P R O C E E D I N G S

CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments next in Arizona Governing Committee for Tax Deferred Annuity and Deferred Compensation Plans against Nathalie Norris.

Mr. Endicott, you may proceed whenever you are ready.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF JOHN L. ENDICOTT, ESQ.,
ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS

MR. ENDICOTT: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the Court, this case presents some of the questions that we believe were left unresolved by this Court's decision in the Manhart case.

In Manhart, this Court was concerned with a mandatory employer-operated pension fund which required the women make larger contributions than men. The result was that a woman's take-home pay was smaller than a man's. This Court held that such a plan violated Title 7, and we make no contention today that such holding was erroneous.

But the Arizona Deferred Compensation Plan is different in a number of respects. In the Arizona plan, independent insurance companies issue the life annuities that are involved in this case. They, not Arizona, are the ones who determine the appropriate monthly payment

1 to be made based on the amount accumulated by the 2 employee and the age and the sex of that employee.

3 It is the insurance companies which developed 4 and use the sex-based actuarial tables which are in 5 issue here. Arizona did not create or control or use 6 such tables, but nevertheless has been held responsible 7 for their use.

8 Arizona's only intent was to make available to 9 its employees participating in its deferred compensation 10 plan the widest possible selection of payout methods, 11 including life annuities. Arizona did not treat or 12 intend to treat its female employees less favorably than 13 its male employees. The Arizona plan --

14 QUESTION: Mr. Endicott, there is some 15 indication that Arizona at least solicited bids on the 16 basis of the sex-based tables --

17 MR. ENDICOTT: Yes, Justice --

18 QUESTION: -- that it assumed that is what it 19 wanted and went out to get what in fact it got.

20 MR. ENDICOTT: Justice O'Connor, it solicited 21 bids, and in the solicitation it asked for quotes on 22 males and females, but there was nothing to prevent 23 anybody from giving the same quote if there had been a 24 unisex table available and if the bidder had chosen to 25 do it.

1 QUESTION: And in any event, Arizona didn't 2 ask for it.

3 MR. ENDICOTT: No, Your Honor, but as Your 4 Honor may have observed from the various amici briefs
5 filed, nobody was offering it. It didn't ask for it 6 because it didn't want it or didn't intend it. It never 7 thought of it, I think, is the answer.

8 QUESTION: Yes, probably so.

9 QUESTION: Who has the burden of proof on that?

10 MR. ENDICOTT: The burden of proof on what -- 11 on precisely what, Justice Blackmun?

12 QUESTION: On whether unisex tables are 13 available or were available.

14 MR. ENDICOTT: It is our position that the 15 burden of proof is upon the respondent, that it would 16 have been upon the plaintiffs in the lawsuit to prove, 17 because if the contention is that Arizona discriminated 18 by not seeking the use of unisex annuity tables, the 19 question would be Arizona discriminated because it 20 didn't ask for or take unisex annuity tables, I think, 21 just as in the other Title 7 cases where an employee who 22 contends he or she was discriminated against by not 23 being given a job, you must show that the job was 24 available.

25 Therefore, I think the burden, Your Honor, is

1 on the -- on the plaintiff to prove that it was 2 available and Arizona deliberately did not take it.

3 QUESTION: I take it your opposition disagrees 4 with that.

5 MR. ENDICOTT: I believe so. The Arizona
6 plan, again unlike Manhart, is a voluntary plan. No one
7 has to join. No one has to contribute. The employee 8 under the Arizona plan can take home his or her entire 9 wage or compensation if he or she so elects. In fact, 10 the employee can do what he or she chooses with his or 11 her money, and it is our position that permitting 12 someone to do something is not discriminating against 13 someone.

14 In the Arizona plan, again, unlike Manhart, 15 the contributions are equal, equal in the sense that the 16 employee is free to make whatever contribution he or she 17 chooses. There are minimum and maximum limits, but any 18 male employee can contribute the same amount as any 19 female employee. Again, therefore, there is no 20 difference in the take-home pay that a male or a female 21 employe receives.

22 In the Arizona plan, another distinction is, 23 there is no contribution by the employer. The plan is 24 funded entirely by contributions by the employee, and as 25 a matter of fact, under the statute which created the

1 plan, the employer, the state, cannot make a 2 contribution. The -- Only the employee funds are 3 involved, and similarly situated employees receive the 4 same compensation.

5 Now, there is a difference between the Arizona
6 deferred compensation plan and the Arizona retirement
7 plan. That plan is funded by employer contributions, 8 and in that plan, where the plan is underwritten by the 9 employer, the payments are the same for male and female 10 employees.

11 Another distinction from Manhart under the 12 Arizona plan is that the Arizona plan offers various 13 options to the employees. They have choices available 14 to them both in the form of the investment that is made 15 with their money while they are putting their money into 16 the plan, and in the form in which they take their money 17 out.

18 One option, as suggested by this Court in 19 Manhart, is a lump sum payment. The employee's funds 20 are invested over the working career of the employee.
21 Those funds earn interest. When the employee reaches 22 the proper age under the plan, there is a given finite 23 amount accumulated for that employee. That employee is 24 free to take that entire amount out in cash.

25 QUESTION: But the problem there is the tax

1 result.

2 MR. ENDICOTT: There is a tax problem, Justice
3 Blackmun, no matter how you take your money out. This 4 is a tax avoidance, a deferred tax plan, and Internal 5 Revenue gets you sooner or later, but Your Honor is 6 right if you are suggesting that if you take it out in a 7 lump, they get you somewhat sooner.

8 QUESTION: I suppose your position is that if 9 you do not prevail in this lawsuit, that in effect the 10 plaintiffs have driven out of the picture the third 11 option.

12 MR. ENDICOTT: Yes, Your Honor. The state has 13 already removed that option from the plan, based upon 14 the decision of the District Court, which enjoined it 15 from continuing with sex-based actuarial tables.

16 QUESTION: Sometimes we overlitigate, don't 17 we?

18 MR. ENDICOTT: I think so, Your Honor. I
19 really -- I really think the result in this case proves 20 the error of the decision, because I think the result is 21 the worst possible result.

22 As I was saying, one of the choices of the 23 lump sum, and as Your Honor points out, there is a tax 24 consequence, there is a second choice, which is an 25 annuity for a fixed term. You can say to the insurance

1 company, I want my money paid back to me over ten years,
2 fifteen years, twenty years, and again, in that example, 3 the male and the female are treated the same, because 4 you have removed the one risk that is involved in the 5 life annuity, which is the life expectancy.

