P R O C E E D I N G S

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Well, we will hear arguments next in Finnegan against Leu.

Mr. Bolotin, you may proceed whenever you are ready.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF SAMUEL G. BOLOTIN, ESQ.,
ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS

MR. BOLOTIN: Thank you.

Mr. Chief Justice Burger, and may it please the Court, this is a union democracy case. It involves the Bill of Rights of union members, and whether appointed officials who are appointed by a president, whether they can be discharged or terminated for exercising their rights of freedom of speech and expression in a union election and in particular for supporting the opposition candidate.

The facts in this case can be simply put. In December of 1977, in Toledo, Ohio, Teamsters Local 20 found itself with a third confrontation between two top protagonists, a slate headed by Omar L. Brown, the incumbents, and a slate headed by Harold D. Leu, the insurgents. Local 20 is a very large local in northwestern Ohio, that covers some 14 counties in northwestern Ohio, and has over 12,500 members.

The election was held in three different

1 cities. On December 9th, it was held in Fremont, Ohio, 2 on the 10th and 11th in Toledo, Ohio, and the 12th in 3 Bryan, Ohio. Due to a blizzard and inclement weather 4 which hit the northwest Ohio area during those days, the 5 turnout for the election was relatively poor, and 6 approximately only 3,500 members were able to vote.

7 Leu prevailed in that election by 29 votes, 8 although his entire slate of candidates was defeated and 9 the Brown slate officers were elected, with the 10 exception of Brown. Election protests were filed. The 11 election eventually was voided in a separate proceeding 12 not directly relevant herein, in a case captioned 13 Marshall v. Leu.

14 Needless to say that the campaign involved was 15 a very vigorous campaign and very heated campaign, since 16 this was the third confrontation between the two top 17 parties.

18 QUESTION: How much of your case rests on the 19 First Amendment?

20 MR. BOLOTIN: I believe our case rests
21 primarily on the statutory construction of the statutes
22 involved herein. The First Amendment is applicable 23 through analogy, but not, I don't believe, directly 24 controlling in this case.

25 Now, Leu's first official act in office was to

1 conduct a meeting of all the Brown business agents, and 2 at that meeting he discharged them, giving as his 3 reasons that, Number One, they had campaigned for his 4 opponent; Number Two, they were too loyal to his 5 opponent; and Number Three, that he did not believe that 6 they would support his policies and programs which he 7 was about to implement.

8 QUESTION: Did he rest to any extent on the 9 fact that their appointments were "at the pleasure of 10 the president?"

11 MR. BOLOTIN: Under the Teamster bylaws, that 12 indeed is what they say, that the appointments are 13 within the president's discretion.

14 QUESTION: Is it not -- what is the precise 15 language? Is it at his discretion or at the pleasure?

16 MR. BOLOTIN: The president has -- I believe 17 it does say at his pleasure to hire, fire, and so forth.

18 QUESTION: The same way the President of the 19 United States appoints several thousand people every --

20 MR. BOLOTIN: That is the same sort of 21 appointment power, yes, on a lesser degree.

22 Now, he did not make any inquiry. He did not 23 approach any of the agents, nor did he even ask if they 24 would support his policies and questions. The plaintiff 25 Petitioners immediately went into district court and

1 sought injunctive relief, alleging three causes of 2 action: one, that the discharge was an infringement of 3 their equal rights and privileges pursuant to 29 USC 4 Section 411(a)(1); that it was an infringement of their 5 freedom of speech and assembly rights to participate in 6 union affairs, in violation of 29 USC 411(a)(2); and 7 that their discharges constituted discipline within the 8 meaning of Section 529 of the same statutes.

9 The district court denied the injunctive 10 relief, and later a motion for summary judgment by the 11 Respondents was filed. It was granted, and the Sixth 12 Circuit affirmed.

13 Now, the district court -- the reason the 14 district court denied and dismissed the case is that the 15 district court found that the plaintiff Petitioners had 16 not alleged the cause of action under the LMRDA because 17 the court made an inquiry and reached the point where it 18 found that these business agents were appointed 19 officials, and therefore concluded because they were 20 appointed rather than elected that their rights as 21 members were not affected, and the statutory provisions 22 which I mentioned did not apply.

23 So, after that, the court really didn't make 24 much of a factual inquiry. It -- The case is before 25 this Court having been dismissed on summary judgment,

1 even though we would submit that there are factual 2 differences in the record, and the record is -- we would 3 also submit, is rather incomplete.

4 The issue, then, therefore, is whether under 5 Section 411(a)(2) and under Section 529, whether these 6 sections, which specifically refer to rights of members, 7 excludes the rights of members who also happen to be 8 appointed officials. We submit that members includes 9 all members, including appointed members, and that these 10 statutory provisions do apply.

11 In support of our argument, we have 12 essentially four reasons. First of all, if you look at 13 the plain meaning of the statute, if you look at the 14 definitional section contained in 402(o), it defines 15 "member" as being any person who has fulfilled the 16 requirements of membership, who has not taken 17 involuntary withdrawal card, nor has been disciplined or 18 suspended through some sort of proper union procedure.
19 So the "member" itself says any person.

20 If you look at the language contained in 21 Section -- well, in all three sections and throughout, 22 there are phrases such as "every member", "any member".
23 These are very expansive phrases, which does not -- if 24 you look at their ordinary and common meaning, it would 25 seem to imply that there was no intent by Congress to

1 exclude members who happened to also be appointed 2 officials, or for that matter who happen to be elected 3 officials or officers.

4 To -- The district court, we believe, erred in 5 construing these statutes to make that exclusion. Now, 6 the second reason --

7 QUESTION: I didn't read the district court's 8 opinion or the opinion of the court of appeals as having 9 excluded members who were officers from protection as 10 members. The district court says they were wearing two 11 hats, and they are protected in their status as members, 12 but they are not protected in their jobs as members of 13 the president's advisory committee or cabinet or 14 whatever it was.

15 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, the decisions did state -- 16 did make the distinction between appointed and elected 17 officials. We do not necessarily agree that that 18 distinction is a meaningful distinction. It also 19 pointed out, as you indicated, Justice Rehnquist, that 20 the -- their rights as members, according to the 21 district court, were not affected, but indeed, these 22 business agents were disciplined for exercising their 23 rights as members, and the reason given by the newly 24 elected president in discharging them was that they had 25 campaigned, and that they were too loyal for the

1 oppositional candidate. So there was an indication that 2 yes, indeed, their rights as members were affected.

