The Chief Justice said:

"We are in special session today to take note of the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of this building; and, as is not entirely uncommon, the Court is ahead of some of the lawyers who will be attending the proceedings.

We have the privilege of having three distinguished American lawyers here to take note of these events. We begin with Mr. Erwin Griswold, former Solicitor General of the United States and former Dean of Harvard Law School. Mr. Griswold.

MR. GRISWOLD: Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the Court:

This Court and its bar live in what I believe is called symbiotic relationship. Each benefits from the presence of the other. At any rate, the bar hopes that is an accurate statement.

The bar has its role, but it is not very cohesive. There is no published list of the membership of this Court's bar and no organization of it. Indeed, no one knows how many members there are. The Clerk's office tells me that no applications were required until 1925.

Since then there have been applications, and these have been numbered serially. At the present time the number of such applications is somewhat over 165,000. But there is no record of those who have died or retired from active practice. As a guess, I would say that there are about 75,000 lawyers in this country who are members of this Court's bar.

It is a privilege to speak on their behalf and to express the appreciation of the bar for the important role which this Court plays in our constitutional and legal structure.

We do know one thing: The first member of the bar of this Court was Elias Boudinot of New Jersey, who was admitted in February 1790. Of course, there was no one to move his admission, but this Court was flexible. It had not yet established procedures for the filing of credentials.

For the first few admissions, the Court apparently relied on judicial notice. The judges knew who were the qualified lawyers and they were admitted. After about a year, the Court turned to the Attorney General, Edmund Randolph. Though he was never admitted to practice before the Court, he was treated as an officer of the Court.

And before long, the practice was established of admission to the bar on motion of persons already admitted. Under the first admissions rule, adopted on February 5, 1790, the Court made the provision, which continues to this day, that applicants for admission shall have been admitted for "three years past in the Supreme Courts of the state to which they respectively belong."

The formula also provided then, as it did throughout the nineteenth century, that the private and professional character of the applicants "shall appear to be fair." As our language evolved, the word "fair" acquired a double meaning, and the use of the phrase sometimes produced a laugh in the courtroom. So the wording was changed, and for many years in the twentieth century the sponsor was required to say that he vouched for the applicant. Under the rule as it now stands, he affirms that the applicant is of good moral and professional character.

All motions for admission were made in open court until about 15 years ago. Now, in accordance with modern times, the whole procedure can be done by mail.

Under the first rule for admission, the applicant was required to elect whether he would practice as an attorney or as a counselor, and he could not practice as both. If this rule had continued, the British distinction between solicitors and barristers would have been established here, and we might have a narrower group today which could be recognized as the bar of the Supreme Court.

Indeed, the Circuit Court for the First Circuit provided for four degrees: attorneys, counselors, barristers, and sergeants. Charles Warren in his "History of the American Bar" refers to an order by Justice Story made in that court in 1812 admitting on his own motion Jeremiah Smith and Jeremiah Mason to the degree of sergeant at law, and as far as I know they are the only lawyers who have been sergeants at law in this country.

Many great lawyers have appeared before the Court. John Marshall appeared in one case in the late 1790's, unsuccessfully. Others who may be mentioned are Luther Martin, Caesar Rodney, and Roger B. Taney. These were the days of oratory, and by the 1830's Daniel Webster achieved his long continued eminence before the Court.

His appearances were often great social events, with large crowds both of men and women attending the Court sessions, for often several days were devoted to a single case. In those days Webster argued several hundred cases, more than have been presented before this Court by any other person in its history.

Interestingly enough, the member of the bar with the second largest total of arguments has left little trace. He was Walter Jones, admitted to practice in 1796, and the United States Attorney in the District of Columbia from 1802 to 1821.

In later years, he often acted in association with Daniel Webster. Among others, he argued the case of Martin against Hunter's Lessee and McCullough against Maryland. He also appeared in the first hearing of the Charles River Bridge case, where he was opposed by Daniel Webster.

We ought to have more information about Walter Jones, and perhaps the Supreme Court Historical Society can find a way to make him better known.

The history of the Court and its bar is of course intertwined with the history of the country. The details are being developed in the great history of the Court which is being prepared under the Oliver Wendell Holmes bequest. I will refer to only two events, both reflecting the Court's interrelationship with the slow but steady progress which the country made during the nineteenth century with two fundamental problems.

