2 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments
3 next in the case of Illinois versus Abbott &
4 Associates. Mr. Genovese, you may begin whenever you 5 are ready.

6 ORAL ARGUMENT OF THOMAS M. GENOVESE, ESQ.,
7 ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER

8 MR. GENOVESE: Mr. Chief Justice and may it
9 please the Court:

10 This case involves construction of Section
11 4F(b) of the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act of 1976 and Rule 6(e) 12 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. We believe 13 there are two inter-related questions:

14 First, whether the investigative files or 15 other materials of the United States Attorney General 16 also includes materials covered or encompassed by Rule 17 6(e);

18 And second, if so, what is the discretionary 19 standard to be followed by a district court in 20 determining whether to release materials covered by Rule 21 6(e) pursuant to request by a state attorney general
22 under Section 4F(b).

23 Very briefly with respect to the facts, in the 24 late 1970's the Antitrust Division of the Department of 25 Justice conducted a complex and lengthy investigation of

1 the piping and sheet metal industries in Illinois. That 2 investigation focused on conspiracies among competitors
3 in those industries to rig bids on public projects, 4 mostly school projects in the Chicago area.

5 After the State of Illinois had received
6 notice under Section 4F(a) that it had a potential cause
7 of action, it made a request to the United States 8 Attorney General for all relevant investigative files or 9 other materials under Section 4F(b). In response at 10 that time, we were provided with 19 pages of preliminary 11 memoranda generated long before the grand jury had been 12 transferred to the Northern District of Illinois.
13 Everything else, we were informed, was covered by Rule 14 6(e), and that the Government would support our request 15 for a court order releasing the materials.

16 Subsequently the State of Illinois and the 17 Chicago Board of Education filed two class action treble 18 damage lawsuits on behalf of the public entities in the 19 area seeking to recover the overcharges suffered by 20 those entities as a result of the conspiracy.

21 The criminal actions have long ago
22 terminated. The civil cases are still proceeding with 23 discovery, and in that regard a few of the transcripts 24 in one of the cases may be disclosed to us pursuant to 25 Rule 6(e) because those transcripts were previously

1 disclosed to the Defendants.

2 Turning to the first question, I believe it
3 takes great liberties with the very broad expansive 4 language of that statute to conclude that information 5 relating to matters or occurrences before an 6 investigative grand jury is somehow not contained in a 7 prosecutor's files or other materials. We believe the 8 statute plainly includes all materials compiled by an 9 Assistant United States Attorney General to prepare and 10 prosecute his case.

11 QUESTION: Suppose the Attorney General came 12 back and said, we don't have a transcript of the -- what 13 happened before the grand jury any more. Maybe we had 14 it once, but we don't. But we'll be glad to -- to 15 support your request before the judge. Do you think the 16 standard then when you went to the judge would be Rule 17 6(e) or would you say, the statute has made this 18 material available to us on a lesser showing?

19 MR. GENOVESE: Well, I think we first have to 20 address the question of whether it is part of the 21 investigative files or other materials of the Attorney 22 General.

23 QUESTION: Well, suppose the Attorney General 24 says, we just don't have a transcript any more now, and 25 let's just assume that's correct, that's accurate, he's 1 telling the truth.

2 MR. GENOVESE: Okay. Well, I believe the 3 United States Attorney General is supposed to retain 4 custody of the grand jury transcripts and documents.
5 For example, if the documents are no longer in the 6 possession --

7 QUESTION: You mean they're not in the 8 possession of the court?

9 MR. GENOVESE: No, I don't believe they're in 10 the possession of the court. They're in the possession 11 of the United States Attorney General.

12 QUESTION: Well, so you're saying that if a 13 transcript of the testimony is in the hands of the 14 Assistant Attorney General for the Antitrust Division or 15 the Attorney General, you're entitled to it under this 16 statute with no court proceedings at all, but if the 17 same transcript is in the possession of the court you 18 have to make some showing?

19 MR. GENOVESE: No, Justice Rehnquist. We 20 believe that, first of all, we look at the statute and 21 decide what the Congress intended to cover by --

22 QUESTION: Do you need to be that elaborate to 23 answer the question?

24 MR. GENOVESE: No, I just meant to go to the 25 next point, which is that the "extent permitted by law"

1 language raises the question of by what standard the 2 court should release the materials. The court can 3 authorize the United States Attorney General to turn the 4 information over to a state attorney general.

5 QUESTION: So that if the material, if the 6 transcript, the physical transcript, is in the 7 possession of the Justice Department, the Justice
8 Department must join you in going to court even though 9 it has physical possession, is that right?

10 MR. GENOVESE: Yes, that is correct.

11 QUESTION: You say you don't even need to go
12 to court, do you? That's what I'd like to find out.

13 MR. GENOVESE: We do not say, we have never 14 said, that it is automatic disclosure upon demand.

15 QUESTION: Well then, what sort of an inquiry
16 would the court make in that case?

17 MR. GENOVESE: We believe that the court
18 should inquire, first of all, what reasons for secrecy 19 remain in the transcripts, in the documents.

20 QUESTION: Where do you get that out of the 21 statute? Where do you get the nature of the court's 22 inquiry from the statutory language?

23 MR. GENOVESE: By the language "extent 24 permitted by law."

25 QUESTION: And what do you think that refers

1 to?

2 MR. GENOVESE: We believe that refers to Rule 3 6(e), which indicates that a court may disclose
4 materials preliminarily to or in connection with a 5 judicial proceeding. And we understand the standard 6 under Rule 6(e) to involve a careful assessment of the 7 needs for secrecy and the needs, to the extent they 8 remain, and the compelling interest in disclosure.

9 QUESTION: May I ask this question. You say 10 that the "extent permitted by law," or whatever the 11 words are, incorporates by reference Rule 6(e). Is that 12 your view?

13 MR. GENOVESE: Yes.

14 QUESTION: And if Rule 6(e) contains a 15 particularized need requirement, you must meet it.

16 MR. GENOVESE: We believe that the 17 particularized need requirement arose in cases involving 18 --

19 QUESTION: Involving private parties, not 20 public. If it doesn't apply to public parties and you 21 don't have to satisfy particularized need but merely 22 generalized need, then why do you need the Hart-Rodino 23 Act?

