2 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Miller.

3 ORAL ARGUMENT OF ARTHUR R. MILLER, ESQ.,

4 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER

5 MR. MILLER: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
6 please the Court:

7 The issue in this case is whether the State of 8 Illinois can assert jurisdiction over more than 168,000
9 citizens of every state, the District of Columbia, 10 Puerto Rico and Canada when those people have had no 11 contacts with Illinois.

12 QUESTION: Excuse me, Mr. Miller. May I ask 13 at the outset, do we know that that's what the State of 14 Illinois is going to do here?

15 MR. MILLER: Yes, Your Honor.

16 QUESTION: How do we know that? There's been 17 no -- no determination of any of these issues, has 18 there? What I'm getting at, do we really have a final 19 judgment yet in this case?

20 MR. MILLER: We have a final judgment on the 21 question of Illinois' capacity to assert jurisdiction
22 over the non-resident class members under the Fourteenth 23 Amendment. The Illinois Supreme Court quite clearly and 24 unequivocally held that the International Shoe test 25 established by this Court is inapplicable to

1 non-resident plaintiff class members. In that sense 2 that issue is final at this time.

3 QUESTION: But we don't know whether actually 4 a class will be certified as broadly as you just stated 5 it.

6 MR. MILLER: No. The one issue that the 7 Illinois Supreme Court leaves open to the Illinois Trial
8 Court is the question of manageability. But I think 9 it's reasonably clear given the directiveness of the 10 mandate of the Illinois Supreme Court that at a minimum 11 the Illinois Trial Court will certify a class consisting 12 of all non-residents whose rights arise under laws that 13 they would deem to be similar.

14 QUESTION: Well, I'm just wondering whether we 15 have to address that issue until we find out that's what 16 the Illinois court's going to do.

17 MR. MILLER: It is inconceivable to me, 18 Justice Brennan, that there is any issue left open with 19 regard to the question of the applicability of minimum 20 contacts and the power of the State of Illinois to 21 assert jurisdiction.

22 QUESTION: How about the class action? Has 23 there been an order here?

24 MR. MILLER: There has been a mandate by the 25 Illinois Supreme Court to the Illinois Trial Court to

1 consider this question of manageability under the laws
2 of the other 49 states of the Union.

3 QUESTION: Well, I suppose one of your 4 answers, Mr. Miller, might be that the Court granted 5 certiorari.

6 MR. MILLER: Yes.

7 QUESTION: And perhaps a response would be 8 that only four Justices are required to grant certiorari.

9 (Laughter.)

10 QUESTION: And another might be that there's 11 an instrument called DIG which translates "dismissed as 12 improvidently granted."

13 MR. MILLER: Well, I --

14 QUESTION: But as long as four want it
15 granted, they're supposed to decide it on the merits.

16 MR. MILLER: I think --

17 QUESTION: That's the full four anyway.

18 MR. MILLER: I think you've covered all the 19 possibilities now.

20 (Laughter.)

21 QUESTION: Yes, but no one raised the final 22 judgment question at the certiorari stage. In all 23 candor, I didn't think of it then, and I have thought of 24 it now; so I don't consider myself bound by the four 25 votes to the contrary.

1 MR. MILLER: Let me simply add that the last 2 four cases that this Court has heard involving questions
3 of state court jurisdiction -- Shaffer, Kulki, Woodson, 4 and Rush -- have all come to this Court on a motion to 5 dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction.

6 QUESTION: But the difference is that in each 7 of those cases the entire litigation might have 8 terminated depending on how this Court decided the 9 issue, whereas here it really is not even certain that 10 there will be a class any broader than the Illinois 11 residents, because it's theoretically possible that a 12 judge sitting in Cook County might decide that all other 13 states have different rules or they're enough different 14 that he doesn't want to fuss around with anything except 15 an Illinois class.

16 MR. MILLER: Yes. Two modest addenda. One 17 would be in the Woodson case there was no certainty that 18 the action would terminate because there were other 19 defendants remaining before the Court.

20 Second, as I indicated to Justice Brennan, the 21 mandate of the Illinois Supreme Court is so directive 22 that the Illinois Trial Court would be hard-pressed to 23 dismiss a non-resident subclass of those people coming 24 from states whose laws were characterized as similar to 25 the Illinois consumer protection statute.

1 QUESTION: Yes, I agree with that, but it does 2 seem to me possible that the trial judge could say well, 3 there are no other laws quite like ours. I mean we'd 4 have to do some research to find out whether that's 5 plausible or not, but it's at least theoretically 6 possible.

7 MR. MILLER: It is theoretically possible, 8 Justice Stevens. Might I just add that there is 9 language in Cox Broadcasting v. Cohn and the comparable 10 language in an in-chambers opinion in Rosenblatt v.
11 American Cyanimide indicates that this is the kind of 12 question where the issue, this issue, this central issue 13 may never come back to this Court, and you have, in 14 effect, a destabilized situation.

15 In Cohn you will recall it was the question of 16 the restraint on publication in Georgia of a rape 17 victim's name. The Supreme Court in that case felt that 18 issue was important enough to resolve lest it not come 19 back and leave everyone in a quandary.

20 I think as one looks around the country these 21 days, one finds a greater and greater assertion by state 22 courts, national class actions, some states not 23 asserting those class actions; and we have a situation 24 in which a good many judgments are potentially unstable 25 and subject to collateral attack.

1 QUESTION: But as you argue on the merits,
2 this case is the most extreme that has arisen.

3 MR. MILLER: Absolutely. I think this case is 4 extreme because there is undisputed evidence in the 5 record that Gillette is incorporated in Delaware, 6 principal place of business is in Massachusetts. The 7 Accent table lighter, which is the source of the 8 consumer claim in this case, that promotion was planned 9 and executed in Massachusetts. All receipts of 10 applicants for the promotion were handled in Minnesota.
11 No aspect --

12 QUESTION: Why Minnesota, do you know?

13 MR. MILLER: Yes, yes.

14 (Laughter.)

15 MR. MILLER: Spotts International, a
16 promotional processing house, is located in Minnesota.
17 So Gillette gave that company the business to improve 18 the employment situation in that state.

19 All the promotions went to Minnesota. The 20 requests for the Accent table lighter came from every 21 state in the Union, Puerto Rico, the District of 22 Columbia, and Canada. Nothing was done in Illinois
23 except an attempt to promote responses to the promotion 24 in Illinois. Only 11,465 of those who did not get the 25 table lighter came from Illinois. Approximately 168,000

1 did not come from Illinois, have no contacts from 2 Illinois, and there is no dispute about that.

