1                    P R O C E E D I N G S

2                    CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments
3 next in Strickland against Washington.

4                    Ms. Snurkowski, I think you may proceed 5 whenever you are ready.

7 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS

8                    MS. SNURKOWSKI: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it 9 please the Court, the issue before the Court today is 10 whether the Eleventh Circuit's en banc decision setting 11 forth the standards by which prejudice and the 12 competency level of a defendant in a collateral action, 13 the manner in which that standard should be applied is 14 up for consideration.

15                    The state is very concerned because this 16 particular case concerns three major topics of interest
17 to the state of Florida, and that is that we have a 18 standard that has been imposed by the Eleventh Circuit
19 en banc which upends the standards that the Circuit 20 Courts have addressed. We have a standard that says it 21 is in direct conflict and it acknowledges conflict with 22 a D.C. case, United States versus DeCoster. It is also 23 in conflict with the Florida Supreme Court's assessment 24 of what the state of Florida will do with regard to 25 assessing competency of counsel.

1           In that particular case, Knight versus State,
2   which is cited in our pleadings, the Florida Supreme 3   Court meticulously set forth the standard for the review 4   of claims of competency of counsel and relied on and 5   looked to with approval the case of DeCoster.

6           The third part of this case was actually the 7   first and second part, because it has kind of been 8   meshed. We are concerned here also with the scope that 9   habeas corpus will take in federal litigation by state 10   prisoners, because possibly, possibly the outcome of the 11   Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals has expanded the 12   ability of the defendant to completely forget about 13   cause, demonstrate a degree of prejudice, not affecting 14   the outcome, and open up all claims that may or may not 15   be cognizable pursuant to habeas corpus proceedings.

16           QUESTION: May I ask you a preliminary
17   question --

18           MS. SNURKOWSKI: Yes.

19           QUESTION: -- because it is right on that 20   point. This case, as I understand it, was a mixed
21   petition. There was an unexhausted Gardner claim raised 22   by the petitioner which was not -- never been submitted 23   to a state court. Is that correct?

24           MS. SNURKOWSKI: It came about at the federal 25   evidentiary hearing. I don't believe it was

1 specifically initially addressed by the petitioner to 2 the court. What happened, during the course of the 3 proceedings, there was discrepancies with regard to 4 whether the trial court and defense counsel had seen Dr.
5 Jacobson's psychiatric evaluation of Mr. Washington
6 which occurred approximately October 6th, so about six 7 days after his arrest --

8 QUESTION: But that claim was raised for the 9 first time at the federal habeas corpus proceeding. Is 10 that correct?

11 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Well, but again, the claim
12 wasn't per se raised. It came about and it was resolved 13 through further discussions at that proceeding that in 14 fact there was not a Gardner violation because --

15 QUESTION: There was not a Gardner violation?

16 MS. SNURKOWSKI: There was not -- right.

17 QUESTION: The Court of Appeals said that 18 claim was raised for the first time in the federal 19 habeas corpus proceeding.

20 MS. SNURKOWSKI: That is correct with regard 21 to --

22 QUESTION: Now, do you concede that there was 23 jurisdiction in the federal habeas corpus proceeding 24 notwithstanding the fact that the petition contained an 25 unexhausted claim?

1 MS. SNURKOWSKI: The state would contend that 2 as the posture of the development of this case 3 developed, that in fact it was a ruse. There was in 4 fact no unexhausted claim before the federal court. The 5 fact that there was discussion with regard to the 6 Gardner issue, that it was resolved, that in fact that 7 the court did not utilize that material, and defense
8 counsel's remarks with regard to whether he had seen it 9 was unclear. He could not recall and did not know.

10 QUESTION: Well, I agree. I just want to get 11 your position. It is your position that no unexhausted 12 claim was presented.

