MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

After several mass shootings nationwide, the City of Naperville enacted an Ordinance prohibiting the sale of assault weapons. Illinois followed shortly after with the Protect Illinois Communities Act, which bans the sale of both assault weapons and high-capacity magazines. Robert Bevis, who owns a local gun store in Naperville, Law Weapons, and the National Association of Gun Rights sued the state and city, alleging their laws violate the Second Amendment. (Dkt. 48). They now move for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction alleging that their constitutional rights are being violated by the bans. (Dkts. 10, 50). For the following reasons, the motions are denied. (Id.)

BACKGROUND

Mass shootings have become common in America. They have occurred in cities from San Bernadino, California to Newtown, Connecticut, and recently, Highland Park, Illinois. (Dkt. 12-1 at 1–3). In response, several states—California, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and New York—along with many local municipalities have enacted bans on the possession, sale, and manufacture of assault weapons and high-capacity magazines. (Id.) Illinois and the city of Naperville decided to put similar restrictions in place.

On August 17, 2022, Naperville’s City Council passed its Ordinance banning the sale of “assault rifles” within the city.¹ (Dkt. 12 at 2). Section 3-19-2 declares “[t]he Commercial Sale of Assault Rifles within the City is unlawful and is hereby prohibited.” (Dkt. 12-1 at 8). Violators are subject to fines ranging between $1,000 and $2,500. (Id. at 9). Section 3-19-1 provides both a general definition of an “assault rifle” as well as specific examples of prohibited guns. (Id. at 4).

The general definition is as follows:

(1) A semiautomatic rifle that has a magazine that is not a fixed magazine and has any of the following:

- (A) A pistol grip.
- (B) A forward grip.
- (C) A folding, telescoping, or detachable stock, or is otherwise foldable or adjustable in a manner that operates to reduce the length, size, or any other dimension, or otherwise enhances the concealability, of the weapon.
- (D) A grenade launcher.
- (E) A barrel shroud.
- (F) A threaded barrel.

(2) A semiautomatic rifle that has a fixed magazine with the capacity to accept more than 10 rounds, except for an attached tubular device designed to accept, and capable of operating only with, .22 caliber rimfire ammunition.

(3) Any part, combination of parts, component, device, attachment, or accessory that is designed or functions to accelerate the rate of fire of a semiautomatic rifle but not convert the semiautomatic rifle into a machinegun.

¹ The parties dispute whether the terms “assault rifle,” “assault pistol,” and “assault weapon” are appropriate. Proponents of bans believe the language accurately links the class of weapons to military weaponry. Indeed, the gun industry itself used “the terms ‘assault weapons’ and ‘assault rifles’ [] in the early 1980s, before political efforts to regulate them emerged in the late 1980s. The use of military terminology, and the weapons’ military character and appearance, were key to marketing the guns to the public.” Robert J. Spitzer, Gun Accessories and the Second Amendment: Assault Weapons, Magazines, and Silencers, 83 Law & Contemp. Probs. 231, 234 (2020). Opponents now consider the label misleading because the often-included guns, the argument goes, share no similar set of characteristics beyond the fact that they look intimidating. The Court will use the terms, as they are widely accepted in modern parlance and effectively convey the substance of the bans.

(Id. at 5). Additionally, twenty-six categories of weapons are specifically banned, including AK-47 and AR-15 rifles. (Id. at 5–6). The Ordinance was set to go into effect on January 1, 2023. (Id. at 10).

On January 10, 2023, Illinois enacted the Protect Illinois Communities Act, HB 5471. (Dkt. 57 at 1). The statute renders it unlawful “for any person within this State to knowingly manufacture, deliver, sell, or purchase or cause to be manufactured, delivered, sold, or purchased or cause to be possessed by another, an assault weapon,” defined by a list of enumerated guns, including the AR-15 and AK-47. 720 ILCS 5/24-1.9(b). Additionally, the law bans the sale of “large capacity ammunition feeding device[s],” which are “magazine[s], belt[s], drum[s], [and] feed strip[s] ... that can be readily restored or converted to accept[] more than 10 rounds of ammunition for long guns and more than 15 rounds of ammunition for handguns.” 720 ILCS 5/24-1.10(a). Both state prohibitions went into immediate effect upon the passage of the act (in contrast, the regulations banning assault-weapon and large-capacity magazine ownership and imposing registration requirements have a later effective date and are not being challenged). (Dkt. 57 at 2).

Robert Bevis owns Law Weapons, a firearm store in Naperville. (Dkt. 48 ¶¶ 7–8). He attests, “I and my customers desire to exercise our Second Amendment right to acquire the Banned Firearms ... for lawful purposes, including, but not limited to, the defense of our homes.” (Dkt. 10-2 ¶ 4). Furthermore, he claims that the prohibition means he and his business will go bankrupt, and “the citizens of Naperville will be left as sitting ducks for criminals who will still get guns.” (Id. ¶ 5). National Association for Gun Rights (“NAGR”) is a nonprofit organization dedicated to “defend[ing] the right of all law-abiding individuals to keep and bear arms” and seeks to represent “the interests of its members who reside in the City of Naperville.” (Dkt. 10-1 ¶ 2; see also Dkt. 48 ¶ 6).

Before Illinois enacted the Protect Illinois Communities Act, the plaintiffs—Bevis, Law Weapons, and NAGR—sued Naperville alleging its Ordinance violates the Second Amendment. (Dkt. 1). They moved for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction preventing its enforcement. (Dkt. 10). The city agreed to stay the Ordinance pending the disposition of the motion. (Dkt. 29). Shortly thereafter, Illinois passed the Protect Illinois Communities Act, and this Court granted the plaintiffs leave to amend their complaint to add the state as a party. (Dkts. 41, 47). The plaintiffs promptly filed their Amended Complaint, adding Jason Arres, Naperville’s Chief of Police, as a defendant and asserting that both Naperville’s Ordinance and Illinois’s Protect Illinois Communities Act violate the Second Amendment. (Dkt. 48). They then notified the Illinois Attorney General of their constitutional challenge and moved for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction against both laws.² (Dkts. 49, 50). The Court held oral argument on January 27, 2023. (Dkt. 55).

DISCUSSION

The standards for issuing a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction are identical. Mays v. Dart, 453 F. Supp. 3d 1074, 1087 (N.D. Ill. 2020). “A preliminary injunction is an extraordinary remedy never awarded as of right.” Doe v. Univ. of S. Ind., 43 F.4th 784, 791 (7th

² During this litigation, other plaintiffs have challenged the Illinois law in both state and federal court. On January 20, 2023, an Illinois circuit court entered a temporary restraining order enjoining the law based on a violation of the three-readings rule, and the Illinois Appellate Court for the Fifth District affirmed. Accuracy Firearms, LLC v. Pritzker, 2023 IL App (5th) 230035 (Jan. 31, 2023). Neither party has raised the possibility of abstention under Railroad Commission of Texas v. Pullman Co., 312 U.S. 496 (1941). Pullman abstention requires federal courts to stay cases while state courts adjudicate “unsettled state-law issues.” Arizonans for Off. Eng. v. Arizona, 520 U.S. 43, 76 (1997). While abstention doctrines can be raised sua sponte, International College of Surgeons v. City of Chicago, 153 F.3d 356, 360 (7th Cir. 1998), doing so here would be inappropriate. “Attractive in theory because it placed state-law questions in courts equipped to rule authoritatively on them, Pullman abstention proved protracted and expensive in practice, for it entailed a full round of litigation in the state court system before any resumption of proceedings in federal court.” Arizonans for Off. Eng., 520 U.S. at 76. The Protect Illinois Communities Act needs no clarification—it clearly prohibits the sale of assault weapons and high-capacity magazines. No unsettled state-law issue complicates this Court’s review of the Act’s constitutionality. Moreover, even without the state law, Naperville’s Ordinance would still be in effect.

Cir. 2022) (quoting Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 24 (2008)). “A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish [1] that he is likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4] that an injunction is in the public interest.” Halczenko v. Ascension Health, Inc., 37 F.4th 1321, 1324 (7th Cir. 2022) (quoting Winter, 555 U.S. at 20).

I. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

A plaintiff must “demonstrate that [his] claim has some likelihood of success on the merits, not merely a better than negligible chance.” Doe, 43 F.4th at 791 (quoting Mays v. Dart, 974 F.3d 810, 822 (7th Cir. 2020)). Analyzing the likelihood of success, the Seventh Circuit has stressed, is “often decisive”—as it is here. Braam v. Carr, 37 F.4th 1269, 1272 (7th Cir. 2022). As set forth below, although the plaintiffs have standing to bring this lawsuit, they are unlikely to succeed on the merits of their claim because Naperville’s Ordinance and the Protect Illinois Communities Act are consistent with the Second Amendment’s text, history, and tradition.

A. Jurisdiction

Before proceeding to the merits, the Court must be confident in its jurisdiction. N.J. by Jacob v. Sonnabend, 37 F.4th 412, 420 (7th Cir. 2022). Article III grants the federal courts jurisdiction only over “cases” and “controversies.” U.S. Const. art. III § 2. As such, any person or party “invoking the power of a federal court must demonstrate standing to do so.” Hero v. Lake Cnty. Election Bd., 42 F.4th 768, 772 (7th Cir. 2022) (quoting Hollingsworth v. Perry, 570 U.S. 693, 704 (2013)). The three familiar elements for standing are (1) a concrete and particularized injury actually suffered by the plaintiff that (2) is traceable to the defendant’s conduct and (3) can be remedied by judicial relief. Pierre v. Midland Credit Mgmt., Inc., 29 F.4th 934, 937 (7th Cir. 2022). All three plaintiffs here have satisfied the standing requirements to bring their lawsuit.

1. Individual Standing

Direct monetary harm is a textbook “injury in fact,” and Bevis alleges that, as a gun-store owner in the business of selling the banned weapons, he has lost money in sales, an allegation that clearly establishes harm at this stage. TransUnion LLC v. Ramirez, 141 S. Ct. 2190, 2204 (2021). Illinois’s and Naperville’s gun laws undeniably caused the harm.

The only wrinkle here relates to the third element: redressability. Before Illinois enacted the Protect Illinois Communities Act, the plaintiffs sued only Naperville. Municipalities do not enjoy sovereign immunity, so this Court could have redressed the plaintiffs’ alleged injury by enjoining the enforcement of a law without issue; the standing inquiry would have been easy. See Lincoln County v. Luning, 133 U.S. 529 (1890). Then, Illinois enacted its own gun regulation that, like Naperville’s ordinance, banned the sale of assault weapons. The plaintiffs—likely recognizing that, without the state as a party, this Court could not remedy their harm because the state law would still proscribe their conduct—amended their complaint to add Jason Arres, Naperville’s Chief of Police. But as Naperville points out, several other parties, such as the state police or other county officials, also must enforce Illinois’s gun laws, raising the possibility that relief would be ineffective.

Unlike local governments, state governments are generally immune from suit. See, e.g., Lukaszczyk v. Cook County, 47 F.4th 587, 604 (7th Cir. 2022); Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U.S. 1, 20–21 (1890). The Ex parte Young doctrine is, however, one exception to this rule, and it “allows private parties to sue individual state officials for prospective relief to enjoin ongoing violations of federal law.” Council 31 of the Am. Fed’n of State, Cnty & Mun. Emps., AFL-CIO v. Quinn, 680 F.3d 875, 882 (7th Cir. 2012) (quoting MCI Telecomms. Corp. v. Ill. Bell Tel. Co., 222 F.3d 323, 337 (7th Cir. 2000)). The doctrine represents a legal fiction: a plaintiff can for all intents and purposes sue the state provided the complaint lists a state officer instead of the state itself. Little, then, is gained by imposing hyper-technical pleading requirements about which state official is named. A complaint must only be consistent with the legal framework laid out in Ex parte Young. In short, it must include a state official with a “connection” to the enforcement of the law instead of the state itself. Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U.S. 516, 529 (1899).³ This inclusion avoids the sovereign-immunity issue that prevents a direct suit but still allows appropriate injunctive relief. Forcing parties to name every possible agent that could enforce a state law would be onerous if not impossible. Cf. Duke Power Co. v. Carolina Env’t Study Grp., 438 U.S. 59, 78 (1978) (“Nothing in our prior cases requires a party seeking to invoke federal jurisdiction to negate ... speculative and hypothetical possibilities ... in order to demonstrate the likely effectiveness of judicial relief.”).

Arres, as Chief of Police, enforces both municipal and state laws, including the Ordinance and the Protect Illinois Communities Act. Naperville, IL., Mun. Code ch 8, art. A, §§ 2, 3 (2022). His duty to enforce both laws makes him a state official with the requisite “connection” for an official-capacity suit against Illinois. See Fitts, 172 U.S. at 529. If the plaintiffs succeed, this Court could enjoin the enforcement of the Protect Illinois Communities Act against any state actor who seeks to prevent Bevis from selling assault weapons or high-capacity magazines. Because Bevis and, by extension, Law Weapons have an effective remedy, they have standing to sue.

2. Organizational Standing

NAGR's standing presents a different question. Organizations can have standing to sue by either showing a direct harm or borrowing the standing of their members, known as associational or representational standing. See Havens Realty Corp. v. Coleman, 455 U.S. 363, 378–79 (1982); Hunt v. Wash. State Apple Advert. Comm'n, 432 U.S. 333, 343 (1977). NAGR chooses the latter method, as neither challenged law has directly harmed the group. “To sue on behalf of its members, an association must show that: (1) at least one of its members would ‘have standing to sue in their own right’; (2) ‘the interests it seeks to protect are germane to the organization’s purpose’; and (3) ‘neither the claim asserted nor the relief requested requires the participation of individual members.’” Prairie Rivers Network v. Dynegy Midwest Generation, LLC, 2 F.4th 1002, 1008 (7th Cir. 2021) (quoting Hunt, 432 U.S. at 343).

NAGR asserts that several members live in Naperville, an Illinois city.⁴ (Dkt. 48 ¶ 6). Unlike Bevis, who owns a business selling assault weapons and high-capacity magazines, NAGR's members are not identified as business owners and, therefore, have not lost money. (Id.) Instead, they claim the prohibitions deprive them of a constitutional right. (Id.) This harm suffices for standing. The alleged deprivation of a constitutional right is another “textbook harm.” See Doe v. Sch. Bd. of Ouachita Par., 274 F.3d 289, 292 (5th Cir. 2001) (“Impairments to constitutional rights are generally deemed adequate to support a finding of ‘injury’ for purposes of standing.”). The Second Amendment differs from many other amendments in that it protects access to a tangible item, as opposed to an intangible right. Compare U.S Const. amend. II. (protecting “the right of the people to keep and bear Arms”), with id. amend. I (“Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech”), and id. amend. V (“No person ... shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself”). But individuals deprived of an in rem right are not penalized because of this difference. The First Amendment furnishes a close analogue: individuals can sue when the government bans protected books or attempts to close a bookstore based on content censorship. See Citizens United v. Fed. Election Comm’n, 558 U.S. 310, 349 (2010) (“If [the government is] correct, [it] could prohibit a corporation from expressing political views in media beyond those presented here, such as by printing books. ... This troubling assertion of brooding governmental power cannot be reconciled with the confidence and stability in civic discourse that the First Amendment must secure.”); Bd. of Educ., Island Trees Union Free Sch. Dist. No. 26 v. Pico, 457 U.S. 853, 867 (1982) (emphasizing “the right to receive ideas is a necessary predicate to the recipient’s meaningful exercise of his own rights of speech, press, and political freedom”). So too, residents can sue the government under a similar Second Amendment theory.

NAGR has also satisfied the remaining elements. The organization “seeks to defend the right of all law-abiding individuals to keep and bear arms.” (Dkt. 10 ¶ 2). That interest is certainly furthered by joining a lawsuit to challenge gun regulations. The group, together with Bevis and Law Weapons, seeks equitable relief through a temporary restraining order and an injunction, neither of which “requires the participation of individual members.” Prairie Rivers, 2 F.4th at 1008 (quoting Hunt, 432 U.S. at 333). Member participation is typically required only when the party seeks damages, and NAGR explicitly disclaimed compensatory or nominal damages. (Dkt. 48 ¶ 37).

B. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 5.1

Turning from standing to civil procedure, a party challenging a statute must “file a notice of constitutional question stating the question and identifying the paper that raises it ... if a state statute is questioned and the parties do not include the state ... or one of its officers or employees in an official capacity” and “serve the notice and paper ... on the state attorney general if a state statute is question—either by certified or registered mail or by sending it to [a designated] electronic address.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(a). The court then certifies that the statute has been questioned to the “appropriate attorney general.” Id. 5.1(b); see also 28 U.S.C. § 2403. The attorney general “may intervene within 60 days,” and until the intervention deadline, a court “may not enter a final judgment holding the statute unconstitutional.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1(c).

The plaintiffs represent, and Naperville agrees, that they filed the appropriate notice with Illinois’s attorney general that a constitutional challenge was being raised to the Protect Illinois Communities Act. (Dkts. 49; 50 at 2; see also Dkt. 57 at 5). This Court then promptly certified the question to the appropriate attorney general. (Dkt. 56). Illinois now may intervene—but is not required to. The statute is permissive. In the interim, this Court is free to consider the constitutionality of the law and any preliminary relief, such as a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 5.1 advisory committee’s note to 2006 adoption (“Pretrial activities may continue without interruption during the intervention period, and the court retains authority to grant interlocutory relief. The court may reject a constitutional challenge to a statute at any time.”).

C. Second Amendment

1. Existing Jurisprudence

The Second Amendment reads: “A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.” U.S. Const. amend. II. The Supreme Court first recognized that this provision enshrines an individual’s right to keep and bear arms for the purpose of self-defense in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), a challenge to D.C.’s prohibition on handgun ownership. In interpreting the Amendment, the Court began with the text and its original meaning as “understood by the voters” at the time of ratification. Id. at 576 (quoting United States v. Sprague, 282 U.S. 716, 731 (1931)). The textual elements—including the unambiguous language stating a right to “keep and bear arms”—protects “the individual right to possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation,” a meaning “strongly confirmed by the historical background.” Id. at 592. Several states adopted similar measures in their respective state constitutions, id. at 600–01, and post-ratification commentary confirmed this understanding. Id. at 605–09.

The Court recognized, however, that the “right secured by the Second Amendment is not unlimited.” Id. at 626. The Court gave two limiting examples: (1) as United States v. Miller, 307 U.S. 174 (1939), explained, “those weapons not typically possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes” are unprotected, Heller, 554 U.S. at 625; and (2) measures related to “longstanding prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill, or laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings, or laws imposing conditions and qualifications on the commercial sale of arms” are presumptively lawful, id. at 626–27. So interpreted, a categorical ban on handgun possession in the home was unconstitutional “under any of the standards of scrutiny ... applied to enumerated constitutional rights.” Id. at 628. Indeed, “[f]ew laws in the history of our Nation have come close to the severe restriction of the District’s handgun ban.” Id. at 629.

McDonald v. City of Chicago, 561 U.S. 742 (2010), decided two years later, incorporated the Second Amendment right against the states with a similar emphasis on text and history. Under the Due Process Clause, a right that is “fundamental to our scheme of ordered liberty,” that is, “deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition,” restrains the states just as it does for the federal government. Id. at 767 (quoting Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 721 (1997)). “Self-defense is a basic right, recognized by many legal systems from ancient times to the present day, and ... is ‘the central component’ of the Second Amendment right.” Id. (quoting Heller, 554 U.S. at 599). Thus, the Court had little trouble concluding the right recognized in Heller was “deeply rooted” in history and tradition. Id. at 791.

In handing down Heller and McDonald, the Supreme Court left the question of how to evaluate gun regulations unresolved. See Joseph Blocher & Darrell A. H. Miller, The Positive Second Amendment: Rights, Regulation, and the Future of Heller 102 (2018) (“Heller had opened a ‘vast terra incognita,’ and gave judges the job of mapping it.” (internal citation omitted)). Eventually, the lower courts coalesced around a two-part test: the first question asked “whether the regulated activity falls within the scope of the Second Amendment” based on text and history. Kanter v. Barr, 919 F.3d 437, 441 (7th Cir. 2019) (quoting Ezell v. City of Chicago, 846 F.3d 888, 892 (7th Cir. 2017) (Ezell II)); see also Blocher & Miller, supra, at 110 (“In the decade since Heller, the federal courts of appeals have widely adopted the two-part approach.”). If so, the second inquiry “looked into the strength of the government’s justification for restricting or regulating the exercise of Second Amendment rights” and evaluated “the regulatory means the government has chosen and the public-benefits end it seeks to achieve.” Kanter, 919 F.3d at 441

(quoting Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F.3d 684, 703 (7th Cir. 2011)). In practice, step two did the heavy lifting. Courts regularly assumed without deciding the Second Amendment covered the regulated conduct and proceeded to analyze the regulation under the chosen means-end scrutiny (most often, intermediate scrutiny). See Blocher & Miller, supra, at 110–12.

Recently, the Supreme Court rejected the two-step approach in New York State Rifle & Pistol Association, Inc. v. Bruen and set forth a new standard for applying the Second Amendment. 142 S. Ct. 2111 (2022). In 1911, New York had enacted the so-called “Sullivan Law” that permitted public carry only if an applicant could prove “good moral character” and “proper cause.” Id. at 2122 (quoting Act of May 21, 1913, ch. 608, § 1, 1913 N.Y. Laws 1627, 1629). The plaintiffs were denied the licenses sought, and they sued for declaratory and injunctive relief. Id. at 2124–25. “Despite the popularity of this two-step approach,” the Court concluded, “it is one step too many.” Id. at 2127. “Heller and McDonald do not support applying means-end scrutiny in the Second Amendment context. Instead, the government must affirmatively prove that its firearms regulation is part of the historical tradition that delimits the outer bounds of the right to keep and bear arms.” Id. at 2127. The appropriate standard now is as follows:

When the Second Amendment’s plain text covers an individual’s conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct. The government must then justify its regulation by demonstrating that it is consistent with the Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation.

Id. at 2129–30. Even accepting that standard, as Justice Kavanaugh emphasized in his concurrence (joined by Chief Justice Roberts), the Second Amendment still permits “a ‘variety’ of gun regulations,” such as the examples already announced in Heller. Id. at 2162 (Kavanaugh, J., concurring). But the majority opinion—which six justices joined—found the New York licensing scheme to be unconstitutional: the text covered the right to carry a handgun outside of the home for self-defense, and the state could not demonstrate a historical tradition of firearm regulation to support its law. Id. at 2156.