3 QUESTION: The class -- is the class frozen in 4 any sense now? It might be 268,000 before you get 5 through.

6 MR. MILLER: No. The class is frozen now 7 because the --

8 QUESTION: It is?

9 MR. MILLER: -- The promotion has ended. Four 10 hundred and twenty thousand applications --

11 QUESTION: What about those who would claim 12 they would have applied but for some theory?

13 MR. MILLER: I think one would be hard-pressed 14 to make that claim four years after the promotion. The 15 promotion took place in 1978. Again, I think it's 16 unrealistic that anyone else will come out of the 17 woodwork.

18 There is the possibility that the class
19 actually will shrink to some slight degree if Illinois 20 goes forward with the opt out option. There is also 21 some indication that certain members of the class of 22 people who did not receive the lighter feel that their 23 claims, to the extent that they even thought that they 24 had claims, were more than fairly compromised since 25 Gillette did return their money, did send a letter of 1 explanation, and did send them a free Cricket lighter.

2 Indeed --

3 QUESTION: Mr. Miller, how -- I suppose the 4 real parties in interest here are the members of the 5 class, if it's certified. They're the people whose 6 cause of action we're talking about. And how does 7 Gillette have the right to come in and raise the 8 question now for their benefit or the lack thereof?

9 MR. MILLER: This Court in Hanson and Denckla
10 allowed Florida defendants to assert a lack of 11 jurisdiction over a Delaware trustee.

12 QUESTION: Wasn't that an indispensable party
13 situation?

14 MR. MILLER: Yes, it was. Yes, it was.

15 QUESTION: Which would go to whether the Court 16 had jurisdiction over the case. I don't think that's 17 similar to letting Gillette come in and argue on behalf 18 of the potential class --

19 MR. MILLER: With great deference, I would 20 argue that there are very few people more indispensable 21 to an action than the plaintiffs. We are talking about 22 168,000 involuntary, nonvolitional plaintiffs who have 23 not indicated to any degree that they are interested in 24 pursuing this claim.

25 The problem for Gillette from a standing

1 perspective is that if the Illinois Supreme Court 2 opinion is allowed to stand, it will be subjected to the 3 claims of these 168,000 nonvolitional plaintiffs in 4 Illinois in what I think must be characterized as a 5 frighteningly monstrous, in complexity terms, lawsuit
6 followed by a judgment that has, unless this Court
7 speaks, extremely dubious full faith and credit 8 implications.

9 We are now in the position of looking at the 10 168,000 nonvolitional plaintiffs and realizing they have 11 no incentive to come forward at this time.
12 Pragmatically they have not received notice.

13 QUESTION: But under the Illinois court order
14 they would be given notice, as I understand it.

15 MR. MILLER: They will be given notice.

16 QUESTION: And they can opt out.

17 MR. MILLER: But if I might just pursue the 18 standing point for a moment, they have no notice at this 19 point. They will not get notice until some time after 20 jurisdiction is or isn't established. They have very 21 little incentive to come in. Number one, their claims 22 are only for $7.95 apiece. And number three, they're in 23 a heads-I-win/tails-you-lose situation; because if they 24 remain on the outside of the action and the case goes to 25 judgment and the class prevails, they can take advantage

1 of it. But should Gillette prevail on the merits, they 2 can then make the very argument that we are making at 3 this point.

4 QUESTION: Well, that's just a typical class
5 action suit. It may not be -- I suppose you would say 6 they could have a class action of all Illinois residents.

7 MR. MILLER: Yes, yes.

8 QUESTION: Well, that would -- the same thing
9 would be true of all of those people.

10 MR. MILLER: I do not think that is as clear.

11 QUESTION: Well, they can opt out and take 12 advantage of it.

13 MR. MILLER: They can opt out, but if they opt 14 out, my understanding of the Illinois opt out law is 15 that they cannot then take advantage if they opt out.

16 QUESTION: Well, do you think Gillette would 17 really, if it lost the case, really defend against 18 another party in the same position?

19 MR. MILLER: It's very hard to speak to that 20 issue at this point.

21 QUESTION: Well, I don't think it's hard to 22 speak to it at all.

23 MR. MILLER: The fact remains, Justice White, 24 that the theory of the Hanson and Denckla standing point 25 is equally applicable in this situation because those

1 Florida defendants were making exactly the same point
2 with regard to that indispensable Delaware trustee:
3 unless you get him in now or determine that he can't be 4 brought in now, we are subjected to this litigation and 5 a threat of second litigation.

6 QUESTION: Right.

7 QUESTION: Mr. Miller, am I right in thinking
8 that Gillette raises no minimum contacts constitutional 9 arguments in its own behalf?

10 MR. MILLER: In its own behalf, no.

11 QUESTION: I am right.

12 MR. MILLER: You are right.

13 QUESTION: Could a plaintiff from Montana then 14 come to Illinois and file an action against Gillette for 15 the lighter?

16 MR. MILLER: In the Illinois court, yes.

17 QUESTION: Yes. And could a group of 18 plaintiffs get together and do that?

19 MR. MILLER: A group of plaintiffs 20 volitionally can accede or consent or seek out the 21 jurisdiction of the Illinois courts.

22 QUESTION: So are you basically saying that 23 due process allows an opt in procedure but not an opt 24 out procedure?

25 MR. MILLER: I think if the State of Illinois

1 chose to pursue its consumer protection policy by 2 enacting a statute that provided a mechanism of inviting 3 non-resident class members to opt in to an Illinois 4 action, that would be constitutional.

5 What it seems to Gillette offends the 6 Constitution is the attempt by the State of Illinois to 7 assert jurisdiction over a group of people who have not 8 manifested any acquiescence in Illinois jurisdiction.

9 QUESTION: Even under the notice and opt out 10 procedure.

11 MR. MILLER: I think what this Court has 12 decided in an unbroken line of cases from International 13 Shoe is that in the absence of minimum contacts between 14 a state and a party, that state cannot assert 15 jurisdiction under the due process clause of the 16 Fourteenth Amendment.

17 QUESTION: But weren't those all minimum 18 contacts required on behalf of the defendant?

19 MR. MILLER: Yes, yes, except conceivably the 20 Mullane case. This Court last year in Logan v.
21 Zimmerman Brush clearly stated that a cause of action is 22 a property right under the Fourteenth Amendment.

23 It seems to me impossible to draw a 24 distinction between holding a defendant liable for $7.95
25 and issuing a decree or a judgment that forecloses a

1 plaintiff from asserting a claim for $7.95. And it
2 seems to me that is basically the issue that was before
3 this Court in Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank and Trust 4 Company where at issue were the claims by a variety of 5 non-New York trust beneficiaries with regard to the 6 settlement of a New York trustee's accounts. And 7 Justice Jackson writing for the Court in that case made 8 it very clear that he was quite concerned from a 9 jurisdictional perspective about the foreclosure effect 10 on those beneficiaries of not being able to charge the 11 New York trustee with fraud or mismanagement or 12 excessive fees.