13 MS. SNURKOWSKI: That's right, Your Honor.
14 That's right.

15 QUESTION: And if there had been an 16 unexhausted claim, what would your position be?

17 MS. SNURKOWSKI: The state, because of the 18 nature of the case and the posture the case was in -- 19 this case happened to be under an outstanding death
20 warrant in Florida -- the state would have waived --

21 QUESTION: Do you think it is something you 22 can waive?

23 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Yes, Your Honor, and as a 24 matter of fact, we have -- there is a case out of the 25 Eleventh Circuit which holds to the contrary. We have

1 litigated that kind of an issue, but the state is of the 2 mind that you can waive that issue.

3 QUESTION: The state of Florida's position is 4 that an unexhausted claim does not deprive the federal 5 court of jurisdiction if the state is willing to 6 proceed?

7 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Yes, Your Honor.

8 The second point, as I said, has to do with 9 habeas corpus proceedings and the scope that possibly 10 this particular decision will have on continuing 11 litigation in this regard. The third part of our 12 complaint with the opinion is the concern, is the 13 concern the state of Florida has with the integrity of 14 the trial judges and the Florida Supreme Court's review 15 of competency of counsel, the question of whether the 16 ultimate fact determined by -- the ultimate fact 17 determined by the Florida Supreme Court should be given 18 some deference.

19 Here they used a standard that has not been 20 attacked per se as being unconstitutional. The state is 21 contending that in fact where a state court, the Florida
22 Supreme Court in this particular instance, has reviewed 23 a claim of competency of counsel, that standard is 24 constitutional in the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendment.
25 Federal consideration of competency of counsel in

1 collateral action in federal court should be limited to,
2 first of all, whether the standard is constitutional.
3 If you get past that point, whether in fact the Florida
4 Supreme Court or the trial court in reviewing this 5 initially has made an assessment, a determination as to 6 the correctness of the sentence based on counsel's 7 representations of the defendant at that time.

8           Those are the three main concerns we have with 9 this case. The facts of the case reflect that Mr.
10 Washington pled guilty to three murders. It occurred 11 during a crime spree, unexplained crime spree that 12 happened in September of 1976. The facts are very clear 13 in our record with regard to the murders. In fact, Mr.
14 Washington, without counsel's countenance, pled 15 guilty. First of all he confessed. He pled guilty and 16 he waived the sentencing proceeding, which is part of 17 our bifurcated or trifurcated -- this is the second part 18 of our trial at the sentencing phase in capital cases 19 where we have a separate sentencing jury.

20           He waived all those things, contrary to 21 counsel's advice. The defendant's case was affirmed by 22 the Florida Supreme Court on claims raised. He then 23 subsequently, many years later, I think in this case
24 four years later, he went to the trial court on a 3.850 25 motion for collateral relief, seeking relief because he

1 says now my counsel is incompetent. Although I pled
2 guilty, I have no complaints about his preparation for 3 trial, although I cut him off at the knees with regard 4 to presenting my case to a jury or to a judge, he was 5 ineffective at the sentencing phase because he did not 6 do certain things.

7 In particular, there were six, but 8 specifically the court has honed in on the fact that he 9 did not contact or call or investigate certain character 10 witnesses, and that he did not obtain information with 11 regard to Mr. Washington's mental condition. He did not 12 obtain psychiatric reports. Those are the two main 13 claims that his complaint is based on. He had more than 14 a dozen issues, but the focus of all the attention in 15 all the courts reviewing this case has been 16 effectiveness of counsel at sentencing with regard to 17 these particular claims.

18 The trial court in this particular case
19 reviewed the claims said under the Knight standard, 20 which requires that you make a specific allegation as to 21 the competency, you make a determination or you show -- 22 the defendant has the burden of coming forth and 23 demonstrating that there was some prejudice, and in this 24 particular case that would likely affect the outcome, 25 and that you demonstrate that the actions of counsel

1 fell below that of reasonably effective assistance of 2 counsel. That is the Knight standard.

