P R O C E E D I N G S

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments next in Hensley against Eckerhart.

Mr. Boicourt, I think you may proceed when you are ready.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF MICHAEL L. BOICOURT, ESQ.,
ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS

MR. BOICOURT: Thank you. Mr. Chief Justice, may it please the Court, as oral argument is presented in this case today, the litigation is in its tenth year. The only issue remaining for resolution before this Court is one involving the attorneys' fees awarded by the district court and affirmed by the court of appeals. The case will require an interpretation and application of the Civil Rights Attorneys' Fees Awards Act of 1976, Title 42, Section 1988.

On behalf of Petitioners, I urge the Court to adopt the principle that award of attorneys' fees under the statute should fairly and accurately reflect the extent to which a plaintiff has prevailed on the substantial claims in his case. I ask the Court to accept the principle that the Attorneys' Fees Award Act does not compensate a plaintiff in a civil rights case for his failures, and it does not penalize a defendant in a civil rights case for his substantial successes.

1 On the facts, the district court approved in 2 this case an attorneys' fee award of over $133,000.
3 That represented 2,557 principal hours as found by the 4 trial court. Again, that award was affirmed per curium 5 by the court of appeals. No attempt was made by the 6 district court to proportion the fee to reflect the 7 extent to which the plaintiff succeeded on claims and 8 the extent to which the defendants successfully 9 defended, in effect, demonstrating that no 10 constitutional deprivation had occurred with respect to 11 certain claims in the lawsuit.

12 The district court itself found in its opinion 13 relating to fees that the defendants did prevail on some 14 of the issues. Nevertheless, it awarded in practical 15 effect fees for every hour spent by plaintiff's 16 attorneys on the case without respect to whether they 17 prevailed or lost on specific issues.

18 This case involved a comprehensive --

19 QUESTION: Would that cover frivolous claims 20 made if they showed they spent the time on them?

21 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, Your Honor. I think there 22 were a few claims in this case that because they were 23 not abandoned prior to trial had become close to being 24 frivolous by being presented in the courtroom. There 25 were other claims in the case which were unsuccessful

1 which I do not claim to you were frivolous.
2 Nevertheless, they were unsuccessful. And Congress
3 provided fees for prevailing civil rights litigants, not 4 fees for merely asserting a civil rights claim.

5 QUESTION: Would you give me an example of 6 those you regarded as frivolous?

7 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, Your Honor. I think by 8 the time they got to the point in the lawsuit where they 9 were trying to prove that defendants overrelied upon 10 medication in controlling the patients in the forensic 11 unit, that had become frivolous, because their own 12 experts, all of whom had been contacted, employed some 13 years in advance of the case, did not support the 14 claim. They all came to the courtroom and testified 15 there was no evidence of overmedication of patients. I 16 think their failure to abandon that was frivolous.

17 QUESTION: Any other claims besides that one?

18 MR. BOICOURT: I think with respect to the 19 mail policy, the fact that the mail policy of the 20 forensic unit was amended in 1977 -- That was during the 21 duration of the lawsuit. There was also some 22 contemporary Eighth Circuit precedent which dealt with 23 mail issues in the prison context. I think their 24 failure to have abandoned that claim and to have 25 presented it at trial when it was clearly -- the mail

1 policy was consistent with what was being done --

2 QUESTION: I take it you are conceding at this 3 point, however, that frivolity had not been attained up 4 to trial.

5 MR. BOICOURT: Well, with respect to a couple 6 of those issues, I think they become frivolous by the 7 time the trial occurred. I am not taking the position 8 that --

9 QUESTION: They must have known what their 10 experts were going to testify to.

11 MR. BOICOURT: That is my position. I would 12 think they would, because many of these experts, again, 13 had been retained some years in advance of trial.

14 QUESTION: How about the dismissal of Count 2 15 of the original complaint? The one that claimed that 16 the forced performance of work if it had no therapeutic 17 value violated the Thirteenth Amendment prohibition
18 against involuntary servitude. It is my understanding 19 that they accepted a voluntary dismissal on that.

20 MR. BOICOURT: The district court accepted a 21 voluntary dismissal after a substantial number of hours 22 had been spent by both sides. Plaintiffs, I think, have 23 suggested in their brief that their lawsuit had 24 something to do with some voluntary action on the part 25 of the defendants, but in real point of the fact, that

1 motion for voluntary dismissal came very close after 2 this Court's decision in National League of Cities 3 versus Yuser. The Fair Labor Standards Act didn't apply 4 to states.

5 Again, this lawsuit involved a multi-claim
6 attack on the Forensic Unit, Fulton State Hospital.
7 Now, as that name implies, the Forensic Unit is a mental 8 institution designed to provide care and treatment to 9 dangerous mental patients, patients who for the most 10 part have been involuntarily committed --

11 QUESTION: Excuse me, counsel. One point 12 before that. Would you have the lawyer -- wouldn't he 13 have to keep books saying that today at ten minutes
14 after 2:00 I am working on Point 3 of this case?

15 MR. BOICOURT: I think because --

16 QUESTION: Wouldn't he have to?

17 MR. BOICOURT: I think he should. He has the 18 burden of proof, just like any --

19 QUESTION: That's what I thought. Well, 20 wouldn't he spend all of his time bookkeeping?

21 MR. BOICOURT: I don't think so.

22 QUESTION: Suppose while he's working on Point
23 2 he finds an answer to Point 3?

24 MR. BOICOURT: That will often occur, and I
25 think --

1 QUESTION: And you have to keep books on 2 that. Have you ever seen any books like that?

3 MR. BOICOURT: I have not seen any books like 4 that in the Eighth Circuit, because he's going to get 5 compensated no matter what he spent his time on.

6 QUESTION: My question was, have you seen any 7 books that lawyers keep that they are working on Point 1
8 of Section C of Point 3 in the brief?

9 MR. BOICOURT: I think they should be required 10 as a general matter to indicate what specific area of 11 their lawsuit time is being expended on as they keep 12 their records. It is pretty easy to devote a sentence 13 or a short clause to saying, preparing an expert for 14 testimony on staff matters, and saying, researching the 15 matter of the mail policy. I don't think that's an 16 unreasonable burden.

