P R O C E E D I N G S

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments first this morning in Landon against Plasencia.

Mr. Schulder, you may proceed whenever you are ready.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF ELLIOTT SCHULDER, ESQ.,
ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER

MR. SCHULDER: Thank you.

Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the Court, the question presented in this immigration case is whether a permanent resident alien who is believed by immigration authorities to be excludable from the United States on his return from a trip abroad is entitled to litigate the issues of his entry and excludability in a deportation hearing, as the court of appeals of the Ninth Circuit held in this case, rather than in an exclusion hearing, as Congress mandated in the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Before proceeding to the facts of the case, I would like to put this question into some perspective by briefly reviewing some of the pertinent statutes.

The Immigration Act preserves a long-standing distinction between aliens arriving at the border seeking admission to this country and aliens who are already within the United States. Aliens who are

1 arriving at the border seeking admission or readmission 2 who are believed not entitled to enter are subject to 3 exclusion proceedings. Aliens who are within the United 4 States who are believed not entitled to remain are 5 subject to deportation proceedings.

6           The Immigration Act provides various 7 categories of excludable aliens, and also provides 8 procedures governing the exclusion of inadmissible 9 aliens.

10           Under 8 USC 1225, every alien arriving at a 11 U.S. port of entry and seeking admission or readmission 12 to this country is subject to inspection by an 13 immigration officer. If the alien does not appear 14 beyond a doubt to the immigration officer to be entitled 15 to land, he is detained for an exclusion hearing that is 16 conducted before an immigration judge.

17           These exclusion procedures apply whenever an 18 alien attempts an entry into the United States. The 19 term "entry" is defined in the Act, 8 USC 1101(a)(13), 20 as any coming of an alien into the United States from a 21 foreign country. However, there is an exception to this 22 broad definition in the case of permanent resident 23 aliens. A return to the United States following an 24 unintentional departure by a lawful permanent resident 25 alien is not regarded as an entry.

1           In Rosenberg versus Fleuti, this Court held 2 that an innocent, casual, and brief trip abroad is 3 deemed not to have been intended as meaningfully 4 interruptive of an alien's permanent residence. The 5 statute interpreted -- the Court interpreted the statute 6 in this way in order to protect resident aliens from 7 unsuspected risks and unintended consequences of wholly 8 innocent actions.

9           One of the factors that the Court noted in 10 Fleuti as being crucial in determining the nature of an 11 alien's trip is whether the purpose of the trip was to 12 accomplish an object contrary to the policies reflected 13 in our immigration laws.

14           The facts of this case show that Respondent, a 15 native and citizen of El Salvador, was admitted to the 16 United States as a permanent resident alien in 1970. On 17 June 29th, 1975, Respondent was returning from a two-day 18 trip to Mexico with her husband when she was arrested at 19 the border for attempting to smuggle six illegal aliens 20 into this country. Respondent was detained for an 21 exclusion hearing to determine whether she was 22 excludable under a provision of the Immigration Act that 23 provides for the exclusion of any alien who knowingly 24 and for gain aids the attempted illegal entry of aliens 25 into this country.

1 QUESTION: Mr. Schulder, was the husband
2 charged with any offense?

3 MR. SCHULDER: No, the husband is a United 4 States citizen.

5 QUESTION: I know that, but was he charged 6 with any offense?

7 MR. SCHULDER: No, he was not charged with any 8 offense, Your Honor, as far as I am aware. The record 9 doesn't reflect otherwise.

10 The exclusion hearing was held the 11 following --

12 QUESTION: Mr. Schulder, is it the 13 government's position that assuming an exclusion 14 proceeding is the proper proceeding, that the alien is 15 entitled to due process at that hearing?

16 MR. SCHULDER: Absolutely, yes.

17 QUESTION: And what process is due, do you 18 think?

19 MR. SCHULDER: Well, as this Court noted in 20 Kwong Hai Chew versus Colding, that a resident alien 21 returning from a trip abroad is entitled to notice of 22 the charges and an opportunity -- and a hearing and an 23 opportunity to respond to those charges.

24 QUESTION: Do you think some specific period 25 of time has to be given in which to prepare for the

1 hearing?

2 MR. SCHULDER: Well, I am not sure that the 3 Constitution mandates a fixed period of time. The 4 period would have to be sufficient for the purposes of 5 preparing adequately to respond to the charges in any 6 given situation.

7 QUESTION: Mr. Schulder, Kwong Hai Chew just 8 construed a regulation, didn't it? It didn't involve 9 any constitutional holding.

10 MR. SCHULDER: Well, that's correct. The 11 Court construed --

12 QUESTION: What about the language in Knauff
13 versus Shaughnessy, that whatever the procedure 14 authorized by Congress is, it is due process so far as 15 an alien denied entry is concerned?

16 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the Court in Kwong Hai
17 Chew strongly suggested that it would have 18 constitutional problems with the regulation that it 19 construed.

20 QUESTION: But it certainly didn't hold that.

21 MR. SCHULDER: It did not go so far as to hold 22 that there was an absolute --

23 QUESTION: You treat that case as though it 24 was a holding.

25 QUESTION: Yes.

1 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the Immigration --

2 QUESTION: Your practice is now --

3 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the Immigration Service
4 has accepted that case, and the District of Columbia --

5 QUESTION: You mean the implications of the 6 case?

7 MR. SCHULDER: The implications of the case,
8 and the District of Columbia Circuit's decision in Kwong 9 Hai Chew versus Rogers that an alien, resident alien is 10 entitled to due process --

11 QUESTION: Do you think the Circuit Court of 12 the District of Columbia can overrule the Knauff case?

13 MR. SCHULDER: No, Your Honor. What I am
14 saying is that the Immigration Service has essentially 15 acceded to the strong suggestion by this Court in Kwong
16 Hai Chew versus Colding that any procedure involving a 17 returning resident alien that appears to be contrary to 18 due process would be struck down under the due process 19 clause.

20 QUESTION: Well, of course, naturally, any 21 procedure contrary to the due process would be struck
22 down under the due process clause, but Knauff says
23 whatever procedure Congress provides is due process.