3           The trial court found that in applying that 4 standard Mr. Washington had not met any of the 5 standards, that it was summarily reversible because the 6 14 affidavits tendered to the court and the two 7 affidavits of psychiatrists and a psychologist did not 8 refute -- first of all, they only went to non-statutory 9 mitigating circumstances. He wasn't complaining about 10 the appropriateness of aggravating circumstances. He 11 wasn't complaining about the appropriateness of 12 statutory mitigating circumstances. It only went to 13 non-statutory mitigating circumstances, and the court
14 stated upon review of this whole record, we find that it
15 does not specifically refute that which counsel did. It 16 did not impair Mr. Washington's ability to obtain a 17 sentence of life in this case.

18           QUESTION: Ms. Snurkowski, was the Florida 19 trial court's determination that the new evidence was 20 insufficient to outweigh the aggravating circumstances 21 as a matter of law a determination of Florida law in 22 your view?

23           MS. SNURKOWSKI: I believe it was. I believe 24 in assessing -- because there we have the trial court, 25 who has to be regulated by the Florida Supreme Court in

1 assessing the appropriateness of the death penalty --

2 QUESTION: Okay, so you think the Florida
3 trial court determined as a matter of Florida law that 4 the new evidence could not have overcome the aggravating 5 circumstances?

6 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Affected the outcome,
7 modified --

8 QUESTION: Well, do you think that the Florida
9 death statute could remove discretion from the sentencer 10 and be constitutional?

11 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Remove? I am sorry, I don't 12 -- Repeat your question.

13 QUESTION: Remove the discretion from the 14 sentencer?

15 MS. SNURKOWSKI: As opposed -- you mean --

16 QUESTION: That would be the effect of the 17 holding as a matter of law then, to remove all 18 discretion from the trial court to be able to sentence 19 to death.

20 MS. SNURKOWSKI: I don't believe that is -- 21 No, I don't believe that's what we're doing. We are 22 looking at something as a collateral action here. We 23 are talking about the sentencer being the trial judge 24 who says -- who is the sentencer in Florida. It is not 25 the jury in Florida. They make a recommendation but the

1 trial court judge makes the determination as to whether 2 death should be imposed based on the aggravating and 3 mitigating circumstances.

4 QUESTION: Well, if as a matter of law the new 5 evidence could not overcome the aggravating, then aren't 6 you saying that the sentencer must give the death 7 sentence?

8 MS. SNURKOWSKI: No, I don't believe we are 9 saying that. I am saying we are making -- it is a 10 weighing process. Has he come forward, has he come 11 forward and demonstrated other evidence that -- it's 12 like newly discovered -- that, as an example, that the 13 Solicitor General's office has used in their particular 14 pleadings.

15 I think to bring it more to home, into 16 Florida, it is like quorum novis, leave to file error 17 quorum novis. The defendant says, yes, this is all that 18 happened at trial, but I have new evidence, I have other 19 evidence that would affect the outcome, and it was not 20 presented at this proceeding. Under that requirement, 21 he has the burden of demonstrating that it was through 22 no dilatory actions of his own that he didn't uncover 23 it. Certainly that would not be a consideration in this 24 particular issue, but the second part of that, would it 25 have affected the outcome, that is the test, would it

1 have affected the outcome.

2           So in fact you have a sentencer who has made a 3 determination. The question now becomes, has there been 4 anything new introduced into this equation that would 5 require a modification of that? In this particular case 6 the trial court and the Florida Supreme Court in 7 reviewing this particular claim held that beyond a moral 8 certainty this factual recital, this new bit of 9 information would not have changed the outcome, that in 10 fact as a matter of law there were aggravating 11 circumstances that were not challenged, there were no 12 mitigating -- statutory mitigating circumstances, and 13 that the new material did not create non-statutory 14 mitigating circumstances, and therefore death was 15 appropriate under Florida statute.

16           Under the authorities of Florida cases, where 17 you have one aggravating circumstance and no mitigating 18 circumstance, death is an appropriate sentence.