13 It seems to me that this case is a little 14 different -- indeed, it is not different -- from any 15 attempt by say Gillette --

16 QUESTION: Mr. Miller, after all, there would 17 be notice and an opportunity to opt out. And failing to 18 opt out you think isn't equivalent to consent?

19 MR. MILLER: No, I do not. Again --

20 QUESTION: I'd certainly have to say that 21 because you have just said that if there was consent, if 22 they voluntarily came into Illinois, it would be quite 23 all right.

24 MR. MILLER: I think that is right, but I
25 think the Court's opinions, particularly the last four

1 opinions, have been absolutely clear in drawing
2 distinctions between three elements -- among three 3 elements of due process: jurisdiction, notice, and an 4 opportunity to be heard.

5 The Respondents, and I fear the Illinois
6 Supreme Court, have simply made it appear as if there 7 were only requirements of notice and opt out or opt --

8 QUESTION: Suppose there was proof that a 9 person hadn't -- a person had notice, and he decided not 10 to opt out?

11 MR. MILLER: I do not see how the State of 12 Illinois could bind that person. This Court's opinion --

13 QUESTION: He could say -- he could sit right 14 there and say well, if it turns out well, that's fine;
15 if it turns out bad, I'll sue him anyway.

16 MR. MILLER: The author of Insurance
17 Corporation of Ireland one year ago said --

18 QUESTION: I thought you would get to that.

19 (Laughter.)

20 MR. MILLER: -- Made it very clear that an 21 individual who feels there is no jurisdiction in the 22 tribunal may simply ignore the proceedings.

23 QUESTION: He does so at some risk, of course.

24 QUESTION: At his peril.

25 MR. MILLER: He does so at some risk, but not

1 much risk if it is true that there is no jurisdiction.

2 QUESTION: They can't bind him just by his 3 failing to object.

4 MR. MILLER: I do not see how the State of 5 Illinois can write me a letter in Massachusetts and say 6 "Hi, this is notice we have an action going. You have 7 the privilege" --

8 QUESTION: Either speak up or be stuck.

9 MR. MILLER: That's right. That is not the 10 purposeful availing that the Court has spoken of. That 11 is not a contact or tie or relation with a forum. That 12 is a unilateral act by a third person. And it does not 13 seem to me that notice, opt out, or even adequacy of 14 representation can constitutionally fill the gap.

15 QUESTION: What about our decision last term
16 in Underwriters National Assurance Company where a state 17 court exercised jurisdiction in what amounted to a class 18 action involving people in other states?

19 MR. MILLER: That is one of the many, many 20 cases that have come to this Court that are in 21 appearance multi-state class actions; but when one looks 22 at the facts of each and every one of those cases, each 23 and every one of them, one discovers that either there's 24 a clear satisfaction of minimum contacts or there is an 25 entity created by the forum, which decisions as far back

1 as Pennoyer and Neff make clear the forum can adjudicate 2 and make decisions about rights and liabilities, or 3 there's a fear that there will be conflicting judgments
4 resulting from sequential actions. In other words, it 5 is either a res, an entity, a set of minimum contacts, 6 an organization created by the forum, or a very palpable
7 fear of conflicting judgments.

8 In this case you have nothing but 168,000 9 people with completely undifferentiated and 10 individualized damage claims, with no contacts, no
11 basis, no legitimate interest in the State of Illinois 12 to regulate, none whatsoever.

13 QUESTION: What if these, instead of 14 inexpensive Cricket lighters we have $10,000 value
15 widgets, and the suit were brought in the district
16 court, federal district court in Illinois? Would you 17 say that a class action could be maintained in the 18 federal district court?

19 MR. MILLER: And we're assuming diversity of 20 citizenship jurisdiction.

21 QUESTION: Right.

22 MR. MILLER: Under the decisions of all of the 23 circuits, according to language in the Insurance
24 Corporation of Ireland case, the existing jurisprudence
25 under the Irian-Thompkins doctrine strongly suggests

1 that a state-city-university has no further 2 jurisdictional reach than the courts of the state in 3 which it's in.

4 Indeed, your reference to a $10,000 claim I 5 think very graphically shows what the threat to 6 federalism is in this case. After all, the proposition 7 that a non-resident without contacts, without 8 acquiescence is free to litigate in his home forum 9 before a tribunal that is constituted by political 10 forces responsive to him, a tribunal that understands 11 the social fabric of the law it's to be applying, a 12 tribunal that has a direct and substantial interest not 13 only in applying the law but applying it correctly, the 14 whole theory there is first the fairness to that 15 individual litigant, his right to claim the forum of his 16 state; and second, to make sure, as Justice White 17 remarked in the Woodson case, that the states recognize 18 that they are co-equal sovereigns in a federal system.

19 QUESTION: But I take it your answer is the 20 federal district court wouldn't have jurisdiction either 21 --

22 MR. MILLER: That is correct. That is correct.

23 Let me just pursue the federalism point, 24 because I think it really is central to this case. The 25 fears that one perceives of allowing Illinois to

1 collectivize 168,000 cases, even though they have not 2 been asserted by the individual holders of those claims, 3 is first there is a substantial risk that this will 4 allow cases to be tried in the wrong place. If you go 5 back to cases like Mullane and Ibbs, indeed all of the 6 cases cited in Respondent's brief, you have a forum with 7 a significant interest in the dispute because it created 8 the entity.

9 QUESTION: Well, Mr. Miller, you used the word
10 "substantial risk" in the argument you just made, and I
11 suppose that conveys your idea that we can't foresee
12 exactly what would happen if an Illinois judgment
13 including claims on behalf of some plaintiffs from out 14 of state became final, and Gillette paid off on it, and 15 then another complaint was brought by someone who had 16 accepted the offer in another state.

17 Just as a matter of prudential jurisprudence 18 wouldn't it make more sense for us in this rather 19 unknown area that you're talking about to wait until 20 that happens rather than to --

21 MR. MILLER: With deference, Justice
22 Rehnquist, I think it's most prudential to maintain the 23 unbroken line of minimum contacts cases, because that 24 way and only that way are you likely to get states
25 respecting each other in terms of jurisdictional

1 acquisition. And with great trepidation I suggest to 2 you that given the Court's approach to state choice of 3 law, it is now only through the maintenance of the 4 jurisdiction principle under Shoe that this Court can 5 guard against questionable, indeed potentially abusive 6 applications of state law. Because in a situation in 7 which you have no jurisdictional standing -- and that is 8 what the Respondent and the Supreme Court of Illinois
9 have decided -- in a situation in which you have no 10 jurisdictional standing, where Illinois can take 11 jurisdiction because it means well, then you have the 12 spectre of cases being tried in the wrong fora, not the 13 fora where the contacts are significant, indeed
14 overpowering, like Ibbs and Mullane and Hansberry.

