1 Benefits under Part B are financed in part by 2 direct federal government contributions and in part by 3 monthly premiums paid by people who are 65 years of age 4 or older or disabled and who choose voluntarily to 5 enroll in the Part B program.

6 Under the Medicare statute, the Secretary of 7 Health and Human Services determines whether an 8 individual is eligible to enroll in the Part B program.
9 If the Secretary determines that an applicant is not 10 eligible, the applicant has an opportunity for a hearing 11 before an administrative law judge, and if necessary, to 12 judicial review of that determination.

13 Now, in contrast to these eligibility
14 determinations, the individual benefit reimbursement
15 determinations under the Part B program are not handled
16 directly by the Secretary. The day to day
17 administration of the Part B program requires a 18 determination of a vast number of individual claims for 19 reimbursement submitted by or on behalf of some 27
20 million beneficiaries. In 1980 alone, more than 150
21 million medical reimbursement claims were processed.

22 When it enacted the Medicare Act in 1965,
23 Congress concluded that a reimbursement program of this 24 magnitude and complexity could be administered most 25 efficiently and conveniently by private insurance

1 carriers, because these carriers, in conducting their 2 own insurance business, had acquired considerable 3 experience and expertise in determining whether, for 4 example, physicians' services are medically necessary
5 and in calculating the reasonable charge for a variety 6 of medical services in their particular community.

7 Accordingly, Congress in the Medicare Act
8 authorized the Secretary to enter into contracts with 9 private insurance carriers under which the carriers
10 would determine and pay Part B benefits on a 11 reimbursible non-profit basis. Under these contracts, 12 the carriers receive advances of funds which they then 13 pay to claimants in reimbursement for medical services
14 that are found by the carriers to be covered by Part B, 15 medically necessary, and reasonable in amount.

16 The contracts also provide for the government 17 to pay the carriers' necessary and proper costs of 18 administering the Part B system. In all of these 19 functions, the carriers act as agents of the Secretary.

20 Now, the challenge in this case is to the 21 procedures provided under Part B when a claimant is 22 dissatisfied with a carrier's reimbursement decision.
23 Under regulations promulgated by the Secretary, if a 24 claimant does not agree with the carrier's initial 25 decision regarding the amount of reimbursement for

1 particular services, the claimant may require a review
2 of that initial determination. A review of the entire 3 file is then conducted by an employee of the carrier 4 other than the employee who made the initial 5 determination, and the claimant may submit additional 6 evidence or legal or factual argument in support of the 7 claim at issue.

8 If after that review determination the 9 claimant is still not satisfied with the carrier's 10 decision, the Medicare Act requires the carrier to hold 11 a "fair hearing" on all claims in which there is more 12 than $100 in controversy. Now, this fair hearing is 13 conducted by a hearing officer appointed by the carrier 14 who cannot have participated personally at any prior 15 stage of the claim. The hearing officer is empowered to 16 inquire fully into the claim at issue. He may examine 17 witnesses and call for additional evidence at the 18 hearing, and the claimant is also entitled to submit 19 additional documents or evidence, examine witnesses, and 20 present argument.

21 QUESTION: Mr. Geller, does either the hearing
22 officer or the carrier have any financial or pecuniary 23 interest in the outcome of the determination by the 24 hearing officer?

25 MR. GELLER: No. I hope to develop that point

1 in a little while. The answer is that if a claim is 2 found to be meritorious, it is paid out of funds that 3 are submitted to the carrier by the Secretary. It 4 doesn't come out of the carrier's own pocket, and the 5 hearing officer's salary is not affected in any way by 6 the decision he reaches at these fair hearings.

7 QUESTION: You used the term "salary." Are 8 these people salaried?

9 MR. GELLER: Well, some people -- some of 10 these people are, I understand, full-time employees of 11 the carrier. Most of them are simply independent 12 contractors who are paid on a hearing by hearing basis, 13 although some of them work so often that it approaches a 14 full-time position with the -- with the carrier.

15 QUESTION: So their only interest -- your 16 opponent argues that they have an interest in getting 17 re-employed over and over again. They are not 18 permanently -- they don't have any kind of tenure.

19 MR. GELLER: That's -- that's correct, and I 20 assume, and we don't dispute the fact that some of these 21 people may well have that interest. What we dispute is 22 this notion that they increase their chances of being 23 hired and rehired by denying meritorious claims.

24 QUESTION: Well, Mr. Geller, what is the 25 source of their compensation? Is it the carrier or the 1 government?

2 MR. GELLER: Well, they are employed by 3 contracts with the carrier, but what is paid to them by 4 the carrier is considered a necessary administrative 5 expense --

6 QUESTION: And the --

7 MR. GELLER: -- and the carrier is reimbursed
8 by the Secretary.

9 QUESTION: By the government.

10 MR. GELLER: That's right.

11 QUESTION: Does that run into considerable -- 12 does that run into much money?

13 MR. GELLER: Not really. There are only about 14 100 or 150 hearing officers for the whole country. We 15 are talking about a Medicare program that -- Part B 16 involves more than ten million --

17 QUESTION: Are there other expenses in 18 addition to the compensation to the hearing officers?

19 MR. GELLER: Oh, of course. I mean, the 20 hearing officers are an insignificant expense of the 21 total of the entire --

22 QUESTION: But I mean, for this procedure. I
23 mean, does the carrier get compensated, for example, 24 for --

25 MR. GELLER: Yes.

1 QUESTION: -- the rent of hearing rooms and 2 things like that?

3 MR. GELLER: Yes, I mean, they -- well,
4 normally they would be held, for example, at the 5 attorney's office. Many of these people are attorneys.
6 Let me put into perspective what we are talking about 7 here. There are 158 or in 1980 there were 158 million
8 Medicare claims submitted. As -- Out of that figure, 9 only about two million went beyond the stage of the 10 initial determination by the carrier and went to the 11 review determination stage, and out of that two million, 12 there are only about 26,000 that went to the fair 13 hearing stage. So the administrative expenses of the 14 carriers would be figured on processing 158 or whatever 15 it is million claims, and the hearing officer would only 16 be compensated for conducting a very, very minor 17 percentage of the total Medicare picture, so the 18 administrative expenses that are attributable to the 19 carrier are very, very small.

20 QUESTION: Mr. Geller, if a person has the job
21 of being a hearing examiner in one of these, what body 22 of law does he look to to decide reasonableness? Is 23 there a body in the private sector of interpreting the 24 same contractual provisions and so forth?

25 MR. GELLER: Well, the -- this is all laid out

1 with -- in great detail in the regulations that the 2 Secretary has promulgated and that are published in 3 CFR. The hearing officer has to follow the statute, 4 obviously.