6 So, under the lump sum option --

7 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will resume there at 8 1:00 o'clock, counsel.

9 (Whereupon, at 12:00 o'clock p.m., the Court 10 was recessed, to reconvene at 1:00 o'clock p.m. of the 11 same day.)

1 decisions of this Court in General Electric versus 2 Gilbert, Harris versus McRae, and indeed in Manhart
3 itself, all hold that the employer is not responsible 4 for the fact that the open market may treat women 5 differently than it treats men.

6 Nothing makes it illegal for insurance
7 companies as opposed to employers, but nothing makes it 8 illegal for insurance companies to recognize the 9 different risks presented by men and women, and to treat 10 women according to the risks they present.

11 I submit also that this case is a misuse of 12 Title 7. The plaintiffs' complaint in this case is not 13 really with anything that Arizona has done as an 14 employer, but is with the insurance industry practice of 15 giving economic effect to the fact that women live 16 longer than men.

17 The plaintiffs are using Title 7 in this case
18 to punish the employer for what the insurance industry 19 has done, third party insurers, and this Court in 20 Footnote 33 in Manhart said that Title 7 does not govern
21 the relations between employees and third parties. It 22 governs relations between employers and employees, but 23 not with third parties.

24 The Manhart opinion suggested that if a 25 corporate shell was used, that was a different case, but

1 there is no evidence in this case that there is a'
2 corporate shell. The insurance companies are independent 3 and long-standing life insurance companies, third 4 parties. The insurance companies are not the agents of 5 Arizona.

6 This Court held in General Building
7 Contractors fairly recently that one of the elements of 8 agency is the ability to control, and there is no 9 showing that Arizona had the ability to control the 10 insurers in this case.

11 QUESTION: Mr. Endicott, would your position 12 be the same if the insurance companies used tables based 13 on race rather than sex?

14 MR. ENDICOTT: I have to answer your question
15 by going a little further, Justice Blackmun. Race 16 historically has been treated differently by the 17 Congress of this country, by this Supreme Court. It is 18 treated differently in the insurance industry by the 19 State Insurance Commissioners, who have -- or the 20 states, rather, who have regulated insurance, have said, 21 you cannot consider race in insurance.

22 I am not aware of any actuarial data that 23 would give you a statistical basis or support for 24 treating people differently on the basis of race.

25 QUESTION: Well, there are diseases that are

1 suffered more by persons of one race than another. The 2 classic example is sickle cell anemia, of course.
3 Comfetic is another. And I suppose there would be just 4 as much justification for an insurance company to set up 5 tables on the basis of race because of the presence of 6 those special risks.

7 MR. ENDICOTT: In a health insurance plan, a
8 medical benefits plan, that could come up. As I say, it 9 really can't in our context because of the state laws
10 that preclude it, and again, because there are no 11 actuarial studies that I am aware of that indicate one 12 race lives longer than the other --

13 QUESTION: Well, if you go back about two 14 decades, you will find a whole slew of actuarial tables 15 based on race, promoted by two of the biggest insurance 16 companies in this country.

17 MR. ENDICOTT: But I think in recent times, 18 Justice Marshall, that those statistics are changing for 19 the better.

20 QUESTION: I thought you said there weren't 21 any. I don't know whether they are still there or not.

22 MR. ENDICOTT: I don't know that anybody keeps 23 track of it any more, Justice Marshall. Certainly there 24 is none involved in this case. The tables in this case 25 make no such distinction, and I do not think there is

1 any question raised by anybody that women do in fact 2 live longer than men.

3 QUESTION: Would it be allowable under Title
4 7, though, I think, is the question.

5 MR. ENDICOTT: I think the answer to that,
6 Justice O'Connor, is who was making the distinction. If 7 in this case it were a third party independent insurance
8 company --

9 QUESTION: If it were an insurance company, as 10 we have here.

11 MR. ENDICOTT: And that was what was --

12 QUESTION: On the basis of race.

13 MR. ENDICOTT: And that was what was available 14 and offered on the open market? I don't think that's 15 the employer's responsibility. I think under the 16 decisions of this Court in GE-Gilbert, Harris-McRae, 17 Manhart, if that problem exists, that is in my opinion a 18 social, political problem that needs to be corrected by 19 either the Congress or the states who have historically 20 regulated the insurance industry. I don't think you 21 should use Title 7 for it.

22 QUESTION: May I ask you another question or 23 two while you are interrupted? The record shows, I
24 believe, that by August of '78, four women had retired 25 on a lifetime annuity under the Arizona plan.

1 MR. ENDICOTT: Yes, Your Honor.

2 QUESTION: Have any other women in the 3 plaintiff class retired and selected that annuity?

4 MR. ENDICOTT: They can't select the life
5 annuity because --

6 QUESTION: It is now terminated, and so we are 7 dealing with four women.

8 MR. ENDICOTT: And the future male and female 9 who would like to retire and get a life annuity.

10 QUESTION: If the plan were reinstated.

11 MR. ENDICOTT: Yes, Your Honor.

12 QUESTION: If the Court were to affirm the 13 court below, and you had to discuss prospective 14 remedies, what would your position be on the remedy 15 question?

16 MR. ENDICOTT: I am very troubled by the 17 retroactive aspect of the relief that was ordered in 18 this case, and by other aspects, such as ordering the 19 state to pay money when the state plan says that this is 20 an employee plan only, but the retroactive aspect is 21 troublesome because plans not so much like Arizona, 22 where no funds are put up by the employer, but plans 23 that have been funded such as are described in the 24 Florida amicus brief in this case, they have funded a 25 plan on certain actuarial assumptions.

1 They were at one time $4 billion in debt.
2 They have got their plan actuarially sound now. They 3 recognize the difference between men and women. And if 4 you fashion relief which says that as of the date of 5 this decision or the trial court's decision you now have 6 to pay those people an amount you never funded and 7 reserved for, I think you may bankrupt and render 8 insolvent a lot of employer-funded plans.

9 As I say, it isn't so critical in Arizona,
10 because of, as Your Honor points out, the small number 11 of people involved, and really the small dollars 12 involved, but it again is why I think that if there is 13 to be a change ordered in the practices of the insurance 14 companies, and that is what your question really 15 assumes, it should be done by a legislative body who 16 holds hearings, takes evidence, studies the facts, and 17 determines what they can do without bankrupting the 18 pension and insurance industry in this country.

