MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We'll hear arguments next in No. 362, McGee against the United States.

Mr. Levine.

ARGUMENT OF ALAN H. LEVINE, ESQ.

ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER

MR. LEVINE: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the Court.

This case is before you on Writ of Certiorari to the Second Circuit. Petitioner seeks review of convictions on 4 counts, under the Military Selective Service Act, 1967.

The chief question presented by this petition is the question left open in McKart v. the United States. It presents the pure question of whether, where a registrant presents a claim for conscientious objection, and that claim is denied, without a basis in fact, as the Second Circuit concedes here, it was so denied, where therefore the classification the I-A classification, and the induction order, were illegal, is he barred from challenging that classification and induction order in judicial review?

In answering that question "no", we will assert two basic propositions. One, that the exhaustion of administrative remedies doctrine is inappropriately applied, where, as McKart suggested, its effect is not merely to delay judicial review,

1 but is to deny it completely.

2 And we will defend secondly, the proposition that 3 if exhaustion of administrative remedies is to be applied so 4 harshly, it must be applied with Congressional mandate. And 5 that the Military Selective Service Act of 1967 to the contrary 6 does not limit judicial review, in defense to a criminal pro-7 secution, but in fact guarantees judicial review in defense to 8 a criminal prosecution.

9 Petitioner at the time of induction was a full time 10 student at Union Theological Seminary. He had registered for 11 the draft in August of 1961, in New York City, he had advised 12 his local board at that time that he was preparing for the 13 ministry.

14 In August, 1964, he enrolled in the University of 15 Rochester and the next month was given a II-S deferment, for 16 all practical purposes kept that deferment until September 17 1967.

18 In February 1966, while still at the University of 19 Rochester and still possessing a II-S classification, he applied 20 for conscientious objector status, pursuant to regulations, the 21 local board deferred consideration of that application until he 22 was no longer entitled to a lower classification.

23 In March of 1966, he got a letter from the local 24 board to that effect, that they would defer consideration of 25 his C.O. classification.

1 In April of 1967, he was still at Rochester, still 2 possessing a II-S. Petitioner wrote the President of the 3 United States. He enclosed in that letter remnants of a torn 4 and burnt draft card.

5 Q Now was he convicted of some criminal act 6 in connection with that?

7 A He was not, nor was he indicted in the 8 indictments under review here. Subsequent to the trial in this 9 case, he was indicted on 2 counts of destroying a draft card.
10 Those cases have not come to trial, Your Honor.

11 Q That question isn't forced, at all?

12 A It is not, Your Honor.

13 He wrote the President in April, 1968, and he ad-
14 vised the President that he would probably be entitled to a 15 theological deferment, nevertheless, he said, "I must sever 16 every link with violence and war." He expressed, again quoting, 17 "fundamental belief that men must build and not destroy, love 18 and not hate." As a result he said that he could no longer 19 cooperate with the Selective Service System.

20 In June of 1967, upon his graduation from Rochester, 21 he was sent a current information questionnaire. SSS Form 127.
22 He returned that questionnaire unopened and said that he would 23 return all future correspondence unopened.

24 In September, 1967, he was classified I-A, despite 25 his pending C.O. application. He returned that I-A classification

1 card.

2 Q Now that C.O. application that you just 3 characterized as pending, is one that was filed while he was 4 a student at the University of Rochester?

5 A That's right. In March of 1966---

6 Q --- 3 years earlier, 3 1/2 years earlier?

7 A No, this was in September 1967 that I'm 8 talking about.

9 Q A year and a half, approximately.

10 A Right.

11 Q And at that time the board had indicated
12 that since he had a II-S student deferment, there was no
13 need for them to consider the C.O. application?

14 A In March of 1966. The board chairman 15 testified at trial somewhat ambiguously, and as a result of 16 his testimony, as to what the board did in March 66, and Sep-
17 tember, 67, that led Judge Feinberg to conclude that in fact 18 the board had never considered the application on its merits.

19 That in September of 1967, according to the board
20 chairmans testimony, they had just reaffirmed their earlier 21 decision.

22 Q Why did they send him the information form?

23 A Presumably because they were aware from his 24 earlier request for a II-S that he was going to graduate.

25 Q And if he had responded to that form there

1 would have been a place to talk about his current status, I 2 suppose.

3 (No response)

4 Q It was a current information form.

5 A It was a current information form.

6 Q As to what status he might be claiming, 7 or---

8 A Well, the board had before it his claim 9 as to conscientious objection.

10 Q Well, that was a year and a half ago, 11 yes.

12 A It was a year and a couple of months be-13 fore it, that's correct, Your Honor.

14 Q If he had answered it, he would have then 15 automatically been claiming a CO.---

16 A If he had told the board at that time that 17 he was no longer entitled to a II-S, presumably, in the course
18 of normal procedures, the board would have considered his CO
19 applicaiton at that time. This current information questionnaire 20 does not contain feference to conscientious objection.

21 He would have advised them, "I've graduated, I'm 22 entitled, I'm no longer entitled to II-S" therefore the board
23 would have seen in his file that he had a pending CO application.

24 Presumably, according to the board chairmans somewhat 25 ambiguous testimony, that is what they did, in September of 1967.

1 They considered his entire file, and his CO appli-
2 cation. As I said, Judge Feinberg thinks that they did not 3 consider his application on the merits at all, the trial judge, 4 however, found that as a matter of fact, at the close of the 5 trial that the application had been considered.

