2 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments
3 next in City of Akron against Akron Center for 4 Reproductive Health.

5 Mr. Segedy, I think you may proceed when you 6 are ready.

7 ORAL ARGUMENT OF ALAN G. SEGEDY, ESQ., 8 ON BEHALF OF CITY OF AKRON

9 MR. SEGEDY: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
10 please the Court, the principal issues presented in this 11 case are whether the state may reasonably regulate in 12 the area of abortion in a manner designed to ensure an 13 informed decision by a pregnant woman in a situation
14 where there in fact is no physician-patient 15 relationship; likewise, whether the state may require 16 parental consent or judicial consent as a prerequisite 17 to an abortion to be performed upon an immature minor; 18 and finally, exactly what is the standard of review that 19 should be applied in the testing of abortion-related 20 legislation.

21 The Akron ordinance was passed on February 28, 22 1978, amongst considerable controversy, but contrary to 23 the characterization by the cross-petitioners that this 24 was a drastic departure from normal legislative 25 procedure, this ordinance and the process whereby it was

1 enacted is probably one of the finest examples of the 2 legislative process on the local level.

3 There were at least four public hearings on 4 this ordinance, including an entire day spent with 5 expert medical testimony with doctors from all over the 6 country, and likewise an entire day of legal testimony
7 with respect to legal experts rendering their opinions 8 as to the constitutionality of this ordinance.

9 I would point out to the Court that the 10 ordinance has not been challenged by a pregnant woman, 11 but has been challenged by three abortion clinics and a 12 doctor who resides approximately 300 miles from the City 13 of Akron.

14 This case represents a real lawsuit with real 15 parties and real evidence and a trial that lasted for 16 about two-and-a-half weeks, and I think when the Court 17 reviews the record, it will be eminently clear that in 18 the abortion situation in the City of Akron, there is no 19 physician-patient relationship anywhere near what this 20 Court envisioned in the case of Roe versus Wade.

21 When the Sixth Circuit tested this legislation 22 it applied a two-tier test; first, to determine whether 23 or not there was any legally significant impact or 24 consequence on the abortion decision, and if there was, 25 the court determined that there must be a compelling

1 state interest. The court then concluded that if the 2 regulation impacted on the first trimester of pregnancy,
3 by its interpretation of Roe versus Wade, the state
4 necessarily did not have a compelling state interest.

5 QUESTION: When you suggested that no patient 6 was challenging the statute, did you mean to suggest 7 that only a patient could challenge the statute?

8 MR. SEGEDY: No, Your Honor. I just point
9 that out in reference to the considerations with respect 10 to the parental consent provisions and with respect to 11 minors challenging the statute with respect to parental 12 consent. Clearly Roe versus Wade and subsequent cases 13 tell us that there can be standing by jus tertii on the 14 part of the physician. The City of Akron recognizes 15 that.

16 However, the city would submit that the proper 17 standard of review that should be applied, and the 18 standard which this Court has reiterated is whether or 19 not the regulation is unduly burdensome on the woman's 20 decision to have an abortion.

21 This Court stated in Roe versus Wade, and 22 reiterated numerous times that that decision did not 23 represent abortion on demand. The right that is 24 contained which the Court recognized in Roe versus Wade 25 was not simply the right to have an abortion, but the

1 right to make that choice either to have an abortion or 2 to bear a child. The essential right is that freedom of 3 choice.

4 The abortion clinics in this case, as the 5 record shows, make certain assumptions with respect to 6 this situation, the first of which is that abortion is 7 always the best choice for the pregnant woman; secondly, 8 that the abortion clinics' interests always align in 9 essentially a one-to-one correspondence with the 10 pregnant woman or the minor; and finally, that the 11 interests of the state or the City of Akron in this case 12 or the parents are somehow adverse to that of the 13 pregnant woman or the pregnant minor.

14 This Court has recognized interest in maternal 15 health, potential life, and maintaining medical 16 standards. The City of Akron would submit there is also 17 another important interest involved in this area which 18 this Court has not had to face yet, because it has not 19 come up in any particular fact situation, and that is, 20 the city or the state has an interest in protecting the 21 woman's own constitutional right of her freedom of 22 choice as to whether or not to have an abortion or 23 whether to carry her child, her unborn child to term.

24 The city would submit this is an important 25 interest, in fact compelling, and exists throughout the 1 entire spectrum of the pregnancy.

2 The consideration of an abortion statute
3 should not simply be a matter of determining that 4 automatically there must be a compelling state
5 interest. I think the courts below must look at a 6 regulation and determine whether or not there is any 7 impact on the abortion decision. That impact may be 8 choice-enhancing, or that impact may burden -- be 9 burdensome.

10 If in fact the impact is burdensome, the city 11 would submit that there must be a determination of 12 whether or not there is a substantial burden on the 13 woman's right to choose. If there is a substantial 14 burden, as in Roe versus Wade or Planned Parenthood 15 versus Danforth with respect to the parental veto, then 16 there must be a compelling state interest.

17 On the contrary, if the burden is only 18 insubstantial, all the state need show is that there is 19 a rational basis for the legislation. In this --

20 QUESTION: Counsel, is the city relying on all 21 four of the alleged state interests that you described 22 in this instance?

23 MR. SEGEDY: That's correct, Your Honor.

24 QUESTION: Okay. Thank you.

25 MR. SEGEDY: There is another aspect to

1 abortion --

2 QUESTION: Mr. Segedy --

3 MR. SEGEDY: Yes, Your Honor.

4 QUESTION: -- may I ask, the district court on 5 the parental consent provision held it unconstitutional, 6 did it not?

7 MR. SEGEDY: That's correct, Your Honor.

8 QUESTION: And who took it to the court of 9 appeals? Not the city.

10 MR. SEGEDY: Your Honor, the -- in what was 11 effectively a cooperative effort, the defendant 12 intervenors raised the specific question within their 13 briefs as to the parental consent provision. However, 14 the City of Akron also argued that question at oral 15 argument in the court of appeals.

16 QUESTION: Well, now, the intervenors didn't 17 bring -- didn't come here.

18 MR. SEGEDY: Your Honor, the intervenors
19 petitioned this Court also on that question, and we can 20 only speculate whether this Court denied that petition 21 because it was a duplication of the city's petition, and 22 therefore, not being aware of any possible standing 23 arguments, simply determined that --

24 QUESTION: But I am correct then that you 25 litigated the issue in the district court and lost,

1 correct?

2 MR. SEGEDY: When you say "you," Your Honor,

3 you mean --

4 QUESTION: The city.

5 MR. SEGEDY: -- the City of Akron?

6 QUESTION: That's true, isn't it?

7 MR. SEGEDY: That's correct.

8 QUESTION: And then the City of Akron did not

9 formally appeal to the court of appeals in that event.