24 MR. GENOVESE: Well, we believe you need the 25 Hart -- well, the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act is designed to 1 state the Congressional purpose, to state to whom the 2 materials --

3 QUESTION: It tells the Attorney General what 4 he has to do on your request. And you're saying, well, 5 you've got to go to the court and say, we think 6(e)
6 doesn't prohibit disclosure. And you say it doesn't 7 prohibit disclosure because you don't have to show
8 particularized need. So why don't you just go directly 9 to the court without even citing the statute?

10 MR. GENOVESE: The statute is an expression of 11 Congressional intent, not only with respect to grand 12 jury materials --

13 QUESTION: Well, I'm just interested in grand 14 jury materials at this point.

15 MR. GENOVESE: That's why we need the statute, 16 because the Congress has indicated the intention, the 17 reasons why, for national antitrust enforcement --

18 QUESTION: Well, do you concede that without 19 the statute you couldn't get these materials under 6(e) 20 without a showing of particularized need?

21 MR. GENOVESE: That is correct.

22 Maybe I misspoke, Justice. I'm sorry if I -- 23 could you repeat the question?

24 QUESTION: If you did not have this statute

1 MR. GENOVESE: Yes.

2 QUESTION: -- and you merely went before the 3 court on a 6(e) motion, would you have to show
4 particularized need?

5 MR. GENOVESE: We believe that it is not only 6 because we are a public entity, but also because the 7 Congress with respect to this specific matter has 8 indicated an intent that the materials be turned over.

9 QUESTION: Well, you still haven't answered my 10 question. If there were no Hart-Rodino Act --

11 MR. GENOVESE: Yes.

12 QUESTION: -- before the Act was passed,
13 there's an open question as to what showing a public 14 agency such as the Illinois Attorney General must make 15 under 6(e). And I'm asking you --

16 MR. GENOVESE: Oh, I see.

17 QUESTION: -- if there were no Hart-Rodino
18 Act, could you get these materials just without showing 19 particularized need.

20 MR. GENOVESE: I believe that we may be able 21 to do that. But that is a question that --

22 QUESTION: If that's true, why do you need the 23 statute?

24 MR. GENOVESE: We need the statute because the 25 statute quite clearly states that in this regard, with

1 respect to antitrust enforcement by the states, Congress 2 has indicated a compelling need in the balance for 3 determining --

4 QUESTION: Let me phrase the question
5 differently. Do you think this statute changes the 6 showing otherwise required under Rule 6(e)?

7 MR. GENOVESE: Yes, we believe that.

8 QUESTION: Lessens it? Makes it less of a 9 showing?

10 MR. GENOVESE: Yes, we believe that the 11 showing of need for disclosure has been demonstrated by 12 Congress, has been supplied by Congress; and you balance 13 that against what reasons remain with respect to the 14 particular materials in the file which countervailingly 15 --

16 QUESTION: You have to do more than just make 17 the motion.

18 MR. GENOVESE: Pardon me?

19 QUESTION: You have to do more than just make 20 a motion.

21 MR. GENOVESE: Yes. We have to demonstrate, I 22 think, the degree of secrecy that remains or should 23 remain.

24 QUESTION: Well, that's what Justice Stevens
25 was trying -- just what do you have to show?

1 MR. GENOVESE: We have to show that the 2 materials are relevant to a potential cause of action of 3 the United States -- of the state attorney general, and 4 that the reasons for secrecy are no longer viable.

5 QUESTION: Is this to save you the time, save 6 the state the time of calling its own grand jury, 7 calling in the same witnesses?

8 MR. GENOVESE: That is the exact purpose of 9 the statute, to -- Congress did more than simply confer 10 standing on state attorneys general. It wanted to 11 facilitate a coordination, communicative effort between 12 the state and federal attorney generals with respect to 13 local and regional antitrust enforcement. And it 14 believed quite clearly in the legislative history that 15 that could not be done unless sufficient investigational 16 information was made available to the state attorney 17 general.

18 The problem we have here is that whenever the 19 government brings a criminal antitrust action all or 20 virtually all of the information, certainly all the 21 valuable and significant information, is covered by Rule 22 6(e). And we believe that the intent of Congress is 23 frustrated by reading the statute so as to require a 24 state attorney general to make the same showing of need 25 as a private litigant in private litigation cases.

1 QUESTION: On the need for secrecy inquiry of 2 the court, I suppose some of the people most concerned, 3 who might want to oppose the disclosure, would be people 4 who may have been questioned before the grand jury but 5 weren't indicted, for example. They would have no means 6 of obtaining notice, I suppose, that the disclosure was 7 even being sought, would they?

8 MR. GENOVESE: Justice O'Connor, in this case
9 they were notified. There are, I believe, probably 10 nearly a hundred Respondents in this case. We do not 11 know who they all are. But I understand at the very 12 outset the district court directed the United States
13 Attorney General to notify the parties involved.

14 QUESTION: Certainly there's nothing in the 15 statute about that --

16 MR. GENOVESE: I believe that --

17 QUESTION: -- and we don't really address that 18 problem.

19 MR. GENOVESE: There's nothing in the statute, 20 but I think the common procedure under Rule 6(e) is to, 21 at least in my experience, is to contact all interested 22 parties, which would include not only witnesses but also 23 defendants in a particular case in which the materials 24 are sought to be used.

25 We have found in this case that reading the

1 statute so as not to include grand jury material is not 2 only -- it not only raises the problem in the practical 3 sense of trying to separate out Rule 6(e) from non-Rule 4 6(e) in a single file of the prosecutor, but also, as we 5 have found in this case, such an interpretation excludes 6 the essence of the information in those files. We 7 believe that is in direct contradiction to what Congress 8 intended when it passed the statute.

9 QUESTION: Mr. Genovese, would you mind
10 addressing how you think that the particularized need 11 standard would require the state to do more than inquire 12 into relevance and the need for secrecy? What else 13 would that do as a practical matter in increasing the 14 state's burden?

15 MR. GENOVESE: As a practical matter, 4F(b)
16 was designed to disclose to the Attorney General before 17 he filed a case whether he had a case and to assist him
18 in bringing the action. It's very important before you 19 embark on an action of this magnitude.

