21 MEMORANDUM OPINION

22 WRAY, Judge.

23 (i) Defendant Edward Bingham appeals the jury's convictions of sexual 24 exploitation of children (SEC), contrary to NMSA 1978, Section 30-6A-3(D) (2016)

APPENDIX A

1 (recording) and Section 30-6A-3(A) (possession). Defendant challenges various 2 pretrial rulings regarding the circumstances of the detention and arrest, the 3 warrantless seizure of the vehicle, the sufficiency of a search warrant, and the district 4 court's determination that hearsay evidence from Victim was admissible based on 5 forfeiture by wrongdoing principles. Defendant also contests several aspects of the 6 trial itself, including the late disclosure of an expert witness, witness testimony 7 identifying Victim, the chain of custody and foundation for cellphone evidence, and 8 the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the SEC recording convictions. Last, 9 Defendant argues that the cumulative effect of all of these issues warrants reversal.

10 After careful review of each issue raised by Defendant on appeal, we affirm.

11 BACKGROUND

12 (2) In this memorandum opinion, we first briefly develop the procedural 13 background and reserve discussion of additional facts for our analysis.

14 (3) Defendant was initially represented by counsel after being charged with three 15 counts of SEC (recording), see § 30-6A-3(D), and one count of SEC (possession), 16 see § 30-6A-3(A). Eventually Defendant filed a motion for self-representation, 17 which after inquiry, the district court granted. While representing himself, Defendant 18 filed more than thirty pretrial motions, many of them involving the admission or 19 suppression of evidence, which the district court addressed over many hearings.

1 Ultimately, the parties conducted a two-and-a-half-day trial, and at the conclusion,
2 the jury convicted Defendant on all four counts. Defendant appeals.

3 DISCUSSION

4 {4} First, we emphasize that an appeal is not a second trial. This Court operates 5 under a presumption that “favors the correctness of the trial court’s actions,” and 6 Defendant as the appellant “must affirmatively demonstrate [the] assertion of error.”

7 Farmers, Inc. v. Dal Mach. Fabricating, Inc., 1990-NMSC-100, ¶ 8, 111 N.M. 6, 8 800 P.2d 1063. Defendant challenges the district court’s rulings on multiple pretrial 9 motions as well as on several matters that arose during trial. Defendant’s brief in 10 chief was submitted by appellate counsel, but Defendant sought permission to file a 11 reply brief on his own behalf, which we granted and then considered. We begin with 12 Defendant’s pretrial challenges.

13 I. Pretrial Challenges

14 {5} On appeal, Defendant contends that certain evidence should have been 15 suppressed and other evidence should have been excluded.

16 A. Defendant’s Suppression Arguments: Expansion of the Stop, De Facto 17 Arrest, and the Warrant for the Vehicle

18 {6} Defendant argues that evidence should have been suppressed because (1) the 19 initial encounter was impermissibly expanded without reasonable suspicion; (2) the 20 circumstances establish a de facto arrest without probable cause; and (3) the vehicle 21 was unconstitutionally seized and searched. “Appellate review of a motion to

1 suppress presents a mixed question of law and fact. We review factual
2 determinations for substantial evidence and legal determinations de novo,” State v.
3 Paananen, 2015-NMSC-031, ¶ 10, 357 P.3d 958 (internal quotation marks and 4 citation omitted), and consider “the facts in the light most favorable to the prevailing 5 party,” State v. Skippings, 2014-NMCA-117, ¶ 8, 338 P.3d 128 (internal quotation
6 marks and citation omitted). Importantly, “reviewing courts are to give sufficient 7 deference to the findings of fact of our trial courts and not reweigh evidence on 8 appeal.” State v. Wright, 2022-NMSC-009, ¶ 2, 503 P.2d 1161. In accordance with 9 our standard of review, for each of Defendant’s three pretrial challenges, we lay out 10 the governing law, set forth those relevant facts relied on by the district court that 11 were supported by the evidence, and conduct de novo our analysis of the law to the 12 facts.

13 1. The Expansion of the Initial Encounter Was Supported by Reasonable 14 Suspicion

15 {7} Defendant argues that the scope of the initial encounter was unlawfully 16 expanded in violation of Article II, Section 10 of the New Mexico Constitution when 17 an officer posed a brief question about weapons. See N.M. Const. art. II, § 10. Under 18 the New Mexico Constitution, “all questions asked during the investigation of a 19 traffic stop,” are required to “be reasonably related to the initial reason for the stop.” 20 State v. Leyva, 2011-NMSC-009, ¶ 55, 149 N.M. 435, 250 P.3d 861. “Unrelated 21 questions are permissible when supported by independent reasonable suspicion, for

1 reasons of officer safety, or if the interaction has developed into a consensual 2 encounter." Id. Defendant contends that no reasonable suspicion supported 3 expansion of the scope of the initial encounter. As we explain, the scope of the initial 4 encounter with Defendant was justified by officer safety concerns.

5 {8} At approximately eight in the evening, Chaves County Deputy Whitzel called 6 for backup after spotting a black vehicle with its lights on in the middle of a field, 7 approaching, and observing two bodies inside, a male and a female, lying down in 8 the back. Additional deputies, including Deputy Padilla responded. Deputy Whitzel 9 testified that the bodies could have been dead or sleeping, or the vehicle could have 10 been stolen, based on past experience. Deputy Padilla also testified to a concern that 11 the vehicle could have been stolen. The deputies approached the vehicle and 12 knocked on the door after seeing movement inside. The vehicle door was locked, 13 and after Deputy Padilla said, "Open the door," the door unlocked. Once law 14 enforcement opened the door, Deputy Padilla asked whether there were any weapons 15 in the vehicle. Defendant answered in the negative. Based on training, experience, 16 and the totality of the circumstances measured against an objective standard, Deputy 17 Padilla reasonably began the evening encounter with unknown occupants of a 18 running vehicle in an isolated location with a brief question about weapons, which 19 was related to officer safety. See id. ¶ 59 ("Reasonable suspicion is measured by an 20 objective standard based on the totality of the circumstances."). For these reasons,

1 Deputy Padilla's question did not run afoul the New Mexico Constitution. See id.
2 ¶¶ 35, 60-61 (holding that questions about weapons were permissible based on the 3 officer's experience and training, considerations of officer safety, and the totality of 4 the circumstances).

5 2. Defendant's Detention Did Not Ripen Into an Illegal De Facto Arrest

6 {9} Defendant next argues that the detention that followed the police encounter at 7 the vehicle ripened into an illegal de facto arrest and evidence discovered thereafter 8 should have been suppressed. "When a detention exceeds the boundaries of a 9 permissible investigatory stop, it becomes a de facto arrest requiring probable 10 cause." State v. Flores, 1996-NMCA-059, ¶ 15, 122 N.M. 84, 920 P.2d 1038. This 11 inquiry requires balancing competing considerations: "the nature and quality of the 12 intrusion on the individual's Fourth Amendment interests against the importance of 13 the governmental interest alleged to justify the intrusion." State v. Ortiz, 2017-14 NMCA-062, ¶ 11, 400 P.3d 312 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). To 15 evaluate when a detention has become a de facto arrest, we consider several factors 16 including, "(1) the government's justification for the detention, (2) the character of 17 the intrusion on the individual, (3) the diligence of the police in conducting the 18 investigation, and (4) the length of the detention." Skippings, 2014-NMCA-117, ¶ 14 19 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Defendant argues that these factors 20 applied to the detention in the present case resulted in a de facto arrest without

1 probable cause because the detention was unjustified, the police were not diligent,
2 the detention was impermissibly long, and the intrusion was too great. To address 3 Defendant's arguments, we describe the circumstances of the detention in the 4 context of the four factors.