5 QUESTION: Right.

6 MR. GELLER: Those regulations. In addition,
7 the Secretary publishes a carriers' manual and the 8 hearing officer handbook, portions of which, by the way,
9 are reprinted in the Joint Appendix, and to which I
10 would ask the Court to turn. And all of those sources 11 explain in great detail to these hearing officers how 12 they are to go about computing the reasonable charge, 13 and frequently it is a -- it is a mathematical 14 computation. They have to take into account things such 15 as the --

16 QUESTION: Do they take into account the same 17 kind of things they would take into account if it were 18 simply a private --

19 MR. GELLER: Yes, well, one of the things -- 20 Yes. One of the things that the hearing officer has to 21 take into account is the carrier's particular charge in 22 his own -- in its own private insurance --

23 QUESTION: Well, then, doesn't the carrier 24 have an interest because of its possible impact on its 25 private operations in how certain contractual provisions

1 are construed, or how certain reasonable determinations 2 are made?

3 MR. GELLER: Well, the carrier's private 4 business serves as a ceiling beyond which a Medicare 5 payment cannot be made, so there is no reason to think 6 that -- it is not a floor. There is no reason to think 7 that the carrier in its private business would be 8 hindered or in any way encouraged to do anything --

9 QUESTION: Yes, but wouldn't it be interested 10 in having precedents establish the fair and 11 reasonableness of the ceilings it has used in its 12 private business?

13 MR. GELLER: No, the hearing officer has to 14 take into account in determining the reasonable charge 15 the same sorts of things that the carrier takes into 16 account in his private business.

17 QUESTION: Right.

18 MR. GELLER: For example, the physicians' 19 customary charge, the prevailing charge in the 20 community. Now, after the hearing officer has done all 21 of that, the fact is, he still under the statute cannot 22 pay anything more than the carrier itself would pay for 23 the same sort of claim in its private insurance business.

24 I think there is an important point to be made 25 here. We can't lose sight of what the district court

1 found to be the due process violation, and what the 2 district court advanced as the remedy for that due
3 process violation. How reasonable charge is figured, 4 including the fact that the reasonable charge can't be 5 more than what the carrier pays in its private insurance 6 business, is in the statute and in the regulations. The 7 administrative law judge that the district court has 8 ordered appointed in all of these cases would have to 9 follow those exact same procedures in figuring out what 10 the reasonable charge is, so there is no reason to think 11 that because the hearing officer is appointed by the 12 carrier, that that introduces an institutional bias into 13 the system. The -- how reasonable charge is computed 14 is not something that the carrier decides. It is in the 15 statute and it is in the Secretary's regulations.

16 Now, this case is a nationwide class action 17 brought on behalf of persons whose claim for 18 reimbursement under Part B was denied in whole or in 19 part by a carrier hearing officer. The district court
20 agreed with the plaintiffs that the Part B hearing
21 procedures established by Congress violate the due 22 process clause of the Fifth Amendment. In the district 23 court's view, Part B beneficiaries are entitled under 24 the Constitution to have final determinations with 25 respect to their claims for reimbursement of medical

1 expenses made by hearing officers who are totally 2 independent of the carriers that administer the Part B 3 program, and the district court gave essentially two 4 reasons for suspecting that the carriers' hearing 5 officers were not and could not be impartial.

6 One was this notion that Justice O'Connor
7 alluded to earlier, that perhaps the hearing officers 8 have some financial interest in the decisions that they 9 make, and the second reason that the district court gave 10 was what the district court termed the hearing officer's 11 "vicarious involvement in the claim." By that the 12 district court meant that the hearing officer works for 13 the carrier that has twice before denied the claim, and 14 the notion is that the hearing officer might be 15 reluctant to overturn a decision made at two previous 16 levels of the carrier.

17 What the -- Based on these conclusions, the 18 court struck down the review provisions of the Part B
19 Medicare program, and ordered that the Secretary afford 20 the right to a de novo hearing before an administrative 21 law judge in the Department of Health and Human Services
22 to every person whose Part B claim was denied in whole 23 or in part by a carrier hearing officer after May 1, 24 1980, provided that the amount remaining in issue is at 25 least $100.

1 Now, the government has taken a direct appeal
2 to this Court under 28 USC 1252 to challenge this 3 extraordinary holding of the district court. The 4 district court has declared unconstitutional the 5 specific procedural mechanism devised by Congress to 6 deal with a massive medical insurance program involving, 7 as I said, some 27 million beneficiaries, nearly 200 8 million in this fiscal year, individual claims for 9 reimbursement, $10.5 billion worth of benefits, and in 10 its place, the district court has ordered the Secretary 11 to establish an administrative review system within the 12 Department of Health and Human Services that Congress 13 expressly considered and rejected.

14 Now, in reviewing this decision, we believe it 15 is important for the Court to keep in mind that the 16 district court in finding a violation of the due process
17 clause did not point to anything in the Medicare statute
18 or the Secretary's regulations to suggest that the fair
19 hearings offered to Part B claimants by the carriers 20 denied claimants a meaningful opportunity to be heard.

21 Moreover, the district court did not point to 22 any evidence drawn from the accumulated experience of 23 carrier-conducted hearings in scores of thousands of 24 cases over the last 16 years to demonstrate that 25 Congress and the Secretary were wrong in believing that

1 carriers could be relied upon to conduct appropriate 2 hearings on these very small claims.

3 QUESTION: Tell me, Mr. Geller, are there any 4 other models of this type of thing?

5 MR. GELLER: Models?

6 QUESTION: This -- letting this sort of thing
7 be done by private judges?

8 MR. GELLER: I don't -- there may not be any 9 models, but I am not sure there are any models for the 10 Part B Medicare program to begin with.

11 QUESTION: Yes, I know.

12 MR. GELLER: I think what Congress had in mind 13 was to sort of parallel and to create as minor an 14 inconvenience as it could for the health care industry
15 when it set up the Part B program, and therefore it 16 assumed that the best way to process these millions and 17 millions of claims was to delegate that authority --

18 QUESTION: So in that sense, this is an 19 original, isn't it, this kind of procedure?

20 MR. GELLER: Yes, it is, but -- but my point 21 is that it is not simply the review procedures that are 22 unique. The whole Part B Medicare program is unique, 23 and I think that the review procedures have to be viewed 24 in the context of what Congress was trying to do in 25 setting up in 1965 this entirely new and unique program.

1 QUESTION: To what extent is it significant
2 that you have two problems here? One is the carriers
3 appointing the hearing officers, and secondly, no right
4 of review thereafter, judicial review or other type 5 review. Is that significant, that you have both alleged 6 problems?

7 MR. GELLER: The -- Well, in this case, there
8 is only one alleged problem. The plaintiffs have not 9 challenged the absence of judicial review under the 10 statute.

