2                   CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments
3 first this morning in United States against Johnson.

4                   Mr. Schulder, you may proceed whenever you are 5 ready.

6                   ORAL ARGUMENT OF ELLIOTT SCHULDER, ESQ.,
7                   ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER

8                   MR. SCHULDER: Thank you. Mr. Chief Justice, 9 and may it please the Court, on April 17th, 1980, this 10 Court held in Payton versus New York that absent exigent
11 circumstances or consent, the Fourth Amendment requires 12 law enforcement officers to obtain an arrest warrant 13 before entering a suspect's home to arrest him on 14 probable cause. Prior to Payton, on September 14th, 15 1978, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth 16 Circuit had reached a similar conclusion in United 17 States versus Prescott, holding that a warrantless entry 18 into private premises to arrest a suspect violated the 19 Fourth Amendment.

20                   The question in this case is whether the 21 Fourth Amendment rule announced in Payton and Prescott
22 should be applied retroactively to suppress evidence 23 obtained as a result of the warrantless arrest entries 24 occurring before the dates of those decisions.

25                   The facts of this case are as follows. In

1 March, 1977, the Postal Service misdelivered an envelope
2 containing a United States Treasury check to a woman 3 named Lena Kearney. Kearney and a friend decided to 4 keep the check and try to cash it. The next day, 5 Respondent and two other men met at Kearney's house to 6 discuss possible ways of cashing the check. After 7 making a telephone call, Respondent announced that he 8 believed he had found someone who could help them cash 9 the check.

10 Respondent and the other men then left
11 Kearney's house with the check in their possession.
12 Some time later, a Secret Service agent investigating 13 this matter learned from Kearney and her friend about 14 Respondent's involvement in the scheme to cash the check.

15 On May 5th, 1977, two federal agents went to 16 Respondent's house to question him about his involvement 17 in the scheme. Although they had probable cause for 18 Respondent's arrest, the agents did not obtain an arrest
19 warrant for Respondent before proceeding to his house.
20 The agents approached the door and knocked on it, and 21 when Respondent opened the door, the agents identified 22 themselves, and Respondent invited them inside.

23 Once inside the house, the agents gave 24 Respondent his Miranda warnings, and Respondent revealed
25 his role in the scheme to cash the check. The agents

1 then informed Respondent that he was under arrest, and 2 brought him to the police station, where he signed a 3 written confession. Respondent was charged with aiding 4 and abetting the obstruction of correspondence. Prior 5 to trial, he moved to suppress his statements on the 6 ground that they were the fruits of an unlawful arrest
7 that was unsupported by probable cause. The district
8 court denied the motion, and Respondent was convicted 9 after a jury trial.

10 On appeal, the court of appeals, in December 11 of 1978, initially affirmed Respondent's conviction.
12 The court concluded that even though the agents were not 13 armed with a warrant when they entered Respondent's 14 house to arrest him, the agents' actions did not violate 15 the Fourth Amendment, because they had probable cause to 16 arrest Respondent prior to their entry.

17 Relying on the Ninth Circuit's decision in 18 United States versus Prescott, Respondent petitioned for 19 rehearing, arguing for the first time that the 20 warrantless entry into his house violated the Fourth 21 Amendment. The panel issued an amended opinion 22 distinguishing this case from Prescott and holding that 23 the agents' actions were permissible under the Fourth 24 Amendment.

25 Following this Court's decision in Payton

1 versus New York, the court of appeals issued a third
2 decision, this time reversing Respondent's conviction, 3 relying on Payton, but without any discussion of 4 retroactivity principles. The court held that the 5 warrantless entry into the Respondent's house violated
6 the Fourth Amendment, and that Respondent's statements 7 should have been suppressed as the fruits of that 8 illegality.

9           The government then petitioned for rehearing, 10 arguing that the rule announced in Payton should not be 11 applied retroactively. This was the first opportunity 12 that the government had to address the retroactivity 13 question before the court of appeals. In response to 14 the government's arguments, the court of appeals revised 15 its opinion to explain that its suppression ruling was 16 based both on Payton and on its earlier decision in 17 Prescott.

18           Although the arrest entry in this case
19 occurred prior to either of those decisions, the court 20 noted that it held in another case that Prescott would 21 be given retroactive effect in this circuit to arrest
22 entries that occurred prior to Prescott. Accordingly, 23 the court applied the warrant requirement established in 24 Payton and Prescott to the arrest entry in this case.

25           It is our position that the ruling of the

1 court of appeals is inconsistent with established 2 principles governing the retroactivity of decisions that 3 expand the scope of Fourth Amendment protections. In 4 United States versus Peltier, this Court observed that 5 in every case in which it considered the retroactivity
6 of a decision announcing a new Fourth Amendment
7 standard, the Court had concluded that the new standard 8 would be applied prospectively only.

9           The Court's consistent refusal to give 10 retroactive effect to these Fourth Amendment decisions
11 stems from its reluctance to apply the exclusionary rule 12 to suppress the fruits of law enforcement conduct that 13 took place before the new standards were announced.

14           As the Court has stated on many occasions, the 15 exclusionary rule is a judge-made rule primarily 16 designed to deter law enforcement officers from 17 violating the Fourth Amendment. The rule is not a 18 personal right of the party aggrieved by the search or 19 seizure, but rather it is intended to protect Fourth 20 Amendment rights generally through its deterrent effect.

21           In addition, the application of the 22 exclusionary rule, as the Court has noted many times, 23 imposes heavy costs on society, by withholding relevant, 24 probative evidence, with the result that the 25 truthfinding function of the criminal trial is

1 impaired. Accordingly, the Court has refused to apply 2 the exclusionary rule in a variety of different settings 3 where the social costs were deemed to outweigh the 4 deterrent benefits.

5           For example, the Court has held the 6 exclusionary rule does not apply to suppress evidence in 7 grand jury proceedings, that evidence seized illegally 8 by state police is not subject to suppression in federal 9 civil proceedings, and that illegally seized evidence, 10 while inadmissible on the government's case in chief,
11 may be used to impeach a defendant's testimony in a 12 criminal trial.

