MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will now hear argument in Number 128: in re Barbara Burrus.

ORAL ARGUMENT BY MICHAEL MELTSNER, ESQ.

ON BEHALF OF PETITIONERS

MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Meltsner, you may proceed, I think, now if you are ready.

MR. MELTSNER: Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the Court: This case is here on writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court of North Carolina to review the court's judgment that Petitioners, over 40 Black youths between the ages of 11 and 15, were not entitled by the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments to trial by jury in juvenile court proceedings held to determine whether they had violated state criminal laws.

The cases arose out of a conflict between Blacks and whites in Hyde County, North Carolina, over the manner in which the county school board chose to implement this Court's decision in Brown versus Board of Education. As a result, almost the entire Black population boycotted the public schools in 1968.

During the months of September to December the Petitioners were taken into custody by state police and charged with willfully, intentionally and unlawfully impeding highway traffic in violation of the state criminal statute which, at the time of trial, provided a two-year maximum

1 penalty for adults.

2 One juvenile was charged with willfully becoming 3 disorderly and defacing school property, in violation of two 4 other state criminal statutes which at the time of trial im-
5 posed a maximum penalty of two years in prison for adults.

6 Petitioners were tried in several groups in the 7 District Court of Hyde County, a court of general, civil and 8 criminal jurisdiction, sitting as a juvenile court. In each 9 case, with the exception of one juvenile charged with dis-
10 orderly conduct and defacement of property, the police officer
11 testified to observing groups of Black youths marching, 12 singing, carrying signs, playing catch with a basketball, all 13 in such a manner as to stop cars on a public road.

14 According to police testimony, Petitioners were 15 warned that they were violating criminal law and ordered to 16 disperse. When they did not do so, they were arrested.

17 The trial judge found that each Petitioner had 18 committed an act for which an adult may be punished by North
19 Carolina law, was in need of care, protection and discipline 20 from the state and was thereby a delinquent. Immediately after 21 finding the petitioners delinquent, the court sentenced each 22 to a state institution for an indefinite term until release by 23 the state board of juvenile corrections or until reaching 24 majority.

25 Thus, Petitioners could have been incarcerated for

1 from six to ten years, respectively. Then the court suspended 2 this sentence to probation. On appeal both the Court of 3 Appeals and the Supreme Court of North Carolina held that the 4 14th Amendment does not give a juvenile a right to trial by 5 jury in a juvenile delinquency proceeding even though he may be 6 incarcerated many years as a result of an adverse decision.

7 Q Now, was there any commitment to incarceration
8 of these Petitioners?

9 A The commitment was suspended by the trial
10 court and later excised from the judgment on the Supreme Court 11 of North Carolina, in a technical modification of the terms of 12 the judgment.

13 Q So that they have never been confined?

14 A No. All the Petitioners were placed on 15 probation.

16 And it is Petitioners' submission that under Gault, 17 Winship and Duncan, a juvenile tried for violation of state 18 criminal law and subjected to incarceration for years, is en-19 titled to a jury trial unless the state shows, as the state has 20 not shown here, that provision of trial by jury will compel the 21 state to displace or abandon substantial benefits conferred on 22 the juvenile by the juvenile court system.

23 This is a question which we believe is seen more 24 clearly if we first put to one side certain matters which the 25 Court is not being asked to decide.

1 This case does not involve a jury trial where a 2 juvenile does not want one. No claim is made in this case that 3 due process requires any change in the discretion of juvenile 4 authorities to divert cases from court prior to trial for 5 probation, counseling, action by private or public social 6 agencies or physicians.

7 No claim is made which restricts the juvenile court's 8 freedom to structure treatment or rehabilitation to the needs 9 of the juvenile after he has been adjudicated a delinquent.
10 No issue is present of the right to trial by jury if a juvenile 11 is not charged with criminal conduct, faced with the stigma of 12 the delinquency adjudication and subjected to what amounts to 13 punitive incarceration.

14 And finally, no claim is made that Petitioners are 15 entitled to trial in a courtroom open to the public other than 16 by reason of the presence of a jury. In short, the discretion
17 of the trial court to exclude the public, which North Carolina 18 law now confers, is not affected.

19 Now, Petitioners contend that, far from harming the 20 juvenile, a jury trial enhances the liability and fairness
21 and protects against erroneous conviction by ensuring compliance 22 with the reasonable doubt standard.

23 Q Mr. Meltsner, perhaps at that point this is 24 not a fair question, but would you hazard a guess as to what 25 would have happened had there been a jury trial at that time in

1 North Carolina?

2 A In this case?

3 Q Yes.

4 A Well, that is, as Your Honor suggests, quite 5 a guess, but all I can say is that this is peculiarly a good 6 case for a jury because the events from which the criminal con-7 duct arose are the sort of events which Blacks and whites are 8 likely to perceive in a very different manner. This case arose 9 out of a racial clash in this community.