20 QUESTION: No existing judicial proceeding, in 21 other words?

22 MR. GENOVESE: Right. And so it would be very 23 difficult in almost every instance, particularly where 24 there's been a grand jury investigation, for the state 25 attorney general to state to the court with any great

1 degree of particularity the information that he needs to 2 carry out the intent of Congress. And as a result of 3 that, he would have to file suit, he would have to 4 undertake discovery first, and attempt to show a 5 particularized need two or three years later.

6 Nor do we believe that the language "upon 7 request" in the statute was meant to limit or define the 8 materials which are disclosable. We believe instead 9 that it only states the initiation of a process of 10 disclosure, speaking again not only of grand jury 11 materials but of all materials in the file, which may 12 involve work product, trade secrets and so forth.

13 For example, in the Colonial Chevrolet case 14 the bill of particulars was placed under seal by the 15 district court. Upon the request of the state attorney 16 general, the United States Attorney General could not 17 have -- would not have been empowered to turn the bill 18 of particulars over. Yet the law permits disclosure of 19 bills of particulars and -- but it requires a court 20 order.

21 Another common situation is where in a 22 government civil enforcement action the defendants 23 insist that the record be placed under seal of court.
24 Upon the request of the state attorney general, the 25 federal attorney general lacks the power to disclose.

1 But a court order will permit that disclosure, because 2 the law permits it.

3 QUESTION: Mr. Genovese, in respect to Section
4 (b) of Section 15f, which is the one we're talking 5 about, I take it. Do you think the phrase "permitted by 6 law" refers only to the strictures that cases may put on 7 disclosure of grand jury testimony? Do you think, for 8 instance, that it prevents the Attorney General of the 9 United States from ever saying, no, we don't choose to 10 divulge this to you, state attorney general?

11 MR. GENOVESE: Well, I think it entitles the 12 United States Attorney General to raise within the 13 context of Rule 6(e) remaining interests in secrecy 14 which he may have or may want to assert --

15 QUESTION: Supposing that what you're seeking 16 isn't grand jury testimony, but notes of an interview 17 that the Government took, not under a subpoena but just 18 with a witness, and the Attorney General says, I just 19 want to protect this witness, I'm not going to turn it 20 over to you. Can he do that under the statute?

21 MR. GENOVESE: If the law permits it he 22 could.

23 QUESTION: Well, what law do you turn to to 24 decide whether it permits it?

25 MR. GENOVESE: In a situation where, for

1 example, a proffer, the Government is apparently unsure 2 whether that is covered by Rule 6(e). Of course, in 3 this case the United States Attorney General has made
4 the determination that it ought to be disclosed. In a 5 situation where he felt that shouldn't be the case, we 6 might be dealing with an informant's privilege or some 7 other kind of privilege, and in that situation again we 8 would have to look to see if the privilege, work 9 product, whatever it is, is -- how that weighs against 10 the Congressional desire, intent, very strong intent 11 that these materials be made available to a state 12 attorney general so that he can pursue his own actions.

13 QUESTION: Well, there you leave open the 14 possibility that the Attorney General and the state 15 attorney general would be almost adversaries, I suppose, 16 and the Attorney General would raise the question of 17 work product, and then what, some court would have to 18 decide that?

19 MR. GENOVESE: It could happen that on 20 occasion the state attorney general and the United 21 States Attorney General could be adversaries with 22 respect to a particular matter.

23 QUESTION: What sort of a court proceeding
24 would you have to resolve that?

25 MR. GENOVESE: I think that in a situation

1 where materials have not been disclosed it could be a 2 mandamus action. It could be -- for example, it could 3 be a Rule 6(e) proceeding where it's grand jury
4 materials. It could take place within the confines of a 5 civil case which has already been filed by a state
6 attorney general. I think it would depend on the nature 7 of the material at stake.

8 We believe the decision of the Seventh 9 Circuit, the reasoning of the Seventh Circuit, is in 10 grave error as well, for one particular reason: It 11 essentially concluded that a state attorney general's 12 need for the disclosure of the investigative material is 13 the same as a private litigant's need. That reasoning, 14 if applied to all the materials in Rule 6(e), 15 effectively means that a state attorney general is only 16 entitled to what -- the same materials he received 17 before the statute was passed and, oddly enough, to the 18 same materials which any private party could obtain.

19 In essence, what that means is Section 4F(b) 20 is a nullity; it doesn't add anything to the law. The 21 Congressional intent is simply ignored by that sort of 22 conclusion.

23 QUESTION: Well, it would certainly leave you
24 with access to the Attorney General's files that weren't 25 submitted to the grand jury, that he wouldn't otherwise

1 have to give you.

2 MR. GENOVESE: Well, I would believe that that 3 may very well be disclosable to a private party. If 4 there is no reason why a private party could not get it, 5 then I would assume a private party could obtain it as 6 well.

7 QUESTION: Well, but I think the Attorney
8 General has had a policy of not disclosing to anybody, 9 hasn't he?

10 MR. GENOVESE: No, I don't believe that's -- 11 I'm not sure if the Attorney General has a policy with 12 respect to that.

13 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We'll resume there at 14 1:00 o'clock, counsel.

15 (Whereupon, at 12:00 noon, the argument in the 16 above-entitled matter was recessed, to reconvene at 1:00 17 p.m. the same day.)

6 ORAL ARGUMENT OF RICHARD G. WILKINS, ESQ., 7 ON BEHALF OF THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

8 MR. WILKINS: Mr. Chief Justice and may it
9 please the Court:

10 Section 4F(b) of the Hart-Scott-Rodino
11 Antitrust Improvement Act embodies a Congressional 12 determination that, in order to promote state-sponsored 13 litigation as a vital aspect of national antitrust
14 enforcement policy, the United States Attorney General 15 should to the full extent permitted by law disclose to 16 the states any investigative files or other materials 17 that are or may be relevant or material to a potential 18 state antitrust enforcement action.

19 Notwithstanding this evident policy, evident
20 Congressional policy of disclosure, the court below
21 declined to allow the State of Illinois access to 5500 22 pages of grand jury transcripts that are relevant to two 23 class action lawsuits filed by the state under Sections 24 4 and 5 of the Clayton Act. It did so based on two 25 propositions:

1 First, it doubted whether Section 4F(b)
2 included grand jury materials in the possession of the 3 Attorney General; and second, it concluded that the 4 statute had no impact on its balancing test under Rule 5 6(e) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure as to 6 whether it should allow those materials to be used in 7 another judicial proceeding.

