MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We'll hear arguments first this morning in Federal Communications Commission v. WNCN Listeners and the related and consolidated cases.

Mr. Saylor, I think you may proceed whenever you are ready.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF DAVID J. SAYLOR, ESQ., ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, ET AL.

MR. SAYLOR: Thank you, Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the Court:

This is an important case for the nation's nearly 9,000 radio stations and their millions of avid listeners. The decision here will determine whether regulators in Washington over their own strong objections must intrude into the workings of the radio entertainment marketplace in countless communities across the country.

QUESTION: You seem to emphasize radio. Do you think it has no bearing on broadcasting generally?

MR. SAYLOR: I think the case does have bearing on television as well, but the Commission's policy statement is restricted to radio. Therefore, I believe the issue before the Court today strictly relates to radio.

The issue before this Court is this: must the Federal Communications Commission in ruling on radio license renewals and transfers decide whether to permit a radio station

1 to change from one type of entertainment programming to an-
2 other. Or, stated a different way, did the FCC correctly de-3 termine in the proceedings below that the Communications Act 4 of 1934, read in light of the First Amendment, grants the 5 Commission the discretion to decline to review changes in so-6 called unique entertainment formats?

7 The Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia 8 Circuit sitting en banc ruled against the Commission. The 9 Court declared that the Commission must hold a hearing to de-10 termine whether a format change is consistent with the public 11 interest.

12 QUESTION: Mr. Saylor, what was not entirely clear 13 to me in reading the briefs is, are we talking about changes 14 that have been made or prospective changes, or both?

15 MR. SAYLOR: Mr. Justice Stewart, this case involves 16 proposed changes as well as changes that may have taken place 17 midterm in a three-year license period.

18 QUESTION: Both?

19 MR. SAYLOR: Yes. However, according to a footnote
20 in the Court of Appeals decision, a challenge to the midterm 21 change in format would not come until the time for renewal.

22 QUESTION: Renewal or transfer?

23 MR. SAYLOR: Yes.

24 QUESTION: Would the standard be any different if we 25 were talking about the initial issuance of a license, if such

1 licenses were available? All the statute says as I read it 2 is the public interest.

3 MR. SAYLOR: That's correct. It's the same standard, 4 public interest, convenience, and necessity. The Commission's 5 view in this situation, both renewals and transfers, is that 6 it would not be in the public interest to engage in regulation
7 of unique formats. There's a somewhat different question posed
8 when it's an initial licensing. The Commission has considered 9 so-called specialized program issues in comparative cases 10 which would come up often at initial licensing time. But in 11 none of those cases has the Commission ever considered the en-12 tertainment programming as such in deciding whether or not the 13 application should be granted. So that while the Commission 14 did not address itself in this policy statement to the question 15 you raise, Mr. Justice Rehnquist, I believe the Commission's 16 policy in the past has been not to consider entertainment pro-17 gramming in making decisions regarding initial licensing.

18 QUESTION: I'm not sure how you relate that to the 19 issues. Let me put another question to you. Suppose on 20 renewal of a license at the expiration of three years the 21 representatives of the listening audience came in and demon-
22 strated that this station had changed its format and was show-23 ing nothing except football games, basketball games, hockey 24 games, prizefights, and athletic events; nothing else. Would 25 that be relevant to the issue of renewal of the license?

1 MR. SAYLOR: The Commission would not, in my view,
2 consider the entertainment programming as such. The Commis-
3 sion would, however, be concerned if the licensee or the appli-
4 cant indicated no interest in programming news and public af-
5 fairs, so-called non-entertainment programming. The Commission 6 has --

7 QUESTION: So the format if -- I'm not sure exactly 8 what that term embraces in this case, but the content of 9 programming is a very relevant factor in the renewal of a li-10 cense, is it not?

11 MR. SAYLOR: The Commission has considered the quan-
12 tity of non-entertainment programming proposed by an applicant, 13 but it has never delved into the quality of the programming 14 and has not made value judgments regarding whether one type of 15 entertainment programming is more in the public interest than 16 another.

17 QUESTION: So the standard is the same for both the 18 issuance of the original license and for the renewal, is it 19 not?

20 MR. SAYLOR: Yes, it is.

21 QUESTION: And does the Commission treat them dif-
22 ferently in the sense of evaluating entertainment versus news 23 and that sort of thing?

24 MR. SAYLOR: No. In neither instance does the Com-25 mission consider the entertainment programming as such.

1 The non-entertainment programming such as news and public af-
2 fairs programming is considered but in a very general sense.
3 The Commission simply wants to assure itself that the appli-
4 cant will not neglect that type of programming. The Commission 5 inquires as to what percentage of the broadcast week, or the 6 broadcast day, will be devoted to news and other informational
7 programming.

8 QUESTION: It's basically a quantitative considera-9 tion?

10 MR. SAYLOR: It is a quantitative consideration.--

11 QUESTION: Plus, I suppose, objectivity and fairness 12 and so on?

13 MR. SAYLOR: Yes, Mr. Justice Stewart. And the rea-14 son for that is that the news and other informational program-15 ming makes up a small, relatively small portion of the broad-16 cast day, whereas the entertainment programming traditionally 17 consumes the balance of the broadcast day and it is there that 18 the Commission has felt that the Congress wanted broadcasters 19 to compete. And basically that's where they compete, with 20 their entertainment program. Were the Commission to regulate 21 entertainment programming it would reduce the licensee dis-22 cretion in that very large portion of the broadcast day and 23 raise in the Commission's view serious First Amendment con-24 siderations.

25 QUESTION: Mr. Saylor, what about the percentage of 1 time for commercials? Is there any regulation of that?

2 MR. SAYLOR: The Commission has a guideline in the 3 form of a delegation of authority to the Staff of the Broad-4 cast Bureau. If the applicant proposes a percentage of broad-5 cast hour above a certain number for commercial programming, 6 the Commission would consider that and if there is not an ade-
7 quate explanation from the licensee, the Commission might well 8 put that matter into hearing to determine whether or not the 9 licensee is proposing an excessive amount of commercial pro-
10 gramming.

11 QUESTION: What is the justification for that other 12 than its possible impact on the entertainment part of the pro-
13 gramming.

14 MR. SAYLOR: Well, I guess historically the Congress 15 has expressed some interest in the amount of commercials on 16 broadcast programming and the Commission has felt that perhaps 17 some supervision is appropriate in order to insure that licen-
18 sees don't vastly exceed what would be in the public interest.
19 However, the Commission is presently reconsidering that. It 20 has reached the tentative conclusion that the marketplace is 21 sufficiently competitive so that broadcasters are most unlikely 22 to engage in excessive commercialization.

23 But I can't say at this point, of course, that the 24 Commission has gotten rid of those regulations entirely, but they 25 are processing guidelines and they are quantitative rather than

1 qualitative and they relate to a smaller portion of the broad-2 cast day than entertainment programming.

3 QUESTION: Well, this distinction between quantity
4 and quality becomes a little blurred, does it not, if quan-
5 titatively all or most of the program is devoted to one kind 6 of activity, namely, the athletics that I suggested in the 7 hypothetical? Does that not come into the area of quality of 8 service, by the failure to have any news broadcasts, by the 9 failure to have any educational broadcasts, any music?

10 MR. SAYLOR: The failure to have any news or public 11 affairs programming of any sort would be a matter of interest
12 and concern to the Commission, but the fact that it was sports 13 as opposed to something else that was occupying most of the 14 broadcast day, that would not be a matter which the Commission 15 would feel it's competent to evaluate.

16 The Commission does not believe that it has the 17 capacity to determine whether sports programming is more in 18 the interest of the public than a particular type of musical 19 programming. And most of these cases, of course, have come up 20 in the context of one type of musical programming versus 21 another. And especially in that instance the Commission 22 doubts that it has the capacity, the wherewithal to ascertain 23 what the public really wants, the intensity of preference on 24 the part of the public, and whether one group which prefers 25 one type of format outnumbers another group, and whether or

1 not the group which outnumbers would in fact listen to the 2 programming.

3 QUESTION: I have to ask the question I wanted to 4 ask, and I don't mind asking after what you just said. In or-5 der to decide this case, I don't have to find out the differ-
6 ence between rock, hard rock, and jazz, do I?

7 MR. SAYLOR: Mr. Justice Marshall, you do not need
8 to decide the difference between them but I do think that you 9 have to wrestle with the same problem the Commission has in 10 determining how the Commission in a given case would be able 11 to distinguish between different kinds of music in order to 12 judge whether or not a type of music is being abandoned and 13 there are no reasonable or adequate substitutes elsewhere in 14 the marketplace. That is a very difficult, subjective, almost 15 an esthetic value judgment which in most cases, administrative 16 law judges, commissioners, and Justices of this Court simply 17 can't have the knowledge to draw the distinctions, and even if, 18 as happened before the administrative law judge in the WEFM 19 case, even if an expert is brought in, a musicologist, the 20 other side can just as easily bring in a musicologist on the 21 other side.

22 QUESTION: Is there any real question under the 23 Court of Appeals opinion as to whether the Commission would 24 know whether a change is planned or had taken place?

25 MR. SAYLOR: Mr. Justice White, there certainly are

1 some instances where the Commission would not have any diffi-
2 culty determining that a change had taken place. Certainly the 3 difference between classical music and country and western is 4 clear.

5 QUESTION: Well, the limits of the Court of Appeals'
6 opinion as I understand it is that if a change is contemplated 7 the Commission should take into consideration whether or not 8 there's some -- whether it's economically sound and whether 9 there's a public market for it or a public demand for it.
10 And if it is, the Commission ought to really think about whe-
11 ther they ought to permit the change. Is that the rule?

12 MR. SAYLOR: That's part of the test the Court of 13 Appeals --

14 QUESTION: Part of it, but what do you think the 15 Court of Appeals held?

16 MR. SAYLOR: The Court of Appeals held that the Com-17 mission must hold a hearing if the format --

18 QUESTION: But the Court of Appeals said almost never 19 would a hearing be necessary.

20 MR. SAYLOR: Well, they felt that there were not that 21 many protests and that there really wouldn't be a need for a 22 hearing in very many instances. But --

23 QUESTION: Well, then, is it right to say the Court
24 of Appeals said there must be a hearing every time?

25 MR. SAYLOR: No, they did not. They said that there

1 must be a hearing if four threshold requirements are met.
2 First, the format must be arguably unique; secondly, there must 3 be significant public grumbling by those loyal to that particu-
4 lar format; third, the format must be one which could be -- 5 the adherents of that format must be sufficiently numerous so 6 that one could say there are enough frequencies available in 7 the community so that in a technological sense their preference 8 could be satisfied. And fourth, the point that you were 9 raising a moment ago, there must either be a substantial mate-10 rial question about the financial viability of the format or 11 as to whether or not that format could arguably become finan-12 cially viable.

13 QUESTION: Now, is it the Commission's submission
14 that considering those threshold matters that you just listed 15 is beyond the Commission's competence or that's just a wrong 16 construction of the statute? And I suppose you would suggest 17 that raises a First Amendment question.

18 MR. SAYLOR: The Commission's basic position is that 19 there's nothing in the statute which requires this type of 20 inquiry. The second point of my argument today is that the 21 Commission's judgment as to what is or is not in the public 22 interest was a reasonable judgment. And third, the Court of 23 Appeals' approach to this matter raises serious First Amend-24 ment reservations.

25 QUESTION: Does this represent a change of mind by

1 the Commission, or has it always had this position?

2 MR. SAYLOR: The Commission has always had this posi-
3 tion. There was a period subsequent to the Voice of Atlanta 4 case announced by the Court of Appeals in 1970 where the 5 Commission was trying to determine how it could satisfy the --

6 QUESTION: But prior to 1970 the Commission's posi-7 tion was always what you say it should be today?

8 MR. SAYLOR: Yes.

9 QUESTION: Or it is today?

10 MR. SAYLOR: Yes: that it's a matter for the licen-11 see to decide what type of entertainment programming is most 12 in the public interest.

13 QUESTION: Subject always to the risk that he may be 14 confronted with some complaints at the time of renewal of the 15 license on program content.

