2 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments
3 next in Briscoe against LaHue.

4 Mr. Moran, I think you may proceed whenever 5 you're ready.

6 ORAL ARGUMENT OF EDMUND B. MORAN, JR., ESQ.,

7 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS

8 MR. MORAN: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
9 please the Court:

10 These cases were brought pursuant to Title 42 11 of the United States Code, Section 1983. The precise 12 issue that is being presented to this Court for decision 13 is whether a police officer who commits perjury during a 14 state court criminal trial should be granted absolute 15 immunity from civil liability under Title 42, United 16 States Code, Section 1983.

17 It is the contention of the Petitioners that 18 such absolute immunity should not be extended to police
19 officers who have perjured themselves during state court 20 criminal trials, and that there are four fundamental 21 reasons why such absolute immunity should not be 22 extended to police officers.

23 The first of these reasons is that qualified 24 good faith immunity as opposed to absolute immunity has 25 generally been observed by this Court to be the

1 predominant standard in civil rights actions where 2 immunity questions are raised. The Court has recognized
3 that qualified good faith immunity gives an opportunity 4 to a civil rights defendant to defend the case, but at 5 the same time, gives the civil rights plaintiff an 6 opportunity to attempt to make a case out of a violation 7 of his constitutional rights.

8 The Court has recognize that the qualified
9 good faith immunity does apply to police officers.

10 Secondly --

11 QUESTION: May I interrupt you there, Mr.
12 Moran?

13 How could an officer who committed perjury 14 ever discharge the burden of proving that he did so in 15 good faith?

16 MR. MORAN: I don't believe he can if, indeed, 17 it has been shown that he committed perjury. In other 18 words, Justice Stevens --

19 QUESTION: Then the good faith --

20 MR. MORAN: -- I do not think that if there is 21 conclusive proof of perjury, that it could ever be 22 assumed that it was given in good faith. I think the 23 only significance that qualified good faith immunity has 24 in this context would be where the police officer would 25 be allowed to offer evidence in response to the charges

1 that he believed the statements he made at the criminal 2 trial for the truth.

3 QUESTION: Then it wouldn't be perjury.

4 MR. MORAN: And that would not be perjury.

5 QUESTION: So that you are really saying that 6 there is no defense to a complaint against a police
7 officer that he committed perjury at a trial with regard 8 to a relevant fact.

9 MR. MORAN: I would say that that would be 10 true to the extent that good faith is not consistent 11 with perjury.

12 QUESTION: So that there -- when you say there 13 should be no absolute immunity, you really are also 14 saying there should be no immunity, period.

15 MR. MORAN: In a sense, yes, except that a few 16 courts that have viewed the situation have considered 17 that perhaps there would be what they have characterized 18 as a qualified good faith immunity in the sense that the 19 police officer would be allowed to come forward with 20 evidence to show that he believed the statements to be 21 true. But I essentially agree with your position. I 22 don't think -- I think the two are essentially mutually 23 inconsistent.

24 QUESTION: Yes.

25 MR. MORAN: The second --

1 QUESTION: There is nothing very new about 2 there being no remedy for something of this kind under 3 the speech or debate clause, which of course is 4 express. A Member of the Congress may make any 5 statement he wants, false or whatever, and he is wholly 6 immune, is he not?

7 MR. MORAN: That is true, Your Honor.

8 QUESTION: If he makes it within the framework
9 of our interpretation of the clause.

10 QUESTION: The absolute immunity position
11 under 1981, wouldn't bar criminal prosecution.

12 MR. MORAN: It would not, Your Honor.

13 QUESTION: Even if it barred an action for 14 damages.

15 MR. MORAN: Excuse me?

16 QUESTION: Even if it barred an action for
17 damages.

18 MR. MORAN: The parties have consistently
19 taken the position that there would be an action present
20 under Title 18 USC Section 242.

21 QUESTION: Yes, yes. That's quite -- that's 22 pretty generally true about judicially-created
23 immunity.

24 MR. MORAN: The Petitioners' position on that 25 point, Your Honor, is of course that Section 1983 was

1 passed with the very idea that there would be a civil 2 damages remedy for a constitutional violation, and as 3 the Petitioners have attempted to show in their briefs,
4 there are indications from studies that have been 5 conducted with respect to criminal prosecutions under 18
6 USC 242 that there may not be in effect any true 7 deterrent effect as a result of that, so that the 8 recognized benefit attendant to Section 1983 actions, 9 that there might be a deterrent effect through the 10 bringing of those actions, would be enhanced by a 11 finding by the Court that they could be brought.

12 QUESTION: But our cases here indicate that 13 Congress didn't really intend to nullify at least some 14 of the common law immunities --

15 MR. MORAN: Well, that's --

16 QUESTION: -- including some absolute 17 immunities.

18 MR. MORAN: That the cases have found --

19 QUESTION: What about that? What's the rule 20 of common law about witnesses?

21 MR. MORAN: The rule, as I perceive the 22 Court's cases with respect to absolute immunity, has 23 revolved around the observation that immunities in 24 general are accorded to government officials who are 25 sued under 1983 when the level of their discretion is so

1 high that their day-to-day activities can be 2 characterized as decision-making, indeed, that almost 3 everything they do involves a decision. This Court has 4 granted immunity to judges, to prosecutors, to 5 legislators, as the Chief Judge pointed out, to 6 administrative law judges and the President.

