghuis v. Thompkins, 560 U.S. 370, 390 (2010) (“Courts can . . . deny writs of habeas corpus under § 2254 by engaging in de novo review when it is unclear whether AEDPA deference applies, because a habeas petitioner will not be entitled to a writ of habeas corpus if his or her claim is rejected on de novo review, see § 2254(a).” (emphasis in original)). Thus, the Court reviews grounds one through three de novo.

DISCUSSION¹⁰

I. Petitioner’s Claim that the Trial Court Violated Bourjaily By Admitting Akuna’s Statements Doesn’t Warrant Habeas Relief

Petitioner claims the trial court violated Bourjaily but doesn’t explain exactly how. (See Pet. at 20-32.) Bourjaily involved the admissibility of a coconspirator’s statement under Federal Rule of Evidence 801(d)(2)(E). See 483 U.S. at 173, 175.

¹⁰ Respondent argues that grounds two through four are procedurally barred. (See Answer, Mem. P. & A. at 6-9; cf. Answer at 1 (stating that ground one is also procedurally barred).) Because it’s easier to dispose of the claims on the merits, the Court resolves them solely on that basis. See Lambrix v. Singletary, 520 U.S. 518, 524-25 (1997); Franklin v. Johnson, 290 F.3d 1223, 1232 (9th Cir. 2002).

1 If he claims that the trial court violated the Federal Rules of 2 Evidence, the claim fails because they "do not apply in a state
3 criminal proceeding," Rios v. Domingo, No. EDCV 10-0731-PSG
4 (RNB)., 2010 WL 5563884, at *6 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 9, 2010), accepted
5 by 2011 WL 93035 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 11, 2011), and are not grounded
6 in the Constitution and therefore habeas relief for claims
7 resting on them is unavailable, see Varghese v. Uribe, 736 F.3d
8 817, 826 (9th Cir. 2013) (as amended) (noting that federal-rules 9 violation "cannot support a state prisoner's habeas claim").

10 Petitioner also cites state rules of evidence, the 11 California constitution, and his due process rights under the 12 14th Amendment. (See Pet. at 20.) Claims that a state court 13 violated state law aren't cognizable on federal habeas review.¹¹ 14 See 28 U.S.C. § 2254(a) (federal habeas writ may issue only when 15 person "is in custody in violation of the Constitution or laws or 16 treaties of the United States"); see also Estelle v. McGuire, 502
17 U.S. 62, 67-68 (1991); Park v. California, 202 F.3d 1146, 1154
18 (9th Cir. 2000) (finding that violation of state evidentiary law 19 in admitting jailhouse recordings didn't state cognizable habeas 20 claim); Hinman v. McCarthy, 676 F.2d 343, 349-50 (9th Cir. 1982)

21
22 ¹¹ For example, Petitioner argues that the trial court erred 23 under People v. Greenberger, 58 Cal. App. 4th 298 (1997) (as 24 modified). (See Pet. at 20, 24-25, 30; Traverse at 10.) There, 25 the court of appeal discussed when statements fall within the 26 declaration-against-interest exception to hearsay under California 27 evidence rules. See Greenberger, 58 Cal. App. 4th at 334-36. But 28 any such claim isn't cognizable here because it concerns only state law. See Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. 62, 67-68 (1991).
Greenberger also discussed the Sixth Amendment's right to confrontation, see 58 Cal. App. 4th at 331-34, but as discussed infra at pages 28-38, any Confrontation Clause claim fails.

1 (as amended on denial of reh'g en banc) (observing that federal 2 habeas relief does not lie for alleged violation of state 3 constitution).

4 And his general appeal to due process doesn't render his 5 claim cognizable. See Gray v. Netherland, 518 U.S. 152, 163
6 (1996) (explaining that petitioner may not convert state-law 7 claim into federal one by mentioning constitutional guarantee); 8 see also Cacoperdo v. Demosthenes, 37 F.3d 504, 507 (9th Cir.
9 1994) (habeas petitioner's mere reference to Due Process Clause
10 could not render his claims viable under 14th Amendment).

11 Putting that aside, the Supreme Court has never specifically 12 addressed whether admission of irrelevant or prejudicial evidence 13 can violate due process. See Holley v. Yarborough, 568 F.3d
14 1091, 1101 (9th Cir. 2009); Walden v. Shinn, 990 F.3d 1183, 1204 15 (9th Cir. 2021) (noting that Holley's observation about lack of 16 controlling precedent on admission of irrelevant or overtly 17 prejudicial evidence "remains true"). Because no clearly 18 established Court precedent exists, AEDPA precludes relief. See 19 Wright v. Van Patten, 552 U.S. 120, 126 (2008) (per curiam); 20 Crater v. Galaza, 491 F.3d 1119, 1123 (9th Cir. 2007) (noting 21 that Supreme Court has "explained that if habeas relief depends 22 upon the resolution of 'an open question in [Supreme Court] 23 jurisprudence, § 2254(d)(1) precludes relief'" (alteration in 24 original) (quoting Carey v. Musladin, 549 U.S. 70, 76 (2006))).