11 QUESTION: But do we have to look at that and 12 focus on that in weighing the validity of this --

13 MR. GELLER: I think -- I think the Court, in 14 considering this case and in considering the Erika case, 15 has to, in adjudicating the plaintiffs's claims in each 16 of those cases, consider the entire program, and I think 17 that it would be appropriate in considering whether 18 procedural fairness has been met here, to consider the 19 fact that Congress has not allowed for judicial review, 20 but I think it is important to keep in mind that the 21 Court has to find that the administrative process
22 violates due process. It is not simply enough to sort 23 of merge everything together and say, well, it probably 24 is procedurally proper, but it is close to the line, and 25 since there isn't judicial review, we are somehow going

1 to restructure the administrative process.

2 I don't think that the courts have any power
3 to restructure the system that Congress has devised
4 unless they find that the system in some specifically 5 articulated way violates elementary due process, denying 6 the claimant the meaningful opportunity to be heard, or 7 not an impartial decision-maker. I don't think that the 8 Court will be able to identify any aspect of the Part B 9 hearing system in this case that falls below minimal 10 standards of due process.

11 It is important to emphasize, as Justice 12 O'Connor asked me earlier, that neither the carriers nor 13 the hearing officers have any direct or indirect 14 pecuniary interest in the outcome of the case. The 15 carriers administer the Part B program in their 16 particular locality on a non-profit basis.

17 QUESTION: Why do they do it, Mr. Geller?

18 MR. GELLER: Well, there was testimony as to 19 that in the record, and one of the people who is, I
20 think, an officer of the Occidental Life Insurance 21 Company, testified that they do it essentially for two 22 reasons. One is, it is very good public relations, 23 because millions and millions of benefit checks are sent 24 out with the insurance company's name on them. And the 25 second reason that was given, a more substantive one, is

1 that it helps the insurance companies achieve economies
2 of scale, because they can integrate their private 3 insurance business for -- I assume for purposes of 4 computerization, for example. They can rent a larger 5 computer, and they can achieve economies of scale.

6 I am not sure it is -- I think -- we don't -- 7 we don't deny the fact that carriers, insurance carriers 8 would like to be part of the Part B program, but if any 9 inference can be drawn from that, it is not the 10 inference, I think, that the plaintiffs draw, which is 11 that they would seek at every turn to deny meritorious 12 claims. I think if any inference can be drawn from the 13 fact that carriers would like to be part of the Part B 14 program and would like to have their contracts renewed
15 by the Secretary --

16 QUESTION: Well, isn't it possible -- I don't 17 know if this is true or not -- to infer that they may 18 want to be sure that the decisions are consistent with 19 the way their private business operates, that they do 20 have an interest in consistency, not in outcome in any 21 particular case?

22 MR. GELLER: Well, I think the --

23 QUESTION: That they always treat claims for 24 -- we have dialysis in the next case. They want those 25 always resolved according to the same standards.

1 MR. GELLER: Well, except that they are 2 obliged by the contract they sign to follow the 3 standards that Congress and the Secretary --

4 QUESTION: But which in turn refer back to the 5 ones they use themselves, as I understand it.

6 MR. GELLER: Well, on reasonable charge, but 7 not, for example, on what, for example, is covered by 8 the Part B program, or what is a medically necessary --

9 QUESTION: But aren't most of these questions 10 reasonable charge questions?

11 MR. GELLER: Yes. Yes, but still, it doesn't 12 seem to us there is any incentive on the part of any 13 carrier to deny a meritorious claim. It would seem that 14 if they want to continue to be part of the Part B 15 program, if they wanted to have good public relations, 16 they would be scrupulously fair. In fact, if any, as I 17 was saying, if any inference can be drawn from this 18 desire to maintain -- to be part of the program, it 19 might be that they would -- they would grant benefits in 20 non-meritorious claims, in order to have the benefit 21 checks go out with their name captioned on them.

22 QUESTION: Well, but then they would have to 23 grant non-meritorious claims in their private business, 24 too, to be consistent.

25 MR. GELLER: Not necessarily. I mean, many of 1 these cases are very, very fact-bound, and there is no 2 record kept. They are not precedents in which they 3 could go back and look and see what they did in a 4 similar situation in 1978. Even the plaintiffs have not 5 alleged, and believe me, the plaintiffs have conjured up 6 every conceivable, imaginable way in which the carriers 7 or the hearing officers might violate their solemn 8 duties. Even the plaintiffs have not suggested that the 9 carriers might do that.

10 Now, the district court acknowledged that the 11 hearing officer's fee in connection with a given case is 12 unaffected by the decision he reaches in that case, but 13 the court speculated that the hearing officer has a 14 pecuniary interest in "currying the carrier's favor" by 15 ruling against the claimant, because the hearing 16 officer's future income might somehow be affected by how 17 often the carrier decides to call upon his services.

18 This concern again strikes us as totally 19 unrealistic and fanciful, and certainly -- this is an 20 important point -- is an insufficient reason to strike 21 down a federal statute. First, as I noted earlier, the 22 carrier has no financial personal interest in how a 23 claim is decided. In addition, and perhaps more 24 important, there was no evidence in the record that a 25 carrier had ever engaged in conduct so improper as to

1 terminate or substantially alter its relationship with a 2 hearing officer based upon how that hearing officer was 3 deciding particular claims in favor of Part B claimants.

4 In fact, the HHS official who is responsible 5 for monitoring the Part B hearing process testified that 6 he didn't know of any instance in which such conduct had 7 ever occurred or even been alleged. In fact, there was 8 no evidence in the record that a hearing officer had 9 ever been fired by a carrier for any reason.

10 Quite apart from the lack of factual support 11 for the district court's conclusion, we submit there is 12 no support for it in logic. To the extent that a 13 carrier wishes to ingratiate himself -- itself with the 14 Secretary in order to maintain its Medicare contract, or 15 to the extent that a hearing officer wishes, to use the 16 district court's terms, to "curry favor with a carrier," 17 we submit that they would have an exceedingly strong 18 incentive to correctly determine the amount of every 19 Part B claim, and to pay every meritorious claim to the 20 full extent required by statute.

21 That, of course, is the carrier's contractual 22 obligation, and the Secretary could terminate the 23 contract of any carrier that failed to satisfy that 24 obligation. In fact, the Secretary carefully monitors
25 the performance of the hearing officers and the carriers

1 in general in at least four different ways, perhaps the 2 most important of which is that every three months, the 3 carriers must send to the Secretary 10 percent of their 4 hearing decisions, determined on some random basis based 5 on the claimant's social security number, so that every 6 -- and they must send at least one hearing decision from 7 every single hearing officer, so that allows the 8 Secretary to determine how the process is actually 9 working and how each hearing officer is adhering to the 10 carriers' handbook and the hearing officers' manual.

11 QUESTION: But doesn't the record reveal that 12 is a pretty cursory review, Mr. Geller?

13 MR. GELLER: I don't believe that the record 14 reveals that, Justice Blackmun, and that is only one of 15 four ways in which the -- the hearing officers' and the 16 carriers' carrying out of their contractual obligations
17 are monitored. There is also an on-site representative 18 at every one of these carriers, and he frequently will 19 monitor a hearing officer -- a hearing being conducted 20 by a hearing officer.