17 QUESTION: But the district judge did find -- 18 I don't know just what he did, but he said, "After a 19 close review of the detailed time records of these two 20 attorneys and an opportunity to review the work of both 21 attorneys, the court concluded that the amount of time 22 spent by Mr. Berkowitz and Mr. Bastian both in trial and 23 in non-trial activities is reasonable and their efforts 24 are not duplicative of others."

25 Doesn't that kind of -- I don't know what the

1 judge did, but doesn't it indicate he did look pretty 2 closely at what their time had been spent on?

3 MR. BOICOURT: I think he looked pretty 4 closely to the records, Your Honor, but it was in the 5 context of his attempting to follow a previous Eighth 6 Circuit precedent which he believed foreclosed him from 7 reducing the fee because of unsuccessful claims. I 8 think that was more addressed to the matter of 9 duplication of effort among counsel.

10 QUESTION: Does he say that he didn't think he 11 had the authority to reduce it? He didn't give any 12 enhancement, and he did chop off about 300 hours of the 13 youngest lawyer in the group. Is there anything in his 14 opinion that says he thought he didn't have the power to 15 chop off a part of the fees if he thought -- you know, 16 it was basically unsuccessful?

17 MR. BOICOURT: Well, I think when he addressed 18 that issue he cited directly language from opinions out 19 of the Eighth Circuit, and somewhat dissimilar cases, 20 but the language clearly indicated a position of the 21 Eighth Circuit that all hours were to be compensated, 22 and I believe that the opinion read as a whole indicates 23 that he was following that precedent.

24 QUESTION: I have read it, and I just didn't 25 get that out of it, to be honest with you, that he was

1 under the impression the Eighth Circuit required 2 compensation for all hours regardless of how useless the 3 lawyer's time might have been. I don't think that's a 4 fair reading of the opinion.

5 MR. BOICOURT: I think it's a fair reading in 6 this regard, Your Honor. What the judge did, it is very 7 clear from the entire record of this case that there 8 were failures, substantial failures on behalf of 9 plaintiff's attorneys, but once that one reduction was 10 made for one attorney who was inexperienced, all hours 11 claimed, every hour claimed that was requested was 12 compensated, and he made no attempt to demonstrate that 13 in any way the extent to which successful claims on 14 behalf of defendants should have been taken into 15 account. He in effect rejected the theory which I
16 presented to him, I think, because of the Eighth Circuit 17 precedent which he followed.

18 QUESTION: Is there any -- What is the Eighth 19 Circuit precedent that most clearly states what you say 20 their view of the law is on this?

21 MR. BOICOURT: The most clear Eighth Circuit
22 precedent is Brown versus Bathke, which involves what I
23 think creates a distinction which should be made. Brown 24 versus Bathke has language of apparently very adverse 25 character to our position, but it involved an

1 alternative legal theory case as opposed to a multiple 2 claim case. That is, several different legal theories 3 of recovery all in support of a common form of relief.

4 QUESTION: Right. I think you'd have a 5 stronger -- I would understand that as a stronger -- but 6 does he cite that case, the district judge?

7 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, sir.

8 QUESTION: Yes, he does, I see, on Page A-11.

9 MR. BOICOURT: Again with respect to the 10 issues which were litigated in the case, pursuant to 11 local rules, counsel on the morning the trial of this 12 case began agreed there were 24 issues, substantial 13 claims which remained to be litigated in the case. I 14 will freely admit with respect to some of those 24 15 claims that they were related, cannot be substantially 16 distinguished.

17 QUESTION: Mr. Boicourt --

18 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, Your Honor.

19 QUESTION: -- should we really look, though, 20 at the ultimate relief sought in the broad terms of the 21 complaint, or at a pretrial order list of issues in 22 seeing if the attorneys' fees allowed were reasonable?

23 MR. BOICOURT: What I was attempting to do, 24 Your Honor, is demonstrate -- I think on the face of the 25 opinion of the court on the merits, the district court,

1 it is clear that there were some substantial failures.
2 It is made even more clear by the pretrial order filed 3 on the day before the case began, because in many 4 instances the court did not take up or consider its 5 opinion on the merits. Certain claims which were made 6 and proof were offered on those claims at trial, and the 7 court just ignored them in its opinion. I think that 8 demonstrates the plaintiffs failed to prevail on those 9 particular claims and that their time should be 10 discounted.

11 Now, with respect to these 24 claims, and 12 again, some of them were related, most of them, I 13 submit, were not, the court ordered relief on six. I 14 believe that each of these claims or the vast majority 15 of these claims were truly separable, fractionable, that 16 they would have served as an independent basis for a 17 one-issue lawsuit. For the claims that lost, that would 18 have been an unsuccessful one-issue lawsuit, and no
19 attorneys' fees under any interpretation of the statute 20 can be awarded to a party who does not prevail at all.

21 The principle which I am trying to get the 22 Court to adopt I think is consistent with sound public 23 policy. Fee shifting makes sense only where there has 24 been a violation of civil rights. Only when it is found 25 that a defendant has deprived another person of a civil

1 right should he be required to pay his opponent's
2 counsel for substantiating that claim. There is no
3 question that the Civil Rights Attorneys' Fees Award Act
4 was intended as an inducement to civil rights litigation.

5 I assume that my opponent will argue at great 6 length this afternoon that the theory that the 7 Petitioners espouse would deter civil rights litigation, 8 but the Awards Act, the Fees Act will encourage exactly 9 that kind of litigation which it rewards.

10 If the merit of a claim is not going to be the 11 key factor in a judicial determination as to whether 12 fees should be rewarded -- awarded for time spent 13 establishing that claim, then I submit to you that the 14 merit of the claim will not be the key factor in the 15 decision of counsel whether to include that claim in his 16 original litigation or whether to abandon that claim in 17 an attempt to narrow the scope of his lawsuit before it 18 comes to trial.

19 As a result --

20 QUESTION: Do you think that the statute
21 prohibits giving attorneys' fees for the so-called 22 catalytic results if the lawsuit is filed and relates to 23 several claims, and before it comes to trial the 24 defendants change the practice, and it isn't necessary
25 to go to trial on it? Under the statute, can attorneys'

1 fees be secured for those results?