19 And I don't think the record before this Court 20 is adequate for that purpose.

21 QUESTION: Putting aside the retroactive
22 relief for the moment, do you know if unisex insurance 23 is available? Could they buy insurance, a different 24 kind of a policy, a different kind of an annuity?

25 MR. ENDICOTT: Could Arizona, Your Honor?

1 QUESTION: Are there such annuities available
2 on the market?

3 MR. ENDICOTT: There are unisex annuities
4 being offered presently, as I understand some of the 5 statements made in the amicus brief, and as I understand 6 Chinnerly, but, Your Honor, you have to define what 7 unisex means. Unisex is a word that everybody throws 8 around as though it had a fixed and certain meaning, and 9 I don't think it really does. The statements that you 10 are seeing, and one of them was made in one of the 11 briefs, was that, for example, Lincoln National Life 12 said, we will write a unisex annuity if it is a large 13 enough group and they take into consideration the 14 makeup, the sexual makeup of the group.

15 You start with the fact women do live longer 16 than men. Therefore, when you reserve, you have got to 17 assume you are going to pay more money to women than you 18 are to men. Therefore, you've got to fund your plan 19 that way. So, when they talk about unisex annuities, 20 you've got to define the group of people you're 21 insuring, know the sexual and age makeup of it, and do 22 it.

23 QUESTION: Yes.

24 MR. ENDICOTT: Under the Arizona plan, Your 25 Honor, it could not be done, because it is a voluntary

1 plan. People can opt in or out, and they can withdraw a 2 lump sum. You can't fund that kind of plan, because 3 what will happen is, presumably, all the men will opt 4 out and go buy a sex-based annuity on the open market, 5 where they get a better return, all the women will stay 6 in, and the unisex rate in the plan will be the female 7 rate because they are insuring 100 percent female.

8 QUESTION: Well, assume that the insurance 9 companies had such an annuity available, and the 10 employer didn't buy that one, he bought the one that's 11 in Option 3. What about the employer then?

12 MR. ENDICOTT: If the unisex annuity that was 13 offered was better than the sex segregated rate --

14 QUESTION: Well, but that, of course --

15 MR. ENDICOTT: No, if it offered to pay the 16 woman more money per month than the sex-based table.
17 That's how I define better. If she would get more money
18 per month under the sex-based -- under the unisex 19 annuity, then I think you would have an inference that 20 the employer discriminated or made a discriminatory 21 judgment in not picking that plan or not at least 22 offering that plan.

23 But I think the charge here -- we would still 24 be here today, Your Honor, if that had happened and 25 existed, because what we are being charged with is not

1 -- not offering a unisex annuity, but having offered a 2 sex-based annuity. So, I don't know that that would 3 resolve the problem before us.

4 The problems involved in making a change, as 5 posed by Justice O'Connor's question, if you make a 6 change, are very complex. I think the financial 7 implications are staggering, and I don't think, as I
8 said, that Title 7 is the proper way to get at it. I 9 don't think you should get an employer who has picked 10 what is available in the open market, offered it to 11 his employees, and then said, because what they are 12 doing on the open market we don't like, we are going to 13 punish you under Title 7. I just think that's the wrong 14 way to get at the question.

15 QUESTION: There is no life insurance as such 16 in this case, separate and apart from the program?

17 MR. ENDICOTT: Life insurance?

18 QUESTION: Yes.

19 MR. ENDICOTT: My recollection is, one of the 20 choices under the plan is life insurance.

21 QUESTION: Now, do the life insurance 22 companies charge less premiums for insuring women of the 23 same age as men?

24 MR. ENDICOTT: They always do. Yes, Your 25 Honor.

1 QUESTION: Now, the reason for that is that is 2 a corollary of the annuity proposition, isn't it?

3 MR. ENDICOTT: It's the other side of the 4 coin.

5 QUESTION: It is the women who are going to 6 live longer and pay premiums longer, on an average.

7 MR. ENDICOTT: You need to collect less per 8 year or per month. It really is a function of how long 9 you are going to live and how much money you've got, and 10 you really divide life expectancy into the available
11 amount of money, forgetting the interest calculations 12 and complications, and that tells you how long you do 13 it. That is why when they pay a fixed term annuity they 14 treat male and female alike. If you know you are going 15 to pay it for 20 years, 480 months, you divide 480 into 16 $48,000, and you know you pay out $1,000 a month.

17 QUESTION: Now, do the mortality tables that 18 are used by the insurers make any division except as 19 between men and women? Are there any other categories?

20 MR. ENDICOTT: Age, Your Honor.

21 QUESTION: Well, men and women --

22 MR. ENDICOTT: And age.

23 QUESTION: Age, obviously.

24 MR. ENDICOTT: Yes.

25 QUESTION: On a mortality --

1 MR. ENDICOTT: But those are the two --

2 QUESTION: They don't include whether they are 3 foreign-born or any other factors?

4 MR. ENDICOTT: No, Your Honor, not generally,
5 and not basically, they don't. It is age and sex that 6 are the two stable -- my understanding of risk 7 classificaion, which is what insurance is primarily 8 involved with, is that in classifying risks, you have 9 got to have factors that are stable, permanent, and 10 practical, and you can look at smoking, you can look at 11 eating, you can look at the person's weight, you can 12 look at drinking, and there are some plans on the market 13 today that make some reflection of that, but the two 14 basic unchanging factors are sex and age.

15 QUESTION: The insurance companies can take 16 care of that by not insuring heavy drinkers and heavy 17 smokers, can they not?

18 MR. ENDICOTT: If they can identify them.
19 Yes, Your Honor.

20 QUESTION: Well, and they try to identify 21 them, don't they?

22 MR. ENDICOTT: Yes.

23 QUESTION: By their examinations.

24 MR. ENDICOTT: And as Your Honor probably 25 knows, they rate people. If you do certain things, you

1 pay a higher premium than other people who don't.

2 QUESTION: But in the group policy context,
3 all this is less significant.

4 MR. ENDICOTT: I believe in the group policy
5 context, to the extent I am aware of it, Your Honor, it 6 makes no difference, and the whole purpose of group is 7 to underwrite a large group of people cheaply, usually 8 without medical examinations, usually without much 9 medical history. If they work in the group, the law of 10 large numbers works, and you treat the people according 11 to the fact that they are an element of the group. It 12 gives you a problem with treating people individually, 13 but you treat them as a unit of the group.