The first black lawyer to be admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court was Dr. John S. Rock, who was born of free parents in New Jersey in 1825. He was admitted on February 1st, 1865, just short of his fortieth birthday. Before then he had been a teacher, a dentist, and a doctor. He had moved to Boston in 1853 and he was one of the founders of the Republican Party in Massachusetts.

In 1858 he wanted to go to France for medical treatment, but he was refused a passport on the ground that he was not a citizen. The Massachusetts legislature then passed a law providing for state passports—I'm not sure this Court would accept that today—and this was accepted in France.

A year or so later, Dr. Rock returned to Boston and began to read law. He was admitted to practice in Massachusetts in September 1861 and he was admitted to practice in this Court on February 1, 1865. Note that date—shortly after the appointment of Salmon P. Chase as Chief Justice.

This came before the final termination of the Civil War and before the adoption of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments and with the Dred Scott case still on the books. As the New York Tribune reported: "By Jupiter, the sight was good." It must have been one of the dramatic moments in this Court's history, at least in retrospect.

Rock's admission was moved by Senator Charles Sumner. The newspaper reported observed that "The assenting nod of the Chief Justice dug the grave to bury the Dred Scott decision."

I am glad to record, too, that one of the persons who encouraged Dr. Rock was George L. Ruffin, whom we believe to be the first black graduate of the Harvard Law School.

The next event to which I will refer was the admission of the first woman to the Supreme Court bar. In 1872, this Court had refused to interfere with the action of the Supreme Court of Illinois, which denied admission to Myra Bradwell, who was the wife of a judge in Chicago. She relied in this Court on the equal protection clause of the recently adopted Fourteenth Amendment, but was unsuccessful. It may be mentioned that Chief Justice Chase was the sole dissenter from this conclusion.

It was less than seven years later, though, that Belva A. Lockwood became the first woman admitted to practice before the Court. This was on March 3rd, 1879. So quick was the change of view that this evoked no opinion from any member of the Court. Indeed, Mrs. Bradwell, who was denied admission in 1872, was finally admitted when she applied again in March 1892 on motion of Attorney General W. H. H. Miller.

Alice O'Donnell has pointed out in her paper in the 1977 Yearbook of the Supreme Court Historical Society that it took 41 years or until 1929 before the first 100 women became members of the bar of the Court. Some of the early admittees had great careers in the law. I will mention only Florence Allen, who became the first woman judge of a constitutional federal court; Mabel Walker Willebrand, who was Assistant Attorney General under President Hoover; and Helen Carloss, who had a long and distinguished career in the Tax Division of the Department of Justice and was an extraordinarily persuasive lawyer in the federal courts, including this Court.

A great increase in the number of women lawyers has occurred in the past 15 years. In another 15 years, if present trends continue, perhaps 30 percent of the members of the bar of this Court will be women. This will surely have an important impact, though it is not as yet clear just what that impact will be.

Is there a bar of this Court? It is hard to say. There have been periods when there was a relatively small group of lawyers who were widely recognized as leaders of the bar of this Court. They were the orators of the nineteenth century, starting with Daniel Webster and continuing through John G. Johnson of Pennsylvania.

There was a bar in the 1920's and 1930's, when such lawyers as Charles Evans Hughes, Owen D. Roberts, John W. Davis, George Wharton Pepper, and William D. Mitchell made frequent appearances before the Court. By this time, oratory was passe. The presentations were less flowery, but they were mellifluous.

As a young lawyer, I was fascinated by John W. Davis and his skill at crossing thin ice with great artistry, reaching the other side safely before it was fully recognized that the ice was so thin.

There is one case which I recall which brought together three of these giants. This was United States against George Otis Smith in 1932. It involved the question whether the Senate could reconsider the confirmation of a presidential nomination after the President had acted on it.

The Senate retained John W. Davis as its counsel. Attorney General William D. Mitchell appeared for the United States, essentially representing the President. And George Wharton Pepper represented Mr. Smith. That was surely one of the high points of advocacy in this century.

With the great increase in ease and speed of travel since World War Two, there is much less concentration on work before the Court, although it has never been highly concentrated since the days of Daniel Webster and Walter Jones. This is inevitable in a country as large and diverse as this country is.

It might have been different if the original division between attorneys and counselors had prevailed. It is hard to think, though, that such an arrangement, while having some advantages, would have been a good one overall. In any event, it is really impossible to have such distinctions in this country.