7 QUESTION: Yes, but we've held that -- we've 8 held that Congress didn't intend to nullify the kind 9 of -- those kinds of immunities.

10 MR. MORAN: That's true, but there are two 11 observations that are critical to this case that relates 12 to that. First of all, the Court has held that Congress 13 did not intend to nullify an immunity if the legislative 14 history of the 1871 Civil Rights Act were silent on that 15 point. The Petitioners have taken the position that the 16 42nd Congress was not silent on the point of whether it 17 considered perjury an act that should be condemned and 18 should be actionable under the 1871 Civil Rights Act.
19 Indeed, there are many comments throughout the 20 legislative history to the effect that perjury was to be 21 condemned, and that it indeed would be actionable under 22 Section 1983.

23 Furthermore, with respect to the question of 24 immunities not being automatically eliminated as a 25 result of the passage of the act, the Court's recent

1 pronouncements have indicated clearly that a simple
2 recognition of the fact that a common law immunity
3 existed does not end the inquiry, but that the Court
4 will consider the history of the particular immunity
5 suggested and determine under modern day policy reasons 6 whether that immunity should apply equally in the civil 7 rights context as it would in the common law context, as 8 it has been previous to the passage of the 1871 Civil 9 Rights Act.

10 QUESTION: Can you suggest a reason why there 11 should be a special rule for civil rights cases with 12 respect to this very narrow matter?

13 MR. MORAN: I would think that the most 14 significant reason why there should be a special rule
15 underlies the passage of the 1871 Civil Rights Act, 16 which was, I would suggest, the policy of Congress
17 finding that in creating a new tort under Section 1983, 18 there was in effect a much more serious aspect to that 19 kind of a tort, and that the aspect that was so serious
20 was that the tort was rendered by a governmental agent 21 who was found to have had power that could not be 22 wielded by the average person who might consider a 23 common, or might perpetrate a common law tort.

24 In that particular instance, the Congress
25 showed that it wanted to provide a damages remedy to a

1 victim of governmental overreaching.

2 In the decision of this Court in Monroe v.
3 Pape, there was an explicit recognition by Justice
4 Harlan to the effect that Section 1983 was significant 5 in its effort to recognize that a constitutional tort 6 was more significant than a common law tort. There
7 Justice Harlan said, "The statute becomes more than a"
8 judicial -- "jurisdictional provision only if one
9 attributes to the enacting legislature the view that a 10 deprivation of a constitutional right is significantly 11 different from and more serious than a violation of a 12 state right and therefore deserves a different remedy
13 even though the same act may constitute both a state 14 tort and a deprivation of a constitutional act. This 15 view, by no means unrealistic as a common-sense matter 16 is, I believe, more consistent with the flavor of the 17 legislative history than is a view that the primary 18 purpose of the statute was to grant a lower court forum 19 for fact findings."

20 I think it's clear that the reason that there 21 can be and should be a special exception in this area
22 relates to the fact that the 42nd Congress considered a 23 tort committed by a governmental agent to be, indeed, a 24 very serious situation that should be actionable even 25 though it might not have been actionable under common

1 law.

2 The question of immunities that have been 3 raised in the context of constitutional or civil rights
4 litigation has been addressed several times by the Court 5 in the last seven to eight years. In doing so, the 6 Court seems to have taken the direction that absolute 7 immunity will be considered to be the exception to the 8 rule, and that qualified good faith immunity would be 9 the predominant standard.

10 In Butz v. Economou, the Court was asked to 11 decide the specific question of whether a civil rights 12 plaintiff could sue a cabinet-level officer for an 13 alleged defamation. He brought the action under a 14 Bivens type action and asserted that he should be 15 allowed to bring an action against the Secretary of 16 Agriculture. The Secretary of the Agriculture brought 17 to this Court's attention two prior decisions rendered 18 by it, Spalding v. Vilas and Barr v. Matteo. Both of 19 those actions were essentially common law defamation 20 actions which eventually resulted in decisions by this 21 Court to the effect that the defendants in those cases
22 were absolutely immune from damages in a common law 23 action.

24 When this Court was asked to extend the 25 holding in Barr and Spalding to the constitutional tort

1 context in Butz v. Economou, the Court refused to do
2 that and specifically indicated that if there was a 3 common law immunity for the common law action of 4 defamation, that immunity would not be extended to the 5 Secretary of Agriculture in the constitutional tort 6 context, and the Court upheld the right of the plaintiff 7 to bring that action.

8 Thus, we have seen that there was specifically 9 a contraction of immunities that were observed in common
10 law but were considered -- but that the Court considered 11 it necessary to contract the scope of those immunities 12 in the constitutional tort context.