15 You also run the risk that that forum court 16 being subjected to the normal pressures of judicial 17 administration will have a great tendency to apply its 18 own law, thereby violating the individual's 19 constitutional right to have his property, her property, 20 his claim, her claim adjudicated by a local forum under 21 local law by a local judge before a local jury, unless 22 that person manifests a willingness to accede to the 23 jurisdictional power of another state.

24 It seems to me that must mean -- that must be 25 what this Court means when it persists in the notion

1 that the states are co-equal sovereigns, that 2 territorial boundaries have not been eliminated in this 3 country, that each of the states must acknowledge and 4 respect the rights of the other members of the polity.

5 I'll reserve my remaining time.

6 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Atkins.

7 ORAL ARGUMENT OF ROBERT S. ATKINS, ESQ.,

8 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT

9 MR. ATKINS: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
10 please this Court:

11 I still believe, notwithstanding the remarks 12 of my learned colleague, that we live in one nation, and 13 we are one country, and we have many states. I feel 14 compelled to say, however, that there was an air of 15 divisiveness that I gathered from Professor Miller's 16 remarks; and I think that if it was adopted, namely that 17 there be a reversal of the Illinois Supreme Court's 18 decision, it would have a chilling effect on consumer
19 class actions which I think have been encouraged, 20 certainly as indicated in the Snyder case by this Court, 21 that it be tried in the state courts.

22 As a matter of fact, in the Snyder case it's 23 very interesting. It was a multi-district or 24 multi-state class. It involved state law. And we had 25 people, 4,000 shareholders, and they lived in various

1 parts of the United States. And this Court said that 2 suits involving issues of state law are brought on the 3 basis of diversity of citizenship can often be most 4 appropriately tried in state court.

5 And I suggest particularly under those 6 circumstances and with the Court's statement in Standard
7 Oil in terms of class action being a viable mechanism 8 for the redress of these kind of grievances that with 9 the state directly at the present time, I respectfully 10 submit that the Supreme Court's decision in the State of 11 Illinois should not be reversed. In fact, it should not 12 be even addressed at this time; because I respectfully 13 submit that there are two very important reasons why the 14 decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois should not be 15 addressed.

16 And that is principally on the basis of 17 rightness for review and on the basis of standing. And 18 with respect to the rightness argument, there's been no
19 deprivation here. What has been deprived at the present 20 time? There's been no class certification. There's 21 been no adverse judgment. There's been no attempt to 22 enforce or challenge any judgment.

23 What -- what we don't even know --

24 QUESTION: Well, what do you think we ought to 25 do with the case, Mr. Atkins?

1 MR. ATKINS: I think, Your Honor, that this
2 Court should dismiss the petition as improvidently
3 granted and leave the Illinois Trial Court to determine 4 this case, move on with this case, and have faith and 5 reliance in its state court, because I think that that's 6 where it belongs. As a matter --

7 QUESTION: Well, do you -- do you suggest 8 there's not a final judgment or just that we should 9 dismiss it as improvidently granted?

10 MR. ATKINS: I suggest that with respect to -- 11 it may be a final judgment with respect to the issue 12 before the Illinois Supreme Court, but it doesn't 13 necessarily mean that it's right for review --

14 QUESTION: Right, right.

15 MR. ATKINS: -- Of the issue that has been 16 raised. And the issue raised is the constitutional 17 issues, which as Justice Brandeis has indicated in 18 Ashwander, that the Court should be particularly 19 reluctant and show judicial restraint with respect to 20 getting into deciding constitutional issues. And the 21 issue before this Court raised by the Petitioner is 22 clearly a constitutional issue.

23 And it's very interesting in terms of the type 24 of case that we have here. It's a class action. As 25 Professor Miller has stated in one of his numerous

1 articles, he indicated that class actions, almost all of 2 them are settled. Well, if almost all class actions are 3 settled, I submit that this may never raise its head 4 with respect to this piece of litigation because it may 5 be disposed of and disposed of appropriately in the 6 state court.

7 I suggest --

8 QUESTION: Would settlement of this particular 9 class action by Gillette in the Illinois action really 10 solve Gillette's problems, if Mr. Miller is right and 11 the problem is later suits in other jurisdictions?

12 MR. ATKINS: I think it would, Judge, for this 13 reason. I think that in my experience in class action 14 litigation, also in accordance with Rule 23 in the 15 statute of the State of Illinois, for any settlement -- 16 we'll say a settlement that is classwide -- there will 17 be notice given in terms of the class members, and they 18 will have an opportunity certainly to opt out, as we 19 have in the class. If it is disposed of by the Illinois
20 Supreme Court in terms of a judicial approval of a 21 settlement as being fair and adequate with respect to 22 the class, there will be no further exposure with 23 respect to those persons who didn't opt out.

24 Now, when we're talking --

25 QUESTION: Now, that just doesn't make any

1 sense at all to me, your answer. I would think anyone
2 who didn't opt out, if Mr. Miller is right, could well
3 have an action say in the State of Oregon where he lives
4 under Oregon law.

5 MR. ATKINS: That's correct. That's correct.
6 The people who could file their own lawsuit in their own 7 state, that is correct. And if they do, I would 8 classify that as an opt out. In other words, I would 9 think that they are still hanging there, and 10 realistically speaking, Gillette would have to make an 11 accommodation with respect to those people.

12 But with respect to the 798 claims and in my 13 experience with respect to the small claim class
14 actions, that's really not realistic. And we're talking 15 about a rightness, we're talking about -- we're talking 16 about the possibility of conjecture and speculation and 17 possible future harm. And I don't think these 18 possibilities and I don't think these conjecture matters 19 should really get into the central core as to whether or 20 not this issue at this stage is right for review.

21 Also because, as this Court knows, there's not 22 a firm factual background in terms of determining all 23 the issues in this situation. And so I think that it is 24 not right for review at this time.

25 QUESTION: Well, are you saying -- would your

1 position be different if the individual claims were say 2 $2,500 each instead of $7.95 each?

3 MR. ATKINS: No. Judge -- Mr. Justice, the 4 position would be the same. The position is that there 5 is a mechanism, a class mechanism that basically 6 disposes in federal court as well as state court these 7 matters through settlement in most of the cases, and 8 whether it's -- it still would be conjectural in terms 9 of someone coming in and filing their own action, and 10 whether it's in state court or federal court.

11 QUESTION: But, Mr. Atkins, do you get to the 12 settlement posture till you know what the class is?

13 MR. ATKINS: We get to the settlement posture, 14 Judge, in my -- in my experience at the time that we do 15 notify, which sometimes is the same time.