3 Now, if you look at the legislative history
4 behind these particular sections, the first thing you 5 realize is that it is a little sparse, and the second 6 thing you realize is that there are different things in 7 it that one could draw upon to justify various 8 arguments. But we -- if you look at the comments of 9 Senator Mundin and also of Senator Goldwater discussing 10 the Schmidt letter to Senator Kennedy, we read from that 11 that they assumed that officers were included, because 12 both of those Senators were discussing the abuses and 13 the reason for the -- the necessity for the law, and 14 they were saying that members have to be protected and 15 officers essentially have to be protected from 16 retaliation by corrupt union officials.

17 QUESTION: Are you arguing for a construction 18 that would require the president of a union to keep on 19 on the executive committee someone who had campaigned 20 against him in the election?

21 MR. BOLOTIN: We think that is an illegal 22 reason. What we are arguing for is a construction which 23 requires the president of the union to make a good faith 24 reasonable inquiry on whether these individuals would 25 oppose or obstruct his policies or not. What we have in

1 this case is -- the facts show that the president gave 2 what we believe to be an illegal reason, that is, I am 3 getting rid of you because you supported the 4 oppositional candidate. And the facts in this case and 5 the rule that we are asking for are no different than if 6 you had an incumbent officer and you had an appointed 7 agent working under that incumbent who -- who the 8 incumbent president got word that he was going to run 9 against him, or who happened to criticize him, and then 10 he was terminated because of those viewpoints.

11 We do not believe that the election process 12 itself is sufficiently controlling to justify the 13 termination if the basis of the termination was an 14 illegal reason, and the reason being because you 15 exercised rights protected by the Bill of Rights and 16 Section 411(a)(2), (a)(1), and protected also through 17 529.

18 QUESTION: Did your clients lose their 19 membership in the union?

20 MR. BOLOTIN: The immediate effect of the 21 discharge was not to lose their membership in the union, 22 but put into motion a procedure whereby after a lapse of 23 time under the Teamster constitution, Article XVIII,
24 Section 5, if they were unable to return to employment 25 within the industry, they would automatically be issued

1 involuntary withdrawal cards.

2 Now, as a practical matter, some of the 3 plaintiffs and Petitioners were able to return to their 4 prior employments, but a great many of them were not, 5 and they found themselves out of -- out of work. They 6 found that the -- the benefits the union had been 7 providing for them were gone. You must keep in mind 8 that they were paying dues to the local union. They had 9 all the benefits of a member, but when they were 10 terminated, their health and welfare payments were 11 stopped, their Blue Cross, Blue Shield, life insurance 12 premiums all were stopped, and they were out of work, 13 and then it became a question of whether they could 14 return back into the industry through some other 15 employer.

16 QUESTION: Isn't that the issue on which the 17 district court said that the complaint simply didn't 18 take up, and if you wanted to go into that, you would 19 have to file a new complaint?

20 MR. BOLOTIN: The district court did state 21 that, and did state that the complaint should have been 22 amended, but it did not give us an opportunity to amend 23 the complaint, and stopped at the inquiry that no cause 24 of action basically had been asserted. Now, I think the 25 subsequent facts are relevant, because you must look at

1 the motivation at the time of the discharge, and I think 2 if you look at what the effect of the discharge did to 3 the plaintiffs, that is, it set into motion the 4 probability that they would not be able to return to 5 employment in the industry, that shows that this kind of 6 termination did indeed affect their rights as members.

7 It also did another thing. When they were -- 8 Prior to the discharge, they were appointed business 9 agents. Prior to being appointed business agents, most 10 of these men had been members of the local union for 11 many years. They had worked their ways up as stewards, 12 chief stewards, had been very active within the local 13 union, had been very vocal in the local union, and this 14 is why, I submit, they were eventually appointed as 15 business agents.

16 While they were as business agents, they were 17 allowed to participate on the stewards' council, which 18 is the -- supposedly the legislative body of the local 19 union. Now, the stewards' council is composed and 20 comprised of some 800 or 900 stewards, so the business 21 agents' role on that was more of a voice or a vote on 22 the stewards' council. They certainly were not in a 23 position to control, since there were only 15 of them, 24 to control any policies or decisions that were made -- 25 that were made, but they indeed, upon being terminated,

1 lost this position, lost this ability to participate as 2 freely, to discuss union matters as openly as they had 3 before, and they lost it because of the exercise of 4 rights as members. There is no question that they were 5 terminated because of the campaign and their campaign 6 activity.

7 I think also if you go back and look at the 8 legislative history you will find that there is no -- no 9 where any language which indicates that an exception was 10 being made in 411(a)(2) and in 529 to exclude officers 11 from the coverage. As I indicated, I believe that the 12 Congress assumed that they would be covered.

13 Now, there is one exclusion exception, and 14 that is in Section 101(a)(5), or 411(a)(5). 411(a)(5) 15 sets forth the procedural due process requirement for 16 the unions, and contained in that section is a specific 17 -- contained in that section is a specific exception 18 that officers and employees were not -- did not have the 19 due process rights of the regular membership, and if you 20 go back and you look at the legislative history and the 21 purpose behind that exception, you will find that 22 Congress was concerned with allowing a potentially 23 corrupt union official who was in power, who was 24 misusing union funds or perhaps not holding meetings
25 pursuant to the bylaws, they were concerned that if you

1 did not have that exception in the procedural part of 2 the Bill of Rights, then that corrupt union official 3 would be able to cause serious harm to the union as an 4 institution before a trial could proceed or before he 5 could be removed to determine whether indeed he was 6 harming the union or indeed whether he was corrupt.

7 Now, we submit that because this exclusion was 8 specifically put in 411(a)(5), and not put in Section 9 529, that it indicates an intent on the part of Congress 10 not to exclude officers and employees from the 11 protection of 529 and therefore also from the protection 12 of 411(a)(1) and (a)(2).

13 QUESTION: Isn't the question here how you 14 construe the statute?

15 MR. BOLOTIN: That's right. That's right.

16 QUESTION: And do you say -- do you say that 17 the statute should be construed as the Constitution 18 would be construed, or is it just some --

19 MR. BOLOTIN: I say that --

20 QUESTION: Did Congress just -- was it just 21 legislating in the dark?

22 MR. BOLOTIN: No, I say that the statute
23 should be construed with the Constitution in mind, 24 because the legislative history does indicate that they 25 were attempting to adopt a bill of rights comparable to

1 the constitution for union members.