14 QUESTION: Of course, in this plan there is no
15 medical examination at all, is there?

16 MR. ENDICOTT: Not that I am aware of.

17 QUESTION: Of course, there really wouldn't 18 be, because poor health is a benefit to the insurance 19 company.

20 MR. ENDICOTT: Justice Stevens, you know, the 21 funny thing is that in annuities, you get a 22 self-selection working whereby all your poor life risks 23 don't opt for a life annuity. The person who knows they 24 are going to -- they come from a short-lived family and 25 are in bad health, they want the lump sum. They want to 1 spend it while they are still here.

2 QUESTION: Right.

3 MR. ENDICOTT: So you get a self --

4 QUESTION: Or the -- or the specific term
5 annuity, if I may call it that. I am always concerned 6 about this lump sum, because you run immediately into 7 everything being taxed in one year.

8 MR. ENDICOTT: Yes, but you can pick a 9 ten-year certain, or a fifteen-year -- if you want to 10 take the risk of estimating how long you are going to 11 live, you pick a fixed term policy and do it that way.

12 QUESTION: Certainly if someone at retirement
13 knows he has terminal cancer, he isn't going to take a 14 life annuity.

15 MR. ENDICOTT: I think that is a reasonable 16 assumption.

17 QUESTION: Of course, I suppose in selecting, 18 doing their calculation, the insurance company could 19 take into account the fact that there is this 20 self-selection element in the group. The individuals 21 who tend to eliminate those who are identifiably a 22 short-term risk.

23 MR. ENDICOTT: Identifiably. There are some 24 who are going to be unexpectedly short-term.

25 QUESTION: Of course.

1 MR. ENDICOTT: And that is what makes your 2 statistics. I mean, some people are going to get more 3 out than they put in because they live longer. Some 4 people are going to get just about out what they put 5 in. Some people are going to get much less out. But 6 they have all had the same chance going in to recover 7 what they invested, and they have all opted to have an 8 insurance company take the risk of how long they are 9 going to live.

10 QUESTION: Does the record tell us anything 11 about whether the projections for different kinds of 12 industries or professions are somewhat different? In 13 other words, you might have a different projection for a 14 group of lawyers than you would have for a group of 15 workers in a different occupation?

16 MR. ENDICOTT: I am not aware of anything in 17 this record that would reflect on that. This plan, Your 18 Honor, covered the employees of the state of Arizona, so 19 it covered a very wide group --

20 QUESTION: Right, a pretty wide group.

21 MR. ENDICOTT: -- of occupations.

22 QUESTION: How long have these statistics been 23 kept, Mr. Endicott? How far back does the mortality 24 table go?

25 MR. ENDICOTT: Justice Marshall suggested to

1 me earlier that it went back 100 or more years. They 2 have kept tables for many years, Your Honor. I don't 3 know. They keep updating the table.

4 QUESTION: It is more than 100 years since 5 they began it, isn't it?

6 MR. ENDICOTT: Oh, I would believe that it 7 goes back probably into the 1600's or 1700's, but the 8 tables keep being changed. I mean, they still aren't 9 using tables from three centuries ago. I think the last 10 one I saw referred to in one of the briefs was either 11 1980 or 1978.

12 QUESTION: Mr. Endicott, are there many other 13 states that have systems comparable to Arizona?

14 MR. ENDICOTT: Deferred compensation plans,
15 Your Honor.

16 QUESTION: Yes.

17 MR. ENDICOTT: I believe there are a number.
18 Arizona was one of the first to do it, but there are a 19 number that have it, and almost all states have 20 retirement or pension plans, of course.

21 As I said much earlier in answer to a 22 question, I think the best evidence of the error of this 23 decision is the result. Before the decision by the 24 trial court in this case, the employees in Arizona had a 25 choice of what they could buy with their money, and one

1 of those choices was a life annuity, and those people 2 who thought they would live long enough to make that 3 profitable were free to make that choice.

4 Now, as a result of the decision in this case,
5 the only result has been, we have removed the choice 6 from the plan, and we were enjoined to do, and the 7 employees of the state of Arizona have less choices than 8 they had before.

9 QUESTION: But does it necessarily follow that 10 that has to be a permanent solution? I suppose it is at 11 least theoretically possible -- maybe you won't do it -- 12 that you could in the future adopt a unisex program.

13 MR. ENDICOTT: Under our -- under the Arizona
14 plan, where people have a choice of options, Justice
15 Stevens, and where they don't need to make a decision 16 until they're 65 and retire, the odds are, as I said
17 earlier, that I think you would end up with a female 18 table being used to create the unisex rate because the 19 insurer would have to assume the worst possible case, 20 and that is that he is going to have 100 percent female 21 life annuitants, and he is going to use the female 22 rate.

23 So, you haven't, I don't think, accomplished
24 much in that way.

25 In conclusion, then, I would like to say that

1 I think it is clear that Arizona -- Arizona did not 2 discriminate against its women employees by offering 3 them the opportunity to purchase a life annuity through 4 the deferred compensation plan, and the judgment should 5 be reversed.

6 And, Mr. Chief Justice, I would like to 7 reserve whatever time I have.

8 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well.

9 Ms. Gittler.

10 ORAL ARGUMENT OF AMY JO GITTLER, ESQ.,

11 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENTS

12 MS. GITTLER: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it 13 please the Court, in City of Los Angeles Department of 14 Water and Power versus Manhart, this Court held that an 15 employer's use of gender-based actuarial tables in 16 computing payments into a pension plan was unlawful 17 under Title 7. The holding in that case is not 18 challenged today.

19 Rather, Your Honors, the issue in this case is 20 whether an employer can be absolved of liability under 21 Title 7 because it contracts out with a third party to 22 provide a life annuity benefit to employees or because 23 there are alternative non-discriminatory options
24 available. The answer to that question is unequivocally 25 no.

1 Your Honors, the employer in this case is not 2 so dissimilar from the employer in Manhart. Manhart did 3 present a self-insured program, and this program does 4 include third party insurance companies. But, Your 5 Honors, in this case the employer created the plan. The 6 employer solicited bids, and it is the employer that 7 withholds money month to month from the employees' 8 paychecks.

9 Significantly, it is the employer that has 10 chosen the insurance companies with which the employee 11 can participate in this plan.

12 QUESTION: Let me ask you about the employer 13 withholding money. Doesn't the money go to the 14 insurance company?

15 MS. GITTLER: It is my understanding, Justice
16 Blackmun, that it does, but it is the employer that 17 withholds the money from the paychecks.

