QUESTIONS PRESENTED

The district court dismissed this case through a sua sponte rule 12(b)6 motion. This decision followed the court's repeated refusal to stamp and sign the summons during my several attempts, citing an internal memo from the judge stating that no summons should be issued. When I requested that this internal memo be filed in the docket during a phone call with the clerk, the district court, acting on its own initiative, ordered the dismissal of the case for failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. The court demanded an amendment to the complaint to articulate a cognizable claim. Fourteen days later, the district court officially dismissed the case, and no defendant had been served process by the time the case was dismissed. The court of appeals affirmed the district court's dismissal but provided a different rationale, stating that the complaint improperly sued the former state judge, despite the fact that the complaint clearly identified Era Living LLC corporation, as a defendant.

Whether a district court itself can invoke a motion to dismiss sua sponte under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure in a civil case that is nonfrivolous, no malicious, and not lacking jurisdiction before the defendant has been served with the process?

PARTIES TO THE PROCEEDING

Petitioner Symon Mandawala was the plaintiff in the district court and appellant in the Ninth Circuit.

Respondents ERA LIVING LLC Defendant and appellee in the Ninth Circuit. Never appear because the district court refused to issue the summon and the District court sou sponte dismiss the case

Respondent ERA LIVING LLC was defendant in Washington superior court.

RELATED PROCEEDINGS

This case arises from the following proceedings:

District court overstepped using Section 1915(e) dismissing non-frivolous or non-Malice by invoking Rule 12(b)6 sua sponte motion to dismiss

A writ of mandamus is properly granted to correct the "usurpation of judicial power." In re Link A Media Devices Corp., 662 F.3d 1221, 1222 (Fed. Cir. 2011). Specific to this case, the use "judicial haste" by applying 28 U.S.C 1915 to the premature case that a defendant was not served the process. see Dioguardi v. Durning, 139 F.2d 774, 775 (2d Cir. 1944) 28 U.S.C 1915 governs the district court on an indigent litigant. There must be exceptional circumstance the court to exercise section 1915 to the party. Although "[n]o comprehensive definition of exceptional circumstances is practical," Branch v. Cole, supra, 686 F.2d at 266 (5th Cir. 1982) It requires the litigant to demonstrate unable to pay court fee(s) by (1) requesting the court through motion with supporting Affidavits or (2) by the court itself consulting or consent with indigent litigant about the case proceed with section 1915. Failure by the district to afford plaintiffs an opportunity to address the court's sua sponte section 1915(e) motion to dismiss is, by itself, grounds for reversal. See California Diversified Promotions v. Musick, 505 F.2d 278 (9th Cir. 1974); Literature, Inc. v. Quinn, 482 F.2d 372 (1st Cir. 1973); Dodd v. Spokane County, Washington, 393 F.2d 330 (9th Cir. 1968).

Dismissal of a case with section 1915

Despite the fact that neither of the two interpretations of section 1915 (e) by different US circuits are not align with my case, they were used to dismiss my case. This conflict between the interpretations, however, is a matter of concern. The Sixth Circuit and others, assert that 'regardless of the fees paid, the court can dismiss a lawsuit if the plaintiff is incarcerated.' This ruling, as seen in Floyd v. US postal service., 105 F. 3d 274 (6th Cir. 1997), stands in stark contrast to the perspective of the Ninth and others. "Any claim that has a fee paid should be protected from dismissal." This is a point that has been upheld in Franklin v. Murphy 745 F.2d 1221 (9th Cir. 1984) and is of utmost importance in this case.

US suprema's court Standard requirement for dismissing a case under section 1915C is frivolous

(A), Frivolous and Malicious dismissal Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 66 S.Ct. 773, 90 L.Ed. 939 (1946), the Supreme Court held that a trial court cannot dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim until it has "assumed (B)jurisdiction over the controversy." In this case, the district court explicitly dismissed the complaint solary *** because "it ment-

*** Still, if it be assumed that the district court did proceed under section 1915(e), for the reasons stated below, and with due regard to the broad discretionary power vested in a district court acting under section 1915(e) to dismiss a forma pauperis proceeding as frivolous, it was error to dismiss this action as frivolous. because the complaint accompanied by state district court docket exhibits showing the state court setting the hearing on July 16, 2019 to the motion to dismiss that was not filed (ghost motion) until July 26, 2019. see Infra 13a -conti

-ion conspiracy to deprive plaintiff's right to a fair state court proceeding involved now former state judge". Yet ruling was made before any adverse party was joined in the litigation and rested solely on the face of My complaint. It would appear, therefore, that the Court had not assumed jurisdiction within the meaning of Bell v. Hood Id Frivolous or malicious. Thus, dismissal of the action was premature.