2 QUESTION: Well, do you think that then -- if 3 you knew what the Constitution meant at that time, would 4 you think that is the meaning that the statute should 5 have?

6 MR. BOLOTIN: Not necessarily. I think that 7 is a question of Congressional intent in interpreting 8 the statute.

9 QUESTION: Well, of course it is, so -- of 10 course it is. So what did Congress intend?

11 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, it is our position from 12 reviewing the legislative history that they intended --

13 QUESTION: There wasn't any constitutional law 14 at the time that would have forbidden firing for 15 political reasons, was there?

16 MR. BOLOTIN: I know the AF of L-CIO has 17 argued that point. I am not entirely clear where the 18 status of the law was when these hearings were in 19 effect. I am acquainted with the Adler and the 20 Pickering cases that are cited.

21 QUESTION: Well, would you agree or wouldn't 22 you that the statute should be construed in the light of 23 the constitutional law that existed at that time, 24 whatever it was?

25 MR. BOLOTIN: I don't necessarily agree with

1 that proposition, and for this reason. The reason is 2 that it is difficult to know --

3 QUESTION: Well, would you still not agree
4 with it if you could show that the constitutional law 5 then was exactly what it is now? Suppose -- just 6 suppose. I don't think that's true, but suppose that 7 the constitutional law then is precisely what it is 8 now. Would you still say that you should give some kind 9 of independent construction to the statute?

10 MR. BOLOTIN: I think that would be very 11 tempting, to take that position, since as I construe the 12 constitutional law now it is more favorable for our 13 position, but the point I wish to make is that it is 14 difficult enough to construe the Congressional intent 15 without going through the court cases and construing the 16 judicial intent, which also may existed at the same 17 time. I think when you are dealing with a statute, it 18 is more important to focus on the -- the Congressional 19 intent of Congress in passing it, because you --

20 QUESTION: May I ask, Mr. Bolotin, following 21 up on my Brother White's question, I gather your 22 argument focuses, statutory argument, in any event, 23 primarily on the word "discipline" in 609, does it?

24 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, and infringement in 411 as 25 well.

1 QUESTION: Yes, but do I -- perhaps I didn't 2 correctly understand your argument, but I thought your 3 argument emphasized that under 609, it is a violation to 4 discipline for this protected conduct.

5 MR. BOLOTIN: That is true. There is two 6 theories. One is the discipline.

7 QUESTION: And you suggest that these 8 discharges were a discipline?

9 MR. BOLOTIN: Yes, I do believe they were a 10 discipline. They were a discipline --

11 QUESTION: Well, there wasn't any misconduct
12 involved, was there?

13 MR. BOLOTIN: Misconduct in the sense of -- 14 well, according to the newly elected president, the 15 misconduct was that they supported the wrong candidate, 16 and they exercised their political opposition.

17 QUESTION: Well, he certainly dismissed them
18 because they had supported his competitor.

19 MR. BOLOTIN: Right.

20 QUESTION: But did he -- was that action taken 21 as discipline on --

22 QUESTION: That was -- 411.

23 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, I suppose that is the 24 issue in the case, and that is, as every other 25 discipline. This is what we are talking about. We

1 would submit that being discharged in retaliation for 2 exercising rights of freedom of expression is a form of 3 discipline because --

4 QUESTION: But you don't -- you don't give up 5 your 411 argument?

6 MR. BOLOTIN: No, we do not give that up.
7 Even if we were to -- if the Court were to reject the 8 529 or the 609 argument, the 411 argument is still a 9 very good argument, and a -- and it is certainly an 10 infringement.

11 QUESTION: What about retaliation?

12 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, the retaliation argument
13 is sort of combining both of them, because it 14 demonstrates a lack of --

15 QUESTION: But is that independently -- is 16 that independently proscribed by the statute?

17 MR. BOLOTIN: I think it is inherent in 529
18 and in the infringement language, that if you --

19 QUESTION: What about 412? Is there a 20 section --

21 MR. BOLOTIN: Yes, there is. That is the -- 22 that is how it is carried out through the jurisdictional 23 section. So if a right has been infringed, then you 24 have the right to sue pursuant to 412.

25 QUESTION: I see.

1 MR. BOLOTIN: Now --

2 QUESTION: May we come back to the facts for a 3 minute?

4 MR. BOLOTIN: Yes.

5 QUESTION: What is the size of the stewards'
6 council? How many members?

7 MR. BOLOTIN: There's approximately, at any -- 8 it depends upon the population of the local in terms of 9 layoffs and so forth, but at that time there were 10 approximately 800 to 1,000 stewards, including assistant 11 stewards and chief stewards and so forth.

12 QUESTION: You had a local union of about 13 10,000 members?

14 MR. BOLOTIN: 12,500.

15 QUESTION: Right, and the stewards' council 16 was about 1,000?

17 MR. BOLOTIN: Correct.

18 QUESTION: Right. And it included all of the 19 business agents?

20 MR. BOLOTIN: And all the stewards and all the 21 officers.

22 QUESTION: Yes. And how many business agents 23 would there be all together, roughly?

24 MR. BOLOTIN: There were approximately 20
25 business agents all together, because all the officers

1 did not draw salaries as officers. They only drew 2 salaries as long as they were employed as a business 3 agent.

4 QUESTION: So 15 out of 20 were discharged?

5 MR. BOLOTIN: That's, I believe, correct.

6 QUESTION: Um-hm.

7 MR. BOLOTIN: The other reason that the --

8 QUESTION: Did the president in his action
9 rely on the proposition that he as the duly elected 10 president was entitled to have people who were in 11 sympathy with his point of view and who would faithfully 12 execute his policies?

13 MR. BOLOTIN: He did state that at some point 14 in either his deposition or at the preliminary 15 injunctive hearing, and perhaps even at the meeting, 16 although I don't have the --

17 QUESTION: Is that not inherent in the union 18 constitution and the provision that these men, his 19 people hold office at the pleasure of the president?