6 Q And rejected.

7 A Pardon?

8 Q And rejected.

9 A And rejected. That's correct.

10 Petitioner did not appeal that classification. Later 11 that month, he enrolled in Union Theological Seminary. In 12 October of 1967 he was ordered to---

13 Q Did he receive his I-A classification, i.e., 14 did he not send it back unopened?

15 A He did send it back unopened, Your Honor.

16 Q So he didn't even know that he'd been 17 classified I-A, is that right?

18 A Presumably he did not. He sent back the 19 I-A unopened, later that month enrolled in Union Theological 20 Seminary.

21 In October of 1967 he was sent an order to report for 22 physical examination. He returned that order unopened. He was 23 ordered to report for induction in January of 1968. He filled 24 out a number of forms at that time giving a variety of different 25 kinds of information at that time. He took a complete physical

1 examination.

2 Q So he did open that envelope.

3 A Pardon?

4 Q He did open that envelope?

5 A He did open that envelope. He reported as 6 ordered to report, he gave the required information, he took 7 the required physical examination, passed the physical examin-
8 ation, and refused to submit to induction.

9 Q Now, that was the physical examination
10 given at the, by the Selective Service, or by the military?

11 A It's given by the military for the Selec-12 tive Service. It's given at the Armed Forces Entrance and 13 Examining Station.

14 Q At the time of induction, ---, or quite a 15 while before?

16 A No, this was at the time of induction.

17 His file was then forwarded to the United States
18 Attorney, significantly, with a recommendation by the Selective 19 Service that he be indicted only on 2 counts, refusal of in-20 duction and failure to possess his notice of classification.

21 Q Is there any indication why he changed his 22 mind regarding how he would deal with mail addressed to him by 23 his draft board?

24 A Why he opened the---

25 Q He sent several of them back, including his

1 I-A classification, sent back unopened.

2 A I---

3 Q And then when there arrived other com-
4 munication, one directing him to report for physical examination 5 he not only opened the communication but complied with it.
6 Is there any indication of why?

7 A Not from the record Your Honor. I did not 8 represent Petitioner at the time, perhaps he spoke to legal 9 counsel at that time, I donnot know and the record does not 10 indicate.

11 Despite the recommendation of Selective Service, 12 that he be prosecuted on 2 counts, in February of 1968 the 13 government sought and obtained a 4 count indictment.

14 The first count was for refusal of induction.

15 The second was for refusal to take the physical 16 examination.

17 The third was for failure to possess the notice of 18 classification.

19 The fourth, for failure to submit the information
20 requested on the classification form.

21 Q Incidentally, these notices of classification 22 and to report for a physical, are they in sealed envelopes or 23 are they post cards?

24 A They are generally in envelopes, I believe, 25 Your Honor.

1 Petitioner was found guilty in January of 1969, on 2 all 4 counts, sentenced to 2 year concurrent sentences on 3 each count. In March of 1970, the Second Circuit upheld the 4 convictions, Judge Feinberg dissented.

5 The three judges in the Second Circuit conceded
6 that there was no basis in fact for the board to deny Petitioner's 7 conscientious objector claim. Nevertheless, they said that 8 because he failed to exhaust his appeal remedies within Selec-
9 tive Service, they would decline to review the classification.

10 We point out first that the 1967 Military Selective 11 Service Act provides for review of classifications, "as a 12 defense to a criminal prosecution". It does not qualify that 13 right, it does not condition it, on exhausting administrative 14 remedies. It says rather that it can be raised, review can be 15 had after a registrant has responded to an order to report for 16 induction.

17 It's important to note, Your Honors, that the Congress 18 had before it the entire question of judicial review, it is 19 not an inadvertance that this aspect of judicial review is 20 stated as it is. They had it before it, they considered the 21 question of judicial review and limited only pre-induction
22 review. The question before this Court, in Oestereich,

23 As the Senate Armed Services Committee said, "if 24 the registrant does not submit to induction, he may raise as 25 a defense to a criminal prosecution the issue of the legality

1 of the classification.

2 The effect of that Act is to guarantee judicial 3 review in a criminal prosecution. The Second Circuit conceded
4 that Petitioner was unlawfully classified, implicitly it con-
5 ceded that he was sent to jail for 2 years, or has been ordered 6 to jail for 2 years for violating an illegal order.

7 Q The Court of Appeals theory, concession as 8 you call it, that your client had been erroneously classified 9 is based on the conscientious objector claim rather than on the 10 attendance at a theological school, as I understand it.

11 A That is correct. They deal with that 12 claim and I will touch on it briefly, but the major issue and 13 the issue upon which Judge Feinberg relied in dissent was the 14 conscientious objector issue.

15 Q What, there is some question, I suppose, 16 about whether his mere attendance at the Union Theological 17 Seminary is sufficient, is not sufficient under the law, 18 not mere attendance at a theological seminary, is it?

19 A Well, let me say briefly, Your Honor, that 20 the Congressional mandate for ministerial deferments under 21 six G is---

22 Q Divinity school deferments?

23 A That's right. Is mandatory. He shall be 24 deferred assuming he meets certain qualifications, that's full 25 time attendance, under the direction of a recognized church.

1 Q And studying to become a---

2 A That is correct.

3 Now, McGee presented, not directly to his board, but 4 it can be inferred from the record that the board had notice
5 of the fact that he was attending Union Theological Seminary.
6 He did not request the deferment, some cases have suggested 7 that it's not necessary. We point out the difference of the 8 language of 6-G and the language providing for student defer-9 rments which requires an affirmment of request by the registrant.