2 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, I believe they can, Your 3 Honor. If the burden of proof is carried by plaintiff's 4 counsel and his lawsuit that has served as a catalyst to 5 voluntary action by defendants, I think the time
6 reasonably expended to accomplish that voluntary action
7 should be compensated, but only that time reasonably 8 expended up until the voluntary action took place. If 9 he continues to litigate that claim after the voluntary 10 action and up through the end of trial, the end of the 11 litigation, the time after that voluntary action takes 12 place should not be compensated.

13 I submit that the rule in the Eighth Circuit
14 which in effect results in all hours being compensated 15 regardless of the relative success of the parties in the 16 various claims at issue would and does create an 17 imposition on the courts. It must encourage frivolous 18 pleading and congested court dockets. One of the most 19 important functions of a district court judge is to 20 narrow the scope of litigation in front of him, to get 21 the parties to agree to make the case as workable and as 22 presentable in the courtroom as is possible.

23 There is no incentive for a civil rights 24 litigant in the Eighth Circuit to narrow the scope of 25 his issues, because he will be rewarded for all time

1 expended on the case, regardless of how many 2 unmeritorious, unsuccessful issues are included in his 3 case. I think that frustrates the ability of the trial
4 judge to effect a narrowing of the issues, to make case 5 workable -- make cases workable, and --

6 QUESTION: Is there anything in this judge's 7 opinion that said he paid him for working on frivolous 8 matters?

9 MR. BOICOURT: No, there is nothing in the 10 decision of the judge that says that.

11 QUESTION: Well, where do you get your basis
12 for your argument?

13 MR. BOICOURT: I suggest to the Court that 14 there were some issues that at the time of trial had 15 become frivolous. I don't take the position that 16 because issues are not frivolous, are of substance, that 17 that would change my position, that the Act requires or 18 provides for compensation for prevailing, for winning.
19 Even if the issues were not frivolous, were substantial, 20 but he lost, he still should not be paid for his time 21 spent on it.

22 QUESTION: Did the judge say he paid them for 23 the lost ones?

24 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, sir. The judge said that 25 some issues were won by plaintiffs and some issues were

1 won by defendants, and he paid them for all their hours.

2 QUESTION: My question was, did the judge say,
3 I am paying you for the lost ones?

4 MR. BOICOURT: No, Your Honor. I wouldn't 5 expect the trial judge to say that. He doesn't intend 6 to be reversed.

7 QUESTION: Can anyone looking at the record of 8 the time identify accurately the items for which you say 9 no fee should be allowed?

10 MR. BOICOURT: I think in this particular case 11 because time records were not kept which were in any way 12 related to various claims of the course of the lawsuit, 13 it would be difficult for anyone to do that except the 14 trial judge. That is why I don't ask this Court to find 15 what a reasonable fee should be in the case, or 16 determine how many issues I won and how many issues my 17 opponents won. I ask that the case be remanded so the 18 district court can do that, that he had control of the 19 case throughout the entire years of this litigation --

20 QUESTION: Has the issue come up in other
21 circuits?

22 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, Your Honor, there has.
23 That is one reason why I think it is very important that 24 some position be taken by this Court.

25 QUESTION: What have other circuits said?

1 MR. BOICOURT: Well, that's interesting.
2 Including the Eighth Circuit, the Fifth and Sixth 3 Circuits have a line of cases with language very similar 4 to the Eighth Circuit, contrary to my position. With 5 respect to four circuits, different panels within the 6 circuit have disagreed on the issue on their face, but 7 within the circuit there are conflicts.

8 With respect to the District of Columbia
9 Circuit and four others, the cases support my position.
10 This is a classic example of a true split in the 11 circuits.

12 QUESTION: So there are express examples of 13 courts paring down, sorting the case out as between what 14 is won and what has been lost.

15 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, Your Honor. The 16 preponderance of the total number of cases support my 17 position, that attorneys' fees are not to be awarded for 18 unsuccessful claims, and it is the duty of the trial 19 court to determine how successful the litigants were and 20 to fashion an award which fairly reflects that success.

21 QUESTION: So that if there has been part won 22 and part lost and the district court doesn't go through 23 that process in the circuits that agree with you they 24 set it aside and tell him to do it.

25 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, Your Honor. I think that

1 is the case.

2 QUESTION: I understand you to say you are not 3 limiting this to frivolous claims, that your emphasis is 4 on successful claims.

5 MR. BOICOURT: Successful --

6 QUESTION: The claims on which relief was 7 granted.

8 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, Your Honor. I don't think 9 that my -- I don't want to give the impression my 10 argument rises or falls with respect to whether a 11 particular claim was frivolous. That is not my point at 12 all. It is whether or not it was successful, because 13 the Fees Act rewards prevailing civil rights litigants.
14 It does not reward someone merely for asserting a civil 15 rights claim.

16 QUESTION: What would you say the position is 17 that if somebody claims they denied their civil rights, 18 and they bring a lawsuit, and the other side gives in 19 immediately? Would that be a successful lawsuit?

20 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, Your Honor.

21 QUESTION: Completely so?

22 MR. BOICOURT: If he gives up completely with 23 respect to all claims, yes.

24 QUESTION: Well, then, if he goes to trial,
25 then you have to prorate it. But if he gives up up

1 front, you don't prorate.

2 MR. BOICOURT: If the --

3 QUESTION: Because I am warning you, my next 4 question is, if you give up halfway through, will you 5 split it in half?

6 MR. BOICOURT: Any time remedial action, 7 whether ordered by the court or voluntary on behalf of 8 defendant is the direct result of the lawsuit, the hours 9 expended in establishing that relief should be 10 compensated. I don't agree that position.

11 QUESTION: Well, how do you know it is brought 12 on by the lawsuit or not?

13 MR. BOICOURT: Well, that is --

14 QUESTION: I have seen cases settled on the 15 day of trial that have been in preparation for six 16 years.

17 QUESTION: You would allow them to receive 18 fees for their preparation even if you didn't go to 19 trial, would you?

20 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, if the preparation was 21 reasonably related to the matter of their successes, I 22 would allow the compensation.

23 QUESTION: But you wouldn't after trial.

24 MR. BOICOURT: Not if they lost, no. In this 25 case, they substantially lost. They lost a lot more

1 than they won, and I don't see why my client should pay 2 their attorneys for unsuccessfully suing them.

