CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Now we are on Marshall against Lonberger, and Mr. Drake, you may proceed whenever you're ready.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF RICHARD DAVID DRAKE, ESQ., ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER

MR. DRAKE: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
please the Court:

The instant case presents two substantial questions concerning our nation's system of federalism.
The initial inquiry focuses upon the deference which the federal judiciary sitting in a habeas corpus action brought by a state inmate must afford the factual determinations made by the state court. A resolution of this threshold issue centers upon this Court's prior decisions in Sumner v. Mata and Henderson v. Morgan.

The secondary question before this Court concerns the continuing viability of this Court's decision in Spencer v. Texas. It is respectfully submitted that the court below erred with respect to both issues.

The facts of this case are essentially uncontroverted. The respondent was indicted in the Ohio Court of Common Pleas for aggravated murder. Under then prevailing law aggravated murder was essentially a

1 felony murder. Here, the respondent was indicted for 2 rape during commission of a murder. The grand jury as a 3 separate and distinct matter also returned a death 4 penalty specification, alleging that the respondent had 5 previously been convicted of attempted murder in Cook 6 County, Illinois.

7 Prior to trial the respondent filed a motion
8 to dismiss the death penalty specification, alleging 9 that his 1972 Illinois guilty plea was not intelligently
10 entered. Pursuant to this pretrial motion the Ohio 11 trial court conducted a full evidentiary hearing.
12 During the course of the hearing several pertinent facts 13 were developed.

14 It was developed that the respondent had been 15 incarcerated on at least two prior occasions in the 16 Illinois penal system; that he had been charged with and 17 involved with the Illinois courts unrelated to those 18 prior incarcerations with both rape and murder; that in 19 addition to those crimes he had appeared before the 20 Illinois judiciary on several different occasions by his 21 own admission.

22 It was further developed that respondent was 23 incarcerated continuously in the Cook County jail for a 24 period of 13 months prior to the entry of this guilty 25 plea.

1 Respondent was arrested and given an 2 arraignment. He was thereafter afforded a preliminary 3 hearing. By his own testimony the victim in the -- of 4 the Illinois incident appeared and testified, offered 5 evidence. Subsequent to the preliminary hearing the 6 Illinois trial judge bound the case over to the grand 7 jury. They returned the indictment, charging the 8 respondent with one count of attempt under Illinois law 9 and three counts of aggravated battery.

10 Respondent was once again arraigned in the 11 Illinois -- before another Illinois court on these 12 charges. It was further developed and the Ohio trial 13 court made a finding of fact that the respondent was 14 both intelligent and literate. The respondent also 15 conceded that he was represented throughout his 13-month 16 pretrial incarceration by two attorneys.

17 During the course of the hearing the 18 respondent contended that he was never informed of the 19 attempt charge, neither by service of the indictment, at 20 the preliminary hearing, at either of his two 21 arraignments, by either of his two attorneys, or in any 22 other manner.

23 At the conclusion of the Ohio evidentiary 24 hearing the Ohio trial court expressly found that the 25 Illinois guilty plea had been tendered and was tendered

1 in an intelligent and voluntary manner and that the plea 2 was therefore valid. It is therefore obvious that the 3 Ohio trial court rejected as self serving testimony of 4 the respondent. And might I also add reference to the 5 record indicates that the Ohio trial court found his 6 testimony wholly incredible.

7 QUESTION: Counsel, is it possible that the 8 Ohio court believed that the respondent didn't receive 9 an explanation of the charges but that his lawyer
10 understood them and simply enforced the lawyer's 11 understanding?

12 MR. DRAKE: No, Your Honor, there's never been 13 any allegation that the Ohio trial court applied the 14 wrong constitutional standard or review.

15 QUESTION: Well, it's not crystal clear, is 16 it, what the Ohio court was deciding?

17 MR. DRAKE: The issue before the Ohio court in 18 the evidentiary hearing was in fact crystal clear. The 19 respondent's testimony was uniform; it never deviated.
20 He said I never knew I was charged with attempt -- in 21 this particular instance, attempted murder. No one ever 22 told me. It was the sole, single, solitary issue before 23 the court. He never alleged he didn't understand, for 24 instance, the elements of attempt, but that he never 25 even knew that he was charged with it and had no idea

1 that he had pled guilty to it.

2 This in the face of a record wherein the trial 3 judge mentions the crime attempt, indicates the separate 4 penalties for attempt, and where his lawyer at the 5 conclusion stipulated that the indict -- the charges, 6 plural, in the indictment were sufficient both in law 7 and fact.

8 I don't believe it's ever been argued that the 9 Ohio trial court so horrendously misunderstood the issue 10 before him, and it's never been alleged that he applied 11 the wrong standard, Your Honor.

12 QUESTION: But it is true that the Ohio court 13 did not say in so many words that the defendant knew he 14 was charged with attempt, did it?

15 MR. DRAKE: Your Honor, I would -- in response
16 to your question I would refer the Court to this Court's 17 decision in LaVallee v. Delle Rose wherein this Court 18 indicated that given a straightforward factual
19 consideration --

20 QUESTION: Well, it seems to me you can answer 21 my question without referring to another case.

22 MR. DRAKE: I'm sorry, Your Honor.

23 QUESTION: The trial court did not in so many 24 words find that he had been aware of the fact that he 25 was charged with attempt.

1 MR. DRAKE: Not expressly, Your Honor. That 2 is entirely implicit by his finding.

3 QUESTION: You infer that from the finding 4 that he intelligently and voluntarily entered his plea.

5 MR. DRAKE: I believe it would be logically
6 inconsistent not to infer that, Your Honor.

7 QUESTION: Is the indictment in the papers
8 before us?

9 MR. DRAKE: Yes, Your Honor. The indictment

11 QUESTION: Two?

12 MR. DRAKE: The Illinois indictment is at page
13 2, Your Honor.

14 QUESTION: Well, I was thinking about -- yes, 15 Illinois indictment, that's right.

16 MR. DRAKE: Yes. Page 2, Your Honor.

17 QUESTION: And counsel stipulated, as you've 18 just said, that that was sufficient in law and fact and 19 sustained a finding of guilty.

20 MR. DRAKE: On the charges, plural, yes, Your 21 Honor.

22 QUESTION: Yes. And was the defendant in the 23 courtroom at the time?

24 MR. DRAKE: He conceded that he was at the 25 Ohio evidentiary hearing. He never contended that he

1 wasn't. His testimony again was wholly incredible. He 2 indicated that Mr. Xenos, the lawyer who represented him
3 at the Illinois guilty plea proceeding, essentially told 4 him to go in there and lie. That was the crux of his 5 testimony. He's never indicated he was not in the 6 courtroom, no.

7 Respondent thereupon proceeded to trial. In 8 order to prove the substantive charge of aggravated 9 murder the prosecutor presented in part, and most 10 important, the testimony of the two sons of the victim.
11 The testimony was fairly straightforward. The two young 12 sons indicated that the respondent was at their home
13 that evening, the only gentleman present. The one son 14 indicated he had heard his mother scream. The other son 15 thereafter went down to the kitchen and spoke with 16 respondent briefly. The lights were out, and the 17 respondent ordered him not to turn the lights on and 18 also ordered the child back to bed.

19 The body of the victim was subsequently found 20 in a state of undress in a freezer in the kitchen. Also 21 found was a bent and bloodstained 12-inch knife. The 22 cause of death was the victim's throat was slashed. A 23 pack of cigarettes of the respondent's brand were found 24 in the apartment, and also there was blood on the 25 respondent's clothing.

1 That was the evidence that the state adduced
2 in order to substantiate the substantive offense -- here 3 rape/murder.

4 QUESTION: General Drake, may I ask you a
5 question about Ohio nomenclature? Is a specification 6 something that just pertains if a death penalty is being 7 sought?