8 Neither proposition, we believe, is sound.

9 Section 4F(b) by its clear terms reaches any 10 investigative files or other materials within the 11 possession of the Attorney General. These words, if 12 they're given their ordinary contemporary common 13 meaning, clearly reach and include grand jury
14 materials.

15 Respondents contend --

16 QUESTION: That assumes, of course, that 17 they're in the possession of the Attorney General.

18 MR. WILKINS: Exactly. Rule 6(e) by the 19 express terms, express provision of Rule 6(e), commits 20 grand jury materials to the custody of the Attorney 21 General. Those grand jury materials will always be in 22 the custody of the Attorney General by the express 23 provisions of Rule 6(e).

24 QUESTION: Where is that cited in the briefs,
25 Mr. Wilkins?

1 MR. WILKINS: I'm not aware that that is cited
2 in the briefs.

3 QUESTION: It's Rule 6(c), in any event?

4 MR. WILKINS: Rule 6(e).

5 QUESTION: 6(e).

6 MR. WILKINS: It's Rule 6(e)(1) under 7 "Recording of Proceedings." It says: "The recording or 8 reporter's notes or any transcript prepared therefrom
9 shall remain in the custody or control of the attorney 10 for the Government unless otherwise ordered."

11 QUESTION: But the Attorney General isn't free 12 to deal with these materials like he might some other 13 materials.

14 MR. WILKINS: No, he isn't.

15 QUESTION: He's the custodian.

16 MR. WILKINS: Exactly, he is the custodian.
17 But to say that Section -- that because he is mere 18 custodian that they aren't in his files is to confuse 19 the reach of 4F(b) with the standards or the way that he 20 may actually disclose those materials.

21 The second ground upon which the court below 22 based its decision is equally unsound. The court in 23 effect concluded that Section 4F(b) has no impact on its 24 discretionary determination under Rule 6(e) of whether 25 it should release those materials. It therefore --

1 QUESTION: Mr. Wilkins, on that point, do you
2 agree that there -- what is your position on my question 3 as to whether the statute amended the standards under 4 Rule 6(e)?

5 MR. WILKINS: Justice Stevens, we do not 6 believe that the statute necessarily amended or, as 7 Respondents state, repealed Rule 6(e). We believe the 8 essential nature of the test of -- 9 QUESTION: Does it modify the standard?

10 MR. WILKINS: It modifies the standard as 11 applied to state attorney generals. The compelling and 12 particularized need standard we believe does not --

13 QUESTION: Would you agree, then, that before 14 the statute was passed the state attorney general had to 15 meet the particularized need showing?

16 MR. WILKINS: I'm not certain, because I don't 17 know whether that test would apply to private -- would 18 apply to a public official.

19 QUESTION: In part of your brief you argue 20 that Congress in effect adopted pre-existing law; they 21 legislated with knowledge of what the law was with 22 respect to the state attorney generals' right of 23 access. And now you're saying even you don't know what 24 the law was.

25 MR. WILKINS: No, I'm stating that the

1 compelling and particularized need test had been 2 developed and applied only to private parties. Whether 3 or not that particular test would apply to a public -- 4 to a state attorney general which is seeking this 5 material as a law enforcement official for a public use 6 or to further the public interest, whether he would have 7 to meet that test without Section 4F(b), I am 8 uncertain.

9 QUESTION: Well, if he doesn't have to meet
10 that test, then he doesn't need the statute.

11 MR. WILKINS: No, we believe, whatever the 12 standard would be appropriate without the statute, we 13 believe that Section 4F(b) is a weighty Congressional 14 policy in favor of disclosure that a court should 15 properly consider in the Rule 6(e) balance, and because 16 of that weighty consideration the compelling and 17 particularized need test is not a proper standard.

18 QUESTION: Then you say it does amend -- you 19 say it does amend, it silently amends the 6(e) standard 20 with respect to state attorney generals?

21 MR. WILKINS: In a way, although it doesn't 22 really amend the standard. The standard under the 23 jurisprudence of this Court has always been a balancing 24 test. You balance the need for disclosure against the 25 interests of secrecy. It hasn't amended that. All it

1 has done is demonstrate -- is create a Congressional 2 declaration of policy.

3 QUESTION: You think the words "to the extent 4 permitted by law" were intended to make a change in the 5 law?

6 QUESTION: They were to the extent that 7 Congress was aware that, for example, there is Rule 6(e)
8 that permits a court to make this kind of a balancing 9 determination.

10 QUESTION: You certainly couldn't order they 11 intended to change a rule that they weren't even aware 12 of.

13 MR. WILKINS: Congress was clearly aware that 14 Rule 6(e) existed. A statement that is heavily relied 15 upon by the Respondents is a statement of Senator
16 Abourezk on the floor of the Senate, where he replied
17 that the Attorney General can't turn over materials on a 18 mere request. The Senate was clearly aware that there 19 was a Rule 6(e). While there may not have been 20 extensive discussion of it, Congress was clearly aware, 21 and yet the House report nevertheless stated that these 22 materials were to be turned over unless they were 23 specifically prohibited.

24 QUESTION: You don't think it's a fair summary
25 of the legislative history to say that Congress felt,

1 well, whatever 6(e) requires, it still requires?

2 MR. WILKINS: No, I don't think that that's a
3 clear -- that's a fair -- The court below threw out, as 4 we said, Rule -- or Section 4F(b) and failed to take it
5 in consideration in its balancing test under Rule 6(e).
6 We believe that the two provisions must be read in 7 harmony and there is a way to do so.

8 In passing on a state's request for grand jury 9 material under Rule 6(e), a court should not utilize the 10 compelling and particularized need test because this 11 fails to give significant weight to the Congressional 12 determination that's inherent and embodied in Section 13 4F(b). Section 4F(b) represents Congress' dual 14 determination that: one, state antitrust enforcement 15 actions are vital to the national antitrust enforcement 16 policy; and, two, full disclosure and cooperation of 17 federal investigatory files is essential to aid the 18 states in performing this function.

19 It's important to realize that the very most 20 significant and indeed probably the only useful parts of 21 our antitrust investigatory files, our criminal 22 antitrust investigatory files, are included in the grand 23 jury materials.

24 QUESTION: Mr. Wilkins, is that true after the 25 passage of this statute would authorize the civil

1 investigative demands?