13           The retroactivity cases present yet another
14 setting in which the Court has concluded that the costs 15 to society of suppressing reliable evidence outweigh the 16 benefits of exclusion. As the Court made clear in 17 Peltier, neither the deterrent purpose of the 18 exclusionary rule nor the imperative of judicial 19 integrity are served by suppressing evidence obtained by 20 law enforcement officers in good faith compliance with 21 then prevailing constitutional norms.

22           Thus, once a new Fourth Amendment standard is 23 announced, the police will be guided by that standard, 24 and if the premise behind the exclusionary rule is 25 sound, they will be deterred from violating the new

1 standard by the threat of suppression. However, there 2 is little or nothing to be gained by imposing the 3 exclusionary sanction to police conduct that occurred 4 before the new standard was established, since the 5 police could not have known that their conduct 6 transgressed constitutional limits.

7           Respondent does not appear to take issue with 8 any of these general principles. His main argument here
9 is that Payton and Prescott should not be applied 10 retroactively because in Respondent's view those 11 decisions did not establish a new Fourth Amendment 12 rule. Of course, if a decision is based on existing 13 principles, the retroactivity of that decision is a moot 14 question, since any subsequent case would be governed by 15 the same pre-existing principles. On the other hand, 16 where a decision in the Fourth Amendment area overrules
17 past precedent, even Respondent would agree that such a 18 decision should not be applied retroactively.

19           The focus of the dispute in this case is 20 whether decisions resolving previously unsettled Fourth 21 Amendment questions are new, and thus under the test in 22 Peltier are not to be applied retroactively.

23           There is no doubt, and Respondent concedes
24 that the constitutionality of warrantless arrest entries 25 was an open question in the Ninth Circuit prior to

1 Prescott, and in this Court prior to Payton. Indeed, in 2 Payton the Court pointed out that the practice of making 3 warrantless arrest entries was long-standing and 4 widespread, and that most of the states that had taken a 5 position on the question had approved the practice.
6 Moreover, most of the state and federal court decisions
7 cited in Payton as disapproving the practice of making 8 warrantless arrest entries were issued after the entry 9 into Respondent's house in May, 1977.

10           For many years, therefore, this Court was 11 aware that warrantless arrest entries were standard 12 police practice, yet it did not declare that practice to 13 be unlawful until its decision in Payton.

14           In light of this background, we submit that 15 Payton -- that before Payton was decided, law 16 enforcement agencies throughout the country were 17 justified in believing that warrantless arrest entries 18 were constitutionally acceptable unless controlling 19 lower courts within a particular jurisdiction had 20 already held that such conduct was prohibited.

21           QUESTION: Well, Mr. Schulder, you say 22 controlling lower courts within a particular 23 jurisdiction. In this case we have the Court of Appeals 24 for the Ninth Circuit. But how far do you break that 25 down? Supposing the court of appeals had never spoken

1 on the issue, but there was an opinion in the Southern 2 District of California that said it was all right, and 3 in the Central District that said it wasn't. Does the 4 California Highway Patrol have to do one thing north of 5 Oceanside and another thing south?

6 MR. SCHULDER: Absolutely not, Your Honor. We 7 would submit that the controlling federal court within a 8 particular circuit would be the court of appeals for 9 that circuit.

10 QUESTION: So that if there simply were a 11 conflict in district court decisions, there would be no 12 question of retroactivity one way or the other?

13 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

14 QUESTION: Why pick out the court of appeals
15 as opposed to the district court?

16 MR. SCHULDER: Well, because the decision of 17 one district judge is not binding on any other judge 18 within a particular district, whereas the decision of 19 the court of appeals is controlling within -- within the 20 circuit.

21 QUESTION: What if he is the only judge in the 22 district?

23 MR. SCHULDER: Well, if he is the only judge 24 in -- well, presumably the government will have an 25 opportunity to test the correctness of his decision on

1 appeal to the court of appeals.

2 QUESTION: And assume he is affirmed. Then 3 when did the law first become binding on the officers in 4 that district? The date of the affirmance, or the date
5 of his first ruling? Can the law -- Can the FBI just 6 ignore the district judge's ruling in that district even 7 though it is later affirmed on appeal?

8 MR. SCHULDER: I would think that in that 9 limited situation, they might be doing so to their own 10 detriment.

11 QUESTION: Well, a court of appeals opinion
12 can always be -- you can always petition for certiorari 13 here from that opinion.

14 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

15 QUESTION: So why does the court of appeals 16 opinion become a milestone if a district court opinion 17 doesn't?

18 QUESTION: The only possible difference, I
19 suggest, counsel, is that review here is in virtually 20 every instance a matter of discretion by this Court, 21 where a review by the court of appeals is mandatory, and 22 I am not suggesting that is a significant difference.

23 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

24 QUESTION: Otherwise, is there any difference 25 in the posture of the two cases?

1           MR. SCHULDER: Well, a decision of a district
2 court would not be considered stare decisis in the same 3 way that a court of appeals decision would be.

4           QUESTION: I believe you said it is not 5 binding even on his fellow district judges.

6           MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

7           QUESTION: Whereas a court of appeals opinion
8 is binding on everyone in the circuit.

9           MR. SCHULDER: That's correct. The circuit
10 judges on other panels, and on all district judges 11 within the particular circuit.

12          QUESTION: They don't uniformly observe that, 13 though, do they?

14          MR. SCHULDER: Perhaps not in certain cases, 15 Your Honor.

16          QUESTION: That is what we call intra-circuit
17 conflicts.

18          MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

19          QUESTION: There are some districts in which 20 the judges more or less informally adopt a sort of a 21 stare decisis practice of their own, treating similar 22 problems in the same way, to have uniform law within the 23 district. If they had such a rule within the district 24 here, would that make a difference, or would you still 25 just ignore the district judge?

1           MR. SCHULDER: We believe that the agents
2 would not be bound as a constitutional matter to adhere 3 to decisions of the district court.

4           QUESTION: You would say this case would be 5 decided differently if the Ninth Circuit were not so far 6 behind in its backlog of cases, and this had gotten here
7 before the Payton case got here. The reason this 8 litigant loses is because his appellate process took so 9 long. Isn't that right?

