1 MR. BURST: It did when it decided the writ of cer-
2 tiorari on the specific issue. The issue before them was 3 limited, as it is now, precisely and only to the double jeo-4 pardy question.

5 QUESTION: Justice Dennis begins his dissent with a 6 citation to Burks, does he not?

7 MR. BURST: That is correct. And I argued Burks 8 completely. Now, Jackson had not been issued, but Burks was 9 before them.

10 QUESTION: Well, we take our State procedure and 11 state procedural remedies as we find them in this Court.
12 And it would appear to me that from Justice Tate's opinion and 13 from the majority opinion, they treat the motion that was made 14 as a 13th-juror type of motion, which Burks left open.

15 MR. BURST: They do treat it, but they treat it on 16 the same basis as this Court discussed in Jackson v. Virginia.
17 In other words, they applied it on a no evidence versus insuf-18 ficient evidence. In fact, in the first page, the first two 19 pages of the opinion of the Supreme Court of Louisiana, they 20 set forth the issue of Burks as rendered by the Chief Justice
21 of this Court and then they set forth the issue before them
22 and they use exactly the same language, only they rule con-23 trary to what this Court did. I can point that out. It's in 24 the Appendix, 49a. Justice Blanche quoted it in the Supreme 25 Court of Louisiana. In the first paragraph he uses the term,

1 "solely for lack of sufficient evidence to sustain the jury's
2 verdict."

3 Then, on page 48, in reference to discussing Burks, 4 he states that this Court decided and reversed on the issue of 5 solely for lack of sufficient evidence to sustain the jury's
6 verdict.

7 QUESTION: Well, then you would have to disavow
8 Justice Tate's concurring opinion, wouldn't you?

9 MR. BURST: Yes, I would. I further -- I feel that 10 also in Justice Tate's concurring opinion that he simply states 11 facts that were not mentioned by the trial judge in his ruling.
12 I think the trial judge's ruling is concise and if there is 13 any ambiguity at all in the trial judge's ruling, it would be 14 by virtue of the precise language he used where he said that 15 "I viewed the same evidence, that in the present case I heard the 16 same evidence the jury did. I am convinced that there was no
17 evidence, certainly not evidence beyond a reasonable doubt 18 to sustain the verdict of homicide committed by the defendant 19 on this particular victim" and the only ambiguity there is 20 whether he was applying a no-evidence rule or insufficient evi-21 dence beyond a reasonable doubt. And I think that that's 22 really a difference without a distinction, that he --

23 QUESTION: Well, wasn't he saying in the alternative 24 I see no evidence whatever, but if I'm wrong on that then my 25 fallback position is, there was not evidence beyond a

1 reasonable doubt?

2 MR. BURST: That's correct. And I feel --

3 QUESTION: Mr. Burst, isn't that even ambiguous, 4 because can't one read that to mean, either not sufficient evi-5 dence from which a jury could have no reasonable doubt, on the 6 basis of which a jury could find guilt beyond a reasonable 7 doubt, or not sufficient evidence to convince me, the judge, 8 beyond a reasonable doubt?

9 MR. BURST: I think that --

10 QUESTION: I mean, you could read it either way, 11 couldn't you?

12 MR. BURST: I have to just take the words as they're 13 spoken. I was not --

14 QUESTION: Well, which way does it mean? Does it
15 mean he doesn't think there's enough evidence to convince him 16 beyond a reasonable doubt, or not enough to have submitted to 17 the jury, and if he means the latter why did he submit it to 18 the jury?

19 MR. BURST: Well, I have two answers to that ques-
20 tion. Louisiana laws that existed then did not permit a trial 21 judge to withhold the submission to the jury. In 1975, and 22 prior to that time -- and I have both sections cited in my 23 brief -- prior to '75 there was an ability of the trial judge 24 to, in effect, sustain a motion for directed verdict.

25 QUESTION: Did they have authority to enter a

1 judgment notwithstanding verdict at that time?

2 MR. BURST: In '75. Not at the time of this trial
3 they did not.

4 QUESTION: Well, at the time of this trial, couldn't 5 the judge at the end of the trial have said what he said to 6 himself here, and therefore I am entering judgment for the 7 defendant of acquittal notwithstanding the verdict? Could he 8 do that at that time?

9 MR. BURST: No, sir. The first and only vehicle
10 that a defendant has in Louisiana to raise the issue of insuf-11 ficient evidence is a motion for new trial, and that's it.
12 And that was the law at the time this was tried, that is sub-13 sequent --

14 QUESTION: But Justice Tate had been a member of 15 that Court for many years. Wouldn't you expect him to have 16 known that if that were in fact the case?

17 MR. BURST: I'm not sure I understand your question.

18 QUESTION: Well, I mean, it seems to me he is saying 19 that what the trial judge did is to say that the question the 20 trial judge answered was the one posed by Justice Stevens or 21 by the Chief Justice. But there was not enough evidence here
22 to satisfy me, had I been sitting as a juror, beyond a reason-23 able doubt?

