1                                    P R O C E E D I N G S

2                    MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments
3 first this morning in Watkins against Bordenkircher and Summitt
4 against Bordenkircher. Mr. Heft, you may proceed whenever you 5 are ready.

6                    ORAL ARGUMENT OF FRANK W. HEFT, JR., ESQ.,

7                    ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS

8                    MR. HEFT: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please 9 the Court:

10                   The issue brought before the Court today in these 11 consolidated cases is whether or not constitutional due process 12 of law requires a hearing outside the presence of the jury to 13 determine the admissibility of -- identification evidence.

14                   We submit that the issue before this Court is not 15 the narrow one concerning the admission of identification 16 evidence, but rather the issue, and the essence of that issue 17 goes to effective assistance of counsel. The Court must examine 18 the practical application of the issue because it has a direct 19 effect on the practice of criminal law in cases throughout this 20 country. The Petitioners will demonstrate to the Court that 21 the necessity for requiring an in camera hearing is so intri-22 cately interwoven to effective assistance of counsel, that due 23 process requires an in camera hearing.

24                   QUESTION: This is as to the admissibility of any 25 identification evidence?

1 MR. HEFT: Yes, be it a show-up, line-up, or --

2 QUESTION: Or a proposed identification in Court?

3 MR. HEFT: That's correct, Justice Stewart. The --

4 QUESTION: What you're saying is that cross-examina-5 tion is not sufficient?

6 MR. HEFT: Exactly. We feel that, this Court has 7 examined in its history, numerous cases involving identifica-
8 tion testimony. Those cases, to-wit, Wade, Stovall and Gil-9 bert, were concerned with the suggestive identification 10 procedures that may be implemented.

11 The more recent decisions, specifically the Biggers 12 and the Manson decisions, deal with the reliability of the 13 identification evidence. The emphasis has, in fact, shifted.

14 The present stand of the Manson standard, which 15 requires that the reliability of identification evidence be 16 weighed against the corrupting effect of suggestive identifi-17 cation procedures, requires an evidentiary hearing to determine 18 how that procedure is going to be implemented.

19 QUESTION: The first three cases you mentioned had 20 to do with; the first two with a line-up and the third one with 21 a show-up, so-called?

22 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

23 QUESTION: And the second cases, category of cases 24 you mentioned, had to do with identification in court?

25 MR. HEFT: Well Biggers, when the -- I believe when

1 the test shifted to Biggers, there was a show-up conducted in 2 the Biggers case and the Court determined, rather than to 3 rely only on the -- the only test was that various factors 4 had to be determined --

5 QUESTION: The question in Biggers, as I remember it, 6 I haven't read it recently, was how much of an opportunity did 7 the victim of the rape in that case have to, actually have to 8 identify the defendant, isn't that it?

9 MR. HEFT: Exactly. The Court recognized that a 10 show-up is a suggestive procedure, per se. But the real 11 question in the Biggers case was, could the witness, notwith-12 standing any suggestive identification procedures, could the 13 witness give an accurate and reliable identification.

14 QUESTION: In Court?

15 MR. HEFT: Yes.

16 QUESTION: There was not a line-up in Biggers, was 17 there?

18 MR. HEFT: No, just the show-up. The question 19 becomes how does due process require the Manson analysis to 20 be implemented. And we submit there are several considerations 21 along this line.

22 First of all, as the Respondent argues here, that 23 discovery is an adequate method by which to implement the 24 Manson analysis. We submit that discovery is totally inade-25 quate; primarily because the purpose of discovery is only to

1 disclose what possible evidence may exist. It has nothing to 2 do with the resolution of issues of constitutional magnitude.

3 More importantly there is no due process right to 4 discovery. Discovery is necessarily a matter of state pro-
5 cedural law. Consequently, it's -- what is discoverable today 6 may not be discoverable tomorrow.

7 In fact, Kentucky at the present time is going 8 through a revision of its discovery rules. And we feel for 9 those reasons discovery is constitutionally inadequate to 10 achieve a reliable identification.

11 The respondent also argues that the defense attorney 12 has equal access to pretrial interviews of witnesses and that 13 this will satisfy any constitutional requirements --

14 QUESTION: Counsel, did you make and preserve this 15 right to counsel argument as opposed to the Wade, Stovall, 16 Denno argument all through the Kentucky courts into the 17 District Court in the Sixth Circuit?

18 MR. HEFT: Justice Rehnquist, I don't think anyone 19 ever questioned the individual's right to counsel. We are not 20 saying that the individual is entitled to counsel in pre-21 critical stages; that's not the issue. We assume, for example
22 in Watkins' case, Watkins was identified in a line-up and a 23 show-up before his indictment. We're not saying that he had 24 a right to counsel at those points in time, all we're saying 25 in this brief, is that counsel did have the right to an

1 in camera hearing to challenge the reliability --

2 QUESTION: You mean that when the in-court identi-3 fication was offered by the prosecution, did you then at that 4 time ask for a hearing outside the presence of the jury?

5 MR. HEFT: In Watkins' case, there was a pretrial 6 motion filed to suppress.

7 QUESTION: That isn't what I asked you. Now, you 8 objected at the -- in trial, did you?

9 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

10 QUESTION: And did you ask at the time when the 11 trial was going on for a hearing outside the presence of the 12 jury?

13 MR. HEFT: Pretrial. The judge called the case 14 for trial, both attorneys asked for in camera hearings. Both 15 attorneys in the Watkins and the Summitt cases cited Wade, 16 Stovall and Gilbert and constitutional principles, to justify 17 the request for the hearings.

18 QUESTION: You still haven't answered Justice
19 Rehnquist's --

20 QUESTION: Did they cite Jackson against Denno, or --

21 MR. HEFT: No. No one cited Jackson v. Denno.

22 QUESTION: So that you didn't raise the point in the 23 state court?

24 MR. HEFT: It was raised and it was considered by, 25 particularly, the Sixth Circuit.

1           QUESTION: Well, but the Sixth Circuit on a habeas 2 can't consider a point that wasn't raised and considered in 3 the state courts, can they?

4           MR. HEFT: The state courts did not specifically 5 address the Jackson issue.

6           QUESTION: Because you hadn't raised it?

7           MR. HEFT: It had been -- Jackson had not been, 8 specifically raised.

9           QUESTION: Well why did the federal habeas court 10 think that you had exhausted your state remedies on this par-11 ticular question?

12          MR. HEFT: Well the Kentucky Supreme Court just 13 found, in both of these cases, that there was no due process 14 right.