10 It was the intervenors who did that. Is that correct?

11 MR. SEGEDY: Well, the City of Akron did also,

12 Your Honor, in terms of raising it on oral argument.

13 QUESTION: Well, I -- but you didn't file a

14 formal appeal from that aspect of --

15 MR. SEGEDY: Yes, Your Honor.

16 QUESTION: You appealed from some ruling.

17 MR. SEGEDY: There are numerous questions in 18 the case, Your Honor.

19 QUESTION: Yes, I should say there are.

20 (General laughter.)

21 MR. SEGEDY: Even more than there are now.

22 QUESTION: Well, did you appeal from the 23 judgment against you in the district court?

24 MR. SEGEDY: Yes, Your Honor.

25 Your Honors, the --

1 QUESTION: Did you appeal from the parental 2 consent for minors ruling?

3 MR. SEGEDY: Yes, Your Honor.

4 QUESTION: Well, I take it you appeal from a 5 judgment, and then you may assign errors or points to be 6 relied on in the court of appeals.

7 MR. SEGEDY: The questions presented --

8 QUESTION: Yes, questions presented.

9 QUESTION: There might be two, or there might 10 be seven or eight under that one judgment.

11 MR. SEGEDY: Correct, Your Honor.

12 I would point out to the Court, if the Court 13 has concern about that, under the O'Bannon case, which 14 deals with this question with respect to the raising of 15 a question and the waiver, that the respondents in this 16 case, Dr. Seguin and Mrs. Black, may raise those 17 questions under Rule 21.4, I believe it is, and that is 18 exactly the situation we have here, as in the O'Bannon 19 case, where the dispute was between HEW and the 20 Department of Welfare.

21 The City of Akron submits that the major 22 thrust of this legislation is not burdensome on the 23 choice of the pregnant woman, but is rather 24 choice-enhancing. And the city would also submit that 25 under the facts of this case, and it is very important

1 that the record be viewed very -- very carefully, that 2 as the physician relationship, physician-patient 3 relationship diminishes, the state's interest in 4 protecting that relationship increases.

5 And what this record shows is that there is no 6 physician-patient relationship. A primary example of 7 that would be that the woman signs her informed consent 8 form prior to the time that she ever sees a physician, 9 and that is undisputed and clear in the record.

10 The Sixth Circuit struck down the informed 11 consent provision on the basis of it impacting upon the 12 first trimester of pregnancy. However, this Court has 13 upheld informed consent in Planned Parenthood versus 14 Danforth -- excuse me, in Planned Parenthood versus 15 Danforth, in principle, by a general informed consent, 16 and likewise in Franklin versus Fitzpatrick, by summary
17 affirmance, and by implication in H.L. versus Matheson
18 by way of a footnote approving a detailed informed 19 consent provision.

20 Again, the city would submit that there is 21 this compelling interest of the state in the choice of 22 the woman, that is, her fundamental constitutional 23 right, and the city may protect that choice by ensuring 24 that there is a physician-patient relationship, as the 25 Court envisioned in Roe versus Wade.

1 This provision creates no burden on the 2 woman's decision, and it provides flexibility for the 3 physician. We would point out to the Court in 4 1870.06(c), it is provided that the physician shall 5 provide such other information as he deems is relevant 6 to the woman's decision.

7 It is charged that the provision is one-sided, 8 that is, the information goes toward possibly what might 9 lead her not to decide to have an abortion, but the 10 purpose for that is looking at what is the danger of 11 risk of non-information, which way does that risk go, 12 toward the physician underinforming toward abortion or 13 toward going to term?

14 In 1870.05(b), the Court struck down the 15 parental consent provision. As we pointed out to the 16 Court already, there was no woman or no minor at all who 17 challenged this provision, only the abortion clinics and 18 Dr. Bliss.

19 QUESTION: Where did Dr. Bliss reside?

20 MR. SEGEDY: In Cincinnati, Ohio.

21 We would point out to the Court that this 22 provision provides the judicial alternative that this 23 Court referred to in Bellotti 2. We would point out to 24 the Court also that this provision applies only to 25 minors who are under 15 years of age.

1 QUESTION: May I ask, is it a fact that under 2 Ohio law, the court that has jurisdiction is the 3 juvenile court, and that also under your law the 4 juvenile court would have to inform the parent in every 5 case?

6 MR. SEGEDY: Your Honor, we would submit that 7 that is not true. Under the supremacy clause, the 8 juvenile courts of the City of Akron would recognize 9 this Court's decisions with respect to parental 10 notification and parental consent.

11 QUESTION: Does the statute on its face
12 require the notice?

13 MR. SEGEDY: The rule, the juvenile rule 14 provides for information or notice to be given to the 15 parents.

16 QUESTION: To the parent, and you are saying 17 that in light of decisions of this Court, that would be 18 invalidated?

19 MR. SEGEDY: Your Honor, we would submit, 20 first of all, that the juvenile court could disregard 21 that provision as applied to a pregnant minor seeking an 22 abortion. However, that would also raise the question 23 of whether or not it is permissible for the city to 24 somewhere draw a line and say that it is reasonable to 25 assume that a minor is not mature enough to make the 1 abortion decision.

2 The City of Akron feels that 14, 13, 12, 3 11-year-old girls are simply not mature enough to make 4 that decision.

5 QUESTION: But you do have the alternative of 6 an independent decision-maker --

7 MR. SEGEDY: That's correct, Your Honor,
8 through the juvenile court, and the purpose of the 9 juvenile court under the Ohio statutes, in 2151.01, the 10 very first statute, is to protect the minor.

11 QUESTION: But under Bellotti 2 and Matheson,
12 certainly the view that at least four Justices 13 expressed, notice to the parent required as a matter of 14 law would present a difficulty for your case, would it 15 not?

16 MR. SEGEDY: If that were the case, Your 17 Honor --

18 QUESTION: Yes.

19 MR. SEGEDY: -- for minors under 15. However, 20 the Ohio statutes were not challenged. They were not 21 litigated. The effect of those statutes were not 22 challenged in this lawsuit, so there is really no way of 23 knowing exactly what the effect would be as applied 24 other than viewing the statutes on their face.

25 QUESTION: You mentioned the young age

1 involved here. Is it part of your position that 2 Danforth, the Danforth holding on parental consent does 3 not apply to people under 15?

4 MR. SEGEDY: Your Honor, in Planned Parenthood
5 versus Danforth, this Court noted that not all minors,
6 regardless of age or maturity, are capable of consenting 7 to an abortion, and I think that it is possible for the 8 state to make a determination at some point that 9 parental consent may be required.

10 QUESTION: Are you arguing in this case that 11 Danforth does not apply in the ages below 15?

12 MR. SEGEDY: No, Your Honor.

13 QUESTION: You are not.

14 MR. SEGEDY: As a practical matter, we are 15 almost always dealing with immature minors, minors of 16 14, 13, 12. Now, there are certainly minors who might 17 be 14 who have the maturity of a 35-year-old, and 18 likewise 35-year-olds who have the maturity of a 19 12-year-old, but it would seem that the state can draw a 20 line somewhere, just as it does for virtually every 21 other purpose, such as voting, which is a very 22 fundamental right, as to maturity.

