6 ON BEHALF OF THE APPELLANTS

7 MR. LEVERETT: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
8 please the Court:

9 The question in this case is whether the Court
10 of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit duly followed this 11 Court's decision in City of Mobile versus Bolden, in 12 holding that the effect of that decision was to still 13 retain the so-called Zimmer criteria of voting dilution 14 as being sufficient to establish an inference rather 15 than simply requiring a presumption. The appellants in 16 this case respectfully submit that the court of appeals 17 did not follow this Court's decision.

18 This case was filed in 1976 and attacked as an 19 unconstitutional dilution of Black voting rights the 20 at-large method of electing the five county 21 commissioners of Burke County, Georgia, which had been 22 in effect continuously since 1911.

23 According to the 1970 census, Burke County has 24 a population, or had a population of 18,235, 60.91% of 25 which were Black. This case was tried subsequent to the

1 court of appeals' 1978 decision in Nevett v. Sides, 2 holding that while discriminatory purpose must now be 3 shown in a voting dilution case, that it could still be 4 proven by the four discriminatory impact factors which 5 had been identified in Zimmer versus McKeithen.
6 However, the trial was before this Court's decision in 7 Mobile holding that the Zimmer criteria were no longer 8 sufficient.

9 The trial court below specifically held that 10 the 1911 law had not been enacted with a discriminatory 11 purpose, and that Blacks had not been able to show a 12 denial of specific voting processes. The court 13 concluded, however, based upon the socio-economic 14 factors of Zimmer which the court of appeals previously 15 had resuscitated in Nevett II that the system, quote, 16 "is being maintained for invidious purposes."

17 Prior to the decision in the court of appeals 18 on the appeal, this Court decided Mobile versus Bolden.
19 Nevertheless, the court of appeals affirmed the district
20 court, concluding that the Zimmer criteria or factors 21 were still sufficient to establish an inference of 22 discriminatory intent, but that the only effect of this 23 Court's decision in Mobile had been that they were no 24 longer sufficient to establish a presumption. And that 25 secondly, a finding of responsiveness was now of major

1 consideration in that without a finding of 2 responsiveness, the Court said, there could be no 3 establishment of dilution. This apparently was based 4 upon the fact that in the Zimmer case, there had been no 5 showing of lack of responsiveness.

6 In this case, the courts below relied upon the 7 same three Zimmer factors which had been found 8 insufficient in Mobile -- slating, unresponsiveness and 9 past discrimination. The added factor relied upon here, 10 which was socio-economic status that had been depressed, 11 was also present in Mobile, although not denominated or 12 articulated as such.

13 In fact, we submit that the evidence in this 14 case was even stronger than it was in Mobile, for here, 15 unlike Mobile, there was no evidence that there had been 16 efforts to change the system, which as pointed out in 17 Justice White's dissent in Mobile, had been done in such 18 a manner as to indicate the possible inference of 19 discrimination by the timetable or the manner in which 20 the attempted repeal was made, as well as the effort to 21 come in and bolster the system by in 1965 conferring 22 executive responsibilities upon the three city
23 commissioners in Mobile.

24 Notwithstanding this, the court of appeals
25 adhered to the socio-economic disparity impact analysis

1 of the Zimmer. In the companion case involving Thomas
2 County, Georgia, the court specifically reversed a 3 holding of the district court which said that Zimmer is 4 no longer sufficient after the Supreme Court's decision 5 in the Mobile case.

6 We submit that the court of appeals erred in 7 its evaluation of this Court's decision in Mobile, and 8 we say that even assuming that the Zimmer analysis is 9 still sufficient to establish purposeful discrimination, 10 that the plaintiffs in this case failed to carry the 11 burden, and the decision below is clearly erroneous.

12 Firstly, we submit that under no reading of 13 this Court's decision in the Mobile case, can this 14 distinction between presumption versus inference that 15 the court of appeals read into it be sustained. Both in 16 Nevett, which is a 1978 decision, as well as in its 17 companion case of Mobile which later was decided by this 18 Court, the court of appeals below stated the Zimmer test 19 in terms of an inference, and applied it as simply one 20 form of circumstantial evidence subject to the clearly 21 erroneous standard of Rule 52 of the Federal Rules of 22 Civil Procedure.

23 It is significant I think that the plaintiffs 24 do not make any belated or any great effort to support 25 or to defend the decision of the court of appeals on 1 this distinction.

2 The court's decision continuing to treat the 3 Zimmer criteria as being sufficient is contrary to that 4 court's own decision less than a month earlier --

5 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will resume there at 6 1:00 o'clock, Mr. Leverett.

7 (Whereupon, at 12:00 o'clock p.m., the oral 8 argument in the above-entitled matter was recessed for

AFTERNOON SESSION

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Counsel, you may continue.

ON BEHALF OF THE APPELLANTS (Resumed)

MR. LEVERETT: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
please the Court:

I think I was simply commenting when we recessed that the decision of the Fifth Circuit in this case was contrary to a decision of another panel of the same court less than a month earlier in the Escambia County, Florida case, and also, it is contrary to a recent decision of the Fourth Circuit which was decided about a month or so ago.

Now, with respect to the other aspect of the

QUESTION: Both in the same wing of the -- what was formerly the Fifth Circuit?

MR. LEVERETT: The Eleventh Circuit, yes, sir, that is correct.

With respect to the other part of the court's decision on the question of unresponsiveness, the appellants and the appellees are apparently in agreement that the court is in error with respect to that aspect of the holding. We submit further, on behalf of the 1 appellants, that while the matter of unresponsiveness 2 was mentioned in White versus Regester without any 3 discussion as to whether it was a proper subject for 4 judicial resolution, that consideration of that type of 5 inquiry should be precluded by the political question 6 doctrine.

7 Justice Harlan stated it better than anyone in 8 Whitcomb versus Chavis. If there are less appropriate 9 subjects for federal judicial inquiry, they do not 10 readily come to mind.

11 Now, White versus Regester itself does contain 12 the discriminatory intent requirement. Zimmer, however, 13 does not, and in footnote 16 of that decision, the Fifth 14 Circuit stated unequivocally that the focus of the 15 inquiry should be on the effect or impact of the 16 legislation being challenged.

17 As applied to Burke County, Georgia, we submit 18 that since the court below found that the at-large 19 system was not enacted for a discriminatory purpose, 20 that there is no basis for striking it down in this case 21 without at the same time recognizing some constitutional 22 basis of at least some degree of proportionate 23 representation. This is so, we submit, because the 24 touchstone of dilution seems to be access. The evidence 25 here is that in Burke County Blacks have never had any

1 difficulty registering, voting or getting on the 2 ballot. Certainly, since the white primary was stricken 3 down in 1946.

4 Plaintiff Lodge himself testified that Blacks 5 are better organized politically in Burke County than 6 Whites, that they hold rallies at churches, they have 7 organizations that invite candidates, they even 8 distribute a ticket --

9 QUESTION: Mr. Leverett, do you agree or don't 10 you that the court of appeals interpreted the district 11 court's action as having found intentional
12 discrimination.