15          QUESTION: To what, to what?

16          MR. HEFT: To have the in camera hearing before eye 17 witness identification could be admitted.

18          QUESTION: Well, so you did raise it in the state
19 court?

20          MR. HEFT: That specific issue was raised.

21          QUESTION: Yes, but was it -- on the grounds of 22 what? Why did you think you were entitled to an in camera
23 hearing?

24          MR. HEFT: Due process. Because the attorney on 25 cross-examination cannot adequately challenge the reliability

1 of identification.

2 QUESTION: Well Mr. Justice Rehnquist asked you if 3 you had presented that issue in the state courts?

4 MR. HEFT: Well Justice White, it had not been 5 raised specifically in Jackson v. Denno terms in the state
6 court. It had been raised --

7 QUESTION: Well I don't care whether you -- it isn't 8 so much whether you cited Jackson against Denno, but it's 9 whether or not you claimed that the federal constitution as 10 a matter of due process --

11 MR. HEFT: Yes, it was claimed --

12 QUESTION: -- requires you to -- requires an in 13 camera hearing.

14 MR. HEFT: Yes sir, it was. Due process grounds --

15 QUESTION: You've now embellished it with this, 16 it's really a right to counsel, due process argument, is that 17 it?

18 MR. HEFT: It has certain ramifications for effective 19 assistance of counsel, that's our position.

20 QUESTION: Well the evidence was admitted, wasn't it?

21 MR. HEFT: Yes sir.

22 QUESTION: And you don't challenge that it wasn't 23 admissible? Or do you say that if counsel had the unrestrained 24 right to cross-examination, it might not have been?

25 MR. HEFT: That's the issue to be determined and

1 that's the value of the in camera hearing. We don't feel that 2 an attorney on cross-examination can adequately challenge the 3 reliability of identification. There are too many factors the 4 attorney has to consider when he undertakes cross-examination.
5 He's got to understand the nature of the case. I think this 6 Court has to analyze the issue presented here from the per-7 spective of the trial attorney. When the trial attorney is 8 going to cross-examine a witness, for example, in the Summitt 9 case, he's going to cross-examine a rape victim who is still 10 emotionally distraught because of this experience over almost 11 two years after the rape itself. He also has to take into 12 consideration what did the prosecutor achieve on direct 13 examination.

14 The Watkins case is a classic example. The pro-15 secution didn't even touch the pretrial identification --

16 QUESTION: The rule you're advocating would apply, 17 I take it to, as equally, to six witnesses, identification 18 witnesses or 12, as it does to one, would it not?

19 MR. HEFT: Yes.

20 QUESTION: And it would apply outside the identifi-21 cation field, I would take it, because a trial attorney has to 22 make that sort of determination you're talking about, how much 23 did the prosecutor accomplish on direct, with respect to every 24 single witness in the case, whether to decline cross-examina-25 tion, make an extensive cross-examination, or the like?

1           MR. HEFT: That's true. His -- what we're saying is 2 that, without this in camera hearing, the attorney is just 3 in an incredibly untenable position to challenge the reliabil-4 ity of the identification.

5           We would submit that, granted it would take time 6 to conduct the evidentiary hearing, pretrial, or out of the 7 presence of the jury, but we would submit that it is judicial 8 economy to conduct that hearing, for several reasons. First 9 of all, the attorney is going to -- if, assuming the reliabil-10 ity is very strong, an in camera hearing may result in settle-11 ment of the case. Second of all, if the reliability is so 12 strong, the attorney, he may waive cross-examination of that 13 witness and certainly, he's going to restrict and limit his 14 cross-examination. He's not going to engage in the rambling 15 type of cross-examination that Summitt's attorney engaged in.
16 Summitt --

17           QUESTION: So you're saying, in effect, that the 18 Constitution requires that there be this in camera or pretrial 19 exploration so that the attorney can decide whether he wants 20 to cross-examine and if so, how much; isn't that what it adds 21 up to?

22           MR. HEFT: It adds up to a question of the effective 23 assistance of counsel, and --

24           QUESTION: No, just answer my question. Isn't that 25 what you're asking for?

1 MR. HEFT: Yes. That's correct.

2 QUESTION: Now, if it's a hold-up of a bank, or a 3 supermarket, and you've got 12 witnesses, eyewitnesses, you're 4 going to, on your theory, have to have the in camera examina-5 tion of each one of those witnesses to see how fallible or how 6 strong their identification may be?

7 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

8 QUESTION: Would you extend the same rule to the 9 testimony of a police officer in a drug case who testifies that 10 yes, this white substance was a controlled substance?

11 MR. HEFT: No sir. I think this particular issue 12 is restricted only to identification evidence cases.

13 QUESTION: But what logical ground is there to sep-14 arate one from the other?

15 MR. HEFT: Well, you would not -- I think, primarily, 16 the constitutional ramifications of suggestive identification 17 procedures and unreliability of identification evidence. In 18 your hypothetical, Justice Rehnquist, the matter of whether or 19 not a certain substance may be cocaine or heroin, that -- I 20 don't see any constitutional problems with a denial of an in 21 camera hearing to determine whether or not the substance is in 22 fact a controlled substance. But here there are just far-23 reaching constitutional ramifications that require the hearing.

24 QUESTION: Well you're talking about reliability?

25 MR. HEFT: Exactly. But I would --

1 QUESTION: Would you also give the state the right
2 to examine alibi witnesses ahead of time?

3 MR. HEFT: I think that's a matter, Justice Marshall, 4 of state procedural law.

5 QUESTION: Well why isn't this also a matter -- what 6 part of the Constitution says you have to have a rerun of your 7 evidence?

8 MR. HEFT: There's nothing in the Constitution that 9 says you have to have a rerun of your evidence, but the 10 Constitution says --

11 QUESTION: What is there in the Constitution that 12 says that the government has to help you in your case?

13 MR. HEFT: I don't know if it's so much --there's 14 nothing --

15 QUESTION: What is there in the Constitution that 16 says that the government should do what you should do yourself 17 as defense counsel?

18 MR. HEFT: I think the Sixth Amendment requires the 19 hearing.

20 QUESTION: That the government should do what you 21 ought to do yourself?

22 MR. HEFT: The Constitution requires the government
23 to do it. It doesn't require what the defense attorney wants 24 it to --

25 QUESTION: Well what in the Constitution says that

1 you should have the right to examine one class of witnesses
2 before they are put on the stand?