8 MR. DRAKE: Yes, Your Honor. Under then -- 9 obviously because of the Bell and Lockett decisions Ohio 10 has -- now has a different death penalty. But at the 11 time it was incumbent upon the prosecutor to allege 12 aggravated murder, in most instances felony murder, and 13 then allege and prove as an independent and discrete 14 fact that a specific aggravating circumstances, in Ohio 15 called a death penalty specification, that had to be 16 alleged and proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

17 QUESTION: Well, and the Ohio Court of Appeals 18 reversed or set aside the death sentence, did it not?

19 MR. DRAKE: Yes, Your Honor, on a ground
20 wholly unrelated to this case.

21 QUESTION: Well, why doesn't the whole
22 question of specifications wash out at that point? I 23 couldn't understand why the Court of Appeals for the 24 Sixth Circuit focused on these specifications and what 25 it deemed a problem with them when I thought that had

1 pretty well washed out after the Court of Appeals set 2 aside the death sentence.

3 MR. DRAKE: Your Honor, that was our 4 argument. We vigorously argued that point. The Court
5 of Appeals relied on this Court's decision in Burgett v.
6 Texas, extended not only the rationale but the 7 conclusion therein that the substantive offense had to 8 also be vacated. That was the summary rationale that 9 the court used. They did not dwell on it in any length 10 whatsoever or give any analytical reasoning for the 11 ultimate conclusion.

12 In order to prove the separate and distinct 13 factual question regarding whether or not the death 14 penalty specification was proven beyond a reasonable 15 doubt, the Ohio prosecutor introduced a certified copy
16 of the Illinois judgment entry which was proper mode
17 under Ohio law at that time.

18 The respondent appealed his conviction to the 19 Ohio Court of Appeals. The Court of Appeals reversed
20 the aggravated murder conviction pursuant to a state law
21 question. Under Ohio -- the Ohio law is considerably 22 different than the federal law. In Hollin v. United 23 States this Court expressly rejected a theory that the 24 prosecution when presenting only circumstantial evidence 25 must disprove all theories consistent with innocence.

1 Ohio has the more stringent doctrine whereby the Ohio
2 prosecutor must rule out beyond a reasonable doubt all 3 theories consistent with innocence.

4 Here the Court of Appeals' rationale was that 5 since the victim knew the respondent, they might have 6 had consensual intercourse prior to the homicide; 7 therefore, it wouldn't be a forcible rape.

8 The Court of Appeals reduced the aggravated 9 murder conviction to what is called simple murder in 10 Ohio. Respondent from that point on and to this day 11 stands convicted of having purposely caused the death of 12 another. The death penalty specification has nothing to 13 do with his incarceration. He was thereafter
14 resentenced to a term of from 15 years to life 15 imprisonment. He has not faced the specter of the death 16 penalty.

17 Respondent thereafter filed a petition for 18 writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 2254 in the 19 United States District Court. The district court 20 reviewed the record and made the following finding of 21 fact: "From review of the record this court is 22 satisfied that an ordinary person would have understood 23 the nature of the charges to which petitioner" -- 24 respondent -- "was pleading guilty."

25 The respondent appealed to the Court of

1 Appeals for the Sixth Circuit. That court looked at the 2 Illinois guilty plea, the actual transcript, and found 3 the Illinois guilty plea facially invalid. The court 4 did not and, despite our urgings, refused to look at the 5 totality of the circumstances regarding and surrounding 6 the entry of the Illinois guilty plea.

7 This Court thereafter summarily vacated and 8 remanded in light of Sumner v. Mata. Upon remand, the 9 Court of Appeals sua sponte reinstated its prior 10 judgment.

11 QUESTION: Mr. Drake, did the court look at 12 anything other than the bare transcript from Illinois 13 that we have in the record?

14 MR. DRAKE: The only tangential allusion by 15 the Court of Appeals to any other facet of the Illinois 16 guilty plea is that the Ohio trial court did not make an 17 express finding regarding the credibility of the 18 respondent.

19 As noted in the reply brief --

20 QUESTION: Was there a record from Illinois 21 before the court with all of the documents in it and any 22 written plea agreement or anything of that --

23 MR. DRAKE: The three documents before the 24 court were the Illinois indictment, the Illinois 25 judgment entry, and the --

1 QUESTION: And the transcript?

2 MR. DRAKE: -- Transcript. And, of course, 3 the testimony and cross examination of the respondent in 4 the Ohio trial court.

5 QUESTION: Of course, it isn't entirely
6 accurate to say that the Court of Appeals for the Sixth 7 Circuit didn't pay attention to anything except the 8 transcript of the guilty plea in Illinois. It did 9 mention both the trial -- Ohio trial court's findings on 10 that question and the Ohio Court of Appeals' findings on 11 that question.

12 MR. DRAKE: Your Honor, it mentioned insofar
13 as it stated them in some manner. In Sumner v. Mata 14 this Court indicated that if the federal judiciary
15 wishes to set aside factual findings pursuant to 28
16 U.S.C. 2254(d)(8), it is incumbent upon the habeas 17 corpus applicant to allege and demonstrate by convincing 18 evidence that the Ohio trial court findings are not 19 supported by looking at the record and the statute says
20 in its entirety here there is absolute -- and the Court 21 went on to say that the federal court is of course free 22 to make a contrary determination, but it must articulate 23 its reasons for doing so.

24 The opinion of the court below articulates no
25 reasons whatsoever. Upon remand the court sua sponte

1 entered the same judgment it did. Paramount in its 2 misinterpretation was the misunderstanding of this 3 Court's decision in Henderson v. Morgan. The court had 4 earlier cited a prophylactic rule whereby a guilty plea 5 must be more facially valid than they found this one in 6 their subjective opinion. They did not look to the fact 7 that he had competent counsel, the fact that he was 8 arraigned twice, the length of his pretrial
9 incarceration, the fact that he was more than conversant
10 both with the Illinois penal system and most assuredly 11 with the Illinois judiciary, beginning as a young -- 12 well, as a juvenile and essentially working up from 13 there on. The Illinois trial judge indicated he'd been 14 in prison approximately every two years.

15 These are the factors which surrounded the 16 entry of the guilty plea, that coupled with his own 17 personal characteristics which would be, of course, his 18 familiarity with the system, and his innate 19 intelligence, and his literacy level.

20 QUESTION: Mr. Drake, one thing worries me.
21 What do you want more than the record of the Illinois
22 case? What do you want more than the record? You said
23 he saw the whole record, right, of the Illinois
24 conviction, the Illinois plea guilty. He saw the whole 25 record. What else should he have listened to?

1 MR. DRAKE: You're referring to the Ohio trial 2 judge, Your Honor?

3 QUESTION: Yes, sir.

4 MR. DRAKE: He did, in fact, listen to the 5 respondent's testimony. The respondent offered --

6 QUESTION: Well, what are you complaining
7 about on that point about him relying on the Illinois 8 record?

9 MR. DRAKE: Your Honor, we're not 10 complaining. We believe the Ohio trial court did in 11 fact examine the totality of circumstances surrounding 12 the plea.

13 QUESTION: And you make no complaint about 14 that.

15 MR. DRAKE: No. We believe that the Ohio
16 trial court finding is fully supported by the record, 17 and that most assuredly the respondent has not indicated 18 that it's -- certainly not by convincing evidence that 19 that factual finding is not supported by the evidence 20 before the Ohio trial judge.

21 QUESTION: I'm at a loss as to why you keep 22 mentioning it. I guess I just missed something, that's 23 all.

24 MR. DRAKE: The reason I mention it, Your 25 Honor, is because the court below refused to consider

1 the very factors upon which the Ohio trial court
2 predicated its determination that that Illinois guilty 3 plea was intelligently entered. The only reference is 4 to the transcript of the Illinois proceeding itself.