13 MR. LEVERETT: Yes, sir, by doing this --

14 QUESTION: But they concluded that the 15 district court's findings should be read as finding 16 intentional discrimination.

17 MR. LEVERETT: That is correct, but by relying 18 on the same Zimmer analysis which we submit this Court
19 had held was not sufficient to do that in City of Mobile 20 versus Bolden.

21 QUESTION: But if we -- but assume that we 22 were -- assume the court of appeals was correct that the 23 district court findings overall should be read as 24 finding discriminatory intent, and the court of appeals 25 agreed with that.

1 MR. LEVERETT: Well, if you assume that,
2 you've assumed the case, it would seem to me.

3 QUESTION: Well, no, I suppose we could still 4 say that both were clearly erroneous.

5 MR. LEVERETT: That is the point. We are 6 making that point, too, Justice White.

7 QUESTION: I know you are, I know you are.
8 But is that the only issue, that two courts below found 9 intentional discrimination and that that finding was 10 clearly erroneous? Is that the point?

11 MR. LEVERETT: No, sir. The basic question 12 that we are making here is that the process by which the 13 court found discriminatory intent is fallacious because 14 it is a continuation of the Zimmer criteria which this 15 Court said were impact-type only and did not establish 16 discriminatory purpose or intent.

17 QUESTION: Well, do you agree -- however the 18 district court arrived at it, do you agree that it found 19 intentional discrimination?

20 MR. LEVERETT: Yes, sir. According to the 21 language of the opinion, it --

22 QUESTION: Then how can we disagree with that, 23 especially if it's been accepted by the court of appeals 24 without finding it is clearly erroneous? Do you say 25 that it's because they had an erroneous rule of law.

1 MR. LEVERETT: They applied an erroneous legal 2 standard. We say that even assuming, in this case, that 3 the Zimmer criteria are still valid, assuming that 4 Mobile had not even been decided, that in this case the 5 plaintiffs did not carry the burden and that the finding

7 QUESTION: But would you agree that the thrust
8 of Judge Henderson's dissent was that it should go back 9 because they had not given appropriate weight to the 10 Mobile holding?

11 MR. LEVERETT: Yes, sir. I might say that the 12 Fourth Circuit's decision in Washington versus Findley
13 that just came down deals with this question and said 14 that there was no need to send it back because in that 15 case, at the time the case was tried, the Washington v.
16 Davis had been decided, the parties were on notice that 17 discriminatory intent was necessary and therefore, 18 having not shown it, the case should be dismissed and 19 judgment entered for the defendants.

20 QUESTION: Mr. Leverett, do you agree that the 21 district court can properly look at circumstantial
22 evidence in meeting the Mobile --

23 MR. LEVERETT: Oh, sure, sure. I think the 24 proper approach is set forth in this Court's opinion in 25 Arlington. The four or five factors, the sequence of 1 events, whether what was done represented a substantial

2 departure procedurally-wise, or substantive-wise. I
3 think the proper application of that is well illustrated 4 by the decision of the Fifth Circuit itself in the 5 Escambia County cases where the court considered that at 6 the time Escambia County adopted at-large voting, it 7 went to it right after there had been -- the white 8 primary had been stricken down and there was some 9 arguments made in the newspapers along racial lines.
10 That is the type of proper inquiry that we submit is 11 appropriate in the light of this Court's decision in 12 Mobile.

13 QUESTION: Of course, the district court
14 didn't have Mobile before it.

15 MR. LEVERETT: That's correct, sir, it did 16 not. But the Fifth Circuit, of course, tried to 17 rationalize that by, in effect, saying that Judge Alaimo
18 anticipated Bolden and that he did find discriminatory 19 intent. And, of course, we agree that he found it but 20 the process by which he found it is the question. And 21 that is, through use of the Zimmer criteria which are 22 disparate impact analysis.

23 Contrary to what district court held below,
24 Georgia abolished its poll tax in 1945. District court 25 seems to assume that it was not superseded until the

1 Voting Rights Act. Georgia did have a literacy test 2 which was enforced until the Voting Rights Act. It was 3 recently repealed in the 1981 Constitution which will be 4 voted on this year.

5 However, in Burke County the evidence is that 6 in the memory of no witness has any black person ever 7 been unable to pass the literacy test. Moreover, the 8 evidence was that there had never been any effort to 9 change the at-large system up until this case was 10 filed. We submit that in applying all of this, in light 11 of the evidence in the case, the contention in this case 12 ultimately gets down to this: and that is, is inaction 13 unconstitutional; is there a constitutional duty on a 14 political subdivision to continually assess its 15 political structure and change it simply in order to 16 favor one group that says that they are entitled to 17 elect candidates of their choice? We submit that the 18 answer is no, and that's what this Court said in the 19 City of Mobile case.

20 We submit that the Zimmer analysis is 21 incorrect not only because it reflects a discriminatory 22 impact or disparate impact analysis, but also because of 23 the methodology that it employs, in that it permits the 24 court to grant relief in a voting-related case based 25 upon violations in other areas, such as public

1 education, public employment.

2 We submit that in doing this, the court in the 3 decision violates the rule that the nature of the 4 violation determines the scope of the remedy. It puts 5 the courts in the business of pronouncing condemnation 6 rather than judgment in granting reparations rather than 7 judicial relief.

8 The tendency of the Zimmer analysis to become 9 preoccupied with this very thing is demonstrated by what 10 happened to it as an evolutionary matter in the Fifth 11 Circuit. Originally, there were four factors in the 12 Zimmer analysis. One of those factors was slating. In 13 an early case, Hendricks versus Josephs, the Fifth 14 Circuit said this: It is the ability of Blacks to get 15 on the ballot which is at the core of slating. Yet, in 16 1979 in Cross versus Baxter, the Moultrie, Georgia case 17 and the Adarian case from McIntosh County, Georgia, the 18 Fifth Circuit completely switched over and said in all,
19 it's a question of success, and that the effect of it 20 was to tend to merge the issue of slating with a 21 separate Zimmer factor of a history of prior 22 discrimination which affects present ability of Blacks 23 to have access.

24 In this case, for example, the district court 25 denied -- or held that there was a -- that the

1 plaintiffs had established a lack of slating
2 requirement, because of the fact that there were not 3 anymore Blacks on the Democratic Executive Committee.
4 This was inspite of the fact that the undisputed 5 evidence was that these posts are filled by open 6 election on the same single-member district basis that 7 the plaintiffs were asking for in this case, aside from 8 the fact that about the most unimportant and 9 insignificant job in Georgia is being a member of a 10 county Democratic Executive Committee in a rural 11 county. They've never done very much. They were 12 originally -- their original function was to conduct the 13 primaries, and that was taken over by the probate court 14 in 1970.

15 QUESTION: Well, the county commissioners are 16 rather important, aren't they?

17 MR. LEVERETT: Yes, sir.

18 QUESTION: How many Negroes have ever been 19 elected?

20 MR. LEVERETT: None in the history of Burke
21 County, so far as we can determine, Justice.

22 The complete submergence, however, of the 23 three other Zimmer factors by the one dealing with a 24 history of discrimination came in a 1978 decision of the 25 Fifth Circuit in Kirksey versus Supervisors where a

1 sharply-divided court held that it was now only 2 necessary to show a past history of discrimination and 3 show that that carried forward present effects.