13 The Court has extended absolute immunity that 14 was found in common law, in many instances in ages-old 15 common law immunity situations. It has extended it to 16 judges in Pierson v. Ray, to administrative law judges
17 in Butz v. Economou, to prosecutors in Imbler v.
18 Pachtman, to legislators in Tenney v. Brandhove, and to 19 the President in Nixon v. Fitzgerald. However, the 20 common thread through all of those decisions has been 21 that if absolute immunity were not extended to the 22 people who performed the functions attendant to those 23 offices, indeed, the very functioning of the government 24 insofar as it was embodied in the activities inherent in 25 those offices, might be paralyzed, the basic idea being

1 that if a person were deterred from going ahead and 2 making significant decisions through intimidation or 3 harassment that might be attendant to a possible lawsuit
4 brought against them for conducting those activities, 5 that an immunity, an absolute immunity should attach to 6 those activities.

7 It has been the Petitioners' contention
8 throughout this lawsuit that there is no decisionmaking 9 involved in testifying in a judicial proceeding, and 10 that there, in fact, is no discretion in any material 11 sense involved in testifying in that a witness is 12 required to testify completely and truthfully to 13 questions that are put to him during the judicial 14 proceeding.

15 QUESTION: Well, in all of the absolute
16 immunity cases, isn't the basic idea that the particular 17 person should be relieved even from the burden of 18 defending the lawsuits?

19 MR. MORAN: That is true.

20 QUESTION: That they can be harassed to the 21 detriment of the performance of their duties simply by 22 lawsuits, even if they win the lawsuits.

23 MR. MORAN: That has always been considered to 24 be a countervailing factor with respect to civil rights
25 lawsuits. There is no doubt about that. But the Court

1 has continued to recognize that even though there is, in 2 essence, a down side to allowing civil rights plaintiffs 3 to bring civil rights lawsuits against governmental 4 agents, even in recognition of a detraction, so to 5 speak, from the performance of their normal duties will 6 be allowed so that the purposes behind Section 1983 will 7 be advanced, and that a person who is a victim of 8 constitutional violations can gain compensation for that 9 act. And indeed, in the case of police officers, which 10 is being presented to this Court now, in both Monroe v.
11 Pape and Pierson v. Ray, the Court said that police 12 officers would be held to only be qualifiably immune 13 from civil rights actions for nearly everything that 14 they had to do during the course of their duties.

15 It would be the Petitioners' contention that 16 testifying by police officers is simply another one of 17 their duties and that, indeed, although they might be 18 interrupted from their duties and might be forced to 19 come to court and defend their actions in such a 20 lawsuit, this would be just considered the cost of going 21 ahead and allowing a civil rights plaintiff to bring a 22 proper 1983 action.

23 QUESTION: Mr. Moran, I am a little puzzled by 24 your emphasis of these witnesses as police officers.
25 They are not asserting their immunity because they are

1 police; they are asserting it because they are 2 witnesses.

3 Isn't that a different approach?

4 MR. MORAN: That's true, Your Honor, they are 5 asserting it because they are witnesses, and I think 6 that it is the only way that they can approach the 7 situation from the standpoint that, as the Court has 8 indicated recently, the functional aspect of an analysis 9 on this point is significant. However, it's also 10 important to recognize that if the questioned activity
11 is a constitutional violation and that it is performed 12 under the color of state law, that it then will be 13 actionable under 1983.

14 It's been the Petitioners' contention that 15 this activity, even when characterized as being giving 16 testimony during judicial proceedings, is given under 17 the color of state law.

18 QUESTION: Mr. Moran, may I interrupt you on 19 this -- on that point?

20 It is critical to your case that the perjury
21 be a constitutional violation, as I understand your 22 presentation, and as I understand the constitutional 23 rule, mere perjury isn't a constitutional violation;
24 it's the knowing use of perjured testimony.

25 Does that not require you to prove that the 1 prosecutor was a party to the perjury?

2 MR. MORAN: it is our petition that it would 3 not so require, Justice Stevens. Of course, under this 4 Court's holding, first in Mooney v. Hollahan, and later
5 in Nappew v. Illinois and Giglio v. United States, it 6 has been held by this Court that the knowing use of 7 perjured testimony by government prosecutors will result 8 in a due process violation.

9 However, the Petitioners would take the 10 position that the general holding in those cases applies 11 equally to the present cases.

12 QUESTION: Even if the prosecutor did not know 13 of the alleged perjury.

14 MR. MORAN: Yes, and the reason that the 15 Petitioners have taken that position consistently is 16 that there is a knowing use by the state of perjured
17 testimony when the perjuring witness is a representative
18 of the state. In other words, we would suggest that it
19 is only a logical extension of the holdings of the Court
20 in, for instance, Nappew v. Illinois.

21 QUESTION: Well, does that mean that every 22 criminal conviction in which the defendant could later 23 demonstrate that there was some perjury committed by 24 some state representative, is subject to collateral 25 attack?