19           Again, the facts, as I said, there was a 20 guilty plea to all these cases without regard to what 21 counsel was counseling Mr. Washington in this particular 22 case. Mr. Washington did proceed. He now comes back 23 and complains about that which has been done. The 24 District Court hearing the case on the petition for writ
25 of habeas corpus concluded that he couldn't -- it was a

1 closed question as far as he was concerned, but he ruled 2 that there was a need for an evidentiary hearing, and in 3 fact an evidentiary hearing was conducted.

4           During the course of the evidentiary hearing 5 on this matter, Mr. Tunkey, who was Mr. Washington's 6 counsel, was called to testify by the defendant. Others 7 who were called to testify were Judge Fuller and the 8 defendant himself. The main focus, though, I think is 9 important in this particular case is what Mr. Tunkey 10 said, because Mr. Tunkey was now being asked to tell the 11 court, inform the court what was the purpose, why did 12 you do this, why did you do that, did you stop, did you 13 stop your investigation, did you stop your 14 representation of this man once you felt you had this 15 sunken feeling that because he pled guilty he was not 16 taking your advice?

17           That was the nature of the inquiry of Mr.
18 Tunkey. It was not that the Florida Supreme Court or 19 the trial court had reviewed the facts in light of the 20 affidavits prepared and that in fact it demonstrated 21 that there was no entitlement to relief, but rather Mr.
22 Tunkey, what did you do and why did you do this? And 23 that is -- Past that point, the trial court after the 24 evidentiary hearing assessed that while, while we, after 25 we have asked him all these questions, and because time

1 has dulled his memory, or because he doesn't want to 2 answer candidly, because he is in fact, he is in fact 3 being pitted against his own client, or maybe because he 4 doesn't know the answer, or maybe because he doesn't 5 remember how he reasoned out why he did something, we 6 have a record that reflects Mr. Tunkey's recollections 7 of what occurred.

8           The trial, federal district judge found that 9 while his judgment may not have been correct in all 10 instances, he could not find that prejudice pursuant to 11 DeCoster, and that is that would likely affected the 12 outcome, had occurred, and therefore he denied the 13 petition for writ of habeas corpus.

14           The matter was taken by the Eleventh Circuit
15 on direct appeal, and the en banc court, after a panel 16 decision, concluded the standard to be -- could, with 17 regard to the prejudice aspect could be things that -- 18 could it have been helpful, that was the term, helpful
19 to the defense. That was the standard of prejudice.
20 The defendant only had to come forward and say, I am 21 showing you that these things could have been helpful to 22 my defense.

23           The en banc panel rejected helpfulness, and in 24 lieu of that substituted that under Fradey there was a 25 likelihood or not likelihood, that substantial and

1 actual prejudice occurred that would have been a
2 disadvantage to the defense.

3           The state would contend that one of the more 4 -- perhaps not -- that is a very important issue, but 5 the more important issue in this is also how the court
6 viewed what we must do, and that is what I first started 7 this argument about, how we have turned upsidedown the 8 claim here.

9           The Eleventh Circuit suggested that because 10 the district judge did not make a finding with regard to 11 ineffectiveness of counsel, because he didn't do that, 12 it had to be sent back. It was not sufficient that he 13 made an assessment that there may have been errors in 14 judgment, but that there was no prejudice. The state 15 would contend that is the very means by which you go
16 about judging collateral issues. You make an assessment
17 based on the allegations raised and the evidence 18 presented. In this particular case, in the federal 19 court, the state, the state produced all of the 20 defendant's affidavits. When he came forth in his 21 petition for writ of habeas corpus, he filed a bare 22 bones petition, and it was the state in their response 23 that included the record, which was their 24 responsibility, but also included the affidavits which 25 the defendant had relied on in the state trial court.

1           This is kind of the reverse of the weak case,
2 strong case theory of going weak case in state court, 3 strong case in federal court. We had a strong case in 4 the state court and we had a weak case or a minimal case 5 in federal court.