5 {10} The detention was justified for law enforcement to investigate the seeming 6 contradiction between their observations and Victim's statements. After asking 7 about weapons, Deputy Padilla noticed an obvious age difference between the two 8 individuals in the vehicle—based on appearances, one individual was clearly an 9 adolescent and the other was in his forties. Given Victim's partial state of undress in 10 the back of the vehicle and adolescent appearance, it was reasonable for law 11 enforcement to suspect that Defendant had engaged or was about to engage in 12 criminal sexual penetration of a minor as prohibited by NMSA 1978, Section 30-9-13 11(G)(1) (2009). In order to confirm or dispel their reasonable suspicion, law 14 enforcement kept Defendant and Victim separated at the scene while they conducted 15 their investigation. Defendant was placed, not in handcuffs, in the back of a police 16 car. Deputy Padilla interviewed Victim. Although Victim reported that she was 17 sixteen and the relationship was consensual, Victim had no identification, initially 18 gave a false name, withheld guardian contact information, and at various times gave 19 Deputy Padilla the ages eighteen, fifteen, and sixteen. Victim did not reveal her true 20 identity until about an hour into the investigation, and Deputy Padilla therefore could

1 not verify any of Victim's assertions or arrange for Victim to be picked up. Also at 2 the scene, Deputy Padilla searched police and court records and discovered that 3 Defendant had two pending cases involving criminal sexual penetration of a minor, 4 who was Victim. The officer in charge of the pending case was contacted. At some 5 point, law enforcement discovered a no-contact order between Defendant and 6 Victim, and Defendant was arrested for "violating conditions of release." Defendant 7 maintains that law enforcement had no interest or justification in continuing the 8 investigation after Victim reported that she was sixteen—above the "age of 9 consent"—and the relationship was consensual. To the contrary, these statements 10 did not dispel suspicion, based on all of the circumstances.

11 {11} As we have described, Victim was slow to provide information, gave some 12 contradictory responses, and law enforcement was not required to believe Victim 13 when her assertions appeared to be contradicted by the circumstances—Victim 14 appeared young, partially unclothed, in the company of a much older man in an 15 isolated area. Defendant's clothing was in disarray when he came out of the vehicle, 16 and as Victim was about to be moved into Deputy Padilla's vehicle, Deputy Padilla 17 observed Victim removing a jar of anal lubricant from Defendant's vehicle.
18 Defendant was not ultimately arrested for or charged with criminal sexual 19 penetration or contact of a minor. See § 30-9-11 (defining criminal sexual 20 penetration, in some instances, to involve children between the ages of thirteen and

1 sixteen or thirteen and eighteen); NMSA 1978, § 30-9-13 (2003) (defining criminal 2 sexual contact of minor in a similar manner, involving children between the ages of 3 thirteen and eighteen). Nevertheless, law enforcement had an ongoing and 4 unresolved reasonable suspicion to investigate those crimes while Defendant was 5 detained. See State v. Collins, 2005-NMCA-044, ¶ 35, 137 N.M. 353, 110 P.3d 1090 6 (“That [the d]efendant was not charged with violating either of these statutes is 7 immaterial because our analysis only focuses on whether the officer articulated a 8 reasonable suspicion that [the d]efendant violated the statutes.”), overruled on other 9 grounds by State v. Willie, 2009-NMSC-037, ¶ 18, 146 N.M. 481, 212 P.3d 369.
10 After Victim’s true identity was revealed, law enforcement was able to connect 11 Defendant and Victim to the pending case and no-contact order.¹ The present case 12 did not involve a resolution of reasonable suspicion followed by an unjustified 13 “expansion of the investigation to look, search, or fish elsewhere.” See State v.
14 Hernandez, 1997-NMCA-006, ¶ 25, 122 N.M. 809, 932 P.2d 499 (internal quotation 15 marks and citation omitted). The continued investigation was therefore supported by ¹The parties dispute when the no-contact order was discovered. The State maintains that the no-contact order was discovered around an hour into the encounter, and Defendant argues that the no-contact order was not discovered for three hours—not until right before transport to the police station. We need not resolve this dispute. The discovery of the no-contact order objectively provided probable cause to arrest Defendant. The length of time before the discovery of the no-contact order is not dispositive—but rather whether reasonable suspicion of wrongdoing was dispelled before or continued up until the no-contact order was discovered and probable cause developed.

1 reasonable suspicion and justified to ensure Victim's safety. See State v. Pierce,
2 1990-NMSC-049, ¶ 15, 110 N.M. 76, 792 P.2d 408 (explaining that the government 3 has an interest in "protecting the bodily integrity and personal safety of children").

4 {12} Victim's equivocation also contributes to our conclusion that the long 5 investigation was diligent. The investigation moved forward slowly because Victim 6 gave a false name and her identity could not be confirmed for nearly an hour. When 7 law enforcement discovered the other pending cases, reasonable suspicion of 8 criminal activity involving Victim and Defendant continued. In this situation, "the 9 investigation require[d] awaiting the development of circumstances off the scene," 10 see State v. Werner, 1994-NMSC-025, ¶ 20, 117 N.M. 315, 871 P.2d 971, to contact 11 the other detective for more information on the other pending case. Reasonable 12 suspicion, however, was not dispelled and supported law enforcement's ongoing 13 investigation at the scene up until they developed probable cause that Defendant had 14 violated the no-contact order. See State v. Robbs, 2006-NMCA-061, ¶ 25, 139 N.M.
15 569, 136 P.3d 570 (concluding that forty-minute detention was justified for officers 16 to investigate when initial suspicions "were not dispelled"). The evidence presented 17 therefore supports a conclusion that Defendant's continued detention was reasonable 18 for law enforcement to continue to investigate the developing facts. See Werner, 19 1994-NMSC-025, ¶ 20 ("Diligence in the investigation is key.").

1 (13) The justification for the detention, which we have already explained, 2 combined with the diligence of the investigation, outweighs the other two factors—
3 Defendant's three-hour detention (length of detention) in the back of a police car 4 (character of the intrusion). See id. ("[D]etention in a locked squad car does not in 5 and of itself constitute an arrest during, for example, a radio search of a data base or 6 completion of an investigation of facts immediately available at the scene of the 7 detention."). The length of the detention takes on greater significance when the 8 detention continues after law enforcement "had exhausted the means of 9 investigation" to confirm or dispel their suspicions. See State v. Jutte, 1998-NMCA-10 150, ¶¶ 19-20, 126 N.M. 244, 968 P.2d 334 (involving a one-hour detention); see 11 also Hernandez, 1997-NMCA-006, ¶ 22 (finding a detention ripened into a de facto 12 arrest when the defendant was made to wait for a female officer to perform a search 13 after searches of her car failed to turn up any contraband). For example, in State v.
14 Flores, police pulled over three vehicles, one containing the defendant, based on a 15 tip that the vehicles were carrying marijuana. 1996-NMCA-059, ¶¶ 2-3, 122 N.M.
16 84, 920 P.2d 1038. After obtaining consent to search, the officers uncovered no 17 drugs during a one-hour roadside search. Id. ¶¶ 3-4. Undeterred, officers moved the 18 vehicles to a second location and searched all three vehicles again. Id. ¶¶ 12-13. The 19 defendant was detained while handcuffed for several hours while police attempted 20 to uncover evidence of drugs. Id. ¶ 4. This Court held that "[o]nce the officers failed