1 MR. MORAN: I don't think I could respond in 2 blanket fashion to that question. I think it would 3 depend on a case-by-case analysis. I think there is the 4 potential for that, but I still think that the Court 5 would have to examine the particular facts relating to 6 the state witness that would be -- who would have 7 perjured himself or herself and would be in question.

8 I certainly have taken the position that that 9 would be true if the state witness is a police officer
10 and has met the other conditions that we have suggested 11 would be necessary to meet the under --

12 QUESTION: Well, suppose it's a non-official, 13 he's not a police officer, he's not a state official, it 14 is a criminal prosecution prosecuted by the state, and a 15 lay witness, let's call it, perjures himself. Would you 16 have a 1983 suit?

17 MR. MORAN: Against the lay witness, Your 18 Honor?

19 QUESTION: Yes.

20 MR. MORAN: The only time that there might be 21 the potential for a 1983 suit against a lay witness 22 would be if there were allegations of conspiracy with 23 government officials.

24 QUESTION: No, he's not. This is -- he on his 25 own perjures himself and later it is discovered that he

1 has, and the convicted defendant brings a 1983 suit,
2 could he maintain it, just against the lay witness?

3 MR. MORAN: Assuming that the -- there was no
4 showing of any state action --

5 QUESTION: Yes.

6 MR. MORAN: With respect to the -- no.

7 QUESTION: It would be because there's no
8 state action.

9 MR. MORAN: Yes.

10 QUESTION: Not because of absolute immunity?

11 MR. MORAN: The easy answer is that there's no
12 state action. That's the threshold answer.

13 QUESTION: How can the --

14 MR. MORAN: The question of no state action 15 obviously would perhaps remain, but it certainly 16 wouldn't be presented to the Court in the Section 1983
17 context.

18 QUESTION: Here you have, in this case, the 19 only exception is a state officer perjures himself.

20 MR. MORAN: In this case, yes.

21 QUESTION: Well, is that the rule you want?

22 I mean, you've got five witnesses and five of 23 them perjure themselves. One is a policeman and the 24 other four are fellow thugs like the one that's being 25 tried, and they all perjure themselves, the only one

1 that is actionable is the police officer.

2 MR. MORAN: Under Section 1983, yes, and 3 assuming non-involvement with any state officials, yes.

4 QUESTION: Now, Mr. Moran, the -- at common
5 law, in the hypothetical I put to you, the lay witness, 6 I take it, would have had an absolute immunity, would he 7 not?

8 MR. MORAN: I believe that would be true, Your 9 Honor.

10 QUESTION: And so I gather the burden of your 11 position is that 1983, where the perjurious witness is a 12 police officer, gives you a cause of action against the 13 police officer who has no immunity because Congress, 14 when it enacted 1983 in 1971, intended that 1983 should 15 provide such a cause of action without the officer 16 having any immunity, is that right?

17 MR. MORAN: That would be our position, Your 18 Honor, that specific reference in the legislative 19 history to the condemnation that Congress thought should 20 be brought against perjury in state court judicial 21 proceedings, it would be our position that that 22 legislative history would suggest that there would not 23 be absolute immunity for perjury.

24 QUESTION: And I gather, going -- when you got 25 the civil action under 1983 against the police officer,

1 the Plaintiff would have to prove only that the officer
2 perjured himself, and the officer would have no defense
3 whatever except that I did not perjure myself, is that 4 right?

5 MR. MORAN: I think that would be a fair
6 statement. He clearly would have the defense that he 7 could offer evidence that indeed his statement was not 8 false, and at least not intentionally false --

9 QUESTION: Well, that isn't my purpose -- that 10 he did not perjure himself. He would have no other 11 defense.

12 MR. MORAN: None that I'm aware of.

13 QUESTION: Mr. Moran, might he have a defense 14 that he didn't act under color of state law because of 15 our decision in Polk County v. Dodson?

16 MR. MORAN: Your Honor, I do not believe that 17 under the decision of Polk County v. Dodson that he 18 would have a defense as to that point. I think he might 19 have a defense that he was not acting under color of 20 state law under certain circumstances. We have posited 21 that certain requirements beyond a simple recognition of 22 the fact that it was a police officer who was 23 testifying, would have to be met to show that his 24 testimony was given under the color of state law, such 25 things as that he was called by the state, that the

1 evidence that he was giving was supporting the 2 prosecution, that it was his duty to come forward and to 3 give testimony.

4 QUESTION: Doesn't every citizen have a duty
5 to come forward to testify when required to do so?

6 MR. MORAN: If a subpoena has been served on 7 any citizen, yes, he would be required to respond to the 8 subpoena, but the question of the word "duty" takes on 9 particular significance with respect to a police
10 officer. It has been the Petitioners' position 11 consistently that in the case of police officers, it is 12 a duty in the sense of a job responsibility, that 13 routinely and systematically the police officers have to 14 come to court in order to testify as to the results of 15 their investigatory activities.

16 It is in that sense that it is a duty of the 17 police officer to respond --

18 QUESTION: Well, I suppose public defenders
19 have a duty to come forward into court and defend the 20 defendants whom they are appointed to represent, but the 21 Court didn't find that that made it acting under color 22 of state law.