24 MR. BURST: Well, that would be the second part of 25 my answer to Justice Stevens. And that would be that even if

1 that's what he was saying, that's what the law required him
2 to do, and specifically, precisely that. In other words, if 3 at that point in time, if in his opinion there was insufficient 4 evidence, then he was to so hold. And by so holding he has 5 placed the case in a position where it cannot be retried under 6 our Constitution.

7 QUESTION: Well, then you're saying, I take it, that 8 a statute which required a judge to submit this question to the 9 jury when there was in fact no evidence, would in itself be 10 unconstitutional. Is that your position?

11 MR. BURST: No, sir. It would not be, because I feel 12 that there is no constitutional guarantee of a motion for 13 directed verdict, or even for an appeal for that matter.
14 I feel that as long as all people are treated alike, it makes 15 no difference. All I'm saying is that in this case, in 16 Louisiana law, there is no motion for directed verdict avail-17 able to the defendant in a jury trial and the first time, by 18 their law, that he can raise the issue of insufficient evi-19 dence is on motion for new trial. I don't think that that in 20 and of itself is unconstitutional, but I do feel that in this 21 case that the ruling of the trial judge could not have been 22 clearer. Indeed, the entire ruling which is transcribed for 23 the Court, it sets the basis for his ruling, what he observed, 24 and the factual basis.

25 QUESTION: You have to treat his statement, then,

1 as Mr. Justice Stevens pointed out, as a statement that no rea-
2 sonable juror could reasonably find guilt on the evidence, 3 don't you?

4 MR. BURST: Yes, sir. I do. And I feel that-- 5 when I say the double, I say that, doubly, that what 6 I feel is the faulty premises that the Louisiana court bases 7 its decision on, is that is one, is that certainly one cannot 8 read the trial judge's statement, his opinion, and it is clear
9 what he is ruling. At the very outside he is saying there 10 was insufficient evidence beyond a reasonable doubt to convict 11 this man. That would be taking his statement most favorably 12 to the State's position. I say he still, even with that 13 finding, that there is no retrial, or should be none.

14 QUESTION: But he granted a new trial.

15 MR. BURST: Yes, sir, and the existing law, at that 16 time, in even the State I'm from, that was the law.
17 If they -- in effect, what they were saying was, if you move 18 for a new trial, you waive the argument to your constitutional 19 double jeopardy. But I think that is particularly innocuous 20 here, because under Louisiana law it was the only vehicle he 21 had. You know, if you're requiring a man, he can't waive that 22 issue until a motion for a new trial, and then at the same 23 time, you're saying, but if you do raise it you waive your 24 double jeopardy argument. And that's why I think that this 25 particular statutory system is possibly unconstitutional.

1 If it were applied in a meaning where you said, because I asked
2 for a new trial, I do waive my right to raise double jeopardy,
3 then I think it's unconstitutional, as requiring him to choose 4 between two constitutional safeguards.

5 QUESTION: Well, in a motion for a new trial for 6 error in the admission or rejection of evidence, is there a 7 waiver of any double jeopardy claimed there?

8 MR. BURST: No, sir, because double jeopardy does,
9 as this Court clearly set out in Burks, that that is not a 10 jeopardy question, where it's an error of law, and where it's 11 simply both sides need a different, or a new chance to put on 12 and correct that error. But this Court has, I think, clearly 13 said in Burks that where there's a failure to muster suffi-14 cient evidence the state doesn't get a second chance. And in 15 this case is what they got, and indeed they came forth at the 16 second trial with an eyewitness, ten months later.

17 The second position, I think, that is -- again, I 18 will use this term "faulty premise" that the Louisiana Supreme 19 Court is using, is simply that they are attempting to apply
20 the no evidence rule on both ends. On one end they're saying 21 the trial judge says, merely insufficient evidence. And I 22 would say, and my argument is that that is, when you say it's 23 insufficient beyond a reasonable doubt, you've said it all.
24 But then, on the other hand, to try to apply the no evidence 25 rule under existing Louisiana procedure, and say, because we

1 have a dichotomy between no evidence and insufficient evidence
2 that we are not going to apply, in essence, the Burks deci-
3 sion of the standard of reasonable doubt, as In Re: Winship.
4 I think there, from both ends, that their premise is faulty.
5 And I would assert that as recently as 1980, May of 1980, the 6 court of Louisiana, the Supreme Court of Louisiana, has main-7 tained their position, and that is, they have said that in the 8 case of -- if I may have a drink of water. In May of 1980, 9 in the State v. Custard -- it's the state court of Louisiana, 10 they stated then that "This court has yet fully to embrace 11 Jackson v. Virginia." And that's where this Court, I think, 12 laid to rest the dichotomy between the no evidence rule and 13 the application of the rule of insufficient evidence beyond a 14 reasonable doubt, and adopted, and indeed said that even on 15 federal, and I recognize that Jackson is a very limited opin-
16 ion, and it's limited to habeas corpus review by federal dis-17 trict judges.