5 The court points out -- and again, it's, I
6 believe, only a one-line statement -- that the Ohio
7 trial court failed to make express factual findings 8 regarding the credibility of the respondent. That, of 9 course, has already been considered by this Court in a 10 different case, LaVallee v. Dalle Rose.

11 The Ohio trial court, had he credited 12 respondent's testimony, he would have had no choice but 13 to dismiss the death penalty specification; that's 14 apparent from the record. And the disagreement or the 15 statement by the court below that the Ohio trial court 16 did not make credibility findings is beyond me in light 17 of what the record was.

18 QUESTION: Mr. Drake, twice you've referred to 19 the Sixth Circuit as doing this sua sponte. I detect a 20 criticism there. A criticism of what -- not having a 21 hearing or something? What is your concern about the 22 sua sponte?

23 MR. DRAKE: Well, Your Honor, I, as an 24 attorney, would have liked to briefed and argued the 25 case in light of this Court's decision in Sumner v.

1 Mata. It was perhaps the Bellweather decision 2 interpreting the 28 U.S.C. 2254(D). I believe that with 3 further briefing and argument that perhaps the court 4 would not have erred to the degree I believe it did.

5 QUESTION: I suspect on many remands from here
6 for reconsideration in light of another case the courts 7 of appeal would do precisely this.

8 MR. DRAKE: I did not mean to be overly
9 critical of the court below, Your Honor.

10 In Henderson v. Morgan this Court set forth a 11 totality of the circumstances test wherein one judges 12 whether the accused was given adequate notice of the 13 true nature of the charges against them so as to comply 14 with due process.

15 I have elaborated upon what I believe are the 16 circumstances which fully substantiate the findings of 17 the Ohio trial court. I would only reiterate in Sumner 18 v. Mata there is a requirement that the federal 19 judiciary -- that first of all the habeas corpus 20 applicant demonstrate by convincing evidence that state 21 court findings are not fully substantiated by reference 22 to the record. Here I believe there has not only been a 23 showing of convincing evidence, but that would be 24 impossible.

25 The court below essentially allowed the

1 respondent a presumption by looking only at the record, 2 finding it in their opinion facially defective, and 3 refusing to examine those other factors which surrounded 4 the entry of this plea.

5 QUESTION: Mr. Drake, incidentally, is there 6 any indication in the Ohio record why the judge and the 7 prosecutor refused to accept Lonberger's offer to 8 stipulate to the prior conviction?

9 MR. DRAKE: No, Your Honor. I did not try the 10 case. There is no --

11 QUESTION: Is there any state interest
12 involved in that refusal that you can identify?

13 MR. DRAKE: No, Your Honor. Any 14 constitutional ramifications would have been dissipated
15 by this Court's decision in Spencer v. Texas. As set 16 forth in the brief, what I believe to be a very, very 17 fine limiting instruction was given to the jury. Not 18 only that, but in the voir dire of this case the jury 19 assured both the Ohio trial judge and counsel that they 20 would abide by any limiting instruction. They would 21 resolve the guilt or innocence as to the substantive 22 offense independent of any evidence presented regarding 23 Mr. Lonberger's prior escapades with law enforcement 24 agencies or officials in Illinois.

25 The second question presented by this case

1 presents an equally compelling issue of federal-state 2 comity insofar as the decision of the court below wholly 3 disrupts state evidentiary proceedings maintained
4 pursuant to this Court's decision in Spencer v. Texas.

5 Even assuming the correctness -- and 6 petitioner in no manner does -- of the circuit court 7 finding with respect to the facial validity of 8 respondent's previously entered guilty plea, and again, 9 even the court below indicates they're dealing only with 10 the facial validity and fully acknowledge that this plea 11 may well be very validly a constitutionally entered 12 plea, in their opinion.

13 QUESTION: Well, I gather in Spencer the prior 14 convictions were concededly all valid, weren't they?

15 MR. DRAKE: Yes, Your Honor.

16 QUESTION: Whereas here at least we have a 17 holding that the guilty plea in Illinois was invalid.

18 MR. DRAKE: In --

19 QUESTION: We do.

20 MR. DRAKE: Yes.

21 QUESTION: And in Burgett, I gather, we had 22 all invalid prior convictions, didn't we?

23 MR. DRAKE: Of a very specific nature, Your 24 Honor.

25 QUESTION: Yes.

1 MR. DRAKE: It is my opinion in my reading of 2 --

3 QUESTION: But you don't think there's a 4 distinction between --

5 MR. DRAKE: No.

6 QUESTION: -- Valid and invalid prior 7 convictions for the purposes of this case?

8 MR. DRAKE: I believe there's clearly a 9 distinction between this case and that in Burgett. For 10 instance -- assuming, for instance, that this guilty 11 plea was invalid, most assuredly Mr. Lonberger could not 12 be sentenced to death, but it should not affect the 13 validity of a murder conviction wherein the evidence is 14 overwhelming that he did in fact murder the victim in 15 this case.

16 QUESTION: In other words, you're saying that 17 that -- if it had any bearing, the status of the 18 Illinois conviction would bear only on the death penalty 19 aspect of the case and not on anything that occurred 20 after the death penalty was set aside.

21 MR. DRAKE: Yes. The remedial action by the 22 court should be limited or commensurate with the 23 violation perceived. Burgett was a different case
24 insofar -- this Court had recently decided at that time
25 Gideon v. Wainwright. The Court considered that states

1 were using uncounseled guilty pleas in express violation
2 of Gideon and the Sixth Amendment right to counsel.

3 Burgett was necessary to ensure the continuing 4 viability of Gideon. States were not going to be 5 allowed to use uncounseled guilty pleas, which this 6 Court deemed to be inherently unreliable and 7 presumptively prejudicial.

8 The uncounseled guilty pleas considered in 9 Burgett this Court found to be presumptively invalid, 10 i.e., facially invalid. The prosecutor either knew or 11 should have known that he was not to be using these.
12 The Burgett decision can only be reconciled with Spencer 13 -- the underpinning of Spencer is that juries both in 14 civil and here in the criminal context can and will 15 follow limiting instructions. Juries are called on to 16 do this all the time, either in multiple co-defendants --

17 QUESTION: Mr. Drake, wouldn't that have 18 required Burdette, or Burgett, rather, to be decided the 19 other way, because wasn't there a limiting instruction 20 there and wasn't it offered just for enhancement 21 purposes?

22 MR. DRAKE: But Burgett, Loper v. Betto, all 23 the decisions stemming from Burgett have been limited to 24 Gideon v. Wainwright type contexts. This Court has 25 never held that the mere fact --

1 QUESTION: Well, I understand it's a different 2 constitutional thing, but if you -- insofar as your 3 harmless error argument is made, wouldn't that also have 4 been valid in the Burgett situation?

5 MR. DRAKE: This Court apparently found that 6 the use of uncounseled convictions was so inherently 7 prejudicial that the actual -- in point of fact in 8 Burgett the uncounseled convictions were never even 9 presented to the jury. The judge withdrew that from the 10 jury's consideration at the last moment.

11 But only in the Gideon v. Wainwright context 12 to ensure the continuing validity in the face of 13 apparently animosity by various states to that decision 14 was such a Draconian measure deemed necessary. The 15 Court has never used that remedy, i.e., the vacation of 16 the substantive offense despite overwhelming evidence of 17 guilt on that offense when limiting instructions have 18 been given outside the Gideon v. Wainwright context, 19 Your Honor.

20 QUESTION: Are you suggesting that the Burgett
21 opinion said anything to the effect that only 22 uncounseled convictions were invalid for the purposes of 23 the Burgett rule?