3 QUESTION: May I ask you, I have got the Brown
4 opinion in front of me. I notice the Eighth Circuit
5 does say that the issues which are clearly frivolous, 6 that are manufactured, do not represent time which has 7 been reasonably expended on a matter, and thus any time 8 claimed for them can be properly disregarded by the 9 court. So that is the rule of the Eighth Circuit. You 10 disregard time spent on frivolous claims.

11 MR. BOICOURT: That is correct, Your Honor.

12 QUESTION: And you don't question that. But 13 then I gather this is the sentence that you take issue 14 with. "Attorneys' fees for a claim which is reasonably 15 calculated to advance a client's interest should not, 16 however, be denied solely because that claim did not 17 provide the precise basis for the relief granted." That 18 is what you want us to change.

19 MR. BOICOURT: Yes, as it is implied for a 20 multiple claim case. Yes, Your Honor. And again --

21 QUESTION: Even though it was a reasonable -- 22 the reasonable work of a lawyer who was conscientiously 23 trying to represent his client, for which he would 24 normally be paid by a private client. You would say he 25 should not be paid in the civil rights context.

1 MR. BOICOURT: That is correct in the multiple 2 claim case. Conscientiousness is not to be rewarded.

3 QUESTION: Well, the test is reasonably
4 calculated to advance a client's interests.

5 MR. BOICOURT: And again, that case involves 6 the alternative legal theory situation. That is, more 7 than one theory or cause of action in support of common 8 relief. So I think it is very important that the 9 distinction be made between that and this multiple claim 10 lawsuit, in which the relief depends on the nature of 11 the issue itself and the nature of the claim.

12 QUESTION: Well, but the court says it should 13 not be denied solely because that claim did not provide 14 the precise basis for the relief granted. And your view 15 is that it should be denied solely because it did not 16 provide the precise basis for the relief granted. Is 17 that right?

18 MR. BOICOURT: That would not be the case only 19 if the plaintiff could demonstrate his burden of proof 20 that the time spent was reasonably related to securing 21 the actual relief awarded.

22 QUESTION: Well, I'm not sure you've answered
23 my question. Is it your view that the compensation 24 should be denied solely because the claim did not 25 provide the precise basis for the relief granted?

1 MR. BOICOURT: In the multiple claim
2 situation, yes, Your Honor. Again, that was an 3 alternative legal theory case, and it has nothing to do
4 with the type of circumstances we have here. Not only 5 is the Eighth Circuit rule an imposition on the courts 6 that will lead to more court congestion. It is an 7 imposition on the resources of defendants. If there is 8 no incentive for the plaintiff's attorney to narrow the 9 scope of his litigation when pled or when prepared for 10 trial, the defendant in civil rights litigation, the 11 institutions, the programs, the statutes that get sued 12 in this type of litigation, have to expend vast amounts 13 of resources to defend these cases in the courtroom.

14 It is very hard to negotiate claims when the 15 plaintiff's attorney knows that all hours he expends on 16 his total case are going to be compensated, regardless 17 of his success on individual claims. The shotgun 18 approach to lawsuit is a drain on the resources of 19 states and other types of people that have to defend 20 these types of lawsuits. The parameters of civil rights 21 litigation must not be contained solely within the 22 imagination of a plaintiff's attorney. There must be 23 some other control over that litigation, and if these 24 are going to be awarded for all hours, who is going to 25 exercise the control?

1 It would be very difficult for the trial judge 2 to narrow that case because there is no incentive for 3 the plaintiff's attorney to do so. In addition, 4 attorneys' fees do cause a penalty to be levied against 5 defendants. I think that was the purpose of Congress in 6 enacting the Attorneys' Fees Award Act, and in the 7 context of other attorneys' fees provisions this Court
8 has found that Congress intended to penalize defendants 9 who deprive others of their civil rights.

10 But when a claim is successfully defended, 11 when there is found to have been no deprivation of 12 anyone's civil rights, why should the defendant be 13 required to accept the burden of his adversary's fees?
14 That is not consistent with that purpose. Otherwise, 15 the prevailing party language of the statute means 16 nothing.

17 Now, again in this case there were truly 18 fractionable claims, claims that could have been 19 one-issue lawsuits which were unsuccessful. For 20 example, a one-claim lawsuit on the validity of the 21 defendant's mail policy would have been unsuccessful.
22 No fees. A one-issue lawsuit on the claim that 23 defendants overmedicated their patients would have been 24 unsuccessful. No fee. An unsuccessful lawsuit on the 25 claim that defendant's staff was constitutionally

1 inadequate would have been unsuccessful. No fees.

2 Why should a fee attach to these totally 3 unsuccessful constitutional claims merely because they 4 were under the umbrella of a lawsuit which included some 5 other claims which resulted in limited relief being 6 afforded? It is an inequitable result.

7 In addition, the statute requires the exercise
8 of discretion. It says a court may in its discretion 9 award to the prevailing party a reasonable attorney's 10 fee. Under the Eighth Circuit rule, there is no 11 discretion. If all that must be shown is that one claim 12 was successful, then all hours will be compensated at 13 the prevailing hourly rate. Where is there room for the 14 trial judge to use his discretion? Where is there 15 authority for him to fashion an award which is fair to 16 all parties, and reflects the extent to which a 17 plaintiff actually demonstrated --

18 QUESTION: Well, I take it your position is 19 that the trial judge has no discretion to pay -- to 20 award fees on a single issue claim that could have been 21 a separate lawsuit on which there is a loss. .

22 MR. BOICOURT: I think it would be an abuse of 23 discretion for him to award a claim --

24 QUESTION: Yes, so I have no discretion.

25 MR. BOICOURT: Excuse me.

1 QUESTION: His discretion is just to award a
2 reasonable fee on issues that -- on which the plaintiff 3 prevails.

4 MR. BOICOURT: But that is where he can 5 actually exercise his discretion to make that 6 determination.

7 QUESTION: I understand. I understand, but 8 your position is, there is no discretion to award fees 9 for -- on issues that the plaintiff does not prevail 10 on.

11 MR. BOICOURT: Unless he can show that the 12 hours spent --

13 QUESTION: Yes.

14 MR. BOICOURT: -- were reasonably related to 15 the actual relief ultimately granted --

16 QUESTION: That is impossible in the examples
17 you gave us, these single-issue claims, these claims 18 that could have been single-issue lawsuits.