10 So, while I can't, for the moment predict what the 11 jury would have decided, I do think that the Petitioners here
12 would have felt that they had received the judgment of the com-13 munity and found that judgment more acceptable for that reason, 14 if it was adverse to them.

15 Q I was going to say you would also hazard a 16 guess that had a jury trial been available that opportunity 17 would have been taken in this case?

18 A Petitioners made timely motions for a jury 19 trial --

20 Q I ask this because of the statements in the 21 brief that if a jury -- a right to a jury trial were present, 22 nevertheless the exercise of that right has been rather sparse
23 in practice.

24 A That is the experience of the juvenile courts 25 in ten or eleven or so states which provide trial by jury as

1 amply documented in an amicus brief of the District of Columbia 2 Public Defender Service, which surveyed the operation of those 3 courts in 26 cities and towns in the United States.

4 Q And you make this argument to buttress the 5 provision that imposing a right to a jury trial will not over-6 whelm the juvenile process?

7 A That is correct; that is correct.

8 Q Under state law could these Petitioners have 9 been tried in criminal court under criminal penalties and --

10 A No; they could not; they could not. The 11 juvenile court in North Carolina has exclusive original juris-
12 diction of all minors up to the age of 16 and these juveniles 13 were between the ages of 11 and 15.

14 When a juvenile is charged with a felony, Mr. Chief 15 Justice, and he is over the age of 14, the juvenile court may 16 hold a hearing and waive jurisdiction to an adult court.

17 Q Then these Petitioners could have been waived?

18 A No, because the offenses were classified as 19 misdemeanors under state law, although they were subject to two 20 year penalties at the time of trial.

21 Now, the benefits which we claim flow to juveniles
22 from the availability of a jury trial, I will somewhat arbi-
23 trarily describe as benefits flowing first from the Duncan case; 24 second from which the third class of special juvenile court
25 advantages --

1 Q Mr. Meltner, could I ask you first, before
2 you go on, would you anticipate that the jury trial you re-
3 quested would involve submitting to the jury only the question 4 of whether the acts charged were committed or whether you would 5 want the jury to decide the ultimate issue of delinquency, or 6 is there, in North Carolina, any difference between the two?

7 A At the time of trial, Mr. Justice White, 8 there may have been a difference, but the state law has been 9 amended while this case was on appeal, to make an issue of 10 delinquency, as I read the state statutes, identical to the 11 question of whether a youth violated the state criminal laws.

12 Q Under the current law there if the act is 13 found to have been committed it is -- there is an automatic 14 conclusion of delinquency?

15 A That is correct.

16 Q In some places that isn't so?

17 A That is my impression; yes, that in some places
18 the law was as it was in North Carolina; that there is a vague 19 and ill-defined class of offenses which a judge can determine 20 to be delinquency.

21 Q So that right now there is no rule for a judge
22 saying he may have committed this act but he is not a delinquent 23 child?

24 A That is my impression -- it's the way I read 25 the statute.

1 Q If there was room for that under the North
2 Carolina law, would you insist that the jury be given the task 3 of deciding on delinquency as well as the task of deciding 4 whether the act was committed?

5 A Well, I think that the jury would have to be 6 charged as to the kind of conduct which it was finding the 7 facts to determine a violation, and certainly the jury could 8 find specific facts and the judge could draw the legal --

9 Q So you would be content if the jury only had 10 the task of deciding whether the act was committed?

11 A Let me take it back, because I, quite 12 honestly, Mr. Justice White, hadn't thought about this before, 13 but my conclusion is not that. My conclusion is that the 14 judge will have to define in advance of such situations, such 15 a state, what delinquency means and if the jury will find the 16 facts and also find the law as charged to the --

17 Q Yes, but delinquency in that situation may 18 depend on a whole series of other facts that may depend on the 19 whole juvenile file.

20 A I am not certain how that would operate be-21 cause I don't really know --

22 Q But you know that the development in North 23 Carolina under the present law, but not under the law at the 24 time of trial.

25 A I'm even unclear about the law previously,

1 A I'm even unclear about the law previously,
2 because I have not been able to find any state court decisions
3 dealing with the issue for construing the statute.

4 Now, it seems to me quite clear that the youth is 5 as likely, as in Gault, to profit from the protections enun-
6 ciated by the Court in Duncan against an arbitrary, biased, 7 corrupt, or overzealous judge or prosecutor. Or a case-8 hardened judge or a compliant judge; one who, perhaps seems to 9 credit police testimony because he has seen police officers 10 testify so often against convicted defendants.

11 And likewise, that the youth is also as likely as an 12 adult to benefit from the common sense and community viewpoint
13 of a jury. In short, the jury is a check on the vast powers 14 of the trial judge and no judge, no trial judge has more power
15 than the judge of the juvenile court. The judge who the youth 16 gets, in exchange for his right to jury trial is a judge who 17 is not a miracle worker of juvenile court theory. He is not a 18 specialist.