25 For these reasons, habeas relief isn't warranted even under 26 do novo review.

1 II. Petitioner's Claim that the Trial Court Violated His 2 Constitutional Rights By Admitting a Stipulation Doesn't 3 Warrant Habeas Relief

4 Petitioner claims the trial court violated Brady by 5 admitting a stipulation that police found his girlfriend dead in 6 a wash. (Pet. at 32.) Even under de novo review, this claim 7 fails.

8 A. Background

9 In his recorded statements, Akuna never referred to 10 Petitioner by name. He instead used his gang moniker, "Smokey."
11 (See, e.g., Supp. Clerk's Tr. at 101-02, 118-19, 121-22, Nov. 20, 12 2015.) Akuna told the informants that Smokey had killed his 13 girlfriend and that she had been found dead in a wash. (See 3 14 Rep.'s Tr. at 451-52, 465, 490; Supp. Clerk's Tr. at 130-32, 138, 15 144, Nov. 20, 2015 (unredacted transcript).) But that part of 16 the audio recording was redacted and the jury never heard it.
17 (See 3 Rep.'s Tr. at 451-52, 464-65, 490.) Petitioner instead 18 stipulated that his "girlfriend was found dead in a wash by law 19 enforcement officers in November 2011" and that "Akuna states [in 20 the recording] that Smokey's girlfriend was found dead in a 21 wash." (Id. at 465; see also id. at 451-52; 1 Clerk's Tr. at 22 163.) Using the stipulation, among other evidence, the 23 prosecution tried to prove that the Smokey referred to by Akuna
24 was Petitioner. (See 3 Rep.'s Tr. at 587-88.)

25 B. Analysis

26 Petitioner primarily claims violations of the California
27 constitution and evidence rules. (See Pet. at 32.) Those claims 28 aren't cognizable here. See § 2254(a); Park, 202 F.3d at 1154;

1 Hinman, 676 F.2d at 349-50. He also argues in passing that his 2 trial counsel "wrongly" and "foolishly" "misled" him about the 3 meaning of "stipulation." (Pet. 33.) But he doesn't explain how 4 his counsel explained the term or led him astray. (See id.)
5 Indeed, by stipulating, his counsel kept from the jury Akuna's 6 damaging statements about Petitioner's possible involvement in 7 another murder. (See 3 Rep.'s Tr. at 452 (trial court noting 8 that counsel "fought very hard to keep" statements from jury).)
9 This conclusory argument therefore wouldn't warrant habeas 10 relief, see Greenway v. Schriro, 653 F.3d 790, 804 (9th Cir.
11 2011) (finding that petitioner's " cursory and vague [ineffective-12 assistance-of-counsel claim] cannot support habeas relief"), even 13 were the claim exhausted, which it is not.

14 Without any real explanation, Petitioner cites Brady, 373 15 U.S. 83, to support his claim concerning the stipulation. (See 16 Pet. at 33-35.) "There could be exculpatory evidence," he 17 argues, "that could establish [his] innocence." (Id. at 33.) He 18 appears to suggest that evidence might have been suppressed
19 because a detective also put confidential informants in his cell 20 sometime after Akuna's and yet allegedly didn't turn over any 21 transcript of any conversation that followed. (See id.)
22 Petitioner's counsel clearly knew of the incident because he 23 asked Detective Blagg about it at trial. (See 3 Rep.'s Tr. at 24 511.) The prosecution had to disclose information to the defense 25 only if it was favorable to Petitioner and material. See 26 Runningeagle v. Ryan, 686 F.3d 758, 769 (9th Cir. 2012).
27 Petitioner has not even tried to show either of those things, 28 much less that his counsel never received the evidence;

1 speculation is not enough. See id. (holding that to state Brady 2 claim, petitioner must do more than "merely speculate" about 3 nature of undisclosed evidence (citing Wood v. Bartholomew, 516 4 U.S. 1, 6, 8 (1995) (per curiam))).