3 MR. HEFT: I think it's the nature of the evidence.

4 QUESTION: Oh, it's the nature of the evidence.

5 MR. HEFT: Yes, this --

6 QUESTION: In any kind of case?

7 MR. HEFT: No sir, not at all.

8 QUESTION: What kind of a case, a rape case?

9 MR. HEFT: One's a rape case and one's a robbery 10 case. But they --

11 QUESTION: Well, is it restricted to those?

12 MR. HEFT: No sir.

13 QUESTION: Rape and robbery?

14 MR. HEFT: It's only restricted to cases in which 15 identification evidence is going to be introduced.

16 QUESTION: Suppose it's an SEC case for identifica-
17 tion?

18 MR. HEFT: I'm sorry, I don't follow the analogy.
19 I don't --

20 QUESTION: Neither do I, I don't follow where you are 21 either. See, that's my trouble. I just don't understand why 22 this is singled out, except that this is the case that you 23 have --

24 MR. HEFT: Well, --

25 QUESTION: -- that's the only reason it's singled

1 out, isn't it?

2 MR. HEFT: It's -- no, because I think there's a 3 conflict --

4 QUESTION: Well you name me one other field it would 5 apply to?

6 MR. HEFT: I would submit that a determination of 7 whether a confession can be admitted into evidence, as evi-
8 denced in Jackson v. Denno.

9 QUESTION: But you didn't raise Jackson v. Denno.

10 MR. HEFT: That was raised, the courts did consider 11 that.

12 QUESTION: Which court?

13 MR. HEFT: The Sixth Circuit. It explained the -- 14 QUESTION: I'm talking about the state court; that's 15 where it started.

16 MR. HEFT: The state court concluded that there was 17 no due process violation, for failing to conduct the hearing.
18 The Sixth Circuit reached the same conclusion, but based on 19 Jackson in the Pinto decision. And we submit that's an erron-
20 eous conclusion. Because the analysis in Jackson went right 21 to the practical effect of allowing -- what happens when the 22 jury is allowed to determine the voluntariness of the confes-
23 sion, and pass on the defendant's guilt or innocence?

24 QUESTION: Yes, but the jury is not permitted to 25 pass on the admissibility of evidence.

1 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

2 QUESTION: And of identification of it.

3 MR. HEFT: They have to determine the reliability
4 of the evidence, and the reliability is based first of all,
5 on, perhaps, suggestive identification procedures. That's -- 6 has to be, whether or not the identification procedure is 7 suggestive has to be determined.

8 We submit that that's a question of law, given the 9 decisions of this Court along these lines. After the Court 10 decides whether or not the identification is suggestive, the 11 Court then has to determine whether or not in spite of any 12 suggestive procedures, is the identification reliable and can 13 the jury itself pass on the credibility of the witness and the 14 reliability of that identification.

15 The problem I see, that this Court should take into 16 account, is if we don't have the in camera hearing, what 17 happens when the jury is confronted with the Foster v. Cali-18 fornia situation? In which the identification procedures are 19 obviously suggestive, the identification of the witness is 20 obviously unreliable. What's the jury going to do in that 21 situation? Is the jury, from the standpoint of human nature, 22 going to be able to follow the trial judge's admonition to 23 ignore any evidence concerning identification --

24 QUESTION: You mean, when it's -- after the hearing 25 before the jury the evidence is excluded by the judge, he

1 says it is unreliable?

2 MR. HEFT: Yes.

3 QUESTION: And then you say that the jury would have 4 a very tough time of putting that aside?

5 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

6 QUESTION: That's quite a different case from the 7 one you're -- where the evidence was admitted, the judge says
8 that it's reliable, it's admissible, and your only argument 9 is that you didn't have a fair opportunity to show that it 10 was unreliable because of the limited cross-examination you 11 claim?

12 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

13 QUESTION: That's a much different case from saying 14 that the evidence is excluded and arguing that instructions 15 to disregard the evidence is ineffective. That was really the 16 bottom line in Jackson against Denno, wasn't it?

17 MR. HEFT: That's true. But we think that the 18 Jackson v. Denno case can be analogized very clearly to this 19 case, for the reasons we've set forth.

20 QUESTION: Do you suggest that ever, under any 21 circumstances, that the witness who is tendered as an identi-22 fication witness could be excluded?

23 MR. HEFT: Yes, Mr. Chief Justice, I think --

24 QUESTION: Under what circumstances and for what 25 reasons?

1 MR. HEFT: I think that the analogy that keeps 2 coming to mind is the Foster v. California situation, where 3 the defendant was put in a line-up with seven individuals, who 4 bore no resemblance to him; right after the line-up, the pro-
5 secuting witness said I'm not sure that that's the man. Foster
6 was then brought, on a one-on-one confrontation, to confront
7 the man. The witness said I'm still not sure. A line-up 8 was held sometime later, a week or so later, --

9 QUESTION: And excluding line-up now, no line-up at 10 all.

11 MR. HEFT: Okay.

12 QUESTION: The case is called for trial and John 13 Jones' name is listed as a prosecution witness. He takes the 14 stand and begins to testify and says yes, I was in the bank, 15 I saw the robbery, and this is the man. Can you exclude that 16 on any basis whatever?

17 MR. HEFT: No, no, I'm only suggesting to the Court 18 that where you may have to exclude evidence is where there may 19 be any indication of suggestive identification procedures.

20 QUESTION: Well if I understood your argument that 21 you've been making, it is that you are entitled, as a consti-22 tutional matter, to have some private sort of examination of 23 that witness to see how strong or how weak his basis may be for 24 the identification?

25 MR. HEFT: No, we don't subscribe to that position

1 at all. For example, if an individual observed the defendant 2 coming out of a house, the defendant was charged with -- carry-3 ing a t.v. -- the defendant was charged with burglary, we would 4 submit that we would not be constitutionally entitled to a 5 hearing under those set of circumstances. There are no sug-6 gestive identification procedures.

7 QUESTION: Are you saying then that your argument
8 doesn't apply to in-court identification?

9 MR. HEFT: I'm saying that our argument applies 10 only to those situations in which the police, or any govern-11 ment authorities, have conducted identification procedures.
12 That in order to determine the -- whether or not those pro-13 cedures were suggestive, due process requires the hearing; only 14 in those instances.

