STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner Luis Aceves-Ramirez was found guilty, after a guilty plea, of possession with intent to distribute methamphetamine and sentenced to 236 months' imprisonment. In the district court and on appeal, Aceves-Ramirez argues that the district court erroneously enhanced his sentence based on its finding that he sold methamphetamine imported from Mexico.

Aceves-Ramirez was born and raised in Mexico, has family in Mexico, and is not a citizen of the United States. He was arrested for distributing high-purity methamphetamine. His co-conspirator admitted to authorities upon arrest that one of the suppliers, "Carter," resided in Mexico. The evidence did not establish that Aceves-Ramirez knew the methamphetamine was imported.

REASONS FOR GRANTING CERT

This Court should grant certiorari to resolve a longstanding circuit split, unresolved by the Sentencing Commission, over whether a sentence may be enhanced for imported methamphetamine, pursuant to U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1(b)(5), when the government does not prove that the defendant knew the methamphetamine was imported.

The Fifth Circuit has held that the importation enhancement, § 2D1.1(b)(5), does not require that the defendant knew the methamphetamine was imported. United States v. Serfass, 684 F.3d 548, 551 (5th Cir. 2012). The Eighth Circuit agrees. United States v. Werkmeister, 62 F.4th 465, 469 (8th Cir. 2023).

The Ninth Circuit, however, requires that the defendant knew the methamphetamine was imported for the enhancement to apply. United States v. Job, 871 F.3d 852, 871-72 (9th Cir. 2017). The Eleventh and Sixth Circuits agree. United States v. Hernandez-Asudillo, 777 F. App'x 374, 376-77 (11th Cir. 2019) (affirming application of enhancement because government showed that methamphetamine was imported, and defendant knew of its importation); United States v. Johnson, 738 F. App'x 872 (6th Cir. 2018) (“Under the United States Sentencing Guidelines, a defendant receives a two-point offense-level enhancement if the offense ‘involved the importation’ of methamphetamines ‘that the defendant knew were imported unlawfully.’”) (quoting U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1(b)(5)).

The Court should review this case in order to resolve this enduring and deepening split.

The Fifth Circuit erroneously permits a defendant’s sentence to be enhanced because he dealt with imported methamphetamine, though he had no knowledge of its importation.

The Guideline for drug offenses requires a two-level enhancement:

If (A) the offense involved the importation of amphetamine or methamphetamine or the manufacture of amphetamine or methamphetamine from listed chemicals that the defendant knew were imported unlawfully, and (B) the defendant is not subject to an adjustment under § 3B1.2 (Mitigating Role).

U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1(b)(5).

The plain language of the Guideline clearly requires the government to prove that the offense involved imported methamphetamine that the defendant knew was imported. In Serfass, the Fifth Circuit relied on a fallacious grammatical argument. 684 F.3d at 551-52. The Fifth Circuit believed that the use of the plural “were” indicated that the clause it introduced modified only the plural “chemicals.” Id. But, as applied to this enhancement, grammar rules cannot be used to determine the reach of the mens rea element.

“When a verb has two or more subjects connected by or or nor, the verb agrees with the last-named subject {Bob or his friends have your key} {neither the twins nor Jon is prepared to leave}.” The Chicago Manual of Style ¶ 5.138 (17th ed. 2017) (emphasis and brackets in original). Thus, the enhancement’s use of the plural merely agreed with “chemicals” the last-named subject; it was not an incredibly vague way of instructing district courts that a defendant’s culpability varies depending on whether he knew chemicals used to manufacture methamphetamine were imported but not on whether he knew the methamphetamine itself was imported.

The Fifth Circuit’s holding also conflicts with this Court’s previous cases on the reach of a mens rea element. This Court has repeatedly held, in the statutory construction context, that, “[a]s ‘a matter of ordinary English grammar,’ we normally read the statutory term ‘knowingly as applying to all the subsequently listed elements of the crime.’” Rehaif v. United States, 139 S. Ct. 2191, 2196 (2019) (quoting Flores-Figueroa v. United States, 556 U.S. 646, 650 (2009)). While the knowingly requirement here comes at the end of the sentence, it makes equal grammatical sense to conclude that it applies to all the antecedently listed elements of the enhancement.

Further, the absence of a requirement that the defendant knew the methamphetamine was imported destroys the ability of the enhancement to serve as a meaningful way of distinguishing culpability between different defendants. See United States v. Nunley, 29 F.4th 824, 830-31 (6th Cir. 2022) (a district court may “impose two enhancements arising from the same conduct, provided the enhancements penalize distinct harms”). Thus, to the extent possible, different Guideline enhancements should be read not to double count the same conduct. As the Fifth Circuit wrote here, it has “previously recognized” that “high-purity methamphetamine” is “evidence of importation.” Appendix, at 2 (citing United States v. Arayatanom, 908 F.3d 444, 452 (5th Cir. 2020)). The Guidelines already provide a substantial enhancement when the methamphetamine is pure, as opposed to a substance containing methamphetamine. See, e.g., U.S.S.G. § 2D1.1(c)(1) (providing for a base offense level of 38 for a defendant who possesses more than 45 kilograms of methamphetamine but requiring only 4.5 kilograms of “actual” or pure methamphetamine for the same offense level). The Fifth Circuit’s interpretation of the enhancement permits district courts to apply it anytime a defendant’s offense involves pure methamphetamine, and for that reason, it should be rejected.

CONCLUSION

The Fifth Circuit’s holding that knowledge of methamphetamine’s importation is not required to apply the 2-level § 2D1.1(b)(5) enhancement conflicts with the plain text of the Guideline and is inconsistent with the purpose of the Guidelines. That interpretation has resulted in a deepening circuit split that this Court should intervene to correct. Because, here, there was no evidence that Aceves-Ramirez knew the methamphetamine was imported, this case presents an ideal vehicle for this Court to review the split.

For these reasons, Petitioner asks that this Court grant a writ of certiorari and review the judgment of the court of appeals.