5 He also maintains that the trial court violated Chapman v.
6 California, 386 U.S. 18, 24 (1967), but doesn't explain how.
7 (See Pet. at 32-36; Traverse at 11, 17.) Indeed, in one of his 8 descriptions of Chapman, he quotes the dissent. (See Pet. at 35-9 36 (quoting Chapman, 386 U.S. at 53 (Harlan, J., dissenting))).
10 This conclusory argument cannot support habeas relief. See 11 Greenway, 653 F.3d at 804.

12 Finally, Petitioner claims that the stipulation's admission
13 "was prejudicial" and led to an "unfair trial." (Pet. at 34.)
14 Assuming he means to bring a due-process claim, it lacks merit.
15 The stipulation didn't implicate him in the woman's death, which 16 he seems to acknowledge.¹² (See id. at 33 (noting that it didn't 17 alert jury "how she died").) But even if it did, the Supreme 18 Court has not yet decided whether admission of propensity
19 evidence violates due process. See McGuire, 502 U.S. at 75 n.5
20 (expressly reserving issue); see also Kipp v. Davis, 971 F.3d 21 939, 951 n.8 (9th Cir. 2020) ("No clearly established law . . .
22 addresses whether the admission of a defendant's criminal history 23 or prior bad acts would violate due process."). Because no
24 clearly established Court precedent exists, AEDPA precludes

25
26
27 ¹² Petitioner claims his trial counsel stated "in the trial 28 court" that he was "arrested for the murder" of the woman. (Pet. at 34.) Counsel did indeed reference his arrest but only outside the jury's presence. (See 3 Rep.'s Tr. at 485, 490.)

1 relief. See Van Patten, 552 U.S. at 126; Crater, 491 F.3d at 2 1123. Indeed, the Ninth Circuit has repeatedly found that a 3 state court's rejection of a claim that admission of propensity 4 evidence violated due process cannot be an unreasonable
5 application of clearly established federal law. See, e.g., Garza 6 v. Yates, 472 F. App'x 690, 691-92 (9th Cir. 2012); Larson v.
7 Palmateer, 515 F.3d 1057, 1066 (9th Cir. 2008); Alberni v.
8 McDaniel, 458 F.3d 860, 866 (9th Cir. 2006). Likewise, even if 9 Petitioner could show that the stipulation unduly prejudiced him, 10 his claim would fail because the Supreme Court has not ruled that 11 admission of irrelevant or overtly prejudicial evidence can 12 violate due process. See Holley, 568 F.3d at 1101; see also 13 Walden, 990 F.3d at 1204.

14 What's more, the stipulation wasn't the only evidence 15 linking Petitioner to "Smokey." As the prosecutor noted, a 16 photograph taken from Akuna's residence depicts seven EMH 17 members, including Petitioner, with the moniker "Smokey" (among 18 others) written on the back. (See 2 Rep.'s Tr. at 285-90; 3 19 Rep.'s Tr. at 587-88.) And a detective testified that Petitioner 20 had identified himself in 2012 as "Smokey." (2 Rep.'s Tr. at 21 287.) Because the jury could have drawn a permissible inference 22 from the stipulation – that Petitioner was Smokey – and its 23 admission didn't prevent him from receiving a fair trial, his 24 due-process claim fails. See Jammal v. Van de Kamp, 926 F.2d 25 918, 920 (9th Cir. 1991).

26 Thus, even under de novo review, ground two doesn't warrant 27 habeas relief.
28

1 III. Petitioner's Instructional-Error Claim Doesn't Warrant
2 Habeas Relief

3 Petitioner claims the trial court violated his due-process
4 rights by instructing the jury with CALJIC numbers 6.22 5 (explaining that jury must decide whether each defendant 6 individually was member of charged conspiracy) and 6.23 (stating 7 alleged overt acts to support conspiracy) but not 6.24 8 (explaining how to evaluate coconspirator hearsay statements).
9 (See Pet. at 36.) Even under de novo review, this claim fails.

10 A. Applicable Law

11 Claims of error in state jury instructions are generally 12 matters of state law only and thus not cognizable on federal 13 habeas review. See Gilmore v. Taylor, 508 U.S. 333, 344 (1993).
14 A claim of instructional error does not raise a cognizable 15 federal claim unless the error "by itself so infected the entire 16 trial that the resulting conviction violates due process." 17 McGuire, 502 U.S. at 72 (citation omitted). "[N]ot every 18 ambiguity, inconsistency, or deficiency in a jury instruction 19 rises to the level of a due process violation," Middleton v.
20 McNeil, 541 U.S. 433, 437 (2004), and a claimed instructional 21 error "must be considered in the context of the instructions as a 22 whole and the trial record," McGuire, 502 U.S. at 72 (citation 23 omitted). When the alleged error involves the failure to give an 24 instruction, the petitioner's burden is "especially heavy" 25 because "[a]n omission, or an incomplete instruction, is less 26 likely to be prejudicial than a misstatement of the law."
27 Henderson v. Kibbe, 431 U.S. 145, 155 (1977).