Before Bruen, every circuit court, including the Seventh Circuit, presented with a challenge to an assault-weapons or high-capacity magazine ban determined such bans were constitutional. Worman v. Healey, 922 F.3d 26, 38–39 (1st Cir. 2019); N.Y. State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. Cuomo, 804 F.3d 242, 261 (2d Cir. 2015); Kolbe v. Hogan, 849 F.3d 114, 124 (4th Cir. 2017) (en banc); Friedman v. City of Highland Park, 784 F.3d 406, 412 (7th Cir. 2015); Heller v. District of Columbia, 670 F.3d 1244, 1260 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (Heller II). The reasoning was similar. The inquiry asked, “whether a particular provision impinges upon a right protected by the Second Amendment; if it does, then we go on to determine whether the provision passes muster under the appropriate level of constitutional scrutiny.” Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1252. Most courts assumed without deciding that the Second Amendment covered the regulations.⁵ See, e.g., Worman, 922 F.3d at 33–35; Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1260–61. Intermediate scrutiny, not strict scrutiny, was appropriate because the prohibitions left a person free to possess many lawful firearms. Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1262 (citing United States v. Marzzarella, 614 F.3d 85, 97 (3d Cir. 2010)). The regulations survived intermediate scrutiny “because semiautomatic assault weapons have been understood to pose unusual risks. When used, these weapons tend to result in more numerous wounds, more serious wounds, and more victims.” NYSRPA, 804 F.3d at 262. The “same logic” applied to large-capacity magazines. Id. at 263. “Large-capacity magazines are disproportionately used in mass shootings,” and they result in “more shots fired, persons wounded, and wounds per victim than do other gun attacks.” Id. at 263–64 (quoting Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1263).

The Seventh Circuit was one of the circuits to uphold such a ban. In Friedman v. City of Highland Park, the city enacted an ordinance prohibiting the possession of assault weapons and large-capacity magazines. 784 F.3d at 407. Several plaintiffs sued seeking an injunction against the ordinance. Id. The district court denied them relief, and the Seventh Circuit affirmed. See generally id.

The question after Bruen is whether Friedman is still good law. See United States v. Rahimi, No. 21-11001, 2023 WL 1459240, at *2 (5th Cir. 2023) (“The Supreme Court need not expressly overrule [] precedent ... where an intervening Supreme Court decision fundamentally changes the focus of the relevant analysis.” (cleaned up)). As an initial observation, the opinion lacks some clarity. The two-part test was the law of the Seventh Circuit for at least five years, see, e.g., United States v. Skoien, 614 F.3d 638 (7th Cir. 2010) (en banc), Ezell, 651 F.3d 684, yet the Court did not engage with it. Instead, it explained, we think it better to ask whether a regulation bans weapons that were common at the time of ratification or those that have ‘some reasonable relationship to the preservation or efficiency of a well regulated militia’ and whether law-abiding citizens retain adequate means of self-defense.

Friedman, 784 F.3d at 410 (quoting Heller, 544 U.S. at 622–25) (internal citation omitted). This reframed test complicates the task of determining if the case was decided under the now-defunct step two—which Naperville concedes would render it bad law—or step one—which would make it binding precedent that dictates the outcome here. Without the benefit of a clear statement, this Court must examine the opinion’s reasoning.

The Seventh Circuit observed first, “[t]he features prohibited by Highland Park’s ordinance were not common in 1791. Most guns available then could not fire more than one shot without being reloaded; revolvers with rotating cylinders weren’t widely available until the early 19th century.” Id. at 410. The weapons banned, it continued, “are commonly used for military and police functions,” and states enjoy leeway “to decide when civilians can possess military-grade firearms, so as to have them available when the militia is called to duty.” Id. The main consideration, though, was whether the ordinance left residents with ample means to access weapons for self-defense. Id. at 411. The Court answered in the affirmative. The concern was principally allayed by the availability of handguns and other rifles. Id. “If criminals can find substitutes for banned assault weapons, then so can law-abiding homeowners.” Id. Moreover, data showed that assault weapons are used in a greater share of gun crimes, and “some evidence” links their availability with gun-related homicides. Id. “The best way to evaluate the relation among assault weapons, crime, and self-defense is through the political process and scholarly debate,” not a judicial decree. Id. at 412.

Friedman cannot be reconciled with Bruen.⁶ The explanation that semiautomatic weapons were not common in 1791 is of no consequence. The Second Amendment “extends ... to ... arms ... that were not in existence at the time of the founding.” Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S.

⁶ Recognizing Friedman was no longer good law, this Court ordered supplemental briefing on the application of Bruen. (Dkts. 15, 18, 30, 33). Naperville marshalled an admirable historical record. It protested, though, that “it [had] been unable to conduct primary source research or to retain and disclose an expert under FRCP 26(a)(2).” (Dkt. 34 at 19). On the first point, again, plaintiffs seek preliminary and emergency relief. Naperville may have agreed to stay its Ordinance, but Illinois has made no such guarantees. Supplemental briefing for a TRO is naturally rushed because plaintiffs allege a deprivation of a constitutional right. Naperville will, nevertheless, be able to continue assembling support for its positions as the case proceeds. On the second point, Bruen indicates that judges, not party-selected experts, will assess the Second Amendment’s history; there was no summary-judgment record before the Court—the district court dismissed the complaint—and no mention of experts. The only two cases Naperville cites in support are the dissenting opinion in State v. Philpotts, 194 N.E.3d 371, 372 (Ohio 2022) (Brunner, J., dissenting), which contains rejected legal arguments, and the nonbinding district-court opinion in United States v. Bullock, 3:18-cr-165, 2022 WL 16649175 (S.D. Miss. Oct. 27, 2022), which the government itself rejected, id. Dkt. 71 (“If ... this Court were to deem it necessary to delve into text and history ..., it should look to the parties for argument and evidence on that point, directing the parties to supplement their prior filings as necessary.”).

411, 412 (2016) (quoting Heller, 554 U.S. at 582). Relatedly, the Supreme Court has unequivocally dismissed the argument that “only those weapons useful in warfare are protected.” Id. (quoting Heller, 554 U.S. at 624–25). To the extent that the Seventh Circuit classified the weapon as either “civilian” or “military,” the classification has little relevance. And the arguments that other weapons are available and that fewer assault weapons lower the risk of violence are tied to means-end scrutiny—now impermissible and unconnected to text, history, and tradition. See Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2127. Accordingly, this Court must consider the challenged assault-weapon regulations on a tabula rasa.

2. Challenged Laws

Bruen is now the starting point. Courts must first determine whether “the Second Amendment’s plain text covers an individual’s conduct.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2129–30. If not, the regulation is constitutional because the regulation falls outside the scope of protection. But if the text covers “an individual’s conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct. The government must then justify its regulation by demonstrating that it is consistent with the Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation.” Id. at 2130. The analogue need not be “a historical twin” or “a dead ringer for historical precursors,” so long it is sufficiently analogous “to pass constitutional muster.” Id. at 2133. Relevant history includes English history from the late 1600s, American colonial views, Revolutionary- and Founding-era sources, and post-ratification practices, particularly from the late 18th and early 19th centuries. Id. at 2135–56; see also Rahimi, 2023 WL 1459240, at *8–10; Frein v. Pa. State Police, 47 F.4th 247, 254–56 (3d Cir. 2022).

“[T]he Second Amendment is neither a regulatory straightjacket nor a regulatory blank check.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2133; see also id. at 2162 (Kavanaugh, J., concurring). Bruen does not displace the limiting examples provided in Heller. States remain free to enact (1) “prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill”; (2) “laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings”; (3) “laws imposing conditions and qualifications on the commercial sale of arms”; and (4) bans on weapons that are not “in common use.” Id. at 2162 (Kavanaugh, J., concurring) (citation omitted). The Court in the majority opinion never specifies how these examples fit into the doctrine, but Heller and Justice Kavanaugh’s concurrence reinforce their continued vitality.⁷ And most importantly, the “list does not purport to be exhaustive.” Heller, 554 U.S. at 626 n.26. Additional categories exist—provided they are consistent with the text, history, and tradition of the Second Amendment. See Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2129–30.

Under this framework, Naperville’s Ordinance and the Protect Illinois Communities Act are constitutionally sound.⁸ The text of the Second Amendment is limited to only certain arms, and history and tradition demonstrate that particularly “dangerous” weapons are unprotected.⁹ See U.S. Const. amend. II; Heller, 554 U.S. at 627.

⁹ Weapons associated with criminality may also be unprotected, but given the strength of the historical evidence regarding “particularly dangerous” weapons, there is no need to consider this alternative ground.

i. History and Tradition

William Blackstone, whose writings the Court relied on in Heller, drew a clear line between traditional arms for self-defense and “dangerous” weapons. He proclaimed, “[t]he offense of riding or going armed, with dangerous or unusual weapons, is a crime against the public peace, by terrifying the good people of the land.”⁴ William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 148–49 (emphasis added). And over two centuries of American law has built upon this fundamental distinction. (See Dkt. 57-10 ¶ 8 (“From the 1600s through the early twentieth century, the colonies, states, and localities enacted [] thousands of gun laws of every imaginable variety. ... [I]t is a tradition that can be traced back throughout the Nation’s history.”))

Gun ownership and gun regulation have evolved since the passage of the Second Amendment. In the 18th century, violent crime was at historic lows; the rate at which adult colonists were killed by violent crime was one per 100,000 in New England and, on the high end, five per 100,000 in Tidewater, Virginia.¹⁰ The “pressing problem” for minimizing violence in the colonies was not guns. (Dkt. 34-7 ¶ 9). A musket took, at best, half a minute to load a single shot—the user had to pour powder down the barrel, compress the charge, and drop or ram the ball onto the charge—and the accuracy of the weapon was poor. (Dkt. 34-3 ¶ 27; Dkt. 34-7 ¶ 11). Nor did people keep guns loaded. The black powder used to fire a musket was corrosive and prone to attract moisture, which rendered it ineffective. (Dkt. 34-3 ¶ 27). That is also why guns hung over the fireplace mantle—it was the warmest and driest place in the home.¹¹ This combination of limitations meant that guns were seldom “the primary weapon of choice for those with evil intent.”

(Dkt. 34-3 ¶ 28).¹² Citizens did not go to the town square armed with muskets for self-protection, and only a small group of wealthy, elite men owned pistols, primarily a dueling weapon (Alexander Hamilton being perhaps the most infamous example).¹³ Other arms, though, were prevalent—as were laws governing the most dangerous of them.

An early example of these regulations concerned the “Bowie knife,” originally defined as a single-edged, straight blade between nine and ten inches long and one-and-half inches wide.¹⁴ In the early 19th century, the Bowie knife gained notoriety as a “fighting knife” after it was supposedly used in the Vidalia Sandbar Fight, a violent brawl that occurred in central Louisiana.¹⁵ Shortly afterwards, many southerners began carrying the knife in public because it offered a better chance to stop an assailant than the more cumbersome guns of the era, which were unreliable and inaccurate.¹⁶ They were also popular in fights and duels over the single-shot pistols.¹⁷ Responding to the growing prevalence and danger posed by Bowie knives, states quickly enacted laws regulating them. Alabama was first, placing a prohibitively expensive tax of one hundred dollars on “selling, giving or disposing” the weapon, in an Act appropriately called “An Act to Suppress ¹² See also Dkt. 34-7 ¶ 12 (“The infrequent use of guns in homicides in colonial America reflected these limitations. Family and household homicides—most of which were caused by abuse or fights between family members that got out of control—were committed almost exclusively with hands and feet or weapons that were close to hand: whips, sticks, hoes, shovels, axes, or knives. It did not matter whether the type of homicide was rare—like family and intimate homicides—or common, like murders of servants, slaves, or owners committed during the heyday of indentured servitude or the early years of racial slavery. Guns were not the weapons of choice in homicides that grew out of the tensions of daily life.”).

the Use of Bowie Knives,” followed two years later by a law banning the concealed carry of the knife and other deadly weapons.¹⁸ Georgia followed suit the same year, making it unlawful “for any merchant ... to sell, or offer to sell, or to keep ... Bowie, or any other kinds of knives.”¹⁹ By 1839, Tennessee, Florida, and Virginia passed similar laws.²⁰ The trend continued. At the start of the twentieth century, every state except one regulated Bowie knives; thirty-eight states did so by explicitly naming the weapon,²¹ and twelve more states barred the category of knives encompassing them.²² (Dkt. 34-4 ¶ 39).

State-court decisions uniformly upheld these laws. The Tennessee Supreme Court declared, “The Legislature, therefore, have a right to prohibit the wearing or keeping weapons dangerous to the peace and safety of the citizens, and which are not usual in civilized warfare, or would not contribute to the common defence [sic].” *Aymette v. Laws 96, 96 (“Any person other than a public officer, who carries concealed in his clothes ... any sharp or dangerous weapon usually employed in attack or defense of the person ... shall be guilty of a felony”).

(emphasis added).²³ “To hold that the Legislature could pass no law upon this subject by which to preserve the public peace, and protect our citizens from the terror which a wanton and unusual exhibition of arms might produce,” it continued, “would be to pervert a great political right to the worst of purposes.” Id. The Texas Supreme Court expressed similar concern, noting that a Bowie knife “is an exceeding[ly] destructive weapon,” “difficult to defend against,” more dangerous than a pistol or sword, and an “instrument of almost certain death.” Cockrum v. State, 24 Tex. 394, 402 (1859) (emphasis added).

Laws regulating melee weapons also targeted more than just the Bowie knife. As early guns proved unreliable, many citizens resorted to clubs and other blunt weapons. (Dkt. 34-4 ¶ 40). Popular instruments included the billy (or billie) club, a heavy, hand-held club usually made of wood, plastic, or metal, and a slungshot, a striking weapon that had a piece of metal or stone attached to a flexible strip or handle. (Id. at ¶¶ 41–44). States responded to the proliferation of these weapons. The colony of New York enacted the first “anti-club” law in 1664,²⁴ with sixteen states following suit, the latest being Indiana in 1905, which proscribed the use of clubs in sensitive places of transportation.²⁵ The city of Leavenworth, Kansas passed the first law regulating the billy club in 1862.²⁶ By the early 1900s, almost half of states and some municipalities had laws relating to billy clubs.²⁷ (Dkt. 34-4 ¶ 42). Many, such as North Dakota and the city of Johnstown,

Pennsylvania,²⁸ banned their concealed carry, while others outlawed them entirely.²⁹ “Anti-slungshot” carry laws proved the most ubiquitous though.³⁰ Forty-three states limited slungshots,³¹ which “were widely used by criminals and street gang members in the 19th Century” because “[t]hey had the advantage of being easy to make silent, and very effective, particularly against an unsuspecting opponent.” (Dkt. 34-4 ¶ 44). (Then-lawyer Abraham Lincoln defended a man accused of killing another with a slungshot in the 1858 William “Duff” Armstrong case.) (Id. ¶ 45).

States continued to regulate particularly dangerous weapons from the 18th century through the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Five years before the Revolution and three decades before the ratification of the Second Amendment, New Jersey banned “any loaded Gun ... intended to go off or discharge itself, or be discharged by any String, Rope, or other Contrivance.”³² After the Civil War, Minnesota, Michigan, Vermont, and North Dakota passed nearly identical laws.³³ Eight states—South Carolina, Maine, Vermont, Minnesota, New York, Massachusetts, Michigan, and

Rhode Island—banned gun silencers in the 1900s.³⁴ Notably, semiautomatic weapons themselves, which assault weapons fall under, were directly controlled in the early 20th century. Rhode Island prohibited the manufacture, sale, purchase, and possession of “any weapon which shoots more than twelve shots semi-automatically without reloading.”³⁵ Michigan regulated guns that could fire “more than sixteen times without reloading.”³⁶ In total, nine states passed semiautomatic-weapon regulations,³⁷ along with Congress, which criminalized the possession of a “machine gun” in D.C., defined as “any firearm which shoots ... semiautomatically more than twelve shots without reloading.”³⁸ Twenty-three states imposed some limitation on ammunition magazine capacity, restricting the number of rounds from anywhere between one (Massachusetts and Minnesota) and eighteen (Ohio).³⁹

Columbia also made it unlawful “for any person or persons to carry or have concealed about their persons any deadly or dangerous weapons.”⁴³

The history of firearm regulation, then, establishes that governments enjoy the ability to regulate highly dangerous arms (and related dangerous accessories). The final question is whether assault weapons and large-capacity magazines fall under this category. They do.

ii. Application

Assault weapons pose an exceptional danger, more so than standard self-defense weapons such as handguns.⁴⁴ See NYSRPA, 804 F.3d at 262 (“When used, these weapons tend to result in more numerous wounds, more serious wounds, and more victims.”). They fire quickly: a shooter using a semiautomatic weapon can launch thirty rounds in as little as six seconds, with an effective rate of about a bullet per second for each minute of firing,⁴⁵ meeting the U.S. Army definition for “rapid fire.”⁴⁶ The bullets hit fast and penetrate deep into the body. The muzzle velocity of an assault weapon is four times higher than a high-powered semiautomatic firearm.⁴⁷ A bullet striking a body causes cavitation, meaning, in the words of a trauma surgeon, “that as the projectile passes through tissue, it creates a large cavity.”⁴⁸ “It does not have to actually hit an artery to damage it and cause catastrophic bleeding. Exit wounds can be the size of an orange.”⁴⁹ Children are even more vulnerable because “the surface area of their organs and arteries are smaller.”⁵⁰ Additionally, “[t]he injury along the path of the bullet from an AR-15 is vastly different from a low-velocity handgun injury”⁵¹ Measured by injury per shooting, there is an average of about 30 injuries for assault weapons compared to 7.7 injuries for semiautomatic handguns.⁵² In a mass shooting involving a non-semiautomatic firearm, 5.4 people are killed and 3.9 people are wounded on average; in a mass shooting with a semiautomatic handgun, the numbers climb to 6.5 people killed and 5.8 people wounded on average; and in a mass shooting with a semiautomatic rifle, the average number of people rises to 9.2 killed and 11 wounded on average. (Dkt. 57-8 ¶ 54).

Assault rifles can also be easily converted to increase their lethality and mimic military-grade machine guns. Some of these “fixes” are as simple as “stretching a rubber band from the trigger to the trigger guard of an AR-15.” (Id. ¶ 53). Two conversion devices stick out though: bump stocks and trigger cranks, both of which allow an assault weapon to fire at a rate several times higher than it could otherwise. As the Fourth Circuit summarized, “[t]he very features that Moreover, assault weapons are used disproportionately in mass shootings, police killings, and gang activity. Of the sixty-two mass shootings from 1982 to 2012, a thirty-year period, one-third involved an assault weapon.⁵³ Between 1999 and 2013, the number was 27 percent,⁵⁴ and the most recent review placed the figure at 25 percent in active-shooter incidents between 2000 and 2017.⁵⁵ While 25 percent may be about half that of semiautomatic handguns, it is greatly overrepresented “compared with all gun crime and the percentage of assault weapons in society.”⁵⁶ The statistics also reveal a grim picture for police killings and gang activity. About 20 percent of officers were killed with assault weapons from 1998 to 2001 and again from 2016 to 2017.⁵⁷ Even conservative estimates calculate that assault weapons are involved in 13 to 16 percent of police murders.⁵⁸ Additionally, just under 45 percent of all gang members own an assault rifle (compared High-capacity magazines share similar dangers. The numbers tell a familiar grim story. An eight-year study of mass shootings from 2009 to 2018 found that high-capacity magazines led to five times the number of people shot and more than twice as many deaths.⁶⁰ More recently, researchers examining almost thirty years of mass-shooting data determined that high-capacity magazines resulted in a 62 percent higher death toll.⁶¹ It is little wonder why mass murderers and criminals favor these magazines. Thirty-one of sixty-two mass shootings studied involved the gun accessory.⁶² Also, extended magazines, one expert estimates, allow semiautomatic weapons to become more lethal: by themselves, semiautomatic weapons cause “an average of 40 percent more deaths and injuries in mass shooting than regular firearms, and 26 percent more than semiautomatic handguns.” (Dkt. 57-8 ¶ 56). Add in extended magazines and “semiautomatic rifles cause an average of 299 percent more deaths and injuries than regular firearms, and 41 percent more than semiautomatic handguns.” (Id.)

Assault-weapons and high-capacity magazines regulations are not “unusual,” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2129 (Kavanaugh, concurring), or “severe,” Heller, 554 U.S. at 629. The federal government banned assault weapons for ten years. Today, eight states, the District of Columbia, and numerous municipalities, maintain assault-weapons and high-capacity magazine bans—as more jurisdictions weigh similar measures. Because assault weapons are particularly dangerous weapons and high-capacity magazines are particularly dangerous weapon accessories, their regulation accords with history and tradition. Naperville and Illinois lawfully exercised their authority to control their possession, transfer, sale, and manufacture by enacting a ban on commercial sales. That decision comports with the Second Amendment, and as a result, the plaintiffs have not shown the “likelihood of success on the merits” necessary for relief. See Braam, 37 F.4th at 1272 (“The district court may issue a preliminary injunction only if the plaintiff demonstrates ‘some’ likelihood of success on the merits.” (emphasis added)); Camelot Bonquet Rooms, Inc. v. United States Small Business Administration, 24 F.4th 640, 644 (7th Cir. 2022) (“Plaintiffs who seek a preliminary injunction must show that ... they have some likelihood of success on the merits.”).

II. Remaining Preliminary-Injunction Factors

A. Irreparable Harm

For thoroughness, the Court addresses the remaining preliminary-injunction factors. The party seeking a preliminary injunction must show, in addition to a likelihood of success on the merits, that absent an injunction, irreparable harm will ensue. Int’l Ass’n of Fire Fighters, Local 365 v. City of East Chicago, 56 F.4th 437, 450 (7th Cir. 2022). “Harm is irreparable if legal remedies are inadequate to cure it,” meaning “the remedy must be seriously deficient as compared to the harm suffered.” Life Spine, Inc. v. Aegis Spine, Inc., 8 F.4th 531, 545 (7th Cir. 2021) (quoting Foodcomm Int’l v. Barry, 328 F.3d 300, 304 (7th Cir. 2003)). Deprivations of constitutional rights often—but do not always—amount to “irreparable harm.” See 11 Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2948.1 (3d ed. 1998) (“When an alleged deprivation of a constitutional right is involved . . . most courts hold that no further showing of irreparable harm is necessary.”). This principle certainly applies for the First Amendment. The Supreme Court has held that “[t]he loss of First Amendment freedoms, for even minimal periods of time, unquestionably constitutes irreparable harm.” Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976) (plurality opinion); see also Int’l Ass’n of Fire Fighters, 56 F.4th at 450–51 (“Under Seventh Circuit law, irreparable harm is presumed in First Amendment cases.”).