19 MR. BOICOURT: I don't think it would be 20 possible for them to claim, yes, that their proof or 21 that their time expended on the mail policy had anything 22 to do with whether or not there was sufficient privacy --

23 QUESTION: So your position is that the judge 24 had absolutely no discretion to award any fees with 25 respect to that claim.

1 MR. BOICOURT: That is correct.

2 I would like to reserve the rest of my time
3 for rebuttal, please.

4 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Eichner, let me see 5 if I can clarify some of these things for myself with a 6 hypothetical. This extends the question Justice White
7 was just putting. Suppose you have a hypothetical case 8 with three claims, and two of them are successful and 9 one isn't, and the time records which most lawyers keep 10 and all lawyers should keep if they want to get paid 11 show that the time was spent about equally on the three, 12 just to make the arithmetic simple here.

13 In your view, are the lawyers entitled to 14 recover on the ones on which they did not prevail?

15 ORAL ARGUMENT OF STANLEY J. EICHNER, ESQ., 16 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENTS

17 MR. EICHNER: The answer to that question, Mr.
18 Chief Justice, depends on whether we are talking about a 19 situation such as we had here, where there was one 20 overall broad claim, that is, a constitutional right to 21 treatment, and the specific aspects under that broad 22 claim, and those subparts being related to each other in 23 part and parcel of the same claim, or were they perhaps 24 three totally separate claims which didn't necessarily 25 relate to each other.

1 QUESTION: Well, let's assume at least,
2 whether they are totally separate or not, that they are 3 readily identifiable, or not readily, but reasonably 4 identifiable.

5 MR. EICHNER: Well, I -- I have to repeat that 6 it comes back to what extent those claims relate to each 7 other or not. If they were three separate actions that 8 could have been brought as three totally separate 9 lawsuits, and the work involved in Claims 1 and 2 10 wouldn't necessarily relate to the preparation and 11 preparing of Claim 3, then --

12 QUESTION: Let's help it out by saying the 13 complaint has Count 1, Count 2, Count 3, and that their 14 interrelationship is limited to the fact that they 15 involve the same people and the same institutions.

16 MR. EICHNER: Well, again, it is going to be a 17 factual determination by the district court to what 18 extent do those varying claims relate to each other.

19 QUESTION: How about Count 2 of the original 20 complaint, the involuntary servitude count? Would you 21 say that that was in the severable category with respect 22 to the other counts of the complaint, or do you think 23 that was part of your overall umbrella?

24 MR. EICHNER: That was -- I believe you are 25 referring to Count 3, which was the uncompensated labor,

1 Your Honor.

2 QUESTION: It says -- at least where I am
3 looking at the Joint Appendix on Page 4, it says Count
4 2. Perhaps there is a --

5 MR. EICHNER: In any case, the uncompensated
6 labor claim was a separate claim. It is unlike what 7 went to trial in this lawsuit. What went to trial in 8 this lawsuit was Count 3, which was the claim that 9 plaintiff's constitutional right to treatment was being 10 violated, and then within that claim there are various 11 specific subparts and aspects, but the uncompensated 12 labor, which, by the way, was in a time period prior to 13 when we are seeking fees for, would be considered in 14 that case a separate claim. The mere fact that it had 15 as its subject the same institution doesn't necessarily 16 mean that you get time for all of it.

17 It really ties again, coming back to the 18 question presented by the Chief Justice, what is the 19 extent of interrelatedness and interconnectedness
20 between the various claims.

21 QUESTION: But here you received some 22 compensation for work on Count 2, did you not? I am 23 referring to Page 228 of the Joint Appendix. There is 24 an entry for May 29th, '75, research and drafting of 25 plaintiff's memorandum of law on the applicability of

1 the Eleventh Amendment to plaintiff's claim for damages
2 in Count 2.

3 QUESTION: I merely raise the question, there
4 are several complaints in the Joint Appendix. At least 5 three.

6 MR. EICHNER: That is correct.

7 QUESTION: Maybe that's where the confusion is 8 on Counts 2 and 3.

9 MR. EICHNER: Well, the specific answer to 10 Justice Rehnquist's question is yes, there was time on 11 the uncompensated labor claim which was after 1975. We 12 didn't ask for fees prior to '75, but the work after 13 January, '75, we sought fees for, and the example that 14 you just cited was work which we sought and obtained.

15 QUESTION: But if you agree that was 16 severable, and you took a voluntary dismissal of it, how 17 under your own theory of how the fee statute should be 18 administered were you entitled to be paid for that 19 particular item of work?

20 MR. EICHNER: Because it is an incorrect
21 understanding that we were wholly unsuccessful on that.
22 We obtained minimally catalytic relief on that claim.
23 There were two parts to it. One was the injunctive 24 claim which sought that the defendants compensate the 25 residents of Fulton State Hospital for labor, and that

1 was effectuated by the lawsuit. There was a second part 2 which was the back wages claim. That is the part which 3 was dismissed, Your Honor. There are two parts to it.

4 QUESTION: Counsel?

5 MR. EICHNER: Yes.

6 QUESTION: I will put an easy question to you
7 that may clarify your position. Assume you had a 1983
8 suit against prison officials, and the complaints 9 alleged were that there was double bunking and that the 10 law library was inefficient. You won on one of those 11 issues. You submitted a bill based on 1,000 hours.
12 Should there be any apportionment or not?

13 MR. EICHNER: I don't wish to or intend to 14 duck the question, but quite honestly, I am unfamiliar 15 enough with prison litigation to know which -- how much 16 those -- the preparation, trying, and litigating of 17 those claims would necessarily relate to each other, and 18 I -- I would have to come back to, that's the real 19 issue, how much do those two interrelate.

20 For example, in this lawsuit, time spent on 21 the overmedication claim, on which there was not relief, 22 was related both from a theoretical point of view as 23 well as the actual trying of the lawsuit to the physical 24 environment, where we obtained significant relief.

25 QUESTION: Have you read our opinion on Romeo

1 last term?