28 Federal habeas relief is not warranted unless the

1 instructional error caused a "substantial and injurious effect or 2 influence in determining the jury's verdict." Hedgpeth v.
3 Pulido, 555 U.S. 57, 58 (2008) (per curiam) (citing Brecht v.
4 Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619 (1993)).

5 B. Background

6 The trial court conferred with all counsel about jury
7 instructions. (See 3 Rep.'s Tr. at 485-94.) No one requested
8 that the court give CALJIC 6.24. (See id.) Both defense counsel 9 stipulated that the instructions were complete and that the court 10 had not refused to give any instruction requested by the 11 defense.¹³ (See id. at 493-94.)

12 The jury received CALJIC 6.22:

13 Each defendant in this case is individually entitled 14 to and must receive your determination whether he is a 15 member of the alleged conspiracy. As to each defendant, 16 you must determine whether he was a conspirator by 17 deciding whether he willfully, intentionally and 18 knowingly joined with any others or other in the alleged 19 conspiracy.

20 Before you may return a guilty verdict as to any 21 defendant of the crime of conspiracy, you must 22 unanimously agree and find beyond a reasonable doubt 23 that, one, there was a conspiracy to commit the crime of 24 murder, and two, the defendant willfully, intentionally 25 and knowingly joined with any other or others to commit

26
27 ¹³ Counsel apparently didn't discuss CALJIC 6.23 (see 3 Rep.'s 28 Tr. at 485-94), but the jury did receive the instruction (see id. at 559-60; 2 Clerk's Tr. at 234).

1 the alleged conspiracy.

2 You must also unanimously agree and find beyond a 3 reasonable doubt that an overt act was committed by one 4 or more of the conspirators. You are not required to 5 unanimously agree as to who committed an overt act or 6 which overt act was committed so long as each of you 7 finds beyond a reasonable doubt that one of the 8 conspirators committed one of the acts alleged in the 9 information to be overt acts.

10 (3 Rep.'s Tr. at 558-59.)

11 And they received CALJIC 6.23:

12 In this case the defendants are charged with a 13 conspiracy to commit the following public crimes: murder.

14 It is alleged that the following acts were committed 15 in this state by one or more of the defendants and were 16 overt acts committed for the purpose of furthering the 17 objects of the conspiracy:

18 One, Richard Sanchez instructed Noah Akuna and 19 [Petitioner] to take care of German Palacios; [two,] 20 Michael Dominguez provided a loaded .40 caliber handgun
21 to Noah Akuna; three, Noah Akuna provided a .38 caliber
22 revolver to [Petitioner]; four, Richard Sanchez arranged 23 for German Palacios to be on Medina Court in El Monte on 24 the night of June 14th, 2012; five, Richard Sanchez
25 informed Noah Akuna and [Petitioner] that German Palacios
26 would be on Medina Court in El Monte on the night of June 27 14th, 2012; six, Noah Akuna and [Petitioner] went to 28 Medina Court with loaded firearms to meet German Palacios

1 for the purpose of murdering him; seven, Noah Akuna shot 2 German Palacios with a .40 caliber firearm multiple 3 times; eight, [Petitioner] shot German Palacios with a 4 .38 caliber revolver at least one time.

5 (3 Rep.'s Tr. at 559-60.)

6 CALJIC 6.24, which the jury was not given, concerns when a 7 statement introduced under the coconspirator hearsay exception 8 can be considered against another alleged conspirator:

9 Evidence of a statement made by one alleged 10 conspirator other than at this trial shall not be 11 considered by you as against another alleged conspirator
12 unless you determine by a preponderance of the evidence:

13 1. That from other independent evidence that at the 14 time the statement was made a conspiracy to commit a 15 crime existed;

16 2. That the statement was made while the person 17 making the statement was participating in the conspiracy;

18 3. That the statement was made in furtherance of the 19 objective of the conspiracy, and was made before or 20 during the time when the party against whom it was 21 offered was participating in the conspiracy.

22 The word "statement" as used in this instruction 23 includes any oral or written verbal expression or the 24 nonverbal conduct of a person intended by that person as 25 a substitute for oral or written verbal expression.

26 C. Analysis

27 Petitioner argues that the trial court erred by giving 28 CALJIC numbers 6.22 and 6.23 "without a determination of a

1 preliminary fact that a conspiracy was indeed in existence."