10 The language for 6-G is "shall be deferred".

11 Q Not for mere attendance, though. I thought 12 you and I had agreed.

13 A Under---

14 Q We can --- a man who is just likes to 15 dabble around philosophically and has plenty of time and 16 money so he goes to various theological schools in order to 17 increase his knowledge of comparative religions, and with no 18 intent ever of becoming a minister of the gospel, of a pastoral 19 leader, but simply wants to increase his intellectual, philo-
20 sophical and religious knowledge.

21 That man would n't be subject to statutory deferr-22 ment, would he?

23 A Absolutely not, Your Honor.

24 Q And so our record shows that that is the 25 purpose of this fellow, or client, excuse me, in attending, I

1 mean so far as the record shows we don't know whether this was 2 his purpose.

3 A Well, the trial court found that he was 4 in full time attendance and that he was pursuing a degree lead-5 ing to study for the priesthood.

6 What the trial court did not find is that he was 7 there under the direction of a recognized church since Union
8 Theological Seminary is not itself under the direction of a 9 church, which is non sectariaq.

10 There is no evidence according to the trial judge, 11 in the record, that he was there under the direction of a re-
12 cognized church.

13 Q And that's a statutory requirement?

14 A That is a statutory requirement.

15 Q And that's the necessary---

16 A That's right. Now we do suggest in our 17 brief that Selective Service Procedures under such circumstances 18 authorize a board to look into the basis for a deferment and 19 in fact mandate that they do so, and they have certain pre-20 liminary information.

21 The major point to which I would like to address my-22 self on the exhaustion question is that it is a doctrine of 23 judicial convenience to be applied flexibly that has its ori-24 gin in affirmative litigation, where a plaintiff comes in seek-25 ing releif and there are still administrative remedies to be

1 exhausted.

2 Professor Davis tells us it is a doctrine concerned
3 with the timing of judicial review and that it is not imposed
4 where it is absolutely and completely denying relief as it 5 would here.

6 And even when used in affirmative litigation there
7 are recognized exceptions so that it would not be applied too
8 harshly. We point in our brief to Justice Frankfurters opinion 9 in Republic Utilities Commission v. United Fuel case, where 10 it would in effect, impese irreparable injury on a litigant.
11 That is a recognized exception to the exhaustion rule. That is 12 an exception which we urge would apply here.

13 Q You take the same position, I take it, if 14 he had never presented his CO claim at all to his local draft 15 board?

16 A No, we would not.

17 Q Why not?

18 A We make a distinction, in our brief,---

19 Q Then why not?

20 A Because I believe the act requires minimally
21 primary jurisdiction of the local board. We urge a distinction, 22 as does Davis in his treaty between primary jurisdiction and 23 exhaustion.

24 You are entitled to review of your classification, if 25 your classification is not supported by any facts, then a court

1 could not properly go into anything that was not before the 2 local board.

3 McGee here, by concession of the Second Circuit did 4 present to the local board what was necessary to support his 5 classification. We don't quarrel with the fact that he has 6 the burden of proving his classification.

7 We only say that he met that burden.

8 Q But you do say that he had to prove to 9 his draft board, too?

10 A That's correct. And we suggest here that 11 he did prove that---

12 Q But he didn't have to prove it to some 13 Appellate Court.

14 A That's right. That he is entitled in Court
15 to judicial review of his classification, his classification
16 was determined by the local board, and was determined here 17 without a basis in fact.

18 The effect of the application of the exhaustion rule 19 in this case, and in criminal cases generally, is to work a 20 very substantial denial of a right in a criminal prosecution.
21 The difference between the applicaiton of that rule in an 22 affirmment of a defensive case was elaborated on by Chief Judge
23 Magruder in two cases cited in our brief, the Smith and McCril-
24 lis cases, and there the judge said that we do not have to a
25 apply the exhaustion rule in the defensive context, it is a

1 judge-made rule and we only have to, when it is mandated by 2 Congress, and the Court there dealt with the two major pre-
3 cedents in this Court upon which exhaustion has been premised, 4 namely Yakus and Myers vs. Bethlehem Shipbuilding.

5 And the Court there said those were specifically 6 cases in which Congress had mandated the exhaustion prior to 7 judicial review. Here, as we said before, there was no mandate
8 Congressional mandate to that effect and in fact, the Congres-9 sional mandate is to the contrary, that it authorized judicial 10 review.

11 That brings us to McKart. McKart, we submit, reflects 12 that general suspicion of the exhaustion remedy. It draws the 13 distinctions between affirmative and defensive context. It points 14 out that in the defensive context it is an exceedingly harsh 15 doctrine and should be imposed there only where it clearly 16 outrays the interests of the registrant in having a right to 17 assert a defense to a criminal prosecution.

18 The major interest to be served here is whether or 19 not other registrants are going to be read by the relaxation of 20 the exhaustion rule in this case, to forego their administrative 21 remedies and come into court and defend a criminal prosecution.

22 The McKart court suggests that maybe there is a dif-
23 ference between the legal issue presented there and the CO claim.
24 The CO claim, we submit, is a legal issue, you take, as the 25 Court does, any basis in fact case before it, an undisputed set

1 of facts and apply them to a legal standard. It is the same
2 issue which confronts this Court whether or not there is exhaus-
3 tion. There is no different burden.

4 The question then, is are other registrants going to 5 do what McGee did? Recognizing, as we must, that what McGee did, 6 he did for, out of reasons of moral scruples.