16 MR. SAYLOR: He might be subject to those complaints 17 but --

18 QUESTION: Haven't some licenses been lost on that 19 grounds?

20 MR. SAYLOR: Not on entertainment programming.

21 QUESTION: Not on entertainment, but on content of 22 the total broadcast, the use of the total broadcast time?

23 MR. SAYLOR: Yes. there have been licenses taken 24 away for violations of the Fairness Doctrine, which is in a 25 sense a content-related concept. I believe licenses -- a few,

1 at least, have been taken away, or applications denied, for a 2 failure to indicate any desire to program news and public 3 affairs; information, not entertainment.

4 QUESTION: What if the change that happens to be at 5 issue in a renewal proceeding is an abandonment of any news
6 content in the broadcast day? Suppose in the midterm a licen-7 see abandons any kind of diversity in its program and goes to,
8 say, all sports, as the Chief Justice suggests, and no news, 9 no educational matters, and things like that. Then, would 10 you say that's to be left to the marketplace completely?

11 MR. SAYLOR: The Commission's position is that the 12 licensee does have discretion to change midterm from what the 13 licensee proposed at the outset of the license term. However, 14 if there is evidence that the licensee never intended to ful-
15 fill that proposal --

16 QUESTION: That isn't my question. I mean they -- 17 the licensee did intend to fulfill it at the outset and then 18 changed it, but in the midterm it decides to change to all 19 sports or in a transfer proceeding the transferee proposes to 20 go to all sports, whereas his predecessor had a little variety 21 in his program. Now, is that a -- would that be outside the 22 reach of the Commission?

23 MR. SAYLOR: I think not. I think the Commission
24 would take a look at that to determine why the licensee thought 25 that it would be in the public interest to program --

1 QUESTION: Well, would the Commission have the power
2 to, under the statute to deny the transfer on that basis?

3 MR. SAYLOR: I think the Commission would have the 4 authority under the statute to deny the transfer or to deny 5 renewal, but the inquiry --

6 QUESTION: Well, is that different than the issue 7 that's involved here?

8 MR. SAYLOR: I think it is.

9 QUESTION: Why is that?

10 MR. SAYLOR: The inquiry in that case would, if I 11 understand the hypothetical correctly, the inquiry would be 12 into the quantity of news and other non-entertainment program-13 ming. The licensee would have changed to zero percent pro-
14 gramming.

15 QUESTION: Well, public interest, convenience, and 16 necessity is virtually unbridled discretion unless it's some-17 how filled in by the FCC, and how has the FCC filled it in in 18 this respect?

19 MR. SAYLOR: Mr. Justice Rehnquist, I would agree 20 with your characterization of the public interest standard.
21 The Commission years ago indicated that diversity was an im-
22 portant aspect of the public interest. But in this context
23 the Commission concluded that there are two types of diversity
24 of ideas. There is diversity between broad format categories 25 and in addition there is diversity within a format category.

1 There are perhaps over a hundred different types of 2 middle-of-the-road programming. Middle-of-the-road is a clas-
3 sification. There are, as I think was implicit in Justice
4 Marshall's question, many different types of rock music.
5 The Commission felt that there are two different types of 6 diversity and the Commission is not in a position to choose 7 between one and the other. Listeners do indeed identify sub-
8 stantial differences within a given format category. In addi-9 tion there are other public interest considerations, other 10 considerations which fall into this rubric of the public in-11 terest.

12 One is the idea that the licensee should have wide 13 discretion. This Court has indicated as much, its approval of 14 that concept, in several decisions recently, including the 15 Midwest Video II case, and the case of CBS v. Democratic 16 National Committee. In addition, the concept of how to balance 17 and accommodate these different interests is one which this 18 Court has said is appropriately a matter for Commission discre-19 tion. Here the Commission concluded that it simply lacked 20 the capacity to decide what is most in the public interest 21 in the case of two different competing types of entertainment
22 programming.

23 QUESTION: Well, is it the Commission's position that 24 if there's a proposal to switch from one kind of diversity to 25 another, that's the business of the broadcaster?

1 MR. SAYLOR: Yes.

2 QUESTION: But if a broadcaster wants to shift from 3 a program that's got some diversity in it to a thoroughly 4 unique program, all one-sided or all one content, that he is 5 in trouble?

6 MR. SAYLOR: Only insofar as under the current 7 guidelines the licensee would be neglecting news and informa-8 tional programming entirely.

9 QUESTION: Well, he may not get renewal then, or the 10 transfer may not go through; right?

11 MR. SAYLOR: Perhaps, but it depends upon the licen-12 see's explanation. If the Commission concludes that the 13 licensee has done it in good faith and believes that it is in 14 the public interest, then the Commission would not prevent 15 renewal.

16 QUESTION: So your suggestion is that these are 17 exactly the kinds of judgments of the public interest 18 that the Commission ought to make rather than a court?

19 MR. SAYLOR: Absolutely. Furthermore, there is 20 nothing -- as I said earlier, that's -- on the face of the 21 statute or in its legislative history or anything that's impli-22 cit in the statute that would indicate the approach taken by 23 the Court of Appeals is mandatory.

24 QUESTION: But if you suggest that all of those 25 things that we've just been talking about, are they equally

1 suspect under the First Amendment? I guess you can't say that.

2 MR. SAYLOR: I think that, if -- by different things
3 you mean the amount of entertainment programming or the qual-
4 ity of the entertainment programming?

5 QUESTION: The shift from -- is it equally suspect
6 under the First Amendment to object to shifting to uniqueness 7 as it is to shift from one diversity to another?

8 MR. SAYLOR: I don't think there's --

9 QUESTION: I don't understand your First Amendment 10 argument then.

11 MR. SAYLOR: The First Amendment argument really re-12 lates to -- it is not that the First Amendment -- except in 13 the area of chilling experimentation the Commission did not 14 conclude that there would be a First Amendment bar. They did 15 believe that the impact upon experimentation, on licensees who 16 would want to try unique format, would be adverse, counterpro-17 ductive even to the objective of the Court of Appeals. So in 18 that area the Commission viewed the situation as creating an 19 impermissible chilling effect.

20 But otherwise, I think the Commission's concern was 21 with the values of the First Amendment. The greater the degree 22 of Commission intrusion, the greater the portion of the broad-23 case day which is affected, the greater the amount to which 24 the Commission is entangled in making value judgments about 25 programming, the more the First Amendment is implicated.

1 It is a balancing of different values, and certainly in this 2 case involving entertainment programming the Commission felt 3 that the balance tipped very much in favor of leaving the 4 judgment to licensee discretion.

5 QUESTION: Mr. Saylor, when a license is initially 6 granted, particularly where you have competition between two 7 applicants, is entertainment program format relevant in the 8 Commission's view?

9 MR. SAYLOR: The Commission has never indicated that 10 entertainment programming would be decisionally significant in 11 a comparative case.

12 QUESTION: Does it inquire into the entertainment 13 program format of a prospective applicant?

14 MR. SAYLOR: No.

15 QUESTION: It doesn't even ask for it?

16 MR. SAYLOR: Well, it does ask what programming --

17 QUESTION: What does it usually ask?

18 MR. SAYLOR: -- what programming is proposed, but 19 it's a very general question, and one, I believe, if the Com-20 mission is affirmed in this case, it would probably eliminate 21 that question from its --

22 QUESTION: But it has been asking that question up 23 to now. And I'm just -- why would that even be relevant under 24 your theory?

25 MR. SAYLOR: Why would -- ?

1 QUESTION: Why has it done it -- it's done this for 2 years, hasn't it?

3 MR. SAYLOR: The Commission has gathered the infor-
4 mation for years, I would say more for statistical purposes 5 than anything else, but the publicly available sources are 6 sufficient to provide that information so I think the Commis-7 sion might well reconsider even asking for that information.

8 QUESTION: And you would say it would never be sig-9 nificant in choosing between rival applicants?

10 MR. SAYLOR: Entertainment programming has never 11 been and would not be in the future. I would like to reserve 12 five minutes of my time, if I may, with the permission of the 13 Court. Thank you.

14 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Dyk.

15 ORAL ARGUMENT OF TIMOTHY B. DYK, ESQ.,

16 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS AMERICAN BROADCASTING
17 COS., INC., ET AL., & NATL. ASSN. OF BROADCASTERS ET AL.

18 MR. DYK: Thank you, Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
19 please the Court:

20 What we have in this case, of course, is a policy
21 judgment by the Commission not to engage in a particular kind 22 of regulation of broadcast programming. And that fact alone
23 distinguishes this case from many of the other situations
24 about which the Court was asking. Because in those situations
25 the Commission has determined to engage in program regulation

1 in its view of the public interest.

2 The Congress in 1927 and again in 1934 charged the 3 Commission with the task of determining what is in the public 4 interest in broadcasting. And when the Commission gets into 5 the programming area that of course requires the drawing of 6 very delicate and difficult lines. This is not the first case
7 involving such questions to come before this Court and I'm 8 sure it will not be the last. But where the Commission as here 9 has reached a policy judgment that regulation would not serve 10 the public interest the Court of Appeals should not substitute
11 its judgment for the Commission and impose a regulatory regime 12 which the Commission is very much opposed to.

13 QUESTION: Going back, Mr. Dyk, to this question in 14 the application, either an initial application or a transfer 15 with a new transferee, is the question in your view directed 16 -- questions about program content -- and they do; the Commis-17 sion does ask about that -- is that directed at determining 18 whether there is the appropriate diversity or is it directed 19 at the quantitative aspects of a particular program?

20 MR. DYK: The Commission asks a number of questions 21 on the form about programming, including the quantity of news, 22 public affairs, informational programming. It asks questions
23 about so-called ascertainment of community needs, an obliga-
24 tion which the Commission has imposed to require the broad-25 caster to go out in the community and interview the general

1 public and community leaders to determine the problems, needs,
2 and interests of the community. The broadcaster is required
3 to make lists of these problems and to propose programming 4 responsive to them.

5 There are other questions on the form also relating 6 to the amount of commercials. In addition to all of that --

7 QUESTION: Is this the form for an original license?

8 MR. DYK: It would both be on the form for an origi-9 nal license and for a renewal of license though the amount of 10 details required is somewhat different. But on both of those 11 the broadcaster has been asked in the past a question about 12 format. And at one time there was a question there that asked 13 how this contributed to diversity? That second question has 14 been eliminated from the form because the Commission thought 15 that it was inappropriate to get into those areas.

16 But despite the existence of these questions on the 17 form, the Commission has never gotten into the question of 18 whether a particular format should be abandoned or whether a 19 broadcaster should be required to continue with a particular 20 format, because of the Commission's view that that intrudes 21 very much in the area of program content.

22 As to why the question is on the form, I think one 23 needs perhaps to understand a little bit of the history of it.
24 When the Commission first got into business of applying the public 25 interest standard, there were many fewer broadcast stations

1 than there are today. There are about 8,500 of them now, of 2 which I think about 1,000 are public stations. There were only 3 a few hundred at the time, originally. And the Commission's 4 view in the early days was that -- and this was the view of 5 broadcasters also, that there should be a general approach to 6 programming, and they had various categories and broadcasters 7 were thought to pretty much have the same programming approach, 8 and that conformed to what broadcasters wanted to do at that 9 time.

10 Part of the implication at that time was that a spe-11 cialized format such as we have now in great abundance because 12 of the large number of stations, the development of FM
13 and so on, that that might raise special public interest ques-14 tions, so the question on the form really arose because the 15 Commission was concerned that at some point that the move to 16 these specialized formats and away from a more general program-
17 ming approach might itself be something with which the Commis-18 sion should concern itself. I think the Commission, based on 19 the present experience and the great diversity that exists, 20 has recognized that most stations now, perhaps 90 percent of 21 them, have these specialized formats, and it really has deter-22 mined that it should not regulate.

23 QUESTION: Inform me what you mean by specialized 24 format. You say, 90 percent of the radio stations have a spe-25 cialized format?

1 MR. DYK: Yes. For example, WMAL I think, in this 2 city, might be viewed by some people as having a more general 3 programming approach, news, music, talk, and so on. But most 4 of the stations have a specialized format, whether it be clas-5 sical or rock or middle-of-the-road, beautiful music, all news;
6 there's an immense variety of them, depending on how you cate-
7 gorize them. There could be said to be hundreds and hundreds 8 of different formats.