18 Now, I think this case that is now before this Court
19 here is the next logical sequence, or logical step, in apply-20 ing that standard in requiring the states through the Four-21 teenth and the Fifth Amendments to adhere to that standard.
22 And the footnotes in this case by the Louisiana Supreme Court 23 fully state that they haven't made up their mind whether or 24 not they're going to follow that standard. And I think 25 that's what we're asking this Court to do is to give direction

1 to the Supreme Court of Louisiana and advise them that they 2 will have to embrace the reasonable doubt standard.

3 QUESTION: Mr. Burst, what if the trial judge had 4 explicitly relied on Subsection, Subparagraph 5 of Article 851
5 in granting the new trial? You would not then claim that 6 there was denial of -- ?

7 MR. BURST: That is accurate; yes, sir. I would 8 not claim double jeopardy. Let me get to my section here and 9 make --

10 QUESTION: But you do disavow the concurring opinion 11 in the rehearing?

12 MR. BURST: It's totally in the brief. I think the 13 wording of the trial judge could not have been clearer on what 14 he was deciding it under.

15 QUESTION: Well, as Justice Stevens suggests, that 16 his statement can be understood to mean that he as a so-called 17 13th juror was not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt.

18 MR. BURST: Well, the -- at page 8a of the Appendix, 19 I believe it is, he starts out, the trial judge fixes the 20 issue himself. He says, "I believe I'm paraphrasing those 21 grounds." However, "The argument was. . . "

22 QUESTION: Where are you reading now?

23 MR. BURST: Oh, I'm sorry. I'm on 8a of the Appen-24 dix.

25 QUESTION: Okay.

1 MR. BURST: And this is where the trial judge is 2 discussing the motion for a new trial. And about midway down,
3 it begins, "The argument was, however, that there was no 4 evidence presented that would have justified the jury in 5 finding the defendant guilty as charged because there was no
6 evidence beyond a reasonable doubt before the jury of the es-
7 sential elements to prove the essential elements of the crime."

8 So he fixed the issue he was determining it on.
9 His discussion thereafter discusses that basis and his final 10 statement is precisely, again, on it. And I -- perhaps I'm 11 missing the direction of questioning, but I really feel that 12 whether he's sitting as a 13th juror or what, at a point in 13 time where a reviewing court, whether it be the trial judge 14 or an appellate court, cites that the evidence was insuffi-15 cient beyond a reasonable doubt and at the point in time that 16 becomes final, I believe that the man is acquitted.

17 QUESTION: Well, if the trial judge didn't do it
18 here, certainly the Supreme Court of Louisiana didn't do it 19 here.

20 MR. BURST: The Supreme Court of Louisiana takes 21 the position that under their laws that exist, they cannot 22 review a decision unless there's a finding of no evidence at 23 all.

24 QUESTION: Well, so you have to rely on the trial
25 judge's conclusion to support your hypothesis that when a

1 judge declares that no reasonable person could have found
2 guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, that is the end of the case 3 as far as double jeopardy, because certainly it is not the 4 position of the Supreme Court of Louisiana.

5 MR. BURST: At this point, that is accurate. But 6 if this Court were to require the Supreme Court of Louisiana
7 to adhere to the standard of not guilty or of insufficient
8 evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, then it's only by case
9 law that they have interpreted into their cases the standard 10 of no evidence.

11 QUESTION: Well, that's true of 49 other states too.

12 MR. BURST: Yes, sir. Well, in Oklahoma -- that 13 might be accurate, I don't know. I know, in Oklahoma, we never 14 use the new evidence v. the insufficient evidence split. In 15 other words, it's strictly and always has been whether or 16 not the evidence was sufficient beyond a reasonable doubt.
17 But --

18 QUESTION: Mr. Burst, you did not try this case?
19 Did you try this case?

20 MR. BURST: No, sir, I did not. In fact, I was not 21 retained until after, or brought into the case until after 22 the appeal.

23 QUESTION: What if this truly were -- and I think 24 you have just told us you don't think there's any difference 25 if it's a 13th juror basis on which a new trial was granted,

1 or a basis of a finding that there was insufficient evidence
2 to convince any reasonable triers of fact beyond a reasonable 3 doubt. But I thought -- isn't that inconsistent with your 4 answer to my question when I asked you if the court had,
5 the trial court had explicitly relied on Subparagraph 5?

6 MR. BURST: Perhaps I am confused with this Subpara-
7 graph 5 --

8 QUESTION: That you would not be making this claim?
9 Subparagraph 5 of Article 851.

10 MR. BURST: That's correct. If he had strictly re-
11 lied on Subparagraph 5, then I would say I would not be before
12 this Court.

