MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments next in H. A. Artists and Associates v. Actors' Equity.

Mr. Breindel, you may proceed whenever you are ready.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF HOWARD BREINDEL, ESQ.,

ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS

MR. BREINDEL: Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the Court:

This is a case which involves the very difficult and complex interplay of our federal antitrust laws which promote competition, our federal labor laws which tend to stifle competition, and a labor exemption which attempts to accommodate these conflicting laws.

There is very little dispute over the basic operative facts here. Equity is a union whose 23,000 members include virtually every actor who is allowed to appear on the legitimate stage in the United States. Petitioners are theatrical agents located in New York City. They represent actors who belong to Actors' Equity. Although they are independent contractors, the petitioners as agents perform services and in effect work for the actors who are members of Actor's Equity. All of the petitioners are regulated and licensed as employment agencies under New York State law. All are members of NATR, the National Association of Talent

1 Representatives, a trade association of theatrical agents lo-
2 cated in New York City.

3 TARA is a similar trade association of theatrical 4 agents located in New York City. The members of TARA compete 5 with the members of NATR. Most of the petitioners are very 6 small agencies. They employ no more than two or three 7 agents and they very rarely represent stars.

8 TARA's members, on the other hand, include such 9 industry giants as William Morris, and International Creative 10 Management, each of whom alone employ approximately 200
11 agents. They represent many, many stars and they very rarely 12 get a job for one of their clients at a scale or minimum 13 wage.

14 For the last 50 years or so Equity's franchising 15 rules have been in effect. The rules were last revised in 16 October, 1977, pursuant to an agreement between Equity and 17 TARA. Equity and TARA's franchise rules provide that Equity 18 members cannot deal with non-franchised agents, they provide 19 the maximum commissions which Equity agents may charge, they 20 provide the terms and conditions under which agents may charge 21 commissions.

22 Agents may not charge commissions on a scale job, 23 they may not charge commission on a chorus job, and they may 24 not charge commission on rehearsal pay.

25 QUESTION: I gather then that if an agent all year

1 long never got a job for any of his clients above scale he 2 wouldn't make anything?

3 MR. BREINDEL: That's correct, Your Honor.

4 QUESTION: And that isn't very likely, though, is 5 it?

6 MR. BREINDEL: It isn't very likely because most 7 of the agents will also place actors in non-Equity jobs, but 8 there are many petitioners who place a lot of actors in 9 scale jobs; scale jobs predominate over non-scale jobs.

10 QUESTION: So, why will agents do that for nothing?

11 MR. BREINDEL: Well, they will do it for nothing 12 because the actors are their clients, they want to accommodate 13 these actors, they hope that maybe some day an actor will be-14 come a star. But the basic reason they do it for nothing is --

15 QUESTION: And then he'll be paid a good deal above 16 scale and he could make up to ten percent?

17 MR. BREINDEL: If he stays with him. But the basic 18 reason why agents will get actors scale jobs is they don't 19 set out to get an actor a scale job. They go to the producer
20 and they say, I have a terrific actor for you. The producer 21 says, all right, but I'm only going to pay you scale. Well, 22 the agent has now gotten the producer interested; he's going 23 to allow his client, the actor, to have the opportunity to 24 work for scale, even though the agent in his own self interest 25 tried to get the actor above scale.

1 The franchise rules, in addition, provide that all 2 disputes between an actor and an agent must be submitted to 3 arbitration. They provide that the union may discipline the 4 agents. This discipline can include fines of up to $5,000, 5 forfeiture of commissions, and revocation of the franchise.
6 In addition, agents must --

7 QUESTION: Do producers ever pay agents?

8 MR. BREINDEL: It's strictly prohibited.

9 QUESTION: By whom?

10 MR. BREINDEL: By the Equity's --

11 QUESTION: Under state law or by -- or both?

12 MR. BREINDEL: Well, I believe it's prohibited by 13 Equity's rules and by-laws.

14 QUESTION: That's because it necessarily would fol-15 low that if they weren't paying the agent maybe they would 16 have paid the actor?

17 MR. BREINDEL: Well, I think the basic reason is there's 18 no need for producers to pay agents. The agents are knocking 19 on the producers' door.

20 Equity has collective bargaining agreements with 21 all theatrical producers who employ Equity members. Thus it 22 has collective bargaining agreements with nine separate groups 23 of producers. It's probably best known for its collective 24 bargaining agreement with the League of New York Theaters, 25 which governs wages and working conditions on Broadway.

1 These agreements are all negotiated by Equity and 2 the producers. The agents do not participate in the nego-
3 tiations for the collective bargaining agreements. An actor
4 is free to negotiate a wage above the minimum set forth in a 5 collective bargaining agreement, but neither the actor, the 6 producer, nor the agent may diminish the minimum or scale wage 7 set forth in an Equity collective bargaining agreement.

8 Under Equity's system the Equity producer directly 9 pays the Equity actor. In addition the Equity producer must 10 post a bond guaranteeing payment of scale wages to union 11 members.

12 The primary legal issue before us today is the 13 applicability of the statutory labor exemption to Equity's 14 franchising system. If the agent is a part of the union's 15 labor group, the statutory exemption is applicable. Under 16 Carroll independent --

17 QUESTION: Mr. Breindel, before you get to that, 18 am I correct in thinking the Court of Appeals made no finding 19 as to whether this conduct was a violation of the Antitrust 20 Act?

21 MR. BREINDEL: That's correct.

22 QUESTION: It simply went directly to the labor 23 exemption without determining whether the conduct would be 24 actionable under the antitrust laws?

25 MR. BREINDEL: That is correct. Both the Court of

1 Appeals and the district court reached only one issue and 2 that was the applicability of the statutory labor exemption.
3 Under Carroll, independent contractors such as the theatrical 4 agents in this case are part of the union's labor group if 5 there is present a job or wage competition with some other 6 economic interrelationship affecting a legitimate union
7 interest between the union member and the actor.

8 Prior to this Court's decision in Carroll, no court 9 had ever held that a non-union member was a part of a labor 10 group unless the non-union member was in a wage or job com-11 petition, or performed basically the same function as the 12 union member. In Carroll, for the first time, the Court held 13 that a non-union member who was not in a wage or job competi-
14 tion could be part of the union's labor group.