21 In addition, there is an annual contractual 22 review system whereby the Secretary sends a fairly 23 lengthy, and the record contains at least one of these, 24 a fairly lengthy critique of how the carrier is doing 25 during that year, and will often have suggestions.

1 And finally, there is evidence in the record
2 that even on individual cases, in response to a 3 particular complaint, the Secretary will review a 4 hearing officer's decision.

5 QUESTION: Mr. Geller, while I have you
6 interrupted, this went out for summary judgment against 7 the government?

8 MR. GELLER: Yes.

9 QUESTION: Is it your position that you are 10 entitled to summary judgment --

11 MR. GELLER: Yes.

12 QUESTION: -- or do you merely want it to go 13 back for --

14 MR. GELLER: No. It is our position that we 15 are entitled to summary judgment, because there is 16 nothing on the face of the statute and the plaintiffs 17 have not suggested any lines of factual inquiry that 18 could lead a judge to conclude that the Part B system 19 violates due process.

20 I might add that there -- there were a great 21 amount of evidentiary materials submitted here, both 22 depositions and answers to interrogatories, that were 23 submitted to the district court both in favor of and in 24 opposition to the plaintiffs' motion for summary 25 judgment.

1 QUESTION: Well, in the mind of the district
2 court, would a right to appeal to the Secretary cure the 3 entire problem?

4 MR. GELLER: Yes, and that is what the 5 district court has ordered, which is --

6 QUESTION: That would cure all the possible
7 bias in the case?

8 MR. GELLER: Apparently, that is what the 9 district court thought, although there is a line of 10 cases in this Court, such as Ward versus Village of 11 Monroeville, which seems to suggest that if there is a 12 bias at some sort of adjudicatory level, it is not cured 13 by having a de novo level of review on top of that.

14 QUESTION: Even judicial review?

15 MR. GELLER: Even judicial review. That's 16 right. That is what was involved in a case like Ward, 17 but the district court here thought that that would 18 solve the problem, which I think comes back, once again, 19 to the fact that the district court simply had some 20 vague unease about how -- the way the system was 21 working, but he could not really point to any evidence 22 of any particular unfairness. In fact, he went out of 23 his way in the district judge's opinion to praise the 24 actual conduct of the hearing officers.

25 QUESTION: Well, the district court didn't

1 suggest that if there were some review by the Secretary, 2 then the Secretary's review in turn was subject to 3 judicial review, did it?

4 MR. GELLER: No. No. In fact, the district
5 court, as I recall, pointed out that no one had 6 challenged the judicial preclusion provisions of the 7 Part B Medicare Act.

8 Therefore, I don't think there is any reason 9 to believe that a carrier would jeopardize its 10 relationship with the Medicare program by exerting 11 influence on a hearing officer to deny an otherwise 12 meritorious claim, or that a hearing officer would act 13 in that unseemly fashion on his own in the belief that 14 it would somehow place -- please the carrier and make it 15 more likely that he would be hired as a hearing officer 16 in the future.

17 Exactly the opposite is the case. The hearing 18 officer and the carrier have every incentive to be 19 scrupulously fair.

20 If the Court has no further questions, I would 21 like to reserve the balance of my time.

22 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Sohnen.

23 ORAL ARGUMENT OF HARVEY SOHNEN, ESQ.,

24 ON BEHALF OF THE APPELLEES

25 MR. SOHNEN: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it

1 please the Court, this case presents two issues. The 2 first issue is whether the due process rights of 3 Medicare claimants are violated when the hearing 4 officers who make final, unreviewable decisions on 5 claims appeals serve at the pleasure of the insurance 6 companies that have denied the claims. The second issue 7 is one of the remedy, whether the appeal ordered by the 8 district court to the Secretary is the appropriate 9 remedy.

10 Counsel has made a number of comments about 11 evidence in this case, and I think it is important to 12 understand that the standard that this Court has 13 recognized about the requirement of a fair tribunal is 14 that our system of justice seeks to avoid the 15 possibility and even the appearance of bias, and thus 16 the standard is one of whether the circumstances 17 presented pose to the average man sitting as a judge a 18 possible temptation not to decide fairly.

19 It is important, therefore, that we grasp the 20 critical facts of this complex program to understand why 21 in fact carriers do have a direct financial interest in 22 the outcome of Medicare claims, and why it is not an 23 extraordinary exercise of the imagination, as counsel 24 has stated, to so find.

25 As Justice Stevens commented, there is a very

1 close connection between policy decisions that are made 2 with respect to the private carriers' own claims and to 3 their functions as Medicare contractors. In fact, 4 whether they are holding a Medicare contract or 5 administering their own private plans, they have the 6 same dual mission. First, they are to protect the funds
7 of their policyholders, or in the case of Medicare, 8 federal funds, and secondly, they are to honor the 9 claims benefit -- the claims decisions -- excuse me, the 10 claims that are submitted to them under a prudent and 11 cautious interpretation of their policies.

12 If the carrier treats federal funds less 13 cautiously than its own, its own financial interest is 14 jeopardized, as the Secretary has the option not to 15 renew a carrier's contract, which is only for a one-year
16 term, without a showing of cause. Thus, the statute 17 mandates carriers to treat Medicare claims in 18 essentially the same manner as if it were their own 19 money being spent.

20 In addition, it is important to understand 21 that there is a very straightforward way in which 22 carriers have a direct financial stake in the outcome of 23 Medicare claims decisions. This is through supplemental 24 private policies for the elderly, commonly known as 25 Medigap insurance. These supplemental policies have

1 become more needed as medical care costs have gone up 2 and as the differences between actual costs of care and 3 Medicare reimbursement have increased.

4 Medicare carriers, as counsel has indicated,
5 have the name recognition that accompanies their names
6 going out on thousands of checks to the beneficiaries.
7 This name recognition gives them a competitive advantage 8 in obtaining business under the Medigap programs. Thus, 9 and in fact, the Secretary's relationship with the 10 carriers does not deny the existence of the Medigap
11 programs, but in fact in Article 24 of the contract, 12 which appears in the record, the carrier specifically 13 authorizes the -- the carrier is specifically authorized 14 to integrate its Medicare and Medigap claims 15 processing.

16 This leads to an inevitable financial stake
17 for carriers in the outcome of Medicare claims, since 18 when the carrier pays less on a Medicare claim, the 19 result is that there is less paid on the Medigap claim.
20 This happens because Medicare does not pay the actual 21 charges for covered services, but only what a carrier
22 determines to be an allowed charge. Assuming a
23 deductible when a claim has been met, Medicare pays 80
24 percent of an allowed charge, and Medigap pays 20
25 percent. The supplemental plan, or Medigap plan, is not

1 liable for the difference between the allowed charge and 2 the actual charge, which is ordinarily picked up by the 3 beneficiary.