23 MR. MORAN: That is true, Your Honor, but in 24 the decision in Polk County v. Dodson, the Court
25 recognized the basic nature behind the public defender's

1 duties as being, not so much residing in the fact that 2 he was an agent of the state or an employee of the state
3 or county, that the traditional lawyer-client
4 relationship is the predominant standard by which a 5 public defender's actions would be determined.

6 Thus, you have a very different qualitative 7 situation in the relationship between activities of the 8 public defender representing an indigent criminal 9 defendant and a police officer who does not have any 10 direct fiduciary relationship with a criminal defendant 11 but indeed is trying to procure a conviction against 12 him. That's a direct adversary relationship rather than 13 a fiduciary relationship.

14 QUESTION: But, Mr. Moran, suppose his defense
15 was that the events which -- about which he testified 16 falsely occurred when he was off duty?

17 MR. MORAN: Excuse me, Justice Brennan.
18 Suppose --

19 QUESTION: Suppose his defense was the events
20 about which I testified falsely all happened while I was 21 off duty?

22 QUESTION: And the testimony was given when he 23 was off duty.

24 May I add that in as a factor?

25 QUESTION: Yes.

1 MR. MORAN: Well, that certainly throws a 2 couple of balls up in the air that I don't think we have 3 in hand in this case.

4 It might call for -- it certainly would call
5 for re-examination of the position that the Petitioners 6 have taken in this case because we have asserted that 7 those missing elements are present in this case.

8 QUESTION: Mr. Moran --

9 QUESTION: Wait a minute. Excuse me. Go 10 ahead.

11 QUESTION: Supposing there's a prosecution of 12 a criminal defendant in Rock Island, Illinois and a 13 police officer from Davenport comes over -- Davenport, 14 Iowa, comes over and testifies. Now, is that police
15 officer from Iowa testifying in the Illinois proceeding 16 treated as a government witness from your point of 17 view? It only would have to be shown that he perjured
18 himself and that the prosecuting attorney didn't know 19 about it?

20 MR. MORAN: I would think that he would be 21 treated the same way, Justice Rehnquist, if the other 22 preconditions were shown, that indeed his testimony was 23 the result of cooperation with the prosecution in an 24 attempt to forward the efforts to procure a conviction,
25 and that they were given as part of his job

1 responsibilities or duties. So I would not see a 2 distinction between those two situations.

3 QUESTION: Mr. Moran, on the state action
4 point, aren't you -- to make it state action, aren't you
5 really required to say that his telling a lie knowingly 6 was state action?

7 It may be -- the state certainly isn't -- the 8 policy of the state certainly isn't to have police
9 officers get on the -- to get on the stand and perjure
10 themselves, and if he did it, he did it on his own.

11 MR. MORAN: Of course, that --

12 QUESTION: Now, do you think there is no case 13 in our, on the books that indicates that you -- that 14 you -- that something that, an official acting contrary 15 to policy is outside the realm of state action?

16 MR. MORAN: The way I would respond to your 17 question, Justice White, is this. Inherent in Section 18 1983 litigation is the observation that an actionable 19 activity was not authorized --

20 QUESTION: Right.

21 MR. MORAN: -- specifically by the state, and 22 that there is a departure between actual authority and 23 perhaps apparent authority which has been abused, but 24 the Court has consistently held that an abuse of 25 apparent authority that is vested by the state is

1 actionable under Section 1983.

2 Of course, Petitioners aren't suggesting that 3 the state is encouraging perjury.

4 QUESTION: Do you see a paradox in the fact 5 that the prosecutor might be shown in such a case to 6 have induced and planned all of this perjured testimony, 7 and then the policeman takes the stand and testifies 8 falsely pursuant to that arrangement, the prosecutor has 9 absolute immunity, does he not, civil immunity?

10 MR. MORAN: Yes, he does, Your Honor.

11 The --

12 QUESTION: He could be criminally prosecuted, 13 removed from office and a lot of other things, couldn't 14 he?

15 MR. MORAN: Yes, that's true. The --

16 QUESTION: But he cannot be sued civilly.

17 MR. MORAN: That is true, but the answer to 18 Your Honor's question as to the paradox presented by 19 that situation is given by this Court's decision in 20 Dennis v. Sparks where a state court judge was said to 21 have corruptly conspired with parties during a state 22 court judicial proceeding in order to obtain an 23 injunction against the later civil rights plaintiff.
24 When that plaintiff brought the civil rights action, the 25 parties, the private parties who were said to have

1 conspired with the state court judge, then said that 2 they should be immune because the judge was immune, and 3 that there should in fact be derivative immunity granted
4 to them through the judge, this Court explicitly 5 recognized that the state court judge indeed was immune
6 under Pierson v. Ray, but said that that did not close 7 the question, and that indeed the parties who were said
8 to have corruptly conspired with the judge could be sued 9 under 1983.