18 QUESTION: But the employer, as I think your 19 statement inferred, is not sitting there with the money 20 in his hot little hand and making money off it.

21 MS. GITTLER: Your Honor, it is the state 22 which does hold title to the moneys until they are 23 dispersed to the employee. It is also the employer that 24 contracts directly with the insurance companies, and 25 each contract on its face contains explicit sex-based

1 actuarial tables.

2 QUESTION: Well, Ms. Gittler, in your answer
3 to Justice Blackmun's question, I would infer that the 4 employer is kind of a self-insurer. You say that the 5 employer hangs onto the money until it is ultimately 6 paid out to the employees?

7 MS. GITTLER: The physical possession of the 8 money, Your Honor, may well transfer to the insurance 9 companies, but the title remains with the state of 10 Arizona until it is dispersed to the --

11 QUESTION: I wasn't aware that one ordinarily 12 separated the concept of the title to money and the 13 physical possession of money. Is there some 14 significance in this case between those two?

15 MS. GITTLER: Well, I think, Your Honor, the 16 significance is with respect to the employer's 17 involvement in this plan, and that the legal title 18 remains with the employer.

19 QUESTION: The legal title to the money, which 20 is -- the possession of which passes to the insurance 21 company?

22 MS. GITTLER: Again, Your Honor, that's my 23 understanding. That's correct.

24 QUESTION: That seems like a strange basis to 25 hang your argument on. I understood that the money is

1 money otherwise due the employee, that the employee
2 directs the employer state to pay over to the insurance 3 company, in effect, for the premiums, and the state is 4 simply a pass-through for convenience. Isn't that the 5 case?

6 MS. GITTLER: Certainly, Justice O'Connor,
7 that is what the employer would like us to believe 8 today, but the employer's involvement is far more 9 extensive than that. The employer is the one that 10 determines where the money will in fact go, and although 11 the employee can indicate a preference as to how the 12 money should be invested, it is the employer which 13 ultimately has the discretion to accept or reject that 14 preference.

15 QUESTION: Yes, but that has nothing to do
16 with title to the money. I mean, that is a different 17 sort of an argument, is it not?

18 MS. GITTLER: Justice O'Connor, it is, but the 19 point is, it is one of the many indicia of the control 20 that the employer exercises in this plan.

21 QUESTION: Who has the burden of proof, as 22 Justice Blackmun asked earlier, that unisex tables were 23 in fact available?

24 MS. GITTLER: Your Honor, the issue of the 25 burden of proof in this case is really a bogus issue,

1 because in this case we are dealing, Justice O'Connor, 2 with an explicit sex-based classification, and the 3 burden of proof with respect to the existence or 4 non-existence of unisex tables is irrelevant for these 5 purposes, because once we have shown that there is an 6 explicit sex-based classification, that is all that we 7 need to show. Manhart teaches us --

8 QUESTION: But you do concede that you have 9 the burden, the respondents as plaintiffs had the burden 10 of proof initially, right?

11 MS. GITTNER: That's correct, Your Honor, and 12 our burden in this case was met when we established that 13 in fact there was an explicit sex-based classification, 14 and Manhart teaches us that once there is an explicit 15 sex-based classification based upon actuarial tables, as 16 in this case, that the employer is liable under Title 7, 17 and none of the bases upon which the employer now seeks 18 to absolve itself of liability are sufficient to allow 19 it to remove the mandate and the prohibitions
20 established by Congress under Title 7.

21 The nexus between the employer and the 22 employee is here. It is the employer which has created 23 the plan, and it is the employer that has provided the 24 employee with the fringe benefit, and once the employer
25 undertakes to provide an employee with a fringe benefit,

1 Title 7 states that it must provide it in a 2 non-discriminatory fashion.

3 QUESTION: Are they compelled to participate?
4 Are the employees compelled to participate in this plan?

5 MS. GITTLER: No, Chief Justice Burger. This 6 is a voluntary plan. But that factor does not in any 7 way mitigate against the employer's liability. Title 7 8 does not draw lines between voluntary and involuntary, 9 and numerous facets of the employment setting are 10 voluntary, but that fact alone does not in any way bear 11 upon an employer's liability or obligation to provide 12 non-discriminatory benefits.

13 QUESTION: What was the explicit sex
14 classification here?

15 MS. GITTLER: It was explicit gender-based 16 classification between men and women, and the parties --

17 QUESTION: How was that evidenced? Can you 18 read that anywhere in the plan?

19 MS. GITTLER: You can read it, Your Honor, in 20 the very contracts that have been signed. The parties 21 have stipulated in the Joint Appendix that the payments 22 that women receive and men receive are based upon 23 sex-based actuarial tables.

24 QUESTION: But the employer didn't mandate
25 that. Nowhere in the state's plan, deferred

1 compensation plan, can you read anything like that. So
2 it isn't explicit. It is the result of the insurance 3 industry selling sex-based or gender-based annuities.

4 MS. GITTLER: It is as a result of the 5 contracts that the state has entered into with the 6 insurance companies that creates this discrimination, 7 but the mere fact that they have contracted with these 8 insurance companies is not sufficient to eliminate the 9 liability.

10 QUESTION: The employer didn't ask insurance 11 companies to bid based on gender-based annuity. They 12 didn't put out a specification, please bid on the basis 13 of distinguishing between men and women.

14 MS. GITTLER: Your Honor, as we establish or 15 argue in our brief, Exhibit H to the first set of 16 interrogatories in fact suggests that there was an 17 actual overt solicitation for bids broken down by men 18 and women, and even so, regardless of whether there was 19 an overt solicitation, the employer was not compelled to 20 provide this kind of discrimination. There is some 21 argument of compulsion in this case, but, Your Honors, 22 the employer had an option in this case. It could 23 decide not to provide the non-discriminatory option, or 24 it could self-insure, and either of those options were 25 viable options. It was not obligated to provide this

1 discriminatory option which on its face discriminates
2 month to month against women.

3 QUESTION: Well, Ms. Gittler, what if the 4 employer had self-insured in this case. Is your idea 5 that in that context, the employer could have made no 6 allowance for the difference in longevity between men 7 and women?

8 MS. GITTLER: That's correct, Justice
9 Rehnquist. As this Court held in Manhart, which was a 10 self-insured, program, that the employer was precluded 11 from basing the benefits or, in Manhart, the 12 contributions, in this case the benefits on the basis of 13 sex-segregated actuarial tables.

