Amend. 14, Section 1

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On Friday 18, 2002, officers from the Louisville, Kentucky police department responded to a call about a murder in an apartment unit. Inside the apartment, Renee Robinson's dead body lay on her bed. She had been beaten and strangled.

The jury heard testimony from the detective who interviewed Roach after his arrest. Roach told the detective that Robinson was looking for some dope and wanted to buy some from him. He said that he and Drake wanted to holla at her (see what she wanted). Roach said the three of them went to her apartment and drank alcohol. Robinson wanted to have sex in exchange for drugs. So, she asked Drake to leave so she and Roach could have sex. After some time had passed, Roach noticed Drake had left. Ten minutes later, after Roach and Robinson messed around Roach left the apartment. Roach did not admit that he was in Robinson's apartment when she was injured or deceased, or tried to clean up the apartment. (Drake's testimony will be fully developed in pleading).

As for physical evidence, there was no DNA from Roach or Drake at the crime scene. An expert testified that samples of blood taken from a rug, a wall, a pair of long underwear, and the base of the toilet in the apartment were consistent with genetic markers present in Robinson and Drake's blood, but not Roach.

REASON FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

Mr. Roach was found guilty of an offense in which he was never tried, the Sixth Circuit misapplied Jackson v. Virginia in evaluating the sufficiency of the evidence, and affirmed his conviction based on this untried charge.