16 QUESTION: But before you notify, you've got 17 to certify a class.

18 MR. ATKINS: That's correct.

19 QUESTION: And then you send out a notice and 20 you know who opts out, and then you start talking 21 settlement.

22 MR. ATKINS: Yes, sir.

23 QUESTION: And I'm just wondering, you've got 24 an $8.10 claim here. At least that's -- as I understand 25 it, that's the maximum -- you seem to admit that in your

1 brief.

2 MR. ATKINS: That's -- that's pretty close,
3 Judge, right.

4 QUESTION: And if that's true, I'm just 5 wondering how many mailings back and forth you can 6 afford and have anything left.

7 MR. ATKINS: As a practical matter, Your 8 Honor, you've put your finger on a situation where the 9 number in a class are important from an economical 10 viewpoint that was recognized in Standard Oil. And 11 we're talking about a million four hundred thousand case 12 if our class is composed of everyone who didn't get 13 their lighters throughout the United States.

14 QUESTION: And each one has a maximum recovery
15 of around $8.00.

16 MR. ATKINS: That's right, Your Honor.

17 QUESTION: What's the economic justification 18 for that kind of a lawsuit in the federal courts under 19 any circumstances?

20 MR. ATKINS: We are in state court, Judge, in 21 this case.

22 QUESTION: In state or federal courts.

23 MR. ATKINS: As far as judiciary concern, I
24 suppose that if you -- if you cheat people a little bit 25 but do it a lot that you can go by free. The position

1 of the consumer fraud statutes and class actions in 2 particular, I think, Your Honor, is to provide a viable
3 mechanism for legal redress.

4 QUESTION: Suppose you -- suppose you
5 prevailed on everything. Is there any likelihood that 6 the members of the class will get more than $4 apiece or 7 thereabouts less all the postage?

8 MR. ATKINS: We have figured that out, Judge, 9 and it's something in the neighborhood of over $5.00.

10 QUESTION: Five for each one of them.

11 MR. ATKINS: Yes, sir.

12 QUESTION: And the rest will be going where?

13 MR. ATKINS: Well, if our class includes 14 everyone who does not opt out, then it would apply to 15 everyone with respect --

16 QUESTION: Well, the rest of it's going to the 17 lawyers, is that not so, and to the expenses of 18 litigation?

19 MR. ATKINS: There is administrative expenses
20 and there are judicial expenses that go into any class
21 action litigation. And if we prevail and if Gillette 22 has in fact deceived 180,000 people who were in our 23 class, then you're correct.

24 QUESTION: You say judicial expenses. Are you 25 suggesting you have to pay the judges?

1 MR. ATKINS: No. I didn't mean that.

2 (Laughter.)

3 QUESTION: You mean attorneys' fees.

4 MR. ATKINS: Yes. I -- I misspoke. I
5 misspoke.

6 The other issue that is very important that 7 we'd like to address is the standing issue, because for 8 Gillette to come here -- and I think that Professor 9 Miller has admitted today that he is asserting the 10 rights not of Gillette here, but he's basically 11 asserting the rights of the third party, absent class 12 members. And as indicated in the case of Singleton v.
13 Wulff, the Court will try to determine whether or not 14 someone can come into this Court and assert the 15 constitutional rights of third parties, because -- and 16 it's a very interesting and important observation -- 17 that it may well be that these parties don't want to 18 assert these rights, and it may not necessarily even 19 come up.

20 In Justice Powell said in the Singleton case 21 in his dissent, that it must be a practical 22 impossibility for it to be raised for the Court to go 23 into.

24 QUESTION: When -- when there is a 25 communication with the potential members of the class is

1 there any obligation to tell them what is the maximum 2 recovery that they can possibly anticipate?

3 MR. ATKINS: Normally in my experience you 4 indicate the parameters of the lawsuit or in the 5 settlement, what the terms of the settlement. That's 6 commonplace, Your Honor, and that is what was done.

7 QUESTION: Do you tell the individual who's 8 reading the letter that the maximum that you can expect 9 to get if you respond to this and join the class is 10 $4.83?

11 MR. ATKINS: To be perfectly fair you would 12 come pretty close to trying to tell them that, because 13 the judge --

14 QUESTION: -- Not tell them.

15 MR. ATKINS: If I might say, because just as 16 was brought up before, lawyers' expenses in the case, 17 administrative expenses may not wholly have been 18 determined at this juncture, so you can't wholly note.
19 But you try to work out the parameters in terms of 20 letting people know what the expenses are and what he 21 could obtain or would obtain in connection with the 22 lawsuit.

23 QUESTION: Do you enclose a return envelope
24 with a stamp on it?

25 MR. ATKINS: It depends on whether there is 1 claims in the case or there are not claims in the case.

2 QUESTION: Well, if you're -- you're 3 circulating a class of plaintiffs with an $8.00 claim do 4 you put in a return envelope or not?

5 MR. ATKINS: In an opt out procedure probably 6 not.

7 QUESTION: Well, it's going to cost him a few 8 cents anyway to opt out.

9 MR. ATKINS: That's correct.

10 QUESTION: Twenty cents.

11 QUESTION: I said a few.

12 MR. ATKINS: That's correct.

13 QUESTION: F-e-w.

14 QUESTION: May I also ask, does the notice
15 customarily in Illinois class actions discuss whether or 16 not the class members, a) might be subjected to 17 discovery, and b) might have to pay some costs?

18 MR. ATKINS: Well, one of the things that -- 19 differences in terms of the class action that we have 20 pointed out is that costs are not normally assessed 21 against absent class members --

22 QUESTION: But maybe they're not normally, but 23 can you say for certain that they would not be in a 24 particular case? Say in this particular case here you 25 had the whole class certified, and then the case went

1 along for a while and you found out that the rule in New 2 York is a little different, and all the New York lawyer
3 -- all the New York purchasers lose because they 4 couldn't prove that they actually bought the material 5 instead of having it given to them or something like 6 that, who would pay for their mailings?

7 MR. ATKINS: I think that you have again
8 addressed, Your Honor, a management problem, and whether 9 or not they even should be certified; because if there 10 are certain differences with respect to the laws of an 11 individual state, these are some of the problems that 12 may come up in a case that --

13 QUESTION: But perhaps -- what I'm suggesting 14 is there may be differences that don't surface at the 15 outset. At the time of the certification it appears 16 that the laws are uniform, and then in a long case, and 17 sometimes cases go on for quite a while, there's a 18 decision comes out in New York that clarifies the law 19 there, and you find out there's a little problem in New 20 York.

21 MR. ATKINS: The flexibility of a class action 22 device would be able to permit either a subclassing with 23 respect to that or even a carving out with respect to 24 that class.

25 QUESTION: I understand that, but the reason I

1 mention those examples, what is the -- in Illinois what 2 is the practice with respect to telling a person who has 3 a decision to make, shall I opt out or not, as to 4 whether or not he might be subjected or costs and so
5 forth? Is there anything --

6 MR. ATKINS: It's been my observation that he 7 is not told because the state of the law is such that he 8 does not have those expenses.