10          MR. SCHULDER: In a way, that -- that's true, 11 but the Court has --

12          QUESTION: We have different rules of law, 13 depending on the speed with which cases reach the 14 Supreme Court.

15          MR. SCHULDER: Well, the Court has pointed out 16 in a number of cases, Stovall, Desist, and others, that 17 that is one of the consequences of the way our system 18 operates. The focus of the retroactivity decisions is 19 upon the time of the law enforcement practice involved, 20 not on any subsequent point in the process.

21          QUESTION: It is only a consequence of the way 22 the system operates if the judges are engaged in the 23 business of lawmaking. If there was a rule that was 24 uniformly applied to cases pending on direct appeal or 25 something, it wouldn't work that way.

1           When you are arguing retroactivity here, it is 2 not in the sense of the case -- you mean retroactivity 3 not just for collateral attack purposes, but even on 4 direct appeal, in direct appeal situations.

5           MR. SCHULDER: Well, that is absolutely
6 correct. In fact, collateral attacks would be covered 7 by Stone versus Powell generally.

8           QUESTION: Well, I suppose you can say that if 9 Peltier had gotten here before Almeida-Sanchez, Peltier 10 might have been the deciding case.

11          MR. SCHULDER: That's correct, and it's true 12 of a number of other decisions where the Court has 13 concluded that we look at the actual time at which the 14 search or seizure or other law enforcement practice 15 that's involved took place, rather than at any -- at any 16 other point, because it is the time at which the law 17 enforcement officers actually acted, at which they are 18 charged with knowing or not knowing what the law was at 19 a given -- at a given point in time.

20          Furthermore, the whole purpose underlying the 21 exclusionary rule is the deterrent purpose, and if the 22 agents at a given time have no way of knowing that their 23 action is unlawful, no deterrent purpose or no 24 significant deterrent purpose would be served by 25 suppressing evidence as a result of search and seizure

1 that was later declared to be unlawful, especially since 2 now that Payton and Prescott have been decided. There 3 is a clear rule that law enforcement officers know they 4 have to follow.

5           Respondent argues in this case that the 6 decisions in Payton and Prescott were clearly 7 foreshadowed by dicta in the decisions of this Court and 8 the Ninth Circuit, and by the Court's so-called 9 persistent avoidance of this issue, which in 10 Respondent's view should have signalled to law 11 enforcement agencies that the issue would eventually be 12 decided adversely to the government. As we have pointed 13 out in our briefs, we do not believe that the decisions
14 in Payton and Prescott were clearly foreshadowed.

15           In any case, Respondent's test is the wrong
16 one for deciding whether to apply the exclusionary rule 17 to suppress evidence acquired during a search or seizure 18 that occurred prior to the decision that established the 19 practice in question to be unconstitutional.

20           To paraphrase Judge Wilkie's dissent in United 21 States versus Ross in the District of Columbia court of 22 appeals, the proper inquiry is not whether lawyers and 23 judges would describe a new Fourth Amendment decision as 24 having been clearly foreshadowed, but whether law 25 enforcement agencies can properly be charged with having

1 had notice at the time of the search or seizure that the 2 practice violated the Fourth Amendment.

3           In this very case, the court of appeals judges 4 who initially affirmed Respondent's conviction in 5 December, 1978, and upheld the warrantless entry into 6 his house, apparently did not believe that the Fourth
7 Amendment required a warrant. In fact, Respondent 8 himself did not challenge the warrantless entry until 9 after Prescott announced such a requirement.

10           In these circumstances, it would be peculiar, 11 we suggest, to conclude that the arresting agents should 12 have known of the need for a warrant some 16 months 13 before Prescott announced that requirement and some 14 three years before the Court in Payton announced the 15 requirement.

16           In our view, Petitioner's argument here
17 ignores the social costs of imposing the exclusionary 18 rule in this context. The primary cost, of course, is 19 the -- is that the search for truth at criminal trials 20 is impaired by the exclusion of reliable evidence, with 21 the result that guilty defendants may go free. Now that 22 Payton and Prescott have established a clear rule for 23 law enforcement officers, there is no reason for the 24 Court to suppress evidence to accomplish that deterrent 25 effect, because the agents now know that any searches,

1 any arrest entries that they conduct in the absence of 2 exigent circumstances in the future may result in the 3 suppression of evidence.

4 In a more general way, it is arguable that the 5 retroactive application of decisions like Payton, which 6 involve previously unsettled questions, may deter law 7 enforcement officers from engaging in conduct that is 8 not yet settled as being lawful. The result will be 9 that officers will avoid not only illegal searches or 10 seizures, but also perfectly legitimate law enforcement 11 techniques. In fact, if, as Respondent argues, whenever 12 an issue is unsettled, officers must conform their 13 conduct to suggestions in dicta made from the bench by 14 district judges, then the effectiveness of law 15 enforcement officers will be measurably diminished.

16 QUESTION: Am I to understand that the 17 officers of the federal government are familiar with all 18 of the dicta from the bench in all of the district
19 courts? You don't really mean that, do you?

20 MR. SCHULDER: Well, we don't make any such 21 representation.

22 QUESTION: Well, you just said so.

23 MR. SCHULDER: Well, I was saying that 24 Respondent suggests that they should be familiar with 25 all -- not only familiar with dicta from the bench by

1 federal district judges, but that they should conform 2 their practices to those -- those comments from the 3 bench.

4 QUESTION: I just don't think dicta from 5 district courts has anything to do with this case. That 6 is all my point is.

7 MR. SCHULDER: I agree with you, Your Honor.

8 Whatever incremental deterrent benefit, that 9 is, the deterrence of some unlawful conduct that might 10 arise from suppression in this context hardly justifies 11 the costs of such a policy, especially since the period
12 of uncertainty as to any particular law enforcement 13 practice will last only until that practice is 14 challenged in court and its validity is judicially 15 determined.

16 Of course, as I said earlier, once the courts
17 hold that a particular practice is unconstitutional, 18 then under our system of government, society must be 19 willing to pay the price of both exclusion of evidence 20 and -- and of reduced law enforcement. In fact, in the 21 Court's decision in Payton, the Court noted that the 22 state had made an argument that imposing a warrant 23 requirement would impose burdens upon local prosecutors, 24 but the Court said that because the Constitution
25 required the police to obtain a warrant, whatever costs

1 there might be were irrelevant. Those costs had to give 2 way.