23 If a person would submit that he is mature 24 enough to vote at age 17, I don't think that person 25 would get too far with the constitutional argument. And

1 we would submit that the same kind of line can be drawn 2 by the City of Akron with respect to the maturity of 3 minors.

4 If it please the Court, at this time I would 5 save some time for rebuttal.

6 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well.

7 Mr. Solicitor General.

8 ORAL ARGUMENT OF REX E. LEE, ESQ.,

9 ON BEHALF OF THE CITY OF AKRON

10 MR. LEE: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please 11 the Court, I would like to address the issue of the 12 standard of review. One way to view the cases now 13 before the Court is that they are simply the next in a 14 series of cases in which over the past decade the Court 15 has developed a rather detailed body of federal 16 constitutional rules dealing with abortion.

17 Under that view, the Court's task today is to 18 consider about a dozen separate provisions of state and 19 local law and declare each of them either constitutional 20 or unconstitutional. The result will be that the 21 outline of applicable federal constitutional rules is 22 longer and more detailed. We would then await the next 23 round of abortion cases two or three years down the 24 road, and another after that.

25 The approach that we urge is different, but

1 consistent with this Court's precedents. It involves 2 two steps. The first is a recognition that as Mr.
3 Segedy has said, a decade of this Court's abortion
4 decisions have now established that not every abortion
5 regulation is governed by the compelling state interest 6 test, but only those that unduly burden the woman's 7 decision whether to have an abortion or not.

8 The second step would be to declare that in 9 making that key determination, ultimately a judicial 10 determination, concerning which practices do and which 11 do not unduly burden the abortion decision, the Court 12 should be mindful of four things.

13 The first is that most of the questions
14 dealing with the undue burden issue have substantial 15 factual components. These cases are illustrative. Does 16 the 24-hour delay requirement lead, or does it not, to a 17 better informed decision? Comparative safety of 18 hospitals and non-hospital facilities. And you could go 19 right down the list.

20 By the time that a lawsuit brings the total 21 issues into court, the competing arguments concerning 22 these factual components have already been addressed and 23 resolved by a legislature which, for reasons discussed 24 in our brief, is better qualified as an institution to 25 deal with factual issues than is a court.

1 And to the extent that the issues are 2 non-factual -- this is my second point -- they involve a 3 blend of constitutional law and also policy. The 4 resolution of these two kinds of issues, constitutional 5 law on the one hand and public policy on the other, are 6 the core functions of courts on the one hand and 7 legislatures on the other.

8 So that the real question in these cases is 9 this: in those areas of overlap between legislative 10 authority and judicial authority, such as abortion cases 11 are, cases which necessarily involve both the making of 12 policy and also declaring constitutional law, should the 13 courts regard the process as one of policy-making or 14 legal decision-making, or is there some room for 15 accommodating the two, for recognizing that what is 16 really involved is a combination of the core functions 17 of both branches?

18 We believe that there is, and that the 19 accommodation comes about in the following fashion.

20 First, at the end of the day, the ultimate 21 decision must be made by the courts, but in exercising 22 this ultimate and awesome power, the courts must be 23 mindful that the kinds of competing considerations that 24 enter into its decision have already been taken into 25 account by a representative legislative body exercising

1 its own responsibility to make policy decisions.

2 QUESTION: May I ask you this question?

3 MR. LEE: Yes.

4 QUESTION: Supposing the record of the Akron
5 proceedings, and I am not familiar with it, show a total 6 failure to consider the question of maternal health.
7 Supposing that is in the record before us now. Would 8 your argument still apply?

9 MR. LEE: The argument would still apply, 10 though there might be another consideration that would 11 come in at that point. There is an intermediate 12 position, that at that point it might be proper for the 13 court in extreme cases to take that into account in 14 determining whether or not to defer.

15 Now, in fact, as Mr. Segedy has said, and as 16 the record in fact discloses, this is a good example of 17 a legislative body that did its job the way it should, 18 by hearing both sides of those issues. And it did reach 19 these very issues of which we are talking about. The 20 comparative safety of hospitals and non-hospital 21 facilities, for example; the extent to which the 24-hour
22 delay period does or does not lead to a more informed 23 decision.

24 There is a closely related consideration, and 25 it is that a root message of Roe v. Wade and its progeny

1 is that the constitutional inquiry related to abortion
2 involves balancing. This Court's decisions are replete
3 with observations, such as that in Maher, that, and I am 4 quoting, "Roe v. Wade can be understood only by 5 considering both the woman's interest and the nature of 6 the state's interference with it."

7 One of the similarities between courts and 8 legislatures is that both from time to time engage in 9 the balancing process. One of the differences is that 10 legislatures do it better. Balancing by its very 11 definition is virtually synonymous with policy-making, 12 choosing between competing values, and the optimum 13 balance almost always depends on issues of fact.

14 To the extent, therefore, and this is the 15 accommodation of which I spoke, the judicial balancing 16 is required, as it is under this Court's decisions, 17 considerations of judicial efficiency and also 18 separation of powers are best served by judicial 19 recognition of the fact that the same balancing process 20 or almost the same has already been undertaken by an 21 institution of government which is better qualified to 22 perform the function and within whose institutional 23 bailiwick balancing lies at the very center.

24 Different states and political subdivisions 25 will approach these problems and strike their respective

1 balances in different ways. Some will adopt laws
2 diametrically opposed to others. But as Justice
3 Brandeis reminded us several decades ago, and as this 4 Court quoted in the Maher case, the diversity that 5 results from state and local authority to attack a 6 common problem in different ways, even opposing ways, is 7 part of the genius of a federal system of government.

8 QUESTION: Mr. Solicitor General, are you
9 asking that Roe v. Wade be overruled?

10 MR. LEE: I am not, Mr. Justice Blackmun.

11 QUESTION: Why not?

12 MR. LEE: That is not one of the issues
13 presented in this case, and as amicus appearing before 14 the Court, that would not be a proper function for us.

15 QUESTION: It seems to me that your brief in 16 essence asks either that or the overruling of Marbury 17 against Madison.

18 MR. LEE: Neither. Neither. And the reason 19 is, as I have just stated, the ultimate decision at the 20 end of the day concerning these matters is a judicial 21 decision, but all I am pleading for is a recognition 22 that both with respect to issues of fact which 23 necessarily pervade each of these decisions that is 24 made, and also with respect to their factual 25 non-components, that the Court at least take into account the fact that

1 these same kinds of issues have already been faced by a 2 legislature with superior fact-finding capabilities, and 3 have been resolved.

4 The Eighth Circuit --

5 QUESTION: May I ask one other question?

6 QUESTION: Of course, that was true with 7 Marbury against Madison also.

8 QUESTION: Would you apply the same standard 9 of review where there is the legislative history that 10 you have in Akron as you would in Virginia where there 11 is no legislative history?