No binding precedent, however, establishes that a deprivation of any constitutional right is presumed to cause irreparable harm. Cf. Wheeler v. Wexford Health Sources, Inc., 689 F.3d 680, 682 (7th Cir. 2012) (“The judge was right to say that equitable relief depends on irreparable harm, even when constitutional rights are at stake.”). Ezell does draw upon First Amendment principles. See 651 F.3d at 697. For example, the argument that a Second Amendment harm is mitigated “by the extent to which it can be exercised in another jurisdiction” cannot pass muster because a city could never ban “the exercise of a free-speech or religious-liberty right within its borders on the rationale that those rights may be freely enjoyed in the suburbs.” Id. The opinion also acknowledges that “[t]he loss of a First Amendment right is frequently presumed to cause irreparable harms” and that “[t]he Second Amendment protects similarly intangible and unquantifiable interests.” Id. at 699. But the Seventh Circuit stopped short of holding that injury in the Second Amendment context “unquestionably constitutes irreparable harm.” Elrod, 427 U.S. at 373.

Absent this presumption, the plaintiffs have not demonstrated that they will suffer irreparable harm. Bevis has not furnished any evidence that he will lose substantial sales, and he can still sell almost any other type of gun. While a high number of assault weapons are in circulation, only 5 percent of firearms are assault weapons, 24 million out of an estimated 462 million firearms. (Dkt. 57-4 ¶ 36; Dkt. 57-7 ¶ 27.) As a percentage of the total population, less than 2 percent of all Americans own assault weapons. (Dkt. 57-7 ¶ 27). NAGR’s members also retain other effective weapons for self-defense. Most law enforcement agencies design their firearm training qualification courses around close-quarter shootings, those shooting that occur between the range of three to ten yards, where handguns are most useful. (Dkt. 57-4 ¶ 59). Firearms are certainly effective, necessary tools for protecting law enforcement and civilians alike. But, as one Federal Bureau of Investigation agent describes, “the best insights indicate that shotguns and 9mm pistols are generally recognized as the most suitable and effective choices for armed defense.” (Id. ¶ 61).

Assuming, though, the deprivation of any constitutional right rises to per se irreparable harm, the plaintiffs have still not shown that they are likely to succeed on the merits. See Winter, 555 U.S. at 20. A plaintiff need not demonstrate “absolute success,” but the chances of success must be “better than negligible.” Valencia v. City of Springfield, 883 F.3d 959, 966 (7th Cir. 2018) (quoting Whitaker by Whitaker v. Kenosha Unified Sch. Dist. No. 1 Bd. of Educ., 858 F.3d 1034, 1046 (7th Cir. 2017)) (cleaned up). “If it is plain that the party seeking the preliminary injunction has no case on the merits, the injunction should be refused” Id. (quoting Green River Bottling Co. v. Green River Corp., 997 F.2d 359, 361 (7th Cir. 1993)); see also Braam, 37 F.4th at 1272.

It is plain here—the plaintiffs have “no case on the merits.” Valencia, 883 F.3d at 966 (quoting Green River Bottling, 997 F.2d at 361). The analysis could end there because that failure is dispositive. See Higher Soc’y of Ind. v. Tippecanoe County, 858 F.3d 1113, 1116 (7th Cir. 2017).

B. The Balance of Equities and the Public Interest

Neither the balance of equities nor the public interest decisively favors the plaintiffs. On the one hand, they suffer an alleged deprivation of a constitutional right. Again though, the financial burden and loss of access to effective firearms would be minimal. On the other side, Illinois and Naperville compellingly argue their laws protect public safety by removing particularly dangerous weapons from circulation. The protection of public safety is also unmistakably a “public interest,” one both laws further. Cf. Metalcraft of Mayville, Inc. v. The Toro Company, 848 F.3d 1358, 1369 (Fed. Cir. 2017) (“[T]he district court should focus on whether a critical public interest would be injured by the grant of injunctive relief.” (emphasis added)). Therefore, the plaintiffs have not made a “clear showing” that they are entitled to the “extraordinary and drastic” remedy of an injunction. Mazurek v. Armstrong, 520 U.S. 968, 972 (1997) (per curiam) (quoting 11 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2948 (2d ed.1995)).

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, the motions for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction are denied. (Dkt. 10, 50).

PLAINTIFFS’ MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER AND PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Plaintiffs submit the following Motion for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction against the City of Naperville, Illinois (the “City”).

Certificate: Plaintiffs have conferred with counsel for Defendant. Defendant opposes this motion.

INTRODUCTION

This action challenges the constitutionality of Chapter 19 of Title 3 of the Naperville Municipal Code (the “Ordinance”). The Ordinance bans the commercial sale of certain semi-automatic firearms of a type that are held by millions of law-abiding American citizens for lawful purposes. The Second Amendment protects the right of law-abiding citizens to own weapons in common use by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes. D.C. v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 627 (2008). “The right to possess firearms for protection implies a corresponding right to acquire and maintain proficiency in their use . . .” Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F.3d 684, 704 (7th Cir. 2011). Thus, this provision of the Ordinance is unconstitutional. Accordingly, Plaintiffs hereby move the Court to enter a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction enjoining the City from enforcing this unconstitutional provision of the Ordinance.

NOTE REGARDING TIMING OF MOTION

The Ordinance goes into effect on January 1, 2023. Because the Ordinance was not currently in effect and thereby depriving them of their constitutional rights, Plaintiffs have not sought a TRO earlier. Since, however, the Ordinance will be effective in a few weeks, Plaintiffs are seeking a TRO at this time to prevent the Ordinance from going into effect.

FACTS

1. Section 3-19-1 of the Ordinance defines the term “assault rifle.” The term “assault rifle” as used in the Code is not a technical term used in the firearms industry or community for firearms commonly available to civilians. Brown Dec. ¶ 5. Instead, the term is a rhetorically charged political term¹ meant to stir the emotions of the public against those persons who choose to exercise their constitutional right to possess certain semi-automatic firearms that are commonly owned by millions of law-abiding American citizens for lawful purposes. Id. Plaintiffs refuse to adopt the City’s politically charged rhetoric in this Motion. Therefore, for purposes of this Motion, the term “Banned Firearm” shall have the same meaning as the term “assault rifle” in Section 3-19-1 of the Code.

2. Section 3-19-2 of the Ordinance states: “The Commercial Sale of Assault Rifles within the City is unlawful and is hereby prohibited.” Section 3-19-3 of the Ordinance provides for substantial penalties for any violation of its provisions.

3. Plaintiff National Association for Gun Rights (“NAGR”) is a nonprofit membership and donor-supported organization qualified as tax-exempt under 26 U.S.C. § 501(c)(4).

Brown Dec. ¶2. NAGR seeks to defend the right of all law-abiding individuals to keep and bear arms. NAGR has members who reside within the City. Id. NAGR represents the interests of its members who reside in the City. Id.

4. Plaintiff Robert C. Bevis is a business owner in the City and a law-abiding citizen of the United States. Bevis Dec. ¶¶ 1, 2.

5. Plaintiff Law Weapons, Inc. d/b/a Law Weapons & Supply (“LWI”) is a duly registered Illinois corporation which operates in the City engaged in the commercial sale of firearms. Bevis Dec. ¶ 2. A substantial part of LWI’s business consists of the commercial sale of firearms that will be Banned Weapons when the Ordinance goes into effect. Bevis Dec. ¶3.

6. Plaintiffs and/or their members and/or customers desire to exercise their Second Amendment right to acquire the Banned Firearms within the City for lawful purposes, including, but not limited to, the defense of their homes. Bevis Dec. ¶ 4; Brown Dec. ¶ 6. When the Ordinance becomes effective on January 1, 2023, Plaintiffs and/or their members and/or customers will be prohibited from exercising their Second Amendment rights in this fashion. Bevis Dec. ¶ 5; Brown Dec. ¶ 7.

7. The ban applies to licensed gun sellers, but not private sales by unlicensed parties. Bevis Dec. ¶ 6.

7. At least 20 million semi-automatic firearms such as those defined as “assault rifles” are owned by millions of American citizens who use those firearms for lawful purposes. Declaration of James Curcuruto ¶6. Mr. Curcuruto’s declaration was originally submitted in Rocky Mountain Gun Owners, et al. v. Town of Superior, 22-CV-1685-RM. It is used with permission in this action.

STANDARD FOR GRANTING TRO AND PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

The standard for issuing a temporary restraining order is identical to that governing the issuance of a preliminary injunction. Mays v. Dart, 453 F. Supp. 3d 1074, 1087 (N.D. Ill. 2020). To be entitled to preliminary relief, Plaintiffs must establish as a threshold matter: (1) they are likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief; (2) inadequate remedies at law exist; and (3) they have a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits. (3) the balance of the equities tips in their favor. Whitaker v. Kenosha Unified School District, 858 F.3d 1034, 1044 (7th Cir. 2017). If the movant successfully makes this showing, the court must engage in a balancing analysis, to determine whether the balance of harm favors the moving party or whether the harm to other parties or the public sufficiently outweighs the movant's interests. Id., Higher Soc'y of Indiana v. Tippecanoe Cnty., Indiana, 858 F.3d 1113, 1116 (7th Cir. 2017), citing Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008).

In a case involving an alleged violation of a constitutional right, the likelihood of success on the merits will often be the determinative factor. Id., citing Am. Civil Liberties Union of Ill. v. Alvarez, 679 F.3d 583, 589 (7th Cir. 2012).² That is because even short deprivations of constitutional rights constitute irreparable harm, and the balance of harms normally favors granting preliminary injunctive relief because the public interest is not harmed by preliminarily enjoining the enforcement of a statute that is probably unconstitutional. Id. So “the analysis begins and ends with the likelihood of success on the merits” of the constitutional claim. Id., citing Korte v. Sebelius, 735 F.3d 654, 666 (7th Cir. 2013).

² Higher Soc'y of Indiana was a First Amendment case, but that difference does not matter, because in Bruen, infra, the Supreme Court held that Second Amendment rights should be protected in the same way First Amendment rights are protected. Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2130.

In Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F.3d 684, 997 (7th Cir. 2011), the Court equated the standard for obtaining a preliminary injunction in the Second Amendment context with the standard for obtaining that relief in a First Amendment case. Also in Ezell, the Court granted preliminary relief against a Chicago ordinance which inter alia prohibited commercial activity found to be protected by the Second Amendment. Namely, the ordinance prohibited all shooting galleries, firearm ranges, or any other places where firearms are discharged.

THE GOVERNMENT BEARS THE BURDEN OF DEMONSTRATION

In New York State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. 2111 (2022), the Supreme Court unambiguously placed on the government a substantial burden of demonstrating that any law seeking to regulate firearms is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation.³ Specifically, the Court stated:

Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2135.

In this case, the Second Amendment’s plain text covers Plaintiffs’ conduct in seeking to acquire and/or sell bearable arms. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2132 (“the Second Amendment extends, prima facie, to all instruments that constitute bearable arms”). Ezell also makes clear commercial activity related to the right to keep and bear arms is as much protected by the Second Amendment as is the right to possess and carry firearms. Accordingly, Plaintiffs’ conduct is presumptively protected by the Second Amendment. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2126 (“when the Second Amendment’s plain text covers an individual’s conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct”). The government may attempt to rebut that presumption by demonstrating that its law is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation. If the government attempts to meet that burden in its response, Plaintiffs will have an opportunity to submit rebuttal evidence in their reply.

ARGUMENT

I. The Supreme Court has Reaffirmed the Heller Standard

A. A Regulation Burdening the Right to Keep and Bear Arms is Unconstitutional Unless it is Consistent with the Text of the Second Amendment and the Nation’s History and Traditions

In Bruen, the Court rejected the two-part balancing test for Second Amendment challenges that several courts of appeal adopted in the wake of Heller and McDonald v. City of Chicago, Ill., 561 U.S. 742 (2010). Instead, it reiterated the Heller standard, which it summarized as follows:

“Today, we decline to adopt that two-part approach. In keeping with Heller, we hold that when the Second Amendment’s plain text covers an individual’s conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct. To justify its regulation, the government may not simply posit that the regulation promotes an important interest. Rather, the government must demonstrate that the regulation is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation. Only if a firearm regulation is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition may a court conclude that the individual’s conduct falls outside the Second Amendment’s unqualified command.”

Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2126 (internal quotation marks omitted).

The Bruen court spent significant time describing how lower courts are to proceed in Second Amendment cases. As particularly relevant here, Bruen described the proper analysis of the term “arms.” That word, Bruen affirmed, has a “historically fixed meaning” but one that “applies to new circumstances.” Id. at 2132. It thus “covers modern instruments that facilitate armed self-defense.” Id., citing Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411, 411—412 (2016) (per curiam) (stun guns). Accordingly, the text of the Second Amendment “extends, prima facie, to all instruments that constitute bearable arms, even those that were not in existence at the time of the founding.” Id.

The Court then explained that “[m]uch like we use history to determine which modern ‘arms’ are protected by the Second Amendment, so too does history guide our consideration of modern regulations that were unimaginable at the founding.” Id. In considering history, courts are to engage in “reasoning by analogy.” Id. This analogical reasoning requires the government to identify a well-established and representative historical analogue to the challenged regulation. Id. at 2133. But to be a genuine “analogue,” the historical tradition of regulation identified by the government must be “relevantly similar” to the restriction before the Court today. Id. at 2132. Two metrics are particularly salient in determining if a historical regulation is relevantly similar: [1] how and [2] why the regulations burden a law-abiding citizen’s right to armed self-defense. Id. at 2133. By considering these two metrics, a court can determine if the government has demonstrated that a modern-day regulation is analogous enough to historical precursors that the regulation may be upheld as consistent with the Second Amendment’s text and history. Id.

As noted above, the Court held that the judicial balancing of means and ends pursuant to intermediate scrutiny review plays no part in Second Amendment analysis. “Heller does not support applying means-end scrutiny.” Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2127; see also Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2129 (inquiry into the statute’s alleged “salutary effects” upon “important governmental interests” is not part of the test).

B. Only the Sale of “Dangerous and Unusual Arms” Can be Banned Consistent with Our History and Tradition

This case involves a blanket prohibition on the commercial sale of a class of arms. Both Bruen and Heller identified only one aspect of the nation’s history and tradition that is sufficiently analogous to – and therefore capable of justifying – such a ban: the tradition, dating back to the Founding, of restricting “dangerous and unusual weapons” that are not “in common use at the time.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2128. By contrast, where a type of arm is in common use, there is, by definition, no historical tradition of banning its sale. Thus, for the type of restriction at issue in this case, the Court has already analyzed the relevant historical tradition and established its scope: the sale of “dangerous and unusual” weapons may be subject to a blanket ban, but the sale of arms “in common use at the time” may not be. Id.

The Heller test is based on historical practice and “the historical understanding of the scope of the right,” but with reference to modern realities of firearm ownership. Heller, 554 U.S. at 625; see also Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2131 (“The test that we set forth in Heller and apply today requires courts to assess whether modern firearms regulations are consistent with the Second Amendment’s text and historical understanding. “). In summary, in the context of blanket bans on the sale of bearable arms, the Supreme Court has already done the historical spadework, and the only restrictions of this kind that it has deemed consistent with the historical understanding of the right to keep and bear arms are restrictions limited to dangerous and unusual arms that are not in common use.

This Court’s task is therefore a simple one: it merely must determine whether the arms the sale of which is banned are “dangerous and unusual.” Importantly, this is a “conjunctive test: A weapon may not be banned unless it is both dangerous and unusual.” Caetano, 577 U.S. at 417 (Alito, J., concurring). An arm that is in common use for lawful purposes is, by definition, not unusual. Such an arm therefore cannot be both dangerous and unusual and therefore cannot be subjected to a blanket ban. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2143; Heller, 554 U.S. at 629.

To determine whether an arm is “unusual” the Supreme Court has likewise made clear that the Second Amendment focuses on the practices of the American people nationwide, not just, say, in this State. See id. at 2131 (“It is this balance – struck by the traditions of the American people – that demands our unqualified deference.”); Heller, 554 U.S. at 628 (handguns are “overwhelmingly chosen by American society” for self-defense); Caetano, 577 U.S. at 420 (Alito, J., concurring) (“stun guns are widely owned and accepted as a legitimate means of self-defense across the country”). Therefore, the Second Amendment protects those who live in states or localities with a less robust practice of protecting the right to keep and bear firearms from outlier legislation (like the City’s ban here) just as much as it protects those who live in jurisdictions that have hewed more closely to America’s traditions.

Furthermore, courts and legislatures do not have the authority to second-guess the choices made by law-abiding citizens by questioning whether they really “need” the arms that ordinary citizens have chosen to possess. While Heller noted several reasons that a citizen may prefer a handgun for home defense, the Court held that “[w]hatever the reason, handguns are the most popular weapon chosen by Americans for self-defense in the home, and a complete prohibition of their use is invalid.” Id., 554 U.S. at 629. The Court reaffirmed that the traditions of the American people, which includes their choice of preferred firearms, demand the courts’ “unqualified deference.” Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2131.

As set forth below, the Banned Firearms are “typically possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes.” Under Heller and Bruen, that is the end of the analysis. The Second Amendment does not countenance a complete prohibition on the commercial sale of one of the most popular weapons chosen by Americans for self-defense in the home. Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2128.

Finally, the Second Amendment inquiry focuses on the choices commonly made by contemporary law-abiding citizens. Heller rejected as “bordering on the frivolous” “the argument . . . that only those arms in existence in the 18th century are protected,” Id. at 582. And in Caetano, the Supreme Court reiterated this point, holding that arms protected by the Second Amendment need not have been in existence at the time of the Founding. 577 U.S. 411-12, quoting Heller, 554 U.S. at 582. The Caetano Court flatly denied that a particular type of firearm’s being “a thoroughly modern invention” is relevant to determining whether the Second Amendment protects it. Id. And Bruen cements the point. Responding to laws that allegedly restricted the carrying of handguns during the colonial period, the Court reasoned that “even if these colonial laws prohibited the carrying of handguns because they were considered ‘dangerous and unusual weapons’ in the 1690s, they provide no justification for laws restricting the public carry of weapons that are unquestionably in common use today.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2143.

II. The City’s Prohibition on the Sale of Banned Firearms is Unconstitutional

A. Introduction

Under Bruen, “when the Second Amendment’s plain text covers an individual’s conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2126. To justify its regulation, the government . . . must demonstrate that the regulation is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation.” Id. Here, the Second Amendment’s plain text covers the Banned Firearms, so it falls to the City to attempt to justify its law as consistent with historical tradition rooted in the Founding. It cannot possibly do so, because the Banned Firearms are commonly possessed by law abiding citizens, and Bruen has already established that, by definition, there cannot be a tradition of banning the sale of an arm if it is commonly possessed.

B. The Banned Firearms are in Common Use

This case thus reduces to the following, straightforward inquiry: are the arms the commercial sale of which is banned by the City in “common use,” according to the lawful choices by contemporary Americans? They unquestionably are. There is no class of firearms known as “assault rifle.” “Prior to 1989, the term ‘assault weapon’ did not exist in the lexicon of firearms. It is a political term, developed by anti-gun publicists . . .” Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914, 1001 (2000) at n. 16 (Thomas, J., dissenting). But while “assault rifle” is not a recognized category of firearms, “semiautomatic rifle” is. And it is semiautomatic rifles that the City’s “assault rifle” ban targets. The “automatic” part of “semiautomatic” refers to the fact that the user need not manually load another round in the chamber after each round is fired. But unlike an automatic rifle, a semiautomatic rifle will not fire continuously on one pull of its trigger; rather, a semiautomatic rifle requires the user to pull the trigger each time he or she wants to discharge a round. See Staples v. United States, 511 U.S. 600, 602 (1994) at n. 1.

There is therefore a significant practical difference between a truly automatic and a merely semiautomatic rifle. According to the United States Army, for example, the maximum effective rates of fire for various M4- and M16-series firearms is between forty-five and sixty-five rounds per minute in semiautomatic mode, versus 150-200 rounds per minute in automatic mode. Dept. of the Army, RIFLE MARKSMANSHIP: M16-/M4-SERIES WEAPONS, 2-1 tbl. 2-1 (2008), available at <https://bit.ly/3pvS3SW>.

There is a venerable tradition in this country of lawful private ownership of semiautomatic rifles. The Supreme Court has held as much. In Staples, it concluded that semiautomatics, unlike machine guns, “traditionally have been widely accepted as lawful possessions.” Staples, 511 U.S. at 612. Semiautomatic rifles have been commercially available for over a century. See Heller v. District of Columbia (“Heller IP”), 670 F.3d 1244, 1287 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (Kavanaugh, J., dissenting); David B. Kopel, Rational Basis Analysis of “Assault Weapon” Prohibition, 20 J. CONTMP. L. 381, 413 (1994).

In contrast to this long history of legal ownership of semi-automatic rifles, the first “assault weapon” ban was not enacted until California did so in 1989, a full 200 years after the Constitution became effective. Obviously, that is far too late to demonstrate anything about the original meaning of the Second or Fourteenth Amendment, no matter which is the relevant historical reference point. Bruen, 142 S.Ct. at 2126 (cautioning against giving post enactment history more weight than it can rightly bear). Even today, the vast majority of states (42 out of 50)⁴, do not ban semiautomatic weapons that would be deemed “assault rifles” under the law at issue in this action.⁵

Thus, there is no historical tradition of banning semi-automatic firearms. This is borne out by the fact that millions of law-abiding citizens choose to possess firearms in that category. Duncan v. Becerra (“Duncan IV”), 970 F.3d 1133, 1147 (9th Cir. 2020) (“Commonality is determined largely by statistics.”); Ass’n of N.J Rifle & Pistol Clubs, Inc. v. Att’y Gen., 910 F.3d 106, 116 (3d Cir. 2018) (finding an arm is commonly owned because the record shows that “millions” are owned); New York State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. Cuomo, 804 F.3d 242, 255

⁵ The bans and the year each was enacted are: CAL. PENAL CODE §§ 30600, 30605 (1989); N.J. STAT. §§ 2C:39-5(f), 2C:39-9(g) (1990); HAW. REV. STAT. § 134-8(a) (1992); CONN. GEN. STAT. § 53-202c (1993); MD. CODE ANN., CRIM. LAW §§ 4-301, 4-303 (1994); MASS. GEN. LAWS ch. 140, § 131M (1994); N.Y. PENAL LAW §§ 265.02(7), 265.10(1)-(3) (2000); 11 DEL. CODE § 1466 (2022).