13 QUESTION: In other words, one can imagine a state
14 -- I doubt that there is one, but there may be -- which said
15 that anybody convicted of a criminal offense in a trial court 16 is entitled to a new trial as his right, just to entitle them to 17 two bites at the apple. And so a person is convicted and he makes 18 his motion for a new trial and he's granted a new trial.
19 There's no double jeopardy attached to that, is there?

20 MR. BURST: I would say that that would, one, that 21 they'd have to determine, and I'm not --

22 QUESTION: He simply relies on that state law that 23 entitles him to a second trial if he's convicted at the first 24 trial.

25 MR. BURST: No double jeopardy?

1 QUESTION: None at all.

2 MR. BURST: That's correct.

3 QUESTION: And wouldn't the same thing be true if 4 the new trial were granted under Subparagraph 5?

5 MR. BURST: I thought that was the question.

6 QUESTION: Yes, it was. And I thought you answered, 7 yes, it would be.

8 MR. BURST: In Subparagraph 5, the court made a 9 finding, "It is of the opinion the ends of justice would be 10 better served by granting a new trial although defendant may 11 be entitled to a new trial as a matter of. . ."

12 QUESTION: "May not be entitled to a new trial."

13 MR. BURST: "May not be." Then I would not be before
14 this Court.

15 QUESTION: Right. Or, if a state -- and some states 16 do do this -- empower the trial judge to grant a new trial, 17 if he, the trial judge, as a juror sitting in the box was not 18 convinced beyond a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt,
19 regardless of any finding as to what 12 other reasonable men 20 might have been convinced of.

21 MR. BURST: I would have to look at that specific 22 statute, Your Honor. I feel that if it were worded similar to 23 this, that double jeopardy would not be an issue unless it 24 were used as a subterfuge. Then I think it could still be 25 raised.

1 QUESTION: Well, the defendant would hardly use it
2 as a subterfuge.

3 MR. BURST: That's correct. If the defendant moved 4 on, if he specifically said, I want a new trial on number five, 5 then yes, I totally agree with you.

6 QUESTION: Unless, in fact, there were no evidence
7 in the record of guilt. Say the judge just put it on Section 8 5, but then the defendant argued, well, he granted it for that 9 reason, but they didn't offer any evidence of guilt at all,
10 and on review of the record you concluded that was right.
11 Could there be a new trial?

12 MR. BURST: If the trial judge concluded that there 13 was no evidence at all --

14 QUESTION: He doesn't conclude anything. The trial 15 judge says, I'm going to grant a Section 5 new trial; in the 16 interest of justice, I wasn't persuaded. But supposing a 17 federal judge looking at the case later or the reviewing court
18 finds there's absolutely no evidence of guilt in the record 19 at all; they didn't even put a witness on the stand. Could he 20 be retried? Is the test what the record shows or what the 21 judge says?

22 MR. BURST: I think the test often is what the find-23 ing, the ultimate finding of the court, is.

24 QUESTION: You mean, if the judge says, it's a new 25 trial under Section 5 in the interests of justice, there could

1 be a new trial, even if the state put in no evidence of guilt
2 at all, didn't put a single witness on the stand?

3 MR. BURST: No, that's what I would -- that was my 4 point in answering. If the Rule 5 grant were, in my words, a 5 subterfuge, or actually what the motion was that there was 6 insufficient evidence, then I don't think there could be a 7 new trial.

8 QUESTION: So the test is what the record shows, not 9 what the judge says?

10 QUESTION: And it's up to this Court to independently 11 examine the record, is that it?

12 MR. BURST: No, I didn't say that.

13 QUESTION: Well, what did you say?

14 QUESTION: You can't have it both ways.

15 MR. BURST: No, I don't ask for it both ways.
16 I don't ask; this is not my role.

17 QUESTION: Well, what do you say? Is it what the 18 judge says or what the record says?

19 MR. BURST: What I say is, when at some point, when 20 the judge of whatever system it is, in this case the State of 21 Louisiana, when the judge who sits on the issue makes his find-22 ing and that finding becomes final through either appeal or 23 lack thereof, that that's what we have here at this Court and 24 that this Court is not to review the record.

25 QUESTION: No, but what if his finding is, I'm

1 granting this motion under Section 5 in the interest of jus-
2 tice. Is there always permitted to be a new trial? You see,
3 the other side of the coin is, here he used the language you 4 like. There's no evidence. But Justice Tate said, no, but 5 I've looked at the record and there is evidence in the record 6 that was sufficient to go to the jury. Do you agree with 7 Justice Tate when he says that? He doesn't turn on what the 8 judge says. He says there was enough evidence in the record 9 to be submitted to the jury.

10 MR. BURST: First of all, I would take exception, and 11 I do take exception, to Justice Tate's going into the record 12 on an issue of law.