9 Now, if the law were something else, I suppose 10 -- that's not our case.

11 QUESTION: Is it settled in Illinois that he 12 is not responsible for discovery and not responsible for 13 cost?

14 MR. ATKINS: That's my understanding, Your 15 Honor.

16 It -- it -- in the -- in the point -- one more 17 point with respect to standing which I think is 18 important, and it sort of puts it in context; and that 19 is that the absent class members, whether they're in 20 Iowa, Michigan, California or Arizona -- I mean if they 21 thought that Gillette, who as many of them may not know 22 had deceived them with respect to this promotion, was in 23 the United States Supreme Court and arguing that their 24 constitutional rights have been violated because of the 25 lawsuit that's been filed by a similar purchaser in the

1 same position, I think that they would not support that 2 at all. I don't think that they necessarily would want 3 Gillette championing their rights. I think that it's 4 important -- it's almost akin to the fox telling the 5 farmer that he would be a good protector of his 6 chickens. I mean it's just not sincere. And I think 7 that is one of the reasons that standing is important in 8 terms of bringing this to the Court's attention.

9 I'd like to also address because I think it's 10 important the type of due process considerations going 11 beyond the standing of rightness issue which Mr. Miller 12 has addressed. And I think the central issue is 13 basically whether or not absent class members would 14 receive adequate due process, not merely on a 15 traditional static, ironclad kind of conception of 16 contacts which basically relate to defendants, because 17 we have a different kind of being here.

18 And their whole case, if I may suggest, Your 19 Honors, their whole case seems to rest on the fact that 20 they are the same; that defendants in the case are the 21 same as absent class members. And they're not. We 22 discussed the discovery, the costs, the attorneys' fees, 23 differences. But in terms of the judgment itself, the 24 term that in a judgment defendant must pay, what he 25 faces, what a defendant faces is either staying away and

1 having default judgment against you or coming in to 2 court and being hauled in if you're from a faraway
3 forum, hiring a lawyer and contesting it.

4 And in International Shoe and other cases of 5 this Court the due process aspect of it was what is 6 fair, what is really fair for a defendant who faces this 7 kind of coercive judgment.

8 QUESTION: I understood Mr. Miller to concede 9 quite frankly that none of our cases had applied the 10 contacts rule to plaintiffs, but I would think that 11 maybe that's because up until now you have had real live 12 plaintiffs as opposed to class action plaintiffs, and 13 that if a real live plaintiff comes into a forum and 14 sues somebody, certainly he has waived any right he had 15 to challenge jurisdiction.

16 But here you have people who are associate on 17 the plaintiff's side of the complaint who have not 18 themselves made that choice.

19 MR. ATKINS: I understand that, Your Honor, 20 that that particular issue with respect to absent class 21 members had not been adjudicated before. However, what 22 I was trying to analogize is -- is -- or state is that 23 there is great differences between defendants and absent
24 plaintiff class members in terms of the coercive effect 25 of a judgment, for example, on a defendant as

1 distinguished from what -- the most that can happen as 2 far as an absent class member is concerned is that he 3 has lost his opportunity if and when there may be 4 adjudication against him to contest that if he didn't 5 opt out.

6 QUESTION: Well, he's also lost his right -- 7 supposing he recovers the magnificent sum of $5.00 in 8 the class action you're bringing for him in Illinois, 9 and supposing he's in Oregon and Oregon has a statute 10 that says anyone who is imposed upon the way you say 11 Gillette imposed on these people shall have a right to 12 recover actual damages plus $1,000 punitive damages.

13 Now, I presume Gillette would use the Illinois 14 judgment to bar him or seek to bar him if he brought 15 suit in his home state of Oregon.

16 QUESTION: That assumes that Illinois would 17 not in any way be applying -- would be applying strictly 18 Illinois law to the situation. We have two counts in 19 this complaint. We have both a contract count and a 20 statutory consumer fraud count. And states as well as 21 the federal courts apply laws to the various states as 22 they get to them.

23 Now, if -- if, as you say, there is a punitive 24 damage count or -- or -- and there are certain states 25 that have punitive damage situations, that may be up to

1 the trial judge in terms -- and in an adversary
2 situation with Gillette on the choice of law relative to 3 application; or if it becomes unmanageable because of 4 those great differences, if there are such great 5 differences, then they may have to be subclasses. But 6 we're not real there yet. The record is not really 7 complete yet in terms --

8 QUESTION: Well, Mr. Atkins, suppose we 9 disagree with you that this case isn't right and proceed 10 to decide it. Do you think we necessarily reach in the 11 course of our decision the question of whether absent
12 class members would be bound by an adverse judgment 13 against your -- against you?

14 MR. ATKINS: Well, I think --

15 QUESTION: Suppose the case -- suppose the -- 16 the -- suppose the case goes to -- goes to trial and 17 there's a judgment against the class, a judgment in 18 favor of Gillette. Now, would the binding nature of 19 that judgment against absent class members, is it -- is 20 that an issue before us if we reach the merits in this 21 case?

22 MR. ATKINS: Well, I think that that is what 23 Professor Miller is saying would happen, and I'm 24 suggesting that we don't know at this juncture.

25 QUESTION: You don't know what?

1 MR. ATKINS: I don't know whether or not if 2 when you say take the case on the merits in terms of 3 deciding whether or not there's been a due process
4 violation because of -- relative to the absent class
5 members, and you decide what, Your Honor -- I'm not sure 6 I understand the question..

7 QUESTION: Well, if we -- is part of our 8 deciding whether there's a denial of due process the 9 question of -- is part of that question whether or not 10 absent class members would be bound.

11 MR. ATKINS: Well, I think that they would be 12 bound under the -- under the Illinois decision.

13 QUESTION: Well, what if they wouldn't be,
14 would there be a denial of due process?

15 MR. ATKINS: Well, I think that you run into 16 the full faith and credit situation with respect to the 17 validity of the Illinois court making a decision that -- 18 that would affect them. The Illinois statute now says 19 that they will have an opportunity to opt out, the 20 mechanism, and I think with -- we don't reach -- we 21 don't reach that decision -- we don't reach that 22 decision, it seems to me.

23 QUESTION: Well, I'm just wondering, perhaps 24 Gillette would win no matter how this case comes out.

25 MR. ATKINS: They may.

1 QUESTION: At least if we decided that there's 2 no denial of due process because the absent class 3 members would be bound, then they wouldn't be subjected 4 to the possibility of double judgments. That certainly 5 wouldn't hurt them too much.

6 MR. ATKINS: Well, I don't think there's any 7 question that they would be bound under the Illinois 8 decision at the present time.