4 Thus, and similarly, when a carrier is holding 5 a Medigap policy and the issue is one of medical 6 necessity, if there is a determination that the 7 procedure is not medically necessary under Medicare, 8 that also means that the Medigap policy does not -- does 9 not cover the claim. Moreover --

11 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

12 QUESTION: -- the other side of that coin, I
13 suppose, is that the individual has a remedy in court 14 for the 20 percent claim, doesn't he?

15 MR. SOHNEN: Well, the way the contracts are 16 written, the Medigap contracts simply refer to what 17 Medicare has decided, so that ordinarily under a private 18 plan which had no connection with Medicare, there would 19 be the right of review by arbitration or the courts, but 20 here, the Medigap plans simply refer to the level that 21 is set by Medicare.

22 QUESTION: I see. By its terms, it is 23 measured by what is allowed as reasonable under Medicare?

24 MR. SOHNEN: That's right.

25 QUESTION: I see.

1 MR. SOHNEN: And this is -- this is the 2 problem that is at the heart of this system, because in 3 their private operations, the carriers do not have to 4 make the final review of their own claims. If they are 5 striking -- if they make an error in striking the 6 balance between the interests of their stockholders on 7 the one hand and the interests of the policyholders, 8 these questions are referred to arbitration and the 9 courts for independent review, yet under the Medicare 10 statute, there is no independent review, and the 11 carriers are essentially required to police themselves 12 in this manner, notwithstanding the fact that they have 13 no experience in conducting hearings that comes from the 14 normal course of their business outside of Medicare.

15 QUESTION: Well, they have had -- How many 16 years of it have they had now?

17 MR. SOHNEN: Well, Your Honor, there are new 18 -- there are new carriers being contracted all the 19 time. There are some carriers that --

20 QUESTION: Well, what about an old one?

21 MR. SOHNEN: Well, the -- I would -- I would 22 agree that the experience of the carriers varies.

23 However, they cannot draw on their private business --

24 QUESTION: Well, what about this one?

25 MR. SOHNEN: Well, this is -- this is a

1 nationwide class action, so this concerns all, all the 2 carriers. Blue Shield of California, which was a named 3 defendant, has been with the Medicare program since its 4 inception, and I think that the -- the facts pertaining 5 to Blue Shield show that just having a long experience
6 with the Medicare program does not provide independent 7 review. Of the seven hearing officers who work for Blue
8 Shield, four of them are retired Blue Shield employees, 9 one of them has a current -- a current consulting 10 contract, and one of them there was no information 11 about. So, we -- we think that the facts of the 12 relationships between the hearing officers and the 13 carriers presented an extreme picture.

14 QUESTION: What remedy did you ask for in this 15 case?

16 MR. SOHNEN: The remedy we asked for -- we 17 presented one remedy. Actually, we -- Our position was 18 that there were two alternative remedies that would 19 satisfy constitutional standards. The one that the 20 court chose, and one that might have been --

21 QUESTION: Why is review by the Secretary 22 going to cure the bias? I mean, this -- Why is that?

23 MR. SOHNEN: Well, because it will be de novo 24 review. If --

25 QUESTION: You mean, a new hearing?

1 MR. SOHNEN: Yes. Our concern is that 2 anything short of de novo review would not provide 3 protection from biased findings of these hearing 4 officers.

5 QUESTION: Is that what -- Is that what the 6 district court, you think, granted you?

7 MR. SOHNEN: Yes. The judgement specifically 8 refers to a de novo hearing to be provided by the Social 9 Security Administration.

10 QUESTION: Was there any consideration given 11 to the added cost that the district court's judgment 12 would impose on this structure?

13 MR. SOHNEN: Well, we take -- we take the 14 position that a fair hearing costs no more than an 15 unfair hearing, because what we are -- what we are 16 questioning in this case is not the whole procedures of 17 the Medicare program, or even the whole procedures of 18 the appeals process, but simply the identity of these 19 hearing officers who cannot provide independent review, 20 and the remedy that -- one of the remedies that we 21 proposed --

22 QUESTION: But in Goldberg against Kelly --

23 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

24 QUESTION: -- the Court said, some ten or 25 twelve years ago, that just so another person was having

1 a look at it was sufficient to satisfy due process.

2 MR. SOHNEN: Hearing officers in the Medicare
3 program are not simply reviewing the decisions of other 4 employees who have clerically processed the claim at the 5 initial stage. They are reviewing all decisions of the 6 carrier, including decisions of management as to policy
7 matters, as to claim -- as to how claims are handled 8 generally, so this is not a situation where we simply 9 have -- we can solve the problem by making sure there 10 has been no personal involvement. The carriers are 11 connected with the hearing officers by the way that the 12 selection, training, and employment relationship works, 13 and I think it is important to understand the critical 14 facts about why independent review is impossible in 15 connection with the hearing officers and the -- and the 16 carriers.

17 First of all, the carriers have complete 18 control over the selection of hearing officers. The 19 Secretary does not review the selection decisions for 20 these positions, and in fact its role is limited to 21 issuance of general guidelines which are lacking in 22 specific criteria for these positions.

23 Thirdly, the carriers are free to recruit 24 hearing officers in any manner they please, such as by 25 word of mouth, with the result that many hearing

1 officers, such as in the case of Blue Shield of 2 California, are current or retired employees of the 3 insurance company.

4 Hearing officers, as was noted, are generally
5 appointed on a hearing by hearing basis, and have no 6 tenure whatsoever in their jobs, or any guarantees that 7 they will be called in for a future hearing. Thus, the 8 carriers can sever their relationships with the hearing 9 officers without stating cause, and it is implicit in 10 this relationship that hearing officers have no real 11 protection against retaliation.

12 QUESTION: Counsel --

13 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

14 QUESTION: -- was there any evidence, though, 15 that there was actual bias involved on the part of the 16 hearing officers?

17 MR. SOHNEN: It is our position that we don't 18 -- we don't identify actual bias in the record. It is 19 our position that --

20 QUESTION: And there was no evidence of it?
21 Your answer is no?

22 MR. SOHNEN: Yes. In our position, the 23 standard of this Court is whether there is a possible 24 temptation for -- for biased decision-making.

25 QUESTION: Was there any evidence in the

1 record to explain why an administrative law judge
2 employed by the Secretary would make fewer presumably 3 erroneous decisions than the hearing officers?

4 MR. SOHNEN: Yes. First of all, I -- I want
5 to focus that the constitutional issue presented in this 6 case is not whether a lawyer has to be the final 7 decision-maker in a case, but it is whether independent 8 review is necessary, and there was substantial evidence 9 in the record that there were erroneous decisions that 10 were not being corrected. In one of the annual 11 contractor reviews that appeared in the record, there 12 were notations indicating that the Secretary was finding 13 a higher degree of mistakes than the carrier was in its 14 own reviews.

15 And I think that given the complexity of the 16 Medicare program, and the wide range of issues, the fact 17 that there were no selection criteria in any meaningful 18 sense except for what the carriers wanted, I think it 19 must be assumed that some -- some review by a body which 20 has some knowledge of the law would decrease the risk of 21 erroneous deprivation.