1 to uncover any drugs at the roadside stop, the very rationale for the stop . . . was 2 exhausted," and that "the police had no choice but to let [the d]efendant go." Id. ¶ 13 3 (citation omitted). The Court reasoned that the detention ripened into a de facto arrest 4 because officers had dispelled their initial suspicions once they failed to uncover 5 evidence of drugs at the roadside detention yet they "simply held [the d]efendant in 6 case probable cause was later developed," thereby turning the requirement for 7 probable cause "upside down." Id. ¶¶ 13, 15 (alteration, internal quotation marks, 8 and citation omitted). The present case is different, because law enforcement's 9 suspicions were never dispelled after the initial encounter. Officers had reasonable 10 suspicion to investigate the circumstances involving an older person and an 11 unidentified partially-clothed minor in a field at night. When Victim was identified 12 and the pending court cases and no-contact order were discovered as a result of the 13 investigation, the reasonable suspicion that developed and persisted throughout the 14 encounter developed into probable cause. "[T]aking into account duration and the 15 other factors" and viewing the facts in the light most favorable to the prevailing 16 party, the present case does not present circumstances in which the detention ripened 17 into an illegal de facto arrest without probable cause. See Skippings, 2014-NMCA-18 117, ¶ 25; Flores, 1996-NMCA-059, ¶ 15 (describing an "illegal, de facto arrest" as 19 one without probable cause).

1 3. The Search and Seizure of Defendant's Vehicle Was Not Unlawful

2 {14} Defendant argues that the vehicle was unconstitutionally seized by a post-3 arrest tow and searched pursuant to an insufficient search warrant affidavit (the 4 Affidavit), and as a result, law enforcement was able to collect the cellphone 5 containing the media that formed the basis for the charges against Defendant.

6 a. The Vehicle Was Lawfully Seized

7 {15} Defendant contends that the vehicle was "unlawfully seized" when it was 8 towed before any warrant was issued because "New Mexico has rejected the 9 automobile exception" to the search warrant requirement. Law enforcement, 10 however, may exercise control over a defendant's property based on a balance of 11 three factors, which in the present case weigh in favor of the seizure. See State v.
12 Ontiveros, 2022-NMCA-019, ¶¶13-15, 508 P.3d 910 (establishing the three 13 criteria). First, a reasonable nexus existed between Defendant's arrest and the seizure 14 of the vehicle, because Defendant was found with Victim inside the vehicle the night 15 of his arrest. See id. ¶ 13 ("If a defendant possesses an object at the time of an arrest, 16 then a reasonable nexus exists between the arrest and the seizure . . . of the object." 17 (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted)). Second, the vehicle was 18 "made unsecure by the arrest" because it would have been left in the middle of a 19 field on public property. Cf. id. ¶ 14 (concluding the defendant's vehicle was not 20 made unsecure by an arrest because the vehicle was parked at his grandmother's

1 trailer). Third, given the location, if left out in the field, the vehicle may have been 2 "lost, stolen, or destroyed and the police potentially held liable." See id. (internal 3 quotation marks and citation omitted). For these reasons, we conclude that law 4 enforcement permissibly towed Defendant's vehicle following his arrest.

5 b. The Affidavit Was Facialy Valid and an Evidentiary Hearing Was Not 6 Required

7 {16} After Defendant's vehicle was towed, Detective Valderaz—who was on-call 8 the night of the incident and who responded to the scene after being contacted about 9 the other pending case—prepared the Affidavit in support of a warrant to search the 10 vehicle. In the Affidavit, Detective Valderaz included information provided by 11 Deputy Whitzel. Defendant contends that the Affidavit was invalid on its face and 12 the search of the vehicle was therefore unconstitutional, and that the district court 13 should have permitted an evidentiary hearing pursuant to Franks v. Delaware, 438
14 U.S. 154 (1978) in order to permit Defendant to test the veracity of the statements 15 in the Affidavit.

16 {17} A warrant affidavit "must contain sufficient facts to enable the issuing 17 magistrate independently to pass judgment on the existence of probable cause." State 18 v. Williamson, 2009-NMSC-039, ¶ 30, 146 N.M. 488, 212 P.3d 376 (internal 19 quotation marks and citation omitted). As a reviewing court, we "must determine 20 whether the affidavit as a whole, and the reasonable inferences that may be drawn 21 therefrom, provide a substantial basis for determining that there is probable cause to 1 believe that a search will uncover evidence of wrongdoing.” Id. ¶ 29. A defendant 2 may obtain an evidentiary hearing to challenge “alleged falsehoods and omissions 3 in a search warrant affidavit” by making an offer of proof of “either deliberate 4 falsehood, or reckless disregard for the truth, as to a material fact.” State v.

5 Fernandez, 1999-NMCA-128, ¶¶ 31-34, 128 N.M. 111, 990 P.2d 224 (internal 6 quotation marks omitted). Defendant argues that the Affidavit did not establish 7 probable cause because it (1) included hearsay, (2) did not identify the occupants of 8 the vehicle by name, (3) did not establish a sufficient factual basis for criminal 9 activity, and (4) did not set forth a nexus between the specific crimes listed and the 10 collection of any cellphones from the vehicle. As we explain, we disagree with each 11 argument.

12 {18} First, hearsay may support probable cause “provided there is a substantial 13 basis for believing the source of the hearsay to be credible and for believing that 14 there is a factual basis for the information furnished.” Rule 5-211(E) NMRA; see 15 State v. Cordova, 1989-NMSC-083, ¶¶ 11, 17, 109 N.M. 211, 784 P.2d 30 (noting 16 that Rule 5-211(E) codified the test from Aguilar v. Texas, 378 U.S. 108 (1964) and 17 Spinelli v. United States, 393 U.S. 410 (1969)). Defendant contends that no such 18 substantial basis exists to believe the hearsay from Deputy Whitzel that was included 19 in the Affidavit about the identities of the occupants of the vehicle. But Deputy 20 Whitzel’s hearsay observations in the Affidavit met the standard of Rule 5-211(E).

1 The source of the hearsay, a police officer at the scene, is a credible source of 2 information. See State v. Perea, 1973-NMCA-123, ¶ 10, 85 N.M. 505, 513 P.2d 3 1287 (“Observations of fellow officers . . . engaged in a common investigation are 4 plainly a reliable basis for a warrant applied for by one of their number.” (internal 5 quotation marks and citation omitted)). Further, the basis of knowledge for the 6 information is clear in the Affidavit: Deputy Whitzel was on the scene with the 7 occupants of the vehicle when they identified themselves. Based on these two 8 conclusions, Deputy Whitzel’s hearsay that Detective Valderaz included in the 9 Affidavit satisfies the requirements of Rule 5-211(E).