2 (Pet. at 36; see also id. at 20.) He apparently alludes to the 3 preliminary facts required before a court can admit statements
4 under California Evidence Code § 1223, the coconspirator
5 exception to the hearsay rule. (See Pet. at 20); People v.
6 Herrera, 83 Cal. App. 4th 46, 61 (2000) (noting that under § 7 1223, "[t]he existence of a conspiracy at the time the statement 8 is made is the preliminary fact to the admissibility of the 9 coconspirator's statement"). But as noted above, the Court 10 cannot "reexamine state-court determinations on state-law 11 questions."¹⁴ McGuire, 502 U.S. at 68. At any rate, the trial
12 court didn't admit Akuna's statements under § 1223. It admitted 13 them under the hearsay exception for statements against penal 14 interest. (See 1 Rep.'s Tr. at 36-54); see also Akuna, 2018 WL 15 1223995, at *10. Moreover, it was for the jury to decide whether 16 a conspiracy existed. See CALJIC 6.22; see also CALJIC 8.69
17 (elements of conspiracy to commit murder); (3 Rep.'s Tr. at 549-18 52). Thus, the court didn't err, much less cause "substantial 19 and injurious effect or influence in determining the jury's 20 verdict." Pulido, 555 U.S. at 58.

21 As to omitting CALJIC 6.24, because the court didn't admit 22 Akuna's statements under § 1223, that instruction didn't apply
23 and the court had no reason to give it. See Galache v. Kenan, 24 No. SA CV 06-00755 SVW (RZ)., 2008 WL 3833411, at *5 (C.D. Cal.

26 ¹⁴ If he is alluding to the similar requirement under Federal 27 Rule of Evidence 801(d)(2)(E), see Bourjaily, 483 U.S. at 175-76, 28 his claim also fails. See Rios, 2010 WL 5563884, at *6; Varghese, 736 F.3d at 826.

1 Aug. 14, 2008) (rejecting instructional-error claim based on 2 failure to give CALJIC 6.24 because court didn't admit statements 3 under coconspirator exception).

4 Even under de novo review, habeas relief isn't warranted on 5 ground three.

6 IV. Petitioner's Involuntary-Confession Claim Doesn't Warrant
7 Habeas Relief

8 Respondent maintains that Petitioner lacks standing to bring 9 this claim. (See Answer, Mem. P. & A. at 6-7.) "In general, [a 10 habeas petitioner] does not have standing to challenge a 11 violation of [another's] rights; however, illegally obtained 12 confessions may be less reliable than voluntary ones, and thus 13 using a coerced confession at another's trial can violate due 14 process." Douglas v. Woodford, 316 F.3d 1079, 1092 (9th Cir.
15 2003). Petitioner argues that Akuna's confession was involuntary 16 because it was "obtained through coercion and deception" and its 17 admission therefore violated Petitioner's due-process rights.
18 (Pet. at 73.) He thus has standing. See Douglas, 316 F.3d at 19 1092. But his involuntary-confession claim fails on the merits, 20 as fully addressed at pages 14 to 22 of the Report and 21 Recommendation in Akuna, No. 2:19-cv-03611-RSWL (JPR); the Court 22 does not repeat that analysis here.

23 V. Petitioner's Confrontation Clause Claim Doesn't Warrant
24 Habeas Relief

25 Petitioner claims the trial court violated his Sixth
26 Amendment right to confront witnesses by admitting Akuna's 27 statements implicating him in the murder. (See Pet. at 10, 76-28 92.) For the reasons discussed below, the court of appeal's

1 rejection of the claim was not contrary to or an unreasonable 2 application of clearly established federal law, nor was it based 3 on an unreasonable determination of the facts.

4 A. Applicable Law

5 The Confrontation Clause of the Sixth Amendment affords a 6 criminal defendant the right to cross-examine witnesses.
7 Delaware v. Van Arsdall, 475 U.S. 673, 678 (1986). In Crawford
8 v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36, 53-54 (2004), the Supreme Court held 9 that the Confrontation Clause bars "admission of testimonial 10 statements of a witness who did not appear at trial unless he was 11 unavailable to testify, and the defendant had had a prior 12 opportunity for cross-examination." Conversely, the 13 Confrontation Clause does not bar nontestimonial statements. Id.
14 at 68; see Davis v. Washington, 547 U.S. 813, 821 (2006) ("It is 15 the testimonial character of the statement that separates it from 16 other hearsay that, while subject to traditional limitations upon 17 hearsay evidence, is not subject to the Confrontation Clause.").