15 QUESTION: Well, go back to the Chief Justice's 16 question, if you will. You simply have a man named as a 17 witness, he gets on the stand and begins testifying about how 18 he was in the bank at the time. He doesn't, no one asks him 19 whether he has previously identified the witness, and then he 20 is simply asked the question, do you recognize the defendant 21 and was he in the bank. Now do you say you're entitled to an 22 in camera hearing before that?

23 MR. HEFT: I don't necessarily think, Your Honor, 24 if there has been no indication that the state has not engaged 25 in suggestive identification procedures. I'm not suggesting

1 that in each and every case in which you have identification evi-
2 dence that you're required to have a due process hearing. Only 3 in those cases where the state has implemented identification
4 procedures. Because of the suggestive natures of those pro-
5 cedures. The Court has recognized the problem posed by iden-
6 tification procedures. We submit that when those circumstances 7 arise, then we are entitled to the due process of law.

8 QUESTION: Well, but the courts also distinguish 9 between in-court identification, where the witness simply 10 says yes, I saw that man in the bank, and the question then 11 asked the witness, did you previously identify him, right 12 after the robbery. Now, would you make a distinction between 13 those two?

14 MR. HEFT: Yes, I think I would.

15 QUESTION: So that, your Jackson against Denno hear-16 ing would require it only where a witness is asked about a 17 proceeding out of court identification?

18 MR. HEFT: Yes, such as presented here with these 19 two cases. I don't think every witness in every case has to 20 be subjected to this procedure. Only in those instances 21 where the state has implemented identification procedures; the 22 determination has to be made whether those state sanctioned 23 procedures are suggestive, and then reliability is determined--

24 QUESTION: Well let me understand you, sir. If the 25 victim comes to the trial and says, that's the man, pointing

1 to the accused sitting at counsel table, no out of court pro-
2 ceeding is required in that situation?

3 MR. HEFT: Assuming that there has been no other --

4 QUESTION: I've given you the hypothetical. The 5 victim comes and testifies, as most do, I take it, that that 6 man robbed me, and so forth --

7 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

8 QUESTION: -- and as to that testimony, no out of 9 court proceeding is required, is that it?

10 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

11 QUESTION: It's required only if the witness gets on 12 the stand and says, I identified this man at a show-up on such 13 and such a date at such and such a place or at a line-up. In 14 that circumstance, before he can repeat the identification in 15 Court, there has to be a proceeding such as you suggest, is 16 that it?

17 MR. HEFT: That's correct, Justice Brennan. That's 18 our position.

19 QUESTION: Well, in Watkins, the -- all the prosecu-
20 tion relied on, as I understand it, was the in court identi-21 fication?

22 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

23 QUESTION: And then, on cross-examination, the 24 defense brought out pretrial matters.

25 MR. HEFT: That's correct, Justice White.

1 QUESTION: And you say, even in that case, there
2 must be a hearing outside the presence of the jury.

3 MR. HEFT: Yes, we do.

4 QUESTION: Well, how do you know until, if the pro-5 secution puts on its witness and finishes -- shouldn't you get 6 up and -- when does your right attach?

7 MR. HEFT: I think as soon as -- I think the right
8 attaches as soon as the police or the government authority 9 conducts an identification procedure --

10 QUESTION: You mean, before court, before trial?

11 MR. HEFT: As long as, just before the identification 12 evidence is admitted, whether it is before trial or after the 13 commencement of trial, we would suggest that it be done before 14 trial.

15 QUESTION: Well, but you say that -- I'm not exactly 16 sure how much your response to Mr. Justice Brennan's hypothet-
17 ical eliminates. Is it in any case where an identification 18 witness has previously talked to a police officer or to a pro-19 secuting attorney?

20 MR. HEFT: No sir. If in the course of the pro-21 secuting attorney's examination, if he goes to that witness 22 and says tell me what you saw and the witness says I saw that 23 man rob the bank or I saw that man come out of that house with 24 a t.v., I don't think the due process right would necessarily 25 attach to challenge the reliability of the identification

1 testimony. I think cross-examination would be adequate in 2 those instances. But where the identification has been made,
3 the state has implemented the line-up procedures or any type 4 of identification procedures, that's where the due process 5 right attaches.

6 QUESTION: Well there will always be -- won't there 7 always be a pretrial identification of some kind?

8 MR. HEFT: Certainly.

9 QUESTION: Well I would -- suppose you would say, 10 then, anytime the prosecution has had the victim or some 11 witness identify the defendant before trial, you have this due 12 process right; well that would be always.

13 MR. HEFT: Perhaps I've not made myself clear, 14 Justice White. I don't --

15 QUESTION: Well, you haven't.

16 MR. HEFT: I don't think that it --in the situation 17 that Justice Brennan gave, you're always entitled. You are 18 entitled to the due process hearing. Only when the state has 19 implemented --

20 QUESTION: Well won't there always be a pretrial 21 identification of some kind?

22 MR. HEFT: Yes. But whether or not the state has 23 undertaken any procedures which may have suggested or may have 24 impaired the reliability of the identification, that's the 25 issue to be determined.

1 QUESTION: Well it will either -- how do you ever 2 identify anybody before trial? By photographs, by show-up or 3 by a line-up.

4 MR. HEFT: Not -- no, not necessarily.

5 QUESTION: Or by somebody saying well, yes, I know 6 that person because it was my brother.

7 MR. HEFT: I think in Justice Brennan's hypothetical, 8 there's no -- there are no identification procedures at all.
9 The identification does not have to be made from a photograph--

10 QUESTION: Because you know, because if some 11 neighbor, . some neighbor says I saw him, and I know my neighbor 12 very well --

13 MR. HEFT: Certainly, the next-door neighbor --

14 QUESTION: Mr. Heft, suppose the policeman just goes 15 out and picks up a man at random and charges him? You would 16 not have a right to go into that, would you? I'm assuming 17 they picked up the wrong man. You wouldn't have a right then 18 to have the hearing, would you? Would you?

19 MR. HEFT: No, it does not -- no. I think cross-
20 examination --

21 QUESTION: Does that cut you any way at all?

22 MR. HEFT: Our only position is that --

23 QUESTION: That man is rather innocent.

24 MR. HEFT: I think cross-examination in that par-25 ticular respect--

1 QUESTION: Well what would you get, on your theory
2 that you wouldn't get on cross-examination?

3 MR. HEFT: The problem --

4 QUESTION: It's really getting cross-examination 5 ahead of time, that's all you're getting.

6 MR. HEFT: It's very limited in its nature.

7 QUESTION: That's all you're getting, cross-examina-8 tion ahead of time?

9 MR. HEFT: That's all -- that's correct.

10 QUESTION: Do you know of any defense lawyer that 11 wouldn't like to do that?

12 MR. HEFT: No sir.

13 QUESTION: Do you know of any government lawyer that 14 wouldn't like to do that?

15 MR. HEFT: No sir. But that's --

16 QUESTION: Do I correctly understand, you're just 17 saying, you're making this claim in any case where you object 18 to an identification on the ground it was unduly suggestive?