9 And it's not just the music that's played, but also 10 how you treat the news, where you place it, the style, the pace
11 of the station. And these are things that appeal very differ-12 ently to different members of the audience, so that someone 13 might see a great difference between one station which clas-14 sifies itself as a rock station and another station which also 15 may classify itself as a rock station, but the sound of those 16 stations, their quality and their approach, may be very, very 17 different and mean very, very different things to the listener.

18 QUESTION: Mr. Dyk, when the Commission has reached 19 its determination along these lines, that it would not be in 20 the public interest to regulate as it has, what is the standard 21 of review which the Court of Appeals applies to review that 22 decision?

23 MR. DYK: The Commission decision not to regulate?
24 I would suppose under the statute it's an arbitrary and capri-25 cious standard. But here we're dealing with a situation where

1 there's no specific statutory language requiring this regula-2 tion, where there's no legislative history suggesting that the 3 Commission should do it. And indeed, there is very specific 4 legislative history, we think, suggesting that this kind of a 5 qualitative approach to programming, whether it be in the en-6 tertainment area or the news area or any other area, is some-7 thing that the Commission is not supposed to do. It's not 8 supposed to set --

9 QUESTION: Well, that's the contrary to law standard.

10 MR. DYK: Pardon me? Yes.

11 QUESTION: You're suggesting it's the contrary to 12 law standard?

13 MR. DYK: Yes. I think that's what the Court of 14 Appeals viewed it as, and they suggested that what the Commis-15 sion was doing was contrary to law. I think we find it some-16 what difficult to find in the statute any legal requirement
17 that the Commission engage in this very kind of intrusive regu-18 lation where the First Amendment and the statute and the his-19 tory of the statute and the policy of the statute reflected in 20 this Court's decisions in CBS and Midwest Video all counsel 21 against a very intrusive kind of Commission regulation that 22 would be involved here.

23 QUESTION: The law being public interest, convenience
24 and necessity?

25 MR. DYK: That is apparently what the Court viewed

1 as governing here, and --

2 QUESTION: Is there any other statute for it to fall 3 back on?

4 MR. DYK: I think not. No, I think that is the only 5 provision that they could rely on, and it is the only provision 6 that they relied on here. I think there was some reference to 7 some other general portion of the statute in one of the other 8 earlier decisions, just about the larger use of radio or some-9 thing like that, but that's equally general and this Court in 10 NCCB suggested that that is not a ground for the Court of 11 Appeals telling the Commission what to do.

12 QUESTION: Mr. Dyk, as I understand your position, 13 the statute does not require the Commission to take the view 14 that the Court of Appeals took: they must follow these factors.
15 Do you think the statute would have permitted the Commission to 16 adopt the same rule that the Court of Appeals has in effect 17 forced them to adopt?

18 MR. DYK: That, of course, is not a question that's 19 here. But I think the answer is clearly, no, that the Commis-20 sion could not have adopted that kind of intrusive regulation.

21 QUESTION: Even if it thought this was the appro-22 priate way to achieve diversity?

23 MR. DYK: Yes, I think that is true. Because when 24 the Commission gets down into this question of prohibiting the 25 broadcaster from presenting a particular kind of program, as

1 this Court recognized in Red Lion, as this Court recognized in 2 Pacifica while sustaining the particular Commission ruling
3 there, there are very substantial First Amendment and statutory 4 questions. And for the Commission to get into this area of 5 regulation would require it to make the most elusive and sub-6 jective kinds of judgments.

7 QUESTION: Do you say that for a constitutional rea-8 son or a statutory reason or both?

9 MR. DYK: Both. The statutory reason relating to 10 this history of Commission regulation; the 1927 Act where 11 Congress adopted very few provisions in the Act requiring spe-
12 cific regulation of programming; Section 315, of course;
13 Section 1464, which was involved in Pacifica. And at the same 14 time it rejected many, many other proposals to require more 15 intrusive regulation of programming, including the priorities 16 provision which I had mentioned a moment ago, a provision to 17 require equal time for the discussion of public issues, provi-
18 sions to prohibit various kinds of discrimination against pro-19 gramming. And the Congress rejected all of these, and instead 20 adopted Section 326 and in 1934 adopted Section 3(h) which this 21 Court has discussed in its various decisions.

22 And in order to avoid these constitutional questions 23 one looks back at the statute and finds that the Congress was 24 deeply concerned about Commission intrusion into program con-25 tent --

1 QUESTION: Mr. Dyk, if I understand your argument
2 then, it is not that the Commission has made the policy judg-
3 ment; rather that Congress has made this policy judgment.

4 MR. DYK: My argument, Mr. Justice Stevens, is, both.
5 That the Commission in this case has made the policy judgment
6 not to intrude, and that that alone is sufficient to sustain
7 the Commission --

8 QUESTION: But you do also contend that Congress
9 made precisely the same policy judgment?

10 MR. DYK: That is correct, Your Honor. And --

11 QUESTION: You mentioned that 90 percent of all the 12 stations have a particular format?

13 MR. DYK: Specialized format.

14 QUESTION: Specialized format. Suppose the Commis-15 sion was confronted with a situation in a community that's 16 served by five radio stations, we will assume. Four of them
17 are already specialized on rock music, whatever that definition 18 embraces, and the fifth one comes in and says, they can do a 19 better job of rock music than the others. Would the Commis-
20 sion say, no, we've got enough rock stations, we want a 21 broader base, more diversity in your entertainment?

22 MR. DYK: No, it would not and it could not, and the 23 reason that it would not, or one of the reasons that it would 24 not is because the hypothetical, Mr. Chief Justice, which you 25 are assuming is not the way the market works. It's a very

1 dynamic market, a very competitive market, it's a terribly
2 fragmented market, as compared to television. In the larger 3 cities we have dozens and dozens of stations. They are always 4 looking for a new programming approach. They are always trying 5 to innovate. They are always trying to get a larger share of 6 the audience. And you find that format shifts occur constant-
7 ly. And one of the things that the Commission strongly sug-
8 gested here is that if you have this kind of intrusive regula-9 tion, that broadcasters would be very reluctant to adopt these 10 innovative formats, for example, the all news format, which 11 came into being in the late 1960s. Many people and Commissioner 12 Robinson suggested this before. Many people believed that that 13 innovation would never have occurred if the Court of Appeals 14 regulatory regime had been in effect, because a broadcaster is 15 extremely reluctant to get himself into a situation where he 16 adopts an innovative format, finds that it does not work, and 17 then is barred from changing that without having to go through 18 a lengthy and expensive hearing, all the while, perhaps, 19 losing very, very substantial amounts of money. The WEFM sta-
20 tion involved in one of these earlier cases lost about $2 21 million under the format that was involved in that case, and 22 of course a hearing was held to be required because the Court 23 said, well, maybe you didn't lose the $2 million because of 24 the format, maybe you lost it because of mismanagement or some-25 thing like that. So, the hearing that would be required in

1 many, many of these cases is a very substantial deterrent to a 2 broadcaster who is thinking of changing the format.

3 QUESTION: Then, are you saying that in this hypothe-4 tical, four stations, all rock music, and another one that 5 is a so-called good music station with a variety of classical 6 music, is going to shift to the rock pattern and a half a dozen 7 community organizations come in, the symphony or the opera 8 society, choral groups, religious groups, and say, this commun-
9 ity is saturated with rock music, there should be one station 10 which will have a broad base, religious music, opera, classi-11 cal music, semi-classical, popular, the Commission wouldn't 12 hear that, I take it?

13 MR. DYK: It would not hear that and it would not 14 need to because if such a demand existed it would be met by 15 broadcasters in the market. We find in a number of these --

16 QUESTION: Well, where do you -- from what do you 17 draw that statement?

18 MR. DYK: Well, for example, there was a recent 19 change in New York. I think that it was, the call letters were 20 WRVR, which was a jazz station, which changed its jazz format
21 to country music, and almost immediately a couple of other sta-22 tions in the market expanded their jazz programming. They came 23 in to fill that gap. There's a substantial amount of evidence 24 in the record that that sort of thing happens. If someone 25 abandons a format and there is a great need for that kind of

1 programming, a great demand for it, someone will come in and 2 do it. But the problem is that in some of these situations
3 where, -- for example, in the Atlanta case, the Voice of the 4 Arts in Atlanta, a case which was decided by the Court of 5 Appeals, they relied on this survey that purportedly showed 6 that 16 percent of the people in that market really preferred 7 classical music. Well, there were lots of defects to that 8 survey. But the major defect is that there wasn't anything
9 like 16 percent of the people listening to that station. It 10 was less than one percent. If 16 percent of the people in that 11 market had wanted classical music, there wouldn't have been one 12 classical music station; there probably would have been three 13 of them, because that's an enormous market share.

14 The only way that listener preferences can really be 15 determined here is by allowing the marketplace to work, allow-16 ing broadcasters to innovate and change, based on their 17 hunches, based on their own surveys to try to meet the demands 18 of the audience.

19 QUESTION: Are you saying that Congress in the '27 20 and '34 acts has in effect mandated that the marketplace and 21 nothing else is to govern?

22 MR. DYK: Well, I think, Mr. Chief Justice, that that 23 would be going a little far. I think that Congress obviously 24 contemplated that in some areas the Commission would have to 25 intervene. Since 1959, I assume, or when Congress adopted the

1 Fairness Doctrine as part of the statute, that that is one of 2 those areas, and one of the parts of the Fairness Doctrine, 3 the so-called first part of the Fairness Doctrine, is that 4 broadcasters have to present controversial issue programming.

5 So, in your example of the station which did nothing 6 but program all sports, as Mr. Saylor said, that probably would 7 raise an issue of compliance with the Fairness Doctrine, be-8 cause the broadcaster wouldn't be serving the public by total 9 absence of information programs.

10 QUESTION: But that's because of a specific statu-11 tory provision.

12 MR. DYK: Yes, a specific statutory provision, which 13 obviously we do not have here. And I think that the Commission 14 because of the dynamism of the radio market and because of the 15 large number of stations, because of the very kinds of subjec-
16 tive judgments that they would have to make here, was correct 17 in concluding that it could determine not to impose this par-
18 ticular kind of intrusive regulation. The kinds of distinc-19 tions that would have been required, or would be required by 20 the Court of Appeals' regime, are terribly subjective between 21 fine arts stations and classical stations, between contempo-22 rary music and progressive rock, and even in one case which 23 isn't recorded in F.2d -- it's the WONO case, the allegation 24 was that the selections that the broadcaster was choosing were 25 incongruous and unadventurous. And the court said, well,

1 you've got to have a hearing to see whether under those cir-2 cumstances there's a unique format that's been abandoned and 3 that the Commission should raise a public interest question.
4 So it's those kinds of very intrusive judgments that would have 5 to be made here.

6 Now, in addition, of course, to the specific priori-
7 ties provision that was deleted from the statute, the Congress, 8 as this Court has recognized in CBS and Midwest Video, decided 9 to set up a system of public trusteeship leaving to the broad-10 caster, by and large, the specific programming judgments. And 11 just as this Court in the CBS case said that to require a 12 general system of access, as the court, the same court has 13 required there, would be to abandon this editorial role for 14 very speculative gains, so it would seem here, that the same 15 kind of speculative gains is all that one could hope from the 16 regulatory regime which the Court of Appeals would impose, and 17 as the Commission found, the gains would not only be specula-18 tive, but there would be this very, very adverse effect on 19 innovation, experimentation, and the operation of the market-20 place.

21 Mr. Chief Justice, unless there are questions, I'd 22 like to reserve the remainder of my time for rebuttal.

23 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well, Mr. Dyk. Ms. Glen.
24 ORAL ARGUMENT OF MS. KRISTIN BOOTH GLEN, ESQ., 25 ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENTS, THE WNCN LISTENERS GUILD, ET AL.

1 MS. GLEN: Thank you, Mr. Chief Justice; may it
2 please the Court.

3 My name is Kristin Booth Glen. I represent the WNCN
4 Listeners Guild, which was one of the petitioners in the three 5 cases below. I'll be speaking for all the respondents today, 6 except that Ms. Wilhemina Cooke, my cocounsel, will be speaking 7 for the last ten minutes on the specific issue of foreign 8 language formats, which is perhaps the starkest example of what 9 we have in front of us today.