24 MR. DRAKE: Your Honor, I'm reading Burgett
25 narrowly, yes.

1 QUESTION: You certainly are.

2 MR. DRAKE: Yes.

3 QUESTION: No other invalid convictions would 4 have the benefit of the Burgett rule, is that it?

5 MR. DRAKE: This Court has never so held, Your 6 Honor. If the Court were to so hold, the states would 7 most assuredly have to change their procedures. The 8 states would almost have to go to bifurcated or even 9 trifurcated trials in any enhanced penalty setting.

10 QUESTION: Yes, but can you show me anything 11 in the Burgett opinion which suggests what you're 12 arguing?

13 MR. DRAKE: No, Your Honor. I can only 14 inferentially because the Court has ever extended 15 Burgett outside that context.

16 QUESTION: Counsel, what difficulties would 17 the state face in bifurcating the evidence for purposes 18 of sentencing as opposed to putting it on initially at 19 the guilt or innocence phase?

20 MR. DRAKE: In this particular context -- and 21 I'm dealing with Ohio laws that existed -- there's the 22 unfortunate specter that jeopardy might have attached 23 when the jury returned a verdict of guilty into 24 aggravated murder, because the death penalty
25 specification, we're talking about a unitary

1 proceeding. To have bifurcated it would have opened the 2 door to Mr. Lonberger arguing the jeopardy attachment, 3 and you could not then present that to the jury. That 4 relates to this case --

5 QUESTION: Even if the charges were filed 6 initially in a way to indicate that that would be the 7 procedure?

8 MR. DRAKE: That is a very limited answer to 9 your question as far as the entire ramifications across 10 the nation. The Court in Spencer indicated the state 11 has a viable and substantial interest in trying all 12 charges together. Spencer stands for the proposition 13 that juries can and will follow limiting instructions to 14 --

15 QUESTION: Well, in the face of the 16 stipulation that was offered, I still -- it's still 17 unclear to me what interest the state would have in 18 introducing the evidence of prior convictions in the 19 guilt/innocent phase.

20 MR. DRAKE: You're talking about this 21 particular case?

22 QUESTION: Yes.

23 MR. DRAKE: Again, I did not try the case. I
24 don't know the nature of the offer of the stipulation.
25 It's very briefly related in the -- I believe counsel

1 relates it to the judge in a midtrial or pretrial
2 context, and it's not really set forth whether it's a 3 stipulation subject to subsequent objection or what the 4 nature of the stipulation was, Your Honor.

5 I'd like to reserve the rest of my time.

6 QUESTION: Can I just ask one other question?
7 Is it not clear -- I mean I know you didn't try the case 8 -- but is it not clear that had the stipulation been 9 accepted, the argument of prejudice would have been 10 totally put to one side, would have been avoided.
11 Because they claim prejudice by getting this prior 12 conviction before the jury during the guilt and 13 innocence phase, and had you accepted -- had your trial 14 lawyer, rather, accepted the stipulation, that prejudice 15 at least would not have been in this record.

16 MR. DRAKE: As Burgett is being read by the 17 court below, it wouldn't alter our presence before this 18 Court. I assume they were going to reserve their right 19 to appeal the pretrial ruling regarding the validity of 20 the Illinois guilty plea.

21 QUESTION: Except that it wouldn't have 22 affected any of the -- it only could have affected the 23 death penalty then. But the problem is now it may taint 24 the verdict on guilt or innocence.

25 MR. DRAKE: Your Honor, I honestly fail to see

1 the difference. The jury would have known that he was 2 convicted previously of attempted murder. That 3 apparently is the prejudice that the court below looked 4 to.

5 Thank you.

6 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Czarnecki.

7 ORAL ARGUMENT BY JOHN CZARNECKI, ESQ.,

8 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT

9 MR. CZARNECKI: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
10 please the Court:

11 I'd like to begin, I guess, by extending Mr.
12 Drake's argument.

13 Justice Stevens, you're correct. The 14 stipulation offered by Mr. Lonberger in this case was 15 unqualified. It was designed only to withdraw that 16 issue from the issue, and in fact, it was one of four 17 opportunities we afforded the state at trial to withdraw 18 this particular claim or this particular charge from the 19 jury.

20 We filed initially -- upon the filing of the 21 Ohio indictment we filed a motion to dismiss, making the 22 claims we make here today. That motion was overruled by 23 the trial court after a hearing. We then moved the 24 court for a bifurcated procedure, and that in fact -- 25 Justice O'Connor asked the question -- would have had

1 the effect of keeping this particular issue out of the 2 guilt-innocence phase. It would have put this issue
3 squarely before the jury only after they had reached a 4 decision on guilt or innocence.

5 And it was our position then and it remains 6 our position now that the state would suffer no
7 detriment by accepting that proposal, because as a 8 matter of fact had the jury returned a verdict of not 9 guilty, the specification under Ohio law would have 10 become irrelevant.

11 QUESTION: Well, does that really bear on the 12 case here? The state didn't accept a stipulation, and 13 it's got to bear the consequences of whatever resulted 14 from introducing the evidence; but there's no federal 15 rule that requires a state to stipulate it.

16 MR. CZARNECKI: No. That's correct. And, in 17 fact, Spencer v. Texas addresses that question
18 precisely. I was simply addressing Justice Stevens' 19 question on the stipulation.

20 The state in its argument seems to cast great 21 doubt on the Sixth Circuit's opinion herein. The Sixth 22 Circuit reviewed the entire record. It began, as the 23 state court did, with a facially invalid conviction from 24 Illinois. One ordinarily presents a conviction
25 statement to prove a prior conviction. This conviction

1 statement said, among other things, Robert Lonberger has 2 been convicted of the offense of aggravated battery, et 3 cetera. Robert Lonberger has been given one sentence, 4 two to four.

5 That conviction statement was concededly 6 ineffective to prove that anyone had been convicted of 7 the offense of attempted murder. The invalidity or the 8 insufficiency of that statement can be shown by the fact 9 that the state was forced to go outside the record, 10 outside the normal channel of proof --

11 QUESTION: Constitutionally invalid?

12 MR. CZARNECKI: It was certainly invalid to 13 show a conviction for attempted murder.

14 QUESTION: Yes, but do you say it was 15 constitutionally invalid?

16 MR. CZARNECKI: The conviction statement
17 itself, Your Honor, was facially invalid.

18 QUESTION: Was this procedural invalidity?
19 What kind of invalidity was it?

20 MR. CZARNECKI: Well, simply stated, it did 21 not say that Robert Lonberger had been convicted of 22 attempted murder, period. I mean it said, the 23 conviction statement simply said he'd been convicted of 24 aggravated battery, et cetera, in quotations, that 25 phrase literally. So that certainly the state could not

1 have introduced that to a jury and expected them to find 2 as a matter of fact --

3 QUESTION: I'm still asking is this a 4 constitutional invalidity to admit it then? It was 5 admitted.

6 MR. CZARNECKI: I would think that it doesn't 7 rise to the level of constitutional invalidity, no, Your 8 Honor.

9 QUESTION: So in that sense it's not like the 10 prior convictions in Burgett, is it?

11 MR. CZARNECKI: Well, I'm sorry. I 12 misunderstood the Court's question. If in fact the 13 conviction itself was invalid, yes, that invalidity
14 arises from a constitutional deprivation. I'm sorry. I 15 was referring to the conviction statement, the document 16 that ordinarily proves a conviction. In this case it 17 was insufficient.

18 The state then went outside the record with 19 the testimony that was taken at the change of plea and 20 sentencing hearing. And notwithstanding what the 21 state's position is, the trial judge in Illinois simply 22 said you are pleading guilty that you did commit the 23 offense of aggravated battery, and you did attempt on 24 the victim.

25 Mr. Lonberger's position has been unwavering.

1 His position was that he understood he was entering a 2 plea to aggravated battery and that the phrase relating 3 to an attempt provided the factual backdrop for that 4 plea. There is no other factual information in the 5 record to support a plea of aggravated battery. His 6 position is credible on its face.