There is one group which has long provided the backbone of the Supreme Court bar. That is the Solicitor General and his staff and his associates in the Department of Justice. This office has long maintained a high standard and a great tradition. It appears in one way or another in nearly half of the cases which are heard on the merits by the Court and in a high percentage of all applications for review.

I should also refer to the considerable number of cases which have been presented here by what we now know as special interest groups. I think, for example, of the work done in the early days of the NAACP, which was represented here by one of the country's great lawyers, Charles Hamilton Houston, work which was carried on later with great ability by Thurgood Marshall. And I may mention the work done by lawyers representing groups interested in the rights of women, of whom Ruth Bader Ginsburg was an outstanding example.

The bar of this Court has a somewhat difficult role. As I have indicated, it is scattered and diverse. It can never be assembled, nor is it possible to take a consensus of the bar. Nevertheless it is clear, at least to me, that the Court could not get along without it.

Yet, the demands on the Court are such that the bar finds difficulty in making its full contribution. Fifty years ago when the Court first met in this building, it heard arguments five days a week for a total of about 75 days a year. Now it hears arguments for about 45 days during the year.

Fifty years ago, the time made available for oral arguments was an hour on each side and there were frequent substantial allowances of additional time. Now the time allotted is 30 minutes on a side and additional time is, shall I say, a very scarce commodity.

This inevitably presents problems for the oral advocate and requires a wholly different type of argument from that which was customary even 50 years ago. The lawyer today can rarely deal with his case as a case. He has to pick out certain salient points and hope that, with the welcome questioning, he will have time to deal with the matters he regards as vital.

I think that the briefs today are on average much better than they were 50 years ago, probably more improved than is commonly recognized. But oral argument often remains a difficult and somewhat tantalizing field.

This Court moved into this great building 50 years ago today. According to the newspaper articles, the first words spoken by Chief Justice Hughes in this courtroom were: "Are there any admissions?" Thus was the bar recognized, and thus has it been recognized at every session since.

The Court heard no arguments on the opening day. There were, however, many admissions, including Harold B. Willey, Chief Deputy Clerk of the Court, and Mary Agnes Quinn, the Docket Clerk in the Solicitor General's Office.

The first business before the Court was a motion made, appropriately enough, by Solicitor General Stanley F. Reed. The first case was argued before the Court a week later on October 14th. That was the case of Douglas against Wilcutts. It was a tax case, and it was, too, the first case whose decision was announced in this room. It is reported in 296 U. S., page 1.

Just as we are hearing these days in cases before the Court about non-bank banks, verbally a rather odd concept, I think I may well close these remarks by referring to the non-bar bar. For the brief for Douglas in that case was written by a young lawyer who had graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1932 and had not yet completed the three years required for admission here. Thus his name, though on the brief, does not appear in United States Reports, since he was a member of the non-bar bar.

He was, though, well worthy of the assignment. His name later became well known here. He was Harry A. Blackmun.

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, Mr. Griswold.
Mr. Attorney General.

ATTORNEY GENERAL MEESE: Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the Court:

It is a privilege for me to be here today representing the Department of Justice and the Executive Branch of the Government in these proceedings.

Fifty years ago on the date that we are commemorating here, this nation was in the midst of a great Depression. To borrow Tom Paine's language of an earlier critical period in our history, it was a crisis that truly did try men's souls.

The problems of that era were deeper than economic despair and Depression. The deepest problem, the greatest threat of that time, was that our very system of government had been called into question. It was a time where our fundamental precepts of democracy were being challenged from without as well as from within.

Our great national economic tragedy came at a time when new and foreign ideologies were attacking the very soul and spirit of free and democratic institutions around the world. The communist and fascist movements abroad were gaining strength and sought to promote themselves as the dominant force in the world, at the expense of liberty and peace.

In the midst of an increasingly confused and confusing world, the structure we honor today arose here in our nation's capital. As though to serve as a moral beacon to all the world, the new building of the Supreme Court stood forth, dedicated to that most basic principle of civilization, the rule of law.

Equal justice under law, that is what we as a people stood for then, as we had since the founding of our Republic; and that is what we as a people stand for today.

Now as then, this Court in many ways represents our national vision of a just and civilized world. As in impartial and independent institution under our Constitution, the Supreme Court, symbolic of our entire Judiciary, gives practical effect to the idea of the rule of law.

In The Federalist Papers, as in other writings during our founding period, this Court was deemed to be an essential part of that new science of government which had led to the framing of the Constitution. Alexander Hamilton confessed that under the previous Articles of Confederation the lack of a judiciary was a crowning defect. After all, he said, "laws are a dead letter without courts to expound and define their true meaning and operation."