10 {19} Second, a commonsense reading of the Affidavit allows for the inference that 11 the occupants of the vehicle were Defendant and Victim despite the Affidavit’s 12 failure to explicitly name either as a vehicle occupant. See Williamson, 2009-NMSC-13 039, ¶ 30 (explaining that if “the factual basis for the warrant is sufficiently detailed 14 in the search warrant affidavit and the issuing court has found probable cause, the 15 reviewing courts should not invalidate the warrant by interpreting the affidavit in a 16 hypertechnical, rather than a commonsense, manner.” (alteration, internal quotation 17 marks, and citations omitted)). The Affidavit asserts that on approaching the vehicle, 18 Deputy Whitzel observed “two occupants” but the Affidavit does not identify either 19 occupant by name. Two sentences later, the Affidavit states that Deputy Whitzel 20 “learned through his investigation” that Defendant and Victim were involved in an

1 “ongoing” district court case and that there was “a no contact order between [Victim] 2 and [Defendant].” Defendant and Victim are both identified by name in these 3 statements and in a subsequent averment that Detective Valderaz conducted 4 interviews with both Victim and Defendant after the arrest. Thus, the commonsense
5 reading of the progression of facts asserted in the Affidavit supported a conclusion 6 by the issuing court that the two individuals found in the vehicle at the scene were 7 Defendant and Victim. See State v. Donaldson, 1983-NMCA-064, ¶ 13, 100 N.M.
8 111, 666 P.2d 1258 (“In determining probable cause, the court must interpret the 9 affidavit in a common[]sense and realistic fashion and must not require technical 10 requirements of elaborate specificity.”).²

11 {20} Third, the Affidavit established facts that enabled the issuing judge to find 12 probable cause. “Probable cause to search a specific location exists when there are 13 reasonable grounds to believe that a crime has been committed in that place, or that 14 evidence of a crime will be found there.” State v. Sabeerin, 2014-NMCA-110, ¶ 8, 15 336 P.3d 990 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). As we have explained, 16 an affidavit supporting the issuance of a search warrant “must contain sufficient facts

²Because we have concluded that (1) the hearsay of Deputy Whitzel included in the Affidavit met the requirements of Rule 5-211(E); and (2) a commonsense reading of the Affidavit supported the inference that the two occupants of the vehicle were Defendant and Victim, we need not address Defendant’s related argument that because the individuals in the vehicle were not identified, there was not a sufficient nexus between the no-contact order, the vehicle, and any cellphones found within.

1 to enable the issuing judge independently to pass judgment on the existence of 2 probable cause." Id. ¶ 9 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). The affidavit 3 "must show: (1) that the items sought to be seized are evidence of a crime; and (2) 4 that the criminal evidence sought is located at the place to be searched," and must 5 also assert a factual basis establishing "a sufficient nexus between . . . the criminal 6 activity, and the . . . things to be seized, and . . . the place to be searched." Id. ¶ 10 7 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). The Affidavit sufficiently satisfied 8 these criteria.

9 {21} The Affidavit in the present case described the circumstances of the traffic 10 stop, including that Defendant was found with a minor female in a t-shirt and 11 underwear; an ongoing district court case involved Defendant and Victim; and 12 Defendant and Victim were to have no contact per court order. Further, the Affidavit 13 states that Detective Valderaz interviewed Victim, who acknowledged that there 14 were "at least two meetings" with Defendant and that "they were exchanging text 15 messages for these meetings." The Affidavit continued, "based on the ongoing no-16]contact order and the text messages between [Defendant] and [Victim]." These facts 17 are sufficient to establish probable cause of criminal activity—that Defendant 18 violated the no-contact order. See id. ¶ 10. And because the two were found inside 19 Defendant's vehicle, and any cellphones therein would likely contain evidence of 20 Defendant's violation of the no-contact order, the probable cause established for the

1 criminal activity was sufficiently tied to the things to be seized and the place to be 2 searched. See id. Viewing the Affidavit in a commonsense, rather than a 3 hypertechnical manner, we conclude that the Affidavit provided the issuing court 4 with a substantial basis to find probable cause in support of the search warrant. See 5 id. ¶¶ 23-24 (requiring the affidavit to provide sufficient facts upon which to 6 conclude that there was a “reasonable probability” connecting criminal activity with 7 the area to be searched).

8 {22} Fourth, the Affidavit additionally established probable cause to search for 9 evidence of SEC in the vehicle. See id. ¶ 8 (explaining that probable cause exists “to 10 search a specific location . . . when there are reasonable grounds to believe that . . .
11 evidence of a crime will be found there” (internal quotation marks and citation 12 omitted)). Defendant contends that the search warrant in this case only attempted to 13 establish probable cause for violation of the no-contact order and then impermissibly 14 requested a search for evidence of two entirely different crimes—SEC and bribery 15 or intimidation of a witness. We disagree. The Affidavit alleges that a young female 16 was found partially unclothed in a parked, running vehicle, lying next to an 17 obviously older male. Another case restricted contact between the two and though 18 Victim acknowledged that text messages had been exchanged, Victim declined to 19 answer whether “she had sent any nude photographs of herself to [Defendant].”
20 When Defendant and Victim were removed from the vehicle, a reasonable inference

1 arose that any cellphones that were not found on their persons were left behind in 2 the vehicle. Victim's disinclination to answer questions about nude photographs 3 supports an inference that the cellphones—the things to be seized—that law 4 enforcement reasonably inferred were located in the vehicle—the thing to be 5 searched—contained evidence of SEC. See § 30-6A-3(A) (defining sexual 6 exploitation of a child); Sabeerin, 2014-NMCA-110, ¶13 (explaining that in 7 determining probable cause, “[a]ll direct and circumstantial evidence alleged, as well 8 as all reasonable inferences to be drawn from those allegations, should be 9 considered.” (internal quotation marks and citation omitted)).

10 (23) Because we conclude that the Affidavit contains sufficient facts to support 11 probable cause to investigate the vehicle, see Williamson, 2009-NMSC-039, ¶30, 12 we consider Defendant's additional argument that the district court should have held 13 a hearing to evaluate Defendant's contention that the Affidavit was nevertheless 14 invalidated by material omissions, see State v. Chavez, 2023-NMCA-071, ¶42, 535
15 P.3d 736; see also Fernandez, 1999-NMCA-128, ¶31 (requiring for a Franks 16 evidentiary hearing, a defendant to make a sufficient offer of proof that a warrant 17 contains material omissions or deliberate falsehoods). Defendant argues that a 18 Franks hearing was necessary based on Defendant's assertions in the district court 19 that the Affidavit omitted exculpatory statements made by Victim during the police 20 interview that followed Defendant's arrest, including that Victim was “in love with

1 [Defendant] and he has never talked to her about not testifying or intimidating her 2 as a witness." Defendant, however, identifies no evidence that the omissions were 3 deliberate and in reckless disregard of the truth beyond the facial allegation that they 4 were. And the specific omissions identified by Defendant, if true and established at 5 a Franks hearing, would not have been material to probable cause of SEC or 6 violation of the no-contact order. See Donaldson, 1983-NMCA-064, ¶ 17 7 (evaluating the materiality of any asserted falsehood based on whether, "had the 8 information been set out or correctly stated in the affidavit, it would have altered a 9 reasonable magistrate's determination of probable cause"). We therefore conclude 10 that the district court appropriately denied Defendant's request for a Franks hearing.
11 See Fernandez, 1999-NMCA-128, ¶ 31 (requiring, to justify a hearing, the defendant 12 to make an offer of proof to "indicate that the affidavit contained material deliberate 13 falsehoods or a reckless disregard for the truth" (internal quotation marks and 14 citation omitted)).

15 4. The District Court Did Not Abuse Its Discretion by Granting the State's 16 Motion in Limine for Forfeiture by Wrongdoing

17 {24} The State moved in limine to admit Victim's out-of-court statements based on 18 its position that Defendant procured her absence from trial. The district court granted 19 the motion and allowed the State to present some of Victim's out-of-court statements 20 at trial. Defendant argues that his misconduct did not cause Victim's unavailability, 21 and therefore the district court improperly admitted text messages between

1 Defendant and Victim as well as Deputy Padilla's bodycam footage that shows 2 Deputy Padilla having a conversation with Victim at the scene. This error, Defendant
3 argues, resulted in a violation of the Confrontation Clause and a violation of the rules
4 of evidence. See State v. Farrington, 2020-NMSC-022, ¶ 13, 476 P.3d 1231.
5 (recognizing the forfeiture rule as "both an exception to confrontation rights and a 6 codified evidentiary exception to the rule against hearsay" (emphasis omitted)). We 7 first consider de novo whether any of the challenged statements implicate 8 Defendant's constitutional right to confrontation, see State v. Tsosie, 2022-NMSC-9 017, ¶¶ 22-23, 516 P.3d 1116, and otherwise review the district court's ruling on a 10 motion in limine for an abuse of discretion, see State v. Rojo, 1999-NMSC-001, ¶ 41, 11 126 N.M. 438, 971 P.2d 829.