3 QUESTION: Payton actually is one of two 4 cases. There was the Riddick case that was with it.
5 Why was it appropriate to decide them both? Why 6 shouldn't we have picked one and let the other one -- 7 what justification was there for reversing both 8 convictions?

9 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the Court granted
10 certiorari in both cases, and heard arguments in both 11 cases.

12 QUESTION: But really, it is kind of unfair to 13 the officers in the later of the two searches, I 14 suppose, and there were a bunch of cases that we held 15 for decision in those. I suppose we shouldn't have done 16 that, either.

17 MR. SCHULDER: Well, we don't feel that -- 18 apparently the Court has developed a practice of holding 19 cases pending its decision in cases that it has 20 accepted, but there is no requirement that the Court do 21 so, and there is --

22 QUESTION: But at the time a Fourth Amendment
23 issue comes to us for the first time with several cases, 24 I would suppose the government's view is that we should 25 decide just one of them, because there is really no

1 judicial purpose in treating all litigants alike.

2 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

3 Finally, Respondent argues that he should 4 benefit from the rule announced in Payton and Prescott 5 because his case was on direct review at the time those 6 decisions were announced. However, as I mentioned 7 earlier, because the exclusionary rule is not a personal 8 right but is designed to prevent future Fourth Amendment 9 violations, the critical juncture is the time of the 10 search, not any --

11 QUESTION: Of course, Justice Harlan was 12 definitely of that view, was he not?

13 MR. SCHULDER: Justice Harlan was of the 14 opposite --

15 QUESTION: Anything on direct appeal was to be 16 given the advantage.

17 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

18 QUESTION: And some others agreed with him.

19 MR. SCHULDER: I believe so, Your Honor.

20 QUESTION: And still do.

21 MR. SCHULDER: That may be. We feel in the 22 Fourth Amendment context, though -- well, in Hankerson 23 versus North Carolina, Justice Powell indicated in his 24 concurring opinion that he agreed with Justice Harlan's 25 view, but Hankerson was a case not involving the Fourth

1 Amendment. It was a case involving the retroactivity of 2 Mulaney versus Wilbur, and the issue in that case went 3 to the fairness of the trial.

4 It is our position that because the Court has 5 said in numerous cases that the exclusionary rule should 6 be limited and applied only in order to -- only in those 7 cases where its application serves a deterrent benefit, 8 that it simply should not be applied even to cases on 9 direct review after the Court has announced a new Fourth 10 Amendment principle.

11 Accordingly, we submit that the Court should 12 adhere to its consistent practice of applying new Fourth 13 Amendment decisions prospectively only. Because the 14 arrest entry into Respondent's house occurred before 15 both Payton and Prescott had held that the Fourth 16 Amendment required a warrant for such entries, 17 Respondent's post-arrest confessions should not be 18 suppressed.

19 For these reasons, and for the reasons stated 20 in our briefs, the judgment of the court of appeals 21 should be reversed.

22 I would like to reserve my remaining time.

23 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Walter?

24 ORAL ARGUMENT OF JOHN F. WALTER, ESQ.,

25 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT

1           MR. WALTER: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
2 please the Court, I agree basically with the recitation 3 of the procedural history of this case made by 4 government counsel, except in one major respect, and 5 that is, as the Court is aware, this case has had a 6 sores -- not a sores, but a troubled path through the 7 Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

8           The first opinion of the Ninth Circuit Court
9 of Appeals did something which I think is very important
10 in this Court's analysis of the issue that is present 11 before the Court, and that is, it made a de novo finding 12 that there was probable cause for the arrest of my 13 client. The -- It was clear in the trial court during 14 the motion to suppress and also during the -- during the 15 course of the trial, and the trial judge so found, that 16 there was no probable cause for my client's arrest on 17 the day that Agents Hemingway and Pickering went to the 18 home to interrogate him.

19           The lack of probable cause was a determination 20 made by the trial court based upon the testimony
21 elicited, I believe, from -- it was Agent Pickering.
22 Agent Pickering testified that it was his belief that at 23 the time that they went to my client's home, that they 24 did not have sufficient evidence to arrest my client.
25 According to Agent Pickering, or Hemingway -- I can't

1 recall which agent -- the purpose of going to my 2 client's home was to question him with respect to his 3 involvement regarding this Treasury check.

4           However, it was further developed at the 5 motion to suppress that the agents intended to arrest my 6 client depending upon the degree of my client's 7 statements at the time of the interview at his home.

8           That was a direct finding by the trial court.
9 In the Ninth Circuit, the Ninth Circuit took the 10 position that it was appropriate for them to undertake a 11 de novo review and as a result of that de novo review, 12 determined that there was probable cause for the 13 arrest. What the Ninth Circuit failed to do is, they 14 relied on facts that were developed during the course of 15 the trial relating to a conversation that took place 16 between my client on the telephone and supposedly the 17 person who was trying to cash the check.

18           QUESTION: Mr. Walter --

19           MR. WALTER: Yes.

20           QUESTION: -- you are not attacking the court 21 of appeals opinion, are you?

22           MR. WALTER: I am --

23           QUESTION: Or the judgment?

24           MR. WALTER: I am attacking the court of 25 appeals opinion with respect to that portion where they

1 indicate or they hold that there was probable cause.
2 There clearly wasn't probable cause in this case. It 3 was a finding of the trial court that --

4 QUESTION: Do you want us to affirm it or not?

5 MR. WALTER: Yes. Yes, I do, Your Honor.

6 QUESTION: Well, why are you attacking it, 7 then?

8 MR. WALTER: Well, I am attacking the finding 9 of probable cause. I am not attacking the analysis of 10 the Ninth Circuit with respect to the retroactivity 11 question, but I think the fact that the agents didn't 12 have probable cause when they went to the home is 13 important in the Peltier test of the agents' knowledge 14 in connection with whether or not the principles of 15 Payton and Prescott should be applied retroactively in 16 this case.