Indeed, Hamilton went on to say that "the complete independence of the courts of justice is peculiarly essential in a limited constitution." He concluded that "a constitution is in fact and must be regarded by the judges as a fundamental law. Without this understanding and without an independent judiciary to guard the lines and the limits of the original constitution, all the particular rights or privileges of that constitution would amount to nothing.”

The magnificent structure in which we are now gathered symbolizes both the necessary independence and the constitutional integrity of the Supreme Court. It stands apart from, yet is near to, the homes of the other two branches.

It is a serious and a solemn place. In terms of those who wrote in The Federalist Papers, there is no wielding of the sword nor control of the purse strings here. There is, as the founders prescribed, only judgment.

I congratulate this Court as it celebrates its first 50 years in this magnificent marble building, a temple of reason, a temple of justice, and a temple of law.

Thank you.

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, Mr. Attorney General.

The Court recognizes Mr. William Falsgraf, the President of the American Bar Association, to speak for the legal profession as a whole. Mr. Falsgraf.

MR. FALSGRAF: Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the Court:

I am truly delighted to bring the congratulations and best wishes of the American Bar Association and in fact all of the lawyers of America as the Supreme Court celebrates 50 years in this magnificent hall. As spokesman for the American legal profession, I want to express on behalf of my colleagues across the country our profound respect for the Court, both before and after it obtained this permanent home.

We know that for some 144 years the Court performed its constitutional duties with dedication and often with brilliance despite the lack of an adequate and dignified quarters. Nevertheless, there is indeed symbolic importance in its having an impressive and dignified home.

Our Association has recognized and acknowledged that fact since the first foundation stone of this building was laid some 53 years ago. For we recognize that appropriate physical surroundings are essential in order for the Court to serve as our nation's primary symbol of the rule of law.

Generations of Americans and guests from around the world have visited this building and been overwhelmed by its grace and by its dignity. This is indeed a hallowed place, an appropriate acknowledgment by the people of the United States of the critical role which the third coequal branch of government plays in our constitutional form of government.

The special feeling that we in the ABA have for this building was first given expression by leaders of the Association who were intimately involved in the construction and dedication of this edifice. The energy and the leadership with respect to the construction of this building of course came from Chief Justice William Howard Taft, who was a former President of the American Bar Association as well as a former President of the United States of America. And incidentally, Chief Justice Taft was a fellow Ohioan, of which I am personally quite proud.

Unfortunately, Chief Justice Taft died in 1930, before his dream of a permanent home for this Court could take shape. But his widow was present at the cornerstone laying of this building in 1932. This was indeed an appropriate recognition of the leading role which Chief Justice Taft played in the planning for and the ultimate approval for the design and construction of this temple of the law.

All three speakers at the laying of the cornerstone had served or were serving as President of the American Bar Association. Guy Thompson of St. Louis, who represented the legal profession, was of course then Acting President of the American Bar Association. The Honorable John W. Davis, who spoke for the bar of the Supreme Court, had served as President of the American Bar Association in 1922-23. And Chief Justice Hughes himself, speaking for the Court, had been ABA President in 1924-25.

The text of these speeches were among the articles that were placed within the cornerstone of this building. In his remarks, President Thompson predicted that this building would be "a monument to justice," and how prophetic those comments have become.

John W. Davis called this place "the abode of the peacemaker" and "the house of refuge for all such as are oppressed."

In response, Chief Justice Hughes said: "This building is the symbol of the distinctive character of the Republic, the symbol of its faith. It suggests permanence, not the permanence of stone and steel but of an idea, a testimonial to an imperishable idea of liberty under law."

Well, tremendous changes have swept over this land in the past 50 years, and yet the dedicatory sentiments of my predecessors, like the beauty and the grace of this building, are as relevant and apt today as they were 50 years ago.

As we look to the Court's next 50 years and beyond, it is entirely appropriate for us to pause and to do as we are today, acknowledging that which is past. When this Court was established, constitutional government was indeed a revolutionary idea, and perhaps still is in other parts of the world. The form of nearly every other government which was then in existence almost 200 years ago has changed so drastically as to be virtually unrecognizable to their subjects of two centuries ago.