7 The Sixth Circuit simply found, simply stated, 8 that the Ohio trial court without more could not hold 9 that the state of Ohio had borne its burden to sustain 10 the validity of a conviction that it sought to use on 11 the face of the record presented.

12 QUESTION: Well, counsel, why do you think the 13 Sixth Circuit said in its opinion that no explicit 14 findings were made concerning Lonberger's credibility as 15 a witness? Doesn't that suggest that if the Ohio court 16 had made findings, the Sixth Circuit would have thought 17 somewhat differently of the case?

18 MR. CZARNECKI: I'm not sure that I'd like to 19 read that into the Sixth Circuit's opinion.

20 QUESTION: Why do you think they said it?

21 MR. CZARNECKI: As an observation that the 22 facts that they were finding need not be given the 23 deference that 2254(D) normally requires.

24 QUESTION: Well, but doesn't that suggest to 25 you that they were giving some credibility to 1 Lonberger's testimony, the Sixth Circuit?

2 MR. CZARNECKI: The Sixth Circuit? I would 3 suspect so, Your Honor.

4 QUESTION: If so, how can you reconcile that 5 with LaVallee v. Delle Rose in 410 U.S.?

6 MR. CZARNECKI: Well, I would distinguish that 7 case, Your Honor, in that that was a case remanded with 8 specific instructions; that was a case remanded with a 9 specific legal standard to be applied; and that the 10 question to be answered by the state court was fairly 11 clear on the issue of voluntariness.

12 Justice O'Connor asked the question during 13 argument, and I had intended to get to it later in my 14 argument, but I will now. We have no way of knowing, 15 Your Honor, on the strength of the state court finding 16 either what standard he found or he applied or what 17 facts he found. In fact, it's entirely possible that 18 the state court found, having made specific findings 19 that this defendant was intelligent -- and that's 20 questionable -- that he was well represented at every 21 stage of the proceeding by competent and capable 22 counsel, that he was well experienced in the criminal 23 process, and that every effort was taken to protect his 24 constitutional rights, may well have found that those 25 four facts justified a finding, a conclusion of law that

1 the plea was intelligent and voluntary, notwithstanding 2 the fact that the court may have -- and we are forced to 3 speculate in the face of a silent record -- the court 4 may have found he neither had notice -- and that's 5 conceded, I believe -- nor actual knowledge from 6 Henderson. We simply have no way of knowing.

7 The Sixth Circuit reviewed the record and 8 found, I think properly, that the record presented did 9 not support the trial court's finding that this plea was 10 voluntary.

1 In the event, Your Honor, on the question of 2 2254(d) in Sumner versus Mata, this Court held last term
3 in the second remand of Sumner that Sumner in 2254(d)
4 did not apply to mixed findings of fact and law, and I 5 think it's beyond argument that the validity of 6 confessions, the validity of pleas are mixed questions 7 of fact and law, that the federal courts are certainly 8 free to apply federal constitutional standards to 9 historic facts found. They are free to give certain 10 credence and certain weight to facts found.

11 QUESTION: Would you think that a federal 12 habeas court -- if an Ohio court in this case had said
13 we do not believe Lonberger when he testified, do you 14 think a federal habeas court would entitled to say well, 15 we think he should have been believed?

16 MR. CZARNECKI: I would find that very 17 difficult to support, Your Honor. Yes. Because the 18 trial court certainly had an opportunity to view the 19 defendant's demeanor.

20 The question, however, transcends that simple 21 question. Mr. Longberger was subjected to cross 22 examination for the better part of a day. He was 23 absolutely firm in his representations that he did not 24 know. There is not a scintilla of objective evidence 25 presented by the state to show that this plea was, in

1 fact, a knowledgeable, voluntary plea. The state --

2 QUESTION: How do you reconcile that with the 3 statement on page 5, after they've gone through -- page 4 5, the Appendix to your Cert Petition. After they'd 5 gone through the usual inquiry by the court to him about 6 what he had done, in fact, then the court summarized at 7 the end, "Understand that by pleading guilty, I could 8 sentence you from one to ten,..." -- and I assume he 9 means years, one to ten years -- "...on the aggravated 10 battery, and attempt one to 20. So I could sentence you 11 to the penitentiary for a maximum of one to 40 years."

12 MR. CZARNECKI: Your Honor, Mr. Lonberger's 13 explanation is not the explanation of 11 lawyers. It's 14 an exclamation that I didn't know, I simply didn't 15 understand that he --

16 QUESTION: When he answered -- the judge then 17 repeated, "Do you understand that?" And he answered, 18 "Yes, sir." So would you ignore that exchange, even 19 after it followed the more detailed inquiries about what 20 he had, in fact, done, what the criminal acts were?

21 MR. CZARNECKI: At the risk of appearing to be 22 engaging levity, Your Honor, we have to also ignore the 23 fact that the trial judge could not have taken this 24 plea. I think it's clear the state in this case, in the 25 Ohio case and the case before the bar today, does not

1 contest the fact that this plea was probably legally 2 invalid in any event.

3 It is no more unlikely that Robert Lonberger
4 didn't understand that the judge thought he was taking a 5 plea to attempted murder than it is that the judge 6 didn't understand that he could not have taken pleas for 7 attempted murder and aggravated battery arising out of 8 the same operative facts. The law is absolutely clear 9 in Illinois that the offense of aggravated battery is 10 subsumed into the greater offense of attempted murder.

11 If one looks at the sentence I think that 12 supports my client's position. The sentence is for a 13 single charge. My criminal practice is a regular one, 14 and I have never seen, or stood before a court and 15 entered a plea or had a client convicted for more than 16 one offense when the court did not acknowledge that fact 17 at the time of sentencing and make sentences 18 consecutive, make sentences concurrent, dismissed, 19 suspend.

20 But this case supports this client's -- on the 21 facts -- supports this client's position that he simply 22 didn't know. And I'm not sure that anyone knew what 23 this plea connoted. I'm not sure that anybody had read 24 this Court's opinion in Boykin and spread upon the 25 record a clear understanding from the court to this

1 defendant.

2 If this Court today accepts the state's 3 position it is approving this sort of sloppy 4 plea-taking, this sort of sloppy procedure before the 5 state courts. This finding in Illinois and this finding 6 in Ohio, neither one of should be accorded the sort of 7 deference that a careful factfinding, a careful legal 8 process, would require.

9 The second argument that the petitioners make 10 goes to the question of good faith admission and 11 harmless error and the limiting instruction from 12 Spencer. In the first place, -- and I don't want to 13 spend a great deal of time on it -- this case was not 14 one of overwhelming evidence of guilt. Mr. Drake --

15 QUESTION: Does that really have anything at 16 all to do with our review here?

17 MR. CZARNECKI: I think it does, Your Honor.
18 I think the significance of the --

19 QUESTION: Because of the harmless error?

20 MR. CZARNECKI: Yes, of the harmless error
21 made by the state is important. I think that the state 22 utilized his prior conviction to secure a conviction in 23 a case that was otherwise one of insubstantial 24 circumstantial evidence.

25 The Spencer court, -- and I think it's

1 significant that the Spencer court, when it discussed 2 limiting instructions and the importance of limiting 3 instructions, also predicated that finding on a ruling 4 that found in Spencer that prior convictions are 5 ordinarily not inflammatory, ordinarily introduced pure 6 documentary evidence.

7 QUESTION: Mr. Czarnecki, do you think that 8 Spencer and Burgett are completely reconcilable?

9 MR. CZARNECKI: Yes, sir, I absolutely do.

10 QUESTION: They were both -- one was six-three 11 and the other was five to four, and they certainly point 12 in two completely opposite directions.