24 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct. But this Court
25 in Kwong Hai Chew and in the later cases that discuss

1 Kwong Hai Chew do, I believe, make the point -- Kwong
2 Hai Chew was not a due process case as such, but in 3 Rosenberg versus Fleuti, for example, the Court
4 described Kwong Hai Chew -- the decision in Kwong Hai
5 Chew as having constitutional overtones. I concede that 6 there was no absolute constitutional holding in that 7 case, but for these purposes, in any event, the 8 Immigration Service has accepted the proposition that a 9 returning resident alien is entitled to a hearing and -- 10 notice and a hearing, an opportunity to respond to 11 charges.

12           QUESTION: But the Service has not, as I 13 understand it, drafted separate regulations to cover the 14 kind of hearing that is required for a returning 15 permanent resident as opposed to a brand new person. I 16 mean, you don't have anything other than deportation 17 regulations and exclusion hearing regulations.

18           MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

19           QUESTION: So that you don't in your actual 20 rules differentiate between the two kinds of cases?

21           MR. SCHULDER: Well, the regulations 22 themselves do not differentiate, but the Board of 23 Immigration Appeals in its decisions has differentiated 24 between --

25           QUESTION: Well, can we tell from its

1 decisions, for example, the answer to Justice O'Connor's 2 question? What kind of advance notice is the returning 3 permanent resident entitled to receive before being put 4 on trial? Ten minutes, or 24 hours, or what?

5 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the only standard that I
6 am specifically aware of, Your Honor, is the Board of 7 Immigration Appeals has said that an alien may be 8 excluded on the basis of charges that are not 9 necessarily included in the formal written notice of the 10 charges received prior to a hearing. However, the alien 11 is entitled to a reasonable opportunity to respond to 12 those charges.

13 I am not aware of any specific holding of the 14 Board of Immigration Appeals that --

15 QUESTION: It sounds like there is no
16 requirement of advanced notice in advance of the 17 hearings, if I understand you correctly. And here, what 18 was the notice? I don't think we can even tell from the 19 record. It may have been ten minutes.

20 MR. SCHULDER: It is not absolutely clear from 21 the record what the notice was.

22 QUESTION: Is there any requirement that the 23 person be advised of any right to be represented by 24 counsel?

25 MR. SCHULDER: Yes, the Immigration Service's

1 regulations provide that the immigration judge must 2 advise the alien of the right to obtain counsel --

3 QUESTION: How long in advance of the 4 hearing?

5 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the --

6 QUESTION: Right at the outset of the hearing, 7 is what happened here.

8 MR. SCHULDER: At the outset of the hearing, 9 the alien is so advised, but the notice of charges that 10 is required --

11 QUESTION: Does that advice include advice as 12 to how to find a lawyer?

13 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the Service's current 14 regulations provide that the alien is to be informed --

15 QUESTION: At the time of the hearing here.

16 MR. SCHULDER: At the time of the hearing 17 here, there was no such provision that the alien be 18 informed of the availability of --

19 QUESTION: So the hearing as conducted in this 20 case did not comply with the regulations that you now 21 have in effect. Would not have complied had those 22 regulations been in effect.

23 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

24 At the conclusion of Respondent's exclusion
25 hearing, the immigration judge found that Respondent was

1 excludable based on clear, convincing, and unequivocal 2 evidence. This is the same standard that applies in 3 deportation hearings. In addition, the judge found that 4 Respondent had made an entry because she engaged in 5 conduct contrary to the immigration laws. Thus, under 6 Fleuti, Respondent's departure was not unintended within 7 the exception to the entry doctrine in the Immigration 8 Act.

9           After exhausting her administrative appeals, 10 Respondent petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus in the 11 U.S. District Court for the Central District of 12 California. The District Court remanded the case to the 13 Immigration Service with directions to proceed against 14 Respondent, if at all, only in deportation proceedings.

15           The Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit
16 affirmed and held that whenever a resident alien 17 returning from a trip abroad claims that his trip was 18 not meaningfully interruptive of his permanent 19 residence, the issues of entry and excludability must be 20 litigated in deportation and not in exclusion 21 proceedings. Thus, under the Ninth Circuit's holding, 22 every returning resident alien coming back from a trip
23 abroad, no matter the duration or no matter the purpose
24 for which that trip was undertaken, is automatically 25 entitled to return to this country so long as that alien

1 claims that his departure was not meaningfully 2 interruptive.

3           There is no basis in law for the Court of 4 Appeals decision. It is clear that the Court of Appeals 5 in this case, by holding that resident aliens are 6 entitled to deportation proceedings, has disregarded the 7 clear distinction that Congress drew in the Immigration
8 Act between exclusion proceedings and deportation 9 proceedings. If there is one thing that is clear in the 10 area of immigration law, it is that Congress has broad 11 authority over immigration matters, including 12 particularly the admission of aliens into this country.
13 The Ninth Circuit's decision in this case has interfered 14 with the Congress's exercise of its authority.

15           The court purported to base its decision on 16 Kwong Hai Chew versus Colding, and the subsequent 17 decision of the D.C. Circuit in Kwong Hai Chew versus 18 Rogers, which established that the immigration 19 authorities at an exclusion hearing have the burden of 20 proving excludability.

21           The Ninth Circuit in this case assumed that 22 the Immigration Service has ignored the burden of proof
23 requirement of the D.C. Circuit in Kwong Hai Chew versus 24 Rogers, but in fact, as we show in our brief, the 25 Immigration Service has accorded returning resident

1 aliens a hearing at which the government bears the 2 burden of proving excludability, so that the court's 3 decision is based on a totally erroneous impression of 4 the type of procedures that are available at an 5 exclusion hearing to a resident alien.

6           Respondent has tried to defend the holding 7 below by raising some additional arguments. Respondent 8 first argues that the procedures available to permanent 9 resident aliens in exclusion proceedings do not satisfy
10 due process standards. We disagree with Respondent's 11 framing of the issue here. The government, as I
12 mentioned in response to Justice O'Connor's question, 13 fully agrees that resident aliens should receive 14 procedures that meet due process standards, but that 15 does not mean that resident aliens are entitled to a 16 deportation hearing rather than to the exclusion hearing
17 that Congress provided for in the Act.