(2d Cir. 2015) (“Even accepting the most conservative estimates cited by the parties and by amici, the assault weapons at issue are ‘in common use’ as that term was used in Heller.”); Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1261 (“We think it clear enough in the record that semi-automatic rifles . . . are indeed in ‘common use.’”).

The AR-15 is America’s “most popular semi-automatic rifle,” Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1287 (Kavanaugh, J., dissenting), and in recent years it has been “the best-selling rifle type in the United States,” Nicholas J. Johnson, Supply Restrictions at the Margins of Heller and the Abortion Analogue, 60 HASTINGS L.J. 1285, 1296 (2009); see also Duncan v. Becerra (“Duncan III”), 366 F. Supp. 3d 1131, 1145 (S.D. Cal. 2019).

This issue was addressed in Kolbe v. Hogan, 849 F.3d 114 (4th Cir. 2017), abrogated by Bruen, supra. In his dissent (which, after Bruen, likely represents the correct interpretation of the law), Judge Traxler stated:

“It is beyond any reasonable dispute from the record before us that a statistically significant number of American citizens possess semiautomatic rifles (and magazines holding more than 10 rounds) for lawful purposes. Between 1990 and 2012, more than 8 million AR- and AK- platform semiautomatic rifles alone were manufactured in or imported into the United States. In 2012, semiautomatic sporting rifles accounted for twenty percent of all retail firearms sales. In fact, in 2012, the number of AR- and AK- style weapons manufactured and imported into the United States was more than double the number of the most commonly sold vehicle in the U.S., the Ford F-150. In terms of absolute numbers, these statistics lead to the unavoidable conclusion that popular semiautomatic rifles such as the AR-15 are commonly possessed by American citizens for lawful purposes within the meaning of Heller.”

Id., 849 F.3d at 153, Traxler, J. dissenting (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

Today, the number of AR-rifles and other modern sporting rifles in circulation in the United States exceeds twenty-four million. The Firearms Industry Trade Ass’n, Commonly

Owned: NSSF Announces Over 24 Million MSRS in Circulation, (July 20, 2022), available at <https://bit.ly/3pUj8So>.⁶

According to industry sources, as of 2018, roughly thirty-five percent of all newly manufactured guns sold in America are modern semiautomatic rifles, Bloomberg, Why Gunmakers Would Rather Sell AR-15s Than Handguns, FORTUNE (June 20, 2018), available at <https://bit.ly/3R2kZ3s>, and an estimated 5.4 million Americans purchased firearms for the first time in 2021. The Firearms Industry Trade Ass'n, NSSF Retailer Surveys Indicate 5.4 million First-Time Gun Buyers in 2021, (Jan. 25, 2022), available at <https://bit.ly/3dV6RKI>. In fact, a recent survey of gun owners estimated that 24.6 million Americans have owned AR-15 or similar rifles. See William English, 2021 National Firearms Survey: Updated Analysis Including Types of Firearms Owned at 1 (May 13, 2022), available at <https://bit.ly/3yPfoHw>.

AR-style rifles are commonly and overwhelmingly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes. In a 2021 survey of 16,708 gun owners, recreational target shooting was the most common reason (cited by 66% of owners) for possessing an AR-style firearm, followed closely by home defense (61.9% of owners) and hunting (50.5% of owners). English, supra, at 33-34. This is consistent with the findings of an earlier 2013 survey of 21,942 confirmed owners of such firearms, in which home-defense again followed (closely) only recreational target shooting as the most important reason for owning these firearms. See also Friedman v. City of Highland Park, 68 F. Supp. 3d 895, 904 (N.D. Ill. 2014), aff'd 784 F.3d 406 (7th Cir. 2015). “An additional survey estimated that approximately 11,977,000 people participated in target shooting with a modern sporting rifle.” Id. Indeed the “AR-15 type rifle . . . is the leading type of firearm used in national matches and in other matches sponsored by the congressionally established

Civilian Marksmanship program.” Shew v. Malloy, 994 F. Supp. 2d 234, 245 n.40 (D. Conn. 2014).

The fact that “assault” rifles are used extremely rarely in crime underscores that AR-15s and other Banned Firearms are commonly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes. Evidence indicates that “well under 1% [of crime guns] are ‘assault rifles.’” Gary Kleck, TARGETING GUNS: FIREARMS AND THEIR CONTROL 112 (1997). This conclusion is borne out by FBI statistics. In the five years from 2015 to 2019 (inclusive), there were an average of 14,556 murders per year in the United States. On average, rifles of all types (of which so-called “assault rifles” are a subset) were identified as the murder weapon in 315 murders per year. U.S. Dept. of Just., Expanded Homicide Data Table 8: Murder Victims by Weapon, 2015-2019, Crime in the United States, 2019, FBI, available at <https://bit.ly/31WmQ1V>. By way of comparison, on average 669 people are murdered by “personal weapons” such as hands, fists and feet. Id. According to the FBI, a murder victim is more than twice as likely to have been killed by hands and feet than by a rifle of any type.

Even in the counterfactual event that a modern semiautomatic rifle had been involved in each rifle-related murder from 2015 to 2019, an infinitesimal percentage of the approximately 24 million modern sporting rifles in circulation in the United States during that time period –around .001 percent – would have been used for that unlawful purpose. More broadly, as of 2016, only 0.8 percent of state and federal prisoners reported using any kind of rifle during the offense for which they were serving time. Mariel Alper & Lauren Glaze, Source and Uses of Firearms Involved in Crimes: Survey of Prison Inmates, 2016, U.S. DEPT OF JUST., OFF. OF JUST. PROGS., BUREAU OF JUST. STATS. 5 tbl. 3 (Jan. 2019), available at <https://bit.ly/31VjRa9>

Finally, the Supreme Court’s decision in Caetano further confirms that the arms the sale of which is banned by the City are in common use. That case concerned Massachusetts’s ban on the possession of stun guns, which that state’s highest court had upheld on the ground that such weapons are not protected by the Second Amendment. Id., 577 U.S. at 411. In a brief per curiam opinion, the Supreme Court vacated that decision. Id. at 411-12. Though the Court remanded the case back to the state court without deciding whether stun guns are constitutionally protected, Justice Alito filed a concurring opinion expressly concluding that those arms “are widely owned and accepted as a legitimate means of self-defense across the country,” based on evidence that “hundreds of thousands of Tasers and stun guns have been sold to private citizens.” Id. at 420 (Alito, J., concurring) (cleaned up) (citation omitted). If hundreds of thousands” of arms constitute wide ownership, a fortiori so does the tens of millions of semiautomatic rifles sold to private citizens nationwide.

The Massachusetts court got the message. In a subsequent case, that court, relying on Caetano, held that because “stun guns are ‘arms’ within the protection of the Second Amendment,” the state’s law barring “civilians from possessing or carrying stun guns, even in their home, is inconsistent with the Second Amendment and therefore unconstitutional.” Ramirez v. Commonwealth, 94 N.E.3d 809, 815 (Mass. 2018). The Illinois Supreme Court followed suit with a similar ruling in 2019, relying on Caetano and Ramirez to conclude that “[a]ny attempt by the State to rebut the prima facie presumption of Second Amendment protection afforded stun guns and tasers on the grounds that the weapons are uncommon or not typically possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes would be futile.” People v. Webb, 131 N.E. 3d 93, 96 (Ill. 2019). This reasoning is sound, and it necessarily entails the invalidity of the City’s blanket ban, which restricts arms that are many times more common than stun guns.

III. Illinois Ass'n of Firearms Retailers Controls

In Bruen, the Court held that when the Second Amendment covers an individual's conduct, the government must demonstrate that the regulation is consistent with this Nation's historical tradition of firearm regulation in order for it to be valid. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2126. In this regard, this Court has already held that flat prohibitions on the sale of firearms are not supported by this nation's history and traditions. In Illinois Ass'n of Firearms Retailers v. City of Chicago, 961 F. Supp. 2d 928 (N.D. Ill. 2014), this Court invalidated an ordinance banning the commercial sale of firearms. It stated:

Although the City argues that 'state bans of the sale of even popular and common arms stretch back nearly 200 years,' [] the only historical support that it musters are three statutes from Georgia, Tennessee, and South Carolina banning the sale, manufacture, and transfer of firearms within their borders. See [] Georgia Act of Dec. 25, 1837, ch. 367, § I; [] Tennessee Act of Mar. 17, 1879, ch. 96, § 1 [], South Carolina Act of Feb. 20, 1901, ch. 435, § 1. But these isolated statutes were enacted 50 to 110 years after 1791, which is 'the critical year for determining the amendment's historical meaning.' Moore, 702 F.3d at 935. These statutes are thus not very compelling historical evidence for how the Second Amendment was historically understood. And citation to a few isolated statutes – even to those from the appropriate time period – 'fall[] far short' of establishing that gun sales and transfers were historically unprotected by the Second Amendment. Ezell, 651 F.3d at 706. The City's proffered historical evidence fails to establish that governments banned gun sales and transfers at the time of the Second Amendment's enactment, so the Court must move on to the second step of the inquiry.

Id., 961 F. Supp. 2d at 937 (emphasis added). Accordingly, the Court entered an injunction against enforcement of the prohibition on commercial sales.

It does no good for the City to argue that its residents could acquire the Banned Firearms in other cities. This Court rejected this argument in Illinois Ass'n of Firearms Retailers. It stated:

The City argues in response that these ordinances do not ban acquisition, but merely regulate where acquisition may occur. [] It is true that some living on the outskirts of the City might very well currently live closer to gun stores now than they would absent these ordinances. But Ezell makes clear that this type of argument 'assumes that the harm to a constitutional right is measured by the extent to which it can be exercised in another jurisdiction. That’s a profoundly mistaken assumption.’ 651 F.3d at 697. It was no answer there that plenty of gun ranges were located in the neighboring suburbs, or even right on the border of Chicago and the suburbs. Instead, the Seventh Circuit drew on First Amendment jurisprudence to reason that Second Amendment rights must be guaranteed within a specified geographic unit – be it a city or a State. See id. (‘In the First Amendment context, the Supreme Court long ago made it clear that ‘one is not to have the exercise of his liberty of expression in appropriate places abridged on the plea that it may be exercised in some other place.’” (quoting Schad v. Borough of Mt. Ephraim, 452 U.S. 61, 76–77, 101 S.Ct. 2176, 68 L.Ed.2d 671 (1981))).

Id., 961 F. Supp. 2d 928, 938–39.

This Court’s holding in Illinois Ass’n of Firearms Retailers is consistent with the Supreme Court’s analysis in Bruen. In Bruen the Court cited with approval the case of Drummond v. Robinson, 9 F.4th 217, 226 (3rd Cir. 2021). Id. 142 S. Ct. at 2133. In Drummond, the Third Circuit held that a city’s ordinance prohibiting the operation of a commercial gun club was an “outlier” and thus not supported by the nation’s history or tradition of firearms regulation. 9 F.4th at 232.

In summary, millions of law-abiding citizens own and use for lawful purposes semi-automatic firearms such as the Banned Firearms the sale of which will be banned by the Ordinance. The Ordinance’s prohibition on the sale of the Banned Firearms is an historical outlier. Therefore, by definition, the Ordinance is not consistent with the nation’s history and tradition of firearm regulation. Accordingly, the Ordinance violates the Second Amendment. As such, Plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of their claims. “A party moving for preliminary injunctive relief need not demonstrate a likelihood of absolute success on the merits. Instead, he must only show that his chances to succeed on his claims are “better than negligible.” Cooper v. Salazar, 196 F.3d 809, 813 (7th Cir. 1999). This is a low threshold.” Whitaker, at 1046.

Banning the sale of the Banned Firearms will cause irreparable harm to LWI and the citizens of Naperville who will be unable to purchase Banned Firearms in Naperville. Harm is considered irreparable if it “cannot be prevented or fully rectified by the final judgment after trial.” Girl Scouts of Manitou Council, Inc., 549 F.3d at 1089, quoting Roland Mach. Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 386 (7th Cir. 1984). And it is no remedy to say businesses selling Banned Firearms can simply relocate outside of Naperville. See Ezell, supra at 697.

Moreover, since the harm is prospective in nature, Plaintiffs and others similarly situated have no adequate remedy at law, as any such award “would be ‘seriously deficient as compared to the harm suffered.’” Whitaker, at 1046 (citations omitted).

Accordingly, the balance of harms favors Plaintiffs. “Once a moving party has met its burden of establishing the threshold requirements for a preliminary injunction, the court must balance the harms faced by both parties and the public as a whole. See Girl Scouts of Manitou Council, Inc. v. Girl Scouts of U.S. of Am., Inc., 549 F.3d 1079, 1100 (7th Cir. 2008); see also Turnell v. CentiMark Corp., 796 F.3d 656, 662 (7th Cir. 2015). This is done on a “sliding scale” measuring the balance of harms against the moving party’s likelihood of success. Turnell, 796 F.3d at 662. The more likely he is to succeed on the merits, the less the scale must tip in his favor. Id.” Whitaker, at 1054. As established above, Plaintiffs are eminently likely to succeed on the merits, especially in light of Bruen. As such the balance of harms favors granting injunctive relief to Plaintiffs.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs respectfully request the Court to enter a preliminary injunction enjoining the City from enforcing the Ordinance.

Respectfully submitted this 18th day of November 2022.

Exhibit A

ORDINANCE NO. 22 – 099

AN ORDINANCE
ADDING CHAPTER 19
(REGULATION OF THE COMMERCIAL SALE OF ASSAULT RIFLES) OF TITLE 3
(BUSINESS AND LICENSE REGULATIONS) OF
THE NAPERVILLE MUNICIPAL CODE

RECITALS

1. WHEREAS, on July 4, 2022, 7 people were murdered, and 46 others were injured during a mass shooting that took place during an Independence Day parade in Highland Park, Illinois. The shooter used an AR-15-style semi-automatic rifle with three 30-round magazines to fire 83 shots into the parade crowd from the rooftop of a local store. A 22-year-old suspect has been arrested and charged.
2. WHEREAS, on May 24, 2022, 21 people were murdered (19 children and 2 staff members), and 18 others were injured during a mass shooting that took place at Robb Elementary School in Uvalde, Texas. The 18-year-old shooter used an AR-15-style semi-automatic rifle.
3. WHEREAS, on May 14, 2022, 10 people were murdered, and 3 others were injured during a mass shooting that took place in a grocery store in Buffalo, New York. The shooter used an AR-15-style semi-automatic rifle. An 18-year-old suspect has been arrested and charged.
4. WHEREAS, on August 3, 2019, 23 people were murdered, and 23 others were injured during a mass shooting at a Walmart store in El Paso, Texas. The shooter used an AK-47-style semi-automatic rifle. A 21-year-old suspect has been arrested and charged.
5. WHEREAS, on October 27, 2018, 11 people were murdered, and 6 others were injured during a mass shooting that took place at the Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The shooter used an AR-15-style semi-automatic rifle. A 46-year-old suspect has been arrested and charged.
6. WHEREAS, on February 14, 2018, 17 people were murdered (14 students and 3 staff members), and 17 others were injured during a mass shooting that took place at Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida. The 19-year-old shooter used an AR-15-style semi-automatic rifle.
7. WHEREAS, on November 5, 2017, 26 people were murdered, and 22 others were injured during a mass shooting that took place at the Sutherland Springs church in Sutherland Springs, Texas. The 26-year-old shooter used an AR-15-style semi-automatic rifle.

8. WHEREAS, on October 1, 2017, 60 people were murdered, and approximately 867 were injured during a mass shooting that took place at a music festival in Las Vegas, Nevada. The 64-year-old shooter used 24 firearms, including AR-15-style and AR-10-style semi-automatic rifles to fire more than 1,000 bullets.
9. WHEREAS, on June 12, 2016, 49 people were murdered, and 58 others were injured during a mass shooting that took place at the Pulse Nightclub in Orlando, Florida. The 29-year-old shooter used an MCX-style semi-automatic rifle.
10. WHEREAS, on December 2, 2015, 14 people were murdered, and 24 others were injured during a mass shooting that took place at the Inland Regional Center in San Bernardino, California. The 28-year-old and 29-year-old shooters used AR-15-style semi-automatic rifles.
11. WHEREAS, on December 14, 2012, 27 people were murdered (20 children and 6 staff members), and 2 others were injured during a mass shooting that took place at the Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Connecticut. The 20-year-old shooter used an AR-15-style semi-automatic rifle.
12. WHEREAS, there have been many other mass shootings during the last decade, and it has become an unacceptable fact of life that no municipality is exempt from the reality that its citizens are at risk.
13. WHEREAS, commonplace in mass shootings are the use of lawfully purchased assault rifles. The U.S. Department of Justice describes assault weapons as "semiautomatic firearms with a large magazine of ammunition that were designed and configured for rapid fire and combat use." Assault rifles are exceptionally deadly firearms and have immense killing power.
14. WHEREAS, like many of the municipalities that have encountered mass shootings involving assault rifles, Naperville has a vibrant commercial area, public parks, restaurants, movie theaters, music venues, parades, elementary, middle and high schools both public and private, colleges and universities, houses of worship of many denominations, and other places where members of the public gather with an expectation of safety.
15. WHEREAS, the Second Amendment to the United States Constitution provides that: "A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed". However, no fundamental right is set forth in the United States Constitution for persons or entities to engage in the commercial sale of assault rifles.
16. WHEREAS, in 1994, the U.S. Congress passed the Federal Assault Weapons Ban ("AWB"), a United States federal law which prohibited the possession and sale of assault weapons and large-capacity magazines (limiting magazines to ten rounds). Several constitutional challenges were filed against provisions of the ban, but all were rejected by the courts. The AWB expired in 2004, in accordance with its sunset provision, and attempts to renew or replace the AWB have been unsuccessful.

17. WHEREAS, currently, seven states and Washington, D.C. prohibit assault weapons. Federal appellate courts have decided four cases concerning the Second Amendment and assault weapons, each time reaching the same conclusion that assault weapon bans are constitutional (the D.C. Circuit upheld the District of Columbia's ban in 2011, the Second Circuit upheld New York and Connecticut laws in 2015, the Seventh Circuit upheld Highland Park's local ordinance in 2015, and the Fourth Circuit upheld Maryland's ban in 2017).

18. WHEREAS, assault rifles did not exist when the United States Congress ratified the Second Amendment in 1791. Civilian-owned assault rifles were rare prior to 2004. The proliferation of civilian-owned assault rifles began within only the last 18 of the 231 years since the ratification of the Second Amendment. That recency of assault rifles combined with the recent proliferation of mass shootings and the common use of assault rifles in said mass shootings indicates that assault rifles are uncommon and unacceptably dangerous.

19. WHEREAS, the Illinois legislature has limited the ability of public bodies to enact laws to protect the public from assault weapons that are used in mass shootings that have devastated many communities and countless individuals.

20. WHEREAS, in 2013, the Illinois General Assembly enacted legislation amending the Firearm Owners Identification Card Act ("FOID Act"). As part of the 2013 amendment of the FOID Act, the state legislature granted municipalities only ten (10) calendar days to enact local ordinances regulating the possession or ownership of assault weapons.

21. WHEREAS, if a municipality could not, or did not, pass a local ordinance within the ten-day window, the legislature provided that a municipality could not thereafter pass an ordinance pertaining to the possession or ownership of assault weapons:

Any ordinance or regulation, or portion of that ordinance or regulation, that purports to regulate the possession or ownership of assault weapons in a manner that is inconsistent with this Act, shall be invalid unless the ordinance or regulation is enacted on, before, or within 10 days after the effective date of this amendatory Act of the 98th General Assembly. [430 ILCS 65/13.1(c)]

23. WHEREAS, the City of Naperville did not pass an assault weapon ordinance regulating the possession or ownership of assault weapons within the ten days allotted by the state legislature.

24. WHEREAS, the City of Naperville is a home rule unit of local government under the laws and Constitution of the State of Illinois.

25. WHEREAS, under the Constitution of the State of Illinois, home rule units of government have broad authority to pass ordinances and promulgate rules and regulations that protect the public health, safety, and welfare of their residents unless the state legislature specifically states that state legislation preempts home rule authority.

26. WHEREAS, the 2013 FOID Act preempts home rule municipalities relative to regulation of the possession or ownership of assault weapons in a manner that is inconsistent with that Act. However, the FOID Act does not preempt home rule municipalities from regulating the Commercial Sale of Assault Rifles within their jurisdiction. Therefore, the City retains its broad home rule authority to legislate with respect to commercial sales.

27. WHEREAS, in an effort to protect the public health, safety, and welfare, the City of Naperville has a clear and compelling interest in exercising its home rule authority as set forth herein.

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF NAPERVILLE, DUPAGE AND WILL COUNTIES, ILLINOIS, in exercise of its home rule authority that:

SECTION 1: Recitals incorporated. The foregoing Recitals are hereby incorporated in this Section 1 as though fully set forth herein.

SECTION 2: Amendment adding Title 3, Chapter 19 to the Naperville Municipal Code. Title 3 (Business and License Regulations) of the Naperville Municipal Code is hereby amended by adding the Chapter and language as follows:

TITLE 3 -BUSINESS AND LICENSE REGULATIONS

CHAPTER 19 – REGULATION OF THE COMMERCIAL SALE OF ASSAULT RIFLES

COMMERCIAL SALE OF ASSAULT RIFLES:	The sale or offer for sale of an Assault Rifle when the sale requires the seller to have a valid certificate of license issued pursuant to the Illinois Firearm Dealer License Certification Act (430 ILCS 68/5-1 et seq.).
DETACHABLE MAGAZINE:	An ammunition feeding device that can be removed from a firearm without disassembly of the firearm.
FIXED MAGAZINE:	An ammunition feeding device that is contained in and not removable from or permanently fixed to the firearm.
FOLDING, TELESCOPING, OR DETACHABLE STOCK:	A stock that folds, telescopes, detaches or otherwise operates to reduce the length, size, or any other dimension, or otherwise enhances the concealability, of a firearm.
FORWARD GRIP:	A grip located forward of the trigger that functions as a pistol grip.
LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICER:	A person who can provide verification that they are currently employed by a local government agency, state government agency, or federal government agency as a sworn police officer or as a sworn federal law enforcement officer or agent.
PISTOL GRIP:	A grip, a thumbhole stock or Thordsen-type grip or stock, or any other characteristic that can function as a grip.
THREADED BARREL:	A feature or characteristic that is designed in such a manner to allow for the attachment of a device such as a firearm silencer or a flash suppressor.