2 MR. EICHNER: Yes, Your Honor.

3 QUESTION: Do you think the lawyers in that 4 case should win 100 percent on everything they claimed?
5 They lost on their major contention in this Court. I
6 think you could assume they did. We reversed the court
7 below on right to treatment. They won on some issues.
8 If you are not familiar with it, you can pass that up.
9 What I really would like to ask you --

10 MR. EICHNER: Your Honor --

11 QUESTION: Do you want to answer that?

12 MR. EICHNER: Yes and no. I want to answer it 13 in that the analysis, that is, the answer to the 14 question -- Congress intended a two-part analysis
15 determining whether or not a person is entitled to a 16 fee. The first part is a determination whether or not 17 they are prevailing parties within the meaning of the 18 Act. Once you find that the party is a prevailing 19 party, there is a separate second analysis, so in the 20 Romeo case, I can't answer specifics because I'm not 21 familiar with it enough, but the first threshold test is 22 whether or not there are prevailing parties within the 23 meaning of the statute.

24 The prevailing party issue is not presented in 25 this case. It was not appealed, and the issue is

1 whether -- what time is reasonably expended in this 2 lawsuit, and whether the district court awarded the all 3 time -- in conformity with all time reasonably expended
4 standard. And so the answer to the question in Romeo 5 would be, you would have to go through that two-step 6 process. One, are there prevailing parties, and two,
7 assuming that they were, you would exclude compensation 8 for time which was in bad faith, clearly meritless, or 9 three, wholly separable or distinguishable that they in 10 no way contributed to the ultimate result achieved.

11 QUESTION: Do you think the court, the 12 district court in this case went through this catechism 13 that you just --

14 MR. EICHNER: Yes, Justice White.

15 QUESTION: Where do you find that in its 16 opinion?

17 MR. EICHNER: The district court began with an 18 analysis of whether or not plaintiffs were a prevailing 19 party within the meaning of the statute.

20 QUESTION: Well, sure they did, and then I
21 take it that they said as long as the party receives 22 some of the relief requested, the status as a prevailing 23 party will not be jeopardized, and then they just -- and 24 rejects the suggestion that he should put aside any of 25 these claims.

1 Was there any finding that they were 2 interrelated?

3 MR. EICHNER: Yes, implicitly, Your Honor, 4 because --

5 QUESTION: Implicitly? Where is it even --

6 MR. EICHNER: I would like to explain the 7 answer to you, which is that in the portion of the fee 8 decision where the district court examined the amount of 9 the fee after finding the prevailing party issue, the 10 district court said, defendants have argued for a 11 mathematical mechanical approach, which fails to take 12 into account the interrelatedness and interconnection of 13 the various claims. Presumably --

14 QUESTION: That may well be true, but --

15 MR. EICHNER: -- by --

16 QUESTION: -- the court didn't go on and say 17 that these are interrelated claims.

18 MR. EICHNER: By rejecting an approach which 19 doesn't take into account the fact that the claims are 20 interrelated and interdependent, I would submit that it 21 is clear that the court was doing -- was finding that 22 they did interrelate and interconnect.

23 The issue in this case, presented in this case
24 is whether the district court complied with Section 25 1980(a) in its fee award; specifically, whether the

1 court was correct when it analyzed the case as a whole 2 and looked to the ultimate results achieved, thus 3 rejecting the mechanical and mathematical approach urged 4 by defendants.

5 Resolution of that question involves a narrow 6 question or issue of statutory construction. That 7 undertaking begins with the statute itself. The Fees
8 Act is a broad Congressional charter authorizing courts 9 to award a prevailing party a reasonable attorneys' fee
10 as part of costs. Congress accompanied this statute 11 with a substantial legislative history consisting of 12 both the Senate and House report, both of which have 13 been authoritatively cited by this Court. In the 14 context of attorneys' fee awards, the legislative 15 history is especially instructive in light of this 16 Court's holding in Alyeska that the circumstances under 17 which attorneys' fee awards are to be awarded and the 18 range of discretion of courts in making those awards are 19 matters for Congress to determine.

20 Congress -- In the legislative history, 21 Congress anticipated a number of issues which would 22 accompany a fee shifting statute, and provided specific 23 guidance for resolution of those issues. In a section 24 of the legislative history which addresses the method of 25 computing the amount of the fee, Congress explicitly

1 stated what the proper standard was to be.

2 "In computing the fee, counsel for the 3 prevailing party should be compensated, as is 4 traditional with attorneys for fee-paying clients, for 5 all time reasonably expended on a matter."

6 Congress provided further direction on this 7 issue by stating that proper fee computation had taken 8 place in two specific cases, the Davis versus County of 9 Los Angeles case and the Stanford Daily versus Zirker
10 case. Those cases established that the all time 11 reasonably expended standard does not permit
12 apportioning the fee award to only winning claims.

13 In the Davis case, which was a Title 7 suit, 14 defendants had argued for a proportional fee reduction.
15 The court specifically held it was not legally relevant 16 that a certain amount of limited time and effort was 17 devoted to issues which were either not litigated or 18 upon which they were not successful. Instead, the court 19 looked to the ultimate results achieved, and found that 20 plaintiff was entitled to fees for all time reasonably 21 expended.

22 In the Stanford Daily case, the court
23 similarly disapproved of a proportionality analysis and 24 rejected defendant's argument that there should be a 25 reduction in fees for the hours expended on unsuccessful

1 work. The court held that although fees were to be 2 denied for clearly meritless claims, they were to be 3 granted for legal work reasonably calculated to advance 4 their client's interest.

5 QUESTION: That is certainly a different test
6 than you suggest to us.

7 MR. EICHNER: I think it is the same test, 8 Your Honor. We are saying that the proper test is 9 looking at the case as a whole and awarding fees for all 10 time reasonably expended, and in this case --

11 QUESTION: Well, that isn't what -- I thought 12 you said you were only supposed to award fees for time 13 spent on successful claims and on other claims that are 14 interconnected or interrelated.

15 MR. EICHNER: What I said is that --

16 QUESTION: That's quite a different test than 17 awarding time spent that is reasonably calculated to 18 advance a client's interests.

19 MR. EICHNER: Once somebody is found to be a 20 prevailing party, they are entitled for all time 21 reasonably expended, and that three-part explanation 22 that I did in answer to your question was what goes into 23 a finding of what time is reasonably expended.

24 QUESTION: Counsel?

25 MR. EICHNER: Yes.

1 QUESTION: In this case, you requested an 2 enhancement fee over and above the multiplication
3 results that hourly rates would provide. The district
4 judge did not allow it. Would you view that as a 5 two-way street so that hourly charges that arguably were 6 expended reasonably by counsel but nevertheless produced 7 a poor result should be discounted?