12 MR. LEE: Yes. Yes. With regard to the 13 argument, Justice Blackmun, that that is the same
14 standard that was -- the same circumstances that existed 15 in Marbury, There is a difference. As I say, we are 16 not urging that Roe v. Wade be overruled. There are 17 portions of -- but that is an issue. That is an issue 18 for another day. But there is a constitutionally 19 significant difference between the kind of yes or no 20 answer as to whether abortion is or is not prohibited by 21 the Constitution that was involved in Roe v. Wade and 22 the subsequent filling in of the rather 23 factually-oriented details, and more precise and 24 specific details that have characterized the decisions 25 since that time.

1 We simply submit that after a decade of this 2 Court's decisions which have raised the question that is 3 before the Court as to whether it is compelling state 4 interest that applies across the boards or whether we 5 have now reached the point that it is only the undue 6 burden, that rather than having these cases come back 7 year after year after year, with the list of applicable
8 federal constitutional rules becoming longer and longer 9 and longer, that the time has now come to apply those 10 principles that the Court has so well developed in other 11 areas dealing with substantive due process to this area 12 of the law which also rests on substantive due process, 13 and at least to take into account the fact that another 14 governmental decision or another governmental body also 15 charged with the responsibility of facing these same 16 kinds of questions has faced them, and that they have 17 resolved them.

18 A final consideration is that to whatever 19 extent a public policy issue is constitutionalized, all 20 but one of the competing points of view are eliminated 21 as acceptable alternatives. One of the cornerstones of 22 a free society is that the search for truth is enhanced 23 by permitting full and uninhibited discussion of public 24 issues by leaving those issues exposed for a time to the 25 legislative process and public discussion.

1 The point is not, therefore, that courts
2 should stay out of controversial issues. It is, rather,
3 that since the power that the Court brings to the issue
4 is, as Justice Brandeis again pointed out, and Justice 5 Holmes in his dissent in Abrams, to remove it from 6 public debate. It is a power that the Court should 7 exercise sparingly.

8 Thank you.

9 QUESTION: Mr. Lee, did you write this brief
10 personally?

11 MR. LEE: Very substantial parts of it, 12 Justice Blackmun.

13 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Landsman?

14 ORAL ARGUMENT OF STEPHAN LANDSMAN, ESQ., 15 ON BEHALF OF AKRON CENTER FOR REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH

16 MR. LANDSMAN: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
17 please the Court, the Akron ordinance before the Court 18 today requires that when any woman seeks an abortion in 19 the City of Akron, she and her physician must comply 20 with at least 14 separate and distinct requirements
21 before the procedure may be performed. If she is a 22 minor or she seeks a second trimester procedure, the 23 number is far greater.

24 All the ordinance requirements must be 25 satisfied. None can be avoided, regardless of the 1 woman's personal circumstances or her medical 2 condition. Any deviation from even one requirement will 3 expose the physician to up to six months in jail, a 4 $1,000 fine, and potential loss of license.

5 I would like to begin my argument with a 6 discussion of the constitutional standard applicable in 7 this case, and then turn to the various sections of the 8 ordinance, beginning with the informed consent script 9 and the 24-hour delay, the ban on clinical second 10 trimester procedures, and the minor's veto.

11 In Roe versus Wade, this Court held that a 12 woman had a fundamental right, in consultation with her 13 physician, to choose whether to terminate a pregnancy.
14 As this Court indicated in Roe and reiterated as 15 recently as Harris versus McRae, regulations restricting 16 this fundamental right are presumptively
17 unconstitutional.

18 In order to sustain abortion regulations, the 19 state has a heavy burden. Either it must show that 20 those regulations do not restrict the woman's decision, 21 as this Court identified in the Danforth case, or if the 22 plaintiffs demonstrate that a regulation imposes a 23 cognizable burden, then the regulation be supported by a 24 compelling state interest and be narrowly drawn to 25 support only that interest.

1 QUESTION: Didn't the Court make it clear in 2 Roe that the right is not an unqualified right?

3 MR. LANDSMAN: That's correct, Your Honor. It
4 is in consultation with her physician.

5 QUESTION: Only that limitation?

6 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, with respect to 7 further steps, one would have to ask what particular 8 stage of the pregnancy we are at and a variety of other 9 things.

10 QUESTION: Do you suggest that the use of that 11 language, that it is not unqualified, doesn't mean that 12 it isn't qualified by some state interests?

13 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, this Court clearly 14 indicated that it is qualified by state interest of --

15 QUESTION: Not just what the doctor tells her.

16 MR. LANDSMAN: That's correct, Your Honor.
17 The compelling interest in maternal health becomes a 18 state interest that can be effectuated in the second 19 trimester, as this Court indicated in Roe. And the 20 concerns for viability certainly add viability.

21 The Solicitor General and the defendants do
22 not challenge this Court's determination that the right 23 to choose is fundamental. However, they would have the 24 Court stand the burden of proof rule in fundamental 25 rights cases on its head, and force the plaintiff to 1 show in each and every case an undue burden.

2 It would not appear that the state has any 3 responsibility under the test suggested by the Solicitor 4 General and the defendants. This proposal would 5 undercut Roe's finding of fundamentality. It would make 6 all restrictive abortion regulations presumptively 7 constitutional, and place the onus on the plaintiffs in 8 each and every case to show their undue burdensomeness.

9 Besides directly undercutting Roe's
10 declaration of fundamentality, the undue burden test
11 creates other problems as well. As the Solicitor
12 General admits in his brief at Page 10, the undue burden
13 test is one of breadth and ambiguity. It is essentially 14 a standardless and ad hoc test.

15 In Gertz versus Robert Welch, this Court 16 considered and rejected a similar ad hoc test in the 17 First Amendment area, because this Court felt it would 18 lead to unpredictable results, uncertainty of 19 expectations, and would render this Court's supervisory 20 powers impossible to be enforced.

21 The Solicitor General has an alternative 22 solution. He suggests that the judiciary defer in any 23 fundamental rights case where a legislative policy 24 choice is arguably at stake. It is a rule as old as 25 Marbury versus Madison that the courts must apply the

1 relevant constitutional standards rather than defer to a 2 coequal branch on that issue.

3 There are a variety of reasons for this rule.
4 Perhaps most important, any other choice would undermine 5 the enforcement of fundamental constitutional rights by 6 allowing impassioned majorities to restrict liberty 7 interests. It would also render impossible the task of 8 developing a coherent body of constitutional principles.

9 Justice O'Connor asked Mr. Segedy what 10 interest does the state rely on in this case. I would 11 cite to the Court the questions presented for review in 12 this case. Akron relies on one and only one interest in 13 its questions, whether the state's interest in maternal 14 health and well-being is such that it may regulate 15 abortion. There is no other state interest being 16 advanced, at least pursuant to the questions presented 17 on which certiorari was granted.