13 QUESTION: Well, I understand. Your opinion is, we 14 just look at what the trial judge says and we don't pay any 15 attention to the record.

16 MR. BURST: It's final.

17 QUESTION: But you conceded that the judge's comment 18 was somewhat ambiguous, did you not?

19 MR. BURST: Only to the point of whether or not he 20 was finding no evidence, or on insufficient evidence beyond a
21 reasonable doubt.

22 QUESTION: Let me pursue that with one more question.
23 Are you telling us that whenever a judge, a trial judge -- 24 forget the old Louisiana statute -- any trial judge, who dis-25 agrees with the jury's verdict of guilt because as a juror he

1 would have voted the other way, then, that gives rise to a 2 double jeopardy problem?

3 MR. BURST: Yes, sir.

4 QUESTION: Just because he disagrees?

5 MR. BURST: If he is willing to make the ruling un-6 der the then law -- as he did in this case, and that is 7 subject to appeal; you know, it couldn't in this case but in 8 future cases it could be -- I realize that Louisiana has a 9 problem right now, if this Court follows my ruling, but that's 10 Louisiana's problem if their structure is not in line with the 11 U.S. constitutional requirements.

12 QUESTION: Well, that's not what Burks said, is it?

13 MR. BURST: No, sir. Burks was not a state case.
14 I recognize that.

15 QUESTION: Presumably the double jeopardy require-
16 ments since Benton v. Maryland have been the same for pur-
17 poses of state and federal courts.

18 MR. BURST: Not in Louisiana, I don't think, because -- 19 I don't know that. Again, Louisiana's been using the no evidence 20 versus insufficient evidence. They've been saying, unless the 21 trial judge will say there's no evidence of either the crime
22 or an element of the crime, then we don't review it. If there 23 is -- however, if it's merely insufficient evidence, then 24 they will not review it. Only if there's no evidence. And 25 that's where we -- you know, the problem of review in Louisiana

1 law lies --

2 QUESTION: But a writ for an appeal was taken, raising 3 ing only one question, namely, that the evidence does not sup-4 port the verdict with evidence beyond a reasonable doubt.
5 Then, what is the test? If there's a motion for a new trial 6 on that ground, what's the test that the trial judge should 7 apply?

8 MR. BURST: I think he should apply the test of whe-9 ther or not that any trier of fact could find --

10 QUESTION: Could reasonably find?

11 MR. BURST: Could reasonably find.

12 QUESTION: In other words, that's Justice Tate's --
13 it would follow Justice Tate's theory?

14 MR. BURST: I don't read that into Justice Tate's
15 theory. I think what Justice Tate did was, he did not like 16 what the trial judge said. He inserted his opinion. Let's 17 point out that the Louisiana Supreme Court denied the 18 appeal from the trial judge is sustaining of the motion for a 19 new trial. In other words, the trial judge made his ruling 20 and the State took writs and the writs were denied. And they 21 were denied because of this Louisiana dichotomy. Then, two 22 years later, Tate comes behind -- or Justice Tate goes behind 23 that and says he examined the records and he's speaking for 24 himself only, not the majority of the court. He says that we 25 would have affirmed, but he's speaking for himself only.

1 And he's going behind the record which, I'm told time and time
2 again I can't do, when I come on appeal. And I do take issue 3 with that in the concurrent opinion; yes, sir.

4 QUESTION: Well, but his opinion is not inconsistent 5 with the action of the Supreme Court the first time around in 6 refusing to reverse the order granting a new trial, because 7 his theory of the order granting a new trial was that there
8 was enough evidence to go to the jury, but that the interests 9 of justice made it appropriate to grant a new trial. There's 10 nothing inconsistent with his view in affirming the -- in 11 other words, he says the order was right.

12 MR. BURST: It's inconsistent in that the standard 13 applied is identical to the standard this Court has laid down
14 in In Re: Winship, whereas the standard where, which the State 15 of Louisiana is saying was merely insufficient evidence, is 16 identical to the standard that this Court has laid down in 17 In Re: Winship and recognized in Burks and later in Jackson v.
18 Virginia.

19 And, you know, if they can say the same words and say
20 they mean something else, then I would concur with the Court, 21 with you. But they're not. I mean, they're using the same 22 words, and particularly the majority of the court, they're 23 using the exact same words as did the Chief Justice in saying 24 they mean different things. And I can't agree with that as a 25 matter of law. That's semantics.

1 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: If you wish to save any 2 time for rebuttal, you have your --

3 MR. BURST: I would like to, Your Honor.

4 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Bullers.

5 ORAL ARGUMENT OF JAMES M. BULLERS, ESQ.,

6 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT

7 MR. BULLERS: Thank you, Mr. Chief Justice, and may 8 it please the Court:

9 I agree with Mr. Burst that this really is limited 10 and involves interpretation of the particular statutes that 11 our Code of Criminal Procedure has dealing with new trials.