4 The court in that case said that it was not 5 even necessary to even consider Washington versus Davis
6 and the question of discriminatory intent. In other 7 words, this is a remedy case, not a violation case.

8 We submit that the bottom line of the Zimmer
9 analysis which the Fifth Circuit has continued to apply 10 in this case was and is, as the dissent in that case in 11 the Fifth Circuit pointed out, reverse discrimination.

12 I would like now to address the question of 13 Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act which has been argued 14 by the appellees and mentioned by I think all of the 15 four amicus briefs that have been filed in this Court.
16 We submit that Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act does 17 not adopt a disparate impact standard. This Court 18 rejected that argument, we submit, in the Mobile case.
19 The Fourth Circuit recently rejected it in the Columbia, 20 South Carolina case in the same terms as has been 21 submitted to this Court by essentially the same parties.

22 The Court of Appeals of the Fifth Circuit in 23 this case rejected that argument at page 1364 in 24 footnote 11, and there was no cross-appeal from that 25 holding. And we submit that there are valid reasons

1 independently of precedent for rejecting that 2 construction of Section 2.

3 First, you begin with a rule that you look at 4 the language of the statute. The language of the 5 statute uses "deny and abridge", and as the district
6 court in the Uvalde case recognized, these terms 7 themselves connote intent or purpose.

8 Secondly, the Section, in using deny or 9 abridge utilizes the language of the Fourteenth
10 Amendment, and most specifically, the Fifteenth 11 Amendment. And those amendments have unquestionably 12 been interpreted as imposing a discriminatory intent 13 standard.

14 Thirdly, when Congress wanted to adopt a 15 disparate impact analysis, it knew very well how to do 16 so in Sections 3, 4 and 5 of the Voting Rights Act.
17 And, of course, the rule of statutory construction is 18 that where in one statute Congress uses words in one 19 section and it does not use them in another section, the 20 inference is that it did not intend for that section to 21 have the effect of the other sections.

22 Fourth, the statement of Attorney General
23 Katzenbach that has been relied upon by appellees does 24 not support the interpretation that they place upon it.
25 The Attorney General was not asked whether or not

1 Section 2 had a disparate impact test, or a
2 discriminatory purpose test. He was specifically asked
3 whether or not the word "procedure" as used in Section 2
4 would cover a situation where a political subdivision 5 simply just didn't open its registration offices. The 6 Attorney General replied, I suppose that you could if it 7 had that purpose.

8 So here we have the Attorney General himself 9 reading a discriminatory purpose requirement into the 10 statute. Now, it is certainly true that immediately 11 after that, he proceeded to paraphrase the section, and 12 in doing so, we submit, inadvertently utilized the 13 language of Sections 3, 4 and 5 rather than the language 14 of Section 2.

15 The casualness, however, with which he did 16 this invokes and brings into effect, we submit, what 17 this Court held in Allen versus State Board of 18 Elections, which was to the effect that in any case 19 where the legislative hearings and debate are so 20 voluminous no single statement or excerpt of testimony 21 can be conclusive. In that case, the court applied that 22 principle to disregard the statement of Assistant 23 Attorney General Burton Marshall as to the meaning of 24 voting as used in the Voting Rights Act, and held that 25 the statute would be given a much broader scope than the 1 words of the statute would themselves indicate.

2 Now, weighed against this is the statement of 3 Senator Dirksen, -- stated twice, not just once, as this 4 Court's opinion in Mobile had indicated, both at pages 5 171 and 208 of the record before the Senate -- to the 6 effect that Section 2 was simply a restatement of the 7 Fifteenth Amendment, to which Attorney General
8 Katzenbach acquiesced.

9 Fifth, we submit that as a policy matter, this 10 Court should not construe Section 2 as having a 11 disparate impact analysis in the absence of more 12 compelling language or legislative history than the 13 Court is confronted with here. The reason for this is 14 as follows. Section 2 applies to all 50 states, not 15 just to a few colored states. So being a disparate 16 impact standard might well not have the limiting 17 construction that this Court placed upon the effect, 18 purpose and effect language in Section 5 in the Bier 19 case where you held that the law was concerned only with 20 laws that led to retrogression.

21 Now, if you do not apply that restriction on 22 the language in Section 2, this would place in doubt the 23 validity of election codes, governmental organizations, 24 the districting schemes and congressional districts, 25 state legislative districts and local political

1 subdivision districts all over the country. It would 2 also raise serious questions about the validity of 3 candidate and voter qualifications, and possibly require 4 a validation procedure similar to that used with respect
5 to employment tests under Title VII of the Civil Rights 6 Act of 1964.

7 Moreover, imposing a disparate impact
8 requirement on Section 2 would create a lot more 9 mischief than it would even, for example, in the 10 Fourteenth Amendment. The reason is that the Fourteenth 11 Amendment does not purport to protect only certain 12 people, whereas Section 2 does. And at least under the 13 Fourteenth you would have to consider the impact on 14 everyone, not just on a few. Under 2, however, it 15 protects only racial and language minority citizens, and 16 a disparate impact test there would be almost mandate 17 for reverse discrimination.

18 I'd like to reserve what time I have left.

19 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Walbert?

20 ORAL ARGUMENT OF DAVID F. WALBERT, ESQ.

21 ON BEHALF OF THE APPELLEES

22 MR. WALBERT: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
23 please the Court:

24 I think that one issue underlies every 25 decision of this Court that has dealt with this matter

1 of legislative reapportionment of racial discrimination,
2 starting with Whitcomb and going to White versus 3 Regester, Burns versus Fordsen and the Mobile case.

4 That issue is when the normal political 5 process is going on in any community, when there is the 6 regular give and take and black people or any racial 7 minority may lose at the polls in that circumstance, 8 that's too bad. And that's part of the political 9 process, that's the give and take that I think Justice
10 Stevens is talking about in the Mobile case.

11 It's not the role of this Court to sit back as 12 the political arbiter for the United States and say 13 well, there are not enough Blacks elected in this 14 county, there's not enough in this county and so on and 15 intercede. That's obviously a political question and is 16 not a constitutional question.

17 But I think the one thing that does 18 characterize all of the Court's decisions and starting 19 with Whitcomb versus Chavis where again there was 20 complete intercourse politically among Blacks and 21 Whites. Black people and white people were in all the 22 parties together, they ran together, they were slated
23 together and so on. And the difference is when black 24 people, when the racial minority is totally excluded 25 from the political process on account of purposeful

1 discrimination, you've got a constitutional problem and 2 you don't have the normal give and take of the political 3 process where this Court has no function.

4 QUESTION: Well, would there be any question 5 about that if you -- if the fulcrum of your statement is 6 purposeful discrimination?

7 MR. WALBERT: Well, Your Honor, --

8 QUESTION: I suspect your friend would not 9 disagree with that.

10 MR. WALBERT: Well, I think what I'm referring 11 to what the Court has held, for example, in White versus 12 Regester, and I would like to look at the findings in 13 that case and what was relied upon to find exclusion of 14 the political process.