18 The first section I would like to consider was 19 enacted under the rubric of informed consent. Both of 20 the two parts of this section that were held 21 unconstitutional were held to impinge upon the woman's 22 right to choose whether to terminate her pregnancy. The 23 first of these two forces the attending physician, on 24 pain of incarceration, to recite in each and every case, 25 without exception, seven scripted statements, including

1 Akron's assertion that human life begins at the moment 2 of conception, and a fetal description promoting that 3 view, as well as a variety of medically inaccurate
4 assertions about the abortion procedure and risks.

5 The second of these two sections forces the 6 attending physician in each and every case, or face 7 jail, to recite individualized risk and technique
8 information. The plaintiffs proved that the proposed 9 requirements directly and substantially interfere with 10 the abortion decision and its effectuation by robbing 11 the woman of independence in the abortion 12 decision-making process and by straightjacketing her 13 physician.

14 Plaintiffs proved that both sections deprive 15 each woman of control of the abortion decision-making 16 process, first by compelling her to hear an array of 17 prescribed materials that she can never direct her 18 physician not to recite. Both the woman and her 19 physician may indeed face prosecution if the scripted 20 materials are not recited before every abortion in 21 Akron. There is no exception under any circumstances 22 whatsoever.

23 The second way in which the decision-making 24 process is burdened is that it requires the woman to 25 consider misinformation, and the record demonstrated

1 that it was misinformation, that is likely to interfere 2 with her decision-making capacity rather than assist her 3 in making a considered choice.

4 The third way in which these materials
5 interfere with the decision-making process is that they 6 force her physician to be the bearer of what plaintiff's 7 expert described as potentially inflammatory
8 information, turning the physician into the adversary 9 rather than the advisor of the woman. The sections are 10 clearly slanted against abortion. There is not one word 11 in them that is favorable to the abortion choice, and 12 they treat women as irrational decision-makers who must 13 be forced to reconsider their choice of an abortion.

14 QUESTION: Mr. Landsman, how do you respond to 15 the argument that in the abortion clinic setting, the 16 danger is of one-sided information of the other kind, 17 and the statute is intended to equalize the scales?

18 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, there is absolutely 19 no evidence in this record that the information provided 20 by the clinic is at all one-sided. Rather, it is an 21 hour-long discussion of the risks and of the procedure 22 and of the options. In fact, in this record, the 23 district court found that where a woman indicates 24 ambivalence, the physician will not proceed with the 25 abortion. The whole process is to help.

1 QUESTION: Is it not true that at least 2 insofar as people who are motivated by economic 3 incentives, that there would be at least arguably a risk 4 of one-sided presentation by the person who has an 5 interest, a financial interest in having the abortion 6 performed?

7 MR. LANDSMAN: Again, there is simply no
8 evidence in this record that that is the case, Your 9 Honor.

10 QUESTION: When you say the record, do you
11 include the record of the discussions before the Akron 12 legislative body, whatever it was, that adopted the 13 ordinance?

14 MR. LANDSMAN: No, Your Honor. Those 15 materials were never presented by the defendants in this 16 case in any way to assist them in defending this 17 ordinance. They chose not to put any of those materials 18 in the record.

19 QUESTION: Are they a matter of public record?

20 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, I believe that 21 there are tapes of those proceedings. Now, I --

22 QUESTION: They were not presented to the 23 lower court by either side?

24 MR. LANDSMAN: That's correct, Your Honor.
25 They were not presented.

1 QUESTION: I see.

2 MR. LANDSMAN: Well, when you try to clear a 3 registration statement with the SEC, they insist that 4 the issue of put in all of the bad news in effect, and 5 simply leave it up to the issuer to put in good news if 6 he wants to, but the SEC's only concern is with the 7 disadvantages of the thing. Do you see that as being 8 much different from this statute?

9 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, ironically, I 10 believe that the good news of abortion, the safety of 11 the technique and so forth, may in fact not be possible 12 for the physician to say, because the seven scripted 13 statements must be spoken, and it is unclear whether the 14 physician can indeed contradict those statements where 15 they are incorrect or provide material that corrects 16 their misimpressions.

17 If it is indeed the case, and it is unclear,
18 as it was unclear in the Colautti case, the physician 19 may have his mouth absolutely sealed by this statute and 20 be forced to speak only one side of the question.

21 QUESTION: Did any of your -- Do you represent 22 the doctor in the case?

23 MR. LANDSMAN: Yes, that's correct, Your Honor.

24 QUESTION: Did he ever try to comply with the 25 statute, or was this just a declarative --

1 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, this was enjoined
2 before it was ever to be enforced. Both the district
3 court --

4 QUESTION: Counsel, did I understand you to 5 say that in each of these clinics, there was an 6 hour-long consultation with the patient prior to the 7 abortion?

8 MR. LANDSMAN: At a minimum, there is an 9 hour-long consultation between a counselor or a 10 registered nurse and each patient, but in addition --

11 QUESTION: Not the physician?

12 MR. LANDSMAN: The physician had informed
13 consent discussions with each patient, as the district
14 court held, for a minimum of, I think the record says 15 five minutes, before any further procedures are done.
16 He consults with each patient. He discusses with each 17 patient her choice, asks if she has any questions --

18 QUESTION: In five minutes?

19 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, approximately five 20 minutes in each case. And further amount of time, and 21 of course as much time as is necessary for those who 22 indicate ambivalence, and a recommendation.

23 QUESTION: Is the one-hour discussion
24 conducted by a registered nurse?

25 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, in at least two of

1 the clinics the informed consent section of that 2 discussion is with a registered nurse. In the third 3 clinic, it is with masters of social work counselors.

4 QUESTION: Is it one on one, or is it 5 conducted in groups, as in a clinic we had here from 6 Boston a few years ago in Bellotti, where there would be 7 six or eight women of varying ages with varying 8 problems? Do your clinics do it on an one on one 9 basis?

10 MR. LANDSMAN: The record indicates that both 11 are done, Your Honor.

12 QUESTION: Sir?

13 MR. LANDSMAN: That it is done both on a one 14 on one basis and that it is done in a group setting.

15 QUESTION: In groups.

16 MR. LANDSMAN: Now, part of the time is spent 17 individually with each woman, especially when the 18 informed consent is signed, but part is spent in a group 19 setting, although some women may just get the 20 individualized counseling.

21 Both the district court and the court of 22 appeals found that plaintiffs had proven that the script
23 requirements of 06(b) placed the physician in a 24 straightjacket in the practice of medical care. They 25 block any effort on his part to exercise clinical

1 judgment. Each and every word must be spoken to each 2 and every patient. There is no emergency exception for 3 this provision.

4 The court of appeals found that the plaintiffs 5 had proven that Section 06(c) imposes the same sort of 6 straightjacket on the physician. The details required 7 there can never be omitted.