19 MR. HEFT: That's correct.

20 QUESTION: And it is true, isn't it, most states 21 allow this kind of pretrial hearing?

22 MR. HEFT: Well most, a number of states follow
23 Kentucky's approach, in which the Kentucky Supreme Court said
24 in both of these cases, this in camera hearing was a preferred 25 course of action. There are also numerous jurisdictions that

1 mandatorily require this hearing. And we submit that when so 2 many jurisdictions recognize the benefits of such a hearing, 3 that there is a due process right to be derived therefrom.

4 QUESTION: But most of the cases don't rely on due 5 process, though.

6 MR. HEFT: I would disagree, respectfully, Justice
7 Marshall.

8 QUESTION: Well, the Third, Ninth, and the TC don't.

9 MR. HEFT: The Third Circuit, I believe, couched
10 the issue in terms of the Jackson v. Denno situation, and said 11 that you are entitled to the hearing if you can show that your 12 claim of suggestiveness is not frivolous.

13 QUESTION: So you say that, would you say that Driber
14 in the Third Circuit, represents your position?

15 MR. HEFT: No. No. Because we --

16 QUESTION: That's what the Third Circuit held, wasn't 17 it?

18 MR. HEFT: As a practical point, from a practical 19 aspect, we would -- we don't agree with the application in the 20 Driber case. We would submit that if you're going to have the 21 hearing to determine whether or not your motion is frivolous,
22 the evidence is going to come out anyway. And due process 23 would require the hearing just on motion alone.

24 I would just like to make a few concluding remarks.
25 The issue, in recent years, the defense bar has come under

1 criticism in examination from courts, judges, commentators and 2 lawyers, alike, concerning the effectiveness of their repre-
3 sentation at the trial level.

4 And we would submit that the decision that this 5 Court is going to reach today on these two cases is going to 6 touch specifically that issue; that's the long-range effect 7 of this case. We would submit that the dissenting opinion in 8 the Sixth Circuit which recognized the dangers of blind cross-9 examination, which recognized the untenable position of defense 10 attorneys when they are denied the in camera hearing, would 11 echo the sentiments of every defense attorney in the country.

12 The issue here is not necessarily an academic one 13 which is necessary to the resolution of constitutional issues; 14 it's more a practical determination that this Court is going 15 to make. This Court is going to make a decision today that's 16 going to affect the nuts and bolts of the practice of law 17 in every criminal case in the United States. And we would 18 submit that with that in mind, due process requires the hearing.
19 Thank you.

20 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Fox.

21 ORAL ARGUMENT OF VICTOR FOX, ESQ.,

22 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT

23 MR. FOX: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the 24 Court:

25 The Sixth Amendment right to counsel does not mandate

1 an in camera determination of the admissibility of evidence.
2 What Plaintiff, or Petitioner, is asking here is basically 3 that because of Wade, and a series of identification cases, 4 that they have the right, constitutionally, to determine the 5 admissibility of evidence.

6 We have used the phrase "reliability" today. Reli-7 ability is used to denote two separate things: first, the 8 admissibility of evidence, and second, the credibility of the 9 witness in presenting that evidence. One is a function of the 10 trial court, the other is a function of the jury.

11 The right to counsel is predicated upon an inherent 12 fairness in our system. It's to remove the inequality of the 13 adversarial proceedings. Wade, the man was unable to cope with 14 what the government was doing at that point in time without 15 counsel. This damage to him could not be cured later, with 16 cross-examination. The practical aspects which this Court 17 has indicated through its questioning are just beyond belief.
18 The phrase "nuts and bolts of justice", I submit we're going 19 to have a lot more bolts than we are nuts to go on them. The 20 process of the brother identification; what about an eyewitness
21 as to a physical object such as an automobile? The t.v.
22 camera in a bank robbery? All the practical aspects that 23 we're talking about, just because defense counsel would like 24 to cross-examine and determine out of the hearing of the jury, 25 whether or not he wants to ask questions in front of the jury.

1 Those which are beneficial to him he will ask. Those which 2 "prejudice" his client, i.e., indicate or incriminate, he's not 3 going to ask.

4 QUESTION: I suppose it would be an advantage to 5 both the prosecution and defense if there could be a complete 6 dress rehearsal and make believe trial in advance with cross-7 examination of every witness and direct examination, would it 8 not?

9 MR. FOX: Not only in trial, but before this Honor-10 able Court, I would certainly appreciate a rehearsal of this 11 argument before standing up here.

12 I think we all would. The ability to hear your 13 questions and to know how to respond before you all really 14 make a determination, and wait to sit down and answer my 15 questions. The ability for trial counsel to -- the prosecutor 16 to go in and check the alibi witnesses, the -- you know, is 17 the defendant going to make this statement this time, or is 18 that going to be an incriminating statement, or if it is, I'll 19 ask it at trial, if it's not an incriminating statement, if 20 it's to his advantage, I won't ask it as trial counsel.

21 QUESTION: Attorney General Fox, isn't there another 22 consideration which you at least think about in a case like 23 this? In this case, of course, the testimony is found to be 24 admissible. But supposing you had show-up testimony that went 25 in before the jury and after it went in, the judge thought it

1 was unduly suggestive and then ordered the jury to disregard
2 it. Now it is true, is it not, that in that situation there 3 would be a likelihood of substantial prejudice on the defense?

4 MR. FOX: Well, that which we're going after is the 5 likelihood of irreparable misidentification.

6 QUESTION: And is it not true that if inadmissible 7 show-up identification testimony went in, it could be highly 8 prejudicial?

9 MR. FOX: That is correct, Your Honor.

10 QUESTION: And the purpose of the pretrial suppres-
11 sion hearing would be to avoid that kind of prejudice?

12 MR. FOX: There is an alternative to that. Upon 13 the judge declaring that evidence inadmissible, it would be no 14 different than him declaring hearsay inadmissible, or any other 15 evidence inadmissible. Trial counsel, defense counsel, at that 16 point in time, asks for an admonition, if not given sua sponte, 17 and in addition, he may ask for a mistrial. Admittedly, the 18 prosecutor runs the burden, or runs the risk that if his iden-19 tification is inadmissible everything is going to go down the 20 tubes at that point in time.