7 But will other registrants do it for tactical rea-
8 sons? And the governments response to this is crucial and I 9 think deserves special attention. The government says, "If we 10 let McGee decline to appear before his local board, as he did 11 here, decline to appeal his administrative remedies, then the 12 well counseled registrant is going to submit a bare Form 150, 13 will provide on its face no basis for denial, it will not 14 have a great deal of documentation, it will simply be the Form 15 150"---

16 Q And the Form 150 is the Conscientious Ob-
17 jectors form?

18 A It is, Your Honor. At that point he will 19 be classified presumably I-A by his board, told that he has 20 a right to a personal appearance, not that he must personally 21 appear. McGee was not told he must personally appear, only that 22 he had a right to appear. Refuse to appear, told that he has 23 a right to appeal, and refuse to appeal. He will then refuse 24 induction and have perfect defense before the Court. There will 25 be no basis in fact upon which a Court could uphold the I-A

1 classification.

2 We suggest a couple of things. One, McGee didn't 3 just make out a prima facie case before his local board---

4 Q Well don't you think in your hypothetical
5 case there would be plenty of basis in fact for the support
6 of a I-A classification if the man had not submitted anything
7 to support the conscientious objector---

8 A Well the governments thesis is that he 9 would simply submit a Form 150, perhaps with supporting letters 10 if they could be obtained, of course, there one has to assume 11 perhaps a certain impropriety in obtaining those letters if 12 it was not a bona fide claim.

13 But the governments thesis in any case is as bare a 14 submission as possible. And---

15 Q Then if the submission was that minimal, 16 material submitted with it, there would be plenty of basis in 17 fact for a I-A classification, wouldn't there?

18 A I---

19 Q If there wasn't enough to support a Conscie-20 ntious objector classification.

21 A I submit that there would be. We submit in 22 our brief that there would be substantial basis in fact for 23 denying his claim, and if the Form 150 was considered by the 24 board to be inadequate, it left them in doubt, we have a pretty 25 well stated claim here but we want to see him to test his sin-

1 erity, the remedy is simple, we attach in our reply brief, New 2 York City Form 44, which says, call on the registrant, and 3 there's a space there for the local board to check off, send it 4 to the registrant, say, you are ordered to appear before the 5 local board to discuss your claim.

6 That is the simple remedy available to the board in 7 cases where they find themselves in doubt. If they are not 8 in doubt, their obligation is to classify I-O. They can't 9 simply have vague doubts, Dickenson and --- teach us that there 10 must be affirmative evidence.

11 Now it might be affirmative evidence that he fails 12 to present a clear and accurate picture and if the board has 13 doubts, as I suggest, he can be called in.

14 Q Are you suggesting that the board has an 15 obligation to call him in, before they rule, if he has submitted 16 all the material that he wishes to submit?

17 A No. We suggest that under current Selective 18 Service procedures, the board has put itself, and the system has 19 put itself in the position of classifying without a personal 20 appearance. The sequence is that you submit your claim, you are 21 classified, then you have your right to personal appearance.

22 Now if that's the way the Selective Service system
23 wants to classify, they can. And when you submit your Form 150, 24 if it's a good claim, they're obliged to give you your classi-
25 fication. If it is an inadequate claim, then either you have not

1 met your burden of proving your entitlement to the claim, and 2 the board then is obliged to state its reasons why it, you have 3 not met your claim.

4 Or if the board then is left in doubt, then since 5 the registrant has made out his prima facie case, it is up
6 to the board then to find some affirmative evidence, and if it
7 needs a personal appearance, then it can order that personal 8 appearance.

9 Q I'm at a loss, Mr. Levine, to understand
10 the point that I thought you were going at. A well counseled 11 registrant could play games with the board.

12 A That's the governments point.

13 Q Yes. Well you were merely referring to 14 the governments point.

15 A I'm sorry, Your Honor, that is the major
16 response to which the government advances to our suggestion
17 that registrants will not look at this courts decision in McGee, 18 assuming its favorable to McGee and say, "Hey, there's a good 19 out for us, we'll simply fail to appear, fail to exhaust, and 20 defend in a criminal prosecution."

21 We submit that the best way still to get a classifi-22 cation is to go through the Selective Service System, and that 23 the only people who don't, and if one looks through the ex-
24 haustion cases, the only ones who don't are the very rare
25 people like McGee, and there seems to have been in reported

1 cases only one other, who conscientiously disassociated himself
2 from the system, or those who are ignorant.

3 Q We'll resume after lunch.

4 A Thank you.

1 AFTERNOON SESSION

3 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Levine, I
4 believe you were in the process of---

5 ARGUMENT OF ALAN. H. LEVINE, ESQ.

6 ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER

7 (RESUMED)

8 MR. LEVINE: I will try to be as brief as 9 possible., and save a minute or two for rebuttal if I may.

10 Mr. Justice White asked prior to the luncheon break 11 what was the statutory requirement for the claim initially 12 to be presented to the local board. I quote from Section 10 (b) 13 (3) of the Act; which says that, "A local board shall hear and 14 determine all questions or claims with respect to inclusion for 15 or exemption of deferment from training and service under this 16 Title."

17 I think pursuant to that requirement that the regis-
18 trant has the burden of going forward with his claim to the lo-19 cal board.

20 The major deterrant to any other registrant---

21 Q Where is the statute that says that a 22 court trying a criminal case is disentitled to consider whether 23 a man is a conscientious objector or not?