9 QUESTION: There is --

10 MR. ATKINS: Assuming -- assuming --

11 QUESTION: There's no question.

12 MR. ATKINS: -- That we go through the 13 adequate representation requirement which is essential
14 to the due process in a class action. In other words, 15 if they had the adequate representation, the question is 16 -- in the collateral attack, that's when it would come 17 into play.

18 QUESTION: Again, under Illinois law and 19 Gillette prevails can it tax costs against the 168,000 20 or all those who joined?

21 MR. ATKINS: They can tax costs against the 22 represented party.

23 QUESTION: Just the ones in Illinois.

24 MR. ATKINS: That's my understanding, yes.

25 QUESTION: How about on counsel?

1 MR. ATKINS: As far as counsel's concerned?

2 QUESTION: Yes.

3 MR. ATKINS: I don't believe so.

4 QUESTION: Is there any authority under the 5 state laws to tax costs against counsel?

6 MR. ATKINS: I'm not particularly aware of 7 that, Judge.

8 QUESTION: Or to tax counsel fees against -- 9 can they tax counsel fees of the prevailing party 10 against the members of the class?

11 MR. ATKINS: For -- for -- under certain 12 situations which I suppose are gross violations, they 13 may be able to.

14 QUESTION: In other words, under the American 15 rule as distinguished from the English rule there is no 16 such authority in most of the states, is that right?

17 MR. ATKINS: That's my understanding, Judge.

18 With respect to the opt in and opt out 19 procedure that was brought up, we believe that the 20 experience with Rule 23 is very important, because in 21 Rule 23 there's a specific provision with respect to 22 opting out. The advisers, the adviser committee notes
23 the commentators, the manual of multi-district 24 litigation have all commented on the requirement of an 25 opt out situation; otherwise it would be destructive to 1 class actions.

2 We feel that this would be -- it would be 3 unworkable to have an opt in situation. It would be a 4 violation of discretion --

5 QUESTION: Let me interrupt you there, Mr.
6 Atkins, for just a -- it would be unworkable because 7 nobody's apt to spend 20 cents for a postage stamp to 8 opt in to a case like this and take the trouble to send 9 it in?

10 MR. ATKINS: The experience has been, I think 11 in terms of the commentators as well as the courts, in 12 the manual for complex litigation we're talking about 13 federal as well as state, that it would not -- that 14 people would not do that. As a matter of fact, Your 15 Honor, the commentators -- Professor Kaplan's remarks 16 about the being -- the timid, the people who would not 17 do anything, came to play in terms of the determination 18 to put that requirement, mandate the requirement merely 19 an opt out in the rule.

20 So when I say it's unworkable, unworkable in 21 terms of the purposes to be effectuated by this.

22 QUESTION: But the purposes of the class as a 23 whole, it's better -- it's kind of an inertia. People 24 don't want to do something that they're not quite fully 25 under -- they don't understand thoroughly.

1 But it seems to me that there's almost zero 2 probability of anybody opting out of an $8.00 claim when 3 it costs you about 50 cents to opt out.

4 MR. ATKINS: I would -- I would --

5 QUESTION: And isn't it almost a certainty
6 that there will be no opt outs in this case?

7 MR. ATKINS: I would have to go along with 8 that assessment, Your Honor.

9 QUESTION: So that it's kind of a -- it's 10 almost a charade in a way. You're in effect going 11 through a procedure that is designed to give people a 12 choice that you really just don't believe anybody's 13 going to make. It seems to me it's a little different 14 if it was a $100,000 claim, but with a $7.00 or $8.00
15 claim to say do you want to spend a dollar to tell us 16 whether you want to take this big gamble or not --

17 MR. ATKINS: Well, I think because the 18 flexible standards of due process which is central to 19 this case, that also has to be put into the mix in terms 20 of whether or not a proposition a constitutional law is

22 QUESTION: They're not giving up very much, 23 you're saying. If they lose an $8.00 claim, who cares?

24 MR. ATKINS: Well, I -- I -- I didn't say
25 that. I --

1 QUESTION: Well, but that's the other side of 2 the coin, I suppose.

3 MR. ATKINS: I say that it should work for all 4 people. You should provide mechanism. I mean granted
5 in a small case the person is not going to -- he may not 6 more so than a large case. But it's been my experience 7 in the large cases because of the supervision of the 8 courts, because of the necessity of adequacy of 9 representation these cases are settled and disposed of, 10 and there are few opt outs, even in the large cases 11 where literally hundreds of thousands of dollars are due 12 and -- or whose attorneys review the situation or the 13 settlement albeit, because they've reviewed it and they 14 decide that they're better off to go along after 15 reviewing it. That is a practical answer to what you 16 said.

17 QUESTION: Well, the practical assumption, I 18 guess, that underlies the -- the approach to the case is 19 that the plaintiff is going to win. That's sort of the 20 basic assumption that seems to be made in these cases.

21 MR. ATKINS: There have been class actions
22 where plaintiffs have lost, Your Honor.

23 QUESTION: I know there have, but I'm not sure 24 that --

25 MR. ATKINS: I've been involved in them.

1 QUESTION: Yeah, well --

2 QUESTION: Perhaps the rule should be changed
3 to provide that there's no recovery for anyone who 4 doesn't affirmatively opt in.

5 MR. ATKINS: Well, that changes the -- what 6 you're suggesting, Your Honor, is changing Rule 23 with 7 respect to the federal court and applying those to 8 states or the entire country. I would suggest that for 9 the reasons stated in the manual, in Professor Miller's 10 book, in Rule 23, it's a destructive class action
11 mechanism. And I would think that if it's going to work 12 in terms of a vehicle to redress legal grievances for 13 small claimants that the opt out procedure is fair.

14 QUESTION: Well, that's really up to Illinois, 15 isn't it?

16 MR. ATKINS: Absolutely, absolutely.
17 Absolutely, Justice. And Illinois has -- has -- 18 legislature has decided to have -- to put into operation 19 a statute that's similar to Rule 23 and which provides 20 an opt out mechanism. And in terms of the -- it -- it 21 supports the very policy of class actions.

22 And I should say this, that as this Court said
23 in Snyder and said also in -- in the Standard Oil case
24 in Hawaii in terms of support of class actions, in terms 25 of the attorney generals who believe that it's -- it's

1 -- it's a necessary deterrent in terms of a problem that 2 we have in our midst, that it's no time to turn back the 3 clock in terms of permitting states to take these cases 4 that are meaningful cases and shouldn't be in federal 5 court and certainly can't be in federal court and 6 provide some legal redress for the grievances.

7 QUESTION: Mr. Atkins, do I get your position 8 clearly that if there are any due process rights of 9 these non-resident class members, Illinois satisfies 10 them simply by the opt out procedure?