6           But the point is that getting back to what the 7 court found, the court said, okay, there may have been 8 problems, he may not have used the best judgment, but 9 there was no prejudice demonstrated, and that is the 10 focal point of habeas corpus. We are talking about 11 fundamental fairness, whether there has been miscarriage 12 of justice here, not whether Mr. Tunkey should be 13 crucified, and then after he has been crucified, we say, 14 well, yes, you know, he was a nice guy, but you know, 15 actually, looking at the record and seeing what he did,
16 it really wasn't so bad, was it? As a matter of fact, 17 it probably didn't reduce itself to prejudice to this 18 particular defendant, whether you base it on the 19 standard that the Eleventh Circuit has imposed or you 20 base it on the standard that the state suggests is the 21 proper standard for prejudice, and that is that it has a 22 likely effect on the outcome of the proceedings.

23           To give full credit to the Eleventh Circuit, I 24 might add that although in suggesting that first we 25 crucify Mr. Tunkey and then we consider whether

1 prejudice has obtained, they did set out in Footnote 33
2 of the majority opinion that there may be instances when 3 this kind of procedure could be changed, that in fact 4 you might look to the prejudice aspect first rather than 5 reviewing whether counsel had rendered effective
6 assistance of counsel or counsel's representation fell 7 below a certain standard.

8           However, in this particular case they said, 9 no, no, we find that in this case you have to make an 10 assesment with regard to what Mr. Tunkey did and then, 11 and then, although the court has already found that we 12 do not disagree with that because possibly there could 13 have been an opportunity or there was a reason for this, 14 there may have been, very well been tactical reasons for 15 the way he proceeded.

16           In spite of all that, in spite of the fact 17 there was no prejudice, then you come back, and we will 18 see what you've done. But first of all go back and talk 19 about Mr. Tunkey and whether he in fact represented Mr.
20 Washington well.

21           As Justice O'Connor asked the Solicitor
22 General in the first case, this is a B case, not an A 23 case, based on your question. Certainly the two 24 elements that we need to review is whether in fact 25 prejudice has occurred and to what degree. The circuits

1 throughout this state or this country have utilized the 2 McMahon rule or the McMahon statement, and in 13 years
3 have developed all sorts of degrees of prejudice, 4 degrees or standards to be applied, and that is what is 5 so important today, is that we have some feeling for 6 what kind of degree.

7 While the respondents have conceded in their 8 pleadings that in fact the defendant does have a burden 9 to show prejudice, they would take issue certainly with 10 the degree of prejudice the state would contend is 11 necessary in this particular case. They are opting, I
12 might add, for the panel decision, not the en banc 13 decision in this particular case, although there have 14 been no cross pleadings filed that I know of.

15 The state would contend that the only way, the 16 only way that we can resolve the kinds of problems that 17 exist in habeas corpus, in collateral litigation from 18 state prisoners, and in fact, in fact, federal prisoners 19 under 2255, is to determine that the prejudice that is 20 to -- the burden of prejudice the defendant must reach 21 goes to a likelihood of affecting the outcome.

22 QUESTION: How do you think the standard
23 should differ on direct review?

24 MS. SNURKOWSKI: On direct review? Certainly 25 I believe that there should be some demonstration of

1 prejudice, whether in fact we are going to have a 2 differing scale because of the nature of the 3 proceedings. I might add, fortunately this case is not 4 of that ilk, and the first case was.

5 QUESTION: I know. I am asking, though, if 6 you think there should be a different standard on direct 7 review.

8 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Yes, I probably would, only 9 to the extent that collateral litigation -- we have had 10 a hallmark of what collateral litigation is to do as 11 opposed -- you know, we are going to be truth finding.
12 We are looking at the -- we have an otherwise valid 13 judgment and sentence that is now later being attacked.

14 Now, while it is true that in the direct 15 appeal he is attacking an otherwise valid judgment and 16 sentence, it hasn't been given the imprimatur of an 17 appellate court to say yes, that particular judgment and 18 sentence has been approved, but the standard in a sense
19 should not be that far off. It may be the Agres
20 standard, where there is something just quite -- a 21 little less than showing the likelihood that it would 22 affect the outcome. Perhaps it could be that there was 23 a reasonable doubt raised that wasn't there otherwise.