18 Crawford did not spell out a comprehensive list of 19 "testimonial" statements but noted that they include (1) "ex 20 parte in-court testimony or its functional equivalent," such as 21 affidavits, custodial examinations, prior testimony made without 22 cross-examination, and "similar pretrial statements that 23 declarants would reasonably expect to be used prosecutorially"; 24 (2) extrajudicial statements in formalized testimonial materials; 25 and (3) "statements that were made under circumstances which 26 would lead an objective witness reasonably to believe that the 27 statement would be available for use at a later trial." 541 U.S.
28 at 51-52 (citations omitted); see id. at 68.

1 B. Court-of-Appeal Decision

2 The court of appeal first noted that “[l]ower federal courts 3 have consistently held that a defendant’s statements made 4 unwittingly to a government informant are not testimonial within 5 the meaning” of Crawford. Akuna, 2018 WL 1223995, at *6 (citing 6 cases). It also observed that in Davis the Court “cited with 7 approval” Bourjaily, 483 U.S. at 181-84, “as an example of 8 statements that ‘were clearly nontestimonial,’ and described 9 Bourjaily as involving ‘statements made unwittingly to a 10 Government informant.’” Akuna, 2018 WL 1223995, at *6 n.3
11 (quoting Davis, 547 U.S. at 825).

12 The court discussed other relevant Supreme Court authority:
13 [U]nder the primary purpose test of testimonial
14 statements propounded in Davis, statements unwittingly 15 made to an informant are not testimonial, because the 16 defendant does not expect his statements to be used in 17 court. [See also] Michigan v. Bryant (2011) 562 U.S.
18 344, 367, footnote 11, 131 S. Ct. 1143, 179 L. Ed. 2d 93
19 (Bryant): “ ‘ “[I]t is in the final analysis the 20 declarant’s statements, not the interrogator’s questions, 21 that the Confrontation Clause requires us to evaluate.”
22 [Citation.] . . . An interrogator’s questions, unlike a 23 declarant’s answers, do not assert the truth of any 24 matter.’ ”

25 [Petitioner] argues that the lower federal court
26 authorities decided after Davis and pre-Bryant are no 27 longer good authority . . . because Bryant clarified that 28 the primary purpose test requires an analysis of the 1 motivations of both the defendant and the questioner.

2 Thus, that a declarant does not intend statements 3 unwittingly made to an informant to be used in court is 4 not controlling. Rather, Bryant reasoned that under the 5 primary purpose test, among the relevant factors to be 6 objectively assessed to determine whether a statement is 7 testimonial is a "combined inquiry that accounts for both 8 the declarant and the interrogator." (Bryant, supra, 562
9 U.S. at p. 367, 131 S. Ct. 1143.)

10 We have found no decision, and [Petitioner] has 11 cited us to none, in which a court has held that under 12 the reasoning of Bryant, a declarant's statement made 13 unwittingly to a police informant is testimonial.
14 Further, while we agree that Bryant requires 15 consideration of the nature of the questioning from the 16 perspective of both the questioner and the declarant, we 17 do not agree that Bryant, or the later decision in Ohio
18 v. Clark (2015) 576 U.S. ----, 135 S. Ct. 2173, 2180, 192
19 L. Ed. 2d 306 (Clark), which also discussed the primary 20 purpose test, suggests that use of a police informant, to 21 whom the declarant unknowingly makes statements that will 22 be used in court, transforms the declarant's statements 23 into testimonial hearsay.

24 Building on Davis, Bryant held that the 25 confrontation clause is not triggered when an 26 interrogation's primary purpose is in response to an 27 ongoing emergency. In that situation, the purpose is not 28 to create a record for trial. (Bryant, supra, 562 U.S.

1 at p. 358, 131 S. Ct. 1143.) However, Bryant noted other 2 circumstances could exist "when a statement is not 3 procured with a primary purpose of creating an 4 out-of-court substitute for trial testimony." (Ibid.)
5 Whether an ongoing emergency exists is one factor. (Id.
6 at p. 366, 131 S. Ct. 1143.) Another factor is "the 7 informality of the situation and the interrogation."
8 (Id. at p. 377, 131 S. Ct. 1143.) Also relevant are the 9 standard rules of hearsay, which are designed to identify 10 some statements as reliable. (Id. at pp. 358-359, 131 S.
11 Ct. 1143.) Applying these principles, the Bryant court 12 held "that the statements made by a dying victim about 13 his assailant were not testimonial because the 14 circumstances objectively indicated that the conversation 15 was primarily aimed at quelling an ongoing emergency, not 16 establishing evidence for the prosecution." (Clark, 17 supra, 576 U.S. at p. ----, 135 S. Ct. at p. 2180.)