10 QUESTION: Mr. Moran, the Court of Appeal did 11 not reach the under-color-of-state-law issue, did it?

12 MR. MORAN: Your Honor, in Footnote 4 in the 13 Court of Appeals decision, the Court addressed the 14 under-color-of-law question and expressed an opinion
15 that if they were to go ahead and decide that issue 16 directly on the merits, that they would find that such 17 an argument, that the testimony wasn't given under the 18 color of state law, would not call for a dismissal of 19 the case, and they said that if evidence could be 20 adduced to the effect that it was part of the duties of 21 a police officer to testify, that the under-color-of-law 22 requirement would be met. They did not make -- they 23 offered that almost in an advisory capacity, but they 24 said they were not required to specifically reach that 25 decision because of their finding on the immunity

1 question.

2 QUESTION: Which -- and if they would have 3 come out that way, it would be contrary to the way the 4 District Court ruled.

5 MR. MORAN: Yes, it would have been contrary.

6 QUESTION: Thank you, Counsel.

7 Ms. Lipkin?

8 ORAL ARGUMENT OF HARRIET LIPKIN, ESQ.,

9 ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT

10 MS. LIPKIN: Thank you.

11 Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the Court:

12 Petitioners argue that police officers, when 13 acting as witnesses, are entitled to only a qualified
14 immunity from liability pursuant to 42 USC Section 15 1983. We respectfully submit that all witnesses, 16 including police officers, are entitled to absolute 17 civil immunity for their testimony.

18 This Court has long held that the broad 19 language contained in 42 USC Section 1983 providing a 20 remedy to individuals deprived of rights by every person
21 acting under color of law was not intended to be applied
22 as stringently as it reads. This Court has developed a 23 two-part test that has applied when a government 24 official has claimed entitlement to immunity from 1983
25 liability.

1 First, this Court has examined the common law
2 history of the claimed absolute immunity. Second, this 3 Court has balanced competing policy considerations in 4 order to determine what the public policy is best served 5 by continuing this grant of immunity from Section 1983.

6 As a result of the application of this 7 two-part test, this Court has granted judges, 8 legislators and prosecutors absolute civil immunity
9 because these individuals were granted absolute immunity
10 at common law, and because public policy was best served
11 by continuing this grant of immunity in the 1983
12 context.

13 QUESTION: Do you think that in 1871 the 14 Congress meant to punish perjurers when it passed the Ku
15 Klux Klan Act of 1871?

16 MS. LIPKIN: Your Honor, there is certainly 17 evidence in the legislative history that Congress was 18 concerned about perjury when it was --

19 QUESTION: There was a lot of evidence, wasn't 20 there?

21 MS. LIPKIN: Yes, there was evidence of that,
22 Your Honor.

23 QUESTION: Not just some, there was a lot.

24 MS. LIPKIN: However, Your Honor, what we 25 would do is to turn to an analogous situation. There is

1 also substantial legislative history indicating that the 2 42nd Congress was very concerned about the corruption of 3 state court judges, and this legislative history is very 4 clearly discussed by Justice Douglas in his dissenting
5 decision in Pierson v. Ray.

6 However, although this legislative history was 7 there, this Court noted that immunities well grounded in 8 history and reason were not intended to be abrogated by 9 the covert language contained in Section 1983.

10 QUESTION: So you're saying that the Ku Klux 11 Klan Act does not mean what it says or what its 12 legislative history indicates.

13 MS. LIPKIN: Your Honor, I'm saying that this 14 Court has previously stated time and time again that 15 Congress never intended to abolish wholesale all common 16 law immunities.

17 QUESTION: How about any?

18 MS. LIPKIN: Certainly this Court has 19 discussed some common law immunities it has not 20 adopted.

21 Witnesses, like judges and prosecutors, were 22 granted absolute civil immunity at common law. For 23 example, in 1772, Lord Mansfield stated the proposition
24 that neither party, witness, counsel, jury or judge
25 shall be put to answer civilly or criminally for words

1 spoken in office. Most American courts have adopted the 2 English rule of absolute witness immunity, tempered with 3 the requirement that the witness' statements be 4 pertinent and relevant to the court's inquiry.

5 In addition, this position was also taken by 6 Professor Prosser and by the restatement of torts, and 7 this Court similarly noted in Imbler v. Pachtman that 8 witnesses are absolutely privileged for words spoken 9 during the course of a judicial proceeding.

10 Public policy requires that all witnesses, 11 including police officers, be granted absolute civil 12 immunity for their testimony. The primary reason for 13 granting witnesses absolute civil immunity is the 14 concern that witnesses will be intimidated and harassed 15 and will not speak freely if their testimony may become 16 the subject of future civil litigation.

17 In addition, the courts may become a forum for 18 vexacious and repetitive litigation.

19 QUESTION: Then you're saying that even in 20 1872, a perjurer was not covered by 1983.

21 MS. LIPKIN: Oh, no, Your Honor. It is our 22 position that -- I'm sorry, Your Honor. I'm not sure I 23 understand the question, but it is our position that 24 Congress never intended to abolish the common law 25 history of absolute witness immunity.