3-19-2: - PROHIBITION OF THE COMMERCIAL SALE OF ASSAULT RIFLES

1. The Commercial Sale of Assault Rifles within the City is unlawful and is hereby prohibited.
2. The provisions of this Chapter shall not apply to the Commercial Sale of Assault Rifles to:
 - 2.1. Any federal, state, local law enforcement agency;

- 2.2. The United States Armed Forces or department or agency of the United States;
- 2.3. Illinois National Guard, or a department, agency, or political subdivision of a state; or
- 2.4. A Law Enforcement Officer.

3-19-3: - ENFORCEMENT

Any person or entity who violates any of the provisions set forth or referenced in this Chapter shall be subject to the following:

1. A fine of one thousand dollars ($1,000.00) for a first offense within a 12-month period, and a fine of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500.00) for a second or subsequent offense within a 12-month period.
 - 1.1. Each day that a violation of this Chapter continues shall be considered a separate and distinct offense and a fine shall be assessed for each day a provision of this Chapter is found to have been violated. Notwithstanding the forgoing, the escalation of fines as set forth above shall not occur until a prior adjudication of a violation against the same person or entity has been entered.
2. Any violation of the provisions of this Chapter may be deemed a public nuisance and abated pursuant to all available remedies, including but not limited to injunctive relief. In addition to the penalties provided for in Section 3-19-3:1 above, the City shall be entitled to reimbursement for the cost of the City's reasonable attorney's fees and all costs and expenses incurred by the City to abate any entity operating as a public nuisance. Said attorney's fees and said costs and expenses shall be paid to the City within sixty (60) days of issuance of a bill therefor unless an alternate timeframe is agreed to in writing by the City Manager.

SECTION 3: Savings clause. If any provisions of this Ordinance or their application to any person or circumstance are held invalid or unenforceable by any court of competent jurisdiction, the invalidity or unenforceability thereof shall not affect any of the remaining provisions or application of this Ordinance which can be given effect without the invalid or unenforceable provisions or application. To achieve this purpose, the provisions of the Ordinance are declared to be severable.

SECTION 4: Effective date and Pre-existing purchasers. This Ordinance shall take effect on January 1, 2023, (the “Effective Date”), except as follows:

Any person that can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the City Attorney that the Commercial Sale of an Assault Rifle was completed prior to the Effective Date of January 1, 2023, which means that prior to January 1, 2023, the purchaser completed an application, passed a background check, and has a receipt or purchase order for said purchase, without regard to whether the purchaser has actual physical possession of the Assault Rifle, shall be considered a pre-existing purchaser. For said pre-existing purchaser, the delivery of physical possession of the Assault Rifle may be completed, even if such activity would otherwise be in violation of the new provisions of Chapter 19 (Regulation of the Commercial Sale of Assault Rifles) of Title 3 (Business and License Regulations). Notwithstanding the foregoing, if physical possession of the Assault Rifle will not occur until more than sixty (60) days following the Effective Date of this Ordinance, that person is not a pre-existing purchaser and said purchase shall constitute a violation of the provisions of this Chapter.

PASSED this 16th day of August 2022.

FIRST AMENDED AND SUPPLEMENTED COMPLAINT

Plaintiffs submit the following First Amended and Supplemented Complaint (“Complaint”) against Defendant City of Naperville, Illinois (the “City”) and Jason Arres (“Arres”).

I. TERMS

1. For purposes of this Complaint, the term “Ordinance” means Chapter 19 of Title 3 of the Naperville Municipal Code.
2. For purposes of this Complaint, the term “State Law” means HB5471, which became effective on January 10, 2023, available at IL LEGIS 102-1116 (2022), 2022 Ill. Legis. Serv. P.A. 102-1116 (H.B. 5471).
3. For purposes of this Complaint, the term “City Banned Firearm” shall have the same meaning as the term “assault rifle” in Section 3-19-1 of the Ordinance.
4. For purposes of this Complaint, the term “State Banned Firearm” shall have the same meaning as “assault weapon” as defined in in 720 ILCS 5/24-1.9.

5. For purposes of this Complaint, the term “Banned Magazine” shall have the same meaning as “large capacity ammunition feeding device” as defined in 720 ILCS 5/24-1.10.

II. PARTIES

6. Plaintiff National Association for Gun Rights (“NAGR”) is a nonprofit membership and donor-supported organization qualified as tax-exempt under 26 U.S.C. § 501(c)(4). NAGR seeks to defend the right of all law-abiding individuals to keep and bear arms. NAGR has over 240,000 members nationwide. Over 8,000 NAGR members reside in the State of Illinois, several of whom reside in Naperville. NAGR is not required to provide identifying information regarding its members. Nevertheless, the following are the initials of a sample of NAGR’s members who reside in the City: B.S., D.B., G.S., G.K., L.J., and R.K. NAGR represents the interests of its members who reside in the City. Specifically, NAGR represents the interests of its members whose Second Amendment right to acquire arms is burdened by the Ordinance and the State Law. For purposes of this Complaint, the term “Plaintiffs” is meant to include NAGR in its capacity as a representative of its members.

7. Plaintiff Robert C. Bevis is a business owner in the City and a law-abiding citizen of the United States. Mr. Bevis is a member of NAGR.

8. Plaintiff Law Weapons, Inc. d/b/a Law Weapons & Supply (“LWI”) is an Illinois corporation which operates in the City. LWI is engaged in the commercial sale of firearms. A substantial part of LWI’s business consists of the commercial sale of City Banned Firearms, State Banned Firearms and Banned Magazines.

9. The City is a municipal corporation with an address of 400 S. Eagle Street, Naperville, Illinois 60540.

10. Arres is the City's Chief of Police. He is responsible for the performance of the City's Police Department. Naperville Municipal Code 1-8A-2. Arres has the duty to see to the enforcement of all applicable laws, including the Ordinance and the State Law. Naperville Municipal Code 1-8A-3. Arres is or will perform his duty to enforce the Ordinance and State Law. Thus, Arres is or will deprive Plaintiffs' of their constitutional rights by enforcing these unconstitutional laws against them.

11. Defendants are or will enforce the unconstitutional provisions of the Ordinance and the State Law against Plaintiffs under color of state law within the meaning of 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

III. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

12. The Court has original jurisdiction of this civil action under 28 U.S.C. § 1331, because the action arises under the Constitution and laws of the United States. The Court also has jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(3) and 42 U.S.C. § 1983 since this action seeks to redress the deprivation, under color of the laws, ordinances, regulations, customs and usages of the City, of rights, privileges or immunities secured by the United States.

13. Plaintiffs' claims for declaratory and injunctive relief are authorized by 28 U.S.C. §§ 2201 and 2202, respectively, and their claim for attorneys' fees is authorized by 42 U.S.C. § 1988.

14. Venue in this judicial district is proper under 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b)(2), because a substantial part of the events or omissions giving rise to Plaintiffs' claims occurred in this district.

IV. LEGAL BACKGROUND

15. The Second Amendment to the United States Constitution, as made applicable to the states by the Fourteenth Amendment, declares that "the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.” U.S. CONST. Amend. II; see also D.C. v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008); McDonald v. City of Chicago, 561 U.S. 742 (2010); and New York State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. 2111 (2022).

16. The legal principles governing this case have already been briefed in Plaintiffs’ Motion for Preliminary Injunction [Doc. 10] (“PI Motion”) and their Reply in Support of their Motion for Preliminary Injunction [Doc. 35] (“Reply”).

17. When the Second Amendment’s plain text covers an individual’s conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct. PI Motion, 5-6. The government bears the burden of showing that any regulation of that conduct is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation. Id.

18. The Second Amendment’s plain text covers Plaintiffs’ conduct. Motion, 5; Reply, 1-4. Therefore, Defendants must show that the burdens on Plaintiffs’ rights in the Ordinance and the State Law are consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation. It is impossible for Defendants to meet this burden because there is no such tradition.

19. The City Banned Firearms, the State Banned Firearms, and the Banned Magazines are commonly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes. Motion, 11-16; Declaration of James Curcuruto attached to PI Motion ¶¶ 6-7.

20. The City’s ban on the commercial sale of City Banned Firearms burdens the right to acquire arms protected by the Second Amendment. Reply, 1-4. Defendant Bevis asserts this right on his own behalf. NAGR asserts this right on behalf of its members who reside in the City. LWI asserts this right on behalf of third parties who seek access to its services. Reply, 5.

V. GENERAL ALLEGATIONS

21. Section 3-19-2 of the Ordinance states: “The Commercial Sale of [City Banned Firearms] within the City is unlawful and is hereby prohibited.” Section 3-19-3 of the Ordinance provides for substantial penalties for any violation of its provisions.
22. Plaintiffs and/or their members and/or customers desire to exercise their Second Amendment right to acquire City Banned Firearms within the City for lawful purposes, including, but not limited to, the defense of their homes. LWI asserts this right on behalf of its customers. The Ordinance prohibits Plaintiffs from exercising their Second Amendment rights in this fashion and provides for substantial penalties for violations of its provisions.
23. The State Law States that a person commits the offense of unlawful use of weapons when he knowingly carries, possesses, sells, delivers, imports, or purchases any State Banned Firearm in violation of 720 ILCS 5/24-1.9. Section 1.9 in turn states that with certain exceptions not applicable to Plaintiffs it is “unlawful for any person within this State to knowingly manufacture, deliver, sell, import, or purchase . . . [a State Banned Firearm]. In addition, Section 1.9 states that with certain exceptions, “beginning January 1, 2024, it is unlawful for any person within this State to knowingly possess [a State Banned Firearm].”
24. 720 ILCS 5/24-1.10(b) states that with certain exceptions not applicable to Plaintiffs “it is unlawful for any person within this State to knowingly manufacture, deliver, sell, purchase, or cause to be manufactured, delivered, sold, or purchased a [Banned Magazine]. 720 ILCS 5/24-1.10(c) states that with certain exceptions after April 9, 2023, it will be “unlawful to knowingly possess a [Banned Magazine].
25. The State Law provides for substantial criminal penalties for violation of its provisions.

26. Plaintiffs and/or their members and/or customers desire to exercise Second Amendment right to acquire, possess, carry, sell, purchase and transfer State Banned Firearms and Banned Magazines for lawful purposes, including, but not limited to, the defense of their homes. The State Law prohibits or soon will prohibit Plaintiffs from exercising their Second Amendment rights in this fashion.

27. There is an actual and present controversy between Plaintiffs and Defendants. The Ordinance and the State Law infringe on Plaintiffs' right to keep and bear arms under the Second Amendment. Defendants deny these contentions. Plaintiffs desire a judicial declaration that the Ordinance and State Law, facially and/or as applied to them, violate their constitutional rights. Plaintiffs should not be forced to choose between risking criminal prosecution and exercising their constitutional rights. The risk of criminal prosecution on account of exercising a constitutionally protected right unlawfully chills the exercise of that right and thus violates the Constitution even if the criminal defendant ultimately prevails.

28. Plaintiffs are or will be injured by Defendants' enforcement of the Ordinance and State Law insofar as those laws violate Plaintiffs' rights under the Second Amendment. If not enjoined by this Court, Defendants will enforce the Ordinance and State Law in derogation of Plaintiffs' constitutional rights. Plaintiffs have no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law. Damages are indeterminate or unascertainable and, in any event, would not fully redress any harm suffered by Plaintiffs because they are unable to engage in constitutionally protected activity due to Defendants' present or contemplated enforcement of these provisions.

VI. FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF
Right to Keep and Bear Arms
U.S. Const., amends. II and XIV

29. Paragraphs 1-28 are realleged and incorporated by reference.

30. The Ordinance and the State Law burden Plaintiff's Second Amendment rights by limiting or prohibiting their right to acquire, possess, carry, sell, purchase and transfer City Banned Firearms, State Banned Firearms and Banned Magazines. These laws are not consistent with the nation's history and tradition of firearm regulation. There are significant penalties for violations of the Ordinance and the State Law.

31. These restrictions infringe on Plaintiffs' right to keep and bear arms as guaranteed by the Second Amendment and made applicable to the State of Illinois and its political subdivisions by the Fourteenth Amendment.

32. The Ordinance's and the State Law's prohibitions extend into Plaintiff homes, where Second Amendment protections are at their zenith, as they burden their right to acquire and possess arms for the defense of their homes.

33. Defendants cannot satisfy their burden of justifying these restrictions on the Second Amendment right of the People.

VII. PRAYER FOR RELIEF

Plaintiffs pray that the Court:

34. Enter a declaratory judgment pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201 that the Ordinance and the State Law are unconstitutional on their face or as applied;

35. Enter preliminary and permanent injunctive relief enjoining Defendants and their officers, agents, and employees from enforcing the Ordinance and the State Law;

36. Award remedies available under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and all reasonable attorneys' fees, costs, and expenses under 42 U.S.C. § 1988, or any other applicable law;

37. Award actual compensatory and/or nominal damages (NAGR does not seek damages on behalf of its members); and

38. Grant any such other and further relief as the Court may deem proper.

MOTION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER AND FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

Plaintiffs submit the following Motion for Temporary Restraining Order and for Preliminary Injunction against Jason Arres (“Arres”).

NOTICE

On January 24, 2023, the undersigned discussed this motion with Christopher B. Wilson, who stated he had no authority to consent to a TRO. In addition, the undersigned left voicemail messages with Barbara Greenspan and Gretchen Helfrich of the Illinois Attorney General’s Office in which he informed them this motion was forthcoming. The undersigned spoke with Aaron Wenzloff of the Illinois Attorney General’s Office and informed him this motion was forthcoming. Mr. Wenzloff informed the undersigned that Sarah Hunger was perhaps the best person to contact, and the undersigned also left a voicemail message with Ms. Hunger.

TERMS

For purposes of this Motion:

(a) the term “State Law” means HB5471, which became effective on January 10, 2023, available at IL LEGIS 102-1116 (2022), 2022 Ill. Legis. Serv. P.A. 102-1116 (H.B. 5471);

(b) the term “State Banned Firearm” shall have the same meaning as “assault weapon” as defined in 720 ILCS 5/24-1.9; and

(c) the term “Banned Magazine” shall have the same meaning as “large capacity ammunition feeding device” as defined in 720 ILCS 5/24-1.10.

FACTS

1. Plaintiff National Association for Gun Rights (“NAGR”) is a nonprofit membership and donor-supported organization qualified as tax-exempt under 26 U.S.C. § 501(c)(4). Declaration of Dudley Brown ¶ 2. NAGR seeks to defend the right of all law-abiding individuals to keep and bear arms. Id. NAGR has over 240,000 members nationwide. Id. Over 8,000 NAGR members reside in the State of Illinois, several of whom reside in Naperville. Id. NAGR is not required to provide identifying information regarding its members; nevertheless, the following are the initials of a sample of NAGR’s members who reside in the City of Naperville (the “City”): B.S., D.B., G.S., G.K., L.J., and R.K. Id. NAGR represents the interests of its members whose Second Amendment rights are infringed by the State Law. Id.
2. Plaintiff Robert C. Bevis is a business owner in the City and a law-abiding citizen of the United States. Declaration of Robert C. Bevis ¶ 2. Mr. Bevis is a member of NAGR. Id.
3. Plaintiff Law Weapons, Inc. d/b/a Law Weapons & Supply (“LWI”) is an Illinois corporation which operates in the City. Bevis Dec. ¶ 3. LWI is engaged in the commercial sale of firearms. Id. A substantial part of LWI's business consists of the commercial sale of State Banned Firearms and Banned Magazines. Id.

4. Arres is the City's Chief of Police. He is responsible for the performance of the City's Police Department. Naperville Municipal Code 1-8A-2. Arres has the duty to see to the enforcement of all applicable laws, including the Ordinance and the State Law. Naperville Municipal Code 1-8A-3. Arres is or will perform his duty to enforce the Ordinance and State Law. Thus, Arres is or will deprive Plaintiffs of their constitutional rights by enforcing these unconstitutional laws against them.

5. The State Law states that a person commits the offense of unlawful use of weapons when he knowingly carries, possesses, sells, delivers, imports, or purchases any State Banned Firearm in violation of 720 ILCS 5/24-1.9. Section 1.9 in turn states that with certain exceptions not applicable to Plaintiffs it is "unlawful for any person within this State to knowingly manufacture, deliver, sell, import, or purchase . . . [a State Banned Firearm]. In addition, Section 1.9 states that with certain exceptions, "beginning January 1, 2024, it is unlawful for any person within this State to knowingly possess [a State Banned Firearm]."

6. 720 ILCS 5/24-1.10(b) states that with certain exceptions not applicable to Plaintiffs "it is unlawful for any person within this State to knowingly manufacture, deliver, sell, purchase, or cause to be manufactured, delivered, sold, or purchased a [Banned Magazine].

720 ILCS 5/24-1.10(c) states that with certain exceptions after April 9, 2023, it will be "unlawful to knowingly possess a [Banned Magazine].

7. The State Law provides for substantial criminal penalties for violation of its provisions.

8. Plaintiffs and/or their members and/or customers desire to exercise Second Amendment right to acquire, possess, carry, sell, purchase and transfer State Banned Firearms and Banned

Magazines for lawful purposes, including, but not limited to, the defense of their homes. Brown Dec. ¶ 3. Bevis Dec. ¶ 4. The State Law prohibits or soon will prohibit Plaintiffs from exercising their Second Amendment rights in this fashion. Id. LWI asserts the claims set forth in this action on its own behalf and on behalf of its customers who are prohibited by the State Law from acquiring arms protected by the Second Amendment. Id.

9. At least 20 million semi-automatic firearms such as those defined as “assault weapons” in the State Law are owned by millions of American citizens who use those firearms for lawful purposes. Declaration of James Curcuruto ¶ 6. Mr. Curcuruto’s declaration was originally submitted in Rocky Mountain Gun Owners, et al. v. Town of Superior, 22-CV-1685-RM. It is used with permission in this action.

10. At least 150 million magazines with a capacity greater than ten rounds are owned by law-abiding American citizens, who use those magazines for lawful purposes. Declaration of James Curcuruto ¶ 7.

STANDARD FOR GRANTING TRO AND PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

The standard for issuing a temporary restraining order is identical to that governing the issuance of a preliminary injunction. Mays v. Dart, 453 F. Supp. 3d 1074, 1087 (N.D. Ill. 2020). To be entitled to preliminary relief, Plaintiffs must establish as a threshold matter: (1) they are likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief; (2) inadequate remedies at law exist; and (3) they have a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits. (3) the balance of the equities tips in their favor. Whitaker v. Kenosha Unified School District, 858 F. 3d 1034, 1044 (7th Cir. 2017). If the movant successfully makes this showing, the court must engage in a balancing analysis, to determine whether the balance of harm favors the moving party or whether the harm to other parties or the public sufficiently outweighs the movant’s interests. Id., Higher Soc’y of Indiana v. Tippecanoe Cnty., Indiana, 858 F.3d 1113, 1116 (7th Cir. 2017), citing Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008).

In a case involving an alleged violation of a constitutional right, the likelihood of success on the merits will often be the determinative factor. Id., citing Am. Civil Liberties Union of Ill. v. Alvarez, 679 F.3d 583, 589 (7th Cir. 2012).¹ That is because even short deprivations of constitutional rights constitute irreparable harm, and the balance of harms normally favors granting preliminary injunctive relief because the public interest is not harmed by preliminarily enjoining the enforcement of a statute that is probably unconstitutional. Id. So “the analysis begins and ends with the likelihood of success on the merits” of the constitutional claim. Id., citing Korte v. Sebelius, 735 F.3d 654, 666 (7th Cir. 2013).

In Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F.3d 684, 997 (7th Cir. 2011), the Court equated the standard for obtaining a preliminary injunction in the Second Amendment context with the standard for obtaining that relief in a First Amendment case. Also in Ezell, the Court granted preliminary relief against a Chicago ordinance which inter alia prohibited commercial activity found to be protected by the Second Amendment. Namely, the ordinance prohibited all shooting galleries, firearm ranges, or any other places where firearms are discharged.

THE GOVERNMENT BEARS THE BURDEN OF DEMONSTRATION

In New York State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. 2111 (2022), the Supreme Court unambiguously placed on the government a substantial burden of demonstrating that any law seeking to regulate firearms is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation.² Specifically, the Court stated:

“To support that [its claim that its regulation is permitted by the Second Amendment], the burden falls on [the government] to show that New York’s proper-cause requirement is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation. Only if respondents carry that burden can they show that the pre-existing right codified in the Second Amendment, and made applicable to the States through the Fourteenth, does not protect petitioners’ proposed course of conduct.”

Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2135.

In this case, the Second Amendment’s plain text covers Plaintiffs’ conduct. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2132 (“the Second Amendment extends, prima facie, to all instruments that constitute bearable arms”). Accordingly, Plaintiff’s conduct is presumptively protected by the Second Amendment. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2126 (“when the Second Amendment’s plain text covers an individual’s conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct”). It is impossible for the government to rebut that presumption by demonstrating that the law is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation because no such tradition exists.

ARGUMENT

I. The Supreme Court has Reaffirmed the Heller Standard

A. A Regulation Burdening the Right to Keep and Bear Arms is Unconstitutional Unless it is Consistent with the Text of the Second Amendment and the Nation’s History and Traditions

In Bruen, the Court rejected the two-part balancing test for Second Amendment challenges that several courts of appeal adopted in the wake of Heller and McDonald v. City of

² “Significantly, the plaintiff need not demonstrate the absence of regulation in order to prevail; the burden rests squarely on the government to establish that the activity has been subject to some measure of regulation.” Friedman v. City of Highland Park, Illinois, 784 F.3d 406, 415 (7th Cir. 2015) (Manion, J., dissenting).

Chicago, Ill., 561 U.S. 742 (2010). Instead, it reiterated the Heller standard, which it summarized as follows:

“Today, we decline to adopt that two-part approach. In keeping with Heller, we hold that when the Second Amendment’s plain text covers an individual’s conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct. To justify its regulation, the government may not simply posit that the regulation promotes an important interest. Rather, the government must demonstrate that the regulation is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation. Only if a firearm regulation is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition may a court conclude that the individual’s conduct falls outside the Second Amendment’s unqualified command.”

Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2126 (internal quotation marks omitted).