18 In Clark, the high court again refined the primary 19 purpose test, finding that statements made by a 20 three-year-old to teachers who suspected he had been 21 abused were not testimonial. (Clark, supra, 576 U.S. at 22 p. ----, 135 S. Ct. at p. 2181.) Clark held that the 23 boy's statements "clearly were not made with the primary 24 purpose of creating evidence" for the defendant's 25 prosecution so "their introduction at trial did not 26 violate the Confrontation Clause." (Ibid.) In doing so, 27 the court noted that the boy's "statements occurred in 28 the context of an ongoing emergency involving suspected

1 child abuse." (Clark, supra, 576 U.S. at p. ----, 135 S.
2 Ct. at p. 2181.) The teachers' immediate concern was 3 protecting a vulnerable child, and the teachers needed to 4 know whether it was safe to release the boy to his 5 guardian. Moreover, both the teachers' questions and the 6 boy's answers "were primarily aimed at identifying and 7 ending the threat." (Ibid.) The high court found "no 8 indication that the primary purpose of the conversation 9 was to gather evidence" for the defendant's prosecution.
10 (Ibid.) The teachers never informed the boy "that his 11 answers would be used to arrest or punish his abuser.
12 [The boy] never hinted that he intended his statements to 13 be used by the police or prosecutors." (Ibid.) The 14 conversation "was informal and spontaneous" (ibid.), and 15 a young child in these circumstances "would [not] intend 16 his statements to be a substitute for trial testimony," 17 but rather "would simply want the abuse to end, would 18 want to protect other victims, or would have no
19 discernible purpose at all." (Id. at p. 2182.)

20 Clark also noted it was "highly relevant" that the 21 boy was speaking to his teachers. (Clark, supra, 576 22 U.S.----, 135 S. Ct. at p. 2182.) "Courts must evaluate 23 challenged statements in context, and part of that 24 context is the questioner's identity. [Citation.]
25 Statements made to someone who is not principally charged 26 with uncovering and prosecuting criminal behavior are 27 significantly less likely to be testimonial than 28 statements given to law enforcement officers.

1 [Citation.] It is common sense that the relationship 2 between a student and his teacher is very different from 3 that between a citizen and the police." (Ibid.) Clark 4 concluded that "[b]ecause neither the child nor his 5 teachers had the primary purpose of assisting in [the 6 defendant's] prosecution, the child's statements do not 7 implicate the Confrontation Clause and therefore were 8 admissible at trial." (Id. at p. ----, 135 S. Ct. at p.
9 2177.)

10 Akuna, 2018 WL 1223995, at *6-7 (some alterations in original)
11 (footnote omitted) (some citations omitted).

12 Finally, the court rejected Petitioner's Confrontation Clause
13 claim:

14 Davis, Bryant and Clark all involve ongoing 15 emergency situations, which are markedly different from 16 the situation here, in which gang members acting as 17 police informants secretly recorded their conversation
18 with Akuna, a fellow gang member, while in a jail cell.
19 It is not at all apparent that the primary purpose 20 analysis of these opinions, made in the context of 21 emergencies, suggests that the Supreme Court would find 22 statements made unknowingly to a government informant 23 under the circumstances here to be testimonial. And, as 24 we have noted, no case has so held. That said, assuming 25 the primary purpose test as developed in these decisions 26 fully applies to the situation here, it does not require 27 a focus solely on the questioner's motives, nor does it 28 compel the conclusion that the questioner's motives take

1 precedence over the declarant's motives. Further, Davis,
2 Bryant and Clark do not suggest that to make a 3 declarant's statements nontestimonial, both the 4 questioner and declarant must lack any purpose of 5 preserving evidence for future prosecution. Thus, in the 6 instant case, even though the informants recorded Akuna's 7 statements for the primary purpose of creating evidence 8 for a future prosecution, that is not determinative.
9 Rather, the high court has made it clear we must 10 objectively view the totality of the circumstances.
11 (Bryant, supra, 562 U.S. at p. 359, 131 S. Ct. 1143.)