15 And in White versus Regester -- and again,
16 Justice Stevens and the whole Court in the plurality 17 opinion distinguishes white on what ground? The fact 18 that there was no evidence in Mobile -- rather, in 19 distinguishing Mobile from White they say there's no 20 evidence there of any real exclusion from the political 21 process that is a result of any kind of discrimination, 22 purposeful or not.

23 And the question here, I think, the first 24 question is what is this kind of exclusion from the 25 political process. Now, I think this case -- the

1 findings of this case in the trial court and the court 2 of appeals show as strong an exclusion and omission from 3 the political process of the black people in Burke
4 County as you could possibly have in any case.

5 The first thing that -- and again, let me
6 refer to Mobile. The district court in Mobile made a 7 finding that black people did not have access to the 8 political process. That finding was based on one thing 9 and only one thing, and that was racial block voting.

10 QUESTION: Is it probably not true that there 11 are more women of voting age in the United States than 12 there are men?

13 MR. WALBERT: I think that's slightly true, 14 statistically.

15 QUESTION: What's the ratio of women holding 16 elective public offices as --

17 MR. WALBERT: Your Honor, I don't think 18 at-large elections I don't think could have the purpose 19 or the effect of discriminating against women since they 20 don't live in segregated areas.

21 QUESTION: Well, I'm getting at a different 22 aspect of it.

23 MR. WALBERT: All right.

24 QUESTION: There is only a small percentage of 25 elective offices in this country that are held by

1 women. Is that not so?

2 MR. WALBERT: I think that varies from where 3 you go, place to place, and as obviously in any 4 political question you've got to look at the facts of 5 that political environment to determine --

6 QUESTION: Well in the country as a whole.

7 MR. WALBERT: I suppose that's probably true.

8 QUESTION: Is that a result of some purposeful 9 discrimination, or is it just the disinclination of 10 women to run for elective office, or maybe the 11 disinclination of some voters to vote for them?

12 MR. WALBERT: With all due respect, Mr. Chief 13 Justice, I don't know what the cause of that is, but I 14 do know what the cause is in Burke County. I think, 15 with all respect, the findings of fact of the district 16 court here show quite clearly why it is. We do have 17 findings here.

18 QUESTION: Surely, women were subject for 19 many, many years before the Constitution was amended, to 20 an exclusion from the political process, were they not?

21 MR. WALBERT: I'm sure that's true.

22 QUESTION: Conscious in the sense that they 23 were not permitted to vote.

24 MR. WALBERT: I'm sure that's true, and 25 possibly this Court should address that issue in another

1 case. But I don't think it has to do with the Burke
2 County facts and what the issue is in this case.
3 Because we show --

4 QUESTION: Well, does it not bear? You said
5 no one has been elected to public office in this 6 jurisdiction, and relatively few women are elected to 7 public office in this country.

8 MR. WALBERT: Well, Mr. Chief Justice, let me
9 --

10 QUESTION: But that doesn't mean that someone 11 is discriminating against women.

12 MR. WALBERT: Certainly not.

13 QUESTION: You can't draw that inference, can 14 you?

15 MR. WALBERT: I would certainly not draw that 16 inference in terms of any constitutional conclusion.
17 We're not trying to do that in this case by any stretch
18 of the imagination. We are certainly not trying to do 19 that.

20 I think that what we have shown -- and I would 21 like to point out that it is certainly, it is not 22 accurate to say that the district court found no 23 violations of the explicit right to vote in terms of 24 casting your ballot and registering in this case. I 25 think that we ought to read exactly what was found, and

1 that sentence which is quoted in the appellant's brief 2 leaves off after the sentence. Which is that there were 3 no violations exactly like those in Hinds County found 4 here.

5 QUESTION: What are you reading from now, so 6 we can --

7 MR. WALBERT: In the Jurisdictional Statement
8 in the court of appeals' opinion, an in footnote 38
9 they're referring to the district --

10 QUESTION: What page is that on?

11 MR. WALBERT: I'm sorry, 44a of the 12 Jurisdictional Statement in the Appendix. Reading from 13 that it says, Of particular significance, given the 14 plurality position in Bolden that the Fifteenth 15 Amendment violation occurs only when there's proof that 16 the right to register and vote was directly impinged, is 17 the district court's finding that such overt conduct was 18 taking place even at the time the present lawsuit was 19 filed.

20 Now, the evidence to support those findings, 21 which I don't think are shown is clearly erroneous in 22 this case, were overwhelming. Because if you go back to 23 when the 1964 Voting Rights Act was passed, you find a 24 refusal by the county from then on to provide 25 registration opportunities for black people. There was

1 on registration site that was in the county, in the 2 county seat. That was a 829-square mile county. The 3 evidence is undisputed in the findings of the trial 4 court are that black people, because of their tremendous 5 --

6 QUESTION: Mr. Walbert, did the district court 7 grant any relief for this particular interference with 8 access to the polls? And if not, why not?

9 MR. WALBERT: Well, I think for this reason,
10 Your Honor. I think that there's obviously a more major 11 issue. We did not ask for specific relief on that 12 question.

13 QUESTION: Well, I wonder if it is a more 14 major issue, because if there were unrestricted access 15 to the polls, if everybody of voting age voted, it would 16 seem to me that your clients would be better off with 17 the at-large system because you'd have a majority of the 18 voting age population.

19 MR. WALBERT: Again, with all due respect, 20 Justice Stevens, I think that would be not looking at 21 all the findings in this case, and the showing that the 22 exclusion from the political process, the inability to 23 deal in it, is more than just a product of registration
24 discrimination.

25 QUESTION: But is the exclusion from the

1 political process something that the court had the power 2 to remedy?

3 MR. WALBERT: I think it did in the sense of 4 this particular statute. That statute is --

5 QUESTION: Then why didn't it do that? That's 6 what puzzles me about the case.

7 MR. WALBERT: Well, the court of appeals I
8 think addresses that very well, because it talks about 9 -- and I think that may be on page 55a. And they say 10 there, Justice Stevens, and I think this is the best 11 answer to that question, "We conclude that the remedy 12 ordered is not only permitted, but under the facts 13 presented it may be required. The picture the 14 plaintiffs paint is all too clear. The vestiges of 15 racism encompass the totality of life in Burke County, 16 discriminatory acts of public officials enjoy a 17 symbiotic relationship with those of the private sector, 18 and the situation is not susceptible to isolated remedy."

19 QUESTION: That doesn't clearly answer my 20 question.

21 MR. WALBERT: Well, this is no longer --

22 QUESTION: Why didn't it do anything in that 23 regard if there is a problem of access? Maybe it 24 wouldn't have been enough, but the judge apparently 25 didn't find impediments to the polls that needed to be

1 removed.

2 MR. WALBERT: Well, I don't think that's true.
3 As the court says, it was only because of the court's 4 pressure that there was any addition in registration 5 sites. The court did pressure that. That's the finding 6 of the court.

7 QUESTION: But he didn't enter a decree that 8 had anything to do with registration sites.

9 MR. WALBERT: I think he was able to 10 accomplish the addition --

11 QUESTION: And that puzzles me, because if it 12 was as serious a problem as you indicate, I just can't 13 understand why a district judge wouldn't have done 14 something to correct the situation.