8 In response to this evidentiary showing of 9 burden, the defendants were unable to justify their 10 requirements with proof of its compelling nature.
11 Rather, the defendants conceded in the court of appeals 12 and at least in one of their briefs in this Court, that 13 various subsections of the informed consent are 14 unconstitutional. The district court found that the 15 defendants could not prove that various materials in 16 their script were indeed true.

17 Further, all of defendant's experts agreed
18 that despite Akron's blanket requirement, physicians 19 must be free to refrain from giving each patient all 20 details.

21 Finally, one of defendant's experts described 22 the informed consent approach he uses to obtain the 23 consent of hospitalized psychotics to experiments with 24 psychoactive drugs. Akron treats women seeking 25 abortions as less capable of giving informed consent

1 than the defendant's expert treated these mental 2 patients.

3 The defendant's proof failed to satisfy the 4 constitutional standard required by this Court. Rather, 5 defendants have attempted to impose an unconstitutional 6 straightjacket condemned by this Court in Danforth and 7 to rob the woman of an independent decision-making 8 capacity.

9 The next section of the ordinance that I would 10 like to analyze is Section 1870.07. It mandates that 11 every woman make two separate trips to the abortion 12 clinic by imposing a delay of no less than 24 hours 13 between the signing of the informed consent form and the 14 performance of the abortion procedure.

15 This section was held unconstitutional by the 16 court of appeals. The court of appeals found, and the 17 defendants do not deny, that the two-visit delay
18 requirement was designed to force every woman to go 19 through a cooling off period after signing an informed 20 consent form. The purpose of this, say the 21 defendants --

22 QUESTION: Do you think it would have been 23 appropriate and constitutional if the cooling off period 24 as you describe it was before the signing of the 25 consent?

1 MR. LANDSMAN: No, Your Honor. I don't 2 believe that such a requirement would have been 3 constitutional.

4 The purpose of this cooling off period was, as 5 the defendants have said in their brief, to have each 6 woman mull over the scripted information provided by 7 Akron, in other words, to reconsider in light of the 8 misleading and inflammatory materials Akron presents her 9 decision. In essence, this was an effort to dissuade 10 her from the choice she had made and indicated in her 11 signed consent.

12 This requirement treats women as if they are 13 not to be trusted to know their own minds or to make 14 rational decisions, despite the fact that over half of 15 the women who come to the Akron clinic have borne 16 children previously, and over three-quarters have been 17 professionally counseled either by a physician or 18 another health care professional, before they ever 19 arrive at an Akron clinic.

20 QUESTION: Mr. Landsman, supposing we were to 21 agree with you on Subsection (b), that the information 22 was one-sided and therefore that violated the 23 Constitution, and what remained was just hay that said 24 there had to be something signed as an intelligent 25 consent. Then would (c) still be bad?

1 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, would the waiting 2 period still be bad?

3 QUESTION: Yes.

4 MR. LANDSMAN: Yes.

5 QUESTION: If you just had a waiting period 6 from --

7 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, the waiting period
8 would still be unconstitutional.

9 QUESTION: And why would it be bad if you
10 didn't have a one-sided presentation in the interval?

11 MR. LANDSMAN: Because it imposes a 12 significant number of burdens on women seeking abortions
13 without, as the court of appeals said, any medical basis 14 therefore at all. The evidence showed --

15 QUESTION: Well, but they don't argue medical 16 basis for this. They argue an ability to make a correct 17 decision, is in effect their argument. Can you say that 18 is a totally irrelevant interest, or --

19 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, I believe that the 20 appropriate standard is, does it conform to a compelling 21 state interest, and is it narrowly drawn to meet that 22 interest? First of all, as the evidence demonstrated, 23 it is incredibly burdensome. It forces delays not of 24
24 hours but, as the evidence showed, at least two days, 25 and in many cases up to seven days.

1 QUESTION: Well, that is because you are not 2 open seven days a week.

3 MR. LANDSMAN: No, Your Honor, it is more 4 because of the privacy concerns of the women involved, 5 and because --

6 QUESTION: Well, but is it not correct that 7 neither of these clinics is open seven days a week?

8 MR. LANDSMAN: That is absolutely true.

9 QUESTION: They are open two or three days.

10 MR. LANDSMAN: That's right, Your Honor.

11 QUESTION: So if someone comes in at 5:00
12 o'clock on Friday afternoon, say, isn't there a danger
13 that the person will be told, come back Monday?

14 MR. LANDSMAN: But that is only a small part 15 of the problem, because for each woman, she has family 16 obligations, and she has employment obligations as 17 well.

18 QUESTION: Well, for instance --

19 MR. LANDSMAN: It is not a matter of clinic
20 convenience. It is really a matter of human necessity.
21 If you are going to lose your job, well, you are going 22 to wait those two or three extra days. You can't avoid 23 it. It is --

24 QUESTION: You can't say that every person who 25 is asked to wait 24 hours is going to have these serious

1 adverse consequences.

2 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, a substantial
3 number. In fact, lodged document number 17 indicates 4 that difficulties of a substantial sort were faced by 70
5 to 80 percent of women in Tennessee who were forced to 6 wait a minimum of 24 hours.

7 QUESTION: In Tennessee.

8 MR. LANDSMAN: That's correct, Your Honor.
9 That was --

10 QUESTION: This is Akron, Ohio.

11 MR. LANDSMAN: The evidence in our case is 12 precisely the same, Your Honor, that because of familial 13 concerns, because of employment concerns, as well as the 14 medical efficiency concerns, these delays are not going 15 to be 24 hours in almost any case. They are going to be 16 from two to seven days. And the health risks involved 17 in the two to seven-day delay were shown by the evidence 18 here to be very serious.

19 Additionally, Your Honor, an item we have not 20 at all touched on is the cost factor involved. Now, by 21 compelling women to come and visit these clinics on two 22 separate occasions, what we are requiring them to do is 23 to make two trips across the state of Ohio in order to 24 get an abortion.

25 Three-quarters of the women who seek abortions

1 in Akron do not live in the City of Akron. Many come
2 from as far away as Columbus, Ohio, and various cities 3 and towns in West Virginia. The cost factor involved in 4 two trips to Akron will raise the cost of abortion
5 tremendously. The alternative, of course, is to rent 6 lodgings in Akron, and to wait the appropriate amount of 7 time or more.

8 The 24-hour delay requirement also will impact 9 on those who have employment by forcing them to miss 10 work; those who have families, by forcing them to pay 11 extra child care expenses and so forth.

12 And, of course, underlying all this is the 13 feeling of the woman that she wants to have privacy in 14 this choice. If you go to a clinic on one afternoon, it 15 is easy to rearrange your schedule to do so, but when 16 you have to go back again a second time, it becomes an 17 issue that raises substantial questions, and privacy may 18 very well be breached in this matter as well.