19 In North Carolina he is elected; he serves the court 20 of general, criminal and civil jurisdiction and he need not 21 even be a lawyer. This conforms to the national experience: a 22 survey of the President's Crime Commission in 1967 shows that 23 75 percent of all juvenile court judges spend less than one-24 quarter of their time in juvenile court. Twenty percent were 25 not lawyers; twenty percent had no college training whatsoever;

1 one-half had no college degree and 80 percent had no regular 2 psychologist or psychiatric help in their courts.

3 Q Mr. Meltsner, help me in another respect:
4 to what extent does the North Carolina Juvenile Court have,
5 shall I say, jurisdiction over juveniles? Can they put them
6 on probation or under one control or another for how long?
7 Until 21?

8 A On probation until 21; yes.

9 Q So that the younger the alleged offender is 10 the longer his possible probation?

11 A That is correct; that is correct.

12 Q And if a boy is 20 he has less risk than one 13 who is 16? so far as duration of control is concerned?

14 A Under North Carolina law as it presently 15 exists now, the youth is subject to the jurisdiction of the 16 court until he is 21 except incarcerations will terminate at 17 age 18, unless the state board of juvenile corrections certi-
18 fies that the youth is in a special program, vocational train-19 ing program and so should be kept.

20 So, the extent of the sanction does vary with age, 21 although the juvenile's top jurisdictional age is 16. So 22 there is always going to be at least two years in which the 23 youth will be subject to some form of sanction.

24 Certainly the youth is benefitted by having a jury
25 administer the reasonable doubt standard which this Court held

1 he was entitled to in Winship. Reasonable doubt was formulated
2 as a standard to be administered by the jury and it is plainly
3 a higher burden for the prosecution to persuade six or 12 men 4 to a subjective standard of certainty.

5 In addition to the weight of numbers, a jury gives 6 content to reasonable doubt by making sure that men with dif-
7 ferent backgrounds and perspectives and outlooks concur in the 8 result.

9 Now, there are certain benefits which a jury trial
10 gives which I think are specially seen in juvenile court, 11 because the juvenile judge is bombarded with inadmissible
12 evidence; evidence that comes to him if he holds the waiver 13 hearing which I mentioned before, or evidence which comes to 14 him by reading social reports describing the youth's family
15 and background, which North Carolina law explicitly permits 16 him to see before adjudication, before he has made a final 17 determination of delinquency by Section 7A-285.

18 These reports are -- the access the judge has to 19 these reports is easy because he even hires and fires the men 20 who accumulate the information: the probation officers.

21 A second reason why the jury trial is an especially 22 appropriate protection for the youth in juvenile court, is that 23 the juvenile judge has traditionally seen himself as acting on 24 the needs rather than the deeds of the child. Thus he is more 25 likely to see a finding of delinquency as a prelude to

1 treatment rather than punishment, and I would submit it will 2 be more difficult for him to hold the balance true when 3 applying a reasonable doubt standard.

4 It's simply easier to convict, given human nature,
5 than to believe that something good, called "rehabilitation," 6 as presently practiced by the state is a benefit to the youth 7 and will follow adjudication of delinquency.

8 Now, it is said, in answer to these benefits, that 9 making jury trials available to juveniles who wish them --

10 Q Mr. Meltsner, who would be the peers for the 11 14-year-old?

12 A Your Honor, no question of that sort is in-13 volved here, but we think the juveniles have as much right to 14 a mature, competent and understanding jury --

15 Q But mature people wouldn't be their peers.

16 A The -- this court --

17 Q I say that facetiously, but what you mean is 18 a regular jury panel that's sitting in, say the criminal court
19 of Podunk?

20 A That's correct.

21 Q But, where would the trial be held; in the 22 juvenile courtroom?

23 A The District Court involved here is a court of 24 general, civil and criminal jurisdictions.

25 Q And could you have it right in the juvenile

1 court like some states do?

2 A I think that's a matter for the state to work
3 out in the easiest and most flexible manner.

4 Q But only when requested?

5 A Correct.

6 Q With the same judge?

7 A There is no reason why it could not be. There 8 is nothing in the Federal Constitution which would --

9 Q Well, the reason I say that is that you went 10 into great detail about all of these nonlawyer judges all 11 around and exactly I couldn't imagine what they and, to do with 12 this case.

13 A Well, it has to do with the kind of judge who 14 is trying cases in juvenile court and why some defendants may 15 want a jury.

16 Q Yes, but I mean in this particular case you 17 don't want us to get a new judge, too, do you?

18 A No.

19 Q I just want to know what you want in this 20 case.

21 A We come now to the specific harms which are 22 caused, according to the state, by introducing ~~adult trial~~ in 23 juvenile court and I will run through very quickly the phrase 24 used in their brief, I believe is it will rob the juvenile 25 court of informality, flexibility and speed.