21 But assuming -- going on with your hypothetical, that 22 the trial court denies the motion for mistrial, we still have 23 the appellate review of due process, the fundamental unfair-24 ness aspect; it does not require a per se constitutional 25 requirement that we determine all these factors prior to trial.

1           QUESTION: Mr. Fox, in your response to Justice
2 Stevens' question, at what point did you assume that the 3 determination was made, that the identification witness or 4 testimony was unduly suggestive? Did you assume it was made 5 by the trial judge on a motion for new trial?

6           MR. FOX: No, Your Honor, I made the assumption that 7 the motion, it was following a motion by defense counsel during 8 trial.

9           QUESTION: After the testimony had gone in?

10          MR. FOX: Yes, Your Honor. We have a contemporaneous
11 objection rule, and I'm basing my response somewhat on Kentucky, 12 that you must object at the time evidence is admitted or you 13 waive the objection.

14          The objection, on the hypothetical, the objection
15 was made at the time the evidence was admitted. The objection 16 was sustained, because it was inadmissible, and admonition
17 given, Your Honor, admonition was insufficient, moved for mis-18 trial, mistrial overruled. That is preserved for a fundamental 19 fairness test on review. I don't think it requires a consti-20 tutional mandate to determine prior out of -- at least out of 21 the hearing of the jury. I think the defendant is protected 22 in this particular instance and I think the orderly administra-
23 tion of justice is followed.

24          QUESTION: Well what you're positing then, is a 25 situation where, on a question by question basis, which is the 1 way cross-examinations and direct examinations take place, 2 the judge allows a witness to testify in such a manner, over-

3 rules objections to individual questions, and then at the end 4 of a line of questioning, comes to the conclusion that he should 5 have sustained them?

6 MR. FOX: It can go both ways, Your Honor. He could 7 initially determine that it's not admissible after it's come 8 in, or it could be on a question by question basis. The fact 9 situation, and I'd like to back up in this particular instance.

10 In the rape case in Summitt, the motion to suppress 11 was based on the fact that counsel was not present at the 12 photographic viewing. In Watkins, the basic objection was lack 13 of counsel at the line-up. The line-up was conducted, it was 14 a pre-indictment line-up. The basic motions presented to these 15 two separate trial courts was right to counsel at the initial 16 identification procedure. These motions were presented outside 17 the hearing of the jury. The Court took a look at what was 18 available, in fact, I believe in the Summitt case, it was an 19 off the record determination, there were some comments off the 20 record. And the Court said no, the cases are, and there is no 21 right to counsel at a photographic -- especially when the 22 individual had gone through some 1200 photographs and mug shots
23 before identifying Mr. Summitt. The Court said there is no 24 suggestiveness here, that identification would be admissible.
25 He had made the determination.

1           QUESTION: Attorney General Fox, let me change --
2 just give you a hypothetical. Supposing you have a post-
3 indictment line-up identification where there is a clear right 4 to counsel. But say there's a dispute of fact as to whether 5 counsel arrived in the middle of the line-up or before it 6 started, or something like that, and you had to know the facts 7 in order to know whether the right, which admittedly would 8 exist, had been preserved. Under Kentucky practice, would you 9 have that put in the line-up testimony and then during the 10 trial decide the question of fact, or would you have a pretrial 11 suppression hearing?

12           MR. FOX: Normally there would be a motion to 13 suppress, based on those grounds; there would be conduct of 14 a hearing to determine that particular issue. In other words, 15 there would be --

16           QUESTION: Then there's the point in this case, that 17 the evidence was clearly admissible and therefore there was no
18 need for the hearing. But if there were legitimate differences 19 of opinion as to the admissibility of the allegedly suggestive 20 identification, would you then say that the Constitution would 21 require a pretrial hearing?

22           MR. FOX: If there were sufficient -- I think it 23 would be --

24           QUESTION: Well in the case I gave you, say, I say 25 you say you think they would allow hearing, would you say the

1 Constitution would require it in that situation?

2 MR. FOX: Per se, no, Your Honor, I do not. I 3 think the constitutional protection is available upon the 4 -- a later determination.

5 QUESTION: Such as the fact that the witness said 6 that the man looked like he was around 30; and the man was 7 actually 17?

8 MR. FOX: That could be a factor.

9 QUESTION: Well that was Watkins.

10 MR. FOX: That was Watkins, however, Watkins was 11 identified in Court without any reference to the pretrial.
12 The victim was -- identified, and there was no pretrial iden-
13 tification brought in at Watkins, it was simply an in court 14 identification.

15 QUESTION: I'm sorry, Mr. Fox, did I understand your 16 brother to say that Kentucky has now adopted a rule governing 17 this question?

18 MR. FOX: No, Your Honor, in fact, not to my know-19 ledge.

20 QUESTION: Perhaps I misunderstood him.

21 MR. FOX: Normally, in our jurisdiction, a motion to 22 suppress -- there is, it's made pretrial, and the courts go 23 into it. These are --

24 QUESTION: I didn't hear you.

25 MR. FOX: I said normally there is a motion made

1 pretrial to suppress, and there is at least a hearing, a 2 determination as to whether or not the motion will be granted 3 or not.

4 These particular --

5 QUESTION: Well what happens at that, in that pro-6 ceeding? I mean, is evidence taken, or what?

7 MR. FOX: It can be, Your Honor. It's not a require-8 ment that evidence has to be put on, on the facts, as in these 9 particular cases. The motion, the grounds for the motion was 10 he was entitled to counsel at them, no he wasn't. That was it.
11 There was no --

12 QUESTION: I guess you have to come prepared to put 13 on evidence, if you have to?

14 MR. FOX: Yes, Your Honor.

15 QUESTION: Should you be?

16 MR. FOX: You should be, and basically, when they 17 do take the evidence is that they put on -- a police officer 18 who either took the photographs out and showed them or con-
19 ducted the line-up, or something of this nature. And it shows 20 that the identification procedure itself was not suggestive.
21 Does not get into the person who actually made the identifica-
22 tion. We're talking here not --

23 QUESTION: Well are there instances in which the 24 trial judge in a suppression hearing will say yes, I find that 25 it was suggestive?