18           If the procedures at exclusion hearings need 19 to be strengthened to meet due process standards, the 20 remedy is to provide proper safeguards in exclusion 21 hearings, not to provide aliens with a right to 22 deportation hearings, which is simply contrary to 23 Congress's decision in establishing exclusion hearings
24 in the Immigration Act.

25           Respondent also argues --

1 QUESTION: May I interrupt once more? Is it
2 the government's position that at this particular 3 hearing, this person did receive due process?

4 MR. SCHULDER: Yes, we believe that Respondent
5 did receive due process, but we like to point out that 6 Respondent did not really raise the due process issues 7 that she is now raising here in the courts below. For 8 example, the claim about inadequate notice was never 9 raised either in the district court or in the court of 10 appeals.

11 QUESTION: The due process point.

12 MR. SCHULDER: That is clearly an argument, 13 yes.

14 QUESTION: What you really mean is, they got 15 due process on this type of a hearing, but it wouldn't 16 be due process on a deportation hearing. Are you 17 arguing that there are different degrees of due 18 process?

19 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the deportation --

20 QUESTION: Is that your position?

21 MR. SCHULDER: I'm not --

22 QUESTION: You have different types of due
23 process?

24 MR. SCHULDER: There are different types of 25 due process, depending on the --

1 QUESTION: Some are a whole lot, and some are 2 a little?

3 MR. SCHULDER: Well, our position is that it
4 is not absolutely necessary that the precise procedures 5 that happen to be available in deportation hearings have 6 to be provided in exclusion hearings. There are 7 different levels. That is true.

8 QUESTION: But as I understand you, you do
9 concede that the process required in the exclusion of a 10 permanent resident alien may be greater than the process 11 required for an alien who is not a permanent alien.

12 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

13 QUESTION: But you also say that the process 14 given here satisfies your concept of that intermediate 15 level of process that the Constitution requires.

16 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct, but the point, 17 the major point that we make here is that even if there 18 was a problem here in terms of the process that was 19 provided, the Ninth Circuit's remedy was totally wrong.

20 QUESTION: What would the proper -- you say
21 the remedy isn't to require a deportation hearing.

22 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

23 QUESTION: The remedy is to require sort of an 24 intermediate hearing.

25 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

1 QUESTION: Now, how should that be done,
2 assuming that we thought you were wrong on the adequacy 3 of the process in this case? How should the rules for 4 such a hearing be formulated? You are saying, well, 5 they don't have deportation, and if you conceded that 6 the exclusion rules were not adequate in this 7 intermediate category, what is to be done in the 8 government's view?

9 MR. SCHULDER: Well, if the Immigration
10 Service is informed of the deficiencies in any of its 11 procedures in exclusion hearings, it should be -- it 12 would provide for regulations, I would think.

13 QUESTION: I thought you said that they should 14 improve the exclusionary hearing.

15 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct, but I'm saying 16 that the Service most likely would provide specifically 17 for regulations that would deal with permanent resident 18 aliens in an exclusion setting.

19 QUESTION: Well, could we tell them what to 20 do? Could we tell them what type of rules to set out?

21 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the Court conceivably
22 could say that the particular procedures --

23 QUESTION: Conceivably, or could?

24 MR. SCHULDER: The Court could certainly say 25 that the procedures that were made available here were

1 not adequate, but the point that I was trying to make 2 earlier is that the issue really is not properly
3 presented here, because it hadn't been presented either 4 in the district court or the court of appeals, and that 5 because of the peculiar posture of the case, there is 6 really no basis for relying on this as an alternative 7 ground for affirmance, since the proper remedy if due 8 process was not provided would not be to send the case 9 back for a deportation hearing, but instead to send the 10 case back for an exclusion hearing.

11           QUESTION: The case has sort of a peculiar 12 procedural history, because the alien was successful in 13 persuading, I guess, both the magistrate and the 14 district court and the court of appeals that she was 15 entitled to a deportation hearing.

16           MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

17           QUESTION: So there really wasn't an occasion 18 for her to say, well, in the alternative, if I don't get 19 that, I should at least get something more than I 20 received in this particular case.

21           MR. SCHULDER: Well, she certainly had the 22 opportunity to raise that claim in the district court.

23           QUESTION: Did she raise it?

24           MR. SCHULDER: Well, she did argue that she 25 was entitled to the procedural safeguards of the 1 deportation hearing, but what the record actually shows 2 is that she was arguing for an entitlement to entry into 3 the country and being placed in deportation proceedings

4 rather than to the same types of safeguards that happen
5 to be available in the deportation context.

6           QUESTION: Well, Mr. Schulder, just to clarify
7 it, as far as the government is concerned, this Court 8 could be asked to simply determine whether she was 9 entitled to a deportation proceeding or an exclusion 10 proceeding, and if it were determined that she were 11 entitled to an exclusion proceeding, just remand it for 12 that without attempting to spell out all of the 13 requirements for that proceeding. Is that your 14 position?

15           MR. SCHULDER: That's correct, Your Honor.

16           Respondent attempts to justify the court of 17 appeals decision by arguing that somehow it is unfair 18 for a resident alien to be -- to have both the issues of 19 entry and excludability turn on a single immigration 20 offense. In other words, in this case, Respondent was 21 found to have attempted to smuggle illegal aliens into 22 the country, and that finding established both that she 23 was excludable and also that she had made a meaningful 24 interruption of her permanent residence, and thus had 25 been attempting an entry.

1 But we have responded to this argument in our 2 reply brief at Pages 6 through 8, and I would 3 essentially like to rely on that, but I would also like 4 to point out that Respondent's argument essentially is 5 that the Immigration Act requires the Immigration
6 Service to admit a resident alien into the country
7 because of an alleged immigration violation.

8 In other words, if the entry and excludability 9 issues both turn on an immigration offense rather than 10 on two other factors, technical violations, then the 11 Immigration Service must allow the alien to enter. We 12 don't think that Congress conceivably intended this 13 result when it established separate proceedings for 14 exclusion and deportation of aliens.