15 QUESTION: Could you prevail without our overruling 16 Carroll?

17 MR. BREINDEL: I believe so. It's our position
18 that Carroll is a very unique decision which should be con-19 fined to peculiar facts. In Carroll the Supreme Court was 20 dealing with the AFM's activities in the unusual one-shot 21 club date music field. The primary purpose of unions is the 22 negotiation of collective bargaining agreements. Neverthe-23 less, in the club date music industry there are no collective 24 bargaining agreements. To the best of our knowledge, and 25 the unions haven't cited any exceptions, the club date music

1 industry is the only industry where you have unions and no 2 collective bargaining agreements. This is apparently due to 3 the very diverse nature of the club date music employers.
4 These employers generally hire bands for non-commercial pur-
5 poses sporadically, often once in a lifetime.

6 A typical club date employer is the father of the 7 bride who hires a band for his daughter's wedding. It's ob-
8 viously impossible for the AFM to negotiate a collective bar-9 gaining agreement with a group as diverse as fathers of the 10 bride. Because there was no collective bargaining agreement
11 in Carroll, the union in order to insure that its musician 12 members got scale wages unilaterally mandated scale wages.

13 Now, in Carroll, in order to provide that agents 14 would then not book jobs for union members at less than scale, 15 they had to regulate the agents. In Carroll the club date
16 employers, the fathers of the bride, did not pay the union 17 member musicians directly. This is unlike the situation of 18 Equity where Equity producers directly pay Equity actors.

19 In Carroll the club date employers paid the orches-
20 tra leaders who often function also as booking agents.

21 Accordingly, if the agents were not regulated by the union, 22 there was no assurance that the agents would pay scale or any 23 other wages over to the union members. The Carroll Court 24 predicated its regulation of agents upon two very specific 25 findings of fact, and I quote them: "The booking agent

1 regulations were adopted because of experience that (1) many 2 booking agents charged exorbitant fees to members, and (2)
3 booked engagements for musicians at wages which were below 4 union scale." This is from page 113.

5 Here, as I previously noted, it is impossible for a 6 theatrical agent to book a job for an Equity member at less 7 than scale because of Equity's collective bargaining agree-8 ment. Thus, Equity has not even attempted to prove that since 9 the advent of collective bargaining agreements any theatrical 10 agent ever booked a job for any Equity member at less than 11 scale.

12 QUESTION: But if you're right, it would mean that 13 the agent would be free and the actor would be free to let 14 the agent collect, say, ten percent of a scale wage as a com-15 mission?

16 MR. BREINDEL: That's correct.

17 QUESTION: And that means that the actor is getting 18 less than scale?

19 MR. BREINDEL: I don't believe --

20 QUESTION: He's netting less than scale?

21 MR. BREINDEL: Well, he may be -- one way of looking 22 at it, he's netting less than scale, but what happens is, 23 an Equity producer pays an actor. The actor cashes his check.
24 He has disposable income. He can pay his landlord, he can pay 25 his doctor, he can pay his grocer, and he may even pay his

1 agent, but it's coming out of disposable income. Now --

2 QUESTION: And he can't pay him more than ten per-3 cent, anyway?

4 MR. BREINDEL: Not under New York State law which 5 governs each and every petitioner in this action.

6 The crux of Carroll, I think, is illustrated by the 7 AFM's licensing agreement in Carroll. The AFM's licensing
8 agreement in Carroll restricted booking agents from booking 9 jobs for union members at less than scale wage. If there was 10 a collective bargaining agreement in Carroll, as we have in 11 Equity, that provision in that licensing regulation would be 12 totally useless, and unnecessary. With respect to the Carroll 13 finding of fact that agents charged exorbitant commissions, 14 I first note that in Carroll the AFM permitted the booking 15 agents to charge a commission of 15 percent. Now, there's 16 no evidence that any theatrical agent ever charged an actor 17 a commission of 15 percent, nor is there any evidence that a 18 theatrical agent ever charged an actor a commission in excess 19 of ten percent.

20 Unlike the situation in Carroll, our agents are 21 all regulated and licensed as employment agencies by New York 22 State law, and as such they cannot charge more than ten per-23 cent. I must stress that in Carroll --

24 QUESTION: Is it rather they are licensed under the 25 general New York law of regulating kickbacks by employment

1 agencies?

2 MR. BREINDEL: No, Your Honor, there is a specific 3 law which licenses employment agencies which has very speci-4 fic provisions dealing with the actual employment agencies.

5 QUESTION: Well, is it a type of law such as that 6 that was originally invalidated in the '20s by the case of 7 Ribnik v. McBride --

8 MR. BREINDEL: Yes, it is.

9 QUESTION: And then later, of that case being later
10 overruled by the Olson case?

11 MR. BREINDEL: It is, precisely. In Carroll, again,
12 I must stress that the agency regulations were predicated 13 solely upon the effect that agents had upon the union member 14 scale wages. Contrary to the union's arguments here, the 15 Carroll court did not in any way rely on such arguments as 16 agents control access to employment, or that it's necessary
17 to regulate agents' commissions to eliminate wage competition 18 between union members. The unions offer three reasons to 19 justify their pervasive and exhaustive regulation of agents.
20 They say agents control access to employment, they say that 21 the prohibition of commissions on scale jobs is necessary to 22 prevent invasion of union-negotiated minimums, and they say 23 that the regulation of agents' commissions is necessary some-24 how to eliminate wage competition among union members.

25 Taken separately or collectively, these reasons do

1 not justify Equity's exhaustive regulation of agents. Assum-
2 ing that it is the agents rather than the producers who con-
3 trol access to employment and recognizing that agents admit-4 tedly have greater access to most employers than do most 5 actors, that circumstance just does not justify the existence
6 of Equity's pervasive franchising system because it's not 7 intimately related to wages, hours, or working conditions, 8 which are the subject of numerous collective bargaining agree-9 ments. The unions have not cited any case in which it was 10 held that a union is justified in imposing restraints of 11 trade upon independent business persons simply because those 12 business persons have greater access to potential employers 13 than union members.

14 Virtually every employment agency exists in business 15 because that employment agency has greater access to an 16 employer than the applicant does. This is true for employ-17 ment agencies who place dishwashers, who place corporate 18 executives, who place lawyers. Why should a union member be 19 treated any differently than any applicant who gets a job from 20 an employment agency which is licensed and regulated?

21 Finally, in this connection, I would note, it's the 22 unions who control access to the employment of agents. The 23 regulation of agents' commissions is not necessary to prevent 24 wage competition among union members. Now, there was no such 25 argument made by the unions below and there was no such

1 finding by the district court. Nevertheless, the Court of 2 Appeals here held that the union, Equity, could not eliminate 3 wage competition without regulating agents' commissions.
4 There was absolutely no finding of fact in the record to jus-
5 tify that conclusion. There was no evidence offered that 6 if you struck the franchising system it would result in actors
7 competing with each other for agents' services. And there 8 was no such evidence offered because Equity never made that 9 argument.