8 MR. EICHNER: No, Your Honor. I believe
9 that --

10 QUESTION: Do you think it ought to go only 11 up, but not down?

12 MR. EICHNER: I believe the district court
13 found that the reason for not awarding an enhancement 14 factor was that the same factors and considerations as 15 the Johnson factors which go to enhancement were already 16 taken into account in the reasonable fees, so that there 17 was no reason to repeat those same factors and award 18 upwards.

19 QUESTION: Suppose --

20 MR. EICHNER: This case, I don't believe 21 presents the issue of enhancement of fees.

22 QUESTION: You would never discount.

23 While you are thinking about that, let me ask 24 you this. Suppose after you brought this lawsuit, you 25 had so impressed counsel for the hospital that they

1 agreed to everything you requested before you had even 2 taken discovery depositions, and you had only recorded
3 50 hours of time. Would you be entitled to -- Suppose 4 you charged $200 an hour. That is $10,000, I think.
5 Was that the limit -- Would that be the limit of your 6 fee?

7 MR. EICHNER: The limit of the fee would be 8 whatever hourly rate you were asking for for those 9 number of hours.

10 QUESTION: Right, that would be $10,000 in 11 this case, and you've won a victory that was probably 12 worth millions of dollars, perhaps?

13 MR. EICHNER: Yes, because it relates to -- 14 the method of awarding fees relates to the number of 15 hours, and I don't think --

16 QUESTION: You are saying results are of no 17 importance.

18 MR. EICHNER: The results are important. They 19 are one of the Johnson factors. But the determination 20 of reasonable fee is tied to the number of hours.

21 QUESTION: Well, Mr. Eichner, what was it you 22 were awarded in this case, something like $130,000?

23 MR. EICHNER: $133,000, Your Honor.

24 QUESTION: Well, what if, as Justice Powell
25 has hypothesized, the defendant agreed to do, right

1 after you had filed the complaint and the memorandum of 2 authorities in opposition to a summary judgment, because 3 the counsel for the state was so impressed by your 4 arguments, he said, well, I'll give you A, B, C, and D, 5 which turns out to be exactly what you ultimately got 6 after years of litigation? Wouldn't you be entitled to 7 something more than just hours spent, if, kind of in a 8 rather dramatic legal move, you get a whole lot without 9 spending a lot of time?

10 MR. EICHNER: Well, I come back to the same 11 point. I think that the results obtained are one of the 12 Johnson factors, and the district court considered that, 13 but I think the fee is generally tied to the number of 14 hours.

15 Congress's citation of the fee computation in 16 the Davis case and Stanford Daily case endorses a 17 two-step process for determining reasonable attorneys' 18 fees. As I said before, first is whether or not the 19 person is a prevailing party or not, and once they are 20 found to be a prevailing party, the second portion of 21 that two-step process is a look at the case as a whole 22 to see what time was reasonably expended.

23 Now, legal sources are considered reasonably 24 expended unless they are brought in bad faith, spent on 25 clearly meritless claims, or devoted to claims so wholly

1 unrelated, so distinguishable and separable, that they 2 in no way contributed to the ultimate result achieved.
3 The district court's fee analysis in this case is fully 4 consistent with the standard provided by the Act and the 5 legislative history.

6 The court analyzed whether plaintiffs were a 7 prevailing party, and found that based -- looking just 8 at the court order of relief, there was substantial 9 enough relief to find that plaintiffs were the 10 prevailing party, so much so that the court did not feel 11 it necessary to look at those issues which were mooted 12 prior to trial.

13 Secondly --

14 QUESTION: Mr. Eichner, can I interrupt you 15 with a question? Do you think the standard that the 16 district judge followed in this case or one who follows 17 the 12 Johnson factors is any different from the 18 standard followed in fixing fees, say, in an antitrust 19 case, or in a trust case, all sorts of cases where 20 courts fix fees? Do you think this is a special 21 standard, or is this just the regular standard?

22 MR. EICHNER: I think the process is generally 23 the same. I think that the civil rights area is special 24 to some extent, because Congress has singled that out as 25 a particularly important place for vigorous enforcement

1 of civil rights, and found that the award of attorneys' 2 fees was particularly tied to the enforcement of civil 3 rights, and therefore directed the courts to use the 4 broadest and most flexible standards to ensure the 5 enforcement of the civil rights.

6 QUESTION: But do you think that the award 7 given in this case was more liberal than would have been 8 appropriate in any other kind of litigation?

9 MR. EICHNER: No, I don't believe that the 10 award in this case was more liberal at all. I thought 11 you were asking whether it is generally the same.

12 QUESTION: I frankly don't see much difference 13 between the Johnson factors and factors I run into in 14 countless other situations.

15 MR. EICHNER: No, there is -- there is a 16 difference of views within the circuits between the 17 so-called Johnson factors and the Loadstar analysis, and 18 various courts have been critical of the Johnson factors 19 because they find them not that precise and hard to work 20 with, and they have gone to a Loadstar analysis.

21 That issue is not presented in this case, and 22 regardless of which approach you use, that is, whether 23 you use Johnson or Loadstar, an issue which needs to be 24 determined prior to deciding which approach is going to 25 be the determination of what constitutes compensable

1 hours, and that is what the issue is in this case, and 2 that needs to be -- that's an issue which must be 3 decided prior to employing either one of those standards.

4 We aren't necessarily arguing for the Johnson
5 factors per se. We would suggest that that is one 6 permissible approach. It is the factors which were 7 specifically endorsed in the legislative history, and 8 the district court's employment of the Johnson factors 9 was correct. It was not incorrect.

10 After the district court had resolved the 11 prevailing party issue, it then turned to the amount of 12 the fee. Defendants had argued for an automatic across 13 the board reduction in fees, suggesting that the amount 14 of the fee should be tied to the amount of court-ordered 15 relief.

16 The district court properly rejected those 17 suggestions, finding that such an approach was improper 18 for a number of reasons, that it was -- that is, it was 19 incapable of giving consideration to the relative 20 importance of issues. It doesn't address the 21 interrelation of issues, the difficulty of identifying 22 issues, nor the extent of prevailing on various issues.