17 QUESTION: But if the case comes to us, it 18 comes with a finding by the Court we are reviewing that 19 there was probable cause.

20 MR. WALTER: That's correct, Your Honor, but I
21 think it is -- the Ninth Circuit's finding is erroneous, 22 because it is not supportable by the record. It was the 23 trial court's finding based upon the motion to suppress 24 that there was no probable cause.

25 QUESTION: Did you challenge the court of 1 appeals' finding at any time in the court of appeals?

2 MR. WALTER: In all candor, Your Honor, I
3 can't -- I believe that I -- in one of the petitions for 4 rehearing, I pointed out to the Ninth Circuit that their 5 analysis of the probable cause issue was incorrect, 6 because they were relying on facts developed during the 7 trial and not facts developed in the motion to suppress.

8 QUESTION: At what stage was that in the court
9 of appeals?

10 MR. WALTER: That was on -- I believe it was 11 the first petition for rehearing when I requested the 12 court to consider the case in light of Prescott.

13 QUESTION: And was that the one that was 14 granted?

15 MR. WALTER: Yes, Your Honor, it was. I think 16 they were all granted in terms of filing an amended 17 opinion. Each time we went for a petition for 18 rehearing, we got -- in that case they affirmed the 19 trial court's decision but held -- and held that 20 Prescott didn't apply because it wasn't a forcible 21 entry. That was the first time on the petition for 22 rehearing, and then the next time the court entered an 23 order that they were going to withhold decision in the 24 case until this Court's decision in Payton, and they 25 allowed counsel, both government and myself, an

1 opportunity to object to that, and there was no
2 objection by the -- by the government.

3 QUESTION: But the court of appeals has never 4 directly addressed itself to your argument that there 5 was no probable cause?

6 MR. WALTER: No, it has not. But I think it
7 is important, Your Honors, in terms of analyzing the 8 particular conduct of these law enforcement agents, 9 these are not local law enforcement agents, these are 10 highly trained Secret Service agents. If I understand 11 the test in Peltier, and I am not -- I am not quite sure 12 that I do -- I don't think many circuits understand the 13 test in Peltier -- it has to do with the knowledge that 14 is chargeable to the agents or properly chargeable to 15 the agents or the actual knowledge of the agents.

16 I am not clear which of those approaches is 17 really meant to be adopted by this Court, and I think 18 that is one of the problems in this case, where the 19 government relies on Judge Wilkie's dissent in Ross, and 20 indicating that it is not for judges or lawyers to make 21 a determination as to whether or not there is a 22 principle that is clearly foreshadowed, or a decision 23 that clearly foreshadows a principle, but whether or not 24 the law enforcement officers had knowledge.

25 If that is the test for -- in connection with

1 the retroactivity, it seems to me that it opens a whole 2 area of additional questions or inquiry in a motion to 3 suppress. If it is the subjective intent of the 4 searching officer at the time that he conducts the 5 search, which is the knowledge requirement that is 6 required by Peltier, then it seems to me defense counsel 7 as well as the government is going to want to put on 8 evidence as to the specific training, understanding, or 9 knowledge of that particular officer.

10 QUESTION: Mr. Walter, let me try again. What 11 issue is there before us other than the retroactivity?

12 MR. WALTER: That is the only issue, Your 13 Honor.

14 QUESTION: Well, what is all of this you have 15 been talking about?

16 MR. WALTER: Well, I think in terms of 17 analyzing the retroactivity question, Your Honor, if we 18 assume that Peltier applies in this case, we have to 19 determine what the standards of Peltier are in terms of 20 assessing the actual knowledge of the law enforcement 21 officers or the knowledge that may be properly 22 chargeable.

23 QUESTION: You just assume that it applies.

24 MR. WALTER: Yes, and if it does --

25 QUESTION: Well, that is the whole point it is

1 here. Once you assume that, the case is over.

2 MR. WALTER: No, Your Honor, I don't --

3 QUESTION: If we assume that it is 4 retroactive, don't you automatically win?

5 MR. WALTER: Yes, Your Honor.

6 QUESTION: Well, why would we grant cert to 7 assume that?

8 MR. WALTER: Your Honor, I believe that the 9 analysis, the retroactivity question begins with an 10 analysis of what knowledge is probably chargeable to the 11 law enforcement officers at the time of the conduct in 12 question, and in order to make that analysis, the 13 government argues that the issue in this case is not 14 whether this -- Payton or Prescott overruled any cases, 15 but that it established or resolved a previously 16 unsettled constitutional principle.

17 And the question that we have presented here 18 is, what knowledge with respect to that new 19 constitutional principle should have been chargeable to 20 the law enforcement officer at the time that they went 21 to my client's home in May of 1977, and I submit that if 22 we accept the -- in analyzing the -- I believe it is 23 appropriate to analyze the state of the law at the time 24 of the conduct in question in the particular circuit, 25 which happens to be the Ninth Circuit in Prescott, to

1 make a determination as to whether or not Prescott was 2 clearly foreshadowed and therefore whether or not the 3 law enforcement officers should have been properly
4 charged with the knowledge that there was going to be a 5 warrant requirement.

6 I think we have to also keep in mind that this 7 particular case doesn't deal with a practice that had 8 continuing administrative approval such as that in 9 Almeida-Sanchez, or had received continuous judicial 10 approval. This was a practice which had never received 11 specific judicial approval. There were no regulations 12 which permitted law enforcement officers to go into 13 someone's home absent exigent circumstances for 14 arresting, for purposes of an arrest.

15 This was a area that had been continuously and 16 constantly expressly reserved by opinions of this Court
17 and also opinions of the Ninth Circuit. The government 18 argues that the Ninth Circuit opinions should not be 19 chargeable to the law enforcement officers because they 20 contain merely dicta.