In dismissing the complaint, the district court did not state that the action is frivolous or malicious, thereby invoking 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e). Instead, the court analyzed the complaint, cited authority and held, in effect, that the complaint does not state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Thus, the court, in practical effect, invoked on its own motion Rule 12(b)(6), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. This, the court had the right to do if the proper procedural steps were taken and if the determination is correct on the merits. The district court overstepped in both respects. There were two procedural deficiencies: (1) The court did not permit issuance and service of

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

A. Factual background

I filed an original complaint regarding this cause of action in the District Court of the Western District of Washington in Seattle on August 23, 2022. I submitted the original complaint along with a money order for $405.00 through USPS mail. Following this, I requested the court's permission to serve a copy of the complaint and summons to Era Living via certified mail with return receipt requested, as this method of service is permitted in Washington state. However, the District Court denied my request to use USPS certified mail with return receipt requested as proof of service. It's important to note that Wash. Sup. Ct. Civ. R. 4(J) states that "the rule does not exclude the use of other forms of process authorized by law." Furthermore, RCW 23.95.450(2) specifically authorizes serving defendants using USPS and other couriers.

I called the district court clerk's office several times to request a summon to return to me for insurance. I even requested in writing and sent more copies of summons for the clerk to stamp and sign as required in Fed.R.Cv.P 4(b): "on or after filing a complaint, the plaintiff may present summons to the clerk for signature and seal..... the clerk must sign, seal, and issue it to the plaintiff for service of process to the defendant" Contrast to Fed.R.Cv.P 4b, the clerk on each time I phoned their office, they responded that "the Judge left an internal notice to the clerk not to issue the summon to me." After I demanded that the judge's notice should be docketed, the district court instead dismissed the original complaint, stating that it failed to state the claim for relief upon which the court may grant because my original complaint stated that Era Living conspired with an individual with judicial immunity to deprive my 14 the amendment constitution rights. The injustice of the conspiracy, which was significantly fueled by an ex-parte meeting to schedule a motion hearing, which had not even been verbally filed in court, was perpetuated by now-retired state judge Laura Inveen, who had judicial immunity. After completing the unopposed Appellant brief, the appeal citation remains blank because the district court clerk refused to provide a copy. On April 2, 2024, the Panel of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the district court's decision to dismiss the case, primarily on the grounds that I had sued the judge. Despite my complaint clearly identifying Era Living as a private entity, the appellate court should have noticed that the summons to Era Living were never returned to me for service. See infra 9a The Ninth Circuit referred to the record in the appeals, incorrectly stating that I had sued the judge. It is important to note that this is the same record the district court refused to provide me.

On April 11, 2023, the district court ordered me to amend my original complaint within 14 days while refusing to return the summon copy. The order specified that my amended complaint must present a cognizable claim for relief; otherwise, under § 1915e, the court would dismiss the action. Upon receiving the panel's decision on April 2, 2024, I took immediate action and submitted a petition for rehearing en banc eleven days later, on April 13, 2024. The purpose of this petition was to seek the consensus of all circuit judges on whether the district court in the Ninth Circuit should dismiss a paid private case before the defendant is served.

Although the circuit's response took 100 days a delay that significantly impacted the case—it was important to note that my submission of the petition for rehearing en banc on April 13, 2024, was prompt, occurring within eleven days, rather than over the fourteen allowed.

On the 13th day following the April 11 order, I submitted an amended complaint (dist.dkt 9 see also *Infra*10a) that corrected typographical errors without altering the pleadings or facts. However, while this amended complaint was in transit via USPS, the court, in a move that can only be described as unfair, ordered to dismiss the case on April 27, 2023, claiming that I had yet to file the amended complaint within the 14-day timeframe stipulated in the April 11 order. Upon receiving the panel's decision on April 2, 2024, I took immediate action and submitted a petition for rehearing en banc eleven days later, on April 13, 2024. The purpose of this petition was to seek the consensus of all circuit judges on whether the district court in the Ninth Circuit should dismiss a paid private case before the defendant is served. Although the circuit's response took 100 days—a delay that significantly impacted the case—it was important to note that my submission of the petition for rehearing en banc on April 13, 2024, was prompt, occurring within eleven days, rather than over the fourteen allowed.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

District court clerk refuse to return the signed and seal Summon for issuance demanding unless the complaint is amended

The case was dismissed following a series of events.