20 MR. BOLOTIN: That is inherent in the bylaws
21 of the Local 20. That is, the president has the sole 22 and exclusive appointive power. But what we are 23 complaining about here is that he --

24 QUESTION: Well, wait a minute. Is it the 25 constitution or bylaws?

1 MR. BOLOTIN: It may be in both. I know it's 2 in the bylaws, and it is probably in the constitution as 3 well.

4 QUESTION: I think the constitutional 5 provision is that they hold office at the pleasure of 6 the president. They get their office by his 7 appointment, they lose it by his decision. That's 8 correct, under the constitution, is it not?

9 MR. BOLOTIN: That's correct. That's correct.

10 QUESTION: Well, Mr. Bolotin, if that is so, 11 if that is expressed or implied in the constitution and 12 the bylaws, then on your 411 argument, what of the 13 qualification at the very end of (a)(1), subject to 14 reasonable rules and regulations and such organizations'
15 constitution and bylaws?

16 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, the question is, was it 17 reasonable to discharge these particular business 18 agents. Are they --

19 QUESTION: Well, no. This says, subject to 20 reasonable rules. Are you suggesting such a rule, 21 whether explicit or implied, would not be reasonable?

22 MR. BOLOTIN: No --

23 QUESTION: That on -- if you support the 24 change of administration, why, the new president --

25 MR. BOLOTIN: What I am suggesting is that if

1 you, as the president did in this case, enunciate an 2 unlawful reason along with perhaps lawful reasons for 3 the discharge, then I think it becomes --

4 QUESTION: Well, suppose -- suppose the 5 constitution and bylaws have explicitly set out that on 6 the election of a new president, that president shall -- 7 may dismiss all the business agents. Suppose it said so 8 in so many words. Would you be here?

9 MR. BOLOTIN: Yes, we would still be here,
10 because this is a retaliatory discharge --

11 QUESTION: Well, except that the 411(a)(1)
12 says that all -- everything that -- in the way of rights 13 and privileges thereby conferred are subject to 14 reasonable rules and regulations in such organization's 15 constitution and bylaws.

16 QUESTION: Well, you would say that wouldn't 17 be a reasonable rule, I suppose.

18 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, what we would say is that 19 that -- that qualifying language is not the same 20 language that is worded in 411(a)(2), which says that it 21 does have a reasonable rule, but it also talks about 22 protecting the union as an institution, and if you look 23 at the legislative history, you will see that there were 24 two concerns of Congress. One, they wanted to, as 25 practically as possible, ensure as much free speech and

1 democratic processes as possible, and two, they did not 2 want the union as an institution to be harmed.

3 Now, to the extent that you have appointed 4 officials who perhaps are at a very high level, who are 5 involved as the -- in the Branti case, the analogy in 6 the Branti case, who were involved in policy-making or 7 who to the extent are confidential employees, then I 8 would submit that it could be argued that the union as 9 an institution would perhaps be in some sort of jeopardy 10 if these people were allowed to stay on the payroll, but 11 what we are saying --

12 QUESTION: Even two, 411(2) has a 13 qualification, doesn't it, a proviso, that nothing 14 herein shall be construed to impair the right of a labor 15 organization to adopt and enforce reasonable rules as to 16 the responsibility of every member toward the 17 organization.

18 MR. BOLOTIN: Right, but they are talking 19 there of the conduct of the member toward the union as 20 an institution, not necessarily on the right of the 21 president to hire and fire because someone happens to 22 exercise the rights set forth in the preceding language 23 in Subsection (2), and I think that is important.

24 QUESTION: What if they had a rule that said 25 in so many words, anybody who votes against the

1 incumbent president will be fired the day after the 2 president is re-elected? Would that be permissible 3 under the statute?

4 MR. BOLOTIN: No, it would not be permissible,
5 because I don't think union bylaws can be -- supersede 6 the laws of the United States.

7 QUESTION: Well, but is there anything in the 8 statute that would prohibit that? What would prohibit 9 that?

10 MR. BOLOTIN: There is a section later on that 11 requires that the constitution and bylaws be filed with 12 the Secretary of Labor, and that they must provide 13 certain reasonable procedures. I don't remember the 14 exact cite, but I do believe there is something in the 15 bill of -- the Landrum-Griffin Act concerning that point.

16 QUESTION: Do you rely at all on the 17 particular jobs these people had? Would it be a 18 different case if they were either more senior or less 19 senior? I am not quite clear on what your position is.

20 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, I think the court -- 21 unfortunately, we are here on summary judgment, and the 22 court never -- decided this case as if there were no 23 factual issues in dispute, but never really made the 24 proper factual inquiries to determine what standards
25 should be applied. I think it is conceivable that you

1 can get a very high position in the local union, like 2 the chief administrative assistant to the president, or 3 his confidential secretary. In those positions, it 4 might require for the legitimate benefit of the union as 5 an institution that they be removed, but in this case, 6 we have a record that does not indicate -- that does not 7 indicate what role these business agents played, and the 8 Respondents, at the last page of their brief, in their 9 argument, concede that these business agents were not 10 involved in policy formulating at all. They are 11 comparable to district attorneys, assistant district 12 attorneys who are performing representation to clients.
13 They performed representation in servicing the members.

14 I note that the balance of my time --

15 QUESTION: Could I ask you just a question?

16 MR. BOLOTIN: Yes.

17 QUESTION: Do you think the judgment below
18 would permit the wholesale firing of all business agents 19 if none of the business agents, A, had campaigned, or 20 had said a word about whom they preferred? Would the 21 holding below permit just cleaning out the business 22 agents just because there has been a change in 23 administration?

24 MR. BOLOTIN: I think that is a factual
25 determination which has to be made. If they were

1 terminated because of lawful --

2 QUESTION: Well, I am just asking, do you 3 think the holding below would permit that?

4 MR. BOLOTIN: At this point I think it implies 5 that, yes, because --

6 QUESTION: Well, would there be anything wrong 7 with that, if they fired them just in order to have new 8 business agents? It wasn't because they opposed him, or 9 because of what anybody said.

10 MR. BOLOTIN: I think if those were truly the 11 facts, and if the Court had made those inquiries, then I 12 agree with you, but what we have here --

13 QUESTION: Then there wouldn't be anything
14 illegal about it?

15 MR. BOLOTIN: Right. What we have here -- I 16 agree.

17 QUESTION: Well, what about somebody who -- 18 what about somebody who hadn't actively campaigned, but 19 they had just said who they were for?