12 (25) "The United States Supreme Court has long held a [d]efendant's right to 13 confrontation may be forfeited by his own wrongdoing . . . [because] the law will 14 not allow a person to take advantage of his own wrong." State v. Alvarez-Lopez, 15 2004-NMSC-030, ¶ 8, 136 N.M. 309, 98 P.3d 699 (alteration, internal quotation 16 marks, and citations omitted). The forfeiture exception that operates to waive a 17 defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation "applies only to testimonial 18 hearsay." Farrington, 2020-NMSC-022, ¶ 30 (internal quotation marks and citation 19 omitted); see U.S. Const. amend. VI. Statements are "'testimonial when the 20 circumstances objectively indicate . . . that the primary purpose of the police

1 interrogation is to establish or prove past events potentially relevant to later criminal 2 prosecution.” Tsosie, 2022-NMSC-017, ¶ 28 (emphasis omitted) (quoting Davis v.
3 Washington, 547 U.S. 813, 822 (2006)). Statements are nontestimonial when the 4 primary purpose of questioning is to assist police in meeting an ongoing emergency, 5 id., however, the United States Supreme Court has acknowledged that “there may 6 be other circumstances, aside from ongoing emergencies, when a statement is not 7 procured with a primary purpose of creating an out-of-court substitute for trial 8 testimony.” Michigan v. Bryant, 562 U.S. 344, 358 (2011). To evaluate the primary 9 purpose of any admitted statements, courts should “objectively evaluat[e] the 10 statements and actions of the parties to the encounter, in light of the circumstances 11 in which the interrogation occurs.” State v. Largo, 2012-NMSC-015, ¶ 12, 278 P.3d 12 532 (quoting Bryant, 562 U.S. at 370). “In the end, the question is whether, in light 13 of all the circumstances, viewed objectively, the ‘primary purpose’ of the 14 conversation was to create an out-of-court substitute for trial testimony.” Tsosie, 15 2022-NMSC-017, ¶ 40 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

16 (26) Based on all of the circumstances, Victim’s statements made in text messages 17 and the bodycam video were not testimonial. We agree with the State that the “text 18 messages exchanged privately between [Victim] and Defendant before Defendant 19 was charged in this case were plainly not solemn declarations, nor were they written 20 to establish facts or past events relevant to a later prosecution.” Victim’s statements

1 to Deputy Padilla at the scene, captured on Deputy Padilla's bodycam, were neither 2 hearsay nor testimonial, and therefore do not implicate the Confrontation Clause.
3 See State v. Lea, 2023-NMCA-061, ¶ 7, 535 P.3d 754 ("The Confrontation Clause
4 is violated only if the testimonial statement is offered to prove the truth of the matters 5 asserted." (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted)); Smith v.
6 Arizona, 602 U.S. ___, ___, 144 S. Ct. 1785, 1792 (2024) (explaining that the 7 Confrontation Clause "bars only the introduction of hearsay—meaning, out-of-court 8 statements offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted" (internal quotation marks 9 and citation omitted)).

10 {27} Defendant has not pointed us to any specific statements on Deputy Padilla's 11 recording that were offered at trial for their truth, and the primary purpose of the 12 encounter was not to obtain out of court testimony. The statements elicited by 13 Deputy Padilla from Victim—name, age, guardian contact information, and the 14 circumstances at the vehicle—were necessary for police to evaluate the situation at 15 hand. Deputy Padilla's intent was to determine whether Victim was in any present 16 danger. Victim's statements and actions indicated an intent to prevent the police 17 from contacting her grandmother and to deny any wrongdoing on the part of 18 Defendant. After the initial questions, Victim indicated that she had a phone, asked 19 Deputy Padilla not to call her grandmother because she was supposed to be in a class, 20 and stated more than once that "nothing happened." As Defendant has repeatedly

1 argued, Victim's statements themselves did not implicate wrongdoing by Defendant.
2 It was law enforcement's other observations that seemingly contradicted Victim's 3 statements that supported further investigation, and the video clip "explained the 4 context for law enforcement's investigation." See State v. Scott, 2023-NMCA-031, 5 ¶ 10, 528 P.3d 728 (addressing a situation in which the "information provided to law 6 enforcement did not explicitly incriminate [the d]efendant as having actually 7 committed the crime at issue—that is, distributing narcotics, but rather explained the 8 context for law enforcement's investigation"). Nothing suggests that Victim "made 9 the statement[s] primarily intending to establish some fact with the understanding 10 that the statement[s] may be used in a criminal prosecution." See id. ¶ 6 (internal 11 quotation marks and citation omitted).

12 (28) Based on the obvious age difference between Defendant and Victim and the 13 circumstances in which they were discovered, law enforcement needed to determine 14 if Victim was at risk from Defendant in order to "to know whether it was safe to 15 release" Victim in the company of Defendant. See Tsosie, 2022-NMSC-017, ¶ 41 16 (describing teachers' questions to a minor student in Ohio v. Clark, 576 U.S. 237, 17 246-49 (2015)). While the investigators in the present case were law enforcement, 18 which is "highly relevant to the Sixth Amendment analysis," the challenged 19 statements by Victim on the bodycam recording did not implicate Defendant in a 20 crime. Considering the circumstances of the entire encounter, we conclude that

1 Victim's statements captured on the bodycam footage were not testimonial. See 2 Tsosie, 2022-NMSC-017, ¶¶ 39-42. Our review of the admission of Victim's 3 statements is therefore not constitutional. See Farrington, 2020-NMSC-022, ¶ 30.

4 {29} Instead, we analyze the district court's admission of Victim's out-of-court
5 statements under Rule 11-804 NMRA for abuse of discretion. See id. ¶ 33. Rule 11-6 804 sets forth an exception to the hearsay rule based on the declarant's 7 unavailability. Under Rule 11-804(A)(5), a declarant is "unavailable" if the 8 proponent of the declarant's testimony demonstrates an inability "by process or any 9 other reasonable means, to procure" the declarant's attendance. If a declarant is 10 unavailable, Rule 11-804(B)(5) permits the introduction of the declarant's hearsay 11 if it is "[a] statement offered against a party that wrongfully caused—or acquiesced 12 in wrongfully causing—the declarant's unavailability as a witness, and did so 13 intending that result." Defendant argues the State did not satisfy either Rule 11-804 14 requirement.

15 {30} Although Defendant contends that the "State did not make a good-faith[] 16 effort to procure [Victim's] attendance for trial" under Rule 11-804(A), seven 17 months before trial, Defendant conceded at the pretrial hearing on the State's motion 18 that Victim was unavailable to testify at trial after the State put on evidence showing 19 its unsuccessful efforts to locate Victim. The district court found that Defendant 20 conceded Victim's unavailability. Immediately before trial, Defendant raised the 1 matter again and the district court ruled that “unless [D]efendant can show that 2 perhaps circumstances have changed,” there was no reason to reconsider the earlier 3 ruling. On appeal, Defendant identifies no circumstances that had changed in the 4 months between the hearing and the start of trial that would undermine the 5 concession that Victim was unavailable. We therefore consider the argument no 6 further and turn to the Rule 11-804(B)(5) hearsay exception.

