

No. 18-1516

In The Supreme Court of the United States

VERONICA PRICE, ET AL.,

Petitioners,

v.

CITY OF CHICAGO, ET AL.,

Respondents.

On Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit

AMICUS BRIEF OF THE AMERICAN
CENTER FOR LAW AND JUSTICE IN SUPPORT OF PETITIONER

JAY ALAN SEKULOW

Counsel of Record

STUART J. ROTH

COLBY M. MAY

WALTER M. WEBER

AMERICAN CENTER FOR

LAW & JUSTICE

201 Maryland Ave., N.E.

Washington, DC 20002

(202) 546-8890

sekulow@aclj.org

Counsel for Amicus

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
TABLE OF AUTHORITIES	ii
INTEREST OF AMICUS	1
SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT	1
ARGUMENT	2
THE DECISION IN HILL v. COLORADO WAS IRRECONCILABLE WITH PREEXISTING CONSTITUTIONAL NORMS GOVERNING FREE SPEECH AND THEREFORE PROFOUNDLY DESTABILIZED THE LAW	2
1. Audience presumed unwilling	3
2. Explicit content restriction deemed content-neutral	4
3. Leafletting hobbled	5
4. Prophylactic restrictions on speech approved	7
CONCLUSION	8

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases	Pages
American Steel Foundries v. Tri-City Central Trades Council , 257 U.S. 184 (1921) . . .	4
Bartnicki v. Vopper , 532 U.S. 514 (2001)	5
Edenfield v. Fane , 507 U.S. 761 (1983)	7
Forsyth County v. Nationalist Movement , 505 U.S. 123 (1992)	6
Hill v. Colorado , 530 U.S. 703 (2000)	1, passim
Illinois ex rel. Madigan v. Telemarketing Assocs. , 538 U.S. 600 (2003)	8
Jamison v. Texas , 318 U.S. 413 (1943)	5, 7
Lovell v. City of Griffin , 303 U.S. 444 (1938) . . .	5, 6
Martin v. City of Struthers , 319 U.S. 141 (1943) . .	4
McConnell v. FEC , 540 U.S. 93 (2003)	1
McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Comm’n , 514 U.S. 334 (1995)	5, 6
NAACP v. Button , 371 U.S. 415 (1963)	7
Organization for a Better Austin v. Keefe , 402 U.S. 415 (1971)	5

Riley v. Nat’l Fed’n of the Blind,
487 U.S. 781 (1988) 7

Rowan v. United States Post Office Dep’t,
397 U.S. 728 (1970) 4, 6

*Schaumburg v. Citizens for a Better
Environment*, 444 U.S. 620 (1980) 7

*Schenck v. Pro-Choice Network of Western
New York*, 519 U.S. 357 (1999) 1, 8

Schneider v. State, 308 U.S. 147 (1939) 5, 6

Thomas v. Chicago Park Dist.,
534 U.S. 316 (2002) 6

Turner Broadcasting System v. FCC,
512 U.S. 622 (1994) 5

United States v. Grace, 461 U.S. 171 (1983) 5

Constitutional provisions and rules

S. Ct. R. 37.2(a) 1

U.S. Const. amend. I 1, 3, 5, 6

INTEREST OF AMICUS¹

The American Center for Law and Justice (ACLJ) is an organization dedicated to the defense of constitutional liberties secured by law. The ACLJ often appears before this Court on the side of First Amendment free speech claims. E.g., Schenck v. Pro-Choice Network of Western New York, 519 U.S. 357 (1999); Hill v. Colorado, 530 U.S. 703 (2000); McConnell v. FEC, 540 U.S. 93 (2003). This case has grave importance for the free speech jurisprudence governing leafletting and other classic First Amendment activities, and is therefore of special interest to the ACLJ.²

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

This Court's decision in Hill v. Colorado, 530 U.S. 703 (2000), deeply unsettled the constitutional law of free speech. In several crucial respects, Hill rejected -- without overruling -- well-established norms of First Amendment jurisprudence. In particular, the Hill

¹Counsel of record for the parties received timely notice of the intent to file this brief, S. Ct. R. 37.2(a), and emailed written consent to its filing. No counsel for any party authored this brief in whole or in part. No such counsel or party made a monetary contribution intended to fund the preparation or submission of this brief. No person or entity aside from the ACLJ, its members, or its counsel made a monetary contribution intended to fund the preparation or submission of this brief.

²This brief is also being submitted on behalf of the more than 76,000 individuals who joined the ACLJ's Committee to End the Abortion Distortion and Stop Unconstitutionally Silencing Lifesaving Speech.