10 I'd like to speak generally about the issues that I 11 think the Court has been exploring with Mr. Dyk and Mr. Saylor, 12 but suggest that if there is time I hope to save a few moments 13 at the end to raise with you an independent ground upon which 14 the Commission's policy statement here can be set aside. And 15 that is, it's blatant and flagrant violation of Section 553 of 16 the Administrative Procedure Act, which we have argued at some 17 length, so poisoned this record that the policy statement simply 18 may not stand, even under your rulings in Vermont Yankee.

19 QUESTION: Which section is that, counsel?

20 MS. GLEN: Excuse me, Your Honor? Section 553,
21 the notice and comment requirement. I could speak to that now 22 if you wish but I think perhaps --

23 QUESTION: No. Anytime.

24 MS. GLEN: I hear from the questions that the Court 25 has been asking a great deal of concern with what I think has

1 troubled us from the beginning of this case. The Commission
2 itself in over ten years of listening to the D.C. Circuit, coun-
3 sel for the Commission and for the private parties today, have 4 repeatedly mischaracterized what the D.C. Circuit has been 5 doing as some intrusion into policy, as some rewriting of the 6 public interest standard, as some requirement that the Commis-
7 sion or the Government range freely among broadcasters, telling 8 them what to play, telling them what not to play. And nothing, 9 in fact, as I think the very restrained opinion of the D.C.
10 Circuit below says, is farther from the truth.

11 This is really quite a simple case. This is not a 12 case in which there is disagreement on what the public interest 13 requires in terms of diversity. This is not a case in which 14 the D.C. Circuit is substituting its policy judgment. This is 15 a case actually unlike most of the communications cases that 16 you hear. This is simply about procedure, about the require-17 ment that a regulatory agency follow the procedure that the 18 statute which Congress has passed requires it to do. And --

19 QUESTION: Well, the regulatory agency and the Court
20 of Appeals don't have quite the same view of the statute, do 21 they?

22 MS. GLEN: Well, they certainly don't, Your Honor, 23 but certainly it is a premise of the separation of powers in 24 this country, that a court's construction of the statute is 25 ultimately binding. Now, obviously you have it within your

1 power to construe this statute differently than the Court of 2 Appeals did, but the Court's construction of the statute it-3 self, which is not a policy issue here, is binding on the 4 agency. And it is in fact this construction which is quite 5 clear and which I think quite clearly comes from the statute 6 that the Commission has for reason of its own -- and I'll 7 speak to that, I think -- repeatedly refused to follow this 8 statute. Now --

9 QUESTION: That is, as construed by the D.C. Court
10 of Appeals?

11 MS. GLEN: Your Honor, not just as construed by 12 the D.C. Circuit. I think that --

13 QUESTION: No, as construed by you as well?

14 MS. GLEN: Not even by me, Your Honor. I think 15 actually as construed by this Court as early back as the 16 case of Ashbacker Radio. If you look at the statutory scheme, 17 particularly Sections 309 and 310, you notice that, what again 18 I think you meant at the argument here, what Congress did was 19 set up a comprehensive licensing scheme to deal with the 20 electromagnetic spectrum. And what it also did was say that we 21 will choose among various applicants if there are choices; if 22 there are none, we will look at the applicant who comes in to 23 decide who will best serve the public interest convenience and 24 necessity. And we will do that in three-year blocks. We will 25 give licenses for three years. There is no property right in

1 those licenses. The statute says, in three separate sections, 2 that there is no right beyond the three-year period. And in

3 And, in fact, the whole congressional scheme is that 4 in this renewal decision which the Commission must make, 5 the channels which are allocated are always free to be reallo-6 cated if someone else can better serve the public. And as 7 Justice Burger -- then Judge Burger, said in the D. C. Circuit, 8 "Licensees run on their record." That's what they do. The 9 way we choose licensees is by their service. In the end that's 10 it, and service is programming.

11 So this is clearly within the statute, and has al-
12 ways been involved in the Commission's determinations. And I
13 will in a moment, if you will bear with me, go down a whole 14 series of areas in which the Commission looks into this kind 15 of programming in terms of judging service, both for initial 16 applicants, for renewal applicants, for competing applicants, 17 for waivers of allocation policy, and so forth.

18 But the statute itself, I think, really requires 19 some care. Section 309(a) states -- and it is the mandatory 20 quality of the statute, I think, that the D. C. Circuit is 21 dealing with, again and again, and which takes us away from 22 the Commission's decision that it is its policy not to make 23 judgments -- 309(a) says that in each application the Commis-24 sion "shall determine whether the public interest, convenience, 25 and necessity would be served by granting."

1 Section 309(d)(1) provides -- and this is different 2 from many regulatory statutes, but it is special here because 3 of the special nature of the electromagnetic spectrum, that 4 any party in interest may file with the Commission if it 5 believes that the public interest will not be served. And in 6 the seminal case of the United Church of Christ that Justice
7 Burger decided in 1966, the public was given standing to raise 8 precisely those issues, because it is the public, that decision 9 said, who is best in a position to talk about the service that 10 the licensee has rendered or will render. They know it the 11 most, they care the most, and therefore they are appropriate 12 parties.

13 Finally -- and I might add, that the transfer situa-14 tion is governed by 310 but the standards are exactly the 15 same and the language, the Commission "must" or "shall", is 16 equally there.

17 Finally, Section 309(d)(2) provides that if a sub-18 stantial and material question of fact is presented or if the 19 Commission for any reason is unable to find that the grant of 20 the application -- and again this would be either the initial 21 application, the renewal, or the transfer -- would be consist-22 ent with Subsection (a): it shall provide as proceeded; if not 23 it must hold a hearing.

24 In other words, we have a statutory scheme which 25 says, every time an application is made, whether it is an

1 application to be the first broadcaster on a frequency; to 2 renew your license; an application by a competing applicant
3 who comes in at a renewal period and says, I can do it better; 4 or when an existing licensee wishes to transfer his license;
5 the Commission must make the public interest determination.

6 Now, there has never been any question until this 7 proceeding -- and in fact I believe that there is not even any 8 question in this proceeding -- that that public interest de-9 termination includes diversity. The diversity standard of 10 the public interest standard is not free-wheeling; it comes 11 from the Act. The Act begins, that "the purpose of this Act 12 is to provide service to all the people of the United States."

13 QUESTION: Now, what kind of diversity? Wouldn't it 14 depend upon what's already in the market? Let's say you have 15 an area, a metropolitan area, in which there are 12 radio sta-16 tions, and eight of them already broadcast various kinds of 17 rock and roll, and/or country and western music, various kinds 18 of it?

19 In that market, if an applicant for a license said he 20 wanted a -- he proposed to broadcast as the entertainment por-21 tion of his programming rock and roll or country and western, 22 it would be quite a different situation from a market, wouldn't 23 it, where the ten stations already broadcasted various sorts 24 of classical or semi-classical or conventional popular music?

25 MS. GLEN: Well, of course, Your Honor. And in fact

1 the Commission --

2 QUESTION: Or does in your submission each applicant
3 for a license or for a transfer or for a renewal have to him-4 self provide diversity, regardless of what's already in the 5 market?

6 MS. GLEN: No. Your Honor, I think, actually, I'd 7 like to clear up something that was said before. With regard, 8 for example, to initial applicants, the form --

9 QUESTION: This case does not involve the initial --

10 MS. GLEN: It doesn't, Your Honor, except that --

11 QUESTION: -- applicant -- it promotes the same sta-12 tutory language.

13 MS. GLEN: Right. Except that in every situation 14 other than the situation raised in this policy statement, that 15 is to say, when citizens come in and say, this proposed aban-16 donment or this actual abandonment of a unique format has de-17 creased diversity. In every other situation where diversity is 18 at issue, the Commission looks from, starting from the applica-19 tion for an initial license where contrary to counsel's 20 position, on the radio license form 301, and it's in Footnote 7 21 of our brief, the citation, the question is asked, what pro-
22 gramming do you propose and how does it contribute to overall 23 diversity? They don't ask that on television licenses, and I
24 think that that's a clear choice, understanding that there's a 25 conscious choice, to look for diversity within a service area

1 when making choices among either new applicants or competing
2 applicants. Now, when an applicant for a station or a compet-
3 ing applicant comes in and says, I propose a new format, a 4 specialized format, a unique format, whether that is classical 5 music in a market with ten rock stations or whether it is 6 Spanish language in a mixed market or whatever, the Commis-
7 sion's own statement, its own policy statement, reaffirmed
8 as recently as September of this year, says that that applicant 9 gets a comparative plus, a merit, in the determination as to 10 whether he or she will best serve the public interest and get 11 the license.

12 QUESTION: And is this true only if there is not 13 already a Spanish language station? Or if it --

14 MS. GLEN: Well, what the most recent case says, it's 15 the case called Cameron, which again is cited in our brief, 16 it says that the comparative merit will be given only to a li-17 censee who proposes a unique format, and that is a unique for-18 mat, obviously, in the service area. So if there are already 19 four Spanish language stations, he gets nothing.

20 QUESTION: Then it's not unique.

21 MS. GLEN: But if it is the first classical music 22 station, he does.

23 QUESTION: What if there was a unique format proposed 24 in Montana, a Spanish-language speaking station and there are 25 20 witnesses before the Commission, and all of them say they

1 don't understand the language and they wouldn't tune in to a
2 Spanish language speaking station, and there is no proponent
3 of the thing testifying. Does the Commission nonetheless grant
4 a frequency to the Spanish language speaking station?

5 MS. GLEN: Well, Your Honor, the question of unique-6 ness or of contribution to diversity is never necessarily con-7 trolling. It is simply a public interest aspect which the 8 Commission takes into account. It may be counterbalanced by 9 some other aspect, there may be another format that many people 10 wish to hear, there may be other reasons, there may be minor-11 ity ownership -- and that's something that the Commission is in-12 terested in -- it need not be dispositive, and clearly if 13 there is no need for it in the service area, the plus which it 14 may get may not be enough to outweigh the programming propo-15 sals of the other applicant or prospective licensee.

16 QUESTION: In other words, a Bulgarian language sta-17 tion would be unique but it might not be in the public inter-18 est and --

19 MS. GLEN: It's also pretty unlikely that anybody
20 would propose it in Montana. -- Exactly. But it is an aspect 21 of the public interest, and it is an aspect which the Commis-22 sion looks at all the time. Right here in Washington, even as 23 we speak, the Commission has said, in a competing application
24 for WOOK-FM, because of the loss of a Spanish language format
25 and that whole complicated situation, leaving 300,000 people

1 in the standard metropolitan statistical area without Spanish
2 language programming, that one of the competing applicants,
3 a Hispanic, has proposed a Spanish language programming format
4 in its application. In the event a threshold showing is made 5 to the administrative law judge that Hispanic's proposed for-6 mat is specialized and unique, an inquiry into the need for 7 that format may be considered under the standard comparative 8 issue.

9 So in fact there you have the Commission itself say-10 ing, when a broadcaster comes in and says, I propose to in-11 crease diversity and to serve a portion of the community that 12 has not been served, they'll look at it.

13 QUESTION: Well, if the Commission is saying this 14 this, why did the Court of Appeals overrule?

15 MS. GLEN: Because they say it in every situation 16 except the single situation which is before you here and which 17 was before the Commission in the policy statement. And that 18 is, where the question is not an increase in diversity because 19 a broadcaster is proposing a unique format or increasing di-20 versity by some specialized program, but where listeners, 21 where the very public who were let into these proceedings in 22 1966 by the UCC case says, this proposed abandonment of a uni-
23 que format will decrease diversity. And the Court of Appeals 24 has said, it must be treated the same way. Certainly the 25 policy considerations, the difficulties that the Commission and the private parties speak of in terms of making these

1 determinations are exactly the same. And yet the Commission
2 has said, in this instance where it's the public who raises 3 it, where we're talking about the decrease, we will not look.
4 And it is that "we will not look" that the Commission has said 5 finally and clearly in its policy statement, although it had 6 previously had at least a generalized statement that it would 7 take hard looks in hard cases and if a unique format was really 8 abandoned it would take a hard look. In this policy statement, 9 no date at the end of the statement, it said, we have decided 10 that we will not look. In other words, we will not make the 11 public interest determination that the statute mandates.