23 Instead, the court looked to the Johnson
24 factors to analyze the case and specifically the results
25 obtained factor of Johnson to analyze the ultimate

1 accomplishments of the case as a whole. The district 2 court realized that in the seamless fabric of those 3 accomplishments, that is, vindication of plaintiff's 4 constitutional rights, and substantial changes in the 5 treatment environment, no time was spent on clearly 6 meritless or unrelated claims.

7 By looking at the case as a whole and 8 evaluating the claims within the context of the ultimate 9 results achieved, the district court exercised 10 discretion in the manner intended by Congress.

11 With that as a background, let's examine what 12 the results were of this lawsuit. First of all,
13 plaintiffs had to establish that there was a 14 constitutional right to treatment. Defendants had 15 vigorously fought against it, arguing that, one, there 16 was no such a right, and two, to the extent that such a 17 right existed, it would be inapplicable to this class of 18 plaintiffs. The court found the existence of such a 19 right, and then proceeded to analyze the six aspects of 20 the treatment environment policies and conditions.

21 The court awarded court order relief on five 22 out of six aspects: physical environment; individual 23 treatment plans; least restrictive environment;
24 visitation and telephone; and seclusion and restraint.
25 In view of the substantial relief that plaintiffs really

1 did accomplish in this lawsuit, it is easy to understand 2 why the district court as a -- found that, "The 3 significance of this case cannot be measured in dollars
4 and cents. It involves constitutional and civil rights 5 of the plaintiff class, and resulted in a number of 6 changes regarding their conditions and treatment at the 7 state hospitals. Not only should plaintiffs be 8 considered prevailing parties within the meaning of the 9 statute, they are parties who have obtained relief of 10 significant import. Plaintiff's relief affects not only 11 them, but numerous other institutionalized patients 12 similarly situated."

13 It is also important to point out that not 14 only is the proportionality formula unsupported by the 15 applicable law, but it discourages precisely the zealous 16 representation which the Fees Act seeks and the Code of 17 Professional Responsibility requires. As pointed out 18 and argued in some detail in the amicus brief filed by 19 the American Bar Association, under the Code of 20 Professional Responsibility, attorneys are required to 21 represent clients zealously within the law. If the case 22 is novel or complex, it is difficult to predict which of 23 several good faith arguments plaintiffs would ultimately 24 prevail upon, and therefore to represent a client 25 zealously and ethically, counsel must explore various

1 aspects of the case, develop all the evidence, and 2 present supportable issues to the court.

3 To reward only those successful claims
4 undercompensates the necessary early explanatory stages 5 of the lawsuit, invites overly conservative tactics, and 6 would prohibit high risk but deserving actions
7 entirely. Petitioner's narrow construction penalizes 8 counsel for acting in conformity with the canons and 9 zealously pursuing the client's interests.

10 Not only has the state argued for an 11 unsupportable standard, they have also, we believe, 12 mischaracterized some of the facts in this lawsuit.
13 Over and over again, they have made statements that 14 plaintiffs prevailed -- lost on more things than they 15 won. Without reciting the long list of the 16 accomplishments, I would simply refer the court to the 17 chart which begins on Page 25 of our brief, which 18 analyzes in some detail the claims of constitutional 19 violations that were in the complaint, and then compares 20 those claims with the relief actually ordered by the 21 court.

22 Coming back to the ethical issue involved, as 23 some courts have noted, it hardly furthers the mandate
24 to use the broadest and most flexible remedies available 25 to us to enforce the civil rights law if we so directly

1 discourage innovative and vigorous delving in a changing 2 area of the law. That mandate is best served by 3 encouraging attorneys to take the most advantageous 4 position they can that is possible in good faith with 5 respect to their clients.

6 Defendants have urged adoption of what they 7 call a standard principle to guide the lower courts in 8 fashioning fees under Section 1988. The appropriate 9 standard and method for applying the Fees Act has 10 already been articulated and delineated by Congress in 11 the Act and its legislative history. In making the fee 12 award in this case, the district court acted in 13 consonance with the standard and method of analysis 14 intended by Congress.

15 Unless there are any further questions, that 16 is the presentation.

17 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, Mr. Eichner.

18 Do you have anything further, Mr. Boicourt?

19 QUESTION: I have a question that is 20 tangential. I don't think it matters to the case. Did 21 you find out in the regular equity cases in state or 22 federal courts any instance where counsel fees were 23 questioned on appeal? Not in a civil rights case.

24 ORAL ARGUMENT OF MICHAEL L. BOICOURT, ESQ., 25 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS - REBUTTAL

1 MR. BOICOURT: I'm not sure I really
2 researched that subject. I have been looking at counsel 3 fees in civil rights cases.

4 QUESTION: That's all right. I was just 5 wondering. It doesn't matter at all to me.

6 MR. BOICOURT: I want to briefly discuss the 7 matter of legislative history which has been discussed 8 by my opponent this morning. Congress established or 9 set forth, said it was passing Section 1988 for two 10 purposes, to attract competent counsel to civil rights
11 litigation and to avoid windfalls to attorneys. Now, 12 competent counsel hopefully will competently plead and 13 competently narrow the scope of their litigation before 14 it gets into the courtroom. The Act has secured that 15 purpose. Counsel are being attracted. Before 1976, 16 there was no provision for shifting of fees.

17 More importantly is the matter of windfalls to 18 attorneys. I submit that an attorney who tries to 19 establish a civil rights claim and fails does not 20 succeed, loses. The result is the court -- or the 21 defendant is vindicated with respect to that claim. If 22 he is compensated for his hours spent on that claim, he 23 is receiving a windfall, and Congress said that was one 24 of the purposes of the Act to avoid.

25 We also discussed the language in the 1 legislative history that says counsel for a prevailing

2 party should be paid is traditional with attorneys
3 compensated by a fee-paying client. Now, in the first 4 place, it says for a prevailing party, and my position
5 obviously is that first you have to prevail on the claim 6 to be a prevailing party for attorneys' fees purposes, 7 but the same argument was presented to the District of 8 Columbia Circuit in Copeland versus Marshall, and their 9 response was, and I quote, "It does not follow that the 10 amount of time actually expended is the amount of time
11 reasonably expended. In the private sector billing 12 judgment is an important component in fee setting."

13 That court concluded that time spent on 14 non-prevailing claims should not be compensated.

15 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.
16 The case is submitted.

17 (Whereupon, at 2:59 o'clock p.m., the case in 18 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