14 QUESTION: Wouldn't the result, if the 15 employer had done that, be very much as Mr. Endicott 16 predicted in the unisex policies, that there would be no
17 men applicants for this particular self-insurance policy
18 that you are mentioning, and that the only applicants 19 would be women, and they would end up paying the female 20 rate?

21 MS. GITTLER: That is not correct, Justice
22 Rehnquist, because under this particular plan in 23 particular, it is an attractive plan to employees
24 because of the significant tax benefits. Employees --

25 QUESTION: Well, but presumably an employee

1 who has an option of joining the employer's unisex plan,
2 which you say he must have, or taking the money that it 3 would cost to pay premiums in that and go to an 4 insurance company which does rate on the basis of 5 gender, the men are going to go to an insurance company
6 that rates on the basis of gender. So you are not going 7 to have any employee applicants who are male, I would 8 think.

9 MS. GITTNER: Justice Rehnquist, we think that 10 is not an accurate assumption to make in reviewing this 11 case. Because of the substantial tax benefits an 12 employee who opted, a male employee, for instance, who 13 opted to choose the money, to obtain the money from his 14 paycheck and have it -- receive it rather than investing 15 it would pay the tax consequence at the time it is 16 received, and that would eliminate the significance of 17 this kind of a benefit program.

18 In addition, as the actuaries who have filed a 19 brief in support of our position indicate, rarely are 20 decisions such as this made upon expectancies of -- 21 men's or women's expectancies, life expectancies. The 22 issues or considerations that are taken into account by 23 people when they opt into these kinds of plans are the 24 tax benefits and the investment made to return, and the 25 tax benefits in this case are outstanding.

1 In addition, Justice Rehnquist, if an employee
2 chose to go out into the open market, a male employee, 3 for instance, not only would he have the money that has 4 already been taxed, but he would also have to then 5 obtain an individual policy, and would not be able to 6 take advantage of the group policy that is in existence 7 under this particular plan.

8 QUESTION: Would it be unlawful for an 9 insurance company to charge lower rates for women for 10 life insurance than for men?

11 MS. GITTLER: Your Honor --

12 QUESTION: Would that be illegal
13 discrimination?

14 MS. GITTLER: Chief Justice Burger, if it was 15 done in the context of an employer providing the fringe 16 benefit, and that is what we are talking about today, an 17 insurance company in the abstract out in the market is 18 not susceptible to Title 7 in this context, but if an 19 employer undertakes to provide life insurance, for 20 example, to an employee, then again Manhart teaches us 21 that the amounts that are paid in or the amounts that 22 are paid out could not be based upon aggregates, cannot 23 be based upon sex-segregated actuarial tables.

24 QUESTION: Ms. Gittler, may I ask you a 25 question about burden of proof? Your opponent suggests

1 that if we talk in terms of a unisex table, that there
2 would be a natural selection that would drive the market
3 to select the female rate. You have responded, as I
4 understand you, by saying, well, even a female rate
5 might be better for the male because of the tax 6 consequences of the lump sum payment plus the group 7 purchasing power.

8 Now, we don't really know whether that is true
9 or not. Who has the burden of proof on that question?
10 Do you understand what I am asking you? As to whether 11 or not you are correct in saying in substance the unisex 12 plan would be more favorable to both men and women, 13 whereas he is saying, no, no, we can just think it 14 through and it would inevitably be a female, an 15 all-female plan.

16 MS. GITTLER: Justice Stevens, I don't think 17 that that's an issue that either party needs to 18 necessarily prove one way or the other, because once 19 they have undertaken to provide a sex-discriminatory 20 plan, whether or not there might be some adverse 21 consequences of this Court holds that Title 7 applies is 22 not really relevant to the issue of liability under 23 Title 7.

24 QUESTION: In other words, you are saying that 25 if there is a violation of law, even if establishing the

1 violation hurts women generally, that is just an 2 unfortunate consequence of the statute.

3 MS. GITTLER: Your Honor, there are always 4 going to be consequences of this Court's decisions, and 5 if in fact -- for instance, Mr. Endicott suggested that 6 the consequence if this Court were to uphold the Ninth 7 Circuit, he has suggested that the effect would be to 8 completely eliminate the plan.

9 QUESTION: Correct.

10 MS. GITTLER: That is always a risk that is 11 taken, Your Honor. An employer can evade responsibility 12 and avoid liability under Title 7 by having no 13 employees. But that is not a sufficient basis for this 14 Court to find that there is no liability or that Section 15 703(a) does not apply to this employer and prohibit the 16 particular practice that is involved in this case.

17 Now, there is also some discussion, Your 18 Honors, about the options, and as Justice Blackmun 19 pointed out, the lump sum option does come with 20 significant tax consequences. For Nathalie Norris and 21 millions of other employees and retirees throughout the 22 country, the only feasible option under this plan is the 23 annuity option.

24 In addition, the sum certain for a definite 25 period of time, the alternative option, does not give

1 Ms. Norris nor anyone else the kind of protection that 2 they want for their entire retirement life. Even more
3 significantly, Your Honors, there is no legal precedent 4 or basis for absolving an employer under Title 7 because 5 there are non-discriminatory options available. And in 6 fact --

7 QUESTION: The irony of affirming if a state 8 is to continue, though, to provide an annuity plan after 9 an affirmance is that in order to avoid disparate 10 treatment of women by mandating unisex tables, it will 11 have a disparate impact on men to achieve it. Do you 12 want to comment on that?

13 MS. GITTLER: Yes, Justice O'Connor. The 14 Court in Manhart specifically addressed that issue in a 15 footnote in which the Court observed that not every 16 disparate impact creates a violation of Title 7, and 17 indeed -- the issue was raised with respect to the 18 potential unfairness, and incorporated into that in 19 Manhart was the issue of the potential illegality, but 20 Manhart teaches us that not every disparate impact is 21 going to create -- under the Griggs analysis is going to 22 create a violation of Title 7.

23 Unfairness was one of the arguments that was 24 raised over and over again in Manhart and was explicitly 25 rejected, not only on policy but also on the legal

1 bases. In addition, this Court has held, last term,
2 under Connecticut versus Teal, that an employer is not 3 justified in discriminating in one aspect solely because 4 it does not discriminate in another aspect, and this 5 argument made by the employer today sounds very similar 6 to the argument that was rejected by this Court in 7 Connecticut versus Teal.

8 In addition, in Mississippi versus Hogan, this 9 Court held that an explicit sex-based classification
10 under -- could not be justified under the Fourteenth 11 Amendment, the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth 12 Amendment solely because there happened to be other 13 non-discriminatory options available.