21 QUESTION: You are speaking of the second
22 opinion of the Ninth Circuit.

23 MR. WALTER: Well, I think there were a number 24 of opinions, starting out with Boostamante, which 25 reserved the question, and then there was the United

1 States-Phillips case.

2 QUESTION: What about this panel?

3 MR. WALTER: On, and this -- this particular 4 panel. I was referring to existing law prior to -- 5 prior to this panel's opinion. And I think it is also 6 important that the case in 19 -- I believe it was 1976, 7 United States versus Calhoun. In that case, the 8 government lawyer in the Ninth Circuit conceded in front 9 of the Ninth Circuit panel in that case that in that 10 particular case, that if the court -- that an arrest 11 warrant would have been necessary to arrest the 12 particular defendant in that case, because the arrest 13 took place in his home.

14 I think that the device --

15 QUESTION: Mr. Walter, doesn't -- doesn't the 16 opinion in Payton itself outline the division of 17 thinking that existed in this country about the 18 requirement of the warrant, and doesn't it outline quite 19 thoroughly in the majority opinion as well as the 20 dissent why this was not a settled matter at all at the 21 time Payton was decided?

22 MR. WALTER: Yes, I agree with Your Honor,
23 except I think that the -- I think that is absolutely 24 correct, but then the next step is whether or not the 25 law enforcement officers should have known or could have

1 been properly charged with the outcome that a warrant 2 was going to be required.

3 QUESTION: Well, do you think that it is 4 appropriate policy for us to charge the average peace
5 officer with the requirement of anticipating the rulings
6 of this Court in matters of this kind that are unsettled?

7 MR. WALTER: Not the average peace officer,
8 Your Honor, but here we are dealing with not the average 9 California Highway Patrolman. We are dealing with a 10 federal Secret Service agent.

11 QUESTION: And you think that the rules should 12 differ depending upon the particular training and 13 background of the particular police officer and how 14 sophisticated that officer is --

15 MR. WALTER: Well --

16 QUESTION: -- as to whether a particular 17 principle is retroactive or not?

18 MR. WALTER: No, I --

19 QUESTION: Is that a desirable approach?

20 MR. WALTER: I don't think so, Your Honor, 21 because again, I think that would get into the 22 subjective analysis of the knowledge of the particular 23 law enforcement officer, but I think that you can have a 24 -- the hypothetical law enforcement officer in the 25 particular jurisdiction, and in this case it's the

1 Secret Service in the Ninth Circuit. For that matter,
2 Your Honor, in the state of California, we had People
3 versus Ramey, which was a California Supreme Court case, 4 which was decided in 1976, which was not dicta, it was 5 very clear that there was going to be an arrest warrant 6 that was going to be required of law enforcement 7 officers to effect an arrest inside the home absent 8 exigent circumstances.

9 In the Central District, the Secret Service
10 agents work very closely, as do the FBI and other -- the 11 DEA agents work very closely with local law 12 enforcement. More importantly, and I think there was a 13 question --

14 QUESTION: How about the, say, the 15 hypothetical court of appeals judge. Here you have a 16 panel of the court of appeals on December 19th, 1978, 17 that affirms this judgment. I mean, is it fair to say 18 that a law enforcement officer should have anticipated 19 the state of the law in the Ninth Circuit in 1978, when 20 three judges of the court of appeals couldn't do it?

21 MR. WALTER: Well, Your Honor, I -- yes, I do, 22 and I -- and I believe so because of the peculiar facts
23 in this case, and that is, Judge Ferguson's decision, 24 admittedly dicta, and it wasn't even a reported 25 decision, in the district court three months prior to my

1 client's arrest, where he told the government that if 2 you bring a case to me again where there is no arrest 3 warrant, and you arrest someone in the home without 4 exigent circumstances, I am going to suppress the 5 evidence, because it is my belief that People versus 6 Ramey and United States versus Dorman is the law.

7 QUESTION: How many judges are there on the -- 8 were there in the Central District at that time?

9 MR. WALTER: I would say a dozen, Your Honor.

10 QUESTION: Do you think they all would have 11 followed Judge Ferguson's ruling?

12 MR. WALTER: No, Your Honor, but I know for a 13 fact that what happened as a result of Judge Ferguson's
14 rule is that there was a memorandum that was generated
15 in the United States Attorney's office which indicated
16 that Judge Ferguson had so held, and that memorandum
17 went out to define precisely what Judge Ferguson's 18 ruling was, and suggested to at that time the chief of 19 the Criminal Division that from now on we had better 20 start having agents obtain arrest warrants if they are 21 going to arrest someone in their home.

22 QUESTION: Are you suggesting then that it 23 goes all the way down to the district court, and that if 24 one district judge has so ruled, that is what the law is 25 in the district?

1                   MR. WALTER: No, Your Honor. I am not 2 suggesting it is the law that is in the district, but if 3 as a result of that district court judge's announcement, 4 the government in the form of the United States
5 Attorney's office takes the position that they are going 6 to institute now a warrant requirement, then I think 7 that it is incumbent upon the United States Attorney's 8 office to disseminate that information to various law 9 enforcement agencies that when you come to us for 10 purposes of seeking a complaint or authority to arrest 11 someone, that we are going to require arrest warrants, 12 and I think that is what happened in this case.

13                   This is not the situation, as the government 14 would paint it, that there is a fast-moving series of 15 events by these law enforcement officers who were 16 fearful for their life. These agents, Pickering and 17 Hemingway, they conducted a thorough investigation, and 18 as the result of that investigation they went to the 19 United States Attorney's office and sought approval for 20 a complaint. They were in the sanctity of the United 21 States Attorney's office when they had to make this 22 momentous decision about whether or not they were going 23 to require a warrant, or request a warrant. They did 24 make that decision in favor of obtaining an arrest
25 warrant for Dodd, who was the co-defendant in this case.

1           There is absolutely no reason to believe that 2 there was any difference between Oscar Dodd and my 3 client, Raymond Johnson, with respect to obtaining a 4 warrant, and I think -- and I was precluded from 5 exploring this at the trial court level, and I think the 6 reason for that was is that the Assistant United States
7 Attorney informed the Secret Service agents that there 8 wasn't sufficient probable cause and that they had 9 better go out and interview Mr. Johnson, and hopefully 10 obtain some admissions from Mr. Johnson, so that then 11 they could come back and they would have sufficient 12 probable cause for an arrest warrant.