12 QUESTION: Was that the Commission's position before 13 1970?

14 MS. GLEN: Well, the Commission always took a posi-15 tion that licensee discretion in general and that the market-16 place did best in terms of allocating its own formats.

17 QUESTION: When did this hard look notion come up?
18 After 1970? After the Court of Appeals decision?

19 MS. GLEN: No, Your Honor. Earlier -- well, the de-20 cision that was reviewed in WEFM, which was the first en banc 21 format case in the D. C. Circuit, in fact had appended to it
22 a policy statement that Commissioner Burch -- that Commissioner 23 Burch wrote and that other commissioners joined in, in which he 24 said -- and this is what's very interesting, because there is 25 no disagreement here between the Court of Appeals and this

1 policy statement, that, in general we think that the market-
2 place works very well. In general we think that the market-
3 place maximizes diversity. We think that these choices should 4 be made by licensees, and that's the best thing. But where 5 -- and it's quoted in our brief -- that where a unique format 6 is going to be abandoned, where there will truly be a loss of 7 diversity, we will take a hard look and consider that. Now, 8 that I consider to be consistent with the statutory standard.

9 QUESTION: Was that a Commission position or just 10 several commissioners?

11 MS. GLEN: Well, it was a majority. I think it was 12 six out of seven of the commissioners who issued that statement 13 and they did so particularly because, although there was a 14 specific adjudicatory situation, they said, we want you to know 15 what we're talking about. And what we're talking about is in 16 general letting the marketplace do it, but a hard look, the 17 safety valve, the kind of things discussed in --

18 QUESTION: You say that was attached to their posi-19 tion they took in the Court of Appeals in 1970?

20 MS. GLEN: In WEFM itself; exactly.

21 QUESTION: What was the difference between them and 22 the Court of Appeals, then, at that time?

23 MS. GLEN: Well, the difference in that case, that 24 was an adjudication, and they did not look, and they said, we 25 don't find that there is an issue of fact. And in fact, two

1 out of three judges of the original panel of the Court of 2 Appeals that heard it said, right, there's no question of fact.
3 And it was the en banc --

4 QUESTION: So, you think -- do you think this new 5 policy statement is wholly inconsistent with the policy state-6 ment that six of the seven commissioners stated in 1970?

7 MS. GLEN: It is, Your Honor, and I think they 8 specifically say in the Appendix at 134a, it's Footnote 8, to 9 their decision, to the policy statement that is in review here.
10 And it reads as follows: "The Commission has indicated that 11 it would take an extra hard look at the reasonableness of any 12 proposal that would deprive a community of its only source of 13 a particular type of programming." And then it cites the 14 Zenith Radio Corp., which was in fact the WEFM case at the 15 Commission.

16 QUESTION: Well, then, that would seem to apply 17 whether the public raised a fuss or not?

18 MS. GLEN: Well, it only comes up, really, if the 19 public raises a fuss, although I think that the obligation to 20 look is always on the Commission. But I think that the case 21 below here says that you have to have public grumbling. But 22 the Commission continues here, having just stated that it will 23 give a hard look where a unique service is going to be taken 24 away, "Having given the entire matter further study, however, 25 we have concluded that such a position is neither

1 administratively tenable nor necessarily in the public in-
2 terest. Rather, as discussed herein, we believe that the mar-
3 ket is the allocation mechanism of preference for entertain-4 ment formats and that Commission supervision in this area will 5 not be conducive either to producing diversity or satisfied 6 listeners." In other words, we will not look.

7 And it is the "we will not look" which is the abdi-
8 cation of the statutory responsibility.

9 QUESTION: Couldn't it be that we did look and don't 10 agree with you?

11 MS. GLEN: No, Your Honor, this is a policy state-12 ment. And in fact, the very interesting thing about this --

13 QUESTION: It says that, we listened to you and we 14 decided the other way. Isn't that what it says?

15 MS. GLEN: Your Honor, the Commission itself through-16 out both the notice of inquiry --

17 QUESTION: I'm only talking about what you just read.

18 MS. GLEN: Well, perhaps I can relate it back.

19 In all of these documents, the Commission itself says --

20 QUESTION: They did give you a hearing, didn't they?
21 And they didn't stop you from putting on anything you wanted 22 to put on?

23 MS. GLEN: No, Your Honor, but what they have said 24 is, they will never give us a hearing again. We can walk in 25 and say, there are 300,000 Hispanics in this city, there are

1 40 radio stations. The Hispanic station is now changing to a 2 format which is duplicated by several other stations. This is 3 a terrible loss, both to diversity and to the service of a 4 minority community which is part of the undivided ownership
5 and the Commission --

6 QUESTION: Wouldn't it also be a loss of finance to 7 the station?

8 MS. GLEN: Your Honor, we can say this format is 9 making money, this format is necessary, this format will create 10 a terrible loss, and the Commission has said in the policy
11 statement which you are reviewing here and which the D. C.
12 Circuit has struck down, we will not look. The Commission has 13 said, throughout this proceeding, we recognize that there are 14 marketplace failures.

15 QUESTION: So your only complaint is they said they 16 wouldn't look?

17 MS. GLEN: Well, but Your Honor, in saying they will 18 not look they are saying that they will not make the statutory 19 public interest determination that 309 and 310 require them to 20 make.

21 QUESTION: Well, that's their own -- if they hadn't 22 made that statement you wouldn't be here?

23 MS. GLEN: In this policy review? No, if they said, 24 we will look, we will follow the statute, we will follow the 25 law as the D.C. Circuit has explicated it, we will do in a

1 situation where listeners raise this question.

2 QUESTION: Now, will you answer my question? My 3 question is, if all they said was, if they had not said, we 4 wouldn't look, would you be here?

5 MS. GLEN: In this policy statement? No, Your Honor, 6 I would not be here.

7 QUESTION: Thank you.

8 MS. GLEN: I would not be here. It's somewhat pecu-9 liar that these cases didn't come up in adjudicatory situations.
10 There were four of them, as you know, and the Commission had 11 actually prepared a petition for certiorari in WEFM, and for 12 reasons best known to itself, decided not to appeal that spe-13 cific factual case to this Court. So all we have is the policy 14 statement here.

15 But it is, I think, that the policy statement places 16 in very stark terms the Commission's statement that it will 17 not follow the statute, that it is abdicating its statutory 18 responsibility --

19 QUESTION: No, no, now, the Commission did not say 20 it will not follow the statute. The Commission said, we are 21 following the statute.

22 MS. GLEN: Well, Your Honor, the Commission has said, 23 we will not make this public interest determination.

24 QUESTION: Exactly.

25 MS. GLEN: And I think that this is --

1 QUESTION: And we are following the statute, and 2 this is the only way to follow the statute. That's what the 3 Commission said. It never said, we will not follow the 4 statute. Don't tell us that.

5 MS. GLEN: I'm not even sure that the Commission
6 said that. The Commission said, if our --

7 QUESTION: Did it say we are going to violate 8 the statute, as you've just argued to us?

9 MS. GLEN: No, but it said, in our judgment it's 10 best to let the marketplace make the determination across the 11 board.

12 QUESTION: And that that's what the statute requires.

13 MS. GLEN: But, it's pretty clear, I think, from 14 the decisions of this Court as far back as Ashbacker Radio, 15 that when the statute requires a procedure, when the statute 16 requires a hearing between competing applicants, as was the 17 case in Ashbacker, or as here where material and substantial 18 questions going to the public interest are raised, that the 19 fact that the Commission, even given its expertise and what-20 ever, thinks than another procedure might be better, is simply 21 not permissible.

22 That is in a sense what happened in UCC. The Commis-23 sion said, we don't have to let these people in, we don't have 24 to give them standing, and we're not going to hold a hearing.
25 Justice Burger said, this is a procedural case. In Ashbacker

1 the Commission said, we think it would be better to just grant
2 this application and put the competing application to the side
3 and hold a hearing later, because it would be in the public 4 interest to get somebody on the air.

5 And this Court said, no. The statute says, there is 6 a right to a hearing. And the fact that you think that there's 7 a better procedure is not within your power. If you think 8 there's a better procedure, go to Congress. And in fact, the 9 Commission has gone to Congress every year, and they're there 10 again this year as are many other members of the private 11 broadcast industry saying, don't make us do this, don't make 12 us regulate. But we have a statutory scheme right now, and 13 the statutory scheme says that they do have to regulate, that 14 there do have to be choices made about who will use this scarce 15 resource.

16 And, for better or worse, that choice is on the 17 Commission and at least the Commission is in some senses demo-18 cratically responsible. For them to say, the marketplace will 19 make the choice, we won't look, is to put the power to decide 20 what shall be heard and who will be served not in people who 21 are responsible to the President and the Congress but to people 22 with marketplace forces. And that is precisely the scheme that 23 the Congress eschewed by developing a licensing system in the 24 first place.

25 QUESTION: But you could say alternatively that the

1 Commission has decided that the public interest, convenience,
2 and necessity are best served by the marketplace allocation
3 force.

4 MS. GLEN: Your Honor, the Commission must make in 5 cases in this Court, from as far back as Pottsville, through 6 NBC and RKO, to discussion in the National Citizens Communica-
7 tions for Broadcasting case, about the broad rule that the 8 D. C. Circuit would have imposed in terms of cross-ownership.
9 Talk about the Commission's, the requirement that the Commission 10 make an individualized determination, and to say, we're not 11 going to make determinations, we're not going to look, we're 12 just going to let the marketplace do it, is to say we will not 13 make that individualized determination. And I think that 14 that's really related to the right that the statute creates 15 for a hearing.

16 QUESTION: If that's the way they construed the 17 statute, admittedly it's contrary to the Court of Appeals 18 construction. But it would not require a hearing, an individ-19 ualized hearing in every case. They say, we're going to let 20 the marketplace do it.

21 MS. GLEN: But if the marketplace were to be allowed 22 to make these decisions, then you wouldn't have comparative 23 renewal hearings, you wouldn't have initial renewal hearings, 24 you wouldn't have the Commission making choices in every other 25 situation about who will best serve the public. And that's the

1 question that's being asked here, where someone says, I'm going 2 to abandon the only Spanish language format, or I'm going to 3 abandon the only classical format, or the only black format, 4 is that person best serving the public interest? And the Com-
5 mission cannot avoid that determination under this statutory 6 scheme.

7 In NCCB you said the reason that it's okay to not 8 have an across-the-board rule about divestiture and concentra-9 tion is because the rights of both competing applicants and 10 petitioners to deny, under 309, are protected because the Com-
11 mission will make an individualized determination in each case
12 where those issues are raised, whether the concentration issue
13 so substantially affects the public interest that the license 14 should be denied or that it should be given to someone else.

15 QUESTION: Some of this discussion has left me a 16 little bit confused, but maybe you can clear it up. You'll 17 recall the hypothetical I gave to your friends on the other 18 side of the table about the community with five radio stations, 19 four of them already in rock, and the fifth one is going to 20 move -- and this is either on a renewal or at any time -- going 21 to move into all rock, because rock is doing so well. Now, 22 what's your position on the scope of the Commission's author-23 ity to weigh the diversity of programming over the whole com-24 munity and over all of the stations?

25 MS. GLEN: Well, Your Honor, it's not my opinion of

1 the Commission's ability to weigh this. The Commission itself
2 speaks to this all the time. And in initial application, if 3 there's an open frequency and this is the only applicant, 4 although he was asked the question, how are you going to con-5 tribute to diversity, presumably he will not be denied the 6 license because he is not contributing diversity, because 7 there's no one else. If, however, it's a renewal situation 8 and someone else comes in and says, here's this fellow who's 9 playing rock; I propose to program to the black community -- 10 which is 40 percent of this community and which is otherwise 11 unserved.