Many of the fundamental tenets of scientific knowledge which were the presumption of that age have been found to be flawed when examined under the light of newly discovered truths involving matter, energy, space, and time. The industrial revolution has come and gone, the atomic age has arrived. And yet, our nation and the Constitution under which it operates have not only endured, they have thrived.

How fitting is it, then, that we celebrate today the tangible symbol of that durability which is this building. The American people owe a debt beyond counting to the Supreme Court of the United States as the definitive interpreter of the Constitution, our highest law.

This Court is not only the refuge for all such as are oppressed, it is the bulwark of freedom for every citizen, regardless of his or her station in life. For just as the cornerstone serves as the support for the walls and the roof of this building, so the Constitution makes it great.

Let us give thanks, then, first to the architects of this building and all of those who labored to make that design a reality. But let us give greater thanks to the architects of our Constitution and those who labor within these laws to make the blessings of freedom secured by that Constitution a continuing reality.

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, Mr. Falsgraf.

As Mr. Griswold has noted in his excellent statement, when the Court gathered here precisely 50 years ago today at 12:00 noon it did not undertake to hear oral arguments, but formally opened the Term and then retired to the Conference Room and undertook to deal with the accumulation of petitions for certiorari, jurisdictional statements, and motions that had accumulated during the summer.

In recent years, the pressure of the docket has led the Court to hold the conferences on the summer accumulation in the last week of September so that we could begin, as we did this morning, at 10:00 o'clock to hear oral arguments.

The tortoise, which Cass Gilbert employed in much of his design in this Building, is of course, a more ancient symbol of justice than the blindfolded lady for both justice and the law are like the tortoise, rather than the swift hare of the fable.

Yet some changes have occurred, as some of the speakers have commented. In 1935, as Mr. Griswold said, the Court allowed one hour for each side and sometimes more, and was able to hear two cases each day or ten cases a week with a conference on Saturday. This was changed about 15 years ago when we limited the oral argument to 30 minutes on each side. Now we hear 12 cases a week, leaving Thursday free for the Justices to prepare for the Friday Conference. On Saturday and on Sunday, the Justices are still engaged in the work of the Court. The time allowed for oral argument is now very different from an earlier day.

In the Dartmouth College case, for example, after some days of oral argument, we can well imagine that Chief Justice Marshall may have said to Daniel Webster: "Mr. Webster, you have now had three and a half days; do you think you will finish this week?" Contrast that, if you will, with the legend—and it has not been verified—that when the red light came on in Chief Justice Hughes' time, he would stop a lawyer in the middle of the word "if."

Of course, we are much more liberal now. We allow a lawyer to finish the sentence that is unfolding when the red light goes on, provided, of course, the sentence is not too long.

Sometimes, as close observers of the Court observed, we Justices do not always fully agree about everything, and that was true when the Chief Justice began his efforts to have this Building erected. Some of the Justices felt it was not a good idea for the Court to lose regular contact with the leaders of Congress whose support was needed for whatever it was that the Court needed.

There may have been some merit to that view, but Chief Justice Taft was concerned more, as the speakers have indicated, with matters other than the comfort and the needs of the Justices. He was profoundly concerned with the need for a visible symbol of the independence of the third branch of government as a separate and a co-equal branch.

The differing views of the Justices at that time was illustrated in a story, perhaps a legend, of 1935 that one Justice is reported to have said that he expected each member of the Court would be provided with an elephant to ride into the Building mounted on that elephant much like a rajah. Just how those elephants were going to negotiate those steep stairs out in front of the Building has never been made clear.

Habits of judges and Justices, as with lawyers, change slowly. Having worked in their homes with their clerks and secretaries at hand, there was no great rush on the part of the Justices to occupy this splendid building, with luxurious three-room suites provided for each Justice.

Chief Justice Hughes himself continued to work out of his home for the most part and came to Court, as he put it, chiefly to hang his hat and also to take care of the rapidly increasing administrative duties of that office.

When Hugo Black was confirmed as a member of the Court he had the choice of any one of eight suites in the Building, and he wisely selected a very choice corner suite and occupied that space throughout his entire tenure on the Court.

With all his foresight, Chief Justice Taft and the architect were not able to fully anticipate the future needs of the Court, and so about 15 years ago, Justices' chambers were enlarged by converting each of three suites into two and then creating three sets of new chambers.

This required that the Clerk of the Court move from this floor to the ground floor. Previously, Chief Justice Warren had moved the Administrative Office of the United States Courts out of this Building in order to meet the growing needs of the Court itself.