15 MR. WALBERT: Well, Your Honor, there was no
16 specific request for that. The district court did 17 quadruple the --

18 QUESTION: Well, even more surprisingly then, 19 why would there be no request for that kind of 20 protection?

21 MR. WALBERT: Because I think it was very 22 clear to us that it really would not have remedied the 23 problem. The exclusion --

24 QUESTION: Well, but it doesn't have to be a 25 total remedy to be something that would be appropriate

1 as part of an overall remedy.

2 MR. WALBERT: Your Honor, under -- the 3 at-large election system is really the lynchpin in the 4 entire structure here which keeps black people out of 5 the pri --

6 QUESTION: Well it wouldn't be if there were 7 unrestricted access to the polls. Then you'd be better 8 off with the at-large system.

9 MR. WALBERT: That's not true, Your Honor.
10 It's not a Black majority county anymore. I'd like 11 correct that allegation.

12 QUESTION: Well, it was according to the 13 allegations in the complaint.

14 MR. WALBERT: It was at the time of the 1960
15 Census, they were saying. At the time of trial, and --

16 QUESTION: Well, the allegation in the 17 complaint speaks as of the present. It doesn't say 18 anything about the Census. Paragraph 11 alleges the 19 population.

20 MR. WALBERT: Your Honor, speaking of 21 majority. The voting age population. There is a 22 substantial disparity between actual population and 23 voting age population in this county. If you go to 24 voting age population --

25 QUESTION: Paragraph 11 deals with voting age,

1 yes.

2 MR. WALBERT: At the time of trial and 3 according to the 1980 Census, which is the most recent 4 thing we have, it is a black minority county by voting 5 age population.

6 QUESTION: What was that figure again?

7 MR. WALBERT: It was the 1980 Census.

8 QUESTION: 1980. But what was the figure?

9 MR. WALBERT: It's about 47% is the percentage 10 of Blacks at this time in the county.

11 QUESTION: How would you characterize the 53?
12 Is that one solid homogeneous unit, are there any 13 Hispanics or any other ethnic groups?

14 MR. WALBERT: No, it's essentially homogenous 15 in terms of --

16 QUESTION: Does the record show that?

17 MR. WALBERT: The census data that is in the 18 record shows that, yes.

19 I think, Your Honor, too, to look at these 20 other exclusionary factors. Let's look at the 21 Democratic Party which is being always continually 22 belittled as being insignificant in this county. The 23 Democratic Party, the Democratic Executive -- it's a 24 one-county party. It's still the old traditional 25 one-county -- one-party county. The Democrats are

1 always elected to local office. The Democratic 2 Executive Committee contains all those people who are 3 elected to office. You can belittle being a member of 4 the Democratic Executive Committee, but unless you are a 5 Democratic Executive Committee member, as a matter of 6 fact you do not hold office in this county. So you can 7 say it's not important, but it obviously is very 8 important.

9 QUESTION: Well, which comes first, here? Are 10 they elected first and then become a member of the 11 committee or do they become a member of the committee 12 first and then get elected?

13 MR. WALBERT: Well, there's more than just 14 elected officials in the party. To take some examples, 15 people --

16 QUESTION: I'm talking about the Executive 17 Committee. Do they get on the Executive Committee 18 because they hold an elective office?

19 MR. WALBERT: No, there's no formality like 20 that. No, Your Honor.

21 QUESTION: Mr. Walbert, I'm puzzled by the 22 district court's methodology here. On page 71a, the 23 district courts makes the finding which you quote on the 24 first page of your brief, I think, that moreover, it is 25 evident that the present scheme of electing county

1 commissioners, although racially neutral when adopted,
2 is being maintained for invidious purposes.

3 Now, there are two findings on the question of 4 intent. One, there was no intent when adopted but is 5 presently being maintained with a discriminatory 6 purpose. And I can understand a district court's 7 summarizing the evidence which led it to that 8 conclusion. But if the district court's approach is 9 consistent with Mobile, I'm at a loss to know why you 10 went through all these so-called Zimmer factors later in 11 the opinion, as if he still hadn't covered the ground.

12 MR. WALBERT: I think there's two reasons for 13 that, Justice Rehnquist. I think the district court in 14 a way -- Zimmer was still the law, in a way, in the 15 Fifth Circuit. And as the Fifth Circuit clearly says, 16 though, in this case, Judge Alaimo did something more 17 than just a Zimmer analysis. And remember what the 18 Zimmer analysis used to be before Mobile. That was, you 19 add up three categories and if you win on two or three, 20 it's a legal presumption. It's sort of like -- it's a 21 game almost, in a sense.

22 Judge Alaimo did this. He categorized the 23 evidence according to the Zimmer categories, and I think 24 he was right in doing that. But it does not create a 25 legal problem like Mr. Leverett says because of this:

1 all the evidence you could think of to prove intentional
2 discrimination fits in one Zimmer category or another.
3 To say that you outline the evidence by the Zimmer 4 categories almost says nothing. There's no defect in 5 the district court's opinion because he organized it 6 under the Zimmer categories.

7 For example, the very first one, the first 8 Zimmer category, is access to the political system.
9 Now, I can't think of any evidence of intentional 10 discrimination in using the at-large system that really 11 wouldn't fit under that category.

12 I think the question here is -- and this has 13 always been the problem with Zimmer because it's so, 14 kind of an amorphous thing, but the question is what was 15 the evidence and what were the findings underneath those 16 Zimmer categories. That's the key thing. Not whether 17 or not he outlined it according to Zimmer.

18 And again, let's look at Mobile because Mobile 19 made a finding that there was no access to the political 20 system in that case. That was based one thing, and that 21 was racial block voting. In this case, it was based on 22 much more than that -- registration discrimination, 23 exclusion from the Democratic Party, which is vastly 24 more exclusionary type of evidence than occurred in 25 White versus Regester where it was just some kind of a

1 private slating organization.

2 We had the freeholder requirement. There's 3 always been a freeholder requirement to run for county 4 commissioner, and that has a devastating impact on the 5 ability of the black people to run.

6 So I think that, again, just the fact that 7 Zimmer is used by the district court as a method of 8 organizing the evidence does not tell us that there's 9 something wrong as a matter of law. And the court of 10 appeals looked very closely and said that the district 11 court did, in fact, make a separate and independent 12 finding of intent. And I think this Court should, in 13 some part, defer to that decision as well.

14 QUESTION: Mr. Walbert, I guess one of the 15 important things we have to resolve in this case is 16 whether the court of appeals appropriately articulated 17 the standards under Mobile versus Bolden, and the court 18 of appeals in its opinion placed great emphasis on the 19 finding of unresponsiveness. Is that a requirement in 20 your view of Mobile, or is that sufficient under Mobile, 21 and would you address yourself to the court of appeals 22 and whether it adhered to the Mobile standard.