12 The Commission itself has said, in cases cited in our 13 brief in Cameron and as I say, as recently as the WOOK case 14 here in Washington, that that applicant will be given a prefer-15 ence, that that is -- on that issue. And that that is some-16 thing that the Commission will look at and looks at all the 17 time. It does look at contributions to diversity when broad-18 casters raise them. It simply doesn't look at decreases in 19 diversity when citizens raise them.

20 And in a sense that is symptomatic of the Commission's 21 continued hostility to the United Church of Christ decision, 22 which did allow the public in and which did allow the public
23 to raise these issues. Nobody but the public knows better.

24 QUESTION: Well, but that wasn't a decision of this 25 Court.

1 MS. GLEN: No, it wasn't, Your Honor, but it cer-
2 tainly has received such a citation across the board in cases 3 of this Court and commentators and whatever that I think that 4 there's not a lot of question. I don't even think that the 5 Commission would deny that it's good law. It's not, of course, 6 but it's a very important and very substantial explication of 7 what the Act is about, why Congress has chosen this licensing 8 scheme, the kinds of choices that are made, so that this very 9 special resource, the electromagnetic spectrum, which the pub-10 lic owns, and which the Government controls, shall be used to 11 serve all the people.

12 QUESTION: That holding didn't go to what you have 13 just suggested. That holding went only to to the parties that 14 the Commission must hear, not how the Commission should decide 15 the issue.

16 MS. GLEN: Of course, Your Honor, and I certainly 17 don't want to overly butter you up, but it was an opinion 18 in which you really spoke in historic and in policy terms about 19 the statute, about the need for service --

20 QUESTION: The judges who decided it thought it was a 21 pretty narrow issue, in terms of intervention, not substantive.

22 MS. GLEN: It's not substantive, but what it says 23 is that the public, or responsible members of the public, are 24 frequently the best judges of the service that is being given 25 to them, and the Act provides that they are entitled to service.

1 That's the scheme we have. And as the opinion said, they care
2 the most and they know the most, and they may be in the best 3 position to vindicate the public interest, and that's why they 4 should be there in these format cases. And I think it's also 5 important to say --

6 QUESTION: Couldn't the Commission's policy follow 7 directly from that statement? Insofar as the public lets its 8 wishes be known, it does so by tuning in to various stations, 9 and the ownership or management of a station would know that, 10 and with the profit motive motivating it, it would give the 11 public what it wanted.

12 MS. GLEN: Your Honor, I think that's a very important 13 question and it really goes to one of the confusions that per-14 meate this case, which is the confusion that the Commission
15 engages in over the difference between audience satisfaction 16 or consumer satisfaction and the public interest. It is very 17 clear that the marketplace in radio is not between the lis-18 tener and the broadcaster. Listeners are the bait by which 19 broadcasters obtain advertising --

20 QUESTION: Well, of course, broadcasters are only 21 interested in that segment of the public which are potential 22 radio listeners.

23 MS. GLEN: Well, they're also interested in that 24 segment of --

25 QUESTION: Some people just never listen to the radio

1 and broadcasters presumably would have no interest in their 2 tastes, even if their tastes represented 15 percent of the 3 community.

4 MS. GLEN: Well, but Justice Stewart, it's not just 5 their tastes or whether they listen, it's whether they have 6 dollars to spend on products that advertisers wish to adver-7 tise, which is why you see perpetually that large portions of 8 the population or large minorities, the poor, racial minorities, 9 children, the elderly --

10 QUESTION: Listeners to country and western?

11 MS. GLEN: -- are not served. Listeners to country 12 and western are at least perceived by advertisers as having 13 good demographics, as having high disposable income, and there-14 fore you may see four country and western stations or five 15 rock stations, because those consumers are favored consumers, 16 and nothing that broadcasts to the elderly, little that broad-17 casts to children, little that broadcasts to racial minori-18 ties who are not perceived as being markets for the adver-
19 tisers. So, in fact, the scheme of the Act -- and we're not 20 certainly not asking and there's nothing in this decision that 21 says the Commission should go out and say, aha, here's an un-22 served minority, let's allocate a station. I mean, that's 23 what in a sense the legislative history that's talked about 24 throughout all the briefs talks about. And that's not at issue
25 here; we're not talking about allocations. What we are talking

1 about, though, is that where there is diversity, where there
2 isn't a minority taste or a minority ethnic or a minority age
3 group, a group of listeners who after all own the air waves 4 just as much as the people who buy pimple cream, that when that 5 minority --

6 QUESTION: They might be the same people.

7 MS. GLEN: Hopefully not. -- when that minority is 8 being served and a broadcaster says, I don't want to do that 9 anymore, I'd rather play rock and make more money, that that is 10 a legitimate question, that that decrease in diversity, that 11 decrease in service to that minority audience is a part of the 12 public interest that the Commission should look at in deciding 13 whether to renew the license or grant the transfer, or what-14 ever. It doesn't have to decide it in favor of keeping format;
15 it doesn't require that -- the D. C. Circuit in the opinion 16 below is extraordinarily careful to say how very limited its 17 holding is, that the Commission has no power to tell people 18 they must retain formats or what they must play. It simply 19 must look at the effect on diversity of the loss of the unique 20 format, what that's raised by a substantial group of the 21 public.

22 QUESTION: But if the issue is raised, you have to 23 assume there will be some cases in which they would tell the 24 licensee, you must continue the same format.

25 MS. GLEN: Well, Your Honor, they don't tell the 1 licensee he must continue. Every licensee runs on his record.

2 Every licensee who has no property right beyond the three 3 years knows -- it doesn't happen frequently -- but knows that 4 if somebody comes along and says, I'll do better, that the Com-5 mission has the absolute power, although it chooses not to 6 exercise it very frequently, to replace him with someone who 7 will serve better.

8 QUESTION: Well, is it not part of your position
9 that in a given transfer application that would involve a dra-10 matic change of format, that there would be some case in which 11 the public could come in and convince the Commission that they 12 should not allow the change to take place because they want to 13 retain the old format, it's in the public interest to retain 14 the old format?

15 MS. GLEN: Your Honor, that's absolutely right and 16 it doesn't compel anyone to do anything. The prospective 17 licensee clearly has no right to --

18 QUESTION: Well, it compels them not to do something 19 they want to do.

20 MS. GLEN: Well, no, the prospective licensee 21 clearly is out of it. He has no right to the license at all.
22 So that the fact that he is being told, we don't need more 23 rock, certainly doesn't violate his rights in any way. And 24 the present licensee is simply being told, if you don't want to 25 program this, you can go away. If somebody else wants to

1 program this format, we're going to give them a preference be-2 cause this is a minority portion of the community that deserves 3 service under the universal service standard of the Act, and 4 that the public interest would best be served. No one is com-
5 pelled to continue; there is not a common carrier obligation.
6 But the other side of common carrier, and I think it's impor-
7 tant to look at this, is that licensees don't get financial 8 and economic protection from the Commission either. That's 9 what the Sanders Brothers case says.

10 In Sanders Brothers there was a licensee in the com-
11 munity. The Commission said, we're going to put in another 12 station, because that will increase diversity in this commu-
13 nity. And the first licensee came in and said, wait a minute, 14 you're going to cut into our profits, there aren't going to 15 be enough advertisers, we don't want this guy in here. Don't 16 let him in. And this Court held, that's not what it's about.
17 The Commission's interest, the Commission's vindication of the 18 public's interest in diversity far overrides the broadcaster's 19 interest in profits. He's given the license, he's allowed to 20 exploit it; if he makes money, fine; if he doesn't make money, 21 fine. That's not the Commission's concern unless it involves 22 ultimately a decrease or a diminution of the public service.
23 He's not a common carrier, he's not entitled to protection.

24 QUESTION: When you get down to the question of diver-
25 sity, it sounds quite easy and manageable when you start

1 talking, or when you first think of it, but when you start 2 thinking of examples of it, there is going to be kind of hang-3 ing over the head of any programmer who -- as Justice Stevens
4 suggests -- who wants to abandon a unique format, the threat 5 that his license would be not renewed at the end of the three-6 year period. Now, to what extent does the Commission have to 7 weigh diversity?

8 MS. GLEN: Well, Your Honor, that obviously -- let 9 me answer that in two ways. One is to just restate, in case 10 this is troubling you at all, that it's perfectly clear that 11 this Court has held numerous times that the First Amendment is 12 not violated by not renewing a licensee because someone else
13 will better serve the public. The question of how diversity 14 is implicated or weighed is a fact question in every case.
15 It's precisely the kind of fact question that the Commission 16 decides all the time. And in fact it's very illustrative that 17 in the ten years that the Commission has lived under First 18 Voice of Atlanta and then WEFM and now this case, that it has 19 found in various instances that diversity is not terribly af-20 fected. There was a case recently; this is a station in 21 Cincinnati, where the Commission said there are three other 22 stations in the market that play roughly the same thing, there-23 fore diversity won't really be affected, therefore there 24 doesn't have to be a hearing, therefore it doesn't impact on 25 the public interest in such a way that you lose your license.

1 QUESTION: The only reason you have a hearing is be-2 cause there's an issue of fact that could result in some dif-
3 ferent outcome. I mean, just to say that all you have to do 4 is have a hearing isn't dispositive of the case, because if 5 you're having a hearing it must be about some meaningful con-
6 tested issue of fact that will result in a different outcome 7 depending on how it's decided.

8 MS. GLEN: That's true, Your Honor, but there might 9 also be situations -- and sadly enough, since I represent a lot 10 of classical music lovers -- there are situations where very 11 unique formats are abandoned, and there is not the sufficient 12 public grumbling which the D. C. Circuit has said must occur, 13 and nothing happens at all. And that licensee gets a free 14 ride. But he's not entitled to economic protection. Nobody 15 by virtue of having a license is entitled to be protected 16 against the vicissitudes of a system premised on a choice 17 among licensees for who will best serve the public.

18 QUESTION: Well, then, if the public is the ultimate 19 arbiter, as in your view, why should public grumbling from 20 more than one citizen be required, in order to hold a hearing 21 on diversity?

22 MR. GLEN: Well, Your Honor, because the whole point
23 is, is the public interest in diversity being affected? If a 24 number of people come forward and say, this is terrible, that 25 we're losing this Spanish format, or terrible that we're not

1 going to have classical music anymore; there are 400,000 of us,
2 we've listened to it and we love it. Then that goes to the im-
3 pact on diversity which is part of the public interest stan-4 dard, which the Commission has to decide. It may decide, for 5 example, that the first black station or the first Haitian 6 station in New York will be offered instead, and that that 7 offsets the loss in diversity.

8 It's clearly a fact determination but it's not a 9 fact determination any different from the determination that 10 the Commission makes in a comparative situation where a broad-11 caster says, give me the license because I'm going to do some-12 thing you need, because I'm going to contribute to diversity.
13 And, in fact, across the board the Commission looks at this 14 kind of programming.

15 As recently as in one of the RKO license renewals
16 that have been going on, RKO was allowed to show meritorious 17 service because it broadcast -- this was the station in Los 18 Angeles -- because it broadcast concerts of the Los Angeles 19 Philharmonic. The Commission looks at this all the time when 20 broadcasters raise it. There is no question that it is part 21 of the public interest.

22 QUESTION: Ms. Glen, do you agree with opposing 23 counsel that the Commission's statement of policy and the Court
24 of Appeals decision in this case relate both to program changes 25 that have been made and those that are proposed to be made?

1 MS. GLEN: Yes, Your Honor. Clearly, the Court of 2 Appeals has spoken and again, very carefully, grounded their 3 decision in the language of the statute. I must be frank with 4 you and tell you that when we started litigating these cases 5 we had hoped that we could challenge format changes whenever 6 they occurred because we felt their impact on the public 7 interest and diversity was so great.

8 The Court of Appeals has very carefully grounded 9 this in the statutory requirement that on its decision on these 10 applications the Commission must make a determination.

11 QUESTION: On renewals or on transfers.

12 MS. GLEN: So that it is only renewals and transfers 13 that are involved here.

14 QUESTION: Well, but that wasn't really my question.
15 Yes, I understand that you're in agreement that it only applies 16 to renewals and transfers.

17 MS. GLEN: I'm sorry, perhaps I misunderstood your 18 question.

19 QUESTION: But does it apply to program changes 20 that have been made as well as those that are proposed to be 21 made to both?