10 QUESTION: Well, what if there were proof like 11 that?

12 MR. BREINDEL: If there was proof like that, it 13 might support the Court of Appeals's conclusion that it's 14 necessary to regulate agents' commissions.

15 QUESTION: You mean its conclusion that this is 16 within the exemption?

17 MR. BREINDEL: Yes.

18 QUESTION: You mean, if there was evidence that 19 there was competition among actors in the sense that one, some 20 actors would offer agents five percent, and others eight per-21 cent, and others nine percent, and others ten percent? Is 22 that the kind of competition you're talking about?

23 MR. BREINDEL: Well, I think that's the kind of 24 competition the union has been talking about.

25 QUESTION: Well, suppose there was proof that that

1 would happen, absent this system? Would that put this system
2 within the exemption?

3 MR. BREINDEL: I would say, no, Your Honor, because 4 the elimination of wage competition --

5 QUESTION: Well, then, you should argue that even 6 if the Court of Appeals was correct, their conclusion doesn't 7 follow?

8 MR. BREINDEL: That is correct, Your Honor, and it 9 doesn't follow, because the elimination of wage competition, 10 which is a traditional union labor objective, is the kind of 11 elimination of competition between union members involved in 12 dealing with employers, not union members competing for the 13 services of people such as actors who perform services in 14 turn for the union members. The Court of Appeals did not con-15 sider what would happen if the franchising system was struck.
16 I submit that what would happen would be, actors would contin-17 ue to pay agents their traditional ten percent commission per-18 mitted by New York State law. If, despite the lack of evi-
19 dence, the actors then wanted to compete for an agent's 20 services, they would have to compete by offering the agent a 21 commission in excess of ten percent, which is simply not 22 allowable under New York State law.

23 QUESTION: No, were offering them ten percent when 24 they get paid according to scale.

25 MR. BREINDEL: That's correct.

1 QUESTION: And isn't it almost inevitable that that 2 would happen, that the agents would begin collecting commis-
3 sions when their clients were being paid scale?

4 MR. BREINDEL: I don't know if it's inevitable,
5 Your Honor, for this reason. The agents --

6 QUESTION: That's what you're complaining about,
7 so I assume --

8 MR. BREINDEL: Well, the agents are now obtaining 9 scale jobs for union members without any commission whatso-10 ever, so it's reasonable to assume that they might, if the 11 prohibition was struck, they might obtain scale jobs for 12 actors at the commission less than ten percent. If they can 13 do it for nothing, it stands to reason that they can do it 14 for something less than ten percent.

15 QUESTION: Don't we have to presume that if you pre-16 vail some, at least some agents will start collecting some 17 commissions when their clients work for scale?

18 MR. BREINDEL: I think that's a fair presumption.

19 QUESTION: It seems to me it's inevitable. Now, if 20 that happens, it seems to me there's going to be more money 21 flowing into agents' pockets and more competition for these 22 jobs. Isn't that almost inevitable?

23 MR. BREINDEL: Well, I think there would be more 24 monies flowing into agents' pockets, but it will soon --

25 QUESTION: There may be more agents, too.

1 MR. BREINDEL: It will simply be money that agents
2 have earned.

3 QUESTION: Well, I'm not saying it's inequitable.
4 I'm not arguing that, but it seems to me you are asking that 5 the market be opened up. That's the theory of your case.

6 MR. BREINDEL: Well, let's turn to a very practi-
7 cal --

8 QUESTION: It means you are asking for more com-9 petition. Now, whether --

10 MR. BREINDEL: Yes. Yes. But let's turn to a 11 very practical example, the New York chapter of Screen Actors' 12 Guild, SAG. That particular organization permits its 13 members to pay commissions on scale jobs to agents. Now SAG
14 has submitted a brief to this Court. Nowhere in this brief
15 does SAG contend that its New York actors who pay commissions
16 on scale jobs have as a result not received the minimum wage
17 set forth in SAG's collective bargaining agreements. Nowhere 18 does SAG contend that its members who pay commissions on 19 scale jobs have engaged in wage competition. Nowhere does 20 SAG contend that its New York members --

21 QUESTION: But they do, they might engage in compe-22 tition for agents' services by offering higher commissions.

23 MR. BREINDEL: They might, but there's no evidence 24 of that on this record.

25 QUESTION: Does the amicus brief suggest that actors

1 offer different amounts to agents or not?

2 MR. BREINDEL: That's not only suggested, it states
3 it states it, but without any record cite.

4 QUESTION: Well, of course, you are the plaintiff 5 in the case and presumably, unless you can point to some 6 federal law that the defendants have violated, you ought not 7 to prevail, and even if you win here on the labor exemption
8 argument, the case still would have to go back to find out 9 whether the practices were a violation of the antitrust laws.

10 MR. BREINDEL: That's a possibility --

11 QUESTION: But the courts below just didn't let you 12 get to the merits of the case.

13 MR. BREINDEL: That is correct.

14 QUESTION: They have upheld the affirmative defense 15 of the defendant.

16 MR. BREINDEL: Exactly.

17 QUESTION: And therefore, the merits you haven't 18 reached and --

19 MR. BREINDEL: The merits technically are whether 20 or not the union's franchising agreement is a violation of 21 the Sherman Act, was not decided by either court, although it 22 was fully argued.

23 QUESTION: Because the courts below held that 24 the defendants are exempt from the Sherman Act.

25 MR. BREINDEL: Correct. Correct. Let me, if I

1 might, turn for a moment to the franchise fees. There is a 2 deafening silence from the unions with respect to their lack 3 of efforts to justify the imposition of franchise fees upon 4 agents. The only thing said is an incorrect statement by 5 Equity that there was a factual finding in the court below
6 that Equity's franchise fees were cost justified. Now, 7 there's nothing in Equity's by-laws, in its constitution, or 8 in its agreement with TARA, which requires Equity to limit 9 its franchise fees to the cost it incurs in administering 10 the franchise system.

11 Now, apart from this, the issue before this 12 Court is not, are Equity's franchise fees cost 13 justified? The issue is, should Carroll be extended to 14 permit Equity to extract franchise fees from agents regard-15 less of the amount?