24 But again, that is not an issue that we have 25 come forward with, because it is not the normal kind of

1 issue that we have -- we are faced on a given day to day 2 basis, and we are very concerned again with the 3 collateral type prejudice that should be pronounced with 4 regard to the standard to be pronounced.

5           The second part of this, of course, is also,
6 and it is important in this case, although it is not as 7 precious to the state, and that is the standard with 8 regard to how we determine competency of counsel. What 9 is the standard? What will counsel do? I think if you
10 look through, look through what the circuits have done 11 based on McMahon, we have "reasonable, competent 12 assistant," "customary skill and knowledge," "normal 13 competency," "reasonable effective assistance," "minimal 14 standard of professional representation," "customary 15 skills and diligence," "exercise skill, judgment, and 16 diligence of reasonable competent defense counsel," and 17 "reasonably likely to render and reasonably rendering 18 effective assistance." We have a whole host --

19           QUESTION: You haven't listed the Second 20 Circuit's approach.

21           MS. SNURKOWSKI: Well, that, I was told that 22 recently it is a farce mockery. They still adhere to 23 the farce mockery, but apparently a case mid-December
24 came out where a panel, I think the case is Trammel 25 versus United States, where they said that they would no.

1 longer adhere to the farce mockery, and would in fact 2 accede to a reasonable likely or reasonably likely to
3. render effective --

4 QUESTION: Can a panel do that?

5 MS. SNURKOWSKI: I believe in that particular 6 case there was evidence in the record or in the vote 7 that they polled the whole court in that particular 8 case, but I would disagree. Again, a panel might not be 9 able to do that. In that particular case, that's what 10 happened.

11 The state would contend that while I have no 12 panacea, I can't give you the answer to what is the 13 standard to be applied, it seems to me that there are, 14 there are standards or there are better language or 15 better words to be applied. We are not locking to the 16 name we give something, but what in fact counsel does, 17 and the state would submit that whether counsel's acts 18 or omissions result in egregious error which infected 19 the integrity of the fact-finding system is probably 20 more in line with how we are going to assess counsel's 21 representation. We are going to look for an 22 outcome-oriented test to be applied.

23 QUESTION: Ms. Snurkowski, I want to make sure 24 I have the procedural posture of the case correct. The 25 district, federal district court granted habeas relief

1 to the defendant.

2 MS. SNURKOWSKI: The federal district court, 3 no, denied --

4 QUESTION: Denied it?

5 MS. SNURKOWSKI: -- habeas corpus.

6 QUESTION: And then Judge Vance's opinion for 7 the majority of the Eleventh Circuit sent the case back 8 to the district court --

9 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Remanded it, yes.

10 QUESTION: -- in order to be evaluated under 11 the Eleventh Circuit's standard for ineffective
12 assistance of counsel.

13 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Right.

14 QUESTION: Now, you here are disagreeing with 15 the Eleventh Circuit's standard for --

16 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Yes.

17 QUESTION: Now, if we should agree with your 18 standard, and thereby disagree with the Eleventh 19 Circuit, might there still not be a necessity for a 20 hearing in the district court on the application of 21 whatever standard that we came up with?

22 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Well, Your Honor, as I am 23 suggesting, the standard to be imposed or the manner by 24 which you view the case or ineffective assistance of 25 counsel is first to look to whether the allegations

1 presented in fact result in prejudice. If no prejudice
2 has occurred, the second step in making a determination
3 as to what counsel did and why he did it is of no
4 consequence. There is no point in finding out why Bill 5 Tunkey did something if you say the 14 affidavits that 6 now are being presented would not have affected the 7 outcome, would not have changed, had no effect on 8 non-statutory mitigating circumstances.

9 QUESTION: So you say if a charged dereliction
10 of counsel would have in effect made no difference, you 11 don't get into the question of whether or not it was in 12 fact dereliction.