1 QUESTION: Even with respect to perjury in a 2 case arising in 1872?

3 MS. LIPKIN: Your Honor, it's our position
4 that Congress never intended to put witnesses on trial
5 for their statements made during the course of a 6 judicial proceeding, that Congress understood that there 7 were ample safeguards to encourage a witness to tell the 8 truth. For example, a witness was subject to the rigors 9 of cross examination, were subject to criminal penalties
10 for perjury --

11 QUESTION: So all of this -- all of this 12 legislative history about concern about perjurers is 13 down the drain; the Congress really didn't pay any 14 attention to it?

15 MS. LIPKIN: Well, Your Honor, I believe
16 Congress was concerned about many things when it enacted 17 the Civil Rights Act. However, of course, perjury was 18 one of them, but we do not believe that Congress ever 19 intended to abolish the common law, absolute witness 20 immunity that to some extent has been carried on by this 21 Court and through other courts in its language 22 consistently.

23 Petitioners argue that police officers are 24 entitled to only a qualified immunity for their 25 testimony pursuant to this Court's ruling in Pierson v.

1 Ray. We submit that this argument is misguided and must 2 fail.

3 First, it must be noted that Pierson only 4 discussed the qualified immunity granted to police
5 officers when acting as arresting officers. This 6 Court's decision in Pierson was based upon the common
7 law history of immunity granted to arresting officers
8 when they act reasonably. Therefore, Petitioners'
9 argument ignores the functional analysis that this Court 10 has applied in its immunity decisions. It is the 11 function of a 1983 defendant, rather than his official
12 title, that will determine whether he is to be granted
13 absolute civil immunity.

14 Thus, pursuant to this Court's decision in 15 Pierson, a police officer, when functioning as an 16 arresting officer, is entitled to a qualified immunity, 17 and we would assert that a police officer, when 18 functioning as a witness, is entitled to absolute civil 19 immunity.

20 This Court has previously noted that 1983
21 defendants may be granted various degrees of immunity, 22 depending upon the specific function performed. For 23 example, a prosecutor, when functioning as an advocate 24 for the government, has been granted absolute immunity 25 pursuant to this Court's decision in Imbler. However,

1 this Court has also noted that prosecutors may be 2 granted only a qualified immunity when functioning as 3 administrators or as investigative officers.

4 There are also special policy considerations
5 that compel this Court to grant all witnesses, including 6 police officers, absolute civil immunity for their 7 testimony. Initially, it must be noted that if police 8 officer witnesses are not granted absolute civil 9 immunity, that the result will be a retrenchment from 10 the functional analysis that this Court has applied in 11 its previous immunity decisions.

12 As we have stated previously, it is the 13 function of the 1983 defendant rather than his official
14 title, that will determine whether he is to be granted
15 absolute civil immunity.

16 Thus, in the case of the police officer who 17 testifies, he acts as a witness because in a courtroom
18 he is treated like any other witness.

19 In addition, if police officers are not 20 granted absolute civil immunity for their testimony,
21 there will be a virtual retrial of the criminal offense 22 in a new forum, even though post-trial relief is 23 available. Such suits could be expected with great 24 frequency, for a defendant will often transform his 25 resentment at being prosecuted into a claim that the

1 police officer had submitted perjured testimony.

2 In addition, if police officers are not
3 granted absolute civil immunity, they may become the 4 only witnesses not granted absolute witness immunity,
5 and of course, the American courts have never created 6 distinctions between witnesses.

7 In the alternative, if police officers are 8 granted only a qualified immunity for their testimony, 9 the result may be an extension of this qualified 10 immunity to other government witnesses, such as medical 11 examiners, court-appointed psychiatrists or county 12 surveyors. In any event, as Judge Wilke observed in his 13 dissenting opinion in Briggs v. Goodwin, if the 14 principal of absolute witness immunity is rejected, a 15 patchquilt of underlying immunities varying from witness 16 to witness and subject matter to subject matter will 17 result.

18 Further, a ruling that police officers are 19 entitled to only a qualified immunity would stand in a 20 way to ignore the special features of the judicial 21 system, which include the administration of an oath, the 22 availability of cross examination and impeachment, the 23 potential for criminal penalties for perjury and 24 post-trial relief, and the responsibility of a trial
25 judge to exclude inadmissible and inflammatory

1 testimony. /

2 Petitioners suggest --

3 QUESTION: Has your legal department ever
4 prosecuted a policeman for perjury?

5 MS. LIPKIN: Your Honor, we are only civil 6 attorneys. We are not criminal attorneys.

7 QUESTION: Well, have you -- do you know of 8 anyone that has ever been prosecuted in the State of 9 Indiana?

10 MS. LIPKIN: In the State of Indiana, I am not 11 aware of any.

12 Petitioners suggest that even if this Court 13 agrees that witnesses are entitled to absolute civil 14 immunity, that police officers should be distinguished 15 and granted only a qualified immunity for their 16 testimony. We respectfully submit that Petitioners'
17 argument creates artificial and irrelevant distinctions
18 between police officer witnesses and all other 19 witnesses.