19 QUESTION: How do you think this compares, if 20 that is the right term, with the rather repeated 21 disclaimers in the holdings of the court that the court
22 was not endorsing abortion on demand? When you 23 challenge a 24-hour delay, aren't you almost suggesting 24 that abortion on demand is the order of the day?

25 MR. LANDSMAN: I think not, Your Honor. What

1 we are saying is that every regulation enacted by a 2 state that clearly burdens the woman's choice, as this 3 does with respect to cost, with respect to risks, and so 4 forth and so on, must be justified by a compelling state
5 interest. And in this case, Akron has presented nothing 6 even approximating a compelling state interest, and that 7 makes this statute, this ordinance section invalid.

8 The defendant's response to the showing of 9 burden was a concession, first of all, that the 24-hour 10 delay does impose a restriction on a woman's access to 11 abortion. That is at Page 47 of their brief to this 12 Court. The court of appeals found that the defendants 13 produced absolutely no evidence to justify their delay 14 in the abortion setting. That is at Page 17-A of the 15 appendix.

16 In the appendix submitted to this Court with 17 the factual materials of this case, defendant's proof in 18 defense of the 24-hour delay requirement amounted to 19 approximately four sentences spoken by one expert 20 witness who does not provide any surgical care or 21 require a waiting period when he seeks the informed 22 consent of psychotic in-patients with respect to 23 experimental procedures.

24 This quantum of evidence fails to satisfy the 25 appropriate constitutional standard. Because time is of

1 the essence in the abortion decision, as this Court
2 noted in Doe versus Bolton, and defendant's abject
3 failure of proof, this section is unconstitutional.
4 Seven courts of appeals and eleven district courts have 5 reached precisely the same conclusion, and struck down 6 waiting periods of varying lengths.

7 Further, the blanket delay requirement is not 8 narrowly drawn. As concurring Judge Kennedy in the 9 court of appeals indicated, you can never get out of the 10 24-hour delay requirement where it is medically 11 contraindicated, or where previous counseling has been 12 had, as it has in three-quarters of the cases in Akron, 13 or where the cost increases are overwhelming.

14 The next section of the ordinance I would like 15 to address is Section 1870.03, which bans second 16 trimester abortions in clinics and requires their 17 performance be confined to JCAH accredited hospitals
18 exclusively. This is the only section of the ordinance
19 before the Court today that was upheld in the Sixth 20 Circuit.

21 The plaintiffs proved, and the Sixth Circuit 22 found, that the JCAH hospital requirement directly and 23 substantially interferes with the effectuation of the 24 abortion decision. The circuit court found that the 25 section forces 10 percent of Akron women seeking

1 abortions to travel to places as far away as Michigan to 2 obtain abortions, or, alternatively, to choose such 3 dangerous alternatives as self-abortion or illegal
4 abortion.

5 The court of appeals also found that this 6 requirement raises the cost of abortions for Akron women 7 from between $300 and $550. For those women who cannot 8 travel or do not have sufficient funds, as the court of 9 appeals indicated, those who are generally young, poor, 10 or black, the section deprives them of any, and I quote 11 here, "real opportunity to obtain an abortion."

12 Plaintiffs proved not only the burdensome
13 nature of this JCAH requirement, but that there was no 14 medical justification for it. The overwhelming 15 scientific evidence in this case indicates that second 16 trimester abortion procedures are safer than 17 childbirth. Similarly, voluminous evidence indicates 18 that such procedures may be performed safely in 19 freestanding out-patient clinics.

20 This evidence has led amicus, American College
21 of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, to specifically 22 endorse second trimester abortions in freestanding
23 clinics up to 18 weeks of gestation. They thereby 24 joined the American Public Health Association and the 25 Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

1 QUESTION: Can an out-patient clinic in Akron
2 or in Ohio generally be licensed in the sense that they 3 can be licensed in the first case?

4 MR. LANDSMAN: There is no significant 5 licensing provision from the state of Ohio.

6 QUESTION: Only traditional hospitals can be 7 licensed as --

8 MR. LANDSMAN: That is correct, Your Honor.
9 There is no alternative, and Akron specifically 10 proscribes any alternative but a JCAH requirement in 11 this particular case.

12 QUESTION: Counsel, you referred to the 13 standards of the American College that allows abortions 14 up to age 18 weeks. The College standards refer in that 15 connection to freestanding surgical clinics. Would such 16 a clinic be acceptable -- Well, I will put it this way 17 first. Would the clinics you represent qualify as of 18 now under the standards of the American College?

19 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, from the record as 20 we have it here, one of the plaintiff's experts examined 21 the clinics. His testimony was in this case that at 22 least the one clinic that he examined was properly 23 equipped and staffed to handle second trimester 24 abortions in light of ACOG's standards. Now, that was 25 before --

1 QUESTION: In light of the College standards, 2 did you say?

3 MR. LANDSMAN: That's right. That's right.
4 But that was --

5 QUESTION: That is a freestanding surgical 6 clinic?

7 MR. LANDSMAN: I am not entirely sure of all 8 of the requirements that --

9 QUESTION: Would those requirements include a 10 governing board, an administrative supervisor, a 11 physician, a registered nurse, specify very elaborate 12 equipment?

13 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, I believe that 14 those requirements do specify a number of special 15 considerations.

16 QUESTION: Yes, but my question -- You brought 17 up the College standards. Do your clinics comply with 18 those standards?

19 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, I am not sure that 20 the clinics comply in each and every regard, but it is 21 my belief that without any difficulty they could come 22 into compliance with those standards if they were 23 allowed to do so.

24 The defendants offered virtually no evidence 25 in support of the clinic ban that they imposed. They

1 offered virtually no evidence other than the American 2 College's now repealed standard of 1974. In the 3 appendix provided to this Court, the defendants do not 4 cite a single sentence or a single line in support of 5 the ban they would impose.

6 In the Danforth case, this Court invalidated
7 the Missouri regulation prohibiting the use of saline 8 amniocentesis because saline abortions were commonly 9 used nationally, safer than childbirth, and their 10 prohibition would force physicians and patients to more 11 dangerous alternatives. The Akron situation is 12 identical.

13 Further, in Doe versus Bolton, this Court
14 rejected a JCAH hospital requirement for abortions
15 including second trimester procedure. Akron's JCAH
16 requirement is identical to Bolton's, and is similarly 17 not narrowly drawn.

18 The next section of the ordinance I would like 19 to address is Section 1870.05(b), which mandates 20 parental or judicial consent with respect to the 21 abortion of every minor less than 15 years of age. This 22 requirement was held both by the district court and the 23 court of appeals to impose a blanket veto on the 24 abortion decision of every minor under 15. First --

25 QUESTION: In Ohio, if a 12 or 13-year-old

1 girl goes to a hospital or to a doctor and he diagnoses
2 that she has an acute appendix problem which requires 3 surgery, will a hospital permit the surgery without the 4 consent of the parents?