20 MR. BOLOTIN: I think that --

21 QUESTION: Would the -- would the judgment
22 below permit cleaning those people out?

23 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, I would think it would 24 necessitate the court below to make an inquiry on 25 whether that was a reason for the discharge. What we

1 have here is a prima facie case once you accept the 2 notion --

3 QUESTION: Yes, I know.

4 MR. BOLOTIN: -- once you accept the notion 5 that appointed officials are protected, and now it is 6 incumbent upon the Respondents to justify their action.

7 QUESTION: But the reason in this case is that 8 the man said, you are loyal to the other man and you are 9 not to me, and that is the reason you go, that is this 10 case.

11 MR. BOLOTIN: That's right.

12 QUESTION: That's right.

13 MR. BOLOTIN: I will reserve the balance of my 14 time. Thank you.

15 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Iorio?

16 ORAL ARGUMENT OF THEODORE M. IORIO, ESQ.,

17 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENTS

18 MR. IORIO: Yes. Mr. Chief Justice, Members
19 of the Court, may it please the Court, initially, I 20 think it is important to reflect very quickly on some of 21 the facts as it relates to this matter. Although 22 counsel has hit on some of them, there are some other 23 critical facts that I think the Court should be aware of.

24 Initially, the bylaws of Local 20 clearly and 25 explicitly give the president the absolute right to hire

1 and fire whomever he wants. That is clearly spelled out
2 and that is before this Court. The duties of the 3 business agent are before this Court. The business --

4 QUESTION: Yes, but you don't contend that he 5 could fire them for any reason he wanted to.

6 MR. IORIO: I --

7 QUESTION: He couldn't fire them because they 8 were black.

9 MR. IORIO: That's correct. He could not fire
10 them --

11 QUESTION: He couldn't fire them, for example, 12 for having filed a charge.

13 MR. IORIO: That's correct.

14 QUESTION: Well, so there are reasons for 15 which he couldn't fire them.

16 MR. IORIO: Where there is specific 17 legislative enactment, Justice White, I would agree, 18 that where Title 7 or the Labor Board has specific rules 19 and regulations as they relate to labor unions as an 20 institution, as with any institution --

21 QUESTION: Well, suppose he didn't fire them
22 -- suppose he didn't fire them at the -- when he came 23 into office, but a little later, when one of them said 24 something in some union meeting contrary to what -- what 25 he thought was contrary to his policies. Do you think

1 he could just fire them?

2 MR. IORIO: If he is an appointed business
3 agent, that's correct.

4 QUESTION: Suppose he just said to them, I
5 want your resignation, giving no reason at all.

6 MR. IORIO: If the president had asked for the 7 resignation and given no reason at all, he certainly 8 could do that under the bylaws and under the 9 Landrum-Griffin Act as it exists today.

10 QUESTION: You would be relying on the 11 provision --

12 MR. IORIO: Of the Act.

13 QUESTION: -- that they serve at the pleasure 14 of the president.

15 MR. IORIO: Exactly.

16 QUESTION: You would still be subject to suit, 17 that -- if somebody could prove that he really fired 18 them for a specific -- for a specifically forbidden
19 reason.

20 MR. IORIO: Well, again, I assume if the 21 appointed business agent sued on the basis that it was 22 because of race or something specifically prohibited, 23 certainly --

24 QUESTION: Yes. You would have to prove it.
25 You would have to prove it.

1 MR. IORIO: That's right. They would have to 2 prove it. But if it was as a result of the facts that 3 are before this Court, we think it is fairly clear what 4 Congress intended when they passed the Landrum-Griffin
5 bill. I think it is important also from a factual point 6 of view that the business agents at Local 20, and it is 7 before the record, the business agents negotiate 8 contracts, they determine in the first instance what 9 cases will be arbitrated, and they handle the day to day 10 affairs of the labor union as it relates to 11 representation with the employer. So they are the very 12 heart and the very guts, as it were, of the labor
13 organization.

14 QUESTION: I suppose you would have a harder 15 case if it was the Ladies' Garment Workers Union, and 16 the president said, I really think that the business 17 agent of this big unit must be a woman, not a man. That 18 would give you a rather hard case, wouldn't it?

19 MR. IORIO: That would make it more difficult, 20 Your Honor, but again, on the basis of looking -- 21 putting aside specific legislative enactments as they 22 relate to labor or to employers or whatever particular 23 organizations, given these specific facts, we think it 24 is clear absent any kind of race or --

25 QUESTION: Why do you think -- why do you

1 think he is justified in firing them all, because of 2 reasonable questions about their loyalty?

3 MR. IORIO: Yes, but I think it is important
4 on the facts, Justice White, that the business agent 5 here, and on the record, the administrative assistant to 6 Brown, who was the incumbent, stated himself that a 7 business agent must be loyal to the president and his 8 policies.

9 QUESTION: Yes. Yes.

10 MR. IORIO: In the election, the insurgent Leu 11 ran a campaign on the basis that the members were not 12 being represented.

13 QUESTION: But you don't -- you don't suggest 14 that the -- that your client made individual 15 determinations about loyalty in this case.

16 MR. IORIO: I guess what I am suggesting --

17 QUESTION: You are just saying that anybody 18 who campaigned against him, a per se rule is --

19 MR. IORIO: Exactly.

20 QUESTION: -- is subject to being disposed of.

21 MR. IORIO: Subject to dismissal.

22 QUESTION: Yes.

23 MR. IORIO: Exactly. What we are saying is, 24 under the facts of this particular case, that the 25 president of the local, consistent with the bylaws, has

1 the right to terminate business agents for whatever
2 reason --

3 QUESTION: You wouldn't have to --

4 MR. IORIO: -- as long as, of course, they 5 don't involve sex, race, or --

6 QUESTION: You wouldn't have to find that they 7 campaigned against him. He could just decide that he 8 wanted his own people aboard.

9 MR. IORIO: Exactly. It is not the basis of 10 the -- he could have no reasons.

11 QUESTION: Exactly, but the thing of it is, he 12 did have a reason. The reason was that they campaigned 13 against him, and that -- and drew an inference of 14 disloyalty.

15 MR. IORIO: That's correct. The record
16 reflects disloyalty, and the record reflects also that 17 he ran a program on the basis that the incumbents were 18 not adequately representing the membership, and that --

19 QUESTION: To what extent do you rely on the 20 fact that these are business agents? What if they had 21 been, say, bookkeepers, and had nothing to do with 22 policy, but nevertheless could be discharged without any 23 -- any hesitation for no reason at all? Would you take 24 the same position?