15 Finally, I must emphasize that there is no
16 danger of a resident alien being excluded if he has not 17 made an entry. If the evidence in an exclusion hearing 18 shows that the trip was in fact innocent, casual, and 19 brief, the exclusion hearing must be terminated, and the 20 alien must be allowed into the United States. So that 21 there is no danger here that an alien will be found 22 excludable where in fact the evidence shows that the 23 resident alien, at least under the terms of the 24 immigration statute, was not in fact making an entry.

25 I would like to reserve the remainder of my 1 time.

2                   QUESTION: May I ask one other question on the 3 meaningful departure exception to the general rule?
4 What point in time is relevant for determining the 5 alien's intent when a criminal activity is disclosed as 6 we assume was true here? Is it important whether the 7 intent to engage in criminal activity was held at the 8 time of departure, or is it sufficient if it is at the 9 time of return?

10                  MR. SCHULDER: We submit that it is sufficient 11 at the time of returning to the country. In fact, the 12 Ninth Circuit held to that effect in the Palatian case.

13                  QUESTION: And you would satisfy that clearly 14 here even if -- assuming your proof is correct.

15                  MR. SCHULDER: Absolutely. In fact,
16 Respondent's testimony acknowledged -- she herself
17 acknowledged that she did intend to bring these aliens 18 in illegally. The only issue at the hearing was one of 19 whether she had done it for gain or not. That went to 20 the excludability question, not to the entry question.

21                  QUESTION: On that point, on the gain, the 22 trial examiner, the judge, whatever he was called, on 23 Page 33 of the abstract asked one of the witnesses if it 24 was the witness's understanding that he was going to pay 25 the alien an amount of $200 after he arrived in Los

1 Angeles, and he said yes, he had that understanding, 2 although he didn't indicate whether it was based on 3 conversation with the alien.

4           One thing puzzled me in reading this. I 5 wonder where the trial judge got the basis for that 6 question. Does the trial judge look at affidavits 7 during the hearing that are not made a part of the 8 record?

9           MR. SCHULDER: I'm not exactly aware, but I 10 believe there was a statement -- I believe there were 11 statements from the alien witnesses that were admitted.

12          QUESTION: And would they be things that the 13 trial examiner would look at in an ex parte fashion 14 during a hearing of this kind?

15          MR. SCHULDER: Well, these were statements 16 that were, I believe, admitted into evidence. They are 17 part of the administrative record.

18          QUESTION: I see. Thank you.

19          QUESTION: Mr. Schulder, where is the 20 Respondent now? Is she in this country?

21          MR. SCHULDER: Well, she was paroled into this 22 country by the district director. As far as we know, 23 she is living in this country. That's correct.

24          CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Manulkin.

25          ORAL ARGUMENT OF GARY H. MANULKIN, ESQ.,

1                   ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT

2                   MR. MANULKIN: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
3 please the Court, I would like to begin argument with a 4 little discussion of the manner of the framing of the 5 issues by the court below, by the Petitioner, and by the 6 Respondent, because I think that will tend to simplify, 7 at least for my purposes, further argument, the 8 reasoning behind our argument or behind our briefs, and 9 behind the decision and the rationale of the court below.

10                  The court below stated the issue as whether 11 Plasencia was entitled to have her violation of the 12 immigration laws and the purpose of her trip determined 13 in deportation rather than exclusion proceedings. Now, 14 neither the Petitioner nor the Respondent --

15                  QUESTION: What by the way of notice, for 16 example, would be greater in the deportation proceeding 17 than in the exclusion?

18                  MR. MANULKIN: In the -- I am sorry. Are you 19 asking whether the notice is different in the two, 20 deportation and exclusion?

21                  QUESTION: Yes. Wouldn't she have had more 22 notice in order to meet the problem she was facing?

23                  MR. MANULKIN: Yes. In a deportation
24 proceeding, the Title 8 of the Code of Federal 25 Regulations, Section 242, does require seven days'

1 notice be given to a deportee.

2 QUESTION: I am not talking about the number
3 of days. The content of the notice.

4 MR. MANULKIN: Well, the content is 5 different --

6 QUESTION: So that she would know what it was 7 she was being charged with.

8 MR. MANULKIN: From the record -- I was not 9 present at the time of the hearing, but from the record, 10 I can only determine that the notice was written to her 11 a few minutes before the judge proceeded, the 12 immigration judge in this case proceeded with the 13 presentation of the case and allowed the trial attorney 14 to go forward, and from the record again, I only discern 15 that the judge read that you are being charged with 16 aiding and abetting the entry of aliens into the United 17 States for gain, the illegal entry of those aliens, 18 although I will say that the notice itself was a little 19 difficult to read, and I noticed that someone in fact 20 had to make some marks over it to be read.

21 Now, in a deportation proceeding, the notice
22 is somewhat different. There is an order to show cause 23 that is issued on the Respondent that has a number of 24 factual allegations, such as in her case it would have 25 said, you are a native and citizen of El Salvador, you

1 entered the United States as a permanent resident on 2 whatever date it was in 1970, March, 1970, and you left 3 the United States and departed from the United States on 4 such and so date, and you were charged with, and found 5 with aliens in your automobile, upon your re-entry to 6 the United States on such and so date.

7           And then, after those allegations of fact are 8 being charged, then it will say the legal ground for 9 charge of deportability. In this case, it would have 10 said that therefore, you are excludable from the United 11 States under Section 212(a)(31) of the Immigration and 12 Nationality Act. Now, that is the way a deportation
13 notice would in fact be presented to her seven days 14 before the hearing was to commence, and then, of course, 15 at that hearing it is simply an arraignment type of a 16 hearing, where she is just asked to plead, do you admit 17 the facts and admit deportability or deny them?

18           If in fact she has counsel present, counsel in 19 almost all instances will ask for some additional time 20 in which to review the evidence against her.