2 MR. WILKINS: Yes. The civil investigative 3 demands are still used only for civil investigations.

4 QUESTION: But is it not true that if you 5 accumulated a lot of information pursuant to a CID and 6 you got the consent of the people from whom you got the 7 information, that would be voluminous material in your 8 files that you --

9 MR. WILKINS: That would be voluminous, yes.
10 But the grand jury, the antitrust grand jury, is used in 11 criminal matters. The CID is not. So when the state 12 requests information regarding a criminal investigation, 13 it still would be grand jury material and not CID 14 material.

15 QUESTION: But the statute is not limited to 16 criminal material. Section 4F(b) applies to all your 17 files.

18 MR. WILKINS: Right. But another provision of 19 the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act under Title I makes CID 20 materials -- they're only disclosable with consent of 21 the party.

22 QUESTION: With the consent of the party
23 providing the material. But if you get that consent, 24 all that material would then have to be turned over.

25 MR. WILKINS: Exactly.

1 QUESTION: That could be a lot of material.

2 MR. WILKINS: It could be a lot of material.

3 Moreover, not only does the standard fail to recognize 4 the weighty Congressional policy in favor of disclosure,
5 but as stated it was developed and applied by this Court 6 solely to requests by private parties. A request under 7 the auspices of Section 4F(b) is not made by a private 8 party, but by a state law enforcement official, who 9 Congress has found to be an ideal and effective 10 spokesman for the public in antitrust matters.

11 Moreover, any concerns regarding possible
12 abuse or misuse of grand jury materials in this context 13 must be mooted, because the Attorney General himself is 14 a law enforcement official, well aware of the crucial 15 role the grand jury plays in our criminal justice 16 system.

17 A proper consideration of the concerns and 18 policies furthered by both Section 4F(b) and Rule 6(e)
19 would lead the Court to adopt the following standard.
20 At the conclusion of a criminal proceeding, a state 21 under the auspices of Section 4F(b) may normally obtain 22 antitrust grand jury materials on a showing of 23 relevancy, provided that a continued interest in grand 24 jury secrecy is not shown to prevail in the particular 25 case.

1 Without sacrificing either, this standard
2 gives full credence to the interests and policies 3 protected by both Section 4F(b) and Rule 6(e). The 4 standard allows the state to obtain the vast majority of 5 useful materials in the file, thus furthering the policy 6 inherent in Section 4F(b). It does so, moreover, 7 without unduly impinging on the interests protected by 8 Rule 6(e).

9 As we've stated, Rule 6(e) is a balancing 10 test. Section 4F(b) is a weighty consideration on the 11 need for disclosure side of that balancing test.
12 Moreover, this Court has made very clear in its prior 13 precedents that as the need for secrecy decreases, the 14 justification a party must show to obtain disclosure 15 decreases also.

16 At the conclusion of criminal proceedings, the 17 only interests that remain are protection of the 18 innocent accused and the functioning of future grand 19 juries. While these are weighty considerations, they do 20 not compel nondisclosure in this context because 21 disclosure --

22 QUESTION: How about the possibility the 23 Government might want to bring civil action?

24 MR. WILKINS: Which government would want to 25 bring a civil action?

1 QUESTION: The United States.

2 MR. WILKINS: The United States could use the 3 grand jury materials in a civil action, in this Court's 4 prior decision in --

5 QUESTION: No, but would that be a reason that 6 the Attorney General might not want to turn over as of 7 that point to state attorneys general the transcript of 8 the grand jury?

9 MR. WILKINS: It's possible that would be a 10 consideration, but our current position is that we would 11 fully cooperate and turn over materials after the 12 conclusion of the criminal proceeding, notwithstanding 13 that we had a parallel civil action.

14 QUESTION: Under the Act, when the Attorney 15 General turns something over like grand jury materials, 16 is there any stricture on its use?

17 MR. WILKINS: There can be strictures on their 18 use imposed and protective orders imposed by the court.
19 For example, how many copies can be given to the 20 attorney general, who it can be --

21 QUESTION: Does he have to give them back?

22 MR. WILKINS: Yes, that's commonly a
23 requirement, that it has to be returned.

24 QUESTION: To whom they may disclose it?

25 MR. WILKINS: To who, who within his own

1 office he may disclose it to. Commonly, it cannot be 2 disclosed to other parties in the litigation.

3 QUESTION: Can they be used for taking 4 depositions?

5 MR. WILKINS: Yes, they could be used for 6 taking depositions.

7 QUESTION: Well, that makes it pretty public, 8 doesn't it?

9 MR. WILKINS: Not necessarily.

10 QUESTION: Well, if you ask -- if you're going 11 to ask somebody a question and then you say, well, did 12 you really answer, answer the same way before the grand 13 jury.

14 MR. WILKINS: It would become public at that 15 point. But at that point you must remember, Justice 16 White, that the grand jury transcript would become 17 public at that point even under the compelling and 18 particularized need test, because at the time you're 19 taking a deposition you could show compelling and 20 particularized need, have the transcript, and use it in 21 a similar fashion.

22 QUESTION: You mean that's all it takes to 23 show particularized need for a private plaintiff?

24 MR. WILKINS: Many of the cases demonstrate 25 that that is sufficient.

1 QUESTION: No case from this Court.

2 MR. WILKINS: Cases from this Court indicate
3 -- for example, this case in -- this Court in Douglas 4 Petrol Stops cited with approval the Seventh Circuit's 5 decision in Sarbaugh, State of Illinois v. Sarbaugh. In 6 that case --

7 QUESTION: Procter & Gamble and the leading 8 cases from this Court addressing that inquiry certainly 9 don't suggest that that result should obtain.

10 MR. WILKINS: No, but if you read the 11 decisions of this Court, the continuing line and 12 progression -- for example, the Dennis case is only 13 factually distinguishable, for example, from Pittsburgh
14 Plate & Glass --

15 QUESTION: Well, what's the big hassle about, 16 then?

17 MR. WILKINS: Because the state --

18 QUESTION: It doesn't sound like much of a 19 hurdle anyway.

20 MR. WILKINS: Now, it is a hassle to this 21 extent: The state needs this information. Under a 22 Congressional determination they should have this 23 information at the very outset to determine whether or 24 not they should even --

25 QUESTION: If you're going to have to go to

1 court, you're going to have to go to court anyway. You 2 don't suggest you don't have to go to the judge.