The Bruen court spent significant time describing how lower courts are to proceed in Second Amendment cases. As particularly relevant here, Bruen described the proper analysis of the term “arms.” That word, Bruen affirmed, has a “historically fixed meaning” but one that “applies to new circumstances.” Id. at 2132. It thus “covers modern instruments that facilitate armed self-defense.” Id., citing Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411, 411—412 (2016) (per curiam) (stun guns). Accordingly, the text of the Second Amendment “extends, prima facie, to all instruments that constitute bearable arms, even those that were not in existence at the time of the founding.” Id.

The Court then explained that “[m]uch like we use history to determine which modern ‘arms’ are protected by the Second Amendment, so too does history guide our consideration of modern regulations that were unimaginable at the founding.” Id. In considering history, courts are to engage in “reasoning by analogy.” Id. This analogical reasoning requires the government to identify a well-established and representative historical analogue to the challenged regulation. Id. at 2133. But to be a genuine “analogue,” the historical tradition of regulation identified by the government must be “relevantly similar” to the restriction before the Court today. Id. at 2132. Two metrics are particularly salient in determining if a historical regulation is relevantly similar: [1] how and [2] why the regulations burden a law-abiding citizen’s right to armed self-defense. Id. at 2133. By considering these two metrics, a court can determine if the government has demonstrated that a modern-day regulation is analogous enough to historical precursors that the regulation may be upheld as consistent with the Second Amendment’s text and history. Id.

As noted above, the Court held that the judicial balancing of means and ends pursuant to intermediate scrutiny review plays no part in Second Amendment analysis. “Heller does not support applying means-end scrutiny.” Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2127; see also Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2129 (inquiry into the Code’s alleged “salutary effects” upon “important governmental interests” is not part of the test).

B. Only “Dangerous and Unusual Arms” Can be Categorically Banned Consistent with Our History and Tradition

This case involves a categorical ban of two classes of arms. Both Bruen and Heller identified only one aspect of the nation’s history and tradition that is sufficiently analogous to – and therefore capable of justifying – such a ban: the tradition, dating back to the Founding, of restricting “dangerous and unusual weapons” that are not “in common use at the time.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2128. By contrast, where a type of arm is in common use, there is, by definition, no historical tradition of banning it. Thus, for the type of restriction at issue in this case, the Court has already analyzed the relevant historical tradition and established its scope: “dangerous and unusual” weapons may be subject to a blanket ban, but arms “in common use at the time” may not be. Id.

The Heller test is based on historical practice and “the historical understanding of the scope of the right,” but with reference to modern realities of firearm ownership. Heller, 554

U.S. at 625; see also Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2131 (“The test that we set forth in Heller and apply today requires courts to assess whether modern firearms regulations are consistent with the Second Amendment’s text and historical understanding.”); Rocky Mountain Gun Owners v. Town of Superior, Colo., 1:22- cv-01685, Doc. 18 at 9 (D. Colo. 2022) (granting, post-Bruen, a temporary restraining order against enforcement of a ban on certain semiautomatic rifles and noting “the Court is unaware of historical precedent that would permit a governmental entity to entirely ban a type of weapon that is commonly used by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes”); and Rocky Mountain Gun Owners v. Bd. of Cnty. Commissioners of Boulder Cnty., 2022 WL 4098998 (D. Colo. 2022) (also granting TRO against similar law).

In summary, in the context of blanket bans on bearable arms, the Supreme Court has already done the historical spadework, and the only restrictions of this kind that it has deemed consistent with the historical understanding of the right to keep and bear arms are restrictions limited to dangerous and unusual arms that are not in common use.

This Court’s task is therefore a simple one: it merely must determine whether the banned arms are “dangerous and unusual.” Importantly, this is a “conjunctive test: A weapon may not be banned unless it is both dangerous and unusual.” Caetano, 577 U.S. at 417 (Alito, J., concurring). An arm that is in common use for lawful purposes is, by definition, not unusual. Such an arm therefore cannot be both dangerous and unusual and therefore cannot be the subjected to a blanket ban. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2143; Heller, 554 U.S. at 629.

To determine whether an arm is “unusual” the Supreme Court has likewise made clear that the Second Amendment focuses on the practices of the American people nationwide, not just, say, in this State. See id. at 2131 (“It is this balance – struck by the traditions of the American people – that demands our unqualified deference.”); Heller, 554 U.S. at 628

(handguns are “overwhelmingly chosen by American society” for self-defense); Caetano, 577 U.S. at 420 (Alito, J., concurring) (“stun guns are widely owned and accepted as a legitimate means of self-defense across the country”). Therefore, the Second Amendment protects those who live in states or localities with a less robust practice of protecting the right to keep and bear firearms from outlier legislation just as much as it protects those who live in jurisdictions that have hewed more closely to America’s traditions.

Furthermore, courts and legislatures do not have the authority to second-guess the choices made by law-abiding citizens by questioning whether they really “need” the arms that ordinary citizens have chosen to possess. While Heller noted several reasons that a citizen may prefer a handgun for home defense, the Court held that “[w]hatever the reason, handguns are the most popular weapon chosen by Americans for self-defense in the home, and a complete prohibition of their use is invalid.” Id., 554 U.S. at 629. The Court reaffirmed that the traditions of the American people, which includes their choice of preferred firearms, demand the courts’ “unqualified deference.” Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2131.

As set forth below, the State Banned Firearms and the Banned Magazines are “typically possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes.” Under Heller and Bruen, that is the end of the analysis. The Second Amendment “[does] not countenance a complete prohibition on the use of the most popular weapon chosen by Americans for self-defense in the home.” Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2128 (internal quotation marks omitted).

Finally, the Second Amendment inquiry focuses on the choices commonly made by contemporary law-abiding citizens. Heller rejected as “bordering on the frivolous” “the argument . . . that only those arms in existence in the 18th century are protected,” Id. at 582. And in Caetano, the Supreme Court reiterated this point, holding that arms protected by the Second Amendment need not have been in existence at the time of the Founding. 577 U.S. 411-12, quoting Heller, 554 U.S. at 582. The Caetano Court flatly denied that a particular type of firearm’s being “a thoroughly modern invention” is relevant to determining whether the Second Amendment protects it. Id. And Bruen cements the point. Responding to laws that allegedly restricted the carrying of handguns during the colonial period, the Court reasoned that “even if these colonial laws prohibited the carrying of handguns because they were considered ‘dangerous and unusual weapons’ in the 1690s, they provide no justification for laws restricting the public carry of weapons that are unquestionably in common use today.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2143.

II. The Seventh Circuit’s Decision in Friedman is no Longer Good Law

In Friedman v. City of Highland Park, Illinois, 784 F.3d 406 (7th Cir. 2015), the Seventh Circuit upheld as constitutional an ordinance similar to the State Law challenged in this action, and normally that case would preclude this challenge. However, “[s]tare decisis cannot justify adherence to an approach that Supreme Court precedent forecloses.” Fed. Trade Comm’n v. Credit Bureau Ctr., LLC, 937 F.3d 764, 767 (7th Cir. 2019). And Bruen flatly forecloses the approach taken by the Court in Friedman. See also United States v. Wahi, 850 F.3d 296, 302 (7th Cir. 2017) (“When an intervening Supreme Court decision unsettles [the Seventh Circuit’s] precedent, it is the ruling of the [Supreme] Court that . . . must carry the day.”).

In Friedman the Court announced a unique three-part test to determine Second Amendment questions. Under this test, a court asks: whether a regulation [1] bans weapons that were common at the time of ratification or [2] those that have some reasonable relationship to the preservation or efficiency of a well regulated militia and [3] whether law-abiding citizens retain adequate means of self-defense. Id., 784 F.3d at 410. This test is not supported by Heller. Indeed, two of the three prongs of the test are specifically foreclosed by Heller as the Court made plain in Bruen.

[1] The Second Amendment’s “reference to ‘arms’ does not apply only to those arms in existence in the 18th century.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2132 (cleaned up). Indeed, Heller characterized this argument as “bordering on the frivolous.” Heller, 554 U.S. at 582.

[2] The Second Amendment’s operative clause “does not depend on service in the militia.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2127, citing Heller, 554 U.S. at 592.

[3] As for the third prong, “[T]he right to bear other weapons is ‘no answer’ to a ban on the possession of protected arms.” Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411, 420 (2016), quoting Heller, 554 U.S. at 629.

But there are more problems with Friedman. Not only is its three-part test no longer viable, but other central parts of its holding are inconsistent with Bruen. First, the Friedman Court based its decision in large part on its view of the benefits of the ordinance. Id., 784 F.3d at 411-12 (reviewing the benefits of the ordinance, including the fact that the ban on arms reduced “perceived risk” and “makes the public feel safer”). But, as discussed supra, Bruen emphatically rejected exactly this sort of means-end scrutiny. Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2127; see also Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2129 (inquiry into the Code’s alleged “salutary effects” upon “important governmental interests” is not part of the test). Second, the Friedman court held that categorical bans on kinds of weapons may be proper even if the limits did not “mirror restrictions that were on the books in 1791.” Id., 784 F.3d 410. This holding is contradicted by the central thrust of Bruen’s holding that a restriction on Second Amendment rights will survive scrutiny only if “the government identif[ies] a well-established and representative historical analogue” to the regulation. Id. 142 S. Ct. 2133.

In summary, for many reasons it is not possible to square subsequent Supreme Court precedent with the Seventh Circuit’s holding in Friedman. Accordingly, that case is no longer binding precedent,, and in rendering is decision on this motion, this Court must reject the Seventh Circuit’s Friedman analysis in favor of the Supreme Court’s Bruen analysis.

III. The State’s Prohibition on Possession of State Banned Firearms is Unconstitutional

A. Introduction

Under Bruen, “when the Second Amendment’s plain text covers an individual’s conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2126. To justify its regulation, the government . . . must demonstrate that the regulation is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation.” Id. Here, the Second Amendment’s plain text covers the State Banned Firearms, so it falls to the government to attempt to justify the law as consistent with historical tradition rooted in the Founding. It cannot possibly do so, because the State Banned Firearms are commonly possessed by law abiding citizens, and Bruen has already established that, by definition, there cannot be a tradition of banning an arm if it is commonly possessed.

B. The State Banned Firearms are in Common Use

This case thus reduces to the following, straightforward inquiry: are State Banned Firearms in “common use,” according to the lawful choices by contemporary Americans? They unquestionably are. There is no class of firearms known as “assault weapon.” “Prior to 1989, the term ‘assault weapon’ did not exist in the lexicon of firearms. It is a political term, developed by anti-gun publicists . . .” Stenberg v. Carhart, 530 U.S. 914, 1001 (2000) at n. 16

(Thomas, J., dissenting). But while “assault weapon” is not a recognized category of firearms, “semiautomatic rifle” is. And it is semiautomatic rifles that the “assault weapon” ban targets. The “automatic” part of “semiautomatic” refers to the fact that the user need not manually load another round in the chamber after each round is fired. But unlike an automatic rifle, a semiautomatic rifle will not fire continuously on one pull of its trigger; rather, a semiautomatic rifle requires the user to pull the trigger each time he or she wants to discharge a round. See Staples v. United States, 511 U.S. 600, 602 (1994) at n. 1.

There is therefore a significant practical difference between a truly automatic and a merely semiautomatic rifle. According to the United States Army, for example, the maximum effective rates of fire for various M4- and M16-series firearms is between forty-five and sixty-five rounds per minute in semiautomatic mode, versus 150-200 rounds per minute in automatic mode. Dept. of the Army, RIFLE MARKSMANSHIP: ML6-/M4-SERIES WEAPONS, 2-1 tbl. 2-1 (2008), available at <https://bit.ly/3pvS3SW>.

There is a venerable tradition in this country of lawful private ownership of semiautomatic rifles. The Supreme Court has held as much. In Staples, it concluded that semiautomatics, unlike machine guns, “traditionally have been widely accepted as lawful possessions.” Staples, 511 U.S. at 612. Semiautomatic rifles have been commercially available for over a century. See Heller v. District of Columbia (“Heller IP”), 670 F.3d 1244, 1287 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (Kavanaugh, J., dissenting); David B. Kopel, Rational Basis Analysis of “Assault Weapon” Prohibition, 20 J. CONTEMP. L. 381, 413 (1994).

In contrast to this long history of legal ownership of semi-automatic rifles, the first “assault weapon” ban was not enacted until California did so in 1989, a full 200 years after the Constitution became effective. Obviously, that is far too late to demonstrate anything about the original meaning of the Second or Fourteenth Amendment, no matter which is the relevant historical reference point. Bruen, 142 S.Ct. at 2126 (cautioning against giving post enactment history more weight than it can rightly bear). Even today, the vast majority of states (42 out of 50)³, do not ban semiautomatic weapons that would be deemed “assault weapons” under the Code at issue in this action.⁴

Thus, there is no historical tradition of banning semi-automatic firearms. This is borne out by the fact that millions of law-abiding citizens choose to possess firearms in that category. Duncan v. Becerra (“Duncan IV”), 970 F.3d 1133, 1147 (9th Cir. 2020) (“Commonality is determined largely by statistics.”); Ass’n of N.J Rifle & Pistol Clubs, Inc. v. Att’y Gen., 910 F.3d 106, 116 (3d Cir. 2018) (finding an arm is commonly owned because the record shows that “millions” are owned); New York State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. Cuomo, 804 F.3d 242, 255 (2d Cir. 2015) (“Even accepting the most conservative estimates cited by the parties and by amici, the assault weapons at issue are ‘in common use’ as that term was used in Heller.”); Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1261 (“We think it clear enough in the record that semi-automatic rifles . . . are indeed in ‘common use.’”).

The AR-15 is America’s “most popular semi-automatic rifle,” Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1287 (Kavanaugh, J., dissenting), and in recent years it has been “the best-selling rifle type in the United States,” Nicholas J. Johnson, Supply Restrictions at the Margins of Heller and the

This issue was addressed in Kolbe v. Hogan, 849 F.3d 114 (4th Cir. 2017), abrogated by Bruen, supra. In his dissent (which, after Bruen, likely represents the correct interpretation of the law), Judge Traxler stated:

“It is beyond any reasonable dispute from the record before us that a statistically significant number of American citizens possess semiautomatic rifles (and magazines holding more than 10 rounds) for lawful purposes. Between 1990 and 2012, more than 8 million AR- and AK- platform semiautomatic rifles alone were manufactured in or imported into the United States. In 2012, semiautomatic sporting rifles accounted for twenty percent of all retail firearms sales. In fact, in 2012, the number of AR- and AK- style weapons manufactured and imported into the United States was more than double the number of the most commonly sold vehicle in the U.S., the Ford F-150. In terms of absolute numbers, these statistics lead to the unavoidable conclusion that popular semiautomatic rifles such as the AR-15 are commonly possessed by American citizens for lawful purposes within the meaning of Heller.”

Id., 849 F.3d at 153, Traxler, J. dissenting (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

Today, the number of AR-rifles and other modern sporting rifles in circulation in the United States exceeds twenty-four million. The Firearms Industry Trade Ass’n, Commonly Owned: NSSF Announces Over 24 Million MSRS in Circulation, (July 20, 2022), available at <https://bit.ly/3pUj8So>.⁵

According to industry sources, as of 2018, roughly thirty-five percent of all newly manufactured guns sold in America are modern semiautomatic rifles, Bloomberg, Why Gunmakers Would Rather Sell AR-15s Than Handguns, FORTUNE (June 20, 2018), available at <https://bit.ly/3R2kZ3s>, and an estimated 5.4 million Americans purchased firearms for the first time in 2021. The Firearms Industry Trade Ass’n, NSSF Retailer Surveys Indicate 5.4 million

⁵ See also Declaration of James Curcuruto ¶ 6 (“At least 20 million semi-automatic firearms such as those defined as “assault weapons” are owned by millions of American citizens who use those firearms for lawful purposes.”

First-Time Gun Buyers in 2021, (Jan. 25, 2022), available at <https://bit.ly/3dV6RKI>. In fact, a recent survey of gun owners estimated that 24.6 million Americans have owned AR-15 or similar rifles. See William English, 2021 National Firearms Survey: Updated Analysis Including Types of Firearms Owned at 1 (May 13, 2022), available at <https://bit.ly/3yPfoHw>.

AR-style rifles are commonly and overwhelmingly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes. In a 2021 survey of 16,708 gun owners, recreational target shooting was the most common reason (cited by 66% of owners) for possessing an AR-style firearm, followed closely by home defense (61.9% of owners) and hunting (50.5% of owners). English, supra, at 33-34. This is consistent with the findings of an earlier 2013 survey of 21,942 confirmed owners of such firearms, in which home-defense again followed (closely) only recreational target shooting as the most important reason for owning these firearms. See also Friedman v. City of Highland Park, 68 F. Supp. 3d 895, 904 (N.D. Ill. 2014), aff'd 784 F.3d 406 (7th Cir. 2015). “An additional survey estimated that approximately 11,977,000 people participated in target shooting with a modern sporting rifle.” Id. Indeed the “AR-15 type rifle . . . is the leading type of firearm used in national matches and in other matches sponsored by the congressionally established Civilian Marksmanship program.” Shew v. Malloy, 994 F. Supp. 2d 234, 245 n.40 (D. Conn. 2014).

The fact that “assault” rifles are used extremely rarely in crime underscores that AR-15s and other State Banned Firearms are commonly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes. Evidence indicates that “well under 1% [of crime guns] are ‘assault rifles.’” Gary Kleck, TARGETING GUNS: FIREARMS AND THEIR CONTROL 112 (1997). This conclusion is borne out by FBI statistics. In the five years from 2015 to 2019 (inclusive), there were an average of 14,556 murders per year in the United States. On average, rifles of all types (of which so-called “assault weapons” are a subset) were identified as the murder weapon in 315 murders per year. U.S. Dept. of Just., Expanded Homicide Data Table 8: Murder Victims by Weapon, 2015-2019, Crime in the United States, 2019, FBI, available at <https://bit.ly/31WmQ1V>. By way of comparison, on average 669 people are murdered by “personal weapons” such as hands, fists and feet. Id. According to the FBI, a murder victim is more than twice as likely to have been killed by hands and feet than by a rifle of any type.

Even in the counterfactual event that a modern semiautomatic rifle had been involved in each rifle-related murder from 2015 to 2019, an infinitesimal percentage of the approximately 24 million modern sporting rifles in circulation in the United States during that time period – around .001 percent – would have been used for that unlawful purpose. More broadly, as of 2016, only 0.8 percent of state and federal prisoners reported using any kind of rifle during the offense for which they were serving time. Mariel Alper & Lauren Glaze, Source and Uses of Firearms Involved in Crimes: Survey of Prison Inmates, 2016, U.S. DEPT OF JUST., OFF. OF JUST. PROGS., BUREAU OF JUST. STATS. 5 tbl. 3 (Jan. 2019), available at <https://bit.ly/31VjRa9>

Finally, the Supreme Court’s decision in Caetano further confirms that the banned arms are in common use. That case concerned Massachusetts’s ban on the possession of stun guns, which that state’s highest court had upheld on the ground that such weapons are not protected by the Second Amendment. Id., 577 U.S. at 411. In a brief per curiam opinion, the Supreme Court vacated that decision. Id. at 411-12. Though the Court remanded the case back to the state court without deciding whether stun guns are constitutionally protected, Justice Alito filed a concurring opinion expressly concluding that those arms “are widely owned and accepted as a legitimate means of self-defense across the country,” based on evidence that “hundreds of thousands of Tasers and stun guns have been sold to private citizens.” Id. at 420 (Alito, J., concurring) (cleaned up) (citation omitted). If hundreds of thousands” of arms constitute wide ownership, a fortiori so does the tens of millions of semiautomatic rifles sold to private citizens nationwide.

The Massachusetts court got the message. In a subsequent case, that court, relying on Caetano, held that because “stun guns are ‘arms’ within the protection of the Second Amendment,” the state’s law barring “civilians from possessing or carrying stun guns, even in their home, is inconsistent with the Second Amendment and therefore unconstitutional.” Ramirez v. Commonwealth, 94 N.E.3d 809, 815 (Mass. 2018). The Illinois Supreme Court followed suit with a similar ruling in 2019, relying on Caetano and Ramirez to conclude that “[a]ny attempt by the State to rebut the prima facie presumption of Second Amendment protection afforded stun guns and tasers on the grounds that the weapons are uncommon or not typically possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes would be futile.” People v. Webb, 131 N.E. 3d 93, 96 (Ill. 2019). This reasoning is sound, and it necessarily entails the invalidity of the categorial ban at issue here, which restricts arms that are many times more common than stun guns.

III. The Prohibition on Possession of Banned Magazines is Unconstitutional

A. Magazines Capable of Holding More Than 10 Rounds Are in Common Use

Magazines are indisputably “arms” protected by the Second Amendment, as the right to keep and bear arms necessarily includes the right to keep and bear components such as ammunition and magazines that are necessary for the firearm to operate. See United States v. Miller, 307 U.S. 174, 180 (1939) (citing seventeenth-century commentary recognizing that “[t]he possession of arms also implied the possession of ammunition”); Jackson v. City & Cnty.

of San Francisco, 746 F.3d 953, 967 (9th Cir. 2014) (without bullets, the right to bear arms would be meaningless).

Just as the First and Fourteenth Amendments protect modern forms of communications and search, “the Second Amendment extends, prima facie, to all instruments that constitute bearable arms, even those that were not in existence at the time of the founding.” Heller, 554 U.S. at 582; Caetano, supra (stun guns). Thus, as the Supreme Court reiterated in Bruen, when assessing whether arms are protected by the Second Amendment, the question is whether they are “in common use today.” 142 S.Ct. at 2134. If they are, then they are presumptively protected by the Second Amendment, and it is the government’s burden to prove that any efforts to restrict their possession or use have a “well- established and representative historical analogue.” Bruen, 142 S.Ct. at 2133. But, as noted above, in the context of a categorial ban such as that at issue here with respect to the Banned Magazines, establishing such an analogue is impossible. The government may impose a blanket prohibition only on “dangerous and unusual” arms, but by definition, an arm in common use is not unusual. The Second Amendment “[does] not countenance a complete prohibition on the use of the most popular weapon chosen by Americans for self-defense in the home.” Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2128 (internal quotation marks omitted).