24 A The statute only says, says that the Court 25 shall obly review a basis in fact, and presumably that is the

1 limitation on this Courts review, or on any courts review, that 2 they cannot consider the whole claim on its merits, but only 3 on whether there is a basis in fact for denial.

4 Q You imply, that it can only review a board 5 determination?

6 A That's right, Your Honor. The major det-
7 errent, though, for another registrant to do what McGee did 8 here, is the simple fact that if he wants his classification, 9 the best place to do it is before the Selective Service System.

10 He only has to convince the Selective Servicy System 11 on the merits that he's entitled to the classification, where-12 as a court, in review would only be determining whether ornot
13 there is a basis in fact for denial of that claim.

14 We cite a long line of cases in this Court, Greene
15 v. McElroy, Kent v. Dulles, which suggest that a substantial 16 right, here the right to defend yourself in a criminal pre-17 secution should not be abrogated without explicit Congressional 18 authorization.

19 Q Of course, the point you just made, that 20 the Selective Service Systems administrative review should 21 deny his conscientious objector status, then that denial would 22 have to be accepted by this Court if there were a basis in fact 23 for that denial, whereas, if somebody proceded along the lines 24 that your client did, and somebody, well, Counsel, to use your 25 phrase, then he would get a brand new, judicial de novo deter-

1 mination if you're right as to the validity of his conscientious 2 objector claim, which might be more beneficial than the very 3 very little review---

4 A I---

5 Q ---that the Court would be confined to if 6 client has been denied Selective Service administrative proced-7 ures.

8 A I did not mean to suggest that there would 9 be a different standard of judicial review applicable to McGees
10 claim, than there would be to a claim where in fact the class-11 ification was appealed.

12 I think the standard for McGees claim, the one used 13 by the Second Circuit, was a basis in fact claim, as well as 14 it would be if he had appealed.

15 Thank you, Your Honors.

16 Q That consumes all of your time, Mr. Levine.
17 Mr. Reynolds.

18 ARGUMENT OF WILLIAM BRADFORD REYNOLDS, ESQ.

19 ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT.

20 MR. REYNOLDS: Mr. Chief Justice, and may 21 it please the Court.

22 I think that the cases Falbo and Estep read together, 23 clearly establish that the principle of exhaustion of adminis-
24 trative remedies does have a place in criminal actions brought 25 under the Selective Service laws.

1 And that general concept was not under attack in the 2 recent McKart and (DeVernay) cases. They involved, instead, 3 exceptional circumstances, said to warrant a relaxation of the 4 doctrine, on the particular facts presented.

5 Here, however, Petitioner seeks to have this Court 6 overrule Falbo, Estep, and their progeny, primarily because 7 as I understand the argument, he comes before the Courts, not 8 as a Plaintiff seeking affirmative relief, but as a Defendant
9 charged with a criminal offense.

10 At the outset, it seems that if an application of the 11 exhaustion doctrine were to turn on such a distinction, the 12 effect would be in essence to penalize the registrant who after 13 failing to exercise his administrative remedies, decides to 14 obey the law and submit to induction, seeking affirmative re-15 lief in the courts through a habeas corpus action.

16 He would, under Petitioners theory, be precluded by 17 the exhaustion doctrine from challenging his classification.
18 On the other hand, if this same registrant had decided to 19 violate the law, and had then been criminally prosecuted, Pe-
20 titioner maintains that he cannot similarly be barred from rais-21 ing the same claim as a defense.

22 Q You mean, by violate the law, you mean
23 refuse to submit to induction?

24 A Yes, Your Honor.

25 Q Of course, his claim is that he's not vio-

1 lating the law, because he's entitled to a conscientious ob-
2 jector---

3 A That's correct, Your Honor. If a criminal 4 prosecution trial and he did fail to ---.

5 We do not think the exhaustion doctrine was ever in-6 tended to be applied in the manner which would encourage re-
7 gistrants to refuse induction and discourage them from com-
8 plying with the law and testing their classification in habeas 9 corpus proceedings.

10 Moreover, to insist that the exhaustion doctrine can-11 not be invoked under any circumstances in criminal prosecutions
12 under the Selective Service laws, is to ignore the statutory 13 scheme on which this Court has based its earlier decisions in 14 this area.

15 Congress and the President carefully constructed a 16 very comprehensive and fair administrative appeal process within 17 the Selective Service System. At the time the local board clas-18 sifies a registrant, it is required to notify him he has 30 19 days within which to request a personal appearance before his 20 local board or to take the appeal to the state Appeal Board.

21 And that there is a government appeal agent avail-22 able to advise him fully of his appeal rights and assist him in 23 any appeal process. At a personal appearance, the registrant
24 may discuss his classification, with the local board members
25 and present both orally and in writing any new information

1 he believes may be relevant to his claim.

2 And a written record of the appearance is placed in 3 his Selective Service file.

4 On appeal to the State Appeal Board, the registrant 5 may specify in writing the matters in which he believes the 6 local board erred or which he believes it failed to consider.

7 The State Appeal Boards consideration is de novo. The 8 Based on its independent review of the registrants Selective 9 Service files. Its classification is one of first instance.
10 Not a mere affirmance or reversal of the local board.

11 Moreover, if the information in the registrants Se-
12 lective Service file is not sufficient to enable the Appeal
13 Board to determine the proper classification, the Appeal Board 14 is required by the regulations to return the file to the 15 local board for additional information or action.