Electric typewriters supplanted the manual power machines, and, in turn, they were recently replaced by word processing machines, which then in turn supplanted the hot lead typesetting process used for preparing the opinions of the Court.

The classical grandeur of this Building has been enhanced by the advent of the Office of the Curator of the Court. Miss Kathy Hetos, the first Curator, served from 1974 to 1976 and was succeeded by Miss Gail Galloway, the present Curator. Working with that man-of-all-skills, Mr. Edward Douglas, a long-time member of the Supreme Court staff, the Lower Great Hall has become a museum of the history of the Court and the history of the Building itself. The work of these people can be observed by those of you who take the time to see the special exhibit that has just been completed on Chief Justice Taft in the Lower Great Hall.

In these efforts to make this great symbol of justice come alive, the cooperation of Mr. George White, the Architect of the Capitol, has been very important. Mr. White turned to architecture only after graduating from Harvard Law School, and naturally has a sensitive appreciation of both the work of the Architect, Cass Gilbert and of the law.

The Attorney General and the President of the American Bar Association have alluded to world events occurring soon after the Court sat here, some of them before the Court sat here. Few statesmen of Europe and probably fewer in this country fully understood the meaning of the rise of men like Mussolini and Hitler and the expansion of communism and the other dictatorships of the world of the 1930's.

Whether Chief Justice Taft saw the trends in Europe as undermining justice and were to destroy established systems of freedom, we do not know. What is important was that at a great cataclysmic epoch in history, when dictators first destroyed independent courts and thus left no barriers to protect free speech and free press and other freedoms, this Building became a symbol, as the Attorney General and Mr. Falsgraf have said, not only to Americans but to the whole world, a symbol of the role and the function of a truly independent judiciary.

So, as we pause for an hour to take note of this fiftieth year of a great monument to justice and to freedom under law, we do well to remember both the events of interest in that half century and the meaning in a larger sense, of this edifice as a symbol of a system that has endured for two centuries. With all of the shortcomings of human institutions, our system remains a beacon and a guide to people everywhere who seek freedom.

In laying the cornerstone of the Building, Chief Justice Hughes said: "This Republic endures and this Building is the symbol of its faith."

Mr. Griswold, Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Falsgraf, on behalf of the Court I thank you for your part in this proceeding, the record of which will become part of the permanent records of this Court.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

The Chief Justice said:

"It is my sad duty to announce that our distinguished colleague and friend, Justice Potter Stewart, died Saturday, December 7, 1985, in Hanover, New Hampshire.

Justice Stewart served as a Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit from 1954 to 1958 when he was appointed to this Court to succeed Justice Harold Burton. He took office on October 14, 1958, and served as an Associate Justice for 23 years until his retirement in 1981 at the close of the 1980 Term of Court. He had served his country for four years in the United States Navy in World War II.

His appointment to the Court of Appeals in 1954 came at the age of 39, making him the youngest Federal Judge in the country at that time. His opinions on a wide range of subjects appear in nearly 100 volumes of the United States Reports covering a period of great social, political and economic development reflecting the turmoil, upheavals and changes taking place throughout the world.

Those changes had a marked impact on the kinds of issues coming into all courts including this Court. In meeting these issues in the setting of the dramatic changes in the world at large, Justice Stewart exhibited a steadiness of purpose, comprehension and grasp of contemporary law and its antecedents in the Common Law.

His work as a Justice rejected the popular labels and categorizations of judges. Adhering to precedent he sought to resolve cases on narrow grounds leaving related but unresolved issues to the future. He was particularly concerned that the rights of privacy of person and home, protected by the Fourth Amendment be observed by all levels of government. Few legal issues concerned him more than the protection of the rights envisaged by those who drafted the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

We mourn Justice Stewart's passing but we will not forget the comradeship and friendship that overshadowed the inescapable differences arising in the processes of resolving the difficult issues that find their way to this Court.

I speak for all members of the Court in expressing our profound sympathy to Mrs. Stewart and her family.

In due course, the traditional memorial service of the Bar of this Court and the Court will be conducted in this Chamber to pay our respects more fully to Justice Stewart."

The Chief Justice said:

"Today's orders of the Court have been certified by the Chief Justice, filed with the Clerk, and will not be announced orally."

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

The Chief Justice said:

"This special sitting of the Court is held to receive the Commissions of the newly appointed Chief Justice of the United States, William H. Rehnquist, and the newly appointed Associate Justice, Antonin Scalia.