22 MS. GLEN: Oh, of course, Your Honor. For example,
23 the RVR situation was already mentioned. There was a 24-hour 24 jazz station in New York, WRVR. Its license comes up for 25 renewal in the spring of '81.

1 QUESTION: And it has changed?

2 MS. GLEN: It has changed to a country and western 3 format which duplicates --

4 QUESTION: During the three-year --

5 MS. GLEN: A month ago.

6 QUESTION: Yes. It already had its license.

7 MS. GLEN: And under the D. C. Circuit's decision 8 -- and I believe, under the statute, and hopefully under your 9 opinion here, when that license comes up for renewal, if in 10 fact the 50,000 people who have already petitioned are 11 joined by 200,000 more and there is a substantial showing that 12 there is a need and a unique service here and a community
13 that's served, and financial viability for the format, then it 14 will be raised. It will not do much for the jazz listeners 15 who want to hear it now, but it is there to be raised in the 16 public interest determination. And I think that's -- it's also 17 illustrative of how limited this decision is, but still how --

18 QUESTION: It will be equally true in a renewal or 19 transfer proceeding in the Commission under the Court of 20 Appeals decision and the Commission's statement of policy that 21 if the proposed transferee or if the applicant for renewal
22 said, if this transfer is affected or if the renewal of my li-23 cense is effected, I'm going to change my programming format.

24 MS. GLEN: If he said that?

25 QUESTION: Yes. This would also be applicable.

1 MS. GLEN: Of course it would. Of course it would.

2 QUESTION: Both the changes that have been made --

3 MS. GLEN: Right.

4 QUESTION: -- and those proposed to be made.

5 MS. GLEN: Exactly. And obviously, the licensees,
6 I think as a practical matter, at this point, if it's not a 7 transfer situation, have figured out that it's better to do it 8 mid-license term because maybe by the time the license comes 9 up the public grumbling will disperse or people will be hap-
10 pier, whatever. But nevertheless the question of the decrease 11 in that service area and to that minority community is still 12 there. The public grumbling may dissipate. Again, Justice 13 Rehnquist, your licensee may get away with it. That's the 14 chance he takes.

15 QUESTION: How large a segment of the public does it 16 have to be?

17 MS. GLEN: Well --

18 QUESTION: Supposing, instead of your 300,000
19 Hispanics, it's 200 Hispanics?

20 MS. GLEN: Your Honor, that's really -- that goes 21 to the problem with the inquiry here. This Commission was 22 told by the D. C. Circuit in saying, this is your statutory 23 obligation, why don't you go make standards? Why don't you go 24 devise procedures that will help you to deal with this? We 25 don't want to wipe you out although I must say there have been

1 ten format cases in ten years, so it's not a huge problem for 2 the Commission. But nevertheless, you can devise standards
3 which will weed out these people, and in the very proceeding
4 under review here many people came in, answered rhetorical 5 questions that were asked by the Commission about how much 6 grumbling is necessary, what should the burden of proof be, 7 what, how do we decide, you know, if there's substitutability?
8 And listeners' groups, including the group that I represent 9 here today submitted extensive comments to try to help the 10 Commission develop standards for dealing with this. The Com-11 mission obviously has a great deal of discretion as to how to 12 make these choices and weed people out, just as it weeds people 13 out in Fairness Doctrine complaints. All that is being said 14 is that it must ultimately make the determination although it 15 can weed them out.

16 What the Commission should be doing is devising 17 these standards, not saying, we won't follow the statute, we 18 won't follow the D. C. Circuit. And I think that it can be 19 quite narrow, that the Circuit has said it will --

20 QUESTION: Well, but you say, "we won't follow the 21 statute." What statute? The public interest?

22 MS. GLEN: The statute that says, before a transfer 23 or a renewal can be granted the Commission must make a determi-
24 nation that the public interest will be served, and if there 25 are material questions of fact it shall hold a hearing.

1 That's what the statute --

2 QUESTION: But the Commission has said that that 3 isn't the way to read the statute.

4 MS. GLEN: Well, but they said that in Ashbacker too
5 and this Court said, you may think that there's a better way 6 but that's what the statute said and you have to hold the 7 hearing because the statute provides that you have to hold the 8 hearing.

9 QUESTION: Right, and this Court presumably will 10 have to say this one way or the other here.

11 MS. GLEN: I would certainly hope that it would fol-
12 low Ashbacker. But I think that the ability to develop stan-13 dards is really something that is not so difficult for the 14 Commission, and the ability to make these fact determinations 15 is not so terrible, and that the areas in which they do this 16 are really quite bewildering. They look at programs all the 17 time, they look at the kinds of programming in renewal and in 18 comparative hearings; they look at the promise of specialized 19 format in comparative hearings; they have themselves engaged 20 in such activities as developing anti-siphoning rules for pay 21 cable saying, we're not going to let cable play certain kinds 22 of programming which we think the audience for free broadcast-23 ing should get: feature films, sports, series programs.

24 In other words, they look, they make judgments all 25 the time about programming and about service. And they do it

1 whenever the licensees and whenever broadcasters ask them to 2 do it, and what they are saying here is, we will not do it
3 when the public asks. And if this Act is really about secur-4 ing service to all the people of the United States, if those 5 very special considerations that are set forth in Red Lion
6 -- and there's just no way, you know, that anybody arguing 7 this case can say it better than what Red Lion said about 8 that if this resource is to be used, that if it is the rights 9 of the public that are paramount, then the Commission simply 10 cannot take the position that what it will do for the broad-11 casters it will not do for the public, that it will not serve 12 minority communities, that it will let the marketplace and 13 marketplace forces dictate these choices to the detriment of 14 racial, ethnic, undemographically favored consumers. It must 15 make this decision. If it doesn't want to make the decision 16 it can go to Congress and ask Congress to ask to change the 17 statute, but until it does the statute makes it very clear.
18 And perhaps in conclusion, I am reminded of a ditty, as it 19 were, but it seems appropriate to me, from the first act of 20 Ruddigore, in which Richard Dauntless -- and I would like to 21 think of the Commission as dauntless in this even though they 22 have been somewhat misguided -- states, "For duty, duty must 23 be done; the rule applies to everyone. And painful though 24 that duty be, to shirk the task were fiddle-dee-dee."

25 Congress has put the task of making these public

1 interest determinations in the hands of the Commission, not in 2 the hands of the marketplace. The Commission may not like it 3 but it is guided by a standard which it applies across the 4 board in every other situation. Its job is to decide who will 5 best serve the public who owns the airwaves, and the decision 6 of the D. C. Circuit below does no more than say that it must 7 make that determination in a principled way, a way which will 8 be reviewed deferentially by the Court, but that it must make 9 the determination. That's what the case below says, and we 10 would urge your affirmance on that basis.

11 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Ms. Cooke.

12 ORAL ARGUMENT OF MS. WILHELMINA REUBEN COOKE, ESQ., 13 ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENTS, UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST ET AL.

14 MS. COOKE: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the 15 Court:

16 I am Wilhelmina Reuben Cooke and I appear on behalf 17 of the Office of Communication of the United Church of Christ,
18 and major Spanish-Mexican-American civil rights organizations
19 which include the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Educa-
20 tional Fund, and the Bicultural-Bilingual Coalition on Mass
21 Media. These respondents share a common belief that the impli-22 cations of the order under review here today encompass not only 23 a question of whether we, the public, will have access to di-24 verse musical and entertainment experiences but involve central 25 premises of our broadcast system.

1 First, that in a democratic society all substantial 2 segments of the public should have some means of self-express-3 sion and access to information necessary to exercise their 4 rights as citizens. And secondly, that at least primary first 5 broadcast service should be provided to all the people of the 6 United States. Because these issues are presented most vividly 7 in the context of foreign language programming and other 8 specialized ethnic formats, we'd like to make three points to 9 the Court today in the time allotted to us.

10 First of all, that these formats are a critical as-11 pect of this case. They demonstrate, first, that one cannot 12 draw a strict dichotomy between entertainment and so-called 13 non-entertainment informational features of radio service.

14 Secondly, they also demonstrate that the FCC's 15 administrative nightmare argument as a justification for its 16 absolute refusal to look at any format change is suspect.

17 And finally, it also demonstrates the importance of 18 the public rights and concerns which the Commission has decided 19 must be met by economic forces or be totally ignored. In the 20 context of the third point we'd like to discuss the Commis-21 sion's 11th hour suggestion that these formats were not covered 22 by the opinion under review.

23 With respect to the totality of program service on 24 radio, we think that the industry's and the FCC's attempt to 25 minimize the importance of the issue of format diversity by

1 characterizing it as simply entertainment not only ignores
2 this Court's decision in Red Lion but also ignores the particu-
3 larly critical role of foreign language and special ethnic 4 formats in fostering and preserving cultural heritage as 5 well as promoting assimilation in our country.

6 QUESTION: Ms. Cooke, let me ask you this. Suppose 7 someone opens a theater in a particular community, large com-8 munity of New York or San Antonio where most of the people are 9 Spanish-speaking; at least, that's their primary language;
10 a theater, or a movie theater, or a bookstore. And the odds 11 are they're not going to do very well if they don't put on 12 Spanish language movies or sell Spanish language books. Is 13 that reasonable?

14 MS. COOKE: That may be true.

15 QUESTION: Now, well, isn't that likely to be true as 16 a matter of economics? If you aren't selling what the pur-17 chasers want in that neighborhood, they're not likely to give 18 you much business. Now, how far do you carry that when you 19 move out of the private theater, which can put on whatever 20 kind of movies it wants, in any language it wants, Bulgarian, 21 or Yugoslav, whether they have customers or not, to a radio station, 22 and how do you make the distinction? How much response must 23 the Commission require?

24 MS. COOKE: We start from the premise in the particu-
25 lar hypothetical that you've posited, that the aura of First

1 Amendment rights in the broadcasting spectrum is somewhat dif-
2 ferent, that this Court has always differentiated between the 3 kinds of protections involved in other First Amendment areas,
4 print and so forth, and broadcast. And that, in broadcast, 5 because of the scarcity arguments and also because of the pub-
6 lic ownership, and because of the licensing scheme which de-7 clares that in order -- because all cannot speak, then some 8 mechanism must be available so that many thoughts can be heard, 9 that the order is different.

10 But even in the context of format the Commission has 11 always said that it is not the tastes of individual persons 12 that is to be acknowledged necessarily, but that substantial 13 segments of a population must be addressed. Where in broadcast 14 a radio situation will come in and the segment of the community 15 that is unserved is 20 or 30 percent, or whatever particular 16 standard the Commission devises, then that is a substantial 17 segment, and as part of the public owners of the air waves, it is 18 a consideration in terms of diversity. And so that the order 19 and the concerns are different in the theater and the private 20 enterprise system, and that when we are dealing with a li-21 censing system in which there is not ownership and property 22 rights.

23 I think the other question that makes the broadcast 24 situation vastly different is that in non-entertainment situa-25 tions the Commission has neglected to emphasize that the

1 non-entertainment informational programming is selective and 2 focuses on a particular group, so that one does not have 3 Spanish informational services in the context of a black radio 4 format, and the two welded together. This is important because 5 in the specialized format situation of foreign language pro-
6 gramming, the loss of the format may equal the loss of effec-
7 tive broadcast services. How can a licensee address community 8 needs or problems or services if a large segment of the commun-9 ity cannot effectively communicate in that language.

10 Secondly, we just raise very briefly -- Ms. Glen 11 has referred to the FCC's administrative nightmare argument, 12 but it becomes even more suspect when it is applied to respon-
13 dent's concerns. Clearly there is no difficulty in distin-14 guishing a Spanish language station from other stations, or 15 determining whether or not that format is unique, or whether 16 or not there is in fact a substantial population that will be 17 unserved, not simply underserved by the loss of that format.

18 QUESTION: Do you suggest that the community, a 19 Spanish-speaking community, has a constitutional right to have 20 broadcasts in Spanish?