16 From a final decision by the State Appeal Board, an 17 appeal may be taken to the National Board if one, the State 18 Appeal Board had been divided, or two, even had it not been 19 divided, if the National or State Director is asked by the 20 registrant to take the case to the National Board on his 21 behalf and a question of some importance appears to be involved.

22 No registrant can be ordered to report for induction 23 while his classification is being considered by the local and 24 Appeal Boards.

25 Now while a registrant is nowhere required in the

1 statute or regulations to seek an administrative review of 2 his local board classification, the exhaustion of administrative 3 remedies principle seems implicit in the entire statutory 4 scheme.

5 When Congress, in 1967, added to Section 10 (b) (3) 6 the provision generally prohibiting judicial review of 7 classification and processing questions until after the re-8 gistrant has responded either affirmatively or negatively, to 9 an order to report for induction, the legislative history
10 reflects clearly that the intent was to commit the resolution 11 of such questions in the first instance to the discretion and 12 expertise of an local and Appeal Boards.

13 And this intent, it seems to us, was underscored in 14 this Courts recent decisions in Oestereich and Clark v.
15 Gabriel, defining the narrow scope of pre-induction judicial 16 review under Section 10 (b) (3) that is available to regis-
17 trants who have exhausted their administrative appeal remedies.

18 And it seemed to be simple to the unanimous decision 19 of the Court only last term in Mulloy. Of course, as stated in 20 the McKart case, the exhaustion doctrine must be tailored to 21 fit the peculiarities of the administrative system which Congress 22 and the President have created.

23 And thus, where, as in McKart, classification is not 24 one requiring administrative discretion and expertise, but 25 turns instead on the statutory interpretation. There is gener-

1 ally good reason to exhaust the exhaustion principle, to re-2 quire further resort to local and Appeal Boards, which are 3 concedly ill suited to the task of coping with such pure 4 questions of law which serve no real purpose.

5 Similarly, if the local boards action is challenged 6 on strict Constitutional grounds as was the situation in the 7 Wolff case in the Second Circuit, that exhaustion of admin-8 istrative remedies might not be necessary.

9 In that case, the Second Circuit declined to involve 10 the doctrine to preclude judicial review of delinquency re-11 classifications, assigned to registrants for sitting in at 12 their draft boards.

13 And ther reason given was that the action by the 14 local board raised significant First Amentment questions under 15 this Courts decision in Dumbrowski. Now would it seem is the 16 doctrine so wooden as to require its application where a fegis-17 trant can show he was physically unable to exhaust.

18 Or he could show some other special or unusual cir-
19 cumstances which justify his failure to exhaust. And I think 20 in this connection its instructed to point out that the case, 21 McNeil v. United States a conscientious objector case, which 22 was remanded to the District Court after McKart for further 23 consideration in light of this Courts decision in McKart.

24 In that case, Judge (Merrick) of the Eastern District
25 of Virginia relaxed the exhaustion principle on the ground that

1 there were, in that case, special circumstances, in his words,
2 that if, that the registrant apparently lacked any comprehension
3 of his administrative rights, under the administrative appeal 4 procedure.

5 However, we do not consider the instant case to be 6 within any of these exceptions. At the outset, Petitioners 7 efforts to bring the case within the McKart rationale on the 8 ground that the local board failed to consider his conscientious 9 objector claim is simply not supported by this record.

10 While there is some ambiguity in the board chairmans 11 testimony as to whether the claim was, in March, 1966, at the 12 time that Petitioner held a student deferment, whether it was 13 considered at that time, the record clearly established that 14 Petitioners entire file was reviewed and considered by the 15 full board prior to re-classification in September, 1967.

16 That is when he got his I-A classification from the 17 II-S classification.

18 And the District Court found as a fact that the claim
19 had been fully considered as did the majority below. But I 20 think that the essential point here is that even had the local 21 board failed to consider the claim in the circumstances of 22 this case, McKart would not be controlling.

23 It is undisputed that the local board's action in 24 September, 1967, was not in response to the letter Petitioner 25 wrote to the President on April 15, 1967. That is, we do not have

1 here an instance of unlawful re-classification by the local 2 board in the Oestereich and Greene sense.

3 At most, we have a situation where the board, in March 4 1966 did not actually consider the claim because Petitioner at 5 that time held a lower II-S classification. And then in Sep-
6 tember, 1967, the board, mistakenly believing it had earlier 7 considered a claim, and finding no new information in the file 8 relating to the claim, based its denial on what it thought to 9 be a prior determination on the merits.

10 It is our view that that is precisely the type of 11 procedural error, had that in fact been the case, which Congress 12 and the President anticipated at the time they constructed the 13 elaborate appeal machinery within the system.

14 Plainly, a personal appearance would have corrected 15 such a mistake. An appeal to the State Appeal Board, which was 16 required to consider Petitioners file de novo, would certainly 17 have cured the mistake.

18 Nothing here suggests that such a course would have 19 been a futile exercise. Unlike McKart, the administrative 20 determination of Petitioners conscientious objector claim 21 was not a matter solely of statutory interpretation.

22 There was no statement here by the State Director
23 as there was in McKart that he was predisposed to deny Petition-
24 ers claim. Moreover, we are not here dealing with a classificat 25 tion question, where this Court can determine with any cer-

1 tainty that they could in McKart that Petitioner is entitled 2 to an exemption as a matter of law.