1 MR. FOX: Oh yes, Your Honor.

2 QUESTION: And therefore, you may not use that 3 evidence, that identification evidence at trial?

4 MR. FOX: Yes, Your Honor. Yes, Your Honor. In fact
5 -- well, it's not before the Court, so I won't mention a par-
6 ticular factual situation. Needless to say, in one instance
7 that I'm aware of, that prosecutor, defense counsel and trial 8 judge beforehand said, hey, this is all we've got, we'll put 9 it before the jury and if I -- the judge said, if I rule 10 admissible, it will go to the jury; if I rule it inadmissible, 11 I'll move for a mistrial. I'll entertain a motion for mistrial 12 and direct a verdict of acquittal.

13 QUESTION: Do I understand you to say that in Ken-14 tucky practice, there is always a pretrial motion available 15 to suppress either identification or other evidence?

16 MR. FOX: Yes, Your Honor. The motion to suppress 17 is basically a routine motion filed if there is evidence which 18 has been seized, either a Fourth Amendment right or identifi-19 cation procedure.

20 QUESTION: Does your practice require giving a list
21 of witnesses to the defense in advance of the trial?

22 MR. FOX: Witnesses are available. On our pretrial
23 discovery motion, scientific evidence, statements of witnesses 24 are not available from the state. Witnesses are available, 25 names are available.

1 QUESTION: You mean, that's --

2 MR. FOX: Pretrial.

3 QUESTION: -- pretrial. So the defendant knows.

4 MR. FOX: In addition, we normally hold a prelimi-5 nary hearing, in which there is sufficient information put on 6 normally, as to, it's used as a discovery motion. And basi-7 cally, that's what petitioners are asking for here, is an 8 extension of discovery.

9 QUESTION: Well, I would have thought from your answer
10 to some of the other questions that it was accorded under Kentucky
11 procedure now. On a motion to suppress after being furnished 12 a list of witnesses, can the defense counsel move to suppress 13 the testimony of one of the witnesses on the grounds that it's 14 identification testimony?

15 MR. FOX: He can move to suppress for any grounds
16 that he wishes, whether it be identification or witness identi-
17 fication. It's just the trial court makes the determination 18 as to whether it will or will not be.

19 QUESTION: Well, does the trial court have to hear 20 whatever the defense counsel has to say at that time, and is 21 it a factual determination?

22 MR. FOX: It's the --

23 QUESTION: Will they call witnesses at the hearing?

24 MR. FOX: There can be, it's not required. It's 25 as the commentary to Federal Rule 104 says, that in the best

1 interests of justice. The discretion of the trial court, 2 the factual situation presented at that particular motion, 3 should we go into a hearing or is it so obvious --

4 QUESTION: Well here it was denied.

5 MR. FOX: Both were denied in this particular instance.

6 QUESTION: There was a motion and they said no
7 hearing.

8 MR. FOX: The motion was to suppress because there
9 was no attorney present at the photographic ID. Under, clearly 10 under Ash, he was not entitled. The motion should have been 11 denied on that basis and on that basis alone. There was no 12 necessity to hold the hearing.

13 QUESTION: Well was there a motion to suppress any 14 in court identification; I thought there was?

15 MR. FOX: The grounds --

16 QUESTION: On the -- because the pretrial identifi-17 cation was --

18 MR. FOX: Because counsel was not present at pre-
19 trial.

20 QUESTION: Well anyway, he made the motion and it
21 was denied? And no hearing was granted --

22 MR. FOX: There was no full blown hearing with evi-23 dence taken.

24 QUESTION: Yes, well, he was -- but he claims he 25 was entitled to a hearing on admissibility outside the presence

1 of the jury.

2 MR. FOX: Admissibility of any evidence. I do not-- 3 I cannot make the compartmentalization that petitioners do 4 for identification admissibility and other evidentiary hearings.

5 QUESTION: So you say however broad the right to 6 a pretrial hearing is, it doesn't cover this case?

7 MR. FOX: No, Your Honor, that was not --

8 QUESTION: Under Kentucky practice, you would say 9 if this very same case came up again tomorrow, the request 10 for a pretrial hearing would be denied?

11 MR. FOX: Under the same facts, yes, Your Honor, and 12 the same motion, same grounds to suppress. If they were to 13 raise the issue that has been raised later, that -- the motion
14 may be granted. But again, it's at the discretion of the trial 15 court. It's not a per se constitutional rule that such a hear-16 ing can determine, or determine the admissibility of the 17 evidence. I'd like to point out basically the difference in 18 Jackson, or that we perceive to be the difference in Jackson, 19 is that in Jackson there was a statute which required the jury
20 to determine the voluntariness of a confession. This Court said 21 that that could not be, the same jury determined the voluntari-22 ness as well as the credibility of it, as -- and the guilt and 23 innocence. We would submit that in this particular instance, 24 there is no requirement that the jury determine the admissi-25 bility of this evidence; the court, trial court, still makes

1 that determination, the admissibility of the evidence.

2 QUESTION: And if the trial court is wrong, the 3 reviewing court can reverse and order a new trial on that 4 ground?

5 MR. FOX: Yes, Your Honor, --

6 QUESTION: Under Kentucky practice, is that correct?

7 MR. FOX: That is correct. And if it should perhaps 8 get through our system, and on a habeas action, it would 9 probably not get past that stage.

10 QUESTION: And basically I take it your, or the 11 state's case, is that it is the function of cross-examination 12 to expose the flaws in any testimony, or flaws in the cred-13 ibility of any witness?

14 MR. FOX: Right, credibility is always an issue for 15 the jury. The credibility issue as to the identification, the 16 witness' firmness in the identification is for the jury.
17 And these are probably the only two cases that I'm aware of 18 in Kentucky in which there were no -- there was no pretrial 19 hearing. They came about a year apart and came out of the 20 same jurisdiction.

21 QUESTION: Mr. Fox, suppose in these cases, the -- 22 let's say in the Watkins' case, the prosecution witness is 23 about to testify and identify, making an in court identifica-
24 tion and the defense objects and says this is a tainted 25 identification, I'd like a hearing outside the presence of

1 the jury; denied. Then on cross-examination -- and the in 2 court identification is admitted, with no reference to the 3 -- any out of court identification -- on cross-examination, the 4 out of court identification is brought out, and then the -- 5 the witness is cross-examined and then the defense asks the 6 Court to exclude the in court identification on the ground 7 that it was tainted, or impermissible -- unreliable. And the 8 judge agrees and strikes the testimony and instructs the 9 jury to disregard it.