13 MR. CZARNECKI: I don't believe so, Your 14 Honor. I believe that they are perfectly reconcilable.

15 QUESTION: Even as to the limiting 16 instructions?

17 MR. CZARNECKI: Yes.

18 QUESTION: How would you reconcile Spencer's
19 treatment of limiting instructions with Burgett's?

20 MR. CZARNECKI: Spencer, as I began to say,
21 first noted that limiting instructions -- I think one 22 has to back up a moment and analyze Spencer in its 23 entirety. Spencer began with the premise that this 24 court and the federal system generally is not in the 25 business of structuring criminal procedures for the

1 states; a position that I certainly agree wholeheartedly 2 with.

3 It then went on to suggest that states, quite 4 uniformly, have enacted recidivism statutes to address a 5 reoccurring problem.

6 Having made those two holdings, then the court 7 acknowledged prejudice. I think that a fair reading of 8 Spencer must of necessity lead one to the conclusion 9 that the court acknowledged prejudice flowing to a 10 defendant from the admission of prior crimes evidence.
11 But said that because that admission is normally not 12 inflammatory, is normally cured by a limiting 13 instruction, that in a balance we're going to allow that 14 procedure.

15 Burgett, Your Honors, is much different.
16 Burgett is entirely different than Spencer because 17 Burgett is -- the prior conviction in Burgett was 18 predicated upon an invalid prior conviction, and the 19 state's representation --

20 QUESTION: That was an element of the offense, 21 in Burgett, wasn't it?

22 MR. CZARNECKI: In both cases, Your Honor.

23 QUESTION: In both cases. But not in this 24 case. Not in your case.

25 MR. CZARNECKI: Yes, it was, Your Honor.

1 QUESTION: The specification washed out of the 2 case when the Ohio Court of Appeals reversed the death
3 sentence, I would have thought.

4 MR. CZARNECKI: The Ohio courts have held 5 prior convictions to be elements.

6 QUESTION: To be what?

7 MR. CZARNECKI: Prior convictions in 8 recidivism cases, Ohio has a number of statutes which, 9 for instance, the --

10 QUESTION: I am talking about this particular 11 case.

12 MR. CZARNECKI: The trial court had held that 13 it was an element.

14 QUESTION: Yes, but did it play -- was it one 15 of the elements upon which the conviction which was 16 actually sustained against him was based?

17 MR. CZARNECKI: No, it was not.

18 QUESTION: So really, it's different from 19 Burgett in that sense.

20 MR. CZARNECKI: No, it isn't.

21 QUESTION: Well, I think that in Burgett the 22 invalid conviction was an element of the substantive 23 offense, and here it's simply -- was a question of some 24 evidence coming before the jury that proved to be quite 25 irrelevant in the light of the Ohio Court of Appeals

1 ruling.

2 MR. CZARNECKI: Your Honor, in Burgett, just 3 as in this case, the validity of the prior conviction 4 was raised apparently mid-trial. There was some 5 discussion in the opinion about exactly what happened.
6 But in any event, the trial judge found the prior 7 conviction to be invalid and withdrew it, as the state 8 has already told us, from the jury's consideration so 9 that it played no part in the enhanced penalty. It is a 10 distinction without a difference to suggest that Mr.
11 Longberger's conviction was reversed on appeal, and 12 therefore, his prior conviction played no part.

13 Burgett also was not sentenced as a 14 recidivist, Your Honor, was not convicted as a 15 recidivist. I think that Burgett is indistinguishable.
16 I think that this Court has to directly overrule Burgett 17 unless it is --

18 QUESTION: Well, it would have to do no more 19 than take some of our later cases such as Parker against 20 Randolph which said that juries are usually presumed to 21 follow the instructions that courts give them to say 22 that Burgett may have been too categorical on that point.

23 QUESTION: Unless Burgett adopted a 24 prophylactic rule with respect to the absence of counsel.

25 MR. CZARNECKI: Your Honor, I don't think that

1 the opinion supports the state's position on that 2 issue. It -- the case of Boykin said that invalid pleas 3 are to be considered in much the same way that 6th 4 Amendment deprivations are to be considered; that the 5 state cannot rely upon a valid waiver of constitutional 6 rights in the fact of a silent record.

7 I fail to be able to distinguish an invalid
8 plea, which goes to the heart of the factfinding 9 process, from a 6th Amendment violation which, if 10 anything, maybe a less important right. The 6th
11 Amendment right to counsel is a facilitating right. It 12 is a right guaranteed by our Constitution to insure that 13 other 6th Amendment rights, the rights to notice of the 14 charge among other things, are guaranteed.

15 I cannot denigrate an invalid, unknowledgeable 16 plea to some subsidiary status, to that of --

17 QUESTION: Could I ask you another point.
18 What did you say earlier about what the -- how free was 19 the federal habeas court or the court of appeals to 20 disagree with the Ohio court's finding with respect to 21 intelligent and voluntary -- ? Did it need to give any 22 deference at all to the Ohio court's findings?

23 MR. CZARNECKI: I'm not sure that it did, Your 24 Honor. I think --

25 QUESTION: And why is that? You say it wasn't

1 -- ?

2 MR. CZARNECKI: Because it was a mixed
3 finding, certainly a mixed finding of fact and law.

4 QUESTION: And what if it was? So what if it 5 was?

6 MR. CZARNECKI: It exempted from the 7 application of 2254 --

8 QUESTION: Under what case?

9 MR. CZARNECKI: Under the second decision of 10 this Court in Sumner versus Matta last term, the memo 11 opinion remanding the case to the Ninth Circuit. The 12 Court agreed with the Ninth Circuit that mixed questions 13 of fact and law are not covered by the presumption of 14 validity contained in 2254(d).

15 QUESTION: And the court is free to 16 independently look at the same record and come out with 17 a different conclusion?

18 MR. CZARNECKI: The federal courts have 19 regularly, Your Honor, assigned constitutional 20 significance to given facts. That has been the function 21 --

22 QUESTION: So what's the answer to my 23 question? Your position is that the federal court need 24 give no deference to the state court's conclusion about 25 an intelligent and voluntary plea? That it can look at

1 the same record that the state court did and come up 2 with a different conclusion?

3 MR. CZARNECKI: I think that argument could be 4 made, Your Honor. It need not be made in this case 5 because --

6 QUESTION: Why not?

7 MR. CZARNECKI: Because the Sixth Circuit
8 expressly said that it disagrees with the factual
9 finding of the Ohio court. It found that the Ohio court 10 could not, on the record, find either notice or 11 knowledge of the plea.

12 I would like to be able to make the argument
13 that as a mixed question of fact and law, the Sixth 14 Circuit need not give deference, but I think it's 15 irrelevant here. I think the court fulfilled --

16 QUESTION: So you say the court of appeals 17 said that the Ohio court really didn't do its job in 18 making the kind of findings that it should have.

19 MR. CZARNECKI: I think that's correct, Your 20 Honor, and I think that that is the heart of 2254 --

21 QUESTION: That's only on the basis of the -- 22 why do you say you can't tell that the Ohio court made 23 the necessary findings?

24 MR. CZARNECKI: Because, Your Honor, it would 25 have been -- I'm bemused by the fact that the court made

1 certain factual findings which are, in my view,
2 irrelevant to the central question. If, as the state 3 points out, the issue was as clear as they represent, 4 then it would have seemed that the trial court could 5 have simply said the defendant had, on the strength of 6 the record, actual knowledge of the charge made against 7 him. But the court did not.

8 It made, however, four other findings that in 9 our view are irrelevant to the central question. It did 10 not address the central question.

11 QUESTION: Do you make these observations
12 concerning the Sixth Circuit's view of the credibility
13 aspect of Longberger's credibility?

14 MR. CZARNECKI: I'm not sure, Your Honor, that 15 the state -- even assuming arguendo that the trial judge 16 did not believe Robert Longberger -- I am not willing to 17 suggest that a state court could, without any other 18 evidence, on an issue as crucial as this, hold that the 19 state has borne a heavy burden, a burden that some of 20 the circuits have characterized as requiring clear and 21 convincing evidence, --

22 QUESTION: Well, what would a factfinder 23 sitting as a juror believe about the credibility of 24 Longberger against the background that's in the record 25 here of his criminal activities all his life? Wouldn't 1 they discredit his credibility?