3 Here the claim is to conscientious objector status.
4 Such a claim by its very nature calls for the type of factual
5 determinations which Congress has said should, in the first 6 instance be left to the discretion and special expertise of 7 local and appeal boards.

8 Moreover, it is one of the few claims that does not 9 turn exclusively on the registrants written submissions. It is 10 undisputed that Petitioner made out a prima facie case for 11 exemption in his special conscientious objector form.

12 But as this Court recognized in the Whitmer case,
13 and again in (Seeger) there is also the substantial question
14 of Petitioners sincerity.

15 Here the local board, which did consider the claim
16 may have thought that the Petitioner was insincere, perhaps 17 because he claimed to have always been a religious conscientious 18 objector, and yet in August, 1964, at a time when he held a 19 I-A classification, he expressed some willingness to submit to 20 induction.

21 Or perhaps because his letter to the President was 22 read by the local board as reflecting an objection to the 23 governments policies in Viet Nam. And the board might have 24 felt that this was the real basis for his claim. Whatever the 25 basis for the local boards denial in this case, we think it is

1 clear that the administrative system never had an opportunity
2 to examine the sincerity of Petitioners professed beliefs.

3 Perhaps, as Petitioner suggests, if the local board 4 doubted his sincerity the better approach would have been to 5 call him in for an interview prior to re-classification. But 6 the law does not require local boards to do this.

7 Moreover, in view of Petitioner's letter to the 8 President and his subsequent statement to the local board 9 that he would return all correspondence from the system un-10 opened, both of which took place prior to the time that the 11 local board considered his claim in September, 1957, it seems 12 to us unlikely that the Petitioner would have appeared even if 13 the local board had made such a request.

14 Q Did he send to the local board a copy of 15 his letter to the President?

16 A He did not send himself a copy but it was 17 routed to the local board.

18 Q The letter.

19 A Yes, the local board did receive it, but 20 it did not come directly---

21 Q Yes.

22 A ---from the Petitioner.

23 Q Was the notice to report for the physical 24 examination a postcard or a sealed letter?

25 A I believe that that was a sealed letter.

1 I believe that the Selective Service System sends 2 all their orders in sealed envelopes with their stamp on the 3 corner and a window.

4 The essential point, Your Honor, is that the Selective 5 Service laws place the burden on the registrant to prove his 6 sincerity. Had Petitioner requested a personal interview per-7 haps he could have laid to rest any doubts that the local 8 board might have had in this regard.

9 Had he taken an appeal to the State Appeal Board, 10 perhaps it would have read Petitioner's file differently than the 11 local board and granted the exemption. Or it might have found 12 the information in the file insufficient and sent it back to 13 the local board with the instructions to call Petitioner for 14 an interview.

15 What we are saying is if the local board did in fact 16 commit error in the classification of Petitioner, it was 17 precisely the type of error within the competence of the 18 administrative agency to correct. But Petitioner has chosen 19 deliberately to bypass the administrative appeal machinery.
20 Whatever his reasons he has willfully adopted a position of 21 total non-cooperation with the system, a choice he made prior 22 to the time that the board gave final consideration to his 23 claim on the merits.

24 Thus there has been no opportunity for the local 25 and appeal board to consider fully the sincerity of his professed

1 beliefs.

2 If the exhaustion of administrative remedies is not 3 required in this case, it seems to us that the operation of 4 the Selective Service System could be seriously and effectively
5 disrupted by others who might choose deliberately to bypass 6 this elaborate administrative machinery that Congress and 7 the President have established.

8 They would then be able to submit to their local 9 boards well drafted conscientious objector claims, followed 10 shortly by a letter advising the board that their opposition is 11 so strong that they no longer can cooperate with the system.

12 Their cases then come to the Courts in the same
13 posture as the instant case, without anyone having an oppor-
14 tunity to pass directly on the sincerity of their professed 15 beliefs.

16 Since the Courts are not permitted under this Courts
17 ruling in (Gibson) to receive additional evidence on this ques-18 tion, it seems to us that they would have no choice following 19 the Estep standard which is now in statute but to dismiss a 20 criminal prosecution for refusal to submit on the ground that 21 the registrants Selective Service file, that is, the documents
22 which were before the board, shows no basis in fact for denial 23 of the prima facie written claim.

24 We are not suggesting that the sincere registrants
25 who are genuinely opposed to participation in war in any form

1 are likely to run to this procedure.

2 As pointed out in McKart it seems unlikely that they 3 will risk criminal conviction before taking all possible steps 4 within the system to obtain an exemption of deferment. But in 5 our view the exhaustion requirement is not needed for such 6 registrants.

7 It is needed instead to cope with the recalcitrant 8 registrant who refuses, for reasons best known to him, to 9 cooperate with the system in any way. Who quite often is more 10 intent on disrupting the operation of the system than obtaining 11 an exemption.

12 It seems to us that he should not be allowed to sit 13 back and ignore the administrative processes with impunity
14 while others are being called up to serve in his place.

15 Q What bearing do you think the Divinity claim
16 has on this exhaustion problem, or its not a claim, because I 17 guess he never filed one, did he?

18 A That's---

19 Q But its something on which the board was 20 aware at the time.

21 A Well, Your Honor, in our view the board
22 was not on constructive notice of the claim. I think our prin-
23 ciple response is that with respect to the Divinity claim,
24 Petitioner not only failed to exhaust his administrative rem-25 edies, he did not even invoke them in the first place. And

1 courts do not have under the statute plenary review of class-
2 ification questions, but are explicitly limited to determining 3 whether the action of the administrative agency is without 4 any basis in fact.