The Banned Magazines unquestionably satisfy the “common use” test. See Duncan III, 366 F.Supp.3d at 1143-45; Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1142, 1146-47. Magazines capable of holding more than 10 rounds of ammunition are commonly owned by millions and millions of Americans for all manner of lawful purposes, including self-defense, sporting, and hunting.⁶ They come standard with many of the most popular handguns and long guns on the market, and

Americans own roughly 115 million of them, Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1142, accounting for “approximately half of all privately owned magazines in the United States,” Duncan v. Bonta (“Duncan V”), 19 F.4th 1087, 1097 (9th Cir. 2021), cert. granted, judgment vacated, 142 S. Ct. 2895 (2022). Indeed, the most popular handgun in America, the Glock 17 pistol, comes standard with a 17-round magazine. See Duncan III, 366 F.Supp.3d at 1145. In short, there can be no serious dispute that magazines capable of holding more than 10 rounds are bearable arms that satisfy the common use test and thus are presumptively protected by the Second Amendment.

In his dissent in Kolbe v. Hogan, Judge Traxler also addressed magazines such as the Banned Magazines. He stated:

“The record also shows unequivocally that magazines with a capacity of greater than 10 rounds are commonly kept by American citizens, as there are more than 75 million such magazines owned by them in the United States. These magazines are so common that they are standard on many firearms: On a nationwide basis most pistols are manufactured with magazines holding ten to 17 rounds. Even more than 20 years ago, fully 18 percent of all firearms owned by civilians were equipped with magazines holding more than ten rounds.”

Id., 849 F.3d at 154, Traxler, J. dissenting (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

Magazines such as those banned by the Banned Magazines are without the slightest question commonly possessed by law abiding citizens for lawful purposes (again, the dispositive fact under Heller and Bruen). Therefore, based on this fact alone, the Code is unconstitutional.

B. There Is No Historical Tradition of Restricting Firearms Capable of Firing More Than 10 Rounds Without Reloading.

Even if Banned Magazines were not in common use, the City cannot come close to proving that restrictions on firing or magazine capacity are part of the nation’s historical tradition. To the contrary, history and tradition establish the exact opposite. See Duncan III,

366 F.Supp.3d at 1149-53; Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1147-51 (when the Founders ratified the Second Amendment, no laws restricted ammunition capacity despite multi-shot firearms having been in existence for some 200 years); Duncan V, 19 F.4th at 1148-59 (Bumatay, J., dissenting) (summarizing history)

Firearms capable of firing more than 10 rounds without reloading are nothing new. “[T]he first firearm that could fire more than ten rounds without reloading was invented around 1580,” and several such handguns and long guns “pre-date[d] the American Revolution.” Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1147. Well before the framing of the Fourteenth Amendment, they had become “common,” as witnessed by popular firearms such as the Pepperbox-style pistol, which could “shoot 18 or 24 shots before reloading individual cylinders.” Id. By the end of the Civil War, “repeating, cartridge-fed firearms” were ubiquitous, and many of the most popular models had magazines that held more than 10 rounds. Id. at 1148. For example, the Winchester 66 had a 17- round magazine and could fire all 17 rounds plus the one in the chamber in under nine seconds. Id. Later models, including the famed Winchester 73 (“the gun that won the West”), likewise had magazines that held more than 10 rounds and sold a combined “over 1.7 million total copies” between 1873 and 1941. Id.

As detachable box-style magazines became more popular around the turn of the twentieth century, so too did rifles and handguns with box magazines capable of holding more than 10 rounds, such as Auto Ordnance Company’s semi-automatic rifle (1927, 30 rounds) and the Browning Hi-Power pistol (1935, 13 rounds). Id. In 1963, the U.S. government sold hundreds of thousands of surplus 15- and 30-round M-1 carbines to civilians at a steep discount. Id. That same year, the first AR-15 rifle was released. Id. The AR-15 comes standard with a 30-round magazine and as noted above, remains the most popular rifle in America today.

Id.; Duncan III, 366 F.Supp.3d 1145. Today, the most popular handgun in America is the Glock 17, which comes standard with a 17-round magazine. Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1142, 1148. Many other popular pistols likewise come standard with magazines that hold more than 10 rounds. For example, the Beretta Model 92 comes standard with a sixteen-round magazine, Smith & Wesson M&P 9 M2.0 nine-millimeter magazines contain seventeen rounds, and the Ruger SR9 has a 17-round standard magazine. Id. at 1142 & n.4.

Firearms capable of firing more than 10 rounds predate the founding by more than a century. See Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1147. Such arms were neither novelties nor confined to the military; to the contrary, they were marketed to and bought by civilians from the start. “[I]n 1821, the New York Evening Post described the invention of a new repeater as ‘importan[t], both for public and private use,’ whose ‘number of charges may be extended to fifteen or even twenty.’” Ass’n of N.J. Rifle & Pistol Clubs, Inc. v. Att’y Gen. of N.J. (“ANJRPC II”), 974 F.3d 237, 255 (3d Cir. 2020) (Matey, dissenting). The popular Pepperbox-style pistol was marketed to civilians, the Girandoni air rifle “was famously carried on the Lewis and Clark expedition,” and millions of Winchesters were sold to civilians in the decades following the ratification of the Fourteenth Amendment. Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1147-48; Duncan V, 19 F.4th at 1154-55 (Bumatay, J., dissenting). And the federal government itself sold hundreds of thousands of surplus 15- and 30-round M-1 carbines to civilians at a steep discount just as the AR-15 and its standard 30-round magazine came on the market. Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1148.

The historical record confirms that, “[l]ong before 1979, magazines of more than ten rounds had been well established in the mainstream of American gun ownership.” David B. Kopel, The History of Firearm Magazines and Magazine Prohibitions, 78 Alb. L. Rev. 849, 862 (2015). In short, arms that could fire more than 10 rounds without reloading would by no means have been “unforeseen inventions to the Founders.” Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1147. They have been available for centuries, and “magazines of more than ten rounds had been well established in the mainstream of American gun ownership” “long before” a handful of capacity restrictions started to pop in the late twentieth century. See Kopel, supra at 862-64.

There were no restrictions on firing or magazine capacity when either the Second or the Fourteenth Amendment was ratified. The first such laws did not come until the Prohibition Era, and, even then, they were few and far between. Many states and the federal government began regulating automatic weapons almost as soon as they came on the market in the 1920s and 1930s. In contrast, only during Prohibition did a handful of state legislatures enact capacity restrictions, many of which were soon repealed. Duncan IV, 970 F.3d at 1150. These states included Michigan (1927, repealed in 1959), Rhode Island (1927, repealed in 1975), and Ohio (1933, repealed in 2014). Id. at n.10. It is important to note that the Rhode Island and Michigan statutes applied only to weapons rather than magazines, and the Ohio statute was interpreted to only forbid the simultaneous purchase of a firearm and compatible 18-round magazine. Id.

These anomalous laws not only were “short lived,” Bruen, 142 S.Ct. at 2155, but emerged several decades after the isolated “late-19th-century” territorial laws that the Supreme Court found to be too few and too late to have meaningful historical relevance. Id. at 2154; cf Heller II, 670 F.3d at 1292 (Kavanaugh, J., dissenting) (six states not enough to make a “strong showing that such laws are common”). Here too, then, “the bare existence of these localized restrictions cannot overcome the overwhelming evidence of an otherwise enduring American tradition permitting law-abiding citizens to keep and bear arms with a firing capacity of more than 10 rounds.

The first state to restrict magazine capacity as such (New Jersey) did not do so until 1990 – more than two centuries after the founding. As with “assault weapon” bans, that is far too late to demonstrate anything about the original meaning of the Second or Fourteenth Amendment. The federal government did not restrict magazine capacity until 1994, and Congress allowed that law to expire in 2004. Since 1990, when the first magazine capacity restriction was adopted, a total of 12 states have enacted such restrictions, with half of those restrictions enacted within the last decade.⁷ The City thus cannot even identify a “well-established” tradition of restricting magazine capacity today, let alone identify any representative historical analogue that might justify its confiscatory magazine ban. Bruen, 142 S.Ct. at 2133 (emphasis omitted).

Yet, despite a long historical tradition of law-abiding citizens possessing these firearms for lawful purposes, there is no similar tradition of government regulation, let alone confiscation. To the contrary, the historical tradition of advancement in firearms technology reflects a steady trend toward increasing the firing capacity of the most popular and common arms, with no corresponding trend of government restrictions on firing capacity. The City thus cannot possibly meet its burden of “affirmatively prov[ing] that its [magazine ban] is part of the historical tradition that delimits the outer bounds of the right to keep and bear arms.” Bruen, 142 S.Ct. at 2127.

Respectfully submitted this 24th day of January 2023.

IN THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SEVENTH CIRCUIT
Case No. 23-1353

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR GUN RIGHTS, ROBERT C. BEVIS, and LAW WEAPONS, INC., d/b/a LAW WEAPONS & SUPPLY, an Illinois corporation;

v.

CITY OF NAPERVILLE, ILLINOIS, and JASON ARRES, CHIEF OF POLICE OF NAPERVILLE

MOTION FOR INJUNCTION PENDING APPEAL

Pursuant to FRAP 8 and Circuit Rule 8, Plaintiffs submit the following Motion for Injunction Pending Appeal.

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Plaintiffs filed motions for preliminary injunction with respect to the City of Naperville Ordinance on November 18, 2022, and with respect to the State of Illinois Statute on January 24, 2023. Dkt. 10. The Court denied Plaintiffs' motions for preliminary injunction in an order dated February 17, 2023. Dkt. 63. On February 21, 2023, Plaintiffs appealed the Order to the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. Dkt. 64. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1) (order denying request for preliminary injunction appealable). Fed.R.App.P. 8(a)(1)(C) states that a party must move first in the district court for an injunction pending appeal. On February 28, 2023, Plaintiffs moved in the district court for an injunction pending appeal. Dkt. 71. The district court denied Plaintiffs' motion for injunction pending appeal on March 2, 2023. Dkt. 73. Plaintiffs have attached their declarations filed in the trial court (Dkts. 10-1, 10-3, and 71-1) in the Appendix filed with this Motion and incorporate them in and with this motion.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

A party seeking an injunction pending appeal must establish that he is [1] likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4] that an injunction is in the public interest. Protect Our Parks, Inc. v. Buttigieg, 10 F.4th 758, 763 (7th Cir. 2021), quoting Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008) (quotation marks omitted; bracketed numbers added). Although a plaintiff need not show by a preponderance of the evidence that she will win her suit, the mere possibility of success is not enough; she must make a “strong” showing on the merits. Id. (internal citation omitted). This is an extraordinary remedy. Id.

ARGUMENT

I. Plaintiffs Have Made a Strong Showing of Likely Success on the Merits

A. Justice Thomas: Laws Like the Illinois Statute and the City’s Ordinance are Clearly Unconstitutional

This is not a close case. The Second Amendment protects arms that are “typically possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes.” D.C. v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 625 (2008) (Scalia, J.). Justice Thomas, the author of the recent landmark Second Amendment decision in New York State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. 2111 (2022), joined by Justice Scalia, provided a roadmap to the resolution of this matter in Friedman v. City of Highland Park, Ill., 577 U.S. 1039 (2015) (Thomas, J., dissenting from denial of cert.). In that case Justice Thomas examined an arms ban that was for practical purposes identical to the laws challenged here. He noted millions of Americans own AR-style semiautomatic rifles for lawful purposes, including self-defense and target shooting. Id. (Thomas, J., dissenting). He then wrote: “Under our precedents, that is all that is needed for citizens to have a right under the Second Amendment to keep such weapons.” Id. (emphasis added).

When it comes to bans of commonly possessed arms, this is Heller’s simple rule. This is a case involving an arms ban, and therefore it turns on Heller’s simple rule. Is the banned firearm hardware commonly owned by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes? “If the answer [is] ‘yes,’ the test is over.” Duncan v. Becerra (“Duncan III”), 366 F. Supp. 3d 1131, 1142 (S.D. Cal. 2019)¹. Plaintiffs proved that millions of the banned arms are possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes. Thus, the answer to the “hardware” test is “yes.” The test is over. The challenged laws are unconstitutional. It is that simple.

Unfortunately, the district court did not apply Heller’s simple test. Instead, the district court held that the challenged laws are constitutional because the arms they ban are “particularly dangerous.” This was clear error because “[the Heller test] is a conjunctive test: A weapon may not be banned unless it is both dangerous and unusual.” Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411, 417 (2016) (Alito, J. concurring) (emphasis in the original). An arm that is commonly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes is, by definition, not unusual. Thus, such an arm cannot be both dangerous and unusual and therefore it cannot be subjected to a categorical ban. Heller, 554 U.S. at 629. It follows, that “the relative dangerousness of a weapon is irrelevant when the weapon belongs to a class of arms commonly used for lawful purposes.” Caetano, 577 U.S. at 418 (Alito, J. concurring).

¹ aff’d, 970 F.3d 1133 (9th Cir. 2020), reh’g en banc granted, opinion vacated, 988 F.3d 1209 (9th Cir. 2021), and on reh’g en banc sub nom. Duncan v. Bonta, 19 F.4th 1087 (9th Cir. 2021), cert. granted, judgment vacated, 213 L. Ed. 2d 1109, 142 S. Ct. 2895 (2022), and vacated and remanded, 49 F.4th 1228 (9th Cir. 2022), and rev’d and remanded sub nom. Duncan v. Bonta, 19 F.4th 1087 (9th Cir. 2021), and cert. granted, judgment vacated, 142 S. Ct. 2895 (2022).

Last June the Supreme Court held in New York State Rifle & Pistol Ass’n, Inc. v. Bruen, 142 S. Ct. 2111 (2022), that Second Amendment challenges are to be decided by applying a text informed by history test. Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2129–30. Moreover, the Court emphatically and repeatedly rejected the application of means-end scrutiny in Second Amendment cases. Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2126. Unfortunately, not only did the district court fail to apply Heller’s simple test, but also it compounded its error by engaging in the means-end analysis forbidden by Bruen. The district court engaged in a lengthy analysis of the governmental interest Defendant sought to achieve. Dkt. 63, pp. 17-30. The district court followed that discussion by holding that the challenged laws addressed those public safety concerns, and for that reason the laws are constitutional. Dkt. 63, p. 30. This, too, was clear error.

In summary, Plaintiffs made a strong showing of likely success on the merits based on Heller’s simple test. The district court failed to apply the Heller test. Instead, it erred by upholding the laws for a constitutionally irrelevant reason (“relative dangerousness”) and a reason forbidden by the Supreme Court (means-end scrutiny).

B. The Parties

Plaintiff National Association for Gun Rights (“NAGR”) is a nonprofit membership and donor-supported organization that seeks to defend the right of law-abiding individuals to keep and bear arms. Dkt. 48, p.2. NAGR has members who reside within the City and the State. Dkt. 48, p.2. NAGR represents the interests of its members who reside in the City and the State. Dkt.48, p.2.

Plaintiff Robert C. Bevis is a business owner in the City and a law-abiding citizen of the United States. Dkt. 48, p.2. Bevis owns and operates Plaintiff Law Weapons, Inc. d/b/a Law Weapons & Supply (“LWI”). Dkt. 48, p.2. LWI operates in the City and is engaged in the commercial sale of firearms. Dkt. 48, p.2. A substantial part of LWI’s business consists of the commercial sale of firearms and magazines that are banned by the challenged laws. Dkt. 48, p.2. Since the challenged laws went into effect a few weeks ago, LWI’s business has plummeted, and if the laws remain in force, it will go out of business. Dkt. 48, p.2.

Defendant City of Naperville passed the unconstitutional Ordinance last summer with an effective date of January 1, 2023. Dkt. 1, p.3. Defendant Arres is the City’s Chief of Police. In his Answer, Arres confirmed that he intends to enforce the unconstitutional Ordinance and State Law against Plaintiffs. Plaintiffs seek to enjoin Defendants from enforcing the challenged laws against them and their members. Dkt. 59, p.4.

B. The Challenged Laws

Plaintiffs challenge Illinois HB5471, which became effective on January 10, 2023, available at IL LEGIS 102-1116 (2022), 2022 Ill. Legis. Serv. P.A. 102-1116 (the “State Law”) and Chapter 19 of Title 3 of the Naperville Municipal Code (the “Ordinance”). The State Law bans certain semi-automatic firearms that it calls “assault weapons,” which are defined in 720 ILCS 5/24-1.9. The State Law also bans what it calls “large capacity ammunition feeding devices,” which are defined in 720 ILCS 5/24-1.10. Section 3-19-2 of the Ordinance bans the commercial sale of “assault weapons,” which are defined in a way similar to the State Law. Ordinance, Section 3-19-1.

C. The Heller/Bruen Standard

In New York State Rifle and Pistol Association v. Bruen, 521 U.S. 898 (2022), the Court rejected the two-part balancing test for Second Amendment challenges that several circuit courts adopted in the wake of Heller and McDonald v. City of Chicago, Ill., 561 U.S. 742

(2010). Instead, it reiterated Heller's text informed by history standard. That standard has two parts:

[T]he standard for applying the Second Amendment is as follows:

[Step One:] When the Second Amendment's plain text covers an individual's conduct, the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct.

[Step Two:] The government must then justify its regulation by demonstrating that it is consistent with the Nation's historical tradition of firearm regulation.

Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2129–30.

“Bruen makes clear that the first step is one based solely on the text of the Second Amendment to determine if it presumptively protects an individual's conduct – a presumption that the [government] can then rebut with history and tradition.” U.S. v. Harrison, 2023 WL 1771138 *4 (W.D. Okla. 2023) (emphasis in original). If the text “presumptively protects [Plaintiffs'] conduct, the burden shifts to the [government] to demonstrate that [its absolute ban] is ‘consistent with the Nation's historical tradition of firearm regulation.’” U.S. v. Harrison, supra, *5.

D. Plaintiffs Easily Met Their Burden Under Step One

Plaintiffs seek to keep and bear bearable arms that are banned by the challenged laws. Dkt. 71-1. “[T]he Second Amendment extends, prima facie, to all instruments that constitute bearable arms.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2132. Therefore, because the Second Amendment's plain text covers Plaintiffs' conduct – i.e., possessing certain bearable arms – “the Constitution presumptively protects that conduct.” Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2126. Thus, Plaintiffs have easily met their burden. The banned arms are presumptively protected by the Constitution. That Plaintiffs seek to keep and bear bearable arms was not disputed in the district court.

E. It is Impossible for the City to Meet its Burden Under Step Two

The challenged laws categorically ban certain commonly possessed arms (as shown in detail below). Under Heller, absolute bans of commonly held firearms are “categorically unconstitutional.” Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F.3d 684, 703 (7th Cir. 2011). (“Both Heller and McDonald suggest that broadly prohibitory laws restricting the core Second Amendment right – like the handgun bans at issue in those cases ... are categorically unconstitutional.”). Therefore, it is impossible for the City to carry its burden under step two of the Heller/Bruen test. The reason for this is apparent from Heller itself – there is no historical analogue to such a ban. “[A]fter considering ‘founding-era historical precedent,’ including ‘various restrictive laws in the colonial period,’ and finding that none was analogous to the District’s ban, Heller concluded that the handgun ban was unconstitutional.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2131.

In summary, the complete absence of regulations even remotely analogous to D.C.’s absolute ban allowed Bruen to characterize the Heller historical inquiry as “relatively simple.” Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2132. It was simple because, under Heller, absolute bans of commonly held firearms are, in Ezell’s words, “categorically unconstitutional.”² See also People v. Webb, 2019 IL 122951, 131 N.E.3d 93 (absolute bans of commonly possessed arms are “necessarily” unconstitutional).³

F. The Banned Firearms are Commonly Possessed by Law-Abiding Citizens

At least 20 million semi-automatic firearms such as those defined as “assault weapons” in the challenged laws are owned by millions of American citizens who use those firearms for lawful purposes. Declaration of James Curcuruto ¶ 6. Dkt. 10-3. The banned rifles are perfectly legal to build, buy, and own under federal law and the laws of over 40 states. Miller v. Bonta, 542 F. Supp. 3d 1009, 1022 (S.D. Cal. 2021), vacated and remanded on other grounds, 2022 WL 3095986 (9th Cir. Aug. 1, 2022). The AR-15 in particular, the quintessential arm banned by the State, is America’s “most popular semi-automatic rifle.” Heller v. D.C., 670 F.3d 1244, 1287 (D.C. Cir. 2011) (Kavanaugh, J., dissenting) (“Heller II”). And in recent years it has been “the best-selling rifle type in the United States,” Nicholas J. Johnson, Supply Restrictions at the Margins of Heller and the Abortion Analogue, 60 HASTINGS L.J. 1285, 1296 (2009). These rifles are the second-most common type of firearm sold, at approximately 20% of all firearm sales, behind only semiautomatic handguns. See National Shooting Sports Foundation, Inc., 2021 Firearms Retailer Survey Report, 9, available at <https://bit.ly/3gWhI8E> (last visited Jan. 30, 2023).⁴

² The Court failed to apply this principle in Friedman, which is why Justice Thomas criticized that decision so vociferously.

There is a venerable tradition in this country of lawful private ownership of semiautomatic rifles such as those banned by the challenged laws. The Supreme Court has held as much. In Staples, it concluded that semiautomatics, unlike machine guns, “traditionally have been widely accepted as lawful possessions.” Staples, 511 U.S. at 612. Semiautomatic rifles have been commercially available for over a century. See David B. Kopel, Rational Basis Analysis of “Assault Weapon” Prohibition, 20 J. CONTEMP. L. 381, 413 (1994).

In Kolbe v. Hogan, 849 F.3d 114 (4th Cir. 2017), abrogated on other grounds by Bruen, supra, Judge Traxler stated:

It is beyond any reasonable dispute from the record before us that a statistically significant number of American citizens possess semiautomatic rifles (and magazines holding more than 10 rounds) for lawful purposes. Between 1990 and 2012, more than 8 million AR- and AK- platform semiautomatic rifles alone were manufactured in or imported into the United States. In 2012, semiautomatic sporting rifles accounted for twenty percent of all retail firearms sales... In terms of absolute numbers, these statistics lead to the unavoidable conclusion that popular semiautomatic rifles such as the AR-15 are commonly possessed by American citizens for lawful purposes within the meaning of Heller.

Id., 849 F.3d at 153 (Traxler, J., dissenting) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted, emphasis added).

In 2021, a professional survey firm conducted a comprehensive assessment of firearms ownership and use patterns in America. William English, 2021 National Firearms Survey: Updated Analysis (hereinafter, “English”), 1, available at <https://bit.ly/3yPfoHw> (last visited Jan. 30, 2023). The survey was administered to a representative sample of approximately 54,000 U.S. residents aged 18 and over, and it identified 16,708 gun owners. The survey found that 30.2% of gun owners, about 24.6 million people, have owned an AR-15 or similarly styled rifle. English, 33. In summary, under any reasonable analysis, the firearms banned by the challenged laws are commonly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes, just as Justice Thomas asserted in Friedman.