12 The State's position is that the trial judge, when 13 he made the comment, he said that "I heard the same evidence 14 the jury did." Then he went on to say, "I'm convinced."

15 It does appear somewhat ambiguous, of course. As 16 I said, the State's position is that he was stating his opin-17 ion after he had heard the same evidence that the jury heard.
18 Now, the trial judge at that time didn't have the benefit of 19 Burks and Jackson v. Virginia. The problem that we run into is 20 that in commenting on the evidence it would seem to the State 21 that the best answer is, what does the record really reflect?
22 We have an article for a new trial which deals with five sub-23 sections, and though the judge may call up one subsection or 24 another, he could be in error. And really, it does appear 25 that the test would be, what does the record really reflect?

1           Of course, the State's position was, we agree with 2 Judge Tate that, although because the trial judge did not have 3 the benefit of Burks and Jackson, he didn't articulate partic-4 ularly and he did not assign one particular subsection or 5 another. But even if he had, isn't it really what the record 6 reflects?

7           But at any rate, the -- in the Supreme Court --

8           QUESTION: Do you agree, Mr. Bullers, that at the 9 time of this trial the trial judge had no power whatever to 10 direct a judgment of acquittal?

11           MR. BULLERS: Yes, I agree with that, Your Honor.
12 I do. At that time --

13           QUESTION: Even if he did find that there was no
14 evidence whatsoever, the extent of his power was to grant a 15 new trial as a matter of judgment of the court.

16           MR. BULLERS: Yes, sir, that's correct. At that 17 point, that's what it was. That particular provision for 18 directed verdict had been deleted prior to this trial, so 19 that in essence the Louisiana Legislature had taken away that 20 judge's authority to interject himself into the jury trial 21 process.

22           QUESTION: Could a defendant after the receipt 23 of a guilty verdict, without moving for a new trial, appeal his 24 conviction?

25           MR. BULLERS: Yes. That remedy would be to take an

1 appeal. I think the issue comes down to what extent should 2 the trial judge interject himself or be required to interject
3 himself into the trial by jury process? We have a jury of 12
4 peers that felt the evidence was sufficient was beyond a rea-
5 sonable doubt. The trial judge differed. So, the only way
6 that I could see logically would be to see what the record
7 really shows. Somebody -- obviously, there's a difference
8 there; that's obvious. But the key is, how -- to what extent 9 should the trial judge interject himself into this process?
10 Should he be required to evaluate the evidence that the jury 11 hears and then make a decision?

12 QUESTION: You keep saying the trial judge injected
13 himself in. I thought he sat there by right of the Constitu-
14 tion of the State of Louisiana.

15 MR. BULLERS: Pardon?

16 QUESTION: You keep saying the trial judge injected
17 himself into the trial.

18 MR. BULLERS: Well, what I said was --

19 QUESTION: Do you really mean that word "injected"?

20 MR. BULLERS: Interjected.

21 QUESTION: Do you mean that?

22 MR. BULLERS: No, I said, what I meant was, to what 23 extent should he be required to get into the decision process 24 when you have a jury trial? Should he be required to evaluate 25 the evidence and to what extent should he interject himself

1 into it? I didn't say he did in this case. I'm just saying 2 this is what it's going to boil down to. You understand as,
3 in other words, in the future --

4 QUESTION: No, I heard you.

5 MR. BULLERS: Right. In the future the procedure
6 that we have now just says that at the conclusion of the trial
7 then you have a right, if he's found guilty, as in this case, 8 then he can take an appeal or ask for a new trial, because the 9 section pertaining to directed verdicts was deleted. I con-
10 cede that, so that throughout this time was simply to raise 11 it on appeal or request a new trial. In this case it was by a 12 new trial. So the issue would be in the future, then, to what 13 extent does the judge have to evaluate the evidence in the 14 jury process, trial by jury process?

15 I'm not saying that he interjected himself in it in 16 this case. He followed the law that since he didn't have 17 the -- since Burks had not been rendered at that time, he didn't 18 articulate much further. He just had the one little paragraph 19 of -- one little excerpt that Mr. Burst talked about, and that 20 was, "I heard the same evidence the jury did." -- "I'm convinced 21 that it doesn't show," et cetera. As he said, "I'm convinced."

22 QUESTION: Mr. Bullers, can I ask you another ques-23 tion about Louisiana procedure? As I understand it, you've 24 just confirmed he could not have granted a judgment of not 25 guilty notwithstanding the verdict of the jury?

1 MR. BULLERS: That's correct, Your Honor.

2 QUESTION: And he also had a duty in advance of -- 3 he had to submit the case to the jury even if he thought there 4 was insufficient evidence to go to the jury?