14 Thus, Your Honors, not only is there a 15 question of policy in terms of the feasibility of the 16 alternative options that are available, but there is 17 simply no legal basis for absolving this employer of 18 liability solely because there are alternative
19 non-discriminatory options available.

20 QUESTION: If your position is the correct
21 one, what should inform the Court's selection of 22 remedies, Ms. Gittler? Can it be prospective only, or 23 what should inform the Court's decision on remedial 24 action?

25 MS. GITTLER: Justice O'Connor, although Mr.

1 Endicott has characterized the relief that was ordered
2 in this case as retroactive, there was nothing 3 retroactive about the relief that was ordered in this 4 case. In fact, Your Honor, we specifically requested 5 reimbursements for the disparate amounts that had been 6 paid to men -- to women less than men, and the Court 7 rejected that in the motion for summary judgment. We 8 then moved to amend the judgment, and it was again
9 denied by the Court.

10 So, we have purely prospective relief, and 11 that is --

12 QUESTION: Are you satisfied with that?

13 MS. GITTLER: Yes, Your Honor, we have not 14 appealed the decision of the court, the denial of the 15 retroactive benefits. We are satisfied with the 16 equalization of the benefits prospectively, and that is 17 exactly what the court has ordered. Mr. Endicott has --

18 QUESTION: And yet women in the long run will 19 get more.

20 MS. GITTLER: Justice Blackmun, women as a 21 class, in the aggregate, may get more, but individual 22 women, individuals will not get any more than a 23 similarly situated man. Let me give you an example. If 24 Nathalie Norris were to retire at age 65, and had the 25 $53,000 of her money accumulated, and a similarly

1 situated man retired with the same $53,000, and both of 2 them lived to be 85 years old, month to month Ms. Norris
3 would receive $33.95 less per month than the similarly 4 situated man, and upon their death Nathalie Norris will 5 have received $8,000 less than the similarly situated 6 man.

7 QUESTION: But your assumption is contrary to 8 the experience of the American Experience Table of 9 Mortality. You are assuming that they would -- they are 10 the same age, and they go in at the same time, and die 11 at the same time. That may be true about the specific 12 individuals, but can a pension plan, an organized 13 situation like this be based on what happens in a 14 particular individual case, or must it be based on the 15 law of averages?

16 MS. GITTLER: Chief Justice Burger, Manhart
17 teaches us, and the holding in Teal teaches us that it 18 cannot be based on group statistics, that we must under 19 703(a) look to the individuals, and Title 7 requires us
20 to treat individuals as individuals and not as group 21 statistics, and that is the significant holding that we 22 can derive from Manhart, and it is equally applicable in 23 this case.

24 Mr. Endicott has essentially --

25 QUESTION: Well, you are driving the option

1 away, aren't you?

2 MS. GITTLER: Justice Blackmun, you suggested 3 earlier that the result may be that the option is 4 suspended, and --

5 QUESTION: Is that what you really want?

6 MS. GITTLER: Your Honor, we want the state to 7 comply with Title 7. We want the employer in this case 8 to provide the same benefits to women as it does to 9 men.

10 QUESTION: Even though it drives the option
11 away?

12 MS. GITTLER: Your Honor, an employer can 13 always absolve itself of liability by not having 14 employees, by not having an employment setting. That 15 may be the effect.

16 QUESTION: Well, the state of Arizona needs
17 employees, and that is not a very good illustration.

18 QUESTION: Yes, you have said that several 19 times. Is an employer an employer after he gets rid of 20 his employees?

21 MS. GITTLER: No, Your Honor, he is not, and 22 at that point he has no obligations in --

23 QUESTION: You are talking about something 24 that is utterly unrealistic, aren't you?

25 MS. GITTLER: Chief Justice Burger, the point

1 is that Congress has spoken, and we are dealing here 2 with the statute, and I think that is important to 3 emphasize, the statutory prohibitions, and the statute
4 prohibits treating individuals as members of a class, 5 and that's what this Court has held in interpreting 6 Title 7.

7 Now, in terms of the remedy which was raised 8 by Justice O'Connor, Mr. Endicott has also -- has 9 essentially conceded that in this particular case there 10 is really a minimal amount that is involved, and there 11 is really -- there are only four employees that have 12 retired under the stipulated facts.

13 As Mr. Endicott stated, the amount that may be 14 involved is de minimis, and in fact, Your Honors, the 15 state in this case never obtained a stay of the order of 16 the District Court, and so clearly experience must 17 indicate that in fact the state has been able to comply 18 with the order.

19 QUESTION: Yes, but you are not suggesting 20 this is an unimportant case.

21 MS. GITTNER: No, Your Honor, we are not in 22 any way suggesting that this is an unimportant case.
23 What we are suggesting, Your Honor, is that this Court 24 must look at the facts of this case, and in this case 25 there are four women who have retired.

1 QUESTION: Well, but it affects a large number 2 of plans and a large number of people, does it not?

3 MS. GITTLER: Yes, Justice Stevens, it does 4 affect a number of employers, and Mr. Endicott would 5 argue here today for all of those employers that are out 6 there, and that is something that we cannot do. We can 7 point out, Your Honor --

8 QUESTION: You are not arguing for all the 9 women employees who are out there? It seems to me you 10 are, and I think you properly are doing so.

11 MS. GITTLER: That's correct, Your Honor, but 12 we cannot address the possible -- all the possible 13 issues that might be raised by other employers. We must 14 deal with the record that was involved in this case, and 15 we would point out to the Court that a lot of the 16 arguments that have been raised by other employers, 17 there is tremendous dispute with respect to the amounts 18 that it might take in order to come into compliance with 19 this order, and the actuaries that have filed a brief --

20 QUESTION: Well, is it part of the record that 21 Arizona has terminated Option 3? Or is it -- there is 22 no dispute that that has happened?

23 MS. GITTLER: Justice White, I have no
24 personal knowledge that it has, except for the fact that 25 it has avowed to this Court that it has suspended that

1 third option.

2 QUESTION: Is that a matter of public notice, 3 is it, or are we permitted to take notice of that, that 4 Arizona is complying in this manner? You don't say that 5 it's not in compliance with Title 7 now, do you?