21           Now, in an exclusion proceeding such as this 22 at the border, it is extremely difficult, most 23 obviously, for any alien who does not speak our language 24 and is -- in this case, Mrs. Plasencia, of course, was 25 at San Isidro, 100 miles from her home in Los Angeles,

1 and it was extremely difficult for her at that remote
2 location to obtain counsel with approximately maybe 12
3 hours' notice. It is hard to tell from the record. It 4 looks as though she was arrested the evening before, and 5 the hearing concluded at 11:00 a.m. the next morning, so 6 she probably had around 12 hours to obtain counsel.
7 They were not wealthy people, and so they may very well 8 have had to have contacted one of the organizations in 9 Los Angeles that were able to do pro bono or other kinds 10 of free representation.

11           QUESTION: Mr. Manulkin, getting back to what 12 the government said, suppose the rule is changed which 13 says simply that at an expulsion hearing you have the 14 exact same as the deportation hearing. Would you be 15 here?

16           MR. MANULKIN: Well, the difficulty that we 17 feel there is with that type of a rule would be the 18 preclusion of all of those sections of the Immigration 19 Act that are not regulation but statutory sections, such 20 as a stay of deportation in Section 243(h), which she 21 would very possibly --

22           QUESTION: You just want to rewrite the 23 statute.

24           MR. MANULKIN: Well, we certainly don't -- 25 yes, we certainly don't want to cause a multiplicity of 1 litigation.

2 QUESTION: Or rather, you want us to rewrite
3 the statute.

4 MR. MANULKIN: What we are asking the Court 5 to --

6 QUESTION: You don't really want us to do
7 that, do you?

8 MR. MANULKIN: No. We do not, Justice. What 9 we basically wish for this Court to do is to recognize 10 the Respondent in the position of --

11 QUESTION: What more can we do than say that 12 they must give due process?

13 MR. MANULKIN: I think Chew v. Colding is our 14 answer. I think the Chew v. Colding decision in 1953 is 15 the answer. If you assimilate Mrs. Plasencia to the 16 status of a continuing permanent resident who continues 17 to reside in the United States even after and even 18 during a brief visit outside the United States, then she 19 must be given deportation proceedings, if she has in 20 fact assimilated to that status.

21 QUESTION: Chew had simply taken passage on an 22 American ship, hadn't he? He hadn't deliberately left 23 the country the way your client had.

24 MR. MANULKIN: In fact, I believe he was an 25 American merchant seaman, that's correct, yes, and he

1 had --

2 QUESTION: Yes, on an American ship.

3 MR. MANULKIN: On a ship, and for four months
4 he had been gone from the United States, and he was 5 without any visible family, or there were no particular 6 hardships in terms of his home. His home was the ship.
7 And also, he was also charged with a violation of the 8 policies of the immigration laws in that his presence in 9 the United States the Attorney General felt would be 10 opposed to the national interest, and in that regard he 11 was excludable, and of course in our case it is similar.

12 QUESTION: But he didn't deliberately leave
13 for foreign soil, the way your client did.

14 QUESTION: And he didn't bring back illegal 15 aliens, either, did he?

16 MR. MANULKIN: No. No, he did not bring back 17 illegal aliens. We would argue that the evidence is not 18 completely clear in this case whether Mrs. Plasencia, if 19 in fact there had been a charge of smuggling aliens, 20 would have been convicted of a charge of aiding and 21 abetting illegal entry, and that her husband in fact was 22 driving the car.

23 QUESTION: Mr. Manulkin, if we could go back
24 to the Chew case for a minute --

25 MR. MANULKIN: Yes.

1 QUESTION: -- would you agree that the Chew
2 decision does not give returning resident aliens a right
3 to treatment that is identical to that of a continuously 4 present resident?

5 MR. MANULKIN: No. No, I would not agree with 6 that.

7 QUESTION: You don't agree.

8 MR. MANULKIN: And the reason I don't agree
9 with that is because of the language in the Chew v.
10 Colding, that specific language that says, "to protect a 11 status described in those cases as assimilated to that 12 of an alien continuously residing and physically present 13 in the United States," that Chew was to be considered in 14 that light, and then, of course, the Chew v. Rogers 15 decision, which was five years later, in 1958. The D.C.
16 Circuit, upon remand from this Court, made the 17 determination that we will -- the Court will remand for 18 deportation proceedings Mr. Chew, and I think that is a 19 correction that we have to make of the government's 20 brief. If you read the last sentence, in fact, of the 21 Chew v. Rogers decision, it specifically says we are 22 remanding for deportation proceedings.

23 QUESTION: Well, all that shows is that the 24 District of Columbia Circuit agrees with the Ninth 25 Circuit.

1           MR. MANULKIN: Yes, that is true, and agrees, 2 they felt, agreed with the Supreme Court of the United 3 States.

4           QUESTION: Well, Chew was actually decided 5 prior to the Immigration Act of 1952, when the Congress
6 codified all of these immigration policies. The concept 7 of entry before 1952 was purely a judicial one. It was 8 codified in 1952.

9           MR. MANULKIN: I believe, Your Honor, that the 10 case was in fact -- you are right -- begun before 1952, 11 but in actuality this Court's decision was rendered in 12 1953, after the 1952 Immigration Act.

13          QUESTION: Yes, but it didn't purport to 14 construe the 1952 Act.

15          MR. MANULKIN: Well, no, it did in one sense.
16 Section 101.813 of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 17 which defined entry, they did in the footnotes describe 18 some of the Congressional intent as to the reasoning 19 behind this change that was upcoming in the '52 Act in 20 that statute, which dealt with the harshness of the 21 strict entry rule, and it dealt very carefully with the 22 64 years, as it stated in the footnotes, of cases that 23 had come before, that had tried to accept to that strict 24 harshness.

25          QUESTION: Well, are you suggesting that Chew

1 when the 1952 Act wasn't before the Court, attempted to 2 cast doubt on the 1952 Act?

3 MR. MANULKIN: No. It basically was talking
4 about what the definition of entry was to be in the 1952
5 Act, and by the time the Court's decision in fact was 6 published, the '52 Act was history. It had in fact been 7 promulgated, and passed by Congress.