7 {31} In order for the forfeiture exception set forth in Rule 11-804(B)(5) to apply, 8 four conditions must be established—but Defendant challenges only the third,
9 whether misconduct caused Victim’s unavailability. See Farrington, 2020-NMSC-10 022, ¶ 23 (outlining the factors). Defendant denies engaging in any misconduct or 11 taking any action to cause Victim’s unavailability, and maintains that Victim’s 12 absence was in part because Victim had “d disdain” for the prosecution. The district 13 court, however, concluded that Defendant’s coercion caused Victim not to testify
14 and a preponderance of the evidence supports that conclusion. See id. ¶ 35 15 (explaining that the district court evaluates the forfeiture exception “through the lens 16 of Rule 11-104(A) NMRA,” which requires the district court to “address preliminary 17 questions about admissibility” and be satisfied “by a preponderance of the evidence 18 that the foundational requirement has been met” (internal quotation marks and 19 citation omitted)). In relation to another pending case, Defendant texted to Victim, 20 “I don’t want to go to trial on the 4th if you are going to testify.” Also regarding the

1 other case, Defendant repeatedly asked Victim if she would break under questioning
2 and asked what she would do if police put her in jail; assured Victim several times 3 that the charges would be dismissed if she refused to testify; encouraged Victim to 4 lie to the prosecution about her reasons for not testifying; and again asked for 5 reassurance about Victim's promised refusal. The messages from Defendant were 6 plainly intended to "silence testimony and impede the truth-seeking function of 7 trial." See State v. Maestas, 2018-NMSC-010, ¶ 32, 412 P.3d 79. Even though 8 Defendant did not instruct or demand that Victim not testify in the present case, 9 "wrongdoing, for purposes of application of the forfeiture exception, need not take 10 the form of overt threat of harm" and "various forms of coercion, persuasion, and 11 control may satisfy the requirement." See id. ¶¶ 2, 34, 46. The text evidence 12 supported the district court's conclusion that Defendant coerced, persuaded, and 13 controlled the teenaged Victim and that Defendant "intended to cause, and did 14 cause" Victim's unavailability. Id. ¶ 46.

15 {32} Defendant resists this conclusion based on a view that Victim was still 16 cooperating with the State for at least six months following the text conversation 17 relayed above and because the district court received evidence that Victim did not 18 come to trial because of a seizure disorder. Victim explained to Defendant, however, 19 that even though her grandmother would make her appear in court for the other case, 20 she would refuse to answer any questions. Following the dates of the text messages,

1 the State represented in writing and at a hearing that Victim would cooperate and 2 Victim came to court but was not called to the stand and provided no testimony. The 3 district court's ruling on forfeiture-by-wrongdoing "will be disturbed on appeal only 4 when the facts and circumstances of the case do not support its logic and effect." See 5 State v. Martinez, 2007-NMSC-025, ¶ 7, 141 N.M. 713, 160 P.3d 894 (alteration, 6 internal quotation marks, and citation omitted). The facts and circumstances support 7 a conclusion that Victim's earlier words in response to Defendant's entreaties 8 through texts more effectively demonstrated Victim's intent than either the State's 9 representations about Victim's intentions that never came to fruition or Victim's 10 grandmother's representation that Victim did not want to testify because of a seizure 11 disorder. That evidence therefore supports the district court's determination on this 12 issue by a preponderance of the evidence, see Farrington, 2020-NMSC-022, ¶ 35, 13 and we otherwise decline to disturb that ruling.

14 II. The Trial Challenges

15 {33} Defendant also contests multiple aspects of the trial testimony of Lieutenant 16 Perham and the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict. We address each 17 in turn.

18 A. Lieutenant Perham's Testimony Was Admissible

19 {34} Defendant challenges the testimony of Lieutenant Perham in three respects.
20 Defendant argues: (1) Lieutenant Perham's testimony should have been excluded

1 because the State did not make a timely expert disclosure; (2) the identification of 2 Victim by Lieutenant Perham invaded the province of the jury; and (3) Lieutenant 3 Perham lacked personal knowledge about the phones and chain of custody, resulting 4 in a violation of the right to confrontation. To put the arguments in context, we 5 review the relevant aspects of his trial testimony:

6 {35} The State began Lieutenant Perham's testimony on the first day of trial.
7 Lieutenant Perham was not initially offered as an expert but testified about his 8 training and background investigating child sexual exploitation. When Lieutenant 9 Perham identified Victim as the person in the media found on the cellphones and 10 testified to her approximate age, Defendant objected based on speculation and 11 because Lieutenant Perham was not a medical expert. Importantly, the media 12 exhibits showed only a nude body and not the face of the individual depicted. The 13 district court permitted Lieutenant Perham to continue, but after a few more minutes 14 of testimony, the district court excused the jurors for the day to further discuss with 15 the parties Lieutenant Perham's role as a witness.

16 {36} After the jury left, the district court permitted Defendant to expand on the 17 objection made to Lieutenant Perham's testimony. Defendant argued that Lieutenant 18 Perham had not been noticed as an expert and any testimony identifying the 19 individual in the media as a minor would need to come from a medical expert. The 20 district court determined that any opinion testimony about the age of the individual

1 in the media would fall within lay testimony, but regarding Lieutenant Perham's 2 opinion that the individual in the video and photographs was Victim, the court 3 allowed Defendant to voir dire the witness.

4 {37} Lieutenant Perham testified that he had met Victim in person, and although 5 he had not seen her nude before, he had seen many other photographs of her, and 6 could compare her size and frame to the individual depicted in the media. The State 7 then handed Lieutenant Perham several photographs of Victim to confirm that he 8 could make the identification. Ultimately, the district court determined that 9 additional foundation would be required for Lieutenant Perham to identify Victim 10 as the individual portrayed in the video and photographs. The next day at trial, 11 despite the district court's ruling that Lieutenant Perham's testimony was lay 12 opinion, the State laid a foundation for Lieutenant Perham's training and experience 13 in child exploitation investigations and data extraction, processing, and analysis. The 14 district court qualified Lieutenant Perham as an expert in those fields and overruled 15 Defendant's objection that the State did not give appropriate notice of the intent to 16 call Lieutenant Perham as an expert. The State also offered additional foundation for 17 Lieutenant Perham to identify Victim in the media, which the district court permitted 18 over Defendant's objection. With this context in mind we consider each of 19 Defendant's challenges to the testimony of the Lieutenant.

1. The District Court Did Not Abuse Its Discretion by Admitting the Expert
 2. Testimony of Lieutenant Perham Despite the Late Disclosure
 3. To decide “whether late disclosure of evidence requires reversal” and
 4. constituted an abuse of discretion, we consider the following factors: “(1) whether
 5. the State breached some duty or intentionally deprived the defendant of evidence;
 6. (2) whether the improperly non-disclosed evidence was material; (3) whether the 7. non-disclosure of the evidence prejudiced the defendant; and (4) whether the trial
 8. court cured the failure to timely disclose the evidence.” See State v. Durate, 2007-
 9. NMCA-012, ¶12, 15, 140 N.M. 930, 149 P.3d 1027 (internal quotation marks and
 10. citation omitted). On appeal, “Defendant has the burden of showing that he was 11. prejudiced by the untimely disclosure.” See id. ¶15 (internal quotation marks and
 12. citation omitted). The State concedes it violated a disclosure duty under Rule 5-
 13. 501(A)(5) NMRA, we accept that concession, and this factor weighs in favor of 14. error. We therefore turn our attention to the materiality, prejudice, and curative
 15. factors.