I repeatedly requested that the district court clerk mail me a signed and sealed summons. (see Appx 9) However, the clerk's refusal to do so significantly impacted the case, as they stated they would only return the summons if I amended my complaint. Consequently, I was unable to serve the process, (see infra 9a) which led to the dismissal of the case without the defendant's objection. I urge the court to order the district court to return the summons or refund the $405 court fee, as they represent Era Living themselves. Your intervention is crucial in this matter. The court of appeals agreed with the district court that my complaint alleged that Era Living conspired with the state judge to schedule a hearing for the motion to dismiss. See infra 11a-31a This scheduling occurred without any formal or verbal motion to dismiss being filed by the defendant beforehand. All of this unfolded because the district court clerk insisted on an amendment to the complaint while refusing to return the signed summons. See infra 9a or dist.dkt 1 and 6

Section 1915(e) Conflict interpretations by different circuit did not apply to my private lawsuit despite used it to dismiss the lawsuit

Despite the fact that neither of the two interpretations of section 1915 (e) by different US circuits align with my case, they were used to dismiss my case. This conflict between the interpretations, however, is a matter of concern.

The Sixth Circuit and others, assert that 'regardless of the fees paid, the court can dismiss a lawsuit if the plaintiff is incarcerated.' This ruling, as seen in Floyd v. US postal service., 105 F. 3d 274 (6th Cir.-

- 1997), stands in stark contrast to the perspective of the Ninth and others. "Any claim that has a fee paid should be protected from dismissal." This is a point that has been upheld in Franklin v. Murphy 745 F.2d 1221 (9th Cir. 1984) and is of utmost importance in this case.

It is disheartening to see that the Western District of Washington district court, which falls under your circuit and utilizes Franklin's interpretation, has disregarded this interpretation and dismissed the suit. Additionally, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has overlooked its own interpretation despite the $405 fee evidenced by receipt #S-28 (see infra 9a) in the docket the district court ruled this as Informa Paupera in an effort to help Era living. See Infra 6a

The District Court Clerk refused to Give Me Copy of Electronic Record in Appeals Court

After the district court dismissed the case, I filed a notice of appeal and requested records from the district court clerk. To my surprise, the clerk redirected me to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals clerk for the record, providing only a district court docket sheet.

It's important to note that when I contacted the district court clerk to return the signed summons, the clerk refused, stating that the judge had left a memo instructing them to tell me to amend the complaint; otherwise, I would not receive the summons back. However, the docket sheet did not include any notes or memos from the judge. See Infra 9a-10a

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals took one hundred days, from April 2, 2024, to July 10, 2024, to inform me that my petition for rehearing en banc, which I submitted on April 13, 2024, was untimely.

After receiving the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals panel's decision affirming (see infra 2a-3a) the district court's refusal to return the summons due to the complaint failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, this decision was made on April 2, 2024. see infra 2a-3a 4 On April 13, 2024, I mailed my petition for rehearing en banc. See Infra 32a attached USPS receipt dated April 13, 2024 to San Fransco.CA) I waited until July 10, 2024, when the court rejected my petition as untimely. See infra 1a the 11-day timeline from April 2, 2024, to April 13, 2024, is crucial in determining the timeliness of my petition, and I needed clarification on how it is considered more than 14 days(untimely). Upon thorough review, it became clear that the Ninth Circuit Court's 100-day delay appeared to be a strategic maneuver to consume the 90 days allowed for filing a petition for a writ of certiorari with the Supreme Court. This tactic, resulting in my petition for rehearing en banc being deemed untimely, constitutes a clear violation of Supreme Court Rule 13.3. I have retained the USPS receipts for this case, which serve as irrefutable evidence that my petition was submitted on time. This situation leads me to suspect that Era Living's indirect influence over the court officers' mirrors what occurred when the case was in Washington State court. I am left with a profound sense of injustice and a growing distrust