"This year, on the eve of the 200th anniversary of our Constitution, it is natural that we take a look back. Just one year ago, in this Chamber, we took note that for a half century the Court has held its hearings and has conducted all of its judicial business in this magnificent building designed by Cass Gilbert under the direction of Chief Justice Taft. Chief Justice Taft sought to underscore the separation of powers and the independence of the judiciary by having this building become, as it is, a symbol of that constitutional division of powers and the symbol of the supremacy of the law.

"As we know, Chief Justice Taft died before the Court first sat here. Chief Justice Hughes succeeded him and was the first Chief Justice to preside over the Court on this bench. In the 50 years since then, three others have held the office following Chief Justice Hughes. Chief Justice Stone, Chief Justice Vinson and Chief Justice Warren.

"In these past 50 years, the Court has dealt with changing conditions and a growing and complex society; more and more people seek to have more and more issues resolved by the courts.

"Since the Court first sat on February 1, 1790, it has been called on to respond to new, different and changing questions. The Court's responses to those questions during the 196 years since that first sitting reflect, in a sense, the spirit of the common law from which our law derives. Changes in the Court do not alter the basic continuity of the spirit that activates the Court as an institution under the Constitution. Many times each year the meaning of that grant document is debated at this very lectern, and this confirms John Marshall's description of the Constitution as a living document whose meaning reasonable persons can and do disagree about while sharing common ideals. This history of this Court is one of continuity with change. Change and continuity.

"Seventeen years ago, on an occasion like this, in this Chamber, Chief Justice Warren, my distinguished predecessor, expressed the thoughts that I know all Justices shared then, and I am sure we share today. He said this:

'We do not always agree (and) it is not likely ever, with human nature as it is, for nine (Justices) always to agree . . . If it ever comes to pass,' he said, 'I would say that the Court will have lost its strength and will no longer be a real force in the affairs of our country.'

"I have no doubt whatever that Chief Justice Warren on that day, and all of us who heard him here on June 23, 1969, were thinking of countries and the millions of people who are not allowed to dissent and where freedom does not exist, as our freedoms do, and as our freedoms flow from 'we the people.'

"Now, today, I have the honor, and it is a great personal privilege as well, to welcome our friend and colleague of 15 years, Justice William H. Rehnquist as the 16th Chief Justice of the United States. I wish him and I know I speak for all of my colleagues, I wish him and our new colleague, Judge Scalia, good health, long life and God speed.

"Now, I recognize the Attorney General of the United States, Mr. Meese."

The Attorney General said:

"Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the Court, I have the commission which has been issued to the Honorable William H. Rehnquist as Chief Justice of the United States. The commission has been duly signed by the President of the United States and attested by me as the Attorney General of the United States. I move that the Clerk read the commission and that it be made part of the permanent records of this Court."

The Chief Justice said:

"Thank you Mr. Attorney General; your motion is granted. Mr. Clerk, will you please read the commission?"

The Clerk then read the commission as follows:

"Ronald Reagan, President of the United States of America,

"To All who shall See These Presents, Greeting:

"Know Ye; That reposing special trust and confidence in the Wisdom, Uprightness, and Learning of William H. Rehnquist, of Virginia, I have nominated, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, do appoint him Chief Justice of the United States and do authorize and empower him to execute and fulfill the duties of that Office according to the Constitution and Laws of the said United States, and to have and to hold the said office, with all the powers, privileges and emoluments to the same of right appertaining, unto Him, the said William H. Rehnquist during his good behavior.

“In testimony whereof, I have caused these Letters to be made patent and the seal of the Department of Justice to be hereunto affixed.

“Done at the City of Washington, this twenty-fifth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and eleventh.

“By the President: Ronald Reagan.

“Edwin Meese, III, Attorney General.”

[SEAL]

The Chief Justice said:

“Mr. Attorney General said:

“I also have the commission which has been issued to the Honorable Antonin Scalia as an Associate Justice of this court. The commission has been duly signed by the President of the United States and attested by me as the Attorney General of the United States. I move that the Clerk read the commission and that it be made part of the permanent records of this Court.”

The Clerk then reads the commission as follows:

“Ronald Reagan, President of the United States of America,

“To All Who shall See These Presents, Greeting:

“Know Ye; That reposing special trust and confidence in the Wisdom, Uprightness, and Learning of Antonin Scalia, of Virginia, I have nominated, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, do appoint him as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the States and do authorize and empower him to execute and fulfill the duties of that Office according to the Constitution and Laws of the said United States, and to have and to hold the said office, with all the powers, privileges and emoluments to the same of right appertaining, unto Him, the said Antonin Scalia, during his good behavior.