5 But even if we assume that the board had constructive
6 notice, and even if we assume that the facts that Petitioner
7 relied on at trial, because the District Court did accept evi-8 dence on this point, even---

9 Q Judge Friendly dealt with it, in his 10 footrote, but Judge Feinberg said nothing about it, as I 11 recall.

12 A Except that Judge Feinberg did state, Your 13 Honor, that his position would be entirely different even with 14 respect to the conscientious objector claim if there had been 15 no tendering of a claim in the first instance to the local 16 board.

17 And I would also add that even on the facts presented, 18 this Petitioner was not entitled to such an exemption. That's 19 a factual question. The Courts looked at that and there was no 20 showing that he met the statutory standard that his studies, 21 that he himself as student studies were under the direction of 22 a recognized church or theological institution.

23 He was attending Union Theological Seminary, but 24 there is no evidence that he was there under the direction of 25 a church or religious organization.

1 Q Does the record show whether or not he got 2 a Divinity degree?

3 A I don't believe at the time of the case
4 in the District Court that he had completed his studies. Whether 5 he now has one or not, I don't know.

6 Q Oh. You are going to deal with other issues
7 if you lose this one, aren't you?

8 A If we lose this one, Your Honor, I do think 9 that as to the other counts the Petitioner was properly convicted 10 for the deliberate non-performance of duties imposed on him 11 under the laws.

12 Q Now did the Court of Appeals pass on those 13 issues?

14 A No, Your Honor, they did not.

15 Q None of them.

16 A Not on the other counts, No, Your Honor, 17 they were discussed by the dissenting---

18 Q Well, if you lose this issue, do any of 19 the other issues automatically wash out?

20 A No, they do not. In our view they don't.

21 Q The Court---

22 A As to---

23 Q The Court of Appeals thought they might, 24 didn't they?

25 A I believe the---

1 Q That one or two of the other counts auto-
2 matically hinged on this one?

3 A Well, one or two, the argument in one or 4 two of the other counts hinged on the fact that he had been 5 classified I-A---

6 Q Yes.

7 A But I don't believe that the Court of 8 Appeals addressed itself to the other issues because it found 9 that he was guilty on the first count and on the concurrent 10 sentence doctrine its discretion is permitted.

11 Q But on the failure to furnish information 12 count, that is unrelated wholly to---

13 A That's---

14 Q ---accurate or inaccurate classification.

15 A That's correct, on that count. But they 16 did not reach that question.

17 Q So if you lose this issue we must remand
18 to the Court of Appeals to pass on the remainder of the case?

19 A I believe if we lose on the first issue, 20 you could properly remand to the Court of Appeals to pass on---

21 Q You don't urge that we make an independent 22 examination of any of those other issues?

23 A I don't think that this Court needs to do
24 that, I will address a comment or two to each of the other 25 ones, I believe that---

1 Q I'm sorry, I don't mean---

2 A They were proper, but the Court of Appeals
3 did not address itself to---

4 Q You would assume that the District Judge
5 would give two years for failure to return a piece of paper?

6 A No, Your Honor, I think that the two 7 year sentence was based primarily on the first count and I 8 think---

9 Q Well, if you lose on it, wouldn't the 10 proper way be to go into the District court and ask for a 11 reduction of sentence?

12 A That is our position in our brief, Your 13 Honor, and I believe that that is correct. But at the same 14 time---

15 Q Because so far as I'm concerned I have 16 great difficulty with a 2 year sentence on---

17 A We are not urging a 2 year sentence on the--

18 Q That's what I---

19 s A No, Your Honor, that's not what we are 20 urging. But the other counts are briefed and before the Court.

21 I think that the conviction on those points was pro-
22 per. The failure to report to his preinduction physical exam-23 ination, Petitioner justified that on the fact that because he 24 was classified I-A improperly he was under no obligation to 25 obey the intermediate directives of the local board.

1 Now I don't beleive that this argument can be sus-
2 tained. The preinduction physical examination is for the purpose
3 of assuring the local board that a registrant is physically 4 qualified and available for induction, prior to the time that 5 it issues its induction order in order to fill its call.

6 The induction which Petitioner underwent at the 7 station is a much more, much: shorter examination and it is 8 merely to determine the changes in his physical status from the 9 time of his earlier preinduction physical.

10 And therefore it's our view that that does not 11 absolve his failure to report to the Selective Service pre-12 induction physical.

13 He argues that his notice of classification was in-14 valid because his assigned classification was invalid. In our 15 view the qualifier "valid" in the regulation related, does not 16 relate to anything other than the certificate itself. And that 17 it be authentic and properly executed. Now Petitioner does 18 not contest the fact that his notice of classification met 19 these requirements.

20 And finally, on the information questionairre, the 21 categorical language of the regulation violsted provides that 22 each registrant shall submit to his local board, in writing, 23 all information which the local board may at any time request 24 from him, Petitioner concedes that his failure to respond to 25 the current information questionairre undoubtedly violated

1 this language.

2 We believe there is no good excuse, no good reason
3 to excuse the violation. We are not dealing here with a minor 4 lapse, but with a flat defiance of a reasonable request for 5 information, not readily available to the local board otherwise, 6 and which Petitioner never provided to them.

7 Q Thank you, Mr. Reynolds. Thank you, Mr.
8 Levine, the case is submitted.

9
10 (Whereupon at 1:30 p.m. argument in the 11 above entitled matter was concluded.)