23 MR. WALBERT: Yes. I think Justice O'Connor
24 has added in a new burden on the plaintiffs. It said it 25 as a sine qua non of prevailing, you just prove it as an

1 essential element of the case even if you proved 2 intentional discrimination. So I think in that regard, 3 it adds something in that Mobile never talked about or 4 never suggested and we would say A, that's wrong, but B, 5 it has nothing to do with this appeal. Because all that 6 could have done was hurt us; it could not have hurt the 7 defendant.

8 The court does not give controlling weight to 9 the question of responsiveness; only controlling against 10 the plaintiffs. It does not say if you prove it, that's 11 a strong inference or presumption of discrimination. It 12 expressly says that in one of the footnotes, number of 13 which I can't recall offhand, but it says that 14 responsiveness is significant only in its absence
15 because that's failed. It does not accord undue 16 significance at all to proof of responsiveness, in terms 17 of inferring discrimination.

18 QUESTION: Isn't this, in your view, this is 19 based on the facts of this case.

20 MR. WALBERT: Absolutely, Your Honor.

21 QUESTION: That the district court made the 22 finding of discrimination, and you don't want us to go 23 any further than that, do you?

24 MR. WALBERT: That's correct, Justice
25 Marshall. And it is clear and the court of appeals

1 reviews the whole record and it says, this is what was 2 done. There was a finding of intentional discrimination 3 in maintaining the system.

4 QUESTION: And that's all you want.

5 MR. WALBERT: And that's all that needs to be 6 assessed.

7 I think that we have the question of whether 8 or not Zimmer, or Mobile, was followed. And I think 9 there's a tremendous scholastic analysis of Zimmer and 10 the law in the Fifth Circuit's opinion. And you can 11 look here and you can look there and you can make 12 something out of this language or that language. But 13 fortunately, the Fifth Circuit has a little section in 14 its opinion which says what is the rule established by 15 Zimmer? And that is on page 39a of the Appendix of the 16 Jurisdictional Statement.

17 And I think if this Court finds that that is 18 inadequate, then I think Mr. Leverett's right. I think 19 the case should be reversed as to the finding of 20 intent. But I think that decision of what the rule 21 established is entirely correct and totally in accord of 22 what the plurality -- even the plurality opinion said in 23 Mobile.

24 And that's this: First of all, the court says 25 that according to the plurality -- and again, the

1 Mobile, the Fifth Circuit, rather, in this case tried to 2 follow the Mobile plurality. It didn't try and go off
3 in any other direction; it tried to follow the plurality 4 opinion. It said discriminatory purpose is necessary in 5 challenging the maintenance of an at-large election 6 system. That's the first thing, and that's certainly 7 consistent with the plurality.

8 Secondly, it says that you may infer intent
9 from the totality of the circumstantial evidence. There 10 now is no dispute over that, Mr. Leverett agrees with 11 that.

12 The third thing it says is an essential 13 element of the prima facie case is unresponsiveness and 14 we just talked about that.

15 Now, the next thing in here is really where he 16 talks about Zimmer and I'd like to read this portion.
17 It's about three sentences and it says this: --

18 QUESTION: What page are you on?

19 MR. WALBERT: This is page 39a of the 20 Jurisdictional Statement toward about six lines up, 21 eight lines up from the bottom. And it says, The Zimmer 22 critiera may be indicative but not dispositive on the 23 question of intent. Those factors are relevant only to 24 the extent that they allow the trial court to draw an 25 inference of intent. The Zimmer criteria are not the

1 exclusive indicia of discriminatory purpose, and to the 2 extent that they are not factually relevant in a given 3 case, they may be replaced or supplemented by more 4 meaningful factors. Even if all the Zimmer and other 5 factors are established, an inference of discriminatory 6 purpose is not necessarily to be drawn.

7 The trial court must consider the totality of 8 the circumstances and ultimately on the precise issue of 9 discriminatory purpose, and that is the rule established 10 by the court of appeals in this case, and that complies, 11 in my opinion, absolutely 100% with the plurality
12 opinion in Mobile.

13 The court of appeals then went on to apply it 14 to the facts of this case and said that's just what the 15 district court did; it made that ultimate, precise 16 finding of intentional discrimination and intentional 17 motivation and purpose in using the at-large system, 18 based on all the circumstantial evidence available to it.

19 And the evidence here -- again, it just pales 20 by comparison in the Mobile case, if we look at that 21 case. There was no evidence whatsoever of anybody being 22 excluded from the political process except by racial 23 block voting. There was no evidence at all of being 24 excluded from the process. District court found as a 25 matter of fact that black people participated openly and

1 without hindrance of any sort in the political process
2 in Mobile. True, they lost at the polls, but that's 3 certainly not enough.

4 In this case we've got continued efforts to 5 exclude people from the political process through the 6 findings of the district court on voter registration and 7 not allowing voter registration to be accessible. And 8 you know, it's interesting, you know voter registration 9 has been restricted in this county since the Voting 10 Rights Act was passed.

11 You say well, is that discriminatory? Well, 12 99.7% of the white people in Burke County were 13 registered as of 1968, according to the facts in the 14 record. We had judicial notice of that taken on I think 15 page 220 of the record. So when you talk about having 16 restricted access, and making it very difficult --

17 QUESTION: That's a very high percentage, 18 isn't it?

19 MR. WALBERT: It's a very civic-minded, white 20 community.

21 QUESTION: Throughout the country, have you 22 anything in this record to suggest what's the national

24 MR. WALBERT: We have. The only thing there
25 is, Chief Justice Burger, is as to Georgia. We have a

1 number of the Georgia counties in there. We do not have 2 the national average.

3 There is also evidence -- and again, I --

4 QUESTION: What percentage of the minority 5 population are registered?

6 MR. WALBERT: Well, it was negligible in 1965
7 and it has finally --

8 QUESTION: It was practically zero in 1965.

9 QUESTION: But currently.

10 MR. WALBERT: I think it's about 40%.

11 QUESTION: 38% was the figure that I thought I 12 recalled.

13 MR. WALBERT: 38% of the registered voters are 14 black, and 62% are white, but I'm not sure what the 15 percentage of whites and blacks are.

16 QUESTION: And 40% of them are registered, is 17 that it?

18 MR. WALBERT: I think that's not right. I'm 19 not sure what the exact number is on that and I wouldn't 20 want to say without actually calculating that, at this 21 time.

22 QUESTION: Mr. Walbert, isn't it probable that 23 in every colored jurisdiction in the South where there 24 was substantial impediment to voting prior to 65 that 25 you would have a case proved upon the Zimmer factors by

1 virtue of that history?

2 MR. WALBERT: Your Honor, again --

3 QUESTION: Regardless of whether it's at-large 4 or what. Whatever it is, these factors would prove 5 invidious intent, wouldn't they?

6 MR. WALBERT: I think maybe the best answer to 7 that is the only other written order I know of that 8 Judge Alaimo rendered in this case showed Zimmer-type 9 factors in the sense Your Honor may mean, and then they 10 lost. That's the McIntosh County case that Mr. Leverett 11 referred to.

12 QUESTION: Is that right?

13 MR. WALBERT: So I think that's absolutely not 14 true. I think you can look at the record and see that 15 that did not occur.