16 The justifications given by the union for regulat-
17 ing agents and agents' commissions do not give any support 18 whatsoever to the extraction of franchise fees from agents.
19 If the union did not collect another dime in franchise fees 20 from agents, this would not interfere with union wage scales, 21 it would not interfere with the union goal of eliminating 22 wage competition, it would not interfere with the union's 23 collective bargaining agreement --

24 QUESTION: Anf, I take it that unless someone -- if 25 somebody says I'll live up to all your rules for the franchise

1 fee, he is then out of business? I mean, he cannot repre-
2 sent Equity's members? Exactly. There's not, I don't believe

3 MR. BREINDEL: Exactly. I don't believe 4 there's any dispute over that. That's one of 5 the prices agents must pay. Agents must pay.

6 QUESTION: And in which event your argument for a 7 violation of the antitrust laws would be what?

8 MR. BREINDEL: The argument for --

9 QUESTION: Say you win. How would you argue that 10 as in violation of the antitrust laws?

11 MR. BREINDEL: Well, I would say the union has a 12 legal monopoly over the labor market of its union members.
13 But the cases are clear that when you abuse and misuse a legal 14 monopoly such as here, by extracting franchise fees from 15 independent businesspersons, you've abused and misused your 16 monopoly power. I think that's clear under such cases as 17 United States v. Griffith and the Ottertail case. It's an 18 improper extension of a legal monopoly.

19 QUESTION: So you think you have to go at it on the 20 monopoly side rather than on any conspiracy or agreement 21 side?

22 MR. BREINDEL: Well, in addition to that, Your 23 Honor, I think the franchise agreement between Equity and 24 TARA, which mandates that all franchised agents pay franchise 25 fees is that type of conspiracy or agreement which we are alleging.

1 QUESTION: And is it part of the agreement between 2 -- is it a part of the franchise agreement between Equity and 3 the franchised agents --

4 MR. BREINDEL: Yes.

5 QUESTION: That they won't deal with others?

6 MR. BREINDEL: Absolutely. And there was a finding 7 of fact by Judge Motley who found as a matter of fact, 8 that TARA, the franchised agents who are parties to the fran-9 chise agreement with Equity specifically requested Equity to 10 enforce that rule. But in connection with --

11 QUESTION: So this is an agreement between, you say, 12 between independent businessmen and the union not to deal 13 with other businessmen?

14 MR. BREINDEL: Yes. There's no dispute over that 15 fact. If you find that agents are part of the non-labor group, 16 then the franchise agreement which is between Equity and TARA, 17 a group of agents --

18 QUESTION: Do you see any parallel here at all 19 with the union shop structure in the labor field generally?

20 MR. BREINDEL: Not really. The union shop structure 21 pertains to a very legitimate traditional union labor objec-
22 tive. That is, getting and keeping more jobs for union mem-23 bers. The franchise agreement which, for example, fixes the 24 prices and commissions that agents may charge, simply goes 25 totally beyond that. The imposition of franchise fees

1 similarly does.

2 QUESTION: How much are those fees?

3 MR. BREINDEL: For Equity the franchise fee, the 4 initial franchise fee, is $200. And then the annual fran-5 chise fee for an agent is $60 and for a subagent $40.

6 QUESTION: Well, that's not very much these days.

7 MR. BREINDEL: It's not very much, but for these 8 petitioners' agents, who don't make very much, it seems to 9 be a lot to them. Moreover, there are other unions such 10 as SAG which charge thousands of dollars in franchise fees.

11 QUESTION: Such as what?

12 MR. BREINDEL: Thousands of dollars.

13 QUESTION: What union was that?

14 MR. BREINDEL: Screen Actors Guild.

15 QUESTION: I see.

16 MR. BREINDEL: SAG. Now, what will happen here --

17 QUESTION: But they don't -- that's a different 18 arrangement, isn't it?

19 MR. BREINDEL: It's basically the same. That's why
20 SAG has submitted an amicus curiae brief, because their ar-
21 rangement is basically the same as Equity.

22 QUESTION: They permit, they allow commissions for 23 scale wages?

24 MR. BREINDEL: The New York chapter, not the Los 25 Angeles chapter, or the Chicago chapter.

1 QUESTION: The New York chapter allows commissions
2 on scale jobs?

3 MR. BREINDEL: Right. Correct. But not any of the 4 other chapters of SAG. What's going to happen here if the 5 franchising system is illegal? The primary purpose for which 6 Equity exists, to negotiate collective bargaining agreements, 7 will remain unchanged. Equity is free to bargain collective-8 ly, and its collective bargaining agreements will not be 9 affected in any way. The business of finding employment for 10 actors, I submit, will continue unchanged except that agents 11 will now be free to compete with each other and will be free 12 of union domination. In this connection let me point out that 13 there are personal managers who represent Equity actors.
14 These personal managers charge a commission. That commission 15 is not regulated by Equity, nor the terms and conditions upon 16 which personal managers represent Equity actors regulated by 17 Actor's Equity.

18 Moreover, the personal managers, unlike our theat-
19 rical agents, are not regulated by any state law. Neverthe-
20 less, Equity continues to exist --

21 QUESTION: What do the personal managers do? Do 22 they get employment for their clients?

23 MR. BREINDEL: That's a disputed issue. They're 24 not supposed to. They perform other services, such as getting 25 them coaching lessons, teaching them how to dress, holding

1 their hands.

2 QUESTION: But then they're really not comparable
3 to agents. At least, their principal function is not to find 4 jobs and so forth.

5 MR. BREINDEL: Theoretically, that is correct.

6 QUESTION: They are sort of like a teacher or some-7 thing like that, would you say?

8 MR. BREINDEL: They're a teacher, a confidant, in 9 place --

10 QUESTION: Just like a mother.

11 MR. BREINDEL: It's like a stage mother.

12 QUESTION: They go out on the road, they handle 13 the money, they dole the money out, right?

14 MR. BREINDEL: Right.

15 QUESTION: And what they don't ever do is manage.
16 Is that right?

17 MR. BREINDEL: If the franchising system is struck 18 down, the agents will now be able to bargain with Equity as 19 employers do on equal terms. This will replace the present 20 bargaining situation where Equity tells the agents to take 21 it or leave it. Thus, Howard Hausman, who's the chief nego-
22 tiator for TARA with Equity, Mr. Hausman is himself an agent 23 and a William Morris agent. He testified as to the last 24 negotiations between Equity and TARA, and this is what he 25 said and I quote: "We all considered that Equity's point of

1 view was indefensible, outrageous, horrible, wrong, simply 2 because they were expecting agents to subsidize the lowest 3 paid actors, somehow, to work for them without getting paid.
4 We still feel that way. We accepted a deal under which that 5 was imposed on us."