6 MS. GITTLER: Your Honor, I have no -- no, the 7 -- if the employer does not provide the 8 non-discriminatory option, there may, Your Honor, be 9 other issues with respect to contract or other problems 10 with respect to the suspension of the option, but if an 11 employer responds by not providing this particular 12 fringe benefit, that in itself is not a violation except 13 as it may bear on employees who are already 14 participating in the plan or who have already retired.

15 Chief Justice Burger, you asked with respect
16 to life insurance under this plan. There is no life 17 insurance under this plan, and there is no provision 18 under this plan which charges women less because they 19 are women in the payment of life insurance. Now, the 20 life insurance may be part of another plan, but I know 21 of no particular provision under this which allows for 22 charging women less because they are women.

23 QUESTION: Well, my hypothetical question was,
24 if you had a plan which charged women less for life
25 insurance, and the state might well include life

1 insurance in its program, then would that be 2 discrimination against the men?

3 MS. GITTLER: Your Honor, again, that would be 4 discrimination, but I was responding more to Mr.
5 Endicott's suggestion that there was a life insurance 6 program under this particular plan which charged women
7 less, and I know of no such separate provision unless it 8 is included in one of the other options.

9 QUESTION: Do you think the illegality would 10 be cured if they added a fourth option which was a life 11 insurance policy that gave precisely the same economic 12 benefit to women as a class as this one gives to men as 13 a class?

14 MS. GITTLER: Absolutely not, Justice
15 Stevens. That would in no way affect the outcome in 16 this case or the determination of whether or not there 17 was a violation of Title 7.

18 In addition, there is an argument that is made 19 by the petitioners of the actuarial equivalents, and 20 that in fact women are receiving the same in the 21 aggregate as men in the aggregate, and Your Honors, that 22 is the very heart of the argument that was rejected by 23 this Court in Manhart, and cannot be relitigated before 24 this Court again.

25 Nathalie Norris will receive less month to 1 month than a similarly situated man, and that is what 2 Manhart proscribes.

3 In addition, there was a suggestion made by 4 Mr. Endicott that this merely reflects the open market, 5 and that this somehow falls within the term open market
6 that this Court referred to in Manhart, but there, this 7 Court held that an employer can give an employee a lump 8 sum amount and go out and buy whatever he or she can on 9 the open market. That is not this case. This case 10 involves an employer who has itself provided the 11 benefits to the employees, and has not suggested that 12 the employer -- that the employee go out into the open 13 market simply with a dollar amount in its hand.

14 The issue, Your Honors, in this case is one of 15 statutory construction. Congress has determined the 16 scope, the applicability of Title 7, and its 17 prohibitions, and in this case the employer has violated 18 Title 7 by providing a discriminatory fringe benefit to 19 its employees. Neither the involvement of the insurance 20 companies or the presence of the options in this case 21 are sufficient to overcome the statutory prohibition of 22 Title 7.

23 For those reasons, Your Honor, we respectfully 24 request that the Ninth Circuit opinion decision be 25 upheld.

1 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well.

2 Mr. Endicott, do you have anything further?

3 ORAL ARGUMENT OF JOHN L. ENDICOTT, ESQ.,

4 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS - REBUTTAL

5 MR. ENDICOTT: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
6 please the Court, just one or two points.

7 There were questions early in Ms. Gittler's 8 argument about who holds title to the money and where 9 the money goes. Now, as the Court knows, this is a 10 deferred compensation plan. Internal Revenue takes the 11 position that if the employee receives the money, it is 12 taxable at the time of receipt. So the law is 13 structured so that the employee does not actually 14 receive or constructively receive the money. But the 15 money is actually put with the insurance company, the 16 savings bank, the mutual fund, or wherever the employee 17 directs it. The promise by the state to return that 18 money is an unequivocal promise. The only way the state 19 could not do it is to breach its promise.

20 QUESTION: Mr. Endicott, may I ask you one
21 question? It is the burden of proof question I asked 22 your opponent. In response to your suggestion that only 23 the female rate would be available if you tried to have 24 a unisex table, she responded in two ways, as I
25 understood her, saying, one, the group policy may get a

1 better rate than an individual, and secondly, that 2 because of the tax benefit that you just described, the 3 individual couldn't buy as favorable a policy even as 4 the female rate would produce.

5 Is there anything in the record to answer that 6 question? And if not, who has the burden of proof on 7 that point? Which one of you should we accept?

8 MR. ENDICOTT: Two answers to your questions, 9 Your Honor. First, there is nothing in the record on 10 the subject. It was not discussed. It isn't revealed 11 by the record. Number Two, we are all speculating as to 12 what men would do, what women would do, what insurance 13 companies would do. It is why I suggested much earlier 14 that I think this presents a much broader social, 15 political question than can be resolved in a Title 7 16 context --

17 QUESTION: Has Congress addressed this problem
18 at all since the Manhart decision?

19 MR. ENDICOTT: Congress is presently
20 considering legislation, as I understand it, Your Honor, 21 right now quite actively. There are one or more bills 22 pending in the House, at least, dealing with the 23 question of should there be sex segregation in 24 insurance, casualty insurance, life insurance, pensions, 25 annuities. The whole thing is before Congress. Yes,

1 Your Honor.

2 One final point, if I may. The statement was 3 made that Manhart solves this case, and I submit Manhart 4 does not. Manhart dealt with a situation in which the 5 woman took home less money. It confined itself to that 6 situation. Here is a case where the woman takes home
7 the same pay throughout her life. It is only after her 8 employment status has ceased, she has retired, she is 9 getting money from an insurance company, that she gets 10 less per month.

11 And the assumption that because she gets less 12 per month she is being discriminated against is one that 13 again raises more questions than just simple
14 mathematics. If I promise to pay you $50 a month for 20
15 months, and I promise to pay someone else $100 a month
16 for ten months, clearly $50 a month is less than $100 a 17 month, but it doesn't mean the person who gets $50 a 18 month is being discriminated against. They are going to 19 get it longer. They will net out the same.

20 And the assumption of the actuarial tables is, 21 you take the money the employee has set aside, divide it 22 by their life expectancy, and they recoup their money, 23 and it is their money they are concerned with. The 24 argument that Arizona could have self-insured is 25 contrary to the Arizona statute that created the

1 deferred compensation plan, which said that Arizona was 2 not to contribute money to the plan.

3 Once you self-insure, you are taking the risk 4 of insurance, and insurance companies do pay money out, 5 sometimes more than they take.

6 Thank you.

7 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, counsel.

8 The case is submitted.

9 (Whereupon, at 1:48 o'clock p.m., the case in 10 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