13           QUESTION: Mr. Walker -- oh, excuse me.

14           QUESTION: As a matter of administration of 15 the U.S. Attorney's office, as a practical matter, since 16 they know they might come with their cases before the 17 same judge, just as a practical matter, wouldn't they 18 try to be prepared to meet that judge's standards even 19 if they didn't agree with them?

20           MR. WALTER: Yes, Your Honor, except that --

21           QUESTION: Why should that be binding on 22 anybody else? I am not quite sure why you suggest that 23 that has any significance in the whole scheme of things.

24           MR. WALTER: Well, again, I think it is 25 significant in terms of the -- of the knowledge properly

1 chargeable to the law enforcement agents in connection
2 with the retroactivity issue. The government argues
3 basically good faith, or it is a law enforcement due 4 process. Law enforcement officers must have notice of 5 this particular requirement, which was to obtain an 6 arrest warrant. I contend that based upon the -- what 7 happened in the Ninth Circuit at this point in time,
8 that the law enforcement officers did have notice, and I 9 submit that if --

10 QUESTION: They had notice that that 11 particular judge would react that particular way.

12 MR. WALTER: That's correct. The problem is 13 is that you don't know which judge the case is going to 14 be assigned to, so --

15 QUESTION: That's right. So it is something 16 like the converse of the strength is the strength of the 17 weakest link.

18 MR. WALTER: Well, Judge Ferguson -- although 19 Judge Ferguson was the only one that I could find that 20 articulated those views, I know that he had several -- I 21 know he still does, has several of his fellow judges who 22 -- at least two or three or four that come to mind, that 23 had a great deal of respect for Judge Ferguson, and 24 probably in a similar situation would have gone -- would 25 have held in the same fashion as Judge Ferguson would 1 have.

2 QUESTION: Mr. Walter, I think it is way over
3 20 minutes down into your 30 minutes. I ask once again,
4 and so help me I will never ask it again, are you going 5 to get to Payton and Hankerson and the other cases that 6 considered retroactivity --

7 MR. WALTER: Yes, well --

8 QUESTION: -- which is the point, the reason 9 this case is here?

10 MR. WALTER: That's correct --

11 QUESTION: Are you going to get to it?

12 MR. WALTER: Yes, Your Honor. I will try. In 13 terms of the retroactivity analysis in this case, I 14 submit that it is not -- it wasn't necessary for the 15 Ninth Circuit opinion to hold that Payton was 16 retroactive. The case could have been decided on the 17 basis that Prescott, which was the -- or, I'm sorry -- 18 yes, Prescott, the Blake case applying Prescott
19 retroactively in the Ninth Circuit.

20 QUESTION: But that case is not here.

21 MR. WALTER: Well, the government --

22 QUESTION: The case that's here is the opinion 23 and judgment of the court of appeals in this case.

24 MR. WALTER: That's correct, Your Honor, and 25 I --

1           QUESTION: And no other case.

2           MR. WALTER: -- and I believe that this Court
3 can affirm the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals judgment
4 on the limited basis that Prescott applied retroactively
5 in this case, the Johnson case, and it is not necessary
6 to decide whether or not Payton applies retroactively, 7 because that was clearly the law of the Ninth Circuit,
8 at least in my view, at the time.

9           In conclusion, Your Honors, the government's 10 position in terms of marginal deterrence and not 11 resolving Fourth Amendment issues in favor of obtaining 12 a warrant or its approach in terms of analyzing the 13 state of the law suggest that the law enforcement can 14 adopt a wait and see attitude or somehow they can be 15 purposefully ignorant until a Ninth Circuit Court of 16 Appeals decision or opinion of this Court is handed down 17 which clearly settles a particular question.

18          I think that that is something that should not 19 be condoned by this Court. I think that the law 20 enforcement officers in the federal system are 21 surrounded by very capable and competent lawyers, and 22 those lawyers are under an obligation -- As indicated in 23 the government's brief, the Department of Justice, after 24 the Second Circuit decision, issued a policy memorandum 25 advising law enforcement that they should now seek

1 arrest warrants.

2 I think that the law enforcement agencies, 3 because they have access to counsel, should rely on 4 counsel, counsel should be able to interpret the 5 particular decisions and arrive at some form of action 6 which will be consistent with what the law will be.

7 Thank you.

8 QUESTION: Mr. Walter, there is no finding 9 here that the officers acted in bad faith. Is that 10 right?

11 MR. WALTER: There is no finding by any 12 court. That's correct.

13 QUESTION: Right.

14 MR. WALTER: Based upon the circumstances of 15 what happened at the home, and how they entered, and the 16 search that was -- that was conducted once they were 17 inside the premises, and I truly believe it was a search 18 -- the government calls it a security check -- they did 19 search each room in the house, they did not go into 20 closets or drawers -- also, the manner in which they 21 waited, I think, is --

22 QUESTION: You are not suggesting that that 23 amounts to bad faith, are you?

24 MR. WALTER: Yes, I am, Your Honor. They -- 25 they observed my client and his wife in a car drive into

1 the driveway of their home. They purposely waited. If 2 they were truly intent upon only interviewing my client 3 with respect to what his involvement was, they could 4 have met him as soon as he got out of the car. Instead, 5 they surveilled him, watched he and his wife go into the 6 house, and then after they were in the house the agents
7 went to the door, using a fictitious name. My client 8 came to the door. They had their guns drawn. They 9 asked if they could go in, and he said, sure. The guns 10 were -- The guns were drawn.

11           If they were truly worried -- and then they 12 conducted the cursory search of the home, and to show 13 you how much time had elapsed, there was evidence in the 14 record that when one of the agents went into the 15 bedroom, that my client's wife was -- was without 16 clothing, and he requested that she dress and come out 17 into the living room. It takes some period of time for 18 that to happen.

19           So, I don't understand, and I do attribute bad 20 faith to these agents, why they waited until they were 21 in the house. I strongly suspect, and the government 22 calls it speculation, and it probably is speculation, 23 these agents knew that my client had a history of heroin 24 addiction. I think what the agents were trying to do is 25 obtain access into that house after allowing a

1 sufficient period of time to elapse from the time they 2 got out of the car to get into the house, hoping that 3 they could find him in possession of some contraband so 4 they could use that and trade upon that in terms of the 5 case that they had investigated against him. So, I do 6 attribute bad faith to them.