8 I think I would like at this point to again 9 restate the issue difference in terms of the emphasis by 10 the government and the Respondent. The government 11 states the charge of excludability itself, just the 12 charge calls for a conclusion of meaningful departure, 13 and therefore calls for a conclusion of exclusion rather 14 than deportation, not the proof of the charge, the 15 making of the charge by the Immigration Service.

16 The Respondent emphasizes that the person is a 17 returning permanent resident who has lived in the United 18 States, has a home in the United States, had been 19 admitted to the United States as a permanent resident at 20 one time, had gone through all of the inspection 21 process, had been given a permanent resident card, and 22 then made a brief visit, a two-day visit to Tiajuana, 23 and was returning from that two-day visit.

24 Now, the question is not whether the charge of 25 smuggling aliens or aiding and abetting illegal entry is

1 true or false at that point, until there has been a 2 hearing to make that determination. In this case, the 3 fact that the District Director of Immigration handed 4 this piece of paper, which was the exclusion notice, to 5 Mrs. Plasencia, the mere handing, that act of handing 6 that to her, made her excludable instead of deportable.

7           That is what we have a great deal of 8 difficulty in understanding, that approach, and we feel 9 that is exactly what happened in Rosenberg versus 10 Fleuti, which is what we would like to see happen in 11 this case, which is that a deportation proceeding should 12 have been initiated under Section 241(a)(1) of the 13 Immigration and Nationality Act, which states that a 14 person is now deportable if they were at the time of any 15 entry excludable.

16           Now, of course, the 32 grounds of 17 excludability are encompassed within Section 241(a)(1), 18 so the government certainly would have not been 19 prejudiced by the bringing of that deportation charge, 20 and through Section 212(a)(31), could have then been 21 adjudicated in a deportation setting, and it is possible 22 that the conclusion of that case would have been that 23 she was found excludable because she had -- deportable
24 because she had been excludable at the time of entry.

25           QUESTION: You say it is possible?

1           MR. MANULKIN: The evidence is very difficult
2 from the 20-some pages of transcript to determine, I 3 feel. I feel it is very conflicting as to whether or 4 not it is possible that she was the smuggler, whether 5 that was in fact a matter of gain on her part when $25 6 was paid to her husband for gas. I think it is a very 7 difficult proof by the government, and in fact I might 8 even suggest that there might have been some reason for 9 the government not going forward on a criminal charge.
10 The question was asked earlier in that regard.

11           QUESTION: Mr. Manulkin, if the alien had been 12 out of the country for five years under your theory, 13 would that alien be entitled on coming back in to say,
14 it isn't true, I contest this, and therefore be entitled 15 to a deportation hearing.

16           MR. MANULKIN: You mean, if she had remained 17 in Mexico for five years?

18           QUESTION: Sure.

19           MR. MANULKIN: No, no.

20           QUESTION: Comes back in and says, no, no, 21 that is not true, I want a deportation hearing.

22           MR. MANULKIN: No.

23           QUESTION: What is the difference?

24           MR. MANULKIN: Well, because we feel that -- 25 we agree with the Shaughnessy versus Mezei decision of 1 this Court when it stated that Mr. Mezei, having left 2 the United States for 19 months to go to Hungary without 3 the permission of this --

4 QUESTION: But under your theory, those facts
5 should be determined at a deportation hearing. What is 6 the difference?

7 MR. MANULKIN: No, no, because in that 8 particular case, there is not a brief visit outside the 9 United States, in either Shaughnessy versus Mezei or the 10 factual situation that you just presented. We are not 11 arguing with the fact that the Immigration Service has 12 the right to control its borders as to persons who are 13 not residing therein.

14 QUESTION: Why shouldn't the government be 15 entitled to proceed at an exclusion proceeding, as the 16 statute might well indicate, and simply afford the alien 17 whatever process is due?

18 MR. MANULKIN: Well, I think one of the most 19 difficult problems with a person put into that situation 20 would be the sections dealing with the amelioration of 21 the hardships attendant to being deported from the 22 United States, such as, I mentioned earlier Section 23 243(h) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, which 24 states that a person can apply for a stay of deportation 25 if there is a well-founded fear of the likelihood of 1 persecution on the basis of race, religion, or political 2 opinion.

3           Now, this particular individual, for example,
4 Mrs. Plasencia, has a U.S. citizen husband, four 5 permanent resident children who were coming of military 6 age, who were getting older. Taking this family back to 7 El Salvador might have given her, and a showing to the 8 Court and proof to the Court that she has a fear of 9 likelihood of returning to El Salvador with this family, 10 might well have occasioned the immigration judge to 11 grant a stay of deportation, but as the cases, and this 12 Court is one of the decision-makers on that issue, that 13 243(h) does not apply to a person who is a respondent in 14 exclusion proceedings. So she would be precluded from 15 making that application for, in the vernacular, asylum 16 or refugee status.

17           Also, another preclusion would be Section
18 244(a)(1) and 244(d) of the Immigration and Nationality 19 Act in that she could not apply for a suspension of 20 deportation in an exclusion proceeding. Again, the 21 courts, this Court and other courts have found that that 22 application could not be made in an exclusion proceeding
23 by an excludee only by someone who is in deportation
24 proceedings, and of course she could maybe very easily 25 show that it would be extreme and unusual hardship to

1 herself and her family to in fact return to El Salvador,
2 a country in the middle of a civil war and great strife,
3 and where maybe U.S. citizen men are not to be invited
4 to remain, and permanent resident children are not going 5 to be treated in a hospitable fashion, especially --