16. [33] The late disclosure of Lieutenant Perham’s status as an expert was neither
 17. material nor prejudicial, and the district court cured the untimely disclosure. As of
 18. the January 13, 2022 hearing, Defendant was aware that Lieutenant Perham
 19. participated in the seizure and extraction of data from the cellphones and that the 20. State intended to use law enforcement testimony to prove Victim’s identity. The 21. district court permitted Defendant to interview Lieutenant Perham and that interview

1 occurred before trial. Before the district court qualified Lieutenant Perham as an 2 expert, Defendant further conducted voir dire of Lieutenant Perham about the 3 identity and age opinions. At trial, Defendant thoroughly tested Lieutenant Perham's 4 opinions on cross-examination. For these reasons, Defendant does not meet the 5 burden to demonstrate that Lieutenant Perham's testimony as an expert, rather than 6 a lay witness, was material. See McDaniel, 2004-NMCA-022, ¶ 13 (defining 7 materiality as "whether the outcome of the trial would have been different if the 8 witness had been disclosed earlier"). Nor does Defendant establish prejudice. See 9 Duarte, 2007-NMCA-012, ¶ 15 (explaining the test for prejudice as "whether the 10 defense's case would have been improved by an earlier disclosure or how the defense 11 would have prepared differently for trial" (alteration, internal quotation marks, and 12 citation omitted)). Defendant does not explain how he would have prepared 13 differently had he known that Lieutenant Perham would testify as an expert, 14 particularly because the district court permitted Defendant to voir dire Lieutenant 15 Perham outside the presence of the jury before permitting Lieutenant Perham to give 16 expert testimony. See State v. Vallejos, 2000-NMCA-075, ¶¶ 33-34, 129 N.M. 424, 17 9 P.3d 668 (discremning no abuse of discretion to admit a late-disclosed witness when 18 the district court ordered the witness to be made available for interview). We 19 therefore conclude that Defendant has not met the burden on appeal to demonstrate

1 that the district court abused its discretion when it admitted Lieutenant Perham's 2 expert testimony at trial. See Duarte, 2007-NMCA-012, ¶ 15.

3 2. The District Court Did Not Abuse Its Discretion by Permitting
4 Lieutenant Perham to Identify Victim

5 {40} Next, Defendant argues that the district court abused its discretion when it 6 allowed Lieutenant Perham "to identify [Victim] as the person in the video and 7 pictures." See Rojo, 1999-NMSC-001, ¶ 41. The New Mexico Rules of Evidence 8 "restrict admissible opinion testimony—from lay witnesses and experts alike—to 9 opinions that benefit the fact-finder's understanding or help the fact-finder determine 10 a fact in issue." State v. Chavez, 2022-NMCA-007, ¶ 41, 504 P.3d 541; see Rule 11-
11 701(B) NMRA; Rule 11-702 NMRA. This Court has adopted five factors to consider 12 when determining whether a witness is more likely than the jury to identify an 13 individual in a video or photograph. See Chavez, 2022-NMCA-007, ¶ 41 (noting that 14 the factors apply to lay witness identifications of "a person"); see also State v.
15 Stalter, 2023-NMCA-054, ¶ 28, 534 P.3d 989 (remarking that the factors apply to 16 video and photographic evidence). These factors include

17 (1) the witness's general level of familiarity with the [individual's] 18 appearance; (2) the witness's familiarity with the [individual's] 19 appearance at the time the surveillance photograph was taken or 20 whether the [individual] was dressed in a manner similar to the 21 individual depicted; (3) whether the [individual] disguised [their] 22 appearance at the time of the offense; (4) whether the [individual] had 23 altered [their] appearance prior to trial; and (5) the degree of clarity of 24 the surveillance recording and the quality and completeness of the 25 subject's depiction in the recording.

1 State v. Sweat, 2017-NMCA-069, ¶ 22, 404 P.3d 20 (internal quotation marks and 2 citation omitted) (applying the factors to the lay witness identification of a 3 defendant); see also Chavez, 2022-NMCA-007, ¶ 41 (concluding that the factors 4 apply to people and objects appearing in video recordings).

5 {41} These factors weigh in favor of Lieutenant Perham's testimony. Regarding 6 the first two factors, Lieutenant Perham testified that he first met Victim in person 7 in 2017 and had "spoken to or been in her presence maybe six times," and these 8 meetings occurred fairly close in time to the 2018 charges against Defendant. In 9 relation to the third and fifth factors, the photos did not include the individual's face 10 making it more difficult for the jury to identify the individual, though the body was 11 clearly depicted. Because Victim did not appear at trial, the fourth factor is not 12 relevant. Based on these factors, Lieutenant Perham was more familiar with Victim's 13 appearance than the jury, and his opinion that Victim was the individual portrayed 14 in the media was therefore helpful to the jury as required by Rules 11-701 and 11-15 702. Thus, we conclude that the district court did not abuse its discretion in allowing 16 Lieutenant Perham to identify Victim in the video and photographs at issue.

17 3. The Unavailability of Detective Valderaz Did Not Undermine the 18 Foundation for the Media Evidence

19 {42} Defendant additionally argues that Lieutenant Perham's testimony could not 20 properly substitute for the testimony of Detective Valderaz, who died before trial, to

1 establish the requisite foundation or to satisfy the Sixth Amendment right to 2 confrontation. See U.S. Const. amend. VI. Again, we review claimed constitutional 3 violations de novo and the admission of evidence for abuse of discretion. See State 4 v. Huettl, 2013-NMCA-038, ¶ 16, 305 P.3d 956 (stating standard of review for 5 confrontation violations); Rojo, 1999-NMSC-001, ¶ 41 (stating standard of review 6 for admission of evidence).

7 {43} Both Detective Valderaz and Lieutenant Perham were involved with the 8 investigation of this case beginning on the night the vehicle was discovered in the 9 field. Detective Valderaz went to the scene the night of the incident and Lieutenant 10 Perham was briefed by phone on the situation. Lieutenant Perham arrived the 11 following morning to participate in the search of the seized vehicle. Detective 12 Valderaz and Lieutenant Perham participated in executing the search warrant on 13 Defendant's vehicle. Though Lieutenant Perham was present for the search of the 14 vehicle and the seizure and photographing of the cellphones, Detective Valderaz 15 collected the physical evidence from the vehicle, filled out the evidence tags, and 16 took the evidence to be further secured. Lieutenant Perham did not accompany 17 Detective Valderaz and the evidence to the storage locker. At trial, Lieutenant 18 Perham testified generally about the procedures involved in the execution of a search 19 warrant and the collection of evidence, and then described his own experience 20 participating in some of those procedures in the present case.

1 {44} Defendant claims that he had a constitutional right to cross-examine Detective 2 Valderaz—whom Defendant describes as the officer that “actually collected the 3 evidence”—about “where he allegedly collected the cellular phones from, his 4 collection and handling of them, the dates they were collected, and the procedures 5 used to ensure the evidentiary chain of custody.” On appeal, Defendant only 6 challenges the chain of custody testimony following the seizure of the cellphone—7 what happened to the phone after Lieutenant Perham’s involvement. Defendant
8 compares the present case to State v. Carmona, 2016-NMCA-050, 371 P.3d 1056, 9 in which an expert relied on a report from a deceased nurse who conducted an 10 examination and collected evidence. Id. ¶¶ 2-4. Because the testifying expert was 11 not present for the exam and relied on the other nurse’s report to opine that the 12 evidence collected came from the victim, id. ¶¶ 37-40, this Court held that the 13 admission of the expert’s testimony violated the defendant’s right to confrontation, 14 id. ¶ 42. In the present case, however, Lieutenant Perham was present for the search 15 of Defendant’s vehicle and observed the photographs being taken and the cellphones 16 being collected. He did not merely rely on Detective Valderaz’s statements that the 17 evidence came from Defendant’s vehicle—he actually observed the phone being 18 collected.

