SUPPLEMENT TO QUESTION 12

Lezlie A. Day v. Gregory Day | Affidavit in Support of Motion to Proceed In Forma Pauperis
November 12, 2026

In addition to the information handwritten in Question 12, I have approximately $15,000 in unpaid UVA Medical Center charges in collections and face approximately $10,000 in court-ordered attorney fees arising from Loudoun County litigation, which I dispute. I also have unpaid Sallie Mae student loans, credit-card obligations, and balances associated with closed or charged-off bank accounts that continue to be pursued for collection. Exact current balances are not readily available.

My 2022 Mercedes-Benz C300 has an outstanding loan balance of approximately $43,175, with $6,205.69 in past-due payments. The vehicle also has approximately $20,000 in unrepaired damage. I cannot currently afford automobile insurance.

Before my right-hand injury in May 2024, I was attempting to launch a business. One storage bill alone is approximately $13,000; additional storage and shipping obligations amount to thousands of dollars more, although the exact totals are not presently available. I cannot afford to retrieve my inventory, develop additional product labels, market my products, or consistently pay shipping expenses to fulfill the limited orders I receive. The business has not generated sufficient income to sustain operations.

I paid $900 out of pocket for a cervical MRI after insurance coverage was denied, and I am seeking reimbursement. I anticipate undergoing five surgeries, with related medical and recovery expenses. Over the course of my divorce and related litigation, I have incurred more than $500,000 in legal and related professional expenses. These financial obligations and limitations further explain why I cannot pay the costs of this Supreme Court proceeding.