22 QUESTION: But you are asking us to decide 23 that, or the district court decided it on the basis of 24 assumptions rather than evidence?

25 MR. SOHNEN: No, there was -- there was -- the

1 evidence in the record showed -- some of which has been 2 included in our Joint Appendix, showed an extremely high 3 error rate of processing claims in the Medicare program.

4 QUESTION: Well, it showed, did it not, that 5 perhaps the hearing officers were granting as many as 50
6 percent of the claims that came before them?

7 MR. SOHNEN: There was -- there was that 8 evidence, but there was also evidence indicating that 9 the Secretary's own staff viewed those statistics as 10 being distorted. There was evidence that these 11 statistics fluctuated according to technical variations
12 in the carriers' policy as to when they conducted a -- 13 when they resolved matters at the review stage as 14 opposed to the hearing stage. More importantly, these 15 statistics mix corrections of computer type errors, 16 which abound, with substantive decisions where the 17 carrier's policy was at stake. And finally, any 18 modification whatsoever in the amount of the claim, 19 whether for 50 cents or some other small amount, would 20 be counted as a reversal under the way the statistics 21 were kept.

22 QUESTION: Mr. Sohnen?

23 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

24 QUESTION: In responding to Justice O'Connor's 25 question, it seems to me you are arguing as though you

1 had prevailed after trial and gotten a judgment or a 2 verdict below, and simply saying there is evidence to 3 support the verdict, but as I understand, it went off on 4 summary judgment, so that any point of disputed evidence 5 would be resolved against you.

6 MR. SOHNEN: We think that the -- the 7 constitutional issue in this case is whether there is a 8 right of independent review, and the relationships that 9 prevent an independent review are undisputed, and appear 10 in the face of the statute essentially as I have 11 described. The training, the selection, lack of job 12 security, lack of review, all those factors were 13 undisputed in the factual record. There may have been 14 certain facts that were subject to different 15 interpretations, but --

16 QUESTION: Mr. Sohnen, in the --

17 MR. SOHNEN: -- but in terms of the -- yes.

18 QUESTION: In the next case --

19 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

20 QUESTION: -- concerning the court of claims
21 jurisdiction, if this Court should rule there that there 22 is jurisdiction in the court of claims, are your 23 concerns alleviated?

24 MR. SOHNEN: No, they will not be, Your Honor.

25 QUESTION: Why?

1 MR. SOHNEN: As I indicated in response to 2 Justice White's question before, something short of de
3 novo review does not cure the problem of biased 4 decision-making. The court of claims has indicated that 5 if its -- as it sees its jurisdiction under the Tucker
6 Act, it would be for a review of an extremely narrow 7 scope.

8 QUESTION: On the record.

9 MR. SOHNEN: Well, even narrower than that.

10 QUESTION: Oh, really?

11 MR. SOHNEN: I believe that it would be -- it 12 would be limited to questions of constitutionality and 13 questions of statutory interpretation. Thus, erroneous 14 findings of fact and applications of the law to the 15 facts would not be reviewable, and these are so many of 16 the cases that we have before us.

17 For example, Mr. McClure's case involved -- 18 Mr. McClure was a resident of a remote community in 19 northern California. He suffered a heart attack. His 20 physician in that community felt that immediate surgical 21 intervention was necessary to save his life. He 22 therefore concluded that a facility in San Francisco was 23 the nearest appropriate place for him -- for him to be 24 treated, and he went -- he was sent to San Francisco.
25 His life was saved. But when he submitted his claim for

1 an air ambulance under Medicare, despite the fact that 2 there was no evidence indicating that his doctor's 3 physician -- his physician's testimony -- his 4 physician's opinion was incorrect, the Medicare hearing 5 officer decided that there was a closer appropriate 6 facility.

7 Now, that is the type of case that would never 8 be reviewable in the court of claims under the 9 jurisdiction that they have asserted.

10 QUESTION: I am trying to sort out to what 11 extent you are claiming bias taints this result, or 12 whether it is just general incompetence, just the 13 general chance of arriving at unsound conclusions.

14 MR. SOHNEN: I think that -- I think the 15 gravest concern about this system is the fact that no 16 independent review is available, and the fact that --

17 QUESTION: Well, I know, but --

18 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

19 QUESTION: -- that doesn't answer my question.

20 MR. SOHNEN: Well, I think I can respond to 21 your question with a followup to that, which is that the 22 fact that the competence of these hearing officers is 23 determined as part of this close relationship between 24 the hearing officer -- between the carrier and the 25 hearing officers aggravates the fact that there is a

1 concern about bias.

2 QUESTION: Well, if all the insurance carriers 3 involved in this program together created a pool of 4 hearing officers who didn't work for any of them and 5 never had, gave them some -- the same amount of training 6 that they have gotten now, and drew them by lot, would 7 you be here or not?

8 MR. SOHNEN: Well, the question that poses is 9 what would be necessary to ensure independent review.

10 QUESTION: Well, would independent review be 11 required in that -- on those facts? If it is, it must 12 be your objection is basically that this is just an 13 unsound way of deciding cases.

14 MR. SOHNEN: I think that the -- if a system 15 as you have described assured that a hearing officer was 16 insulated from the carrier whose decision he was 17 reviewing, both in terms of the selection process, which 18 now leaves --

19 QUESTION: Yes.

20 MR. SOHNEN: -- there is an extremely close
21 connection, and the job security aspects --

22 QUESTION: Well, suppose it was.

23 MR. SOHNEN: Yes. And with -- with some input 24 from the Secretary about qualification, I -- I think 25 that that would be of the nature of independent review.

1 It is hard to assess such a plan without facts, but I 2 think the essence of independent review turns on the --

3 QUESTION: That would eliminate a good deal of 4 the so-called bias.

5 MR. SOHNEN: Yes, if -- if the -- if the 6 individual policies of carriers was -- did not affect 7 the ability of the hearing officers to make decisions, 8 that would be the type of remedy that would reduce the 9 risk of bias.

10 QUESTION: Mr. Sohnen, what are you arguing 11 other than the possibility of bias?

12 MR. SOHNEN: Well, we also -- the other 13 issue --

14 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: You can ponder on 15 that. We will take it up at 1:00 o'clock.

16 (Whereupon, at 12:00 o'clock p.m., the Court 17 was recessed, to reconvene at 1:00 o'clock p.m. of the 18 same day.)

1. AFTERNOON SESSION

2 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: You may continue, Mr.
3 Sohnen.

5 ON BEHALF OF THE APPELLEES - CONTINUED

6 MR. SOHNEN: Yes. May it please the Court, in 7 answer to Justice Marshall's question prior to the 8 break, what this case poses is not simply the issue of 9 the possibility of bias, but the extent of the 10 constitutional requirement for a competent and 11 independent review of Medicare claims to protect the 12 integrity of that program, and for that reason I would 13 like to elaborate on my answer to Justice White's 14 hypothetical.