19 {45} Defendant maintains that Lieutenant Perham’s incomplete memory of the 20 search demonstrated that he relied on hearsay from Detective Valderaz—in the form

1 of Detective Valderaz's signatures on evidence bags—to testify that the chain of 2 custody was complete. Defendant's argument appears to be that the State introduced 3 improper "basis evidence." See State v. Jimenez, 2017-NMCA-039, ¶ 12, 392 P.3d
4 668 (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted). "Basis evidence," 5 which includes out-of-court-statements that form the basis for a testifying witness's 6 conclusion, whether expert or lay, is testimonial and therefore must be subjected to 7 Confrontation Clause scrutiny." Id. (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation 8 omitted). The defendant in Jimenez wanted to "confront the additional officers who 9 conducted the search of his car" to "explore a speculative theory" about evidence 10 planting or contamination. Id. ¶ 18. But perceived deficiencies in the testimony of a 11 witness with personal knowledge go to the weight of the evidence and not its 12 admissibility. See id. So too Lieutenant Perham's incomplete memory and the 13 absence of Detective Valderaz's testimony regarding his role in physically tagging 14 the evidence after it was collected "went to the weight of the evidence not to the 15 admissibility of it." See Huettl, 2013-NMCA-038, ¶ 31. Lieutenant Perham testified 16 based on his personal knowledge of the search of the vehicle and seizure of the 17 cellphone from Defendant's vehicle, without reference to any statement by the 18 absent Detective Valderaz, and Defendant thoroughly cross-examined Lieutenant 19 Perham about the personal knowledge supporting Lieutenant Perham's testimony.
20 See Jimenez, 2017-NMCA-039, ¶ 12. ("[W]here a witness testifies from personal knowledge and neither makes a statement nor draws a conclusion that is based on hearsay, the Confrontation Clause is not implicated at all.”). As a result, “Defendant’s Sixth Amendment right to confront the witnesses against him was not violated because no witness’s testimony included testimonial hearsay.” See id. ¶ 21.

{46} Defendant’s remaining foundational arguments do not persuade us that the district court otherwise abused its discretion by admitting evidence without proof of chain of custody, because the evidence was “shown by a preponderance of the evidence to be what it purports to be.” See id. ¶ 18 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Though Lieutenant Perham did not collect the cellphone himself, his presence for the search of Defendant’s vehicle and seizure of the cellphone established his personal knowledge of the cellphone that was seized and permitted him to identify the cellphone visually and provide the appropriate foundation for its admission. See Rule 11-602 NMRA; see also State v. Peters, 1997-NMCA-084, ¶ 26, 123 N.M. 667, 944 P.3d 896 (“In order to admit real or demonstrative evidence, the evidence must be identified either visually or by establishing custody of the object from the time of seizure to the time it is offered into evidence.”). The district court therefore did not abuse its discretion in admitting Lieutenant Perham’s testimony about the cellphone.

1 B. The Evidence Supported Defendant's Convictions for SEC (Recording)

2 {47} Defendant also challenges the sufficiency of the State's evidence to establish 3 that he committed SEC, contrary to Section 30-6A-3(D)—the recording convictions.
4 "The test for sufficiency of the evidence is whether substantial evidence of either a 5 direct or circumstantial nature exists to support a verdict of guilty beyond a 6 reasonable doubt with respect to every element essential to a conviction." State v.
7 Montoya, 2015-NMSC-010, ¶ 52, 345 P.3d 1056 (internal quotation marks and 8 citation omitted). We will "view[] the evidence in the light most favorable to the 9 guilty verdict, indulging all reasonable inferences and resolving all conflicts in the 10 evidence in favor of the verdict." Id. (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).
11 Contrary evidence supporting a different result "does not provide a basis for reversal 12 because the jury is free to reject [the defendant's] version of the facts." Id. (internal 13 quotation marks and citation omitted). For our review, the "[j]ury instructions 14 become the law of the case against which the sufficiency of the evidence is to be 15 measured." State v. Smith, 1986-NMCA-089, ¶ 7, 104 N.M. 729, 726 P.2d 883. The 16 jury was instructed, in relevant part, that the State had to prove beyond a reasonable 17 doubt that

18 1. [D]efendant caused or permitted [Victim] to engage in any 19 prohibited sexual act or simulation of such an act ...;

20 . . .

1 3. [D]efendant knew or had reason to know or intended that the 2 prohibited sexual act or simulation thereof may be recorded in 3 any obscene visual or print medium;

4 4. [Victim] was under 18 years of age.

5 Defendant challenges the evidence supporting each of these three elements.

6 {48} Defendant argues that the State did not prove elements one and three because 7 he did not specifically request nude or sexual pictures or ask for a sexual video, he 8 did not cause or permit Victim to engage in a prohibited sexual act, and he did not 9 intend that it be recorded. We disagree. At trial, the State's expert in the field of 10 "mobile phone forensics" testified that Defendant's and Victim's phones contained 11 thousands of text messages exchanged between Defendant and Victim including 12 sexually explicit messages. Specifically, the expert described a text message 13 conversation where Defendant asked Victim, "Can you send pics?" to which Victim 14 replied, "Hehe yes my loves," and Defendant clarified, "Ass bent over?" 15 Immediately following Defendant's request, Victim sent the two photographs at 16 issue in this case and responded, "These work?" Defendant's response to the photos 17 demonstrates that he received the pictures that he had intended for Victim to take—18 he replied, "I absolutely love your body!!!!" Several days later, Defendant sent 19 Victim a text asking, "Are you pleasuring yourself?" and Victim responded, "Hehe 20 I sure am." Defendant replied, "I want to see," and Victim then sent the video at 21 issue in this case. Defendant's response to the video was again positive. Based on

1 the timing and reasonable inferences gleaned from the above text conversations and 2 viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the verdict, we conclude that the 3 State presented sufficient evidence for the jury to find that Defendant caused or 4 permitted Victim to engage in a prohibited sexual act and that Defendant knew, had 5 reason to know, or intended that the prohibited sexual act may be recorded. See § 30-6.6A-3(D); Montoya, 2015-NMSC-010, ¶ 52.

7 {49} Defendant also challenges the evidence supporting the age element and argues 8 that “the State failed to prove that the image was that of a child.” On the second day 9 of trial, Lieutenant Perham described the photos at issue in this case, including a 10 photo taken in a bathroom, and opined that based on his training and experience the 11 individual depicted therein was under the age of eighteen. Also at trial, Victim’s 12 grandmother testified that Victim was sixteen years old in 2018, when the previously 13 described text conversations occurred. Victim’s grandmother also identified Victim 14 in several photos and gave testimony describing several photos of the house—15 including the bathroom—that she lived in with Victim at the time the media was 16 created. During the State’s closing argument, counsel invited the jury to compare the 17 background of the photographs at issue in this case to the photographs of Victim’s 18 bathroom at home authenticated by Victim’s grandmother. We conclude that 19 substantial evidence supported the jury’s verdict finding that the individual 20 portrayed in the photographs and video was under the age of eighteen.

2 (50) Finally, Defendant argues that because “there were substantial errors 3 through[]out this case, the doctrine of cumulative error requires reversal.” We have 4 concluded no error occurred, and “[w]here there is no error to accumulate, there can 5 be no cumulative error.” See State v. Samora, 2013-NMSC-038, ¶ 28, 307 P.3d 328 6 (alteration, internal quotation marks, and citation omitted).