6 QUESTION: How long since she undertook to the 7 United States?

8 MR. MANULKIN: I am sorry?

9 QUESTION: How many years have passed since 10 this episode occurred?

11 MR. MANULKIN: Well, she has been living in 12 the United States.

13 QUESTION: The episode, coming across the 14 border with aliens.

15 MR. MANULKIN: How long had she been living in 16 the United States?

17 QUESTION: No, how many years ago did this 18 occur?

19 MR. MANULKIN: This occurred in 1975, Your 20 Honor.

21 QUESTION: So now it is seven years.

22 MR. MANULKIN: Yes, it is, Your Honor.

23 QUESTION: Now, if you prevailed here, could 24 any criminal charges be brought against her?

25 MR. MANULKIN: Under the possible statute of 1 limitations, I believe not.

2 QUESTION: The statute of limitations has 3 run.

4 MR. MANULKIN: That's right. Yes.

5 QUESTION: What about a deportation
6 proceeding, the full-scale proceeding that you would 7 like?

8 MR. MANULKIN: Yes. Yes, I believe that could 9 be brought.

10 QUESTION: That could be brought?

11 MR. MANULKIN: Yes, I believe so.

12 QUESTION: The evidence is seven years old 13 now, isn't it?

14 MR. MANULKIN: Well, the government did have 15 written statements from all of the witnesses, as we 16 understand it, and written statements are admissible in 17 deportation proceedings when there is unavailability of 18 the individuals to testify, so I believe the government 19 would be very little prejudiced by holding a deportation 20 hearing today.

21 As a matter of fact, in this particular case, 22 I might call your attention to the fact that the written 23 statements that were presented as evidence in court were 24 never read to Mrs. Plasencia, but yet she was being 25 asked to cross examine the maker of those statements.

1 She was not -- She was, if you will look at the 2 transcript of the record, she was handed the statement 3 in English, saying, do you object to the admission of 4 this statement, but there is no indication that it was 5 -- she doesn't read English -- that it was ever 6 translated to her.

7 QUESTION: How long had she lived in the 8 United States before?

9 MR. MANULKIN: She had -- It is not in the 10 record, Your Honor.

11 QUESTION: Well, she's got three children that 12 are getting ready to go in the Army.

13 MR. MANULKIN: Well, as a matter of fact, I 14 believe only one of those was a son, but she had come to 15 the United States in probably the late sixties, about 16 1968, and then immigrated in 1970.

17 QUESTION: Did she bring those children with 18 her?

19 MR. MANULKIN: Yes, she did.

20 QUESTION: I thought you said they were 21 American citizens.

22 MR. MANULKIN: No, the children never became 23 American citizens.

24 QUESTION: Oh, I guess I misunderstood you.

25 MR. MANULKIN: They are still permanent

1 residents. I am sorry I didn't make that clear. Her
2 husband is a U.S. citizen, and in fact he immigrated her 3 to the United States in 1970 while remaining here, which 4 was through an adjustment of status type of approach, 5 which precludes her from having to go back to San 6 Salvador to obtain her permanent residence.

7 I really believe that the government is asking 8 this Court to overrule Chew v. Colding. Looking at the 9 case, looking at this case, the facts of the two cases, 10 I cannot see any substantive differences. It has been 11 mentioned that Mr. Chew did not leave for a foreign 12 country, yet the ship did, of course, stop in foreign 13 ports.

14 QUESTION: Well, why couldn't I -- I could 15 personally distinguish on the fact that he wasn't 16 importing illegal aliens?

17 MR. MANULKIN: Because he was a danger to 18 national security, as I would --

19 QUESTION: Well, that is a distinguishing 20 proposition, isn't it?

21 MR. MANULKIN: It would be a matter, I 22 suppose, of weighing which is more in violation of 23 immigration policy, to aid and abet illegal entry or to 24 become a danger to national security. I am not maybe --

25 QUESTION: Well, Chew also simply construed a

1 regulation. It didn't make any holding on any 2 constitutional issue. When did it construe the 1952
3 statute?

4 MR. MANULKIN: It only -- like I said, Your 5 Honor, in the footnotes, discussed 1018.13, which --

6 QUESTION: The footnote discusses it in two 7 sentences.

8 MR. MANULKIN: Yes, it does. You are right.

9 QUESTION: Not in the long discourse which you 10 are suggesting.

11 MR. MANULKIN: No, you are right, it does not 12 go into a long discussion of the 1952 Act, but I believe 13 I would differ in that it did in fact construe the 14 situation of a continuing permanent resident as to the 15 amount of procedural protections and due process that 16 that individual is entitled to, whatever the statute is, 17 whether it was a pre-'52 statute or a post-'52.

18 QUESTION: Doesn't Chew contain the statement 19 that all we are doing is construing this regulation and 20 saying it wasn't authorized by statute?

21 MR. MANULKIN: It did attempt to limit --

22 QUESTION: I thought it quite successfully
23 limited it. I don't think Justice Bergman was incapable 24 of limiting an opinion like that.

25 MR. MANULKIN: Well, I believe, Your Honor,

1 that you are right, that it did construe a regulation,
2 and I believe that it did attempt to narrow at the very 3 latter part of the case, after it had already said these 4 words in different contexts three or four times, 5 "assimilated to the status of a continuing permanent 6 resident." It said that four times through the case, 7 and it is very difficult unless you read Chew having 8 been outside the United States for four months, our 9 client having been outside the United States for two 10 days, both challenging immigration policies --

11           QUESTION: But here, the statute clearly 12 authorizes what was done, and in Chew they simply held 13 the statute didn't authorize what was done.

14           MR. MANULKIN: That is basically true. That 15 is basically true, Your Honor. You were dealing, again, 16 like you said, with a regulation, not a statute. Here 17 we do have a statute. The statute, of course, does 18 include an element of gain, and I think it is important 19 also for this Court to become aware of the fact that 20 this is different for criminal proceedings than it is 21 for civil proceedings.

22           Section 1324, Title 8 of the United States
23 Code talks about smuggling of aliens as being a crime, 24 but it does not bother to mention the word "gain." Gain 25 is not an element in the criminal context. It is only

1 in the immigration context. And because of that, it is 2 really a more difficult prove up, I would guess, for the 3 government in a criminal context, and again I draw your 4 attention to the fact that the government did not 5 proceed against either Mr. or Mrs. Plasencia in a 6 criminal proceeding, bringing a criminal charge, and in 7 fact if they had, we might not be here today, because we 8 would then have had procedural protections in that 9 criminal context. We would have had right to counsel,
10 and notice, and Fifth Amendment self-incrimination
11 rights, as you --

12           QUESTION: How would that help her on her 13 exclusion?

14           MR. MANULKIN: Well, it wouldn't, as a matter
15 of fact, help her if she were found guilty, Your Honor.
16 It would in fact cause an easier situation for the 17 immigration judge to present the conviction as evidence 18 of excludability, and then we might have a little 19 different -- more difficulty with the government in 20 arguing against them.