2 MR. CZARNECKI: I don't think so, Your Honor.

3 QUESTION: You don't think so?

4 MR. CZARNECKI: No, I do not. I didn't. If 5 the court -- and I don't know if that's anymore 6 significant. I think the court should review the 7 record. Review the record that the state court found 8 intelligence on. And I won't comment upon this 9 defendant's intelligence beyond to suggest, as I have in 10 my reply brief, that post-conviction, psychological 11 testing showed that he was on the borderline of mental 12 retardation.

13 QUESTION: May I ask one question about his 14 testimony? Who called him as a witness? I can't 15 remember.

16 MR. CZARNECKI: We did, Your Honor.

17 QUESTION: So your position is that if you 18 just disregard his testimony, your opponent had the 19 burden of proof and still hadn't met it, because the 20 record of the Illinois trial shows a facially defective 21 -- does not show a plea of guilty to attempted murder.

22 MR. CZARNECKI: That's precisely right.

23 QUESTION: So they had the burden of going 24 outside the record and proving attempted murder, and 25 they didn't -- you could take his testimony outside the

1 record, and you would still argue that they didn't 2 sustain their burden.

3 MR. CZARNECKI: That's absolutely correct,
4 Your Honor.

5 QUESTION: So we don't really have to care
6 much about credibility.

7 MR. CZARNECKI: That's correct, Your Honor.

8 In the state's representations before this 9 Court that Robert Longberger had two arraignments are an 10 extension of his own testimony. Robert Longberger 11 doesn't know whether he had two arraignments. Robert 12 Longberger recounted to the court that he thought he was 13 in court a couple times, and we assume, his lawyers, 14 that he had two arraignments.

15 Robert Longberger talks about a hearing at 16 which the victim testified. We assume that is a 17 preliminary hearing. Robert Longberger doesn't know if 18 it was a preliminary hearing. We have no idea. And all 19 the state need do, in my view, to bear this burden is to 20 bring some evidence that would substantiate the position 21 that they are now espousing; that this --

22 QUESTION: But what's the burden on the state?

23 MR. CZARNECKI: In our position, Your Honor, 24 this Court has repeatedly held that the burden is always 25 on the state to show a waiver of important

1 constitutional rights. And that sounds like I am
2 reading back your language to you, and I am not. I'm 3 suggesting that our system of jurisprudence seldom, if 4 ever, casts upon a litigant the duty to prove a negative.

5 QUESTION: What about an official record of a 6 plea taken in a court of competent jurisdiction that on 7 its face shows no constitutional defect?

8 MR. CZARNECKI: Your Honor, this Court made a 9 decision in a case precisely like that in Blackledge
10 versus Allison, and it suggested that even in a record 11 that is absolutely proper and regular on its face, the 12 defendant, by coming forward with some evidence to cast 13 doubt upon the validity of that conviction should be 14 entitled to a hearing to rebut those charges.

15 We have a much different situation here.

16 QUESTION: What evidence did this defendant 17 come forward with?

18 MR. CZARNECKI: I think the Court must 19 understand that this defendant started from a different 20 place. He is not attacking a facially valid 21 conviction. He is raising the facial invalidity of a 22 conviction. He is raising a conviction that is, on its 23 face, insufficient to prove what it is the state wishes 24 to prove.

25 QUESTION: Why do you allege, then -- why do

1 you say it was insufficient on its face?

2 MR. CZARNECKI: Your Honor, in the criminal 3 practice in my experience, the fact of a prior 4 conviction is proved by the state's introduction of a 5 judgment entry or what is often called, and was called 6 in this case, a conviction statement.

7 QUESTION: Yes, a conviction statement
8 reflected the aggravated battery and the attempted 9 murder, didn't it?

10 MR. CZARNECKI: No, it did not, Your Honor.
11 That's the point of my argument. The conviction 12 statement simply said aggravated battery, et cetera. It 13 did not --

14 QUESTION: And the state then introduced the 15 transcript to supplement what the "et cetera" was.

16 MR. CZARNECKI: That's correct, Your Honor.

17 QUESTION: And the transcript reflected the 18 attempted murder as well as the aggravated battery.

19 MR. CZARNECKI: I do not believe that it did,
20 Your Honor. The transcript, as the Sixth Circuit I 21 think aptly pointed out, never contained --

22 QUESTION: Well, whether the defendant
23 understood it is another question, but the transcript 24 reflected that the judge understood it, anyway, right?

25 MR. CZARNECKI: The judge understood that he

1 was taking a plea for attempt, which, incidentally, is 2 something of an unusual charge in that it generally
3 encompasses some other offense. Attempt could mean, 4 without more, an attempted larceny, or an attempted 5 murder.

6 QUESTION: Is it correct that the transcript
7 doesn't ever include the words "attempted murder"?

8 MR. CZARNECKI: That's correct, Your Honor,
9 absolutely.

10 QUESTION: It says attempt with a knife.

11 MR. CZARNECKI: That's correct, Your Honor.
12 Which, by the way, would form the factual basis for an 13 aggravated battery. It's entirely consistent with this 14 defendant's testimony.

15 QUESTION: But not an attempted battery.

16 MR. CZARNECKI: No, an aggravated battery,
17 Your Honor.

18 QUESTION: But what other than murder would 19 you attempt with a knife?

20 MR. CZARNECKI: Your Honor, if one, as my 21 client puts it, attempted on a victim, attempted to cut 22 a victim with a knife, under my reading -- and I think I 23 would be free to suggest that the state would agree -- 24 of Illinois law, that act without more would constitute 25 an aggravated battery; an attempt to injure with a

1 deadly weapon.

2 Attempt with a knife could, under anyone's 3 reading, reflect the factual basis for a plea of 4 aggravated battery. That's all my client's claim has 5 been from the outset. The Sixth Circuit found that the 6 state had failed to bear a burden beginning with an 7 insufficient record.

8 And incidentally, the circuit courts have been 9 uniform in finding that when the record is silent, from 10 Boykin, from Henderson, the state bears a heavy burden;
11 a burden to show by clear and convincing evidence that a 12 plea, that total relinquishment of all this defendant, 13 all Robert Longberger's constitutional rights, casting 14 them before the court, must at least be based in the 15 knowledge of the charge to which he is entering a plea.

16 QUESTION: Well, let's suppose two or three 17 situations. Suppose that in the Ohio proceeding, after 18 an evidentiary hearing the Ohio court found that this 19 guilty plea was intelligent and voluntary and that he 20 had had notice and knew of the plea. You would think 21 there would have to be some deference to that in the 22 habeas proceeding.

23 MR. CZARNECKI: Yes, Your Honor.

24 QUESTION: Now, suppose the judge says I find 25 it to be a voluntary and intelligent plea and valid.

1 Would there have to be any deference to that?

2 MR. CZARNECKI: I think that's too much of a 3 legal conclusion given the fact that --

4 QUESTION: Well, we have cases and plenty of 5 them that would say that even if all the judge said was 6 I find the plea to be valid. We have cases that say 7 unless there's some indication to the contrary, that you 8 assume that a knowledgeable judge or a state judge has 9 applied the right legal standard.

10 MR. CZARNECKI: Yes, Your Honor. That's 11 correct, Your Honor, except in this particular case, as 12 I pointed out to you before, the Sixth Circuit has found 13 that even if that finding is to be given deference, even 14 if one reads that phrase broadly enough to mean I find 15 this defendant had actual knowledge of the charge, the 16 record is totally devoid of objective evidence to 17 support that finding.