21 MS. COOKE: I would not say that it is a constitu-22 tional right except in the sense that we need not look that 23 far; we can look at the Act itself, which provides in terms of 24 allocations that the duty of the Commission is to establish 25 primary service to all people of the United States. I think

1 there does become a question in terms of service when people 2 cannot understand that, and so that is one of the factors that 3 the Commission has to raise in terms of making decisions about 4 allocations.

5 And in fact, this Court, in Allentown, the FCC v.
6 Allentown, took on the same kind of considerations. It did so 7 in the context of geographic communities rather than ethnic 8 communities, and what we're suggesting to the Court is that 9 same kind of reasoning which is premised in the statutory 10 system, and the allocations policy should also be one of the 11 factors that the Commission consider under the public interest 12 standard.

13 One example we might use is that the Commission uses 14 it, and as Ms. Glen has pointed out to the Court, when the 15 public comes in the values may shift. For example, there is 16 present in the record before the Court a situation in Alice, 17 Texas, in which a licensee came in to the Commission at a 18 comparative stage and said, I will do Spanish programming to 19 a community that is comprised of 65 percent Mexican Americans
20 and are clearly bilingual. On the basis of that it was pre-21 ferred and it got the station and three months later terminated 22 that format and went to Top 40.

23 Under the Commission's policy statement which sug-24 gests that the Commission make an inquiry into diversity and 25 concern at initial licensing, this particular format change,

1 although it might have been perfectly viable financially, is 2 precluded from inquiry and precluded from challenge under this 3 particular statement.

4 Finally, what we would like to emphasize is that the 5 Commission --

6 QUESTION: Then you are saying there is some obliga-7 tion on the part of the broadcaster to put the broadcasts in 8 the language of a substantial number of listeners?

9 MS. COOKE: The Commission itself has suggested this.
10 One of them --

11 QUESTION: But not as a constitutional matter, you 12 say?

13 MS. COOKE: But as a question of the statutory obli-14 gation, yes. I think there are constitutional implications of 15 a decision that says that the reality of First Amendment rights 16 is such that we have large segments of our community whose 17 First Amendment rights can only be addressed in the context
18 of their particular language. I think that there are implica-
19 tions there. But the Commission can look at the statute.

20 QUESTION: This particular distinction says, we're 21 doing very well without any Spanish language broadcasts and if 22 someone else can have Spanish language broadcasts, this is the 23 United States and the language of this country is American.
24 And we aren't going to broadcast anything in Spanish, even if 25 we lose some business, as long as we're doing pretty well

1 without it.

2 MS. COOKE: I would suggest we're only talking about 3 something that has existed, not an affirmative obligation of 4 a licensee to come in and have to meet needs. The Commission 5 has suggested in some ways that -- and, in fact, this is one 6 of the tenets of allocation and regulation, that when a licen-
7 see comes in, the licensee makes certain promises on the basis
8 of which the Commission can find a grant of that particular li-9 cense is in the public interest. And then that licensee runs 10 on the record.

11 Here we would have a situation in which a licensee 12 came in and made the initial determination that there were 13 certain needs, exercised their particular editorial discretion, 14 and then the Commission must state, to make certain changes, 15 you have to have them grounded in public interest considera-
16 tions, if unmet needs of substantial segments of the population 17 will not be served.

18 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well. Mr. Saylor?

19 ORAL ARGUMENT OF DAVID J. SAYLOR, ESQ., ON BEHALF OF 20 THE PETITIONERS FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION, ET AL.

21 -- REBUTTAL

22 MR. SAYLOR: I have several brief points to make in 23 rebuttal. First of all, I believe Ms. Glen characterized this 24 case as one involving procedures. That's directly contrary to 25 the way we view this case. This is a case of substance.

1 The Commission engaged in substantive rulemaking or 2 policy making in an attempt to determine what the public in-3 terest standard in the statute requires; a question of sub-4 stance.

5 QUESTION: Mr. Saylor, right on that point, do you
6 share the view of Mr. Dyk that the policy judgment was made
7 by Congress rather than by the Commission, and that the Com-
8 mission was required to take this position by the statute?

9 MR. SAYLOR: The Commission's view as expressed in 10 its policy statement is that the statute does not require 11 regulation, but the position we've taken in our brief, and the 12 position the Commission took in its policy statement, was that 13 while there are statements of the Congress regarding the 14 issue in the course of hearings, there then is no need to reach a 15 determination as to whether or not the statute would bar the 16 Commission from engaging in the type of regulation the Court
17 of Appeals imposed. In other words --

18 QUESTION: So you take no position on whether the 19 Court of Appeals position would be consistent with the statute?

20 MR. SAYLOR: We think it's a difficult statutory 21 question but we don't think this Court is required to decide 22 that issue, if you are inclined to rule our way. This is a 23 case of discretion and the Commission has interpreted the pub-
24 lic interest standard in a way consistent with the statute.

25 QUESTION: May I ask one other question? In a free

1 market you can rely on Adam Smith's principles to achieve your 2 diversity; the entertainment market generally. And if a per-3 son wants to make a foolish investment he is free to do so
4 and no harm's done. But suppose you have a case with a limited 5 number of radio stations that some very wealthy eccentric per-6 son decided to buy a station and broadcast nothing except some 7 program nobody was really interested in, maybe Russian folk 8 music or something, that nobody wanted to hear, and you could 9 demonstrate that the audience was practically zero. Would the 10 Commission have the authority to take the license, to decline 11 to renew the license at the end of the three-year period under 12 the policy statement?

13 MR. SAYLOR: Well, I don't think the policy state-14 ment is addressed to that type of a question. There is a very 15 difficult --

16 QUESTION: No, but it does take the position you won't 17 look at program content at all --

18 QUESTION: The policy statement, and this Court's de-19 cisions, only go to a change in programming, don't they?

20 MR. SAYLOR: Yes. I can't conceive of the market-21 place ever working in that way so that someone wanted to waste
22 his money. But if it should happen, I think perhaps the cor-23 rect answer is, is the Commission would allow the licensee to 24 retain that license.

25 QUESTION: People do publish books that don't make

1 them any money, just because they want to vindicate their egos, 2 and have some special interest in it. That could happen in the 3 radio field.

4 MR. SAYLOR: I can conceive of people having that 5 inclination but it's an expensive proposition and I think most 6 unlikely. If there is a frequency being wasted in that way, 7 I am sure someone will come in and offer to pay a very substan-8 tial amount of money to obtain that license, and I doubt that 9 that --

10 QUESTION: Even in that case, you'd let the free mar-11 ket make its decision?

12 MR. SAYLOR: I would. I believe the Commission would 13 allow the marketplace to function. As I said earlier, this is 14 a case involving the meaning of the public interest standard.
15 This is much like the newspaper-broadcast cross-ownership case 16 where the Commission was attempting to determine what 17 the public interest requires. There there was a conflict, 18 or arguable conflict, between diversification in ownership 19 which is calculated to lead to diversity of ideas on the one 20 hand, versus the concept of best practicable service and the 21 concept of local ownership, and how desirable local ownership 22 was.

23 The Commission concluded that despite these cross-24 ownership situations most of them should be grandfathered, be-25 cause to push the goal of diversity too far would undercut some

1 of the other statutory objectives inherent in the public in-2 terest standard. We view this case in much the same way.
3 However, here there is an additional twist, and that is, even 4 pursuing diversity, the Commission reached the view that there 5 are two types of diversity competing here: diversity between 6 format types and diversity within format types. The Commission 7 simply does not have the capacity and thinks it would be inap-
8 propriate to attempt to choose between one type of diversity 9 and another.

10 We think, on the other hand, that the Court of 11 Appeals did make that choice and in doing so acted in contra-12 vention of a standard that this Court long ago announced in 13 the case of NBC v. United States, but it is not for the Court
14 of Appeals to say whether the public interest will be furthered 15 or retarded; that's the Commission's job.

16 I have one other quick point to make that, with 17 respect to Spanish language programming, the Commission's view 18 is that the entertainment elements of that programming are sub-19 ject to this policy statement but that the informational pro-
20 gramming and the licensee's, or the applicant's responsibility 21 to ascertain the problems, needs, and interests of the commu-22 nity and to respond to that with informational programming is 23 something different, which the Commission didn't face in this 24 policy statement and the Court need not decide.

25 QUESTION: Mr. Saylor, with reference to the Zenith

1 Radio Corporation matter before the FCC referred to on the 2 petition for cert., Appendix 134a, in which the Commission re-
3 cites that in the Zenith Radio Case it had taken a hard look 4 position?

5 MR. SAYLOR: Yes. That, now, was --

6 QUESTION: That was in 1973, I take it?

7 MR. SAYLOR: Yes.

8 QUESTION: And it was after the Voice of Atlanta case.

9 MR. SAYLOR: It was after that case.

10 QUESTION: Was that hard look position adopted under 11 the pressure of the Voice of Atlanta, or had it always been 12 the Commission's view?

13 MR. SAYLOR: It was adopted under the pressure from 14 the Court of Appeals in the Atlanta case and the Progressive 15 Rock case, and another case which has been cited in the --

16 QUESTION: And in the Voice of Atlanta case the 17 Commission appeared before the Court of Appeals asserting that 18 it should let the market --

19 MR. SAYLOR: Absolutely. And that has been the 20 Commission's position throughout, but the Court and the Com-21 mission -- the Commission was attempting to in some way comply 22 with the Court's mandate.

23 QUESTION: So the six-commissioner statement in the --

24 MR. SAYLOR: It's an aberration.

25 QUESTION: I'm not sure it was an aberration.

1 It was no more of an aberration than the hard look Zenith
2 Radio position. It was just that it was at a -- well, that 3 six-commissioner --

4 MR. SAYLOR: That is the same --

5 QUESTION: -- statement was in 197--

6 MR. SAYLOR: That was in the Zenith case.

7 QUESTION: Exactly.

8 MR. SAYLOR: That was the concurring statement, con-
9 curred in by six commissioners in WEFM.

10 QUESTION: So, you say it was under pressure of the 11 Court of Appeals position?

12 MR. SAYLOR: Well, one has to view it in that con-13 text.

14 QUESTION: That isn't what the commissioners said, 15 is it?

16 MR. SAYLOR: Not precisely. But I think the Court of 17 Appeals in this case concluded that the Commission had never 18 changed its mind on the basic proposition that it's a matter 19 of licensee discretion.

20 QUESTION: In any event, your submission is that 21 prior to the Voice of Atlanta case the Commission's position 22 was exactly what it is now?

23 MR. SAYLOR: Yes. Thank you.

24 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Dyk?

25 MR. DYK: Yes, thank you, Mr. Chief Justice.

1 this policy ORAL ARGUMENT OF TIMOTHY B. DYK, ESQ.,
2 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS AMERICAN BROADCASTING COS., INC., 3 ET AL., & NATL. ASSN. OF BROADCASTERS ET AL. -- REBUTTAL

4 MR. DYK: Just very briefly, in response to 5 Mr. Justice White, the Court of Appeals in the course of this 6 decade of decisions was extraordinarily critical of the Commis-7 sion for continually resisting its policy. The Court of 8 Appeals --

9 QUESTION: Well, like it is in this case?

10 MR. DYK: Yes. And the Court of Appeals did not sug-
11 gest in any of these opinions that the Commission had departed
12 from an earlier policy. What the Court of Appeals was sug-
13 gesting is that the Commission consistently declined to adopt 14 the policy --

15 QUESTION: Had been consistently wrong?

16 MR. DYK: -- and been consistently wrong. And that's 17 the issue in this case.

18 QUESTION: Well, why didn't the FCC petition for 19 certiorari for some of those earlier decisions?

20 MR. DYK: Well, I couldn't answer that, but I think 21 the WEFM case, for example, did not raise the statutory issues 22 which we've been urging, or the constitutional issues, as 23 Judge Bazelon, I think, had noted in his separate opinion in 24 WEFM. So I think it is quite likely that one of the reasons 25 that the Commission went back and considered these issues in

1 this policy proceeding which is under review was because some 2 of the issues hadn't been decided by the Commission and hadn't 3 been presented to the Court of Appeals in that earlier case.

4 If there's nothing else, thank you.

5 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, counsel. The 6 case is submitted.

7 (Whereupon, at 11:54 a.m., the case in the above-8 entitled matter was submitted.)