3 MR. WILKINS: No, we don't.

4 QUESTION: So you're going to have to go to 5 court and get him to rule on it. If there's an 6 objection and an argument about it, it's going to take 7 some time anyway.

8 MR. WILKINS: Yes, but it does frustrate
9 Congress' determination that the state should have this 10 material at the very outset.

11 QUESTION: What does? What does?

12 MR. WILKINS: Requiring the state to meet a 13 compelling and particularized need test.

14 QUESTION: Well, why not if it -- it isn't 15 very compelling and particularized if all you have to do 16 is say, we need it for a deposition, we need it to 17 impeach or --

18 MR. WILKINS: You nevertheless have to have 19 already brought a legal proceeding, and Section 4F(b) 20 proceeds on the assumption that the states will have 21 that information before they bring that proceeding.

22 QUESTION: Could the Federal Government put 23 limits such as this, that you may use the substance of 24 this testimony but you may not disclose the name of the 25 person who gave it? Or could they delete that from the 1 material before they delivered it to the state?

2 MR. WILKINS: You mean, could we make that and 3 then turn it over? I'm not certain --

4 QUESTION: Suppose they made a claim and some 5 showing to the district judge in camera that the life of 6 the witness might be jeopardized. This wouldn't be true 7 in most class action cases, but it might be in a drug 8 conspiracy case.

9 MR. WILKINS: Certainly we could, pursuant to 10 a court order, we could certainly make those kinds of -- 11 we could make those kinds of deletions to preserve 12 interests in grand jury secrecy, certainly. But we 13 could not do that sua sponte on our own and then turn it 14 over. It would have to be under the direction of the 15 court.

16 QUESTION: May I ask one other question? In a 17 proceeding where the attorney, state attorney general, 18 seeks access to a grand jury transcript, who gets notice 19 of that proceeding?

20 MR. WILKINS: Who gets notice of --

21 QUESTION: Yes. I assumed -- does anybody get 22 notice other than the United States Department of 23 Justice and the state attorney general?

24 MR. WILKINS: My understanding is that the 25 common practice under Rule 6(e) is to notify other

1 parties involved, who are implicated or involved before
2 the grand jury.

3 QUESTION: Grand jury witnesses and defendants
4 in the criminal case, that sort of thing.

5 MR. WILKINS: Yes. Thank you.

6 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Nash.

7 ORAL ARGUMENT OF MICHAEL B. NASH, ESQ.

8 ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENTS

9 MR. NASH: May it please the Court:

10 If I can begin by addressing myself to Mr.
11 Justice Stevens' question concerning particularized
12 need, and Mr. Justice White. I understood the state 13 attorney general to state in the beginning that he had 14 recently filed with Judge Layton in the district court a 15 request, according to particularized need, for some of 16 the transcripts of some of the witnesses having appeared 17 before the grand jury, and that he told him at that time 18 that some of the Defendants had possession of those 19 transcripts already.

20 So it seems to me that an important
21 consideration here is the fact that there is no evidence 22 in this record and there is nothing in the legislative 23 history to indicate that the particularized need test or 24 so-called particularized need test is frustrating the 25 antitrust enforcement that Congress has mandated in the

1 Hart-Scott-Rodino Act, or that indeed the law
2 enforcement efforts of any county or state are somehow 3 being frustrated by that test.

4 All that test is is a determination of whether 5 or not there is a need for that particular transcript or 6 those particular minutes.

7 QUESTION: Does it require a pending lawsuit?
8 Does the state attorney general have to have filed an 9 antitrust action already in order to establish a
10 particularized need?

11 MR. NASH: No. Under 4F(b) there must be an 12 action brought for the state attorney general to request
13 the materials under 4F(b). Under 6 --

14 QUESTION: Well, the response that was given 15 this morning was that the particularized need standard 16 did require, in the cases that have applied it, a 17 pending suit, not just the application to the court
18 under Rule 6(e).

19 MR. NASH: In 6(e), 6(e), the disclosure 20 provisions are subject to there being a current judicial 21 proceeding or preliminary to a judicial proceeding.
22 It's my understanding that later in this term or the 23 next term this Court may decide that question. There is 24 a court -- Baggett, which will be argued, which will 25 address that exact question, how far do you have to go

1 to be preliminary to a judicial proceeding.

2 QUESTION: Under the Rules of Civil Procedure,
3 I don't suppose it's any superhuman feat to file a 4 lawsuit.

5 MR. NASH: None.

6 If I can get back to the question, the issue 7 here is solely whether or not the attorney general is 8 entitled to grand jury minutes automatically under 9 4F(b). The issue is not whether or not he's entitled to 10 grand jury minutes.

11 In this case the state attorney general sought 12 the entire grand jury minutes, not just the transcript 13 of witnesses who testified, but also the documents and 14 any other minutes that may have taken place before the 15 grand jury. What they sought was wholesale disclosure.

16 The only thing that 4F(b) says is that 17 disclosure is available to the extent permitted by law.
18 And 6(e) since its promulgation by this Court and 19 Congress in 1946 has stated that that governs, 6(e).
20 And all that that test says is, tell us what you need 21 and why you need it, and we will then balance that need 22 against the reasons for secrecy.

23 In the context of the argument that was 24 presented here, it is assumed that under 4F(b) that the 25 request will not be made until after the criminal

1 proceeding and after the investigation is completed.
2 There's nothing in 4F(b) to say that the state must wait
3 until that time.

4 So that if Your Honors believe or should 5 decide that 4F(b) somehow modifies 6(e), there's no 6 necessity in 4F(b) that the criminal proceeding have 7 been completed or that the investigation be completed.