11 MR. ATKINS: Not simply, Your Honor.

12 QUESTION: What else?

13 MR. ATKINS: I think that that's part of it.
14 The adequate representation, the scrutiny of the 15 courts. The opt out procedure complies with procedural 16 due process. Rather than a static kind of mechanism in 17 terms of no minimum contacts, you're out of court, we 18 are saying let the Illinois courts within the framework 19 of an Illinois statute, within the provisions of the 20 Constitution relative to the due process, let this thing 21 grow. Let the courts of Illinois or the courts of 22 another state apply their mechanisms. And I think there 23 is enough protections there and not the kind of bugaboos
24 and conjectures and speculations that somehow may occur 25 to the interstate system, may occur to some other

1 states. We have some very qualified state court judges, 2 and I think that they should be able to handle these 3 matters.

4 QUESTION: Well, you wouldn't suggest, would 5 you, that -- that Illinois consistently with the 6 Constitution could require Gillette to pay $8.00 times
7 168,000 in the court for distribution among class 8 members, and at the same time concede that many of those 9 members who did not opt out would not be bound?

10 MR. ATKINS: Well, if -- are you talking about 11 an adjudication or are you talking about a settlement, 12 Your Honor?

13 QUESTION: I'm talking about an adjudication.
14 If they require -- if the judgment requires Gillette to 15 pay in a certain amount of money for 168,000 people, 16 that's on the premise that everybody who didn't opt out 17 would be bound.

18 MR. ATKINS: That's correct.

19 QUESTION: And if that's wrong, Gillette, it 20 seems to me, has some due process claim of its own, not 21 just for absent class members.

22 MR. ATKINS: Well, Gillette could -- Gillette
23 could argue the -- you're talking about Gillette's 24 arguing their own due process rights?

25 QUESTION: Yes. Double liability.

1 QUESTION: Double jeopardy.

2 MR. ATKINS: The double liability in terms of 3 --

4 QUESTION: Yeah, double jeopardy.

5 MR. ATKINS: In the collateral estoppel stage,

6 Judge, that is the time and place to -- to raise those

7 issues. And if -- if -- if it's to be enforced or

8 challenged with respect to a judgment entered in

9 Illinois court, that's the time to challenge --

10 QUESTION: Well, I know, but in the other --

11 in the other jurisdiction it's going to be -- in the 12 other jurisdiction the claim is going to be there wasn't

13 any jurisdiction in the Illinois court to bind me, none

14 at all. And you wouldn't suggest that it's a very 15 agreeable result if the defendant has to pay twice to 16 the same people.

17 MR. ATKINS: I don't think that it would 18 occur, Judge.

19 QUESTION: All right.

20 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, counsel.

21 MR. ATKINS: Thank you.

22 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Do you have anything

23 further, Mr. Miller?

24 ORAL ARGUMENT OF ARTHUR R. MILLER, ESQ.,

25 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER -- REBUTTAL

1 MR. MILLER: I'd like to make it clear that as 2 of this moment the Illinois decision on all federal 3 questions is final. The only thing left open for 4 Illinois at this judgment are Illinois state issues.
5 And as this bench knows --

6 QUESTION: Mr. Miller, let me interrupt you on 7 that. Don't you think that the binding effect of the 8 judgment might be affected by the character of the 9 notice that goes out? Supposing they sent out a notice
10 saying we've got just the title of the case and do you 11 want to opt out, or supposing on the other hand they 12 write a notice that says you might get stuck with costs, 13 you might have to respond to discovery, your maximum 14 recovery is $4.80, and the lawyer is so and so. It 15 seems to me it could make a great deal of difference as 16 to how --

17 MR. MILLER: It can, Your Honor, but let me
18 back up. There are at least three levels of potential 19 collateral attack that Gillette must face unless this 20 issue is resolved, and I think this may tie to some of 21 the thoughts Justice White was expressing.

22 First, if you do not decide this question now, 23 people will collaterally attack this judgment on the 24 basis of a lack of personal jurisdiction. Second, no
25 matter what you decide in terms of the power of Illinois

1 to go forward in this action, although that may prevent 2 collateral attack on the personal jurisdiction point, it
3 will not prevent collateral attack if Illinois goes 4 forward on adequacy of representation grounds, Hansberry
5 and Lee.

6 And third, Your Honor, your very point,
7 there's always the potential for collateral attack on a 8 state court judgment based on inadequate notice. That 9 is why we believe we have standing in this case. In 10 Hanson and Denckla those were the very threats facing 11 the Florida defendants and why they said unless you
12 decide the question of jurisdiction over that Delaware 13 trustee, we are threatened by the potential for 14 collateral attack down the line.

15 QUESTION: Those are Gillette's own concerns.

16 MR. MILLER: Those are Gillette's own
17 concerns. I believe my learned colleague may have 18 slightly mistook our argument, which is not necessarily 19 a third party standing or surrogate standing argument;
20 that is our concern under Hanson and Denckla.

21 I believe, by the way, that the third party 22 standing argument is available to us since that has 23 always been a rule of prudential administration. And I 24 think it's abundantly clear first that we are injured by 25 the assertion of jurisdiction in Illinois; and second,

1 that it is extraordinarily improbable that the third 2 party is going to come in and assert the points that we 3 are asserting at this juncture.

4 I'd like to point out that under the Illinois
5 consumer protection statute the prevailing party secures 6 costs. There are no opinions as yet whether that would 7 embrace the ability to assess costs over a non-formal 8 party class member.

9 I think Justice Stevens was getting at the 10 enormous potential difficulties in choice of law 11 problems here for any court that seeks to assert 12 jurisdiction over non-resident, nonvolitional class 13 members and then purports to apply the legal rules of 14 the other states.

15 Which legal rules? The fee rules? The 16 prevailing attorney fee rules? Or such rules as are now 17 common in a state like my own, Massachusetts. In 18 Massachusetts a consumer who feels aggrieved under the 19 Massachusetts statute must write a letter to the 20 company. The company is given 30 days to make a 21 reasonable offer of settlement. If the reasonable offer 22 of settlement is rejected and the case proceeds to trial 23 and the consumer does not prevail to the settlement 24 point, there's no liability for costs or fees.

25 Now, is the State of Illinois going to apply

1 that principle, or is the major consumer policy of the 2 Commonwealth of Massachusetts -- and I could lists 3 dozens of comparable illustrations -- simply going to be 4 ignored as the State of Illinois plays PacMan with its 5 little electronic monster going around the screen
6 gobbling up $7.95 claims saying oh, they're just dots, 7 they're just dots; because that really is what is at 8 issue in this case: whether consistent with interstate 9 federalism you will allow a court with no contacts to do 10 that.

11 Thank you.

12 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.
13 The case is submitted.

14 (Whereupon, at 2:00 p.m., the case in the 15 above-entitled matter was submitted.)