6 If the Court strikes down the franchising system, it
7 will simply mean that Equity is no longer free to impose 8 a group boycott upon agents. It's no longer free to fix the 9 prices of agents. It's no longer free to force agents to 10 work for nothing, and to do so with immunity by hiding behind 11 a statutory exemption which was designed for totally different 12 purposes. I'll save the rest of my time for rebuttal. Thank 13 you.

14 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Lurie, you may pro-15 ceed when you are ready.

16 ORAL ARGUMENT OF JEROME B. LURIE, ESQ.,

17 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENTS

18 MR. LURIE: Mr. Chief Justice, and Members of the 19 Court:

20 Equity is a union of approximately 23,000 members.
21 They work throughout the country, not just in New York State, 22 and they are engaged, or seeking employment, throughout the 23 country in the legitimate theater. At any one time the over-24 whelming majority of Equity members are unemployed. They are 25 constantly seeking employment and there was a finding in the

1 district court that producers as a general practice seek 2 actors through agents and actors who do not have agents do not 3 have the same access to employment as actors who do have 4 agents. As a consequence of the --

5 QUESTION: Isn't that true of a lot of employment 6 agencies, or rather employers seeking employees through employ-7 ment agencies, entirely outside of the actors' field?

8 MR. LURIE: It may be that it is true in some in-9 stances, and I would suppose that if there were a union in a 10 similar position where the actors could only get jobs through 11 certain specific employment agencies, that the union would 12 have the right to do something about it. For example, a 13 union I know in the restaurant industry in New York signed 14 a collective bargaining agreement with all the employers 15 which said that employees could only be engaged through the New 16 York State Employment Service, because they didn't want their 17 members who would be hired for jobs to pay employment agency
18 fees. They were protecting, in that case, it seems to me, 19 the minimum wage. Unions in other industries solve this 20 problem by establishing a hiring hall.

21 QUESTION: The State of New York has addressed it 22 too, has it not, by limiting the amount, or prohibiting any 23 kickbacks to the employer from the employment agency?

24 MR. LURIE: What they have done, if Your Honor
25 please, is limit commissions to ten percent. That is not all

1 that we do in this situation. Secondly, even though they 2 have limited commissions to ten percent, it would seem to me 3 that that's no reason why the union should not utilize its 4 best efforts to see to it that the actors do not have to pay 5 unreasonable commissions.

6 The fact that the state has legislated doesn't mean 7 that we can't act. The state legislating doesn't make some-8 thing that would be legal if they had not legislated illegal 9 because they did legislate.

10 QUESTION: Right. The state legislation doesn't 11 prohibit an employment agency from charging only five percent 12 or zero percent, does it?

13 MR. LURIE: That's right. In addition, if Your 14 Honor please, these agents operate not just in New York City, 15 although the bulk of them are in New York City and some of 16 them are in Los Angeles, but they operate throughout the 17 country, and there is no evidence in this record which indi-18 cates that all states throughout the country where actors per-19 form in the legitimate theater have the same rules and regula-20 tions. But we do license or franchise agents throughout the 21 country.

22 QUESTION: Well, would you say, for the purposes
23 of the exemption, which is what we're arguing, that this case 24 is comparable to what it would be if the producers and the 25 union had had an agreement which provided that the producers

1 would secure actors only through a union, you might call it a 2 hiring hall?

3 MR. LURIE: If Your Honor please, I think the union 4 would have the right to enter into such an agreement with 5 the producers.

6 QUESTION: Well, suppose they did?

7 MR. LURIE: But because of peculiarities of this 8 industry --

9 QUESTION: I know, but suppose they did, would it 10 be any more suspect than this one, or any less?

11 MR. LURIE: I'm sorry. I don't understand the 12 question.

13 QUESTION: Would it be any more exempt or any less 14 exempt under the antitrust laws?

15 MR. LURIE: Than this?

16 QUESTION: Yes. Wouldn't it be essentially the same?

17 MR. LURIE: It would be exempt under the antitrust
18 laws. Hiring --

19 QUESTION: But no more and no less than -- ?

20 MR. LURIE: No more and no less.

21 QUESTION: And it would be prohibited in an open 22 shop state, would it not?

23 QUESTION: It probably would be, but that's a ques-
24 tion for the labor laws --

25 MR. LURIE: Yes. It would be legal if the agreement

QUESTION: Would it be legal if the agreement

1 provided that the costs of operating the hiring hall be paid 2 by the employers?

3 MR. LURIE: Well, I think that the National Labor 4 Relations Board has often ruled in this matter that if the 5 employers contribute toward the hiring hall an amount which 6 relates, or, for example, an employee, those hiring halls
7 have to be without discrimination and any individual theoreti-8 cally can walk in and be sent out, and he can be charged a 9 fee commensurate with the cost of operating his share of the 10 hiring.

11 QUESTION: Well, is the $200 initiation fee and the 12 $60 annual fee in your view somewhat comparable to that?

13 MR. LURIE: Well, if Your Honor please, absolutely.
14 I mean, the circuit court in this case, the Court of Appeals 15 in this case found that although there was no evidence in the 16 record as to the cost of the operation, that there was one 17 full-time employee and other people involved, and that as 18 $12,000 was the total that was paid by the agents, that it 19 clearly was commensurate with the cost of the operation.

20 QUESTION: Mr. Lurie, would your theory make it 21 appropriate for a union to franchise acting teachers?

22 MR. LURIE: No, it would not, if Your Honor please.
23 If Your Honor pleases, I had that question come up the other 24 day in a different way. There are a group of casting agents
25 in New York who cast for various theaters, like the Public

1 Theater and other theaters which are constantly casting, 2 and those casting agents have been giving courses, they are 3 teaching courses on how to audition. And there has been a 4 tremendous uproar in Equity because the Equity members say,
5 in order to get jobs in the theaters where these people cast, 6 you have to take the course of the casting agent. And of 7 course, it came up, did we have a right to do anything about 8 that? And I said to the union, very explicitly, we do not have 9 a right. So we can tell our members, you may not go to those 10 courses if you don't want to, and we will possibly discipline 11 you for going to those courses, but you have no right to take 12 any action against the casting directors.

13 QUESTION: Would you say disciplining your members 14 meant imposition of a fine such as --

15 MR. LURIE: If Your Honor please, disciplining our mem-16 bers means anything which is permissible and reasonable under 17 the internal -- in accordance with the constitution of the 18 union.