16 And this case is an extreme case in terms of 17 the facts. I mean, to have manipulation of the voter 18 registration process in 1976 I think tells us a lot. I 19 think to have the county commissioners calling black 20 people niggers in the county commissioner meetings, 21 which is the evidence in this case, that says something 22 about racial attitudes. I think the refusal to --

23 QUESTION: And tests asking such questions as 24 how many windows there are in the White House. That was 25 another one, wasn't it?

1 MR. WALBERT: Well, sure, the voting -- yes.
2 I mean, I don't think anybody here could pass the voter 3 registration test. Nobody in this courtroom, and not 4 any member of the bar of this Court could pass the 5 Georgia test.

6 QUESTION: I tried and I failed.

7 MR. WALBERT: I think Constance Baker Motley
8 failed, too, from what I heard at one time.

9 But I think that, again, the evidence --

10 QUESTION: That's true in so many -- the thing
11 that puzzles me is whether it's the district boundaries 12 that are the remedy for that kind of very plain evil.
13 It certainly --

14 MR. WALBERT: Your Honor, all I can say is the 15 best answer to that is to just read the district court's 16 opinion and read the Fifth Circuit opinion, and I 17 honestly think there can't be much doubt about the 18 inadequacy of that one little remedy. That is part of 19 the problem. But I think, you've got --

20 QUESTION: Well he didn't do anything to 21 remedy this kind of impediment to access to the --

22 MR. WALBERT: That would not help the 23 Democratic Party exclusion; that would not help the 24 finding of the district court that black people cannot 25 campaign in this county because of the deep-rooted

1 rascism in the county. That would not have touched
2 that. You're excluded from the political party -- you
3 can't campaign in Burke County if you're a Black, 4 according to the findings of the district court, which 5 were affirmed by the court of appeals. That's extreme 6 findings.

7 There is no political process here going on,
8 Justice Stevens, in the sense that you talk about it in 9 Mobile. There is no give and take. That doesn't exist 10 in Burke County, and by no stretch of the imagination is 11 that characteristic of the South today.

12 In fact, --

13 QUESTION: Well, if all those things are true, 14 I don't care what your boundaries are, they just don't 15 have a chance.

16 MR. WALBERT: Well, I think that an 17 interesting thing happened after the district court's 18 order in 1978 which was ultimately studied by this 19 Court, but five districts were set up, and we 20 immediately saw for the first time in the history of the 21 county five black people qualified for each of those 22 district election posts, pursuant to the district court 23 order.

24 I think that speaks quite loudly in terms of 25 what would happen to the political process if you had

1 majority black districts, which is inevitable if you
2 re-district the system. That is absolutely inevitable.
3 Then I think you're going to see a complete change in 4 the political behavior in the political process. I 5 think that's inevitable.

6 And I don't think that isolated remedies, -- 7 as the court of appeals said, an isolated remedy will 8 not do it in Burke County. There is too many dimensions 9 to this problem, and the lynchpin of it is the 10 intentional maintenance of the system -- and again, --

11 QUESTION: The irony of the remedy is that in 12 a county which according to the facts found by the 13 district court -- you tell me the 1980 Census is 14 different now -- the majority black county, he divides 15 up five districts and gives majority whites -- the 16 whites are in the majority in three of the five. I 17 could imagine people with the racially-discriminatory 18 purpose on the white side of the ledger wanting that 19 remedy. I suppose it would be unconstitutional if they 20 did.

21 MR. WALBERT: I think the key is to look at 22 what the purpose was. I don't know if we should 23 conjecture about this or that. I mean, there was found 24 to be a discriminatory -- the purpose here was to 25 discriminate in the use of at-large elections, in this

1 case under these facts. And I think that's really the 2 key to it. And we shouldn't say what might have 3 happened over in Mobile or what might happen in the next 4 county over in Wilkes County, what might happen in 5 Augusta, Georgia.

6 What happened here is that the district court
7 found, based on all this incredible evidence, that there 8 was --

9 QUESTION: Would this remedy be 10 unconstitutional if there were evidence in the record 11 that some white bigots favored this way of getting the 12 three-to-two majority control? I could imagine that 13 could -- you know, sometimes people of the same race 14 have different views as to what's in their best interest.

15 MR. WALBERT: Sure. I think not, Your Honor, 16 because I think, again, something is very clear from 17 this record. And that is black people will be excluded 18 so long as the at-large system is maintained, period.
19 That can be remedied only by having a district election
20 system, period. Those two things are unequivocal.

21 So, to remedy the existing exclusion, if you 22 can't do it by keeping at-large, you must have a 23 district system. Now certainly, I can conceive of 24 gerrymandering the system so you could have allegations 25 of racism or racial discrimination as a gerrymander, and

1 that's conceivable. But to say that districting somehow 2 has a purpose or intent to discriminate or is 3 unconstitutional I do not see that that is possible on 4 the record or the facts of this case. That isn't 5 possible.

6 QUESTION: You would be making the same 7 argument if 60% of the population were black -- 60% of 8 the voting age population were black.

9 MR. WALBERT: Your Honor, I think we don't 10 have that case. I think, again, I think the key thing 11 --

12 QUESTION: But when this suit was filed you 13 had, what, 53%?

14 MR. WALBERT: Well, the voting -- it had been 15 -- if you look at from 1920 on --

16 QUESTION: Let's assume you had 60%.

17 MR. WALBERT: It would depend entirely on the 18 facts of the particular county.

19 QUESTION: Same facts, except 60%.

20 MR. WALBERT: 60% black voter registration?

21 QUESTION: Yes.

22 MR. WALBERT: I suppose you'd have to decide 23 whether or not blacks had any possibility of becoming a 24 majority of the registered voters. If all the other 25 barriers were removed, and in this county it is clearly

1 impossible, so I think --

2 QUESTION: Why? Why?

3 MR. WALBERT: Well, as the findings show, the 4 --

5 QUESTION: I'm talking about now and not 15
6 years ago. You mean if a Black shows up to be 7 registered, he is not allowed to register?

8 MR. WALBERT: Your Honor, I think that the 9 registration has been made inaccessible. We have black 10 people who are too poor to get to the polling places, 11 according to the finding. They can't even get to the 12 polling places in this county and the state law will not 13 allow you to vote by absentee ballot if you have no 14 money to buy transportation. If you're physically 15 handicapped, you can vote that way. But if you're too
16 poor to get to the polls -- and I think an expert
17 witness called by Mr. Leverett, Dr. Robinson, testified 18 that he was astounded at the percentage of black people 19 who had no transportation to even get to the polls in 20 this county. He was astounded by that fact.

21 So I think you've got to -- you know, under 22 the precise circumstances of this county, you've got a 23 very severe case, Justice Powell. You can't really say 24 what would happen over here if you changed this fact, 25 because you don't have that fact in this county.