25 MR. IORIO: Well, clearly, Your Honor, as it

1 relates to this Court's reasoning in Branti and in 2 Elrod, this Court has taken a distinction in the 3 constitutional area, the First Amendment --

4 QUESTION: Right.

5 MR. IORIO: -- but again, in this particular 6 -- on the facts of this particular case, absent the 7 application of a constitutional doctrine, we would say 8 that although these are not the facts, that under the 9 current status of the laws that exist today, that they 10 would be permitted to terminate.

11 QUESTION: They would be permitted.

12 MR. IORIO: They would be permitted. Yes.

13 QUESTION: So it really doesn't matter whether 14 they are business agents or bookkeepers, under your view 15 of the law.

16 MR. IORIO: That's correct, although an 17 adoption of a Branti-like standard or an Elrod-like 18 standards based on what the duties of the business 19 agents do, they would clearly fall within that rationale.

20 QUESTION: Well, how do -- there hasn't been a 21 trial. That's what I was wondering about. All 800 of 22 them would definitely be policy-making appointed 23 officials. Is it perfectly clear on the record? That 24 is what I am wondering.

25 MR. IORIO: Well, from the record, the

1 business agents, there was approximately that were 2 involved, and the business agents that were involved,
3 from the record it's clear they negotiate contracts,
4 that they involve themselves in determining what cases
5 are arbitrated at the first instance, and they handle 6 the day to day affairs of the membership, and that 7 really is the heart of what a local union does, and that 8 is done, of course, through the business agents who are 9 out in the field and out in the shop dealing with the 10 membership, and we feel that the record --

11 QUESTION: So you really make two arguments,
12 if I understand you. One is that they are in the nature 13 of close to the -- close to the executive, like a 14 policy-making person, that they should be able to fire.
15 And secondly, you say in any event it is a statutory 16 question and the Branti line of cases just doesn't apply 17 at all. You make both arguments.

18 MR. IORIO: That's right. We would also make, 19 although I haven't gotten there, Your Honor, we would 20 also make a third argument that a Mount Healthy type of 21 standard would also be applicable here, in the sense 22 that if there were a finding by this Court that they 23 were not policy-makers, and as Justice Rehnquist
24 indicated in Mount Healthy, they should not be put in a 25 better position than they would otherwise have been had

1 they not exercised their alleged Title I rights, and 2 based on the record, where the record reflects that the 3 insurgent, the outsider ran a campaign on the basis that 4 there was poor representation, surely that provides 5 sufficient justifiable motivation under a Mount Healthy 6 type of application, so I guess we are saying three 7 things as we get into that area.

8 QUESTION: Well, but the Mount Healthy 9 analysis isn't whether it would be justifiable, but 10 whether it was in fact the real motive.

11 MR. IORIO: That's right, if it was the sole 12 motive.

13 QUESTION: Rather than the fact that they were 14 of an opposite party

15 MR. IORIO: Right. There were equally 16 contributing motives.

17 QUESTION: There is no question -- there is no
18 question about what the reason was in this case.

19 MR. IORIO: Well, I -- from the record, Your 20 Honor, there were two reasons. One was the question of 21 loyalty, and the other question was that the insurgent 22 ran on a platform that said that the incumbents were not 23 giving adequate service to the membership.

24 QUESTION: As the question comes to us, 25 though, the district court said it didn't make any

1 difference --

2 MR. IORIO: That's correct.

3 QUESTION: -- whether -- whether he fired them 4 for -- whether they would be -- whether he had any 5 individual findings of loyalty or not. They just said, 6 just because they ran, that's enough.

7 MR. IORIO: Yes, that's true. The district
8 judge adopted and the Sixth Circuit --

9 QUESTION: That's the way it comes -- and that 10 was -- that's the way it comes to us.

11 MR. IORIO: And the Sixth Circuit adopted the 12 per se rule.

13 QUESTION: Yes.

14 QUESTION: Is it possible there is a third 15 factor, that the president can fire for any reason or 16 for no reason?

17 MR. IORIO: That's correct, Your Honor.
18 That's exactly what we say the bylaws --

19 QUESTION: Under the constitution and bylaws.

20 MR. IORIO: That's right, and that's what the 21 -- which the members, of course, have adopted, and again 22 from another point of view as it relates to some of the 23 questions from Justice Stevens, as it relates -- and 24 this was brought up initially on Petitioners's case, we 25 think it is relevant that this Court in a time frame

1 sense look back to 1959, and when you look back to 1959,
2 in order to glean the intent of what the Congress wanted
3 to do as it related to Title I or 609, that it's clear 4 that Congress could not have intended nor did they 5 intend to protect in a patronage way as they did -- as 6 this Court has done in Branti and Elrod subsequent, they 7 could not have intended that. The law was nowhere along 8 those lines at that time, in 1959, and it is clear that 9 Congress had enough knowledge of the area in the sense 10 that they distinguished between elected officials or 11 appointed officials, as they did at 401(h) of the Act, 12 so that they were aware that there were distinctions.

13 QUESTION: So you say Elrod and other
14 developments like that since then are irrelevant.

15 MR. IORIO: We are saying as they relate to 16 this, yes, because Elrod and Branti are irrelevant
17 because this is a statutory case, this is not a 18 constitutional case. The Act itself in Title I has a 19 reasonable standard which is, of course, different than 20 the First Amendment standard, which requires compelling 21 governmental interest, so that on that basis alone, the 22 language itself is written, not -- it does not adopt the 23 First Amendment language by any stretch of the 24 imagination, nor did Congress indicate in its 25 legislative history anything to indicate that they

1 wanted to formulate a theory or a policy that would run
2 parallel to the First Amendment of the Constitution.

3 And also, Your Honor, when you look at the 4 legislative history, when you see the original draft of 5 the Bill of Rights and the Bill of Rights's first draft, 6 it had very strong language in 101(a)(2), the free
7 speech provision, that -- that indicated that a member 8 -- that no member could be subject to penalty discipline 9 or interference of any kind. It was very broad when 10 that was put together, and then as it went through the 11 hearings and the conference committees and the like, the 12 Keuchel amendment, of course, followed, and that 13 amendment cut that language out, which we feel clearly 14 indicates that Congress did not intend to give a broad 15 and absolute approach to the rights as contained in 16 Title I, but rather a limited one.