18 QUESTION: Well, the record maybe, but that 19 was the finding of the state court.

20 MR. CZARNECKI: That's correct, Your Honor,
21 but that finding must be supported in the record.

22 QUESTION: I'm going back to your statement
23 just before Justice White's question to you. You said
24 he couldn't have thought there were two crimes involved 25 here. Let me repeat to you again the question: after

1 the judge had gone through all these specific questions, 2 in which admittedly, the word "murder" was left out, but 3 "attempt with a knife", then he said, "Do you understand 4 by pleading guilty I could sentence you from one to ten 5 on aggravated battery." Clearly, nothing ambiguous 6 about that, is there?

7 MR. CZARNECKI: That's correct, Your Honor.

8 QUESTION: And attempt, one to 20. Now, 9 didn't that convey a message that the second crime that 10 the judge was talking about was the much more severe 11 crime of the two?

12 MR. CZARNECKI: The Court's question would 13 force me into the defendant's mind some 11 years in the 14 past. All I can represent to the Court --

15 QUESTION: What would you understand about 16 it? Let's put it that way.

17 MR. CZARNECKI: The standard is not what I 18 would understand --

19 QUESTION: That there were two crimes, and one 20 was much more serious than the other. Is that not what 21 almost anyone would understand?

22 MR. CZARNECKI: But I don't believe the 23 standard, Your Honor, is what an ordinary person would 24 understand as the state presents, or what any other 25 person would understand. But rather, what this

1 defendant understood or had notice of in 1972.

2 QUESTION: I see. Thank you. Do you have 3 anything further, Mr. Drake?

4 MR. DRAKE: Yes, Your Honor.

5 ORAL ARGUMENT OF RICHARD DAVID DRAKE, Esq.

6 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER -- Rebuttal

7 MR. DRAKE: Two points. The difficulty here
8 is that the respondent endeavors to assume that no
9 evidence had been presented whatsoever, which I believe 10 is Justice Stevens' question -- on other words, had not 11 Mr. Lonberger testified at the Ohio hearing -- that some 12 burden would have been foisted upon the state of Ohio to 13 validate this plea.

14 I would note that in Henderson versus Morgan, 15 it was precisely this contention by the state that 16 you're inviting countless collateral attacks to guilty 17 pleas than the court indicated. Moreover, even without 18 an express representation, it may be appropriate to 19 presume that in most cases, defense counsel routinely 20 explain the nature of the offense in sufficient detail 21 to give the accused notice of what he is being asked to 22 admit.

23 The burden here was by convincing evidence --

24 QUESTION: Let me ask you about that. We're 25 talking now about the hearing in advance of trial in the 1 Ohio court in support of the state's motion to use the 2 prior plea to aggravate the sentence. Who went forward

3 with evidence at that hearing? Who put on the first 4 witness?

5 MR. CZARNECKI: The respondent.

6 QUESTION: The respondent, but --

7 MR. CZARNECKI: It was respondent's motion.
8 The trial court gave it --

9 QUESTION: Was it a motion to prevent the 10 state from using it, rather than a motion for permission?

11 MR. CZARNECKI: It was essentially a motion in 12 limiting -- it was a motion to dismiss the death penalty 13 specification, but it was essentially a collateral 14 attack on that Illinois guilty plea. Were it no good, 15 the death penalty specification was, of course, 16 inadmissible.

17 QUESTION: Well, would you be content to take 18 the position that we can simply look at the Illinois 19 guilty plea proceeding, and that's all the evidence you 20 need? On the basis of the presumption that you read 21 from the Henderson opinion.

22 MR. CZARNECKI: That is the presumption, but 23 evidence --

24 QUESTION: We don't have to get involved in 25 credibility at all.

1 MR. CZARNECKI: You don't have to, but --

2 QUESTION: It was an indictment that charged 3 attempted murder, and even though the judge was a little 4 imprecise in saying -- just mentioning the aggravated 5 battery and the word "attempt" without ever using the 6 word "murder", the fact that the indictment mentioned 7 attempted murder and the fact that we can presume 8 counsel normally tell their clients what the charge is, 9 that's enough for your position?

10 MR. CZARNECKI: Absent some evidence, credible 11 evidence, by the accused, yes.

12 QUESTION: No. Say there was no evidence
13 except what I described. Would you be willing to rest 14 on that?

15 MR. CZARNECKI: In this particular record, 16 yes. There could be guilty pleas. But you must 17 remember, bear in mind, that this was a plea bargain.

18 QUESTION: Then our task is limited to two 19 questions, as I see it. Just look at the indictment and 20 find out if the man was represented by counsel. Maybe 21 that should be the test.

22 MR. CZARNECKI: And, of course, whether or not 23 he was arraigned and otherwise notified. Here there are 24 additional factors that are before the Court by Mr.
25 Lonberger's own admission, Your Honor.

1 But in answer to your question, that is 2 correct, it would be our position that he bore the 3 burden and it's quite obvious that the Ohio trial court 4 did not credit his testimony.

5 QUESTION: But in Henderson, didn't they read 6 the indictment to him?

7 MR. CZARNECKI: No, Your Honor. That was the 8 --

9 QUESTION: That didn't appear in the record?

10 MR. CZARNECKI: That was the very pivotal in 11 -- there were two issues. One is that he had never been 12 read the indictment or otherwise notified of the charge, 13 because he was indicted for first degree murder in New 14 York and pled guilty to second degree murder.

15 QUESTION: That's right.

16 MR. CZARNECKI: Therefore, he was never 17 arraigned on it.

18 And also, at the hearing, the federal district 19 court found, as a matter of fact, that his attorney had 20 not told him, in this particular case, that the purpose 21 was an element of the crime of second degree murder.

22 QUESTION: That's in Henderson.

23 MR. CZARNECKI: That coupled with his 24 intellectual deficiency made it quasi-credible.

25 QUESTION: Is it clear that the indictment was 1 read to the defendant in this case?

2 MR. CZARNECKI: He said he was arraigned,
3 despite Mr. Czarnecki's contrary --

4 QUESTION: He pled guilty to the indictment.

5 MR. CZARNECKI: He pled guilty to the original 6 charge --

7 QUESTION: Not guilty to the indictment.

8 MR. CZARNECKI: He pled guilty while 9 represented by competent counsel to the original charges
10 on which he said he was indicted -- I'm sorry -- 11 arraigned twice.

12 QUESTION: Was he present when he pled not 13 guilty?

14 MR. CZARNECKI: He said, they took me before a 15 court and arraigned me. It's --

16 QUESTION: What I'm trying to find out is does 17 the record show whether or not the defendant was present 18 when the indictment was read?

19 MR. CZARNECKI: Yes, Mr. Lonberger indicated
20 that he was present; that he was arraigned. He didn't 21 go into any specifics or didn't delineate, did not 22 present any corroborative evidence one way or the other.

23 QUESTION: I thought he said he went three or 24 four times. He wasn't clear about any of them, was he?
25 Did he say he went to court three or more times?

1 MR. CZARNECKI: He indicated he was arraigned 2 twice and that he had a hearing with the --

3 QUESTION: Then my answer is which one of 4 these was the indictment read to him? You don't know.

5 MR. CZARNECKI: He did not indicate that it
6 was ever read to him, is the answer.

7 QUESTION: In fact, isn't it a little stronger 8 than that? We do have a transcript with at least some 9 of the Illinois proceedings, and that transcript does 10 not include a reading of the indictment to the 11 defendant. Is that not correct?

12 MR. CZARNECKI: The transcript you have is 13 only of the guilty plea, Your Honor.

14 QUESTION: Yes, whatever we have from 15 Illinois; we do have some transcript from Illinois.
16 That transcript does not include a reading of the 17 indictment to the defendant.

18 MR. CZARNECKI: That's correct, Your Honor.

19 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen, 20 the case is submitted.

21 (Whereupon, at 2:08 p.m., the oral argument in 22 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