1 Well, now, informality only appears informal as the 2 system presently is operated, the officials involved. A youth 3 feels that he is in the presence of a quite formal an authori-4 tative process. To quote Deal Paulson: "He knows that he is 5 in court and not in school or in a doctor's office."

6 Formality is a difficult thing to measure but as 7 long as the finding of delinquency can rest only on evidence 8 given under oath by witnesses subject to cross-examination and 9 confrontation and as long as reasonable doubt standards apply 10 it seems to me that a certain amount of it is absolutely 11 necessary to detached fact-finding.

12 This goes to what I think is the essence of this 13 case. By virtue of this Court's decision in state law, 14 juvenile courts now have an adversary fact-finding system, in-15 distinguishable from the one the Court considered in Duncan 16 and Bloom and --

17 Q Are you urging a Sixth Amendment guaranty or 18 due process?

19 A I believe, Your Honor, that it's a due process
20 question informed by the incorporation of the Sixth Amendment.

21 Q Informed by, because I heard you say earlier, 22 did I not, that you felt a jury trial could be accorded without 23 opening the courtroom to the general public?

24 A That is true; that is --

25 Q So I gather it's more nearly a due process

1 than a Sixth Amendment.

2 A Yes. Yes, Your Honor.

3 Q So you're not saying that this is a criminal 4 proceeding for all purposes, subject to all the requirements
5 in the Sixth Amendment?

6 A Certainly not; certainly not; only that the 7 fact-finding stage is such that the same logic would require 8 trial by jury in Duncan applies here and that the states have 9 not presented any reason why it shouldn't. No, to quote 10 Duncan, "alternative guarantees and protections " have been 11 provided in this process to take the place of the jury trial.

12 Q May I ask you to repeat you say you are 13 limiting your claims to?

14 A Mr. Justice Black, our primary claim is 15 based on this Court's decision in Winship and the standards 16 used there to determine whether reasonable doubt applied to 17 juvenile court proceedings likewise requires trial by jury.

18 Q What about the right to counsel?

19 A That was decided in Gault.

20 Q Well, which ones do you think are left out?

21 A Well, the right to public trial is one that 22 is left. I think that as it now stands the fact-finding stage 23 of juvenile court proceedings is an adversa y proceeding as the 24 same as takes place in any adjudication where someone will be 25 imprisoned and stigmatized.

1 Q Do you think a juvenile can be given any 2 different trial under the constitution when he's charged with 3 an offense for which he can be sentenced and confined for ten 4 years than an adult?

5 A Sir, we make no claim that he cannot in this 6 case.

7 Q You make no what?

8 A We make no claim that he cannot in this case.
9 We leave the sentencing or dispositional stage alone. We make 10 no claim that the state can't decide that because someone is 11 younger thathe should be potentially incarcerated for a longer 12 period of time.

13 Q Could the public be excluded -- going back to 14 Justice Brennan's question? I'm not sure I see a conflict 15 between what you responded to Mr. Justice Black and Mr.
16 Justice Brennan.

17 A Our position is the public can be excluded 18 under the very standard which we say here gives us a right to 19 jury trial, because including the public may be -- that's not 20 this case, but it may be harm to the juvenile and if it is, 21 then perhaps under due process tests the public can be ex-22 cluded, but that is not the issue in this case and our primary 23 argument is that this process does not harm the juvenile, 24 giving him the right to a jury trial. It doesn't delay pro-
25 ceedings as the Public Defender Service's brief has shown.

1 Even if there is some delay I think the Court has crossed that 2 bridge in Baldwin where it applied a right to a jury trial in 3 the busiest court in the United States of America, with the 4 biggest backlog and said that administrative conveniences would 5 not inhibit its doing so.

6 And finally, I think that such delays as our court 7 system has already are complicated and are certainly not 8 caused by jury trials and, given the fact of delay, a jury 9 trial is an essential protection because it gives the defen-
10 dant in a close case, the case that stirs community actions, 11 to a fresh factfinder, to someone who will look at his case and 12 not just treat it as another bit of material on the assembly 13 line.

14 I would like to reserve the rest of my time.

15 Q Mr. Meltser, do you think the next case, 16 however, will demand the jury trial?

17 A Certainly the court will have to decide that 18 question at some time, but nothing decided in this case, it 19 seems to me, can possibly affect the decision of that issue.

20 Q Suppose we decide this is a criminal pro-21 ceeding?

22 A If you decide that it is a criminal proceeding 23 for all purposes; yes. That is correct. We do not ask the 24 Court to do that.

25 Thank you.

1 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Counsel, I think we'll 2 not ask you to start for two minutes. We will begin in the 3 morning afresh.