17 QUESTION: Isn't it pretty clear, though, that 18 a member, a member as a member, has much broader rights 19 to do almost anything he wants to do free of any 20 interference as distinguished from a member who is an 21 officer?

22 MR. IORIO: Well, in the case -- that's 23 correct, Your Honor. In this case, though, it's an 24 appointed officer, and of course there is a major 25 distinction between an appointed and an elected officer.

1 QUESTION: Yes, and an elected officer.

2 MR. IORIO: That's correct. The whole concept
3 of Landrum-Griffin was a bill that was put together in 4 order to look to the member and balance the rights of a 5 member vis-a-vis the union institution.

6 QUESTION: Counsel --

7 MR. IORIO: Yes.

8 QUESTION: -- on that point, some of the 9 briefs that have been filed indicate that it was the 10 desire of Congress to rely on kind of unfettered union
11 democracy to reach better results in terms of union
12 practices, and urged this Court to reverse on the basis 13 that to affirm the Court below would give the union the 14 tools to create a one-party patronage machine. Would 15 you comment on the position taken in some of those 16 briefs?

17 MR. IORIO: Your Honor, the -- of course, the 18 facts before this case indicate that -- particularly at 19 Local 20, which is the local that is before this Court, 20 that there has been a history here of a two-party
21 system. If anything, the facts of this case are a 22 tribute to Landrum-Griffin in the sense that there have 23 been three or four elections in which Mr. Brown and Mr.
24 Leu have fought each other on a number of occasions, 25 where they have, and the record discloses, have been

1 engaged in very heated campaigns, election campaigns.

2 And we would submit that where the local union 3 members determine the bylaws, and they say in their 4 bylaws they want their president to pick the agents, 5 that that in effect is a referendum on the business 6 agents, and if the business agents are doing a job, and 7 they are out in the shop and they are doing a job, then 8 the president who is elected is not going to have any 9 problems.

10 We think that the way Local 20 is set up their 11 -- the bylaws and the way that they operate indicates 12 exactly what Congress wanted. They said to the members, 13 what kind of bylaws do you want? The members said, 14 these are the bylaws, the kind of bylaws we want. This 15 is the kind of president we want to have. And if the 16 president's business agents don't do the job, then he is 17 going to be gone, and we don't see that patronage as it 18 relates to your particular inquiry would in any way cut 19 down on the effectiveness of union members' rights, 20 because the stewards' council, again, the bylaws are 21 before this Court, indicates that they can change the 22 bylaws if they want.

23 In fact, the irony of this case is, and it is 24 on the record, Mr. Brown ran a campaign on the basis he 25 wanted elected business agents. That was a finding by

1 Judge Young in the lower court. And of course that was 2 never put into effect, and Judge Young commented, well, 3 maybe if it had we would have a different result here, 4 but be that as it may, again, we feel that the way that 5 this whole situation has been handled is a tribute to 6 the Landrum-Griffin process.

7 There has been some reference to 609, and very 8 quickly, I would like to point out that as it relates to 9 609, that 609 was preceded by 506 and the legislative 10 history, and when it was -- when 506 was put together -- 11 it's the identical language of 609 -- that when it was 12 put together the bill of rights had not even been -- had 13 not been formulated. Therefore it is difficult to glean 14 from 609 an intent to broaden the rights under Title I 15 of the Act.

16 Also, again, when Congress wanted to 17 distinguish and indicate its -- that it understood the 18 difference between discipline and removal as it did in 19 201(a) of the Act, it spelled out under the Title II 20 provisions, the reporting provisions, that unions have 21 to report discipline or removal of an officer or an 22 agent. And surely, if discipline meant removal, why 23 would you have to put discipline or removal?

24 As importantly, in 101(a)(5), the procedural 25 due process aspect of Landrum-Griffin, the court in

1 parallel language to 609, almost identical language, the 2 legislative history is clear from Senator Kennedy's 3 comments that officers were not to be included with the 4 "every member" language of 101(a)(5) of Landrum-Griffin,
5 and that is clearly spelled out, and unless there is a 6 reason to the contrary, it seems pretty clear that if 7 Congress meant 101(a)(5) to exclude union officers 8 within the definition of "member" with the same kind of 9 language as 609, it seems only consistent that in 609
10 the same type of reasoning should be adopted.

11 QUESTION: Is there anything in the language 12 of the statute or in the legislative history that 13 suggests that Congress was contemplating an Act that 14 would give tenure to appointed officers?

15 MR. IORIO: Your Honor, I would suggest to the 16 -- well, first of all, the legislative history is sparse
17 on it. But I would suggest that the Congressmen -- it 18 is hard to believe that the Congressmen at that time who 19 were attempting to balance the interests of the union
20 and the interests of the members, and who themselves 21 have engaged in patronage, would have assumed or would 22 have put into an Act a patronage type of -- or outlawed 23 patronage, particularly at that time, in 1959, without 24 specifically laying it out within the Act. I mean, it 25 is almost inconceivable that those who enjoyed the

1 patronage system would take it away from the union 2 institutions without specifically referring to it in the 3 legislative history, and there is absolutely none of 4 that.

5 I would like to just briefly comment on Branti 6 and Elrod for a moment, because it has been raised by 7 the various briefs here that the Branti and the Elrod
8 have some application here, and as I have already 9 indicated, it is our position that the court -- that the 10 Congress did not intend for Landrum-Griffin or the Title
11 I aspects to follow the evolution of the First Amendment 12 of the Constitution, and that it requires an entirely 13 different interpretation of this Court.

14 That issue, the Branti-Elrod issue, was never 15 raised in the court below, and was raised for the first 16 time as we got to this Court, but nonetheless, we feel 17 it is ripe for adjudication, although I would point out 18 to the Court that under the Branti and, assuming the 19 Court feels in some way that it's applicable, that under 20 the Branti and Elrod standard, that in those cases the 21 Court was very clear in setting forth the factual 22 situation that the individuals protected there, the 23 bailiff or the summonser or the public defender, were 24 passive in the political process.

25 The facts in this case are, is that we have a

1 very active participant and personal confrontations, and 2 we would suggest to the Court that in that situation 3 Branti and Elrod should not be applicable, and the 4 reason for that is, and it's fairly simple, there is no
5 way a local union, or for that matter any organization, 6 could operate on the basis of having people that were in 7 confrontation, as they were in this very hotly contested 8 election, sit down and try to work together. The 9 internal bickering would make the very function of the 10 union impossible, not to mention the fragmentation of 11 the power of the union in dealing with employers, 12 particularly in the troubled times that we face today.