21           QUESTION: The government might at that time 22 have decided to prosecute him and not her, if she was 23 excludable and excluded.

24           MR. MANULKIN: They did not though, Your 25 Honor. They did not. They didn't proceed against

1 either one. The evidence was very contradictory, and 2 they might have read the evidence, and they might have 3 seen that this one witness, the number one witness in 4 the case, in fact made contradictory statements the 5 night before under oath in both cases. She even 6 misstated her name. She misstated how much money 7 supposedly was to be promised, $300 the night before, 8 $250 the next morning. She misstated the fact that it 9 was the wife of her uncle that she was traveling with.
10 In fact, during the hearing she says, I have no family.

11           So if you look at the contradictions of her
12 evidence, I think the United States Attorney's office 13 just decided that this would be a very difficult case to 14 prosecute.

15           I think I would like to draw finally the 16 attention to the differences in exclusion and 17 deportation proceedings and the particular prejudices to 18 Mrs. Plasencia in this case. We have already talked 19 about the stay of deportation, the notice of charges.
20 The continuances that are granted regularly in 21 deportation proceedings, I think, are crucial. An 22 immigration attorney must in fact prepare seven, ten, 23 twelve, fifteen weeks, sometimes, for a case such as 24 this, to be ready to argue it, and I would like to ask 25 this Court to find that Mrs. Plasencia will be held in

1 deportation proceedings, and that it will be the 2 obligation of the government to prove her deportability,
3 and I would ask this Court to not overturn Chew v.
4 Colding.

5 QUESTION: Wait a minute. Let me understand
6 you correctly. She is now free. You want us to order 7 her arrested?

8 MR. MANULKIN: Well, Your Honor, we are 9 arguing --

10 QUESTION: You said you want her held for 11 deportation. You want us to say that she should be held 12 for deportation?

13 MR. MANULKIN: I feel -- that is my position, 14 if we are asking for an affirmance of the Ninth Circuit.

15 QUESTION: Well, does your client agree with 16 you?

17 MR. MANULKIN: Well, certainly not. Certainly 18 not. I would agree with you that she does not want to 19 be held in deportation proceedings, but we are asking 20 for an affirmance of the lower court's determination.
21 We feel that is our obligation. Thank you. Unless 22 there are any other questions.

23 QUESTION: No.

24 MR. MANULKIN: Thank you.

25 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Do you have anything

1 further, Mr. Schulder?

2 ORAL ARGUMENT OF ELLIOTT SCHULDER, ESQ.,

3 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER

4 MR. SCHULDER: Yes, Your Honor.

5 Respondent has conceded here that greater 6 procedural protections could be provided for resident 7 aliens in exclusion proceedings. I think it is quite 8 apparent from Mr. Manulkin's argument that what 9 Respondent really wants here is the opportunity to be 10 eligible for a whole variety of discretionary forms of 11 relief that are available to aliens only in a 12 deportation context, and not in an exclusion context, 13 but due process does not entitle an alien to these 14 substantive forms of relief. It is Congress and the 15 statute that provides which aliens in which types of 16 proceedings are entitled to certain substantive 17 remedies.

18 I think it is simply a distortion of the whole 19 statutory scheme to allow resident aliens like 20 Respondent to be placed in deportation proceedings where 21 they will be given all kinds of substantive remedies 22 that Congress specifically declined to give to these 23 people when it separated exclusion proceedings from 24 deportation proceedings in the statute.

25 I would also like to point out that

1 Respondent's claims of inadequate notice and the other 2 procedural deficiencies that she alleges are a red
3 herring here. She could have raised these claims before 4 the Board of Immigration Appeals, and in fact she was 5 represented by counsel in a motion to reopen before the 6 Board of Immigration Appeals, and if her claims had been 7 rejected, she could have appealed to the Ninth Circuit
8 and then to this Court raising the due process claims.

9           The fact of the matter is that she did not 10 raise any of these claims either before the BIA or in 11 the District Court or Court of Appeals.

12           Finally, I think Justice O'Conner hit the nail 13 on the head when she asked my adversary whether he 14 conceded that where an alien has taken a trip of five 15 years or of extended duration, whether he would still be 16 arguing that there was an entitlement to a deportation 17 proceeding. Counsel conceded in response to that that 18 there would not be such entitlement, but the whole point 19 of this case is where and in what forum is the 20 determination made as to whether the trip was brief or 21 not.

22           In fact, the Ninth Circuit in a number of 23 cases has held that fairly extensive trips abroad do not 24 amount to extensive enough visits to interrupt permanent 25 residence.

1                   And I would like to make one final point in 2 response to Respondent's argument relying on Kwong Hai
3 Chew versus Colding, the language that a resident alien 4 is to be assimilated to an alien continuously residing 5 and physically present. At Page 596 of Volume 344 of 6 U.S.

1                   At Page 596 of Volume 344 of U.S. Reports, it
2 is true that the Court said for purposes of his 3 constitutional right to due process we assimilate 4 petitioner's status to that of an alien continuously
5 residing and physically present in the United States.

6                   But several pages later, on page 601, the 7 Court says, it may well be that an alien's ultimate 8 right to remain in the United States is subject to 9 alteration by statute or authorized regulation because 10 of a voyage undertaken by him to foreign ports.

11                  The point of our submission here is that the 12 determination whether an alien is entitled to reenter 13 the United States after a trip abroad is to be made in 14 an exclusion setting, as Congress provided in the 15 immigration statute. The Ninth Circuit, and Respondent
16 here, have provided absolutely no justification in law
17 for departing from the statutory scheme. Thank yo

18                  CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.

19                  (Whereupon, at 10:56 a.m., the case in the 20 above-entitled matter was submitted.)