8 QUESTION: You think, then, that 4F(b) just 9 wasn't intended to work any change with respect to grand 10 jury minutes?

11 MR. NASH: Exactly. Senator Abourezk stated
12 exactly that in answer to Senator Hruska's question, and 13 he said there very, very directly and very frankly --

14 QUESTION: Well, what did it do? What range 15 did 4F(b) have if it doesn't affect grand jury minutes?

16 MR. NASH: It affects -- well, the Antitrust
17 Division manual spells out other types of information 18 which the Government has available. It spells out, for 19 instance, that before immunity will be granted to a 20 witness in an antitrust investigation, that there must 21 be a proffer made by that witness, that that proffer
22 must be reviewed in Washington, D.C., at the Antitrust 23 Department headquarters, and that --

24 QUESTION: They gather an awful lot of 25 information just outside the grand jury, I suppose.

1 MR. NASH: There's a great deal of information
2 available, and we should not consider the fact that only 3 19 pages exist in this case --

4 QUESTION: What did Congress think it was 5 doing in 4F(b)? Was all this non-grand jury information 6 --

7 MR. NASH: Yes.

8 QUESTION: -- available before the Act was 9 passed, or wasn't it?

10 MR. NASH: No.

11 QUESTION: The Attorney General would just 12 withhold it?

13 MR. NASH: Well, the Attorney General had it 14 within his discretion to make it available or not to 15 make it available.

16 QUESTION: So 4F(b) removed that discretion.

17 MR. NASH: Absolutely. It makes it a 18 mandate.

19 QUESTION: Well, what would you think if the 20 Attorney General had a series of regulations that dealt 21 with the availability of his investigative files aside 22 from grand jury, and everybody agrees those regulations 23 were within his authority to issue under the controlling 24 statutes. In short, they had the force of law. Do you 25 think this 4F(b) was intended by saying "to the extent

1 permitted by law" to recognize that those regulations 2 would govern, or not?

3 MR. NASH: I'm not sure to recognize those 4 regulations, but it mandated the availability of those 5 materials to a state attorney general.

6 QUESTION: Despite the regulations?

7 MR. NASH: Despite the regulations.

8 QUESTION: Which had the force of law.

9 MR. NASH: Pardon me?

10 QUESTION: Which had the force of law.

11 MR. NASH: Well, I don't know that those 12 regulations existed beforehand. There is some reference 13 in the legislative history to the dissatisfaction of 14 various state attorney generals and their special 15 assistants --

16 QUESTION: No, but you have to, in order to 17 reach those non-jury files that the Attorney General 18 used to refuse to turn over pursuant to a regulation, 19 you would have to get rid of the regulation. You'd have 20 to override the regulation. You'd have to say 4F(b) was 21 intended to override it.

22 MR. NASH: It does. That would be my --

23 QUESTION: Why doesn't it override 6(b)?

24 MR. NASH: Pardon me?

25 QUESTION: Why didn't it override 6(b)?

1 MR. NASH: Well, there's no reference to 6(e) 2 in the --
3 QUESTION: 6(e), yes.
4 MR. NASH: -- in the efforts. In the 5 Congressional efforts there's no reference to 6(e).
6 There's no intimation in the legislative history that 7 Congress was somehow dissatisfied with the way that the 8 6(e) balancing process was working. There's no evidence 9 in the Congressional record that Congress somehow sought 10 to change 5(e).
11 In the past when the Court, when this Court or 12 Congress has sought to change grand jury, the 13 availability of grand jury, they have done so 14 specifically. In Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of 15 Criminal Procedure, there are provisions for the 16 disclosure of generally described materials.
17 But then 16 goes down and specifically makes 18 the availability of grand jury statements of defendants 19 available. Prior to 1970 -- 1966, when that amendment 20 was enacted, promulgated in the rules by this Court and 21 sent to Congress, a defendant in a criminal case was 22 required to make a particular showing of need. Congress 23 changed that specifically, and they mentioned grand jury 24 materials specifically.
25 When they changed, when they enacted, when

1 Congress enacted Title 18, Section 3500, the so-called 2 Jencks Act, it spoke generally to various materials that 3 were available, and then they went specifically and 4 mentioned grand jury materials specifically. So that 5 what you have there is an indication that Congress, 6 indeed this Court through its rule promulgation powers, 7 sought to affect grand jury materials, they did so 8 directly.

9 QUESTION: I take it the submission of your 10 colleagues on the other side is that 4F(b) amended, in 11 effect amended 6(e) --

12 MR. NASH: I think --

13 QUESTION: -- which is the statute, which is 14 the statute.

15 MR. NASH: Yes, yes. I think that that's the 16 position that they take. But they seem to ride on the 17 Congressional motivation for passing 4F, that because 18 Congress decided that --

19 QUESTION: Well, that may be, but their 20 submission is that 6(e) wasn't the same animal after 21 this, after 4F(b), as it was before.

22 MR. NASH: That's correct. That's, I believe, 23 their submission.

24 In a chart that Senator Abourezk prepared for 25 an explanation to the Senate of the differences in the 1 House version of the bill and the Senate version of the 2 bill, he divided the categories -- or he divided the 3 legislation into categories. And with reference to 4 grand jury materials, which he specifically listed in 5 the left-hand column of his chart, he said that the 6 House version, which included 4F(b), the legislation

7 before the Court, had no comparable provision for access 8 to grand jury materials.

9 During the course of the debate in the Senate 10 there was, in the words of one commentator, "fierce 11 opposition" to the possibility that grand jury materials 12 would be disclosed. That opposition consisted of 13 Senators Laxalt, Tower, Allen, Hruska and others, and 14 they voiced strong objection to the question of 15 availability of grand jury material, not to whom it was 16 going to be disclosed but to the fact it was going to be 17 disclosed.

18 Senator Allen went so far as to introduce an 19 amendment to the Senate version of the bill that 20 included 4F(b). That was defeated, but the fact that he 21 went to that effort to introduce into the Senate 4F(b) 22 and was an objector, a strong objector, to the 23 disclosure of grand jury materials shows that Congress 24 was aware of the distinction between investigative files 25 generally and grand jury materials specifically.

1 The question really, in dealing with any 2 change, gets down to the importance and the significance
3 of the grand jury as a body. This Court when it changed 4 Rule 16 in 1966, the Congress when it enacted Section 5 3500, dealt with that concept directly and specifically, 6 and that was a recognition of what the grand jury is.

7 In the staff interview that the Antitrust
8 Department lawyer might have with a potential witness, 9 he's probably represented by counsel. He can walk out 10 of the room. He can refuse to answer a question. In 11 the grand jury he's in a secret room, literally, with 24
12 or 25 strangers, without a lawyer -- an intimidating 13 sight at best. And he can't walk out of that room. He 14 must answer the question.