5 MR. BULLERS: The way that our Code of Criminal Pro-6 cedure, Article 778, was at that time, it would only be by 7 trial judge alone, of course. If there was a jury trial, it 8 would have to be submitted to the jury.

9 QUESTION: And what about at the end of the prosecu-
10 tor's case, could he have granted directed verdict at that 11 point in the proceeding?

12 MR. BULLERS: No, he couldn't, Your Honor.

13 QUESTION: So if he thought there was no evidence of 14 guilt and that there'd been a total failure of proof, he would 15 have had to do exactly what he did in this case?

16 MR. BULLERS: Exactly. He would have to grant a new 17 trial. Then we get back to, did he grant it under Subsection
18 1, which was -- as the grounds for that is that the verdict
19 was contrary to the law and evidence, or was it some other 20 grounds? And of course, Justice Tate in his opinion felt that 21 it was more in the interest of justice. The State from our 22 point of view gave the defendant a fair trial and he was 23 convicted by a jury of his peers, and the judge said, in his 24 language, "I'm not convinced" -- that's our interpretation of 25 it -- and granted a new trial, which was the procedure at that

1 time, that was his remedy. We agree to that.

2 QUESTION: Is there anything at all in the record
3 that supports Judge Tate's view that -- and I know he's an 4 awfully good judge and usually is pretty careful about what he 5 does -- but is there anything in the record to support his 6 view that the judge relied on Section Five?

7 MR. BULLERS: No, Your Honor, the judge didn't 8 state that. Obviously, Judge Tate in his reviewing the entire 9 case felt that's what it was. He obviously differed in the 10 opinion of the judge -- that when the judge said there was no
11 evidence then he clarified that and said, at least, or cer-
12 tainly not beyond a reasonable doubt. Judge Tate obviously dis-13 agreed with that because he said he felt that the record showed 14 sufficient evidence to give it to the jury.

15 So that, in his opinion, it should have been five 16 instead of one, and it goes back to, since the trial judge 17 didn't articulate, and even if he had it still seems that 18 it's actually what the record shows. I don't see any other 19 way, unfortunately.

20 QUESTION: What is the status of your procedure now?
21 Is there an option open to the judge to grant a directed ver-22 dict notwithstanding --

23 MR. BULLERS: Well, it's still as it is now, is my 24 understanding also.

25 QUESTION: It's still the same way?

1 MR. BULLERS: That's right.

2 QUESTION: If your procedure allowed a directed 3 verdict, and the district and the trial judge entered a verdict 4 of not guilty notwithstanding the judgment, would you say that 5 would bar another trial? That would clearly bar another 6 trial, even if there was a --

7 MR. BULLERS: There would be a finding of not guilty 8 and in essence it would bar another trial.

9 QUESTION: So we just look at the judge's ruling in 10 that case, and we wouldn't really look at the evidence at all?

11 QUESTION: That's right.

12 MR. BULLERS: Do you have any other questions?

13 QUESTION: Then the State has no appeal from an 14 order granting a new trial?

15 MR. BULLERS: No, Your Honor, there is no appeal or 16 review by the State, once the judge orders a new trial then 17 we'd have to proceed on with a new trial. There was no higher 18 court to review what had gone on and why, and to make a rul-
19 ing whether the judge was right or wrong. So once he said
20 that the new trial should be held, then we'd have to proceed 21 on with the new trial.

22 QUESTION: But then you defended -- after the second 23 trial you got in your licks on whether the new trial order 24 was right?

25 MR. BULLERS: Well, after the second trial, he was

1 convicted again.

2 QUESTION: Then he appealed.

3 MR. BULLERS: And then he appealed and raised this 4 issue. And, of course, his position, I think, was that we 5 get another bite at the apple. I'm not sure that's accurate, 6 of course, but that would satisfy the jury.

7 QUESTION: Was there new evidence presented in the 8 second trial that was not present at the first?

9 MR. BULLERS: Yes; yes. I didn't handle the trial.
10 The record shows that there was another witness that was not 11 available or not found that didn't testify at the first trial, 12 that did testify at the second.

13 QUESTION: Well, are you defending the Supreme Court
14 of Louisiana's rationale for its decision? Are you just ask-15 ing, or not?

16 MR. BULLERS: I think that Judge Tate's rationale
17 was probably the most accurate.

18 QUESTION: Under Burks or what?

19 MR. BULLERS: Yes, sir. I think that, as I understand 20 Burks, it would be, is there sufficient evidence to give it to 21 the jury? And I think that Judge Tate considered that, and 22 determined that there was. But of course, he had to look at 23 the record to determine that, obviously. He had to know what 24 the evidence was.

25 QUESTION: Do you agree with him?

1 MR. BULLERS: Yes, I do.

2 QUESTION: Shouldn't we remand it, then, for the 3 Supreme Court to apply the right standard and determine whe-4 ther there was double jeopardy?