20 For example, Petitioners argue that police 21 officers testify regularly, thereby eliminating the 22 concern that a police officer may be intimidated or 23 harassed. However, it is the fear that a witness' 24 testimony may become the subject of future civil 25 litigation that creates this intimidation or

1 harassment. In addition, many other witnesses, such as 2 court-appointed psychiatrists or medical examiners, also 3 testify regularly.

4 Petitioners also argue that police officers
5 testify with a badge of authority, creating a likelihood 6 that they will be believed, even if they present
7 testimony that is neither true nor credible. However, 8 many other witnesses, such as physicians or 9 psychologists, also testify with a badge of authority 10 because they have received many graduate degrees or are 11 recognized as experts in their field.

12 Of course, it is the responsibility of the 13 trier of fact to sift through conflicting testimony in 14 order to resolve the dispute based in part upon the 15 credibility of the witnesses, regardless of whether the 16 witness is a government witness or has received many 17 graduate degrees.

18 Petitioners also argue that a qualified
19 immunity will not place an undue burden upon the police 20 officer witness because he is already accustomed to 21 civil rights liability in his other functions. Of 22 course, this argument ignores the functional analysis 23 that we discussed previously.

24 In addition, Petitioners argue that civil 25 rights claims may be disposed of quickly through the use

1 of motions to dismiss or for summary judgment. However, 2 where the good faith or reasonableness of a witness is 3 in question, a trial will probably be necessary in order
4 to resolve the dispute.

5 In addition, a qualified immunity could create 6 civil rights liability for other witnesses allegedly 7 jointly engaged with the police in the presentation of 8 perjured testimony.

9 We would also like to note that the thrust of 10 Petitioners' argument is that absolute immunity will be 11 used as a cloak behind which the clever and deceptive 12 witness will hide, enabling him to lie without fear of 13 civil liability. However, we must assume that the vast 14 majority of all police officers testify honestly. The 15 average, honest police officer must be granted the same 16 absolute civil immunity granted to every other witness.

17 As Judge Learned Hand observed in Gregor v.
18 Biddle, if it were possible in practice to confine such 19 complaints to the guilty, it would be monstrous to deny 20 recovery, because it is not possible to confine such 21 complaints to the guilty. Public policy and the 22 effective functioning of our judicial system compels 23 that police officer witnesses be granted absolute civil 24 immunity.

25 In conclusion, we respectfully request that

1 this Court affirm the decision of the Court of Appeals
2 and grant all witnesses, including police officers,
3 absolute civil immunity from liability pursuant to 42 4 USC Section 1983.

5 QUESTION: May I ask you one question before
6 you sit down?

7 MS. LIPKIN: Certainly, Justice Stevens.

8 QUESTION: Do you think on the record before 9 us that in any case there is a showing of perjury?

10 MS. LIPKIN: No, Your Honor, I do not.

11 QUESTION: I wonder if you really need the 12 absolute immunity defense then.

13 MS. LIPKIN: Your Honor, when the District
14 Court decided, it held that there was not perjury. It 15 also held that this would not be actionable because 16 witnesses were entitled to absolute civil immunity, that 17 the action was not taken under color of law, and that 18 there was no deprivation of rights. Petitioners took 19 the entire case up on appeal, and the Court of Appeals 20 addressed the immunity question, finding it to be 21 paramount, and did not reach the other issues.

22 QUESTION: But it is only in the case where 23 there really is perjury that you need the immunity.

24 MS. LIPKIN: No, Your Honor, because in either 25 way --

1 QUESTION: Where there is a prima facie
2 showing of perjury.

3 MS. LIPKIN: Well, Your Honor, in either way,
4 what we would suggest is that a trial would be necessary
5 in order to resolve the dispute. In addition, there
6 would be the constant dread of retaliation that Justice
7 Learned Hand talked about.

8 QUESTION: Well, but not in this particular 9 case. I mean, the fingerprint witness, pretty clear he 10 didn't perjure himself, isn't it?

11 MS. LIPKIN: I would say so, Your Honor.

12 QUESTION: Even on the record before us.

13 MS. LIPKIN: Your Honor, what we are trying to 14 do here is, obviously, to have the decision of the Court
15 of Appeals affirmed, but in addition, we would suggest 16 that absolute witness immunity is necessary because 17 police officers should be treated as any other witness 18 and granted absolute witness immunity.

19 QUESTION: And at the outset of the case have 20 the complaint dismissed if what it claims is liability
21 for perjury.

22 MS. LIPKIN: Yes, Your Honor.

23 QUESTION: Merely the claim, the claim that 24 perjury was committed invokes automatically the witness 25 privilege, does it not?

1 MS. LIPKIN: Yes, Your Honor.
2 QUESTION: That's your theory.
3 MS. LIPKIN: Yes, Your Honor.
4 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well.
5 Thank you, Counsel.
6 MS. LIPKIN: Thank you.
7 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: The case is submitted.
8 (Whereupon, at 11:41 o'clock a.m., the case in 9 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