10 MR. FOX: As defense counsel, I would move for 11 a mistrial or, at the very least, a directed verdict of 12 acquittal.

13 QUESTION: But let's assume there's other identifi-14 cation, going to be other identification testimony. But 15 would you say that that is, that constitutionally the Defen-16 dant then is entitled to a new trial just because the jury -- 17 you could never rely on the jury to put aside the evidence that 18 it heard?

19 MR. FOX: I would, unringing bells is a very diffi-20 cult task.

21 QUESTION: Well that was part of Jackson against 22 Denno. Do you think the same risk inheres in this case?

23 MR. FOX: Well let me answer that by saying this, 24 that in your hypothetical there was other identification
25 evidence which pointed to the defendant. Setting aside

1 that which, in your hypo, should not have been admitted, as 2 though it had not been, and looking at the remainder of the 3 case, and there was adequate identification evidence, I would 4 say that no, there is not an entitlement to, constitutionally.

5 I, again, going back to the fundamental fairness --

6 QUESTION: You don't think that kind of a case would 7 come down to harmless error?

8 MR. FOX: Well that's basically what I'm saying when 9 you set it aside, you set aside the error and taking a look at 10 it.

11 QUESTION: Is this not a matter of discretion, the 12 sound discretion of the trial judge, if he thinks the testi-13 mony is very damaging and that he can't unring the bell, as 14 you put it, then you either grant a mistrial, grant a 15 new trial, or after verdict a judgment notwithstanding the 16 verdict?

17 MR. FOX: Which we permit.

18 QUESTION: So there are a whole range of remedies
19 to deal with this that have always been available?

20 QUESTION: Why would you grant judgment notwith-
21 standing the verdict simply because of trial error? Wouldn't 22 you grant a motion for new trial?

23 MR. FOX: We have both in Kentucky, Your Honor.

24 QUESTION: Well, I realize you have both, but aren't 25 they generally posited on different grounds?

1 MR. FOX: I really do not know, it depends, I think 2 personally, upon the counsel. If he is moving for a judgment, or 3 directed verdict of acquittal prior to the jury verdict, he 4 comes back, he moves for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict,
5 I think those are identical, the motion for new trial --

6 QUESTION: It's just a question of time?

7 MR. FOX: Yes, Your Honor.

8 QUESTION: Then the motion for new trial simply 9 says that there was some procedural unfairness or evidence 10 admitted that may not have been reliable, and the defendant 11 ought not to be sentenced on the basis of the first trial, 12 but nonetheless, there was sufficient evidence to go to the 13 jury?

14 MR. FOX: A motion for a new trial is still within 15 the discretion of the trial court.

16 QUESTION: But a motion for directed verdict of 17 acquittal says there simply was not enough evidence to persuade 18 a reasonable juror to convict, doesn't it?

19 MR. FOX: Our motion for directed verdict of acquit-
20 tal must be made before it is given to the jury. At the close 21 of all evidence. If that is overruled and it goes to the jury 22 and a verdict of guilty comes back, then the judgment o.v. can 23 be made.

24 QUESTION: And those are the same standards?

25 MR. FOX: Basically yes, Your Honor.

1           QUESTION: Which is basically the sufficiency of the 2 evidence?

3           MR. FOX: Yes, Your Honor.

4           QUESTION: And a motion for a new trial would 5 basically be some error that occurred during the trial, having 6 nothing to do with his ultimate innocence or guilt, or 7 the sufficiency of the evidence.

8           MR. FOX: That is correct, Your Honor.

9           QUESTION: The judge's motion, if the judge decided 10 at the end of the case, after the verdict, to enter a judgment 11 notwithstanding the verdict, he would do that only if he de-12 cided that, excluding the challenged evidence as to which he 13 had instructed the jury to disregard, there was no evidence 14 upon which a reasonable jury could return a verdict of guilty, 15 that would be the process of the judge's thinking, would it 16 not?

17           MR. FOX: Well, we basically have a standard that 18 where it would clearly not be unreasonable for the jury to 19 reach a verdict of guilty.

20           QUESTION: But if he was in doubt on --

21           MR. FOX: He'd probably deny it and let it go up on 22 appeal.

23           QUESTION: Or order a new trial?

24           MR. FOX: He'd probably still let it go up on appeal, 25 and let the appellate court, since we have elected judges,

1 would let the appellate court direct that a new trial be 2 granted.

3 QUESTION: Of course, Mr. Fox, in Jackson against 4 Denno, as I remember it, there was evidence other than the 5 confession, which was sufficient to sustain the verdict, but 6 the court nevertheless held that due process required a separ-
7 ate hearing. So I guess your real distinction here isn't it, 8 is that the distinction between the prejudicial effect of a 9 confession where the defendant in effect says I was the man, as 10 opposed to third party testimony saying that was the 11 man; one is much more prejudicial than the other.

12 MR. FOX: Yes, I think in fact we're talking 13 two separate constitutional rights, and one is the Fifth Amend-14 ment right not to incriminate oneself; and the other is the 15 right to counsel, and the -- you know, in Pinto, it said it's 16 prudent to hold the hearings. And I can't but be perfectly 17 candid with this Court and say it would have been far more 18 prudent in both of these instances, simply because if they had 19 held the hearing we would not be here today. But that still 20 does not take away the fact that there was no denial of due 21 process in these particular cases. You look at the evidence, 22 the 1200 photographs in the rape case, the identification to 23 the police beforehand, the descriptions. It's simply and 24 basically a commonsense approach to the admissibility of 25 evidence, do you hold separate trials, at what point do we

1 draw the line? I can draw the line between the voluntariness
2 of a confession and the admissibility of identification evi-3 dence. I have difficulty in viewing the difference between 4 an eyewitness of a person and an eyewitness as to the color of 5 an automobile involved in an automobile accident.

6 QUESTION: Except that such a distinction is drawn 7 by this Court's cases, there are some special cases dealing with 8 identification evidence --

9 MR. FOX: Identification evidence.

10 QUESTION: -- there is no doctrine pertaining to 11 identification of automobiles.

12 MR. FOX: The standard is basically that which is 13 the fundamental unfairness. It's the right to, you know, pre-14 vent inequality in the adversarial proceedings. We're point-15 ing out that there is no inequality in this adversarial pro-16 ceeding, they had the preliminary hearing, they had pretrial, 17 everything else available.

18 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen. The 19 case is submitted.

20 (Whereupon, at 11:00 o'clock a.m. the hearing in 21 the above matter was submitted.)