15 If carriers are given the ultimate 16 responsibility for making decisions on Medicare claims, 17 we still have the problem of the interweaving financial 18 interests between the carrier's own policies and the 19 Medicare program, and in addition, any -- any new 20 program of that nature would certainly involve costs 21 that are -- that are not currently involved.

22 In our -- It is our position that a fair 23 hearing in the first instance is possible in the 24 Medicare program at no extra cost. There was evidence 25 in the record that the cost of administrative law judge

1 hearings is essentially the same as the cost of these 2 hearings conducted by insurance company appointees that 3 we have been challenging.

5 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

6 QUESTION: -- may I interrupt with a question 7 on cost? Does the record tell us how big -- what the 8 dollar amount involved in the typical claim is of this 9 type?

10 MR. SOHNEN: Yes. The record indicates that 11 the -- the average is approximately $600. About two 12 years ago is the latest statistic. Of course, these -- 13 the amounts range from the minimum of $100 to the costs 14 of major surgery.

15 So, it would be our position that rather than 16 creating a new structure that is still in the hands of 17 the carriers, the fairest, most economical method would 18 be simply to replace the current system with --

19 QUESTION: Well, if you are right, if you are 20 right, why, it seems to me that you really ought to move 21 all of the processing out of the private hands, because 22 an awful lot of people don't request hearings, do they?

23 MR. SOHNEN: That's true.

24 QUESTION: The great bulk of them.

25 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

1 QUESTION: And you must -- you must -- if 2 hearing officers are biased, I would think the -- the 3 prehearing officer processing is even more biased.

4 MR. SOHNEN: Well, I would respectfully
5 disagree. The --

6 QUESTION: Well, why -- Why would --

7 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

8 QUESTION: Why should people sit still for 9 that?

10 MR. SOHNEN: We are not objecting to the 11 expertise of the private sector in processing these 12 claims --.

13 QUESTION: Or their non-bias? Is that it?

14 MR. SOHNEN: We -- we do -- we do feel that 15 there is a financial interest, as we have stated, that 16 prevents fair decision-making. The issue here is not --

17 QUESTION: Well, then, with respect to -- I 18 would think you would say with respect to people who 19 don't request hearings, too.

20 MR. SOHNEN: We don't think that the 21 Constitution requires that people have to demand a 22 hearing. If they are not asking for a hearing, perhaps 23 the matter has been resolved satisfactorily.

24 QUESTION: Do I correctly remember that you
25 said there were 158 million claims a year?

1 MR. SOHNEN: That's correct.

2 QUESTION: So then how many of them go to 3 hearing?

4 MR. SOHNEN: About 26,000. So the issue in 5 this case is much narrower than the -- than the 6 Congressional judgment --

7 QUESTION: How about all those other people?

8 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

9 QUESTION: I would think you would think they 10 had been treated even worse, the ones who accept their 11 -- the way the claim is disposed of by the carrier.

12 MR. SOHNEN: I think that we have to draw a 13 distinction between the choice of Congress to -- to 14 place the administration of a massive system of this 15 nature in the hands of the private sector and this very 16 original characteristic of this program whereby the 17 final decisions are also placed in the private sector, 18 and it was this originality that I believe Justice 19 Brennan referred to --

20 QUESTION: Well, there are an awful lot of 21 people with an average claim of $600 who think they are 22 being jobbed but who can't possibly afford to contest it.

23 MR. SOHNEN: Yes, and --

24 QUESTION: Why don't you urge -- The whole
25 thing ought to go under the government, shouldn't it?

1 If you are making really any sense?

2 MR. SOHNEN: I think that there is -- in our 3 -- in the history of governmental operations, there has 4 been a great deal of experience with using the 5 competence of the private sector. What distinguishes 6 this case is that the final say is in the private 7 sector. This is what is so distinctive about the case, 8 and in fact, it is not just the district court that has 9 noted this, but also the National Commission on Social 10 Security reviewing this Act, as it is charged to do by 11 Congress, the American Bar Association, in its amicus 12 brief --

14 MR. SOHNEN: Yes.

15 QUESTION: -- you would take the same
16 position, I take it, if there were no appeal procedure 17 at all. You would say that would be equally 18 unconstitutional?

19 MR. SOHNEN: Well, that issue isn't presented 20 in this case, because there is a statutory right to 21 appeal.

22 QUESTION: Well, there is a statutory right to 23 have the carrier take a second look at the problem. I 24 mean, it is not like -- there is no statutory right to 25 appeal to an independent -- to an independent

1 decision-maker, though.

2 MR. SOHNEN: Well, the statute does say, a 3 fair hearing, and we would --

4 QUESTION: Well, then, Congress knew exactly
5 what it meant by a fair hearing. It is the fair hearing 6 prescribed by statute.

7 QUESTION: And could it not be reasonably said
8 that out of the 158 million claims, 157,900 of them
9 apparently were satisfied with the result.

10 MR. SOHNEN: Well, in fact, I think --

11 QUESTION: At least that is arguable, is it 12 not?

13 MR. SOHNEN: I think that there was evidence 14 in the record that indicates that there are many reasons 15 why people don't appeal. In fact, a study was done of 16 beneficiary appeals which appears in the Joint Appendix 17 which indicates that the low appeal rate reflects the 18 age and infirmity of the Medicare claimant. So, I think 19 that -- and also the dollar amounts that were involved.

20 QUESTION: Well, is it unreasonable -- is it 21 unreasonable to -- for someone to argue that this 22 suggests that this practical solution is working out 23 pretty well, as Congress anticipated that it would and 24 said that it should?

25 MR. SOHNEN: I think that in any system there

1 is a mix of different kinds of cases, different -- and 2 different concerns. The Medicare system is 3 distinguished by the wide range of issues that are 4 covered, and so -- and it also -- and it is also 5 important to note that the 27 million individuals in 6 this system are elderly for the most part, or disabled, 7 and that the kinds of claims in their very nature often 8 don't lead to extensive litigation.

9 As I was indicating before in my response
10 pertaining to the Erika decision and the idea of review 11 in the court of claims, there are certain -- there are 12 some kinds of cases that simply don't generate massive 13 litigation, but to -- but to draw the inference that a 14 system is completely fair because -- because it is not 15 used is, I think, a not completely wise position.

16 I think, if I could continue with the -- the 17 statement -- my concerns about the originality of this 18 system, the experience of our system with private 19 boards, private operations of this kind has always 20 allowed a wide scope of review. The Medicare system, 21 which allows no review from the insurance companies, is 22 to be contrasted with private occupational licensing 23 boards, where there is extensive judicial review.

24 For example, in the case of Gibson versus 25 Berryhill, which was the Alabama Optometry Board, that 1 is a case in which there were bias concerns about the 2 tribunal, and the tribunal was struck down

3 notwithstanding the fact that there was extensive 4 judicial review.