13 Also, as it relates to Branti, we would point
14 out to the Court that, using Justice Stevens's language, 15 that in this particular case, if it is applicable, that 16 we feel that party affiliation, if that is what we want 17 to call those who supported Harold Leu, is an 18 appropriate requirement for the effective performance of 19 office for the reasons we have just given, that it would 20 cause fragmentation of the union and internal bickering, 21 not to mention the fact under the Branti or Eldrod
22 standard that these are -- business agents are defined 23 as key administrative personnel under the Act itself, 24 that, as I said, they negotiate contracts, do the 25 grievances, handle the day to day affairs of the union.

1 And we would suggest, and I think it was a
2 concern of this Court in Elrod, that to permit business
3 agents who have campaigned head to head in the situation 4 that we have here today, to say to the insurgent in this 5 case, you can't hire who you want, would be to put 6 people in the position where they could thwart, within 7 the language of Elrod, thwart the policies of the in 8 party.

9 In conclusion, we would suggest to the Court 10 that we cannot imagine a factual situation or cannot 11 imagine that Congress would have ever in its day
12 intended, in 1959, that an insurgent who ran in a union 13 election and ran on a platform -- on a platform which 14 said to the members, we don't feel you are getting good 15 service, we are going to clean house when we get in, 16 that Title I in any way precludes that insurgent after 17 winning the union election from cleaning house, as it 18 were, particularly where the people that were -- in 19 which -- were terminated, that those business agents
20 that were terminated fully participated to the fullest 21 as it relates to their Title I rights, and therefore we 22 suggest that based on the record before this Court, that 23 the lower -- the courts of the -- the lower courts were 24 correct in their determination, and look for an 25 affirmation. Thank you.

1 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well.

2 Do you have anything further, Mr. Bolotin?

3 You have about four minutes remaining.

4 ORAL ARGUMENT OF SAMUEL G. BOLOTIN, ESQ.,

5 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS - REBUTTAL

6 MR. BOLOTIN: Thank you.

7 The problem is the record before this Court, 8 and the other problem is that this matter is before the 9 Court on summary judgment. There is no doubt that there 10 are facts in the record which counsel for the 11 Respondents can refer to to support their arguments, but 12 there are equally facts in the record that show that the 13 facts are in dispute, and the facts are not not in 14 dispute, and in particular, counsel is referring to the 15 fact that Harold Leu ran a campaign against these 16 business agents because they were providing poor 17 representation, but if you look at Page 64 of Harold 18 Leu's deposition, which is not in the joint appendix but 19 is contained in the records of the Court, when asked 20 under cross examination why he terminated the agents or 21 whether he campaigned against them, this is what he 22 said. "Where it was on there, on the literature 23 possibly that Harold Leu represents you, that was my 24 theme. If you think that I campaigned against the 25 business agents, you are wrong. My campaign was against

1 the administration because that's where the 2 responsibilities lies." So that --

3 QUESTION: Well, aren't they -- aren't they 4 part of the administration, the business agents, by 5 their -- the other hats they wear?

6 MR. BOLOTIN: Yes, but the point I am making,
7 Chief Justice Burger, is that the facts are in dispute
8 as to whether he campaigned against them or campaigned 9 against Brown as the chief officer of the local union.
10 The other thing that is in dispute is the factual issue 11 of whether he indeed received a mandate from the 12 membership to replace these business agents. In fact, 13 all of Brown's officers were elected. We would submit 14 that if it weren't for the blizzard, Brown would be in 15 office and this case wouldn't be before this -- wouldn't 16 be before this Court today, and in fact the election 17 ultimately was declared null and void because of 18 employer money which Leu received in the campaign.

19 So, clearly, there was never any mandate. I 20 am not suggesting that the fact that the election was 21 voided is determinative of the issues in this case. I 22 am merely stating that the facts in the record are not 23 clear.

24 QUESTION: Has there been a re-election?

25 MR. BOLOTIN: Yes, there has. There was a

1 rerun election.

2 QUESTION: And did Leu --

3 MR. BOLOTIN: Leu prevailed at that point.

4 That's correct, with another very close election.

5 Now, let me conclude by saying that you have 6 to keep in mind the basic overall policy behind 7 Landrum-Griffin and the Bill of Rights, and that was a 8 policy that came about because of corruption, 9 dictatorial practices, racketeering, employer and unions
10 being in bed together, if I may use that phrase, and a 11 policy where union members and officers were being 12 denied rights.

13 If you keep that policy in mind, you must find 14 that appointed officials in this case must be protected 15 for the exercise of those rights, and you must take an 16 expansive and ordinary common meaning of the language
17 contained in these sections rather than the restrictive 18 meaning that -- which would exclude coverage for 19 appointed officials.

20 QUESTION: Would not the position you take 21 mean that if a "reform candidate," putting that in 22 quotation marks, who campaigned against the president in 23 authority on the grounds of corruption within the union 24 tolerated by the business agents and the other people of 25 the governing body, then came into office with an

1 overwhelming vote, are you saying that the statute
2 contemplated that the new president, the reform 3 candidate, should be saddled with the people against 4 whom he had charged corruption?

5 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, if they were corrupt
6 individuals, and that determination was made, then it 7 would be --

8 QUESTION: No, not a determination, but he 9 campaigned against them on the grounds that the whole 10 crowd were corrupt, that they were looting the 11 retirement fund, the pension fund, and so forth. Now, 12 apart from whether he can sustain the proof of that, the 13 membership of the union has then voted him into office
14 and voted the other fellows out. No hearing, no 15 determination of the facts. Just the hypothetical I 16 have given you.

17 MR. BOLOTIN: Well, based upon those facts, 18 then the reason for the discharge would not be unlawful, 19 because he is not discharging them for the exercise of 20 their -- of supporting the wrong candidate or for 21 terminating them because of their political expression 22 in an election. He is discharging them because he 23 believes they are corrupt and they are harmful to the 24 union as an institution. I think that would be a 25 different situation. Thank you.

1 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.

2 The case is submitted.

3 (Whereupon, at 1:53 o'clock p.m., the case in 4 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