G. The Banned Magazines are Commonly Possessed by Law-Abiding Citizens

In Jackson v. City and County of San Francisco, 746 F.3d 953 (9th Cir. 2014), the Court noted that while recognizing the Second Amendment does not explicitly protect ammunition, “without bullets, the right to bear arms would be meaningless.” Id. At 967. Jackson thus held that “‘the right to possess firearms for protection implies a corresponding right’ to obtain the bullets necessary to use them.” Id. In Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F.3d 684, 704 (7th Cir. 2011), this Court also noted that the Second Amendment protects that which is necessary for the right to be effective. Justice Thomas cited both Jackson and Ezell with approval in Luis v. United States, 578 U.S. 5 (2016), in which he explained that constitutional rights implicitly protect those closely related items necessary to their exercise. Id., 578 U.S. at 26-27 (Thomas, J., concurring).

Magazines are arms protected by the Second Amendment because they are necessary for a semi-automatic firearm to be effective. Indeed, they are what makes semi-automatic fire possible. Therefore, in Fyock v. City of Sunnyvale, 25 F. Supp. 3d 1267 (N.D. Cal. 2014), the Court found that magazines are “arms” within the meaning of the Second Amendment because “they are integral components to vast categories of guns.” Id. at 1276. And in affirming that decision, the Ninth Circuit held that the “law supports the conclusion that there must also be some corollary, albeit not unfettered, right to possess the magazines necessary to render [certain] firearms operable.” Fyock v. Sunnyvale, 779 F.3d 991, 998 (9th Cir. 2015).

And at least 150 million magazines such as those banned by the State Law (i.e., with a capacity greater than ten rounds) are owned by law-abiding American citizens, who use those magazines for lawful purposes. Declaration of James Curcuruto ¶ 7. Dkt. 10-3. According to the English survey, 48.0% of gun owners, about 39 million people, have owned magazines that hold over 10 rounds, and hundreds of millions of such magazines have been owned. English, 20. There is nothing surprising about that result. Many of the most popular semi-automatic rifles are manufactured with standard magazines holding more than ten rounds. See, e.g., David B. Kopel, The History of Firearm Magazines and Magazine Prohibitions, 78 and ALB. L. REV. 849, 859 (2015) (“The most popular rifle in American history is the AR-15 platform, a semiautomatic rifle with standard magazines of twenty or thirty rounds.”). Indeed, over three quarters of modern sporting rifle magazines in the country have a capacity of more than 10 rounds. See Modern Sporting Rifle Comprehensive Consumer Report, at 31, NSSF (July 14, 2022), available at <https://bit.ly/3GLmErS> (last visited Jan. 30, 2023). See also, Kolbe, supra (“It is beyond any reasonable dispute” that magazines holding more than 10 rounds are commonly possessed for lawful purposes.) (Traxler, J., dissenting).

G. Summary

Plaintiffs have met their burden under the first step of the Heller/Bruen analysis. Thus, the bearable arms they seek to possess are presumptively protected by the Second Amendment. The evidence is overwhelming that the arms are commonly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes. Therefore, the City cannot meet its burden under the second step of the test. The arms are owned by millions of law-abiding Americans. Under the Supreme Court's precedents, "that is all that is needed for citizens to have a right under the Second Amendment to keep such weapons." Friedman, supra (Thomas, J., dissenting from denial of cert.). Therefore, Plaintiffs have made a strong showing of probable success on the merits.

II. The City's Absolute Ban on Commercial Sales is Unconstitutional

"The right to possess firearms for protection implies a corresponding right to acquire and maintain proficiency in their use . . ." Ezell v. City of Chicago ("Ezell I"), 651 F.3d 684, 704 (7th Cir. 2011) (emphasis added). Obviously, the right to keep and bear arms would be meaningless if citizens were unable to acquire arms in the first place. This is why the City's absolute ban on the sale of commonly possessed firearms is unconstitutional. In Bruen, the Court cited with approval the Third Circuit's decision in Drummond v. Robinson Twp., 9 F.4th 217 (3rd Cir. 2021). Id., 142 S.Ct. at 2133. In Drummond, the Court held that laws "prohibiting the commercial sale of firearms would be untenable in light of Heller." Id., 9 F.4th at 227 (internal citation and quotation marks omitted).

III. The District Court Properly Held That Friedman is No Longer Good Law

In Friedman v. City of Highland Park, Illinois, 784 F.3d 406 (7th Cir. 2015), the Court announced a unique three-part test to determine Second Amendment questions. Under this test, a court asks: whether a regulation [1] bans weapons that were common at the time of ratification or [2] those that have some reasonable relationship to the preservation or efficiency of a well-regulated militia and [3] whether law-abiding citizens retain adequate means of self-defense. Id., 784 F.3d at 410. As noted, Justice Thomas criticized this holding harshly. That is because this test is not supported by Heller. Indeed, two of the three prongs of the test are specifically foreclosed by Heller as the Court made plain in Bruen.

[1] The Second Amendment’s “reference to ‘arms’ does not apply only to those arms in existence in the 18th century.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2132 (cleaned up). Indeed, Heller characterized this argument as “bordering on the frivolous.” Heller, 554 U.S. at 582.

[2] The Second Amendment’s operative clause “does not depend on service in the militia.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2127, citing Heller, 554 U.S. at 592.

[3] As for the third prong, “[T]he right to bear other weapons is ‘no answer’ to a ban on the possession of protected arms.” Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411, 420 (2016), quoting Heller, 554 U.S. at 629.

Thus, the district court was correct when it held that “Friedman cannot be reconciled with Bruen.” Dkt. 63, p.16.

IV. The District Court Erred in Four Critical Respects

A. The District Court Failed to Apply the Heller Common Use Test

The challenged laws ban arms commonly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes. Heller’s central holding is that a categorical ban on arms held by law-abiding citizens is unconstitutional. Id., 554 U.S. at 625. One would suppose that the district court would apply the Heller test or, failing that, at least explain why it believed the test is not applicable. The district court did neither. It erred when it simply ignored Heller’s central holding. Nowhere in its opinion does it apply, or even acknowledge, Heller’s holding in this regard.

B. The District Court Misunderstood Heller’s “Dangerous and Unusual” Test

Under Heller, “dangerous and unusual” weapons may be banned. Heller, 554 U.S. at 627 (emphasis added). Here, apparently relying on this passage from Heller, the district court held that “[b]ecause assault weapons are particularly dangerous weapons and high-capacity magazines are particularly dangerous weapon accessories, their regulation accords with history and tradition.” Dkt. 63, p.30. This is error. The district court misinterpreted Heller. Importantly, “[the Heller test] is a conjunctive test: A weapon may not be banned unless it is both dangerous and unusual.” Caetano v. Massachusetts, 577 U.S. 411, 417 (2016) (Alito, J., concurring) (emphasis in the original). An arm that is commonly possessed by law-abiding citizens for lawful purposes is, by definition, not unusual. Thus, such an arm cannot be both dangerous and unusual and therefore it cannot be subjected to a categorical ban. Heller, 554 U.S. at 629. It follows, that “the relative dangerousness of a weapon is irrelevant when the weapon belongs to a class of arms commonly used for lawful purposes.” Caetano, 577 U.S. at 418.

In summary, under Heller, the nation’s history of firearms regulation supports a law banning a “dangerous and unusual” weapon. Conversely, nothing in Heller suggests that the nation’s history of firearms regulation supports a law banning a weapon commonly used for lawful purposes because it is “particularly dangerous.” This district court did not recognize this critical distinction, and it erred when it upheld the challenged laws merely because the banned arms are, in its view, particularly dangerous.

C. The District Court Failed to Distinguish Between “Ban” and “Regulation”

The district court held that because, in its view, the banned weapons are particularly dangerous, “their regulation accords with history and tradition.” Dkt. 63, p.30. (emphasis added). The word “regulation” is misplaced. This is a ban, not a regulation, and Heller distinguishes between laws that ban arms and laws that regulate arms. The flaw in the district court's historical analysis is that it has failed to distinguish between the two types of laws. Arms typically possessed by law-abiding citizens may not be banned. Id., 554 U.S. at 628. But Heller held that various regulations – short of bans – such as prohibitions on concealed carry, possession of firearms by felons, possession of firearms in sensitive places, and conditions on the commercial sales of weapons, are legitimate. Id., 554 U.S. at 627-28. The reason for this dichotomy is that nothing in the Nation's history and tradition of firearm laws, “remotely burden[s] the right of self-defense as much as an absolute ban.” Id., 554 U.S. at 632. Whereas regulations that do not burden the right anywhere near as much as a ban may be “fairly supported by [] historical tradition.” Id., 554 U.S. at 628. Thus, the district court erred in failing to distinguish between the two types of laws.

D. This District Court Erred When It Engaged in Means-End Scrutiny

This district court properly recognized that Bruen rejected means-end scrutiny as a mode of analysis in the context of the Second Amendment. Dkt. 63, p.17. Therefore, it did not call its analysis by that name. But the Supreme Court also warned courts to be careful not to allow means-end analysis to impact their analysis in other, less obvious ways. In particular, Bruen stated that “courts may [not] engage in independent means-end scrutiny under the guise of an analogical inquiry.” Id., 142 S. Ct. at 2133 n. 7. Unfortunately, the district court erred when it did just that. Pages 26 to 30 of its Order recite the district court's public safety concerns implicated by the semi-automatic rifles and magazines banned by the challenged laws. Dkt 63, pp. 26-30. The district court followed that discussion by stating that the challenged laws addressed these public safety concerns, and for that reason the laws are constitutional. Dkt 63, p. 30. Indeed, the district court went further going so far as claiming constitutional rights were irrelevant to “irreparable harm” as a backdoor means of instituting the means-end test to evade the Second Amendment rights at stake in this case. Dkt 63, p.31.

But it is just this sort of means-end scrutiny that may not be used to justify a firearms law. “To justify its regulation, the government may not simply posit that the regulation promotes an important interest. Rather, the government must demonstrate that the regulation is consistent with this Nation’s historical tradition of firearm regulation.” Bruen, 142 S. Ct. at 2126 (emphasis added). Thus, a court may not identify an important governmental interest (such as public safety) and uphold the challenged laws on the ground that the means the State and the City chose further that governmental end.

V. The Other Injunction Factors Are Met

A. The Factors Are Met on the Basis of the Constitutional Violation

In Higher Soc’y of Indiana v. Tippecanoe Cnty., Indiana, 858 F.3d 1113 (7th Cir. 2017), the Seventh Circuit held that in a constitutional case like this one, “the analysis begins and ends with the likelihood of success on the merits of [that] claim.” Id., 858 F.3d at 1116 (internal quotation omitted). See also Korte v. Sebelius, 735 F.3d 654, 666 (7th Cir. 2013) (same). But even if one were to examine the other three factors, the result is the same.

The loss of Second Amendment rights necessarily establishes irreparable harm. In Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F.3d 684 (7th Cir. 2011), the Plaintiffs established probable success on the merits of their Second Amendment claim. The Court held no further showing of irreparable harm was required because “[w]hen an alleged deprivation of a constitutional right is involved, most courts hold that no further showing of irreparable injury is necessary.” Id., 651 F.3d at 699, quoting Charles Alan Wright, et al, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2948.1 (2d ed. 1995).

As for the “balance of harm” and “public interest” prongs, injunctions protecting constitutional freedoms “are always in the public interest.” Am. C.L. Union of Illinois v. Alvarez, 679 F.3d 583, 590 (7th Cir. 2012). And if the moving party establishes a likelihood of success on the merits, the balance of harms favors granting preliminary injunctive relief. Id. In summary, the probable success on the merits prong is determinative. Plaintiffs have established their constitutional rights are violated by the challenged laws; therefore, they have necessarily established the irreparable harm, public interest, and balance of harms prongs.

B. The Factors Are Met Based on Law Weapons, Inc.’s Extreme Financial Duress

Plaintiffs LWI as well as its customers are being prohibited from exercising their Second Amendment rights, which means LWI will be forced out of business. Dkt. 71-1. 85% of the firearms LWI sells are banned under the Naperville ordinance and State law. Id., ¶ 12. Cash reserves have been depleted, and as a result, LWI has had to lay off employees and ask Bevis’ family to work without pay. Id., ¶ 13. Bevis has extended his personal credit, missed personal payments like home and car payments, maxed his credit limits, and taken out loans to pay the monthly bills. Id. LWI will not be able to abide by the terms of its 15-year commercial lease for the business real property, as well as the equipment leases and inventory, if these bans remain in effect any longer. Id. In short, LWI will be put out of business if these laws are enforced. Id.

In Cavel Int’l, Inc. v. Madigan, 500 F.3d 544, 546 (7th Cir. 2007), the Court held that the plaintiffs “made a compelling case that it needs the injunction pending appeal to avert serious irreparable harm—the uncompensated death of its business.” See also, Dumanian v. Schwartz, 2022 WL 2714994, at *14 (N.D. Ill. 2022), (“A likelihood of lost business is a form of irreparable injury because it is difficult to ‘pin[] down what business has been or will be lost.”), quoting Life Spine, Inc. v. Aegis Spine, Inc., 8 F.4th 531, 545 (7th Cir. 2021) (quoting Hess Newmark Owens Wolf, Inc. v. Owens, 415 F.3d 630, 632–33 (7th Cir. 2005)); Gateway E. Ry. Co. v. Terminal R.R. Ass’n of St. Louis, 35 F.3d 1134, 1140 (7th Cir. 1994) (“[A] damages remedy may be inadequate if it comes ‘too late to save plaintiff’s business’”) (quoting Roland Mach. Co. v. Dresser Indus., Inc., 749 F.2d 380, 386 (7th Cir. 1984)).

The “balance of harms” and “public interest” prongs merge when the government is the defendant. Eli Lilly & Co. v. Cochran, 526 F. Supp. 3d 393, 409 (S.D. Ind. 2021), citing Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 435 (2009). In addition to the reasons identified above, these interests favor granting relief, because the State is not harmed by an injunction in this court, because the law is already subject to an injunction in another court, as this Court noted in its Order. Moreover, this is not a case where Plaintiffs have sought an injunction against a law of long standing. Neither of the challenged laws was effective until 2023. Therefore, an injunction would preserve the status quo. And a “preliminary injunction is often said to be designed to maintain the status quo pending completion of the litigation.” Praefke Auto Elec. & Battery Co. v. Tecumseh Prod. Co., 255 F.3d 460, 464 (7th Cir. 2001).

C. The Injunction Pending Appeal Must Apply to More Than Just the Plaintiffs

As the challenge to both laws is a facial challenge, the injunction can cover parties beyond the litigants in this case. Smith v. Executive Dir. of Indiana War Memorials, 742 F. 3d 282, 290 (“Because Smith has a reasonable likelihood of showing that the policy is unconstitutional both as it was applied to him and as it applies to individuals and small groups generally, the preliminary injunction should prohibit its enforcement against any individual or small group”).⁵

Accordingly, for this injunction pending appeal to truly avert irreparable harm and be effective, it must of necessity apply to all affected by the City ordinance and State law. Specifically, the injunction must enjoin enforcement of both laws against purchasers of the banned firearms as well as those who sell them. Otherwise, irreparable harm will still accrue to businesses such as Plaintiff LWI as they will still not be able to sell the banned firearms if those purchasing them are subject to enforcement of these laws against such purchases.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs have met all of the criteria for an injunction pending appeal and respectfully request the Court to enter such injunction forthwith.

⁵ While Smith is a First Amendment case, Second Amendment cases are treated the same as First Amendment cases for purposes of constitutional analysis. Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F. 3d 684, 697 (7th Cir. 2011) (“The loss of a First Amendment right is frequently presumed to cause irreparable harm based on ‘the intangible nature of the benefits flowing from the exercise of those rights; and the fear that, if those rights are not jealously safeguarded, persons will be deterred, even if imperceptibly, from exercising those rights in the future.’” (Citations omitted.) The Second Amendment protects similarly “intangible and unquantifiable interests,” id., at 699).

DECLARATION OF JAMES CURCURUTO

1. My name is James Curcuruto.

2. I received my associate's degree in business administration from the State University of New York at Cobleskill in 1991 and my bachelor's degree in business management from the University of North Carolina at Wilmington in 1993. My 30-year business work history has focused primarily on sales, marketing, advertising, research, and analysis. I am currently the Executive Director of Outdoor Stewards of Conservation Foundation.

3. From November 2009 until January 2021, I was the Director, Research and Market Development, at the National Shooting Sports Foundation, Inc. (the "NSSF"). The NSSF, formed in 1961, is the trade association for the firearms, ammunition, hunting, and recreational shooting sports industry. Its mission is to promote, protect and preserve hunting and the shooting sports. The NSSF has a membership of 8,000 manufacturers, distributors, firearms retailers, shooting ranges, sportsmen's organizations, and publishers.

4. In my position as Director, Research and Market Development at the NSSF, I was responsible for most of the research activities at NSSF, and I directed the activities of an internal research manager as well as several outside companies retained to conduct research and gather market and consumer information useful to NSSF members.

5. Under my direction, dozens of informational reports and studies focusing on industry topics and trends, including firearms, ammunition, target shooting, and hunting, were released to the NSSF member base, and many NSSF reports were shared outside the organization as well. Data from these releases has been referenced many times in endemic, non-endemic, online and print newspaper and magazine articles, used in corporate 10K reports, and mentioned in other media. I have authored and provided information for several articles published in trade magazines.

6. Plaintiffs' counsel has asked me to provide an opinion on (1) the prevalence of AR15 and similar firearms in American society, including rates of ownership of such firearms by law-abiding citizens; and (2) the prevalence of firearm magazines capable of holding more than ten rounds of ammunition in American society, including rates of ownership of such magazines by law-abiding citizens.

7. In summary, (1) between 1990 – 2021, more than 20 million AR-platform rifles have been manufactured in the United States and are owned by millions of persons in the United States and, (2) there are at least one hundred fifty million magazines of a capacity of more than ten rounds in possession of American citizens, commonly used for various lawful purposes including, but not limited to, recreational and competitive target shooting, self-defense, collecting and hunting.

I, James Curcuruto, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, declare under penalty of perjury that I have reviewed the foregoing, that I am competent to testify in this matter, and that the facts contained therein are true and correct

DECLARATION OF ROBERT C. BEVIS IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF PENDING APPEAL

I, Robert C. Bevis, Plaintiff in the above-captioned suit, state the following under oath as if testifying in court:

1. I am a business owner in the City of Naperville, Illinois, and a law-abiding citizen of the United States.
2. The business I own in Naperville is (Plaintiff) Law Weapons, Inc. d/b/a Law Weapons & Supply, which is a duly registered Illinois corporation and Federally Licensed Firearm Dealer, which operates in Naperville, and is actively engaged in the commercial sale of firearms, including the most commonly owned semi-automatic rifles the AR-15.
3. On August 16, 2022, Naperville passed an ordinance banning the commercial sale of the most commonly owned semi-automatic rifles, and on January 10, 2023, the State of Illinois passed a similar law statewide.
4. I and as well as my customers desire to exercise our Second Amendment rights to acquire the firearms banned by the City of Naperville and the State of Illinois within the City of Naperville for lawful purposes, including, but not limited to, the defense of our homes and personal protection.

5. The state law became effective upon passage on January 10, 2023, and the Naperville ordinance (which was stayed by agreement) became effective on February 17, 2023, when this Court denied our motion for preliminary injunction and temporary restraining order.
6. The Naperville ordinance applies only to Federally Licensed Commercial gun dealers, but not to private sales by unlicensed parties, which discriminates against me as a licensed gun dealer as well as my business.
7. The State Law exempts from its ban certain class of people because of their employment status, namely peace officers, active and retired law enforcement officers (including wardens and parole officers), active-duty only members of the Armed Forces of the United States and Illinois National Guard, and security companies and the guards they employ, but does not even exempt sitting or retired judges or people like myself (I am a Federally Licensed Firearm Dealer, a Certified Master Gunsmith, and an Illinois Licensed Private Detective and Law Enforcement Firearm Instructor licensed by the Illinois Department of Financial and Professional Regulation).
8. This ordinance will make the public less safe by limiting the ability of the public to protect themselves in the precious time it would take for police to respond to any threat to the public.
9. Law Weapons, Inc. has served the Citizens of Illinois, Law Enforcement, Security Companies and Guards as well as the FBI with training and equipment since it moved into in Naperville in 2014.

10. I as well as my customers are being prohibited now from exercising our Second Amendment rights in this fashion, which means I and my business will be forced out of business, but even worse, the citizens of Naperville (and now the State of Illinois) will be left as sitting ducks for criminals who will still get the banned firearms to accomplish their nefarious purpose, as history has confirmed.
11. I, the owner of Law Weapons, Inc., supported by my family, my staff, and a legion of friends and supporters, have been vigorously fighting against the Naperville ban, and now the State ban, since the beginning.
12. 85% of the firearms my business sells are banned under the Naperville ordinance and state law. Since the Naperville ordinance passed in August 2022, my business has seen a substantial continuing drop in sales, as many loyal customers aware of these laws assume we are closing and have begun buying the banned weapons from other dealers in municipalities and states where such sales are legal.
13. Further, cash reserves have been depleted, and as a result, I have had to lay off employees, ask my family to not accept paychecks, extended our credit, missing personal payments like home and car, maxing credit limits, taken out loans to pay the monthly bills and will not be able to abide by the terms of my 15-year commercial lease for the real property Law Weapons Dealership in Naperville as well as the equipment leases and inventory, if these bans remain in effect any longer. In short, Law Weapons, Inc. will be put out of business if these laws are enforced.
14. This is not an issue limited to Law Weapons, Inc., in Naperville; those opposing the Second Amendment right to keep and bear arms have banned firearms throughout the State of Illinois, using Naperville's ordinance as a model.

15. Thus, it is essential to enjoin ordinances such as the one enacted in Naperville and statutes such as the one enacted in Illinois as unconstitutional violations of the Second Amendment to the United States Constitution, at least pending the appeal of the denial of our Motion for Preliminary Injunction and TRO, so among other reasons my business and livelihood do not become a nullity.

16. Further, it is necessary to enjoin enforcement of these laws against my customers, for the reasons stated above, as any relief to me would be meaningless if not applied to my customers.

I, Robert C. Bevis, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, declare under penalty of perjury that I have reviewed the foregoing, that I am competent to testify in this matter, and that the facts contained therein are true and correct.