15 And the fact that Congress when it's changed
16 or this Court when it's directed itself to grand jury 17 has done so specifically is a recognition of that 18 distinction and that difference.

19 QUESTION: Well, if you concede that Congress 20 meant to give some help to state attorneys general by 21 the provisions of 4(b) and you say that the phrase
22 "investigative files or other materials" doesn't include 23 grand jury testimony, is there some way of telling from 24 this record just how much help that would be?

25 I mean, does the Attorney General typically

1 have files which shed all sorts of light on a particular 2 suit but aren't grand jury testimony?

3 MR. NASH: The only ones that know what the 4 Government possesses is the Government. According to 5 the record in this case, prior to the filing of the 6 briefs in this Court they supplied the state attorney 7 general what they describe as 19 pages. After filing of 8 the briefs by Respondents in this case, which called 9 into question first of all whether or not the Government 10 had made available to the state all the materials they 11 might have, two or three more pages were made available 12 to the state attorney general.

13 There are materials which would normally be 14 available -- staff interviews. When the Government says 15 that primarily the grand jury is used to investigate 16 antitrust offenses, they point to a comment by Assistant 17 Attorney General Kauper in 1975 that they don't use the 18 FBI in these cases, they use staff interviews.

19 Well, those staff interviews are 20 discoverable. What about economic expertise that might 21 not be available to the states but is in the possession 22 of the United States? That would be available. Various 23 analyses of antitrust problems would be available. All 24 kinds of materials are available.

25 The Government says in the Antitrust Division

1 manual that it retains discretion to determine in some 2 cases whether some of those materials, which are clearly 3 within the definition of investigative files and other 4 materials, that they retain the discretion.

5 QUESTION: Was that manual statement made
6 after the enactment of 4(b)?

7 MR. NASH: Yes. 4(b) was enacted in 1976 and 8 the manual was published, I believe, in August 1979.

9 QUESTION: So then you understand the 10 Government, the United States Government, to take the 11 position that saying that the Attorney General shall 12 make available to the state attorney general to the 13 extent permitted by law allows the United States
14 Attorney General some discretion, even though it's not 15 grand jury?

16 MR. NASH: They may allow them certainly some 17 discretion, and there are areas that readily come to 18 mind -- the confidential informant, this Court's 19 decision in Roviato. But it seems to me that they can't 20 on the one hand say, we only gave them 19 pages so 21 Congress must have meant grand jury materials, and then 22 on the other hand not identify what they didn't give 23 them, because there was no identification that, wait a 24 minute, we're withholding some stuff to the extent 25 permitted by law. They said they gave them everything.

1 The fact is that after Respondents' brief was 2 filed, that at least two or three more pages, according 3 to the State of Illinois' reply brief, were made 4 available to them in September of this year.

5 But there's no -- our system of justice is 6 based on an adversary system, and I don't think that 7 between the State of Illinois and the Government of the 8 United States you have this adversary flavor. I know 9 there was a question earlier, but truthfully, according 10 to the manual -- and I don't know who looked at that 11 beforehand amongst the State of Illinois lawyers -- 12 there were some materials that the Government says in 13 the manual they retain the discretion to give or not to 14 give.

15 It seems to me that the State of Illinois
16 should pursue that before saying to this Court, you 17 should include grand jury materials in this general 18 phrase because we only got 19 pages.

19 I think that the important point to be made 20 when you get down to the nitty-gritty, as they say, is 21 there is a distinction between grand jury materials and 22 other materials. There is a distinction and there is a 23 uniqueness about the grand jury system and the 24 institution of the grand jury, and when Congress or this 25 Court have dealt with that question they have dealt with

1 it specifically, not by implication.

2 The State of Illinois and the Government would 3 have this Court believe that merely because the Congress
4 passed legislation which was directed at antitrust
5 violators and authorized the filing of parens patriae 6 actions which had previously not been allowed, that that 7 was an indication that 6(e) was to be changed. When you 8 get to the question of changing 6(e), you get to all 9 sorts of other questions which 4F does not address 10 itself to.

11 There is nothing in 4F to indicate a 12 Congressional dissatisfaction with the way that the 13 court's discretion is working. There is nothing in 4F
14 to determine that the courts in determining the amount 15 of disclosure, the time of disclosure, and the 16 conditions of disclosure, as the rule enunciates, is 17 somehow inadequate or is somehow frustrating the 18 antitrust efforts of the State of Illinois. And this 19 Court should not adopt that position, that Congress by 20 implication, without any reference to grand jury at all, 21 changed the law.

22 Indeed, the reference is the opposite.
23 Senator Abourezk's comment stating that materials could 24 not be turned over absent a court order, that the only 25 materials that could be turned over under 4F(b) were

1 those that had been provided the Government voluntarily
2 -- those are his words. Those are the words that he 3 used to silence the critics of the disclosure of grand 4 jury materials, Senator Hruska, Senator Allen, Senator
5 Laxalt, and Senator Tower and others.

6 Thank you.

7 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: You have a minute and a 8 half remaining.

9 REBUTTAL ARGUMENT OF THOMAS M. GENOVESE, ESQ.,

10 ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER

11 MR. GENOVESE: Very quickly, I think there's a 12 tremendous gap between what Congress was attempting to 13 accomplish when it passed Section 4F(b) and how 14 Respondents interpret the statute. Congress wanted the 15 states to have valuable information prior to the 16 institution of a lawsuit, because Congress understood 17 that in order to have local and national antitrust 18 enforcement it was essential that the states, and 19 because the states lacked the resources, it was 20 essential the states have this information in order to 21 bring these kinds of cases.

22 Respondents' interpretation I think creates a 23 kind of inverse relationship between need and 24 disclosure. The more significant and valuable the 25 information in the Government's file, under the

1 Respondents' interpretation, the less likely that it 2 could ever be produced to a state attorney general. And 3 the reason for that is that it is only the significant 4 and valuable information which is presented to an 5 investigative grand jury. What is left is 6 uninformative, whether it's 19 pages or however many, 7 and it could also be misleading and grossly inaccurate
8 to a state attorney general who has to make a decision 9 of whether he's going to undertake the resource drain of 10 filing these kinds of actions in accordance with 11 Congress' intent.

12 Are there any questions?

13 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.

14 The case is submitted.

15 (Whereupon, at 1:34 p.m., the case in the 16 above-entitled matter was submitted.)