“In testimony whereof, I have caused these Letters to be made patent and the seal of the Department of Justice to be hereunto affixed.

“Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-fifth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and eleventh.

“By the President: Ronald Reagan.

“Edwin Meese, III, Attorney General.”

[SEAL]

The Chief Justice said:

"I now ask the Deputy Marshal of the Court to escort Justice Rehnquist to the center of the bench."

The Chief Justice said:

"Justice Rehnquist, are you prepared to take the oath?"

Justice Rehnquist said:

"I am."

Justice Rehnquist was then escorted by the Deputy Marshal to the center of the bench where the oath of office was then administered by the Chief Justice in the following words:

"I, William H. Rehnquist, do solemnly swear that I will administer justice without respect to persons, and do equal right to the poor and to the rich, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge and perform all the duties incumbent upon me as the Chief Justice of the United States according to the best of my abilities and understanding, agreeable to the Constitution and laws of the United States; and that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God."

William H. Rehnquist
Chief Justice

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this twenty-sixth day of September, 1986."

Warren E. Burger
Chief Justice

The Chief Justice said:

"It is my privilege to present the new Chief Justice of the United States. Chief Justice Rehnquist, I wish you a long and fruitful future in our common calling."

Chief Justice Rehnquist said:

"I now ask the Chief Deputy Clerk to escort Judge Scalia to the center of the bench."

The Chief Justice said:

"Judge Scalia, are you prepared to take the oath?"

Judge Scalia said:

"I am."

"I, Antonin Scalia, do solemnly swear that I will administer justice without respect to persons, and do equal right to the poor and to the rich, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge and perform all the duties incumbent upon me as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States according to the best of my abilities and understanding, agreeably to the Constitution and laws of the United States; that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office of which I am about to enter. So help me God."

Antonin Scalia

"Subscribed and sworn to before me this twenty-sixth day of September, 1986."

William H. Rehnquist
Chief Justice

The Chief Justice said:

"Justice Scalia, on behalf of all the members of the Court and Chief Justice Burger, it is a pleasure to extend to you a very warm welcome as an Associate Justice of this Court and to wish for you a very long life and a long and happy career in our common calling."

Adjourned to the time and place appointed by law.

It was ordered by the Court that the accompanying correspondence between members of the Court and Chief Justice Burger upon his retirement as Chief Justice of the United States be this day spread upon the minutes and that it also be printed in the reports of the Court.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D.C., September 17, 1986.

Dear Chief:

Your decision to retire stirs in each of us a deep sense of loss that our association as colleagues on the Court must come to an end. Your zest for life and the extreme kindness and compassion you have always shown each of us has enriched our relationship beyond measure.

You have believed that it is wrong to live life without some deep abiding social commitment, and have devoted your entire professional life to pursuit of the elusive goals of freedom. The many noteworthy opinions you have authored covering the broad spectrum of issues that erupted in your seventeen years as Chief Justice constitute a major contribution to America's constitutional jurisprudence. The impact of these opinions will be lasting upon the problem areas fundamental in our constitutional democracy—the permutations and changing shapes of authority, justice, privacy, responsibility, participation, diversity, property and freedom.

It is with great reluctance that we reconcile ourselves to your retirement, and do so with our assurance of the great regard and affection in which we hold you. Our hope for the future is that you enjoy the best of health and many opportunities to devote yourself to projects that you enjoy.

Sincerely,

William J. Brennan, Jr.

Byron R. White

Thurgood Marshall

Harry A. Blackmun

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D.C., September 18, 1986.

Dear Justices:

Your generous message concerning my retirement as Chief Justice so as to devote full time to the Commission on the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution gives me great satisfaction. To serve with you, and earlier with such splendid men as Hugo Black, Bill Douglas, John Harlan and Potter Stewart, has been a major satisfaction in my life. To leave this seat with such a warm message from you gives added satisfaction.

As the Court's burdens in these seventeen Terms have so greatly increased in volume and complexity, yours in the years ahead will continue to enlarge. I wish for each of you good health and the rewards of satisfaction due for the burdens you have carried and will carry in the service of our country and the great mandate set forth at Philadelphia 199 years ago.

Sincerely,

Warren E. Burger