1 QUESTION: In some states there are statutory 2 prohibitions against rounding up voters and taking them 3 in in a truck or car or a bus. Any such statutes in 4 Georgia? Anything wrong --
5 MR. WALBERT: Of driving somebody to the polls?
6 QUESTION: Yes.
7 MR. WALBERT: I've never heard of a statute
8 like that in any state, Mr. Chief Justice.
9 QUESTION: Well, there are some.
10 MR. WALBERT: It is not illegal to take -- 11 QUESTION: There's nothing in Georgia that 12 would prevent someone from renting a bus and going 13 around and getting voters.
14 MR. WALBERT: It is legal to take somebody 15 else to the polls, and I don't know of any number 16 limitations. I mean, there's limitations on how many 17 people you can assist at the polls that might be 18 construed -- maybe that's the kind of law Your Honor is 19 referring to. Maybe that can be construed to make it 20 illegal to even do that.
21 I think --
22 QUESTION: Is this a rural county.
23 MR. WALBERT: Yes, it is.
24 QUESTION: So one limitation would be money, 25 wouldn't it?

1 MR. WALBERT: Fifty-three percent of the black
2 people in Burke County live under 75% of the poverty 3 level. They're poorer than poor in Burke County. The 4 people in Burke County don't have the money to rent a 5 bus to take the other people to the polls. That's not 6 even a practical situation in this situation. It is an 7 intense and extreme case. It is not something you can 8 transfer from one place to another.

9 I think I would finally, Your Honors, like to 10 mention the Voting Rights Act here and Section 2 which 11 Mr. Leverett addressed because I think that that 12 provision, of course, has not really been ruled on by 13 this Court yet. And frankly, I think this Court ought 14 to decide this case based on Section 2 rather than 15 getting into these constitutional issues.

16 Our position on Section 2 was addressed by the 17 court in Mobile by, I think, five or six of the justices 18 and there was no majority opinion under Section 2. The 19 plurality said that it's the same thing as the Fifteenth 20 Amendment, no more. And in dissent, Justice Marshall 21 and Justice Brennan said it is -- it covers effect as 22 well, and it covers these kind of practices, and Justice
23 White and Justice Blackmun and Justice Stevens took no
24 position on Section 2. So there's no opinion of this 25 Court, and I think that this Court ought to seriously

1 consider that issue.

2 And our position is not, as Mr. Leverett says, 3 that everything with any impact or effect on black 4 voters is illegal under Section 2. Our position is 5 simply that where you have a neutral device that 6 perpetuates these clear cosequences of past purposeful 7 discrimination, then that is reached -- those kind of 8 effects and only those are reached by Section 2 of the 9 Voting Rights Act.

10 I think that if we look at the plurality 11 opinion we can see one problem with it right away, and 12 that is that it holds that Section 2 applies only to 13 outright and absolute denials of the right to vote only 14 if you are not allowed into the voting booth, and that's 15 a problem. Because the coverage provision of Section 2
16 is exactly like the coverage provision of Section 5.
17 That is, the kind of practices that are covered has 18 exactly the same language. There's no question about 19 that.

20 This Court held unanimously I think it was in 21 Allen versus Board of Elections that that language 22 covers at-large elections. So the only question I think 23 we really have to recognize that the plurality was in 24 error was with regard to that construction, that aspect 25 of Section 2. And it really should seriously -- I think

1 the Court should seriously consider that issue and 2 dispose of this case on a Section 2 ground.

3 Now, --

4 QUESTION: What did the court of appeals say 5 about that issue?

6 MR. WALBERT: They followed the plurality.
7 They followed the plurality ruling, Your Honor, and they 8 just followed the plurality. They said that we did not 9 -- that Section 2 did not give a cause of action above
10 and beyond what the Constitution or the Fifteenth 11 Amendment would in its own right.

12 QUESTION: So your Section 2 argument was 13 presented --

14 MR. WALBERT: Oh absolutely. We pled it in 15 our complaint, we raised it at all stages of the case, 16 and we presented it to the court of appeals and it was 17 rejected. But we do rely on that in appeal.

18 Now, I think that the legislative history is 19 very clear on this, too. There is Attorney General 20 Katzenbach's statement. This court has said over and 21 over that Attorney General Katzenbach's statements about 22 what the Voting Rights Act meant are very important 23 because he wrote it. This is an administration proposal.

24 And finally, Your Honors, the 1981 legislative 25 history confirms all this where the members of Congress

1 have testified that it is supposed to be an impact test.

2 Thank you very much.

3 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Leverett, do you
4 have anything further?

6 ON BEHALF OF THE APPELLANTS -- Rebuttal

7 MR. LEVERETT: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
8 please the Court:

9 We take issue with counsel when he says that 10 this case differs from the facts in Mobile. All I can 11 suggest is that the Court read the district court 12 decision and compare the findings and the facts there 13 with those in this case.

14 Counsel says that the court pressured the 15 registration sites and achieved the three additional 16 registration sites. The commissioners voted on February 17 10, 1976 to add these new registration sites in response 18 to the request of the organization that brought this 19 case. This case was not filed until April 5th, 20 approximately two months later. It is certainly true 21 that the sites were not opened until a week or ten days
22 prior to the election, but they were opened in response 23 to a request and not in accordance with any pressuring 24 from the court, and the district court's statement to 25 that effect is completely without any evidence at all

1 and is, in fact, not true.

2 Counsel made the statement that registration
3 has been restrictive in Burke County. I cannot equate 4 the fact that until 1976 there was only one registration 5 site to indicate restriction of the right to register.

6 Burke County has only 18,000 people. The 7 plaintiff himself admitted that there were probably not 8 more than 2000 people who even were potential voters who 9 had not registered.

10 QUESTION: How many square miles is it?

11 MR. LEVERETT: About 800 square miles, which 12 is about a square about 28 to 29 miles, with 13 approximately 18,000 people.

14 And I would further submit that the evidence 15 in this case shows that notwithstanding the cries about 16 we need these registration sites, the undisputed 17 evidence is that in one of these registration places, 18 only 50 or 60 voters had been registered by the time of 19 the trial there, and another one less than 100. Before 20 I came up here this past week I checked on it and it's 21 still less than 100 in each of the new registration 22 sites, which indicates that they were not needed that 23 much after all, anyway.

24 QUESTION: How many registration sites now?

25 MR. LEVERETT: Mr. Chief Justice, there are at

1 least three. I'm not sure about the one in Goth. I 2 asked Mr. Lewis and he is not sure. There would be 3 three at least, one at Sardis, one at Midville and one 4 at the county site in Waynesboro. There may be one at 5 Goth, I'm not sure. It was originally established, the 6 man had some problems, he didn't know how to function.
7 They finally had to pick up the cards and it was put 8 somewhere else.

9 Then the last statement was made that the -- 10 just look what happened when the court order relief. Of 11 course, two of the plaintiffs in this case ran in that 12 election, and I'm sure that there was some encouraging 13 of others to run to make a demonstration of response.
14 And of course, I might say that one of the plaintiffs 15 ran after the plaintiff's plan had been approved, which 16 deliberately gerrymandered the lines to put there of the 17 incumbent commissioners in one district against Mr.
18 Lodge, and they even tried to amend it to put a fourth 19 one in, but the court did not go that far.

20 We submit that the judgment below should be 21 reversed.

22 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen, 23 the case is submitted.

24 (Whereupon, at 1:55 o'clock p.m., the oral 25 argument in the above-entitled matter was concluded.)