5 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, the testimony in 6 this case with respect to obstetrics and gynecological
7 care is that obstetricians and gynecologists in Akron 8 and throughout the state, as a matter of fact, will 9 provide such care without the parents' permission.

10 QUESTION: An appendectomy?

11 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, there is no
12 evidence in the record with respect to appendectomy.

13 QUESTION: I am asking as a question of law.

14 MR. LANDSMAN: As a matter of law, I do not 15 know the answer, Your Honor. I believe that a variety 16 of procedures -- There is a case in Ohio, Lacey versus 17 Lare, which says that with respect to medical care 18 requested by minors, that minors can generally agree to 19 that care, especially if it is an elective procedure, 20 without the approval of parents. In that case, it was 21 some facial cosmetic surgery. That is the information 22 that I have.

23 Now, with respect to anything beyond that, I 24 am just not sure what the status of the law would be, 25 Your Honor.

1 Now, this section, we submit, is not properly
2 before the Court today. The defendants did not appeal
3 the adverse ruling of the district court; thereby waived 4 any claim with respect to this matter. They cannot --

5 QUESTION: You said that the defendants didn't 6 appeal the ruling of the district court. Am I wrong in 7 thinking that the way you take a case from the district 8 court to the court of appeals is to file a notice of 9 appeal?

10 MR. LANDSMAN: That's correct, Your Honor.

11 QUESTION: Did they file a notice of appeal 12 from the judgment?

13 MR. LANDSMAN: Yes, they did, Your Honor.

14 QUESTION: Are you saying, then, in effect, 15 that they didn't argue this to the court of appeals?

16 MR. LANDSMAN: No, in order to perfect an 17 appeal, you have to identify the questions presented.
18 The questions presented by Akron did not include any 19 question with respect to this matter.

20 QUESTION: So although they appealed the 21 judgment, they didn't put this as a question presented 22 in their brief.

23 MR. LANDSMAN: That's right. They did not 24 perfect this appeal.

25 QUESTION: The parties -- they were parties to

1 the case, though, in the court of appeals?

2 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor, they did appeal on 3 other matters. That is correct.

4 QUESTION: And they argued it in the court of 5 appeals?

6 MR. LANDSMAN: Your Honor --

7 QUESTION: And they were permitted to argue 8 it.

9 MR. LANDSMAN: They were permitted to argue,
10 but they did --

11 QUESTION: And the court of appeals did not 12 object to their being there?

13 MR. LANDSMAN: Mr. Chief Justice, may I 14 answer?

15 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will resume at 1:00
16 o'clock.

17 (Whereupon, at 12:01 o'clock p.m., the Court 18 was recessed, to reconvene at 12:59 o'clock p.m. of the 19 same day.)

1 AFTERNOON SESSION

2 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well.

3 ORAL ARGUMENT OF ALAN G. SEGEDY, ESQ.,

4 ON BEHALF OF CITY OF AKRON - REBUTTAL

5 MR. SEGEDY: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
6 please the Court, I would like to briefly discuss with 7 the Court some of the points that are shown in the 8 record with respect to the operation of the abortion 9 clinics in Akron.

10 First of all, the abortion clinics are 11 commercial enterprises that are owned by laymen, 12 operated for profit. They run ads in the newspaper in 13 which they advertise the finest medical care, the best 14 medical care, safe and legal.

15 When the woman goes to the abortion clinic, 16 she is not going to her physician or any particular 17 physician. She in fact has no idea who the physician is 18 going to be at the abortion clinic. She is counseled by 19 lay persons, and many times these counselors have no 20 training. One counselor, for example, had some 21 experience as a respiratory therapist.

22 The counseling is done in group sessions 85 23 percent of the time, and the record shows also that the 24 counseling is done with minors mixed in groups with 25 adults in this group counseling session. One of the

1 clinic counselors, as is shown in the Joint Appendix at 2 Page 247 through 258, testified that all of the 3 information contained in 1870.06(b) is not only 4 irrelevant but harassing.

5 The record shows that the patients are often 6 given tranquilizers on standing physician orders before 7 they ever sign the informed consent forms, before they 8 ever see the physician. Doctor C, one of the doctors 9 testifying under a pseudonym, testified that he in fact 10 treats his patients, his private patients, differently 11 than he treats the patients in the abortion clinics.
12 Dr. B testified that he never attempts to judge the 13 maturity of a minor.

14 QUESTION: Why do these doctors testify under 15 a pseudonym?

16 MR. SEGEDY: Your Honor, I believe it was 17 because they were afraid of harassment or such. I 18 believe they filed affidavits to that effect in order to 19 have that status.

20 What the record clearly shows inevitably is 21 that in every case the woman signs the informed consent 22 form prior to the time that she sees her physician, and 23 she spends about five to ten minutes with the physician, 24 including the surgical procedure.

25 The physician essentially at most, according

1 to this record, will ask the woman if she has any 2 questions. Contrary to what Mr. Landsman stated to the 3 Court, Section 1870.06(b) does not hamstring the 4 physician. He is not required, or not prevented from 5 providing whatever information he would like to provide 6 in addition to what is contained in that provision. In 7 fact, he can dispute that information with a patient if 8 he so chooses, but he is expressly directed by 9 1870.06(c) to provide this other relevant information.

10 Mr. Justice Powell, in reference to your 11 question about notice to parents, I would point out to 12 the Court that notice in this situation under Ohio law, 13 if notice would be given, would only be after the minor 14 has gone to court, and would be under the protection of 15 the court, and this would in effect be putting the 16 abortion practice in compliance with the other medical 17 treatment in terms of treating minors.

18 Dr. Seguin, one of the defendant intervenors 19 who is also a pediatrician, testified that this is the 20 standard practice, to go to the juvenile court if a 21 minor needs medical attention, and the first 22 consideration is always to protect the minor, which is 23 also the consideration of the juvenile court under Ohio 24 law.

25 The second trimester hospital requirement was

1 upheld by summary affirmance by this Court in 2 Gary-Northwest versus Orr. The testimony that took 3 place in the trial of this case, and that is why I
4 pointed out to the Court there was a real lawsuit here
5 with real witnesses and real evidence, the testimony
6 showed by numerous physicians, including Dr. Schmidt, 7 who was then the outgoing president of the American 8 College of Obstetrics and Gynecology, that all second 9 trimester abortions should be performed in a hospital.
10 That likewise met the ACOG standards that were in effect 11 at that time.

12 With reference to the current ACOG standards 13 that just came out this year, they do not say that it is 14 simply safe to do second trimester abortions outside of 15 a hospital. They say that up to 18 weeks, they may be 16 done in a freestanding surgical facility.

17 In regard to Justice Powell's questions, the 18 abortion clinics are not freestanding surgical 19 facilities, and do not comply with their requirements.

20 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Your time has expired
21 now, counsel.

22 MR. SEGEDY: Thank you, Your Honor.

23 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.
24 The case is submitted.

25 (Whereupon, at 1:04 o'clock p.m., the case in

1 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