19 QUESTION: And under our Boeing decision which 20 leaves the substantiality of the fine to the state courts?

21 MR. LURIE: Yes. I would say we could fine; we 22 might have some problem in expulsion, there are various -- 23 but I'm really not prepared to discuss that aspect at this 24 moment. But I think you could take any usual, normal union 25 disciplinary action. We could fine them, and indeed in this

1 case, in the case at bar, it is quite clear that when we were 2 having a dispute with the agents about the rules that we were 3 going to promulgate, we informed our members -- and by the 4 way, this is the -- there is a finding in this case by the 5 district court, not disturbed by the Court of Appeals, that 6 there is no combination between this union and the producers 7 in an effort to enforce this system.

8 There is also a finding in district court that there 9 is no conspiracy between TARA and the union. And by the way,
10 if I may say to the Court --

11 QUESTION: Isn't there -- the agents who are fran-12 chised don't insist that the union not deal with other agents?

13 MR. LURIE: The agency agreement does say, but we --

14 QUESTION: Yes, so there is an agreement, whether 15 you call it a conspiracy or not, that they won't deal with 16 other agents who won't pay the franchise fee.

17 MR. LURIE: There is an agreement, if Your Honor 18 please, but let me say, number one, that there is no evidence 19 in this case that anybody or any agent who is prepared to 20 meet and conform with the regulations cannot be licensed.

21 QUESTION: Would you think it would be different 22 for purposes of the exemption if it were otherwise, that 23 the union simply made an agreement with a group of agents not 24 to deal with anybody else, even if they were willing to live 25 up to all the rules?

1 MR. LURIE: Well, let me say that --

2 QUESTION: But is it any different?

3 MR. LURIE: Yes, I would think that that would change
4 the situation. I don't think that situation could ever come 5 about because it is the interest of Equity to have as many 6 agents as possible, and have as many members represented by 7 agents.

8 QUESTION: But that isn't this case, is it?

9 QUESTION: Well, that can't be true, because if 10 that were true you'd allow commissions on scale, for people 11 that have been on a scale.

12 MR. LURIE: Well, if Your Honor --

13 QUESTION: Because isn't it inevitably true that 14 when you don't allow that to happen, there are fewer agents?

15 MR. LURIE: Well, I suppose that it is possible.
16 There is certainly no evidence --

17 QUESTION: So it is not in your interest to maximize 18 the number of agents.

19 MR. LURIE: If Your Honor please, there is no evi-20 dence in this case that I know of that any agent has ever been 21 denied access -- has not come into the agency business because 22 of that, or that any agent has ever dropped out because of 23 that.

24 QUESTION: Well, but isn't it simple economics, as 25 I suggested to your learned opponent, that if you cut off one

1 major source of income into the industry, namely, commissions
2 on people who work at scale, and lots of people work at scale,
3 don't they? There'll be less money available to pay agents 4 and obviously there'll be fewer agents.

5 MR. LURIE: If Your Honor please, I think it is -- 6 it's not in the record, but I think it's clear in the theat-7 rical industry that people work for scale actors not because 8 they want to. Indeed, there is no obligation on the part of 9 any agent to take any actor on as client. They work for scale 10 actors because they figure that if they catch Al Pacino when 11 he's doing "The Indian Wants the Bronx" off Broadway, that 12 several years later Al Pacino is going to be making a million 13 dollars a picture and they're going to get ten percent of 14 that. The fact of the matter is that although there may be 15 some correlation between what you postulated, and I would say 16 that logic probably supports it, there is no evidence to 17 that effect, and further, that most of these agents do not 18 work just in the theater. A lot of agents work in the theater, 19 as he indicated, in the motion picture business, and in 20 connection with radio and television.

21 QUESTION: I was questioning your argument that you
22 desired to increase competition. I thought your argument 23 is that you have a perfect legal right to suppress competi-
24 tion, because you're surely doing that.

25 MR. LURIE: Well, if Your Honor please, I didn't

1 say we didn't have a right to do this. I said, really what I 2 was saying is that it is in the interest of Equity, and they 3 do a balancing, just as this Court does often, between the 4 problem of regulating the agents and protecting their members,
5 and protecting them from abuses. You know, there was a lot
6 of talk before that there were no abuses. Well, these regula-7 tions have been in effect since 1928, but the history of what 8 happened prior to 1928 is replete with abuses.

9 In the Edelstein case in the 2nd Circuit, there 10 were affidavits which indicated all sorts of problems includ-11 ing excessive commissions and so on. And what petitioner is 12 arguing is that because these --

13 QUESTION: Wasn't that partly because this Court
14 had then held that New York State couldn't regulate employ-15 ment agencies, or agents?

16 MR. LURIE: Well, if your Honor please, first, 17 what happened was that Equity in an effort to avoid the abuses 18 which were so prevalent, lobbied for the passage of the New 19 York State law. When it was passed there were findings that 20 it was not being effectively enforced. They found, for exam-21 ple, that under the New York State law it was quite easy for 22 somebody, an agent, to say, well, when you sign with us you've 23 got to give us a bonus. And if you get a job, we'd like you 24 to give us a Christmas present. And this was -- in the record, 25 the Joint Appendix here, you will see an excerpt from

1 "The Revolt of the Actors" which does state just that. It
2 is also true that having found that under this Court's deci-3 sion the Jersey law was not going to be enforced, and every-4 body thought it would apply to the New York law, then Equity
5 really went to town and set up these regulations. But there 6 were abuses before the regulations and to condemn or say some-7 thing is not necessary because it succeeded in its objectives 8 just doesn't make any sense.

9 QUESTION: May I just ask one more question. There's 10 a question, what's an exorbitant commission? I guess in the 11 view of the union, anytime an actor nets less than scale
12 because he pays the commission, he pays an exorbitant commis-13 sion.

14 MR. LURIE: If Your Honor please, there are two -- 15 correct. Our position is that we have negotiated this con-16 tract and this scale for the actor. For example, traditionally, 17 in the business, chorus kids, the chorus actors, never have 18 commissioned an agent because there isn't anything an agent
19 can do for them. They can't find access to jobs for them
20 and they can't get them any more than the minimum in the col-
21 lective bargaining agreement. That's it.

22 We think that anything which invades the minimum 23 that we struggled to fight for and that we've gotten for them
24 is excessive. We also think anything in excess of the regu-25 lations are excessive, and we feel that if we are within the 1 statutory exemption, that we have a right to set these rules.