Court embraced (1) a presumption of an unwilling audience for speech, (2) the treatment of an expressly content-based restriction as content-neutral, (3) strait-jacket limitations on leafletting on public sidewalks, and (4) prophylactic restrictions on speech. None of these holdings were reconcilable with prior precedent. Hence, Hill created an internal conflict in the constitutional law governing free speech activities. That conflict has continued, as demonstrated by petitioners.

This Court should grant review to overrule Hill and eliminate that conflict.

ARGUMENT

THE DECISION IN HILL v. COLORADO WAS IRRECONCILABLE WITH PREEXISTING CONSTITUTIONAL NORMS GOVERNING FREE SPEECH AND THEREFORE PROFOUNDLY DESTABILIZED THE LAW.

The simultaneous existence of two lines of contradictory precedent is profoundly destructive of the rule of law. Such internal inconsistency enables courts to decide arbitrarily which line of precedent to invoke; hence, parties cannot predictably gauge the law governing their activities. When the uncertainty of dueling precedents arises in the context of free speech, the consequence is especially bad: the uncertainty of legal sanctions deters speech by all but the heroic, the foolhardy, and the judgment proof.

This Court's decision in Hill v. Colorado, 530 U.S. 703 (2000), has had precisely this destabilizing effect on the rule of law. Because Hill was irreconcilable with numerous prior decisions of this Court, yet did not purport to overrule such decisions, Hill generated an unresolved contradiction, the simultaneous existence of diametrically opposed precedents from which each lower court could pick and choose as it saw fit. This is not the rule of law.

Petitioners have highlighted how the Hill decision is inconsistent with this Court's subsequent First Amendment case law. Amicus wishes to highlight the perniciousness of Hill under preexisting case law, urging this Court to grant review and to overrule Hill before it further corrodes the fabric of the law.

Hill was in many respects "antithetical to our entire First Amendment tradition," 530 U.S. at 768 (Kennedy, J., dissenting). See also id. at 762 (Scalia, J. dissenting) ("an unabashed repudiation of our First Amendment doctrine"). While not providing an exhaustive list, amicus wishes to highlight some of the ways the Hill decision created contradictory points in First Amendment jurisprudence.

1. Audience presumed unwilling

The Hill Court presumed as a matter of law that anyone approaching an abortion business is an "unwilling recipient" of any message a pro-life sidewalk counselor has to offer. 530 U.S. at 716-18, 727. This was not only both inaccurate as a matter of fact (some would-be abortion patients do accept leaflets or conversation from sidewalk counselors, and some ultimately choose not to abort, see, e.g., Brief for Petitioners at 3-4, Hill v. Colorado (No. 98-1856)) and offensive to the many "thoughtful and law-abiding sidewalk counselors like petitioners," 530 U.S. at 727, it was also flatly inconsistent with this Court's case law. As long ago as Martin v. City of Struthers, 319

U.S. 141 (1943), this Court has held invalid restrictions on speech that deem such speech categorically unwelcome. As this Court noted in Martin, truly unwilling listeners can properly be protected by enforcing the “previously expressed will” not to receive such messages, id. at 148. Hill, by contrast, inverted the rule: no one could speak unless they obtain previously expressed consent. 530 U.S. at 734 (“regulations . . . apply if the pedestrian does not consent”). Compare Rowan v. United States Post Office Dep’t, 397 U.S. 728 (1970) (homeowner can take initiative to rebuff particular mailings, in advance, at will); American Steel Foundries v. Tri-City Central Trades Council, 257 U.S. 184, 204 (1921) (offer of message may rightfully be declined; by contrast, initial offer, if done in an inoffensive way, is within traditional bounds of free speech).

2. Explicit content restriction deemed content-neutral

The Hill Court ruled that a statute that is expressly content-based -- restricting only oral “protest, education, or counseling,” 530 U.S. at 707 n.1 (quoting statute), while leaving unrestricted the remaining universe of messages, such as “pure social” conversation, id. at 721 (or, for that matter, commercial sales pitches) -- was nevertheless content-neutral if the justification for the restriction is content-neutral, id. at 720. This directly contradicted the precedent of this Court. “[W]hile a content-based purpose may be sufficient . . . to show that a regulation is content-based, it is not necessary to such a showing in all cases Nor will the mere assertion of a content-neutral purpose be enough to save a law which, on its face, discriminates based on content.” Turner Broadcasting System v. FCC, 512 U.S. 622, 642-43 (1994). Accord Bartnicki v. Vopper, 532 U.S. 514, 526 & n.9 (2001).