5 So, in a system, as here, where we have given 6 the carriers not only the first say, but the last say in 7 deciding claims, grave constitutional problems arise.

8 Thank you.

9 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well.

10 Do you have anything further, Mr. Geller?

11 ORAL ARGUMENT OF KENNETH S. GELLER, ESQ., 12 ON BEHALF OF THE APPELLANT - REBUTTAL

13 MR. GELLER: Just a few things, Mr. Chief 14 Justice. First, the statistics show that approximately 15 50 percent of the claims that are submitted to the 16 hearing officer are reversed, and that statistic, 17 contrary to the suggestion of the plaintiffs this 18 morning, we do not for a minute suggest that those 19 statistics, which have held fairly constant over several 20 years, are in any way distorted or don't reflect 21 realities. They also don't reflect computer coding 22 errors, which is what the plaintiffs suggested this 23 morning. Most of those sorts of errors are caught at 24 the review stage, which is the second stage of the 25 review.

1 And finally, they don't reflect reversals
2 where only about 50 cents is involved, which is another 3 statement that the plaintiffs made this morning. The 4 statistics in the record, which are printed in the Joint 5 Appendix, show that the average amount at issue, the 6 average amount that is reversed at these hearings is 7 about $200, which is a very substantial amount when, as 8 my opponent just answered in response to Justice 9 Stevens' question, the amount at issue in any of these 10 hearings total is about $600, and even that overstates 11 the actual amount of each claim, because claims can be 12 aggregated over a six-month period.

13 So, we think that these statistics don't show
14 any timidity on the part of hearing officers to reverse 15 when they think that the claim is meritorious.

16 QUESTION: Mr. Geller, does the record tell us 17 how much these hearings cost, how much they pay the 18 hearing examiners?

19 MR. GELLER: Yes, well, the record does. I 20 think it varies. There are various estimates, because 21 of the manner of allocating, but it was several hundred 22 dollars. In fact, that is one of the reasons why 23 Congress in 1972 put in -- put in this provision only 24 requiring a fair hearing when more than $100 is 25 involved, because there was evidence that the hearings

1 were costing more than $150, and people were requesting 2 hearings --

3 QUESTION: Is there any danger that the 4 hearing examiners might have a policy that if they are 5 not going to recover -- if they -- it might be cheaper 6 to pay them $200 than to go ahead with the hearing, to 7 save everybody money?

8 MR. GELLER: Well, that would be a decision 9 for Congress to make. It wouldn't be a concern of the 10 -- of the hearing examiner. Congress --

11 QUESTION: I mean, they might shorten a lot of 12 hearings --

13 MR. GELLER: Well, perhaps. Perhaps --

14 QUESTION: -- instead of spending two or three 15 days arguing about something, you know.

16 MR. GELLER: -- that would be a good reform
17 for Congress to --

18 QUESTION: And it is rather strange, because a 19 50 percent reversal rate, I can't -- that is a very 20 strange --

21 MR. GELLER: Well, it is not really that 22 strange when you consider that the earlier stages of 23 review are just on paper. A lot of these cases, about 24 two-thirds of these cases are reasonable charge cases.
25 The hearing officer is the first person actually to sit

1 down face to face with the claimant and perhaps his 2 physician and actually understand why a particular 3 charge was made. So, it is not at all peculiar that at 4 this level of review there would frequently be a 5 different --

6 QUESTION: What would you mean, say reverse -- 7 you mean reversal, or you mean just there is a different 8 decision?

9 MR. GELLER: A different -- a different
10 decision.

11 QUESTION: It might have increased it by $10.

12 MR. GELLER: Well, the average reversal, as I 13 just said, was about $200. Now, I hate to get into this 14 whole Medigap business, but --

15 QUESTION: It also occurs to me, if the 16 physician is normally a necessary witness at these 17 hearings, as to the reasonableness issue, that probably 18 explains why there are an awful lot of cases that are 19 not appealed, because doctors do not come that 20 inexpensively.

21 MR. GELLER: Well, the physician is not always 22 a necessary witness, and in fact the record shows that 23 there is never any problem in getting the physician to 24 show up when he is requested to show up. In fact, a lot 25 of these cases are assignment cases in which it is the

1 physician that is actually taking the appeal, and not 2 the beneficiary.

3 Now, if I could just for a minute talk about 4 this Medigap question that the plaintiffs raised, 5 because once again it raises the specter which seems to 6 pervade their entire presentation that there is some 7 sort of sinister force at work here, while it is true
8 that some Medicare beneficiaries have so-called Medigap 9 coverage, the record doesn't show that they have that 10 coverage, for example, with the insurance company that 11 happens to be the carrier, the Medicare carrier for that 12 area. Unless they have the coverage with the insurance 13 company that was also the Medicare carrier, even the 14 plaintiffs' argument on its own terms doesn't make any 15 sense, because that carrier, the insurance carrier would 16 have no reason to vary depending upon whether the 17 claimant had Medigap coverage.

18 In fact, the record in this case shows that 19 the Occidental Life Insurance Company, which is one of 20 the two carriers in the case, didn't even offer Medigap 21 coverage. And finally, there is no suggestion that the 22 hearing officer, who after all is the person that the 23 plaintiffs are claiming is biased, is ever told whether 24 the claimant has Medigap coverage or not. So once 25 again, we think it is another example of the totally

1 unsubstantiated speculation that pervades the 2 plaintiffs' argument.

3 QUESTION: Mr. Geller, if the Act didn't 4 provide for any so-called fair hearing at all, what 5 would be the basis for -- what would be the -- would you 6 think there would be a reasonable attack on it on due 7 process?

8 MR. GELLER: I think that would raise a much 9 more difficult question, since due process requires, if 10 it requires anything, some sort of a meaningful 11 opportunity to be heard before property is taken away, 12 but here there is no question --

13 QUESTION: And the property is the -- is the 14 reasonable anticipation of getting reimbursed, according 15 to the statute?

16 MR. GELLER: Yes, right, after having paid
17 your premium and submitted a claim. I think the point 18 is -- I would like to leave the Court just with this 19 last point -- we don't think there is any due process
20 problem in the Part B hearing appeal system, obviously, 21 but if the Court disagrees, if they think, for example,
22 as the Plaintiffs allege, that there is too close a 23 connection between the carrier and the hearing officer, 24 then it seems to us that the proper remedy is simply to 25 ask the Secretary to take a closer look and pre-screen

1 who are selected as hearing officers, and not to 2 judicially legislate and superimpose an entire ALJ
3 system on top of the Part B hearing system.

4 QUESTION: Just try to get rid of the bias.

5 MR. GELLER: Get rid of the bias, exactly, if 6 there is in fact bias.

7 Thank you.

8 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.

9 The case is submitted.

10 (Whereupon, at 1:12 o'clock p.m., the case in 11 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