2 QUESTION: Mr. Lurie, before you sit down, just as 3 a matter of personal curiosity, how old a union is Equity?

4 MR. LURIE: Equity was formed around the turn of 5 the century. It's about -- I think it was 1914 -- around -- 6 that's not the turn -- around 1914, there was a group called 7 the White Rats who organized the union. They were a bunch of 8 actors who -- actors had been terribly depressed. I mean, 9 without a union, the strange thing about this profession is 10 that they beg you for the right to work for nothing, and one 11 of the big struggles Equity has with its members is to say, 12 you may not do this. They are so desperate to work. They 13 are performers and they want to be seen.

14 QUESTION: Even Sarah Bernhardt had problems?

15 MR. LURIE: I'm afraid I'm not that old.

16 QUESTION: Has it always had the name, Equity?

17 MR. LURIE: Actors' Equity Association; I think so.
18 They were originally called the White Rats, and that was the 19 group that organized Equity.

20 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well. Mr. Gold.

21 ORAL ARGUMENT OF LAURENCE GOLD, ESQ.,

22 ON BEHALF OF THE AFL-CIO AS AMICUS CURIAE

23 MR. GOLD: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the 24 Court:

25 All that Mr. Lurie has expressed indicates why all

1 of us on the union side of this issue believe that this case
2 is controlled by Carroll. The Court in that instance ad-3 dressed itself to the use of booking agents by musicians and 4 the situation faced by all of the theatrical unions is roughly 5 the same. It is a situation in which work is intermittent, 6 in which there are many more competitors for jobs than there 7 are jobs, and where the traditional pattern is that there is 8 an intermediary between the purchaser of labor and those peo-
9 ple who are offering themselves for employment.

10 QUESTION: Mr. Gold, what about the fact in Carroll 11 that the orchestra leaders there actually played as musicians 12 with the dance bands? Do you regard that as a distinction of 13 no significance?

14 MR. GOLD: For the purpose here we think it is irre-
15 levant because Carroll concerned many issues and one issue 16 was the extent to which you could, to which the union could 17 regulate the orchestra leaders. Another issue was the extent 18 to which you could regulate booking agents and that booking 19 agents question was dealt with separately. Indeed we think 20 the question here is somewhat easier because all of the indi-
21 viduals who are in competition for these jobs are true em-
22 ployees. The question is whether when you have this two-step 23 process of getting a job, first to get an agent and then to 24 get the employment, the union is limited to only dealing with 25 the person offering the job or can regulate that intermediary

1 stage, and we believe that if the union can only sign the 2 collective agreement and get scale in this set-up where there 3 is a two-step process, it can't do its job, because --

4 QUESTION: What about the emphasis that your brother 5 Breindel puts on the collective bargaining agreement between 6 the producers and Equity? We had nothing like that, of course, 7 in Carroll.

8 MR. GOLD: That point is treated in the brief of the 9 union, and the record in the Carroll case shows that there 10 were collective agreements in the steady engagement field
11 in Carroll, and that was covered by musicians' booking agents' 12 rules just as the rest of the engagements were covered.

13 QUESTION: And Carroll made no distinction?

14 MR. GOLD: And Carroll made absolutely no distinc-
15 tion. This was the point that was at issue in this case.
16 We believe that every one of the efforts that the petitioners
17 make to distinguish Carroll fail.

18 QUESTION: What about the fee?

19 MR. GOLD: Well, my view on the fee is that if the 20 rest of the system were in any way suspect that might not 21 stand, but if we are correct that the whole point and purpose 22 of the system is employee protective, we certainly believe 23 that the fee which barely covers the cost of the system would 24 be lawful.

25 QUESTION: Should be paid for by the --

1 MR. GOLD: In part. In part.

2 QUESTION: By the agents?

3 MR. GOLD: Let me -- you raised the question,
4 Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice Rehnquist --

5 QUESTION: That certainly wasn't covered by Carroll.

6 MR. GOLD: No, I would agree entirely. But the question 7 was raised as to whether in a hiring hall situation the 8 employer pays. The norm is that the employer pays.

9 QUESTION: When you say, if this system were sus-
10 pect, the presence of the fee might render it --

11 MR. GOLD: No, no, Your Honor, I didn't mean to 12 say that. What I meant to say was that if the system were 13 otherwise no good, and I was trying to defend the charging of 14 the fee for a system which was otherwise not in the labor
15 exemption, I don't think I could succeed on that point stand-16 ing alone. But I do argue to you that if the whole point 17 and purpose of the system isn't proper under Carroll and 18 within the labor exemption, I don't believe that the fact that 19 the cost of the system is shared by the union and the employer 20 invalidates the system or even invalidates that one provision 21 any more than I believe that a perfectly lawful hiring hall
22 could possibly be invalidated under the long-standing practice
23 that it's the employer who pays the cost of the hall either 24 in whole or in part.

25 QUESTION: But here the employer doesn't --

1 MR. GOLD: Because if it's the employer who pays, or 2 it isn't the agents who pay in this instance, then it's the 3 members who pay. And that ultimately is subject, if you're in 4 the labor market area, which is settled by the back-and-forth 5 between the varying groups depending on their economic 6 strength and not by the law.

7 QUESTION: Mr. Gold, I'm just curious. Here we 8 are dealing in the labor, at least we're dealing with jobs.
9 Suppose the union and its members simply announced that 10 none of the members of this union will deal with any attor-
11 neys who charge more than X dollars an hour. We'll deal with 12 anybody who will, but we just won't deal with anybody who 13 won't -- who charge any more. Or doctors, that they have 14 to -- we'll deal with them if they have a satisfactory scale.
15 That may not violate the antitrust laws but would it be within 16 the labor agreement?

17 MR. GOLD: I'm not positive where the line is but 18 I can indicate what we think the theory is, and what we 19 understand the basic point of the labor exemption to be.
20 It seems to us that the basic point of the labor exemption is 21 that there are two different systems that Congress has 22 decreed. One is the antitrust system which regulates product 23 markets, and business markets in general. The other is a 24 system where employees are permitted to combine to protect 25 themselves against job and wage competition in the labor

1 market.

2 QUESTION: And in my example, that's not the labor
3 market.

4 MR. GOLD: It would seem to me that was certainly 5 stretching the concept of the employees' labor market to 6 its very end.

7 QUESTION: It may not violate the antitrust laws
8 but it does --

9 MR. GOLD: That's correct, but in this instance 10 what we rely on very heavily is that we're in the heart and 11 soul of these employees' job market. The findings are that 12 the agent stands between the employee and the job. He is 13 the means. In that situation we believe that no matter how 14 you cut this, whether you do it under the statutory exemption 15 or you do it under the non-statutory exemption, that the 16 union is regulating the matter of immediate and direct con-17 cern.