3. Leafletting hobbled

While the Hill statute did not absolutely ban leafletting outside abortion facilities, it did drastically hobble such leafletting. Under the Hill statute, leafletters could not approach close enough merely to offer within reach a flyer, without first obtaining the passerby’s consent. 530 U.S. at 707 & n.1, 727-28. At best, leafletters could stand still “near the path of oncoming pedestrians and proffering” the material like a parking garage ticket dispensing machine. Id. at 727. By contrast, the precedents of this Court, aside from Hill, uphold vigorous First Amendment protection for leafletting. Lovell v. City of Griffin, 303 U.S. 444 (1938); Schneider v. State, 308 U.S. 147 (1939); Jamison v. Texas, 318 U.S. 413 (1943); Organization for a Better Austin v. Keefe, 402 U.S. 415 (1971); United States v. Grace, 461 U.S. 171 (1983); McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Comm’n, 514 U.S. 334 (1995).

Notably, this constitutional protection for leafletting holds true even when the ban is not geographically absolute. As Grace illustrates, it is unconstitutional to ban leafletting on the sidewalks of just one particular building. See also Schneider, 308 U.S. at 163 (“one is not to have the exercise of his liberty of expression in appropriate places abridged on the plea that it may be exercised in some other place”).

Nor can the controversial nature of the topic of the handbills justify such a restriction. “Indeed, . . . handing out leaflets in the advocacy of a politically controversial viewpoint . . . is the essence of First Amendment expression.” McIntyre, 514 U.S. at 347.

Nor need the ban be unconditional; requiring prior permission to offer the material, as in Lovell and Schneider, is likewise invalid. To be sure, the Hill statute required that the necessary “permission” to offer a leaflet must be obtained, not from the government, but from private pedestrians. But this makes the permission requirement worse, not better. The government must at least follow non-arbitrary, non-discretionary standards when licensing speech. Thomas v. Chicago Park Dist., 534 U.S. 316, 323 (2002). Private individuals face no such constraints, and thus can be wholly arbitrary, even viewpoint-based, in withholding consent. While this is perfectly acceptable when a private individual is controlling the flow of information into the home, Rowan, or deciding whether to accept a handbill from a leafletter, giving private parties licensing power over the mere offer of information on a public way is an entirely different matter. To suppress the right to speak, picket, or leaflet in a public place absent license from unconstrained private parties, under penalty of criminal enforcement, is even worse than an unconstitutional after-the-fact heckler’s veto. Indeed, if it is unconstitutional merely to charge a higher permit fee based upon potential adverse audience reaction, Forsyth County v. Nationalist Movement, 505 U.S. 123, 134-35 (1992), then it is necessarily unconstitutional to ban the speech altogether absent actual approval from the audience.

Under this Court’s precedents, then,

one who is rightfully on a street which the state has left open to the public carries with him there as elsewhere the constitutional right to express his views in an orderly fashion. This right extends to the communication of ideas by handbills and literature as well as by the spoken word.

Jamison, 318 U.S. at 416.

Hill's miserly allowance of minimal freedom to leaflet was entirely inconsistent with the jealous constitutional protection recognized in these other cases.

4. Prophylactic restrictions on speech approved

Hill expressly approved a statute taking “a prophylactic approach” to speech regulation, 530 U.S. at 729, i.e., sweeping up substantial amounts of “harmless” (id.) speech as part of an effort to address proscribable misconduct. It is difficult to imagine a proposition more antithetical to this Court’s free speech case law. “Broad prophylactic rules in the area of free expression are suspect. Precision of regulation must be the touchstone” NAACP v. Button, 371 U.S. 415, 438 (1963). Accord Riley v. Nat’l Fed’n of the Blind, 487 U.S. 781, 801 (1988) (same); Schaumburg v. Citizens for a Better Environment, 444 U.S. 620, 637 (1980) (same); Edenfield v. Fane, 507 U.S. 761, 777 (1983) (quoting Button and noting that even commercial speech may not be subjected to broad prophylactic restrictions); Illinois ex rel. Madigan v. Telemarketing Assocs., 538 U.S. 600, 612, 616 (2003) (noting condemnation of prophylactic restrictions on charitable solicitation). But cf. Schenck v. Pro-Choice Network of Western N.Y., 519 U.S. 357, 382 (1997) (approving prophylactic injunctive restrictions on particular defendants).

* * *

The Hill decision, by announcing several novel constitutional rules in profound tension with this Court's preexisting free speech jurisprudence, deeply destabilized the law. This Court should grant review and overrule Hill.

CONCLUSION

This Court should grant the petition for certiorari.

Respectfully submitted,

Jay Alan Sekulow

Counsel of Record

Stuart J. Roth

Colby M. May

Walter M. Weber

American Center for

Law & Justice

201 Maryland Ave., N.E.

Washington, DC 20002

(202) 546-8890

July 8, 2019