12 Here, it is true that informants did not record
13 Akuna during an ongoing emergency. However, Bryant noted 14 that other circumstances can produce nontestimonial 15 statements. (Bryant, supra, 562 U.S. at p. 358, 131 S.
16 Ct. 1143.) The rules of hearsay and the "informality" of 17 the situation are factors to consider. (Id. at pp.
18 358-359, 366, 377, 131 S. Ct. 1143.) Clark noted the 19 young boy in that case made his statements in a 20 conversation that "was informal and spontaneous."
21 (Clark, supra, 576 U.S. at p. ----, 135 S. Ct. at p.
22 2181.) As such, to the extent [Petitioner] suggests that 23 because the informants acted for the police, it is 24 irrelevant that the conversation lacked solemnity or 25 formality, he is mistaken. Akuna spoke in a relaxed 26 setting with fellow gang members, and his statements were 27 not made under circumstances that imparted the formality 28 and solemnity characteristic of testimony. The 1 circumstances also were conducive to the reliability of 2 his statements. Indeed, although the informants were 3 acting for the police, the conversation, viewed 4 objectively, did not proceed in any manner as would a 5 police interrogation.

6 Clark also noted the statements must be examined in 7 context, a consideration that includes the interviewer's
8 identity. Clark found it "highly relevant" that the boy 9 spoke to his teachers. (Clark, supra, 576 U.S. at p.
10 ----, 135 S. Ct. at p. 2182.) Here, it is highly 11 relevant that the questioners were gang members, albeit 12 (unknown to Akuna) they were paid informants. Certainly 13 the dynamic between gang members is not at all analogous 14 to the dynamic between a citizen and the police.

15 Finally, Clark emphasized that the boy's age 16 fortified the conclusion the statements were not 17 testimonial. (Clark, supra, 576 U.S. at p. ----, [135 S.
18 Ct. at pp. 2181-2182].) Clark determined it was 19 "extremely unlikely" a three-year-old child in this 20 situation would intend his statements to be a substitute 21 for trial testimony. (Id. at p. 2182.) Likewise, it is 22 extremely unlikely that a gang member in Akuna's position
23 would intend his statements to be a substitute for trial 24 testimony.

25 Assuming the primary purpose test as currently 26 articulated applies with full force to the present case, 27 we conclude that the totality of the circumstances
28 demonstrates Akuna's statements were not testimonial.

1 Thus, admission of the statements into evidence did not 2 violate [Petitioner's] Sixth Amendment right to 3 confrontation.

4 Akuna, 2018 WL 1223995, at *8 (some alterations in original)
5 (some citations omitted).

6 C. Analysis

7 The state court's rejection of Petitioner's claim was not 8 contrary to clearly established federal law or objectively
9 unreasonable. No Supreme Court precedent has held that voluntary 10 statements made unknowingly to government informants are 11 testimonial under the Confrontation Clause or even that the 12 primary-purpose test applies in nonemergency situations. See 13 Meraz v. Pfeiffer, No. CV 16-1955-JAK (KS), 2017 WL 7101154, at 14 *19 (C.D. Cal. Dec. 12, 2017), accepted by 2018 WL 587846 (C.D.
15 Cal. Jan. 29, 2018), appeal filed, No. 18-55862 (9th Cir. June 16 28, 2018); Parra-Interian v. Obenland, No. 3:17-CV-05481-RBL-DWC, 17 2019 WL 2026515, at *20 (W.D. Wash. Mar. 20, 2019) ("Petitioner
18 has not shown, nor does the Court find, clearly established
19 Supreme Court law holding a body wire recording of a conversation 20 between a third-party and an informant is testimonial."), 21 accepted by 2019 WL 2022694 (W.D. Wash. May 8, 2019).

22 Given the abundant federal authority cited by the court of 23 appeal, it was not objectively unreasonable in concluding that 24 Akuna's statements were not testimonial. See Akuna, 2018 WL
25 1223995, at *6 & n.3; see also Meraz, 2017 WL 7101154, at *17-19 26 (finding that state court reasonably rejected petitioner's claim 27 that recorded jailhouse statements between third party and 28 government informant were testimonial); Parra-Interian, 2019 WL

1 2026515, at *20-21 (state court reasonably concluded that 2 conversation between third party and informant was not
3 testimonial); King v. Sherman, No. LACV 15-9948-ODW (LAL), 2017 4 WL 5899324, at *9 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 26, 2017) (finding that 5 "[b]ecause [codefendant] made his statements to a police 6 informant, whose true status was unknown to [codefendant], his 7 statements were not testimonial for purposes of the Confrontation 8 Clause"), accepted by 2017 WL 5900659 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 27, 2017).

9 Because Akuna's statements were not testimonial, the rule of 10 Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 135-36 (1968) (holding 11 that confrontation right is generally violated by admission of 12 nontestifying codefendant's facially incriminating confession, 13 even with limiting jury instruction), does not apply. See Lucero 14 v. Holland, 902 F.3d 979, 988 (9th Cir. 2018) ("[O]nly 15 testimonial codefendant statements are subject to the federal 16 Confrontation Clause limits established in Bruton"). Thus, 17 Petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief.