7 Thank you.

8 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well.

9 Do you have anything further?

10 ORAL ARGUMENT OF ELLIOTT SCHULDER, ESQ.,

11 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER - REBUTTAL

12 MR. SCHULDER: One or two brief points, Your 13 Honor. I would like to address the question of the fact
14 that this case is on direct review again, Mr. Justice
15 Stevens. As a matter of purely exclusionary rule 16 policy, leaving aside Article III considerations, the 17 first litigant to establish the rule in a particular 18 case shouldn't benefit either from the new rule, but as 19 the Court established in Stovall versus Denno, sound 20 policies of decision-making rooted in Article III 21 require the Court to apply the new rule to that 22 particular litigant.

23 So that in effect it was really Payton who got 24 a windfall if we are looking at it simply from the 25 exclusionary rule policy standpoint.

1           QUESTION: Let me test that with you for just 2 a moment. You recall in his opinion in Desist, Justice
3 Harlan draws a distinction between a court of law and a 4 superlegislature, and if you treat the decisions of this 5 Court as creating new law just out of whole cloth as a 6 superlegislature could, then you can justify that in 7 terms of policies of the exclusionary rule, but 8 supposing in the second argument of the Payton case -- 9 it didn't happen this way -- somebody had done some 10 original historical research and found that the Framers 11 of the Fourth Amendment, some unambiguous language that 12 said, we don't intend to let anybody arrest anybody in 13 his home without a warrant, so that at the time of the 14 decision it was clear that the Court wasn't making some 15 new rule of law like a superlegislature, but was 16 announcing what had always been the law but had not been 17 perceived to be before, and had been the law since the 18 Constitution was first adopted. Would you still make 19 the same argument?

20           All the other policy things are the same. The 21 officer didn't know about it at the time he entered the 22 home, and so forth.

23           MR. SCHULDER: Well, if no one else knew about 24 this particular piece of history --

25           QUESTION: Right.

1           MR. SCHULDER:  -- and everyone had relied on 2 it through the years --

3           QUESTION:  But the fact of the matter is that 4 what the Court did is not make law.  It merely 5 discovered what the law had been since the Constitution
6 was adopted.  Would your argument be the same?

7           MR. SCHULDER:  Yes, it would.  Yes, it would.

8           Another point I would like to make just very 9 briefly is that there are occasions, as in Payton, where 10 the Court does take more than one --

11          QUESTION:  Are you troubled at all when you 12 make the same argument there, that different litigants 13 whose cases are pending at the same time, only one of 14 them gets the benefit of a rule of law that was part of 15 our constitution ever since it was adopted?  Does that 16 bother you at all?

17          MR. SCHULDER:  It doesn't bother me in the 18 context of the exclusionary rule, where the social costs 19 of exclusion are so great.  I would also like to just 20 address myself to the fact that the Court took both 21 Payton and Riddick's cases up, and it sometimes does 22 that --

23          QUESTION:  Well, Mr. Schulder, there is a
24 possibly real matter, the District of Columbia code 25 involving civil rights, a whole provision was lost in

1 the revision, and years later, something like 30 years
2 later, it was found, and this Court said it was the law 3 all along. That is what I think Justice Stevens was 4 talking about. There was no new law.

5 QUESTION: Going back to --

6 QUESTION: It was a statute that was lost.

7 QUESTION: Going back to the hypothetical 8 suggestion, is there any evidence that from 1790 until 9 the Weeks case, that anybody involved in drafting the 10 Constitution or writing the Federalist Papers or 11 anything else ever thought that a court had authority to 12 exclude the evidence of a dead body, the victim of a 13 murder, or pistols, or heroin, or what-not?

14 MR. SCHULDER: Not that I'm aware of, Your 15 Honor. In fact, one of the points involved here is that 16 we are talking about the exclusionary remedy here, 17 whether the remedy should be applied, not whether the 18 substantive right was or was not the law, however we may 19 want to define that.

20 The Court will sometimes, as I was about to 21 say in reference to Justice Stevens' earlier question
22 about why the Court may take two cases or more, there 23 may be certain instances where there are different 24 factual settings in which the Court may want to examine 25 a particular issue. For example, in Payton's case, I

1 believe Payton was not at home and Riddick was. I don't 2 suggest that that is the reason the Court took both 3 cases, but there are several -- there are occasions when 4 the Court may want to examine a difficult question by -- 5 by looking at different factual settings in which that 6 issue may arise.

7           QUESTION: Wouldn't you agree, though, that 8 there are -- maybe you would say it is outweighed by the 9 costs and the interest of law enforcement, but isn't 10 there at least an interest in treating identically
11 situated litigants alike in a court of law? Isn't there 12 some interest in doing that? Applying the same rule to 13 two litigants from different parts of the country who 14 have the same problem? Whatever happened to them 15 happened at the same time in the federal system. Isn't 16 there some interest in having them treated alike?

17           MR. SCHULDER: Well, but --

18           QUESTION: Some interest, sometimes called 19 justice?

20           MR. SCHULDER: Well, but Article III would 21 require the Court to treat one litigant one way and 22 another litigant --

23           QUESTION: And the law enforcement policy of 24 no deterrence and all would say, well, we can forget 25 about the other fellow?

1                   MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

2                   QUESTION: Yes.

3                   QUESTION: Well, on several of the opinions

4 announced this morning, isn't there an indication that

5 for a significant period of time, litigants similarly

6 situated in different circuits were treated differently

7 until we resolved the conflicts with today's opinions in

8 four or five of the cases decided this morning,

9 announced this morning?

10                  MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

11                  QUESTION: I suppose in all those cases in 12 which the judgments are not final, they are subject to 13 re-examination, so they could all be treated alike.

14 After a judgment is final, the problem is a little 15 different.

16                  MR. SCHULDER: Well, I don't believe those

17 cases involve the remedy of exclusion of reliable

18 evidence in a criminal trial, Your Honor.

19                  Thank you.

20                  CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.

21 The case is submitted.

22                  (Whereupon, at 11:08 o'clock a.m., the case in 23 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