18 QUESTION: Actually, neither are express statutory 19 exemptions. They are referred to in the terminology of --

20 MR. GOLD: We think they're all express. Congress 21 has been at this for some time. There's Section 6; there's 22 Section 2.

23 QUESTION: One is no more express than the other,
24 though?

25 MR. GOLD: No. They are equal. I guess I would

1 put that affirmatively that they are equally, but plainly
2 as Mr. Justice Frankfurter said in Hutcheson and as Mr. Justice
3 Powell said in Connell, the basic task here is harmonizing
4 these two different systems, reading these series of laws 5 together in a way that makes sense, and the basic point that 6 we think has emerged from all of that jurisprudence is that 7 if the union is regulating the matter of direct and immediate 8 concern and its employees' job market, that is within the 9 labor exemption, obviously.

10 QUESTION: Well, do you say the same, Mr. Gold, if 11 access was limited here, if only a selected group of agents 12 were franchised?

13 MR. GOLD: That depends on the test you apply to 14 determine what the meaning of the labor exemption is. It's 15 not absolutely plain that the labor exemption permits unions 16 to do absolutely anything.

17 QUESTION: I agree with you but now suppose the 18 agents have -- what's their organization?

19 MR. GOLD: TARA.

20 QUESTION:: TARA. They have an agreement with 21 Equity and only TARA members can deal.

22 MR. GOLD: I think we would have to show that the 23 union was operating to advance a direct and immediate interest.
24 I don't know how, on the facts you give we would possibly 25 show it. The point though is that if we are operating to

1 advance a direct and immediate interest, it appears to us
2 that the fact that there is an effect on a business market 3 cannot be sufficient to invalidate our system because if 4 that's true, then there's nothing left of Congress's determi-
5 nation that the labor market can be regulated in this way.
6 There'll always be an effect. The Jewel Tea --

7 QUESTION: Mr. Gold, before you sit down, you touched 8 upon this distinction between focusing on the labor market 9 and on the other hand, on the product market. Has this 10 Court ever in so many words up to this point made that dis-11 tinction in focus?

12 MR. GOLD: Yes. I can think of at least two occa-13 sions on which it's been made, one of which was alluded to 14 from the bench. Mr. Justice White's opinion in Jewel Tea 15 has been the theme on which I've been addressing variations.
16 I also --

17 QUESTION: Does his opinion really make that dis-18 tinction? He said even in the product market it's still all 19 right, within the exemption, if it's the least restrictive
20 possibility, as I read it.

21 MR. GOLD: I read his opinion to say, if the issue 22 is of direct and immediate union concern, and there the 23 direct and immediate union labor market concern was the desire 24 of those employees not to work at night; the fact that there 25 is also an effect on the product market is not sufficient.

1 And then the contrast is if you regulate the product market 2 directly with the hope that you will get some benefit even-3 tually, and the example would be that given in Pennington, 4 where the union hoped to regulate the product market in terms 5 of who would enter and who would not in the hope that even-6 tually it could get higher wages.

7 The example I just gave is an instance, and Allen 8 Bradley would be another, where the union is outside the 9 labor exemption. We believe the test for determining when 10 it's inside the labor exemption is basically that I've just ar-11 ticulated, that the fact that there's a consequential effect or an 12 effect on the product market is not enough to defeat the exemption.

13 ~~the exact~~ QUESTION: Mr. Gold, what is your second case?

14 QUESTION: -- there's recent academic commentary to 15 this effect that seems to be emerging.

16 MR. GOLD: I think that some of the academic commen-17 tary doesn't do the opinions justice, necessarily --

18 QUESTION: Mr. Gold, I wanted to ask perhaps two 19 questions.

20 MR. GOLD: -- I was going to say that Mr. Justice 21 Powell's opinion for the Court in that case, he notes that 22 the center of the labor exemption is where the union is 23 attempting to regulate in order to prevent wage and job com-24 petition among its members in its labor market, and we think 25 that that's important. After all, the exemption --

1 QUESTION: The question, I guess, then, is whether 2 the agents are in -- in which market are the agents placed?

3 MR. GOLD: Well, you're going to have, in effect -- 4 we make an argument, it's point two of our amicus brief, 5 that an agent because he deals in the services of employees
6 doesn't really have a product market in the classic sense.
7 But as Jewel Tea shows, you can regulate in the labor market 8 and that has an effect on the product market as well; they 9 intersect and we think the exemption, our labor exemption 10 does not require that we show that there's no effect on the 11 product market, because if we had to show that we really 12 have to defend ourselves on the merits against the antitrust
13 claim. After all, if there's no effect on the product market
14 there's no restraint on trade. We think what -- it's suffi-15 cient, given these two schemes, if we show we're staying in 16 our basic area, and there are only consequences.

17 QUESTION: Thank you.

18 MR. GOLD: Thank you very much.

19 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Do you have anything 20 further, Mr. Breindel?

21 MR. BREINDEL: Yes.

22 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: You have one minute left.

23 ORAL ARGUMENT OF HOWARD BREINDEL, ESQ.,

24 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS -- REBUTTAL

25 MR. BREINDEL: Very briefly, in connection with

1 Mr. Lurie's statement that there was no --

2 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: You'd better get over 3 to the microphone, there.

4 MR. BREINDEL: In connection with Mr. Lurie's state-5 ment that there was no evidence in the record that he was 6 aware of that agents are leaving the field or are reluctant 7 to enter it, let me quote from page 196 of the Joint Appendix, 8 which is a letter from the president of TARA to Equity.
9 TARA's president said this: "Many of our members" -- that is, 10 the agents -- "doubt whether they can long continue in the 11 field. Without naming names, we all know that many fine and 12 trusted agents have deserted the ranks, either going into 13 other fields such as personal management or moving to the 14 West Coast. Many of those who function now in the field of 15 Equity get their living from other sources such as commer-16 cials, other motion picture deals, and so forth. Other 17 agents have had to give up their independence and merge with 18 bigger offices, but even the big and powerful agencies find 19 it now unprofitable to handle work in the theater, especially 20 the representation of the average income-earning Equity
21 member." Thank you.

22 QUESTION: Could I ask you one -- do you think all 23 decisions to move from New York to the West coast are moti-24 vated by Actors' Equity practices?

25 MR. BREINDEL: No, I don't.

1 MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.

2 The case is submitted.

3 (Whereupon, at 2:03 o'clock p.m., the case in the 4 above-entitled matter was submitted.)