5 MR. BULLERS: That is a possibility. As I under-6 stand the majority opinion, what they were saying was that --

7 QUESTION: Well, if you agree with Tate, what else
8 can you do except remand?

9 QUESTION: In other words, you're saying that the 10 -- are you saying? -- that the Louisiana Supreme Court judg-
11 ment cannot stand except on Judge Tate's theory?

12 MR. BULLERS: His theory, as I said, appears to be 13 the most accurate. The majority opinion, I think, when they 14 were sorting through Burks and applying it here, got into a 15 difficult position.

16 QUESTION: They just misread Burks, you think?

17 MR. BULLERS: Well --

18 QUESTION: Or do you agree with that, or not?

19 MR. BULLERS: Of course, that is our Supreme Court,
20 and those are learned gentlemen down there, Your Honor.

21 QUESTION: And you hesitate to appear before them 22 after having -- ?

23 QUESTION: Of course, even Judge Tate isn't there 24 anymore.

25 MR. BULLERS: No, that's correct, Your Honor.

1 He's with the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals now. But if it
2 does come down to the fact that this constitutes double jeo-
3 pardy, then I think that as you read our statutes, then, 4 Article 851, which sets out the various subdivisions, the 5 judge is going to have to articulate particularly which one
6 and why. And as I said, the trial judge didn't have that bene-
7 fit at the time. So that's why we're sort of at a loss here.
8 I think that puts us in a difficult position. I think that's 9 true of the appellant as well as the State.

10 Does the Court have any other questions?

11 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: I think not. Do you
12 have anything further, Mr. Burst? You have two minutes 13 remaining.

14 MR. BURST: They will be very brief, indeed.

15 ORAL ARGUMENT OF RICHARD O. BURST, ST., ESQ.,

16 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER -- REBUTTAL

17 MR. BURST: First of all, I think if this Court looks 18 at the entire opinion of the trial judge, that the trial judge
19 -- here is where I take issue with Justice Tate -- in no way 20 does the trial judge in any way state anything similar to the 21 fifth provision of the Louisiana Code.

22 QUESTION: But did he say any more than that, if he 23 had been a member of the jury, he would have voted the other 24 way?

25 MR. BURST: He certainly did.

1 QUESTION: Oh, you think so?

2 MR. BURST: I certainly think he did and I specifi-
3 cally refer the Court to his reasoning.

4 QUESTION: But an experienced trial judge should have 5 articulated it more precisely if he meant what you say he 6 meant?

7 MR. BURST: Well, I think he did. Because he went 8 on to quote --

9 QUESTION: The Supreme Court of Louisiana certainly 10 agreed with you.

11 MR. BURST: Excuse me, Your Honor?

12 QUESTION: The Supreme Court of Louisiana agreed 13 with you.

14 MR. BURST: Yes, they did.

15 QUESTION: Agreed with your reading of what the trial
16 judge says.

17 MR. BURST: The majority did, yes.

18 QUESTION: Rightly or wrongly.

19 MR. BURST: But I -- you know, I think he does say 20 more than that, and in fact he does specifically reference 21 three of the other grounds and -- as I recall. But that's in 22 the Appendix for the Court to read, and that is, certainly, you 23 know, where he ended up. But I would point out that at the 24 time that the trial -- at the pleadings -- we had it today -- if 25 the trial judge makes a ruling, then the motion for retrial

1 on grounds of insufficient evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, 2 that the State of Louisiana is in the same position it was 3 then unless it is reversed in this Court. And that is, that if 4 there is an appeal by the State on a writ, they'll deny it 5 because they're still applying the no evidence test and saying, 6 we can't review it unless there's no evidence.

7 QUESTION: Or as a matter of state law, the Supreme 8 Court has, never reviews the sufficiency of the evidence, 9 I gather.

10 MR. BURST: That's right.

11 QUESTION: That's a matter of the state statute, 12 isn't it?

13 MR. BURST: That's a matter of -- I think it is 14 statutory by interpretation of the Constitution.

15 QUESTION: I just read it here; yes.

16 MR. BURST: That is correct. They're saying, what 17 they're saying is, it doesn't arrive to a legal issue until 18 you can point out that there's no evidence.

19 QUESTION: In other words, the Supreme Court of 20 Louisiana has no power to review the sufficiency of the evi-21 dence, as a matter of state law.

22 MR. BURST: They could, by interpretation, though.
23 See, they've interpreted -- they themselves have interpreted 24 the Constitution to say that. In other words, their Consti-25 tution says says they can only review matters of law.

1 QUESTION: If they say that's what their Constitu-
2 tion means, that's what their Constitution means, as far as 3 we're concerned.

4 QUESTION: We can't say differently.

5 MR. BURST: I understand. Thank you very much.

6 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you. The case is 7 submitted.

8 (Whereupon, at 1:43 o'clock p.m., the case in the 9 above-entitled matter was submitted.)