13 MS. SNURKOWSKI: To what degree. Right, 14 right.

15 QUESTION: May I ask one other question? You
16 haven't addressed the question of the trial judge's 17 testimony, which is one of the basis of reversal. I am 18 wondering, is it the state's position that if a habeas 19 corpus petitioner wants to put the judge on the stand, 20 that he has the right to do so?

21 MS. SNURKOWSKI: The habeas petitioner?

22 QUESTION: Yes. This time I know the state 23 put the judge on.

24 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Right, that's true.

25 QUESTION: Does it work both ways, or is it

1 your view that only the state --

2 MS. SNURKOWSKI: It probably does, but I would 3 suspect that there's, you know, there's a problem, 4 certainly there's a problem with that, in that if the --

5 QUESTION: Well, I can see the problem. I 6 just want to know what your position is.

7 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Yes, I think there's a
8 viable --

9 QUESTION: It works both ways?

10 MS. SNURKOWSKI: Certainly. It's not a 11 one-way street. But I might add in this particular case
12 that the federal district court indicated in his opinion 13 that the statements, while they were admissible, and 14 there wasn't a complaint with regard to them, while he 15 found them admissible, he gave very little credibility 16 to those particular statements, and he said they were 17 not a determinative factor in determining the outcome of 18 this particular result.

19 QUESTION: You mean the judge didn't believe 20 another judge?

21 MS. SNURKOWSKI: I don't think it was -- he 22 just didn't want to give it a lot of weight in that 23 particular regard. Thank you.

24 QUESTION: What if this Court were to 25 determine that admission of that evidence was improper?

1 Then what do we have to do? Do we have to see to it
2 that it's remanded?

3 MS. SNURKOWSKI: No, I don't believe that that 4 is required in this particular instance. I think then 5 you can again look to the -- while you say there is 6 admission of evidence of error, is this the kind of 7 admission of evidence that is so egregious that it
8 affected the trial judge's or in this particular case
9 the district court judge's assessment of the case, and I 10 think that is a kind of assessment you can make because 11 you have a record. It doesn't require further 12 evidentiary considerations outside the record itself. I 13 think this Court can make a finding that in fact while 14 it might have been error to have done that, and the 15 state is not willing to concede that, but while it might 16 have been, it does not require remand to the Eleventh 17 Circuit or to the District Court judge.

18 Thank you.

19 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Shapiro.

20 Mr. Shapiro, before you begin, may I ask a 21 question, more out of curiosity, I guess? Is the New 22 Jersey Department of Public Advocate representing the 23 respondent in this case?

24 ORAL ARGUMENT OF RICHARD T. SHAPIRO, ESQ., 25 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT

1           MR. SHAPIRO: Your Honor, the public defender
2 of New Jersey is my boss, and I was handling this case
3 when I was in the south representing people in death row 4 cases, and when I came to the office, because of its 5 importance to New Jersey's new capital sentencing law
6 and to standards for effective assistance of counsel 7 nationwide, the New Jersey public defender allowed me to 8 present the case to the Court.

9           QUESTION: On his behalf?

10          MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, Your Honor.

11          QUESTION: Thank you.

12          MR. SHAPIRO: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
13 please the Court, before discussing the legal standard 14 for assessing claims of ineffective assistance of 15 counsel, it is essential to point out what the District 16 Court found as the reason for counsel's lack of 17 investigation.

18          The record shows that any assertion that 19 counsel made a tactical or strategic reason not to 20 investigate is flatly contradicted. At the evidentiary 21 hearing in the District Court, the District Court had an 22 opportunity to hear from counsel, to evaluate his 23 credibility, and to hear his reasons for what he did and 24 did not do. The District Court evaluated this, the 25 credibility of Mr. Tunkey, and made several critical

1 findings.

2           These findings reject any assertion of a
3 strategic or tactical choice for lack of investigation.
4 In the appendix to the certiorari petition, at Page 264, 5 the District Court finds that Mr. Tunkey testified to 6 his feeling of hopelessness upon learning of the new 7 murder confessions. At Page 282, the District Court
8 finds as a fact that Mr. Tunkey candidly admitted that 9 once the multiple confessions were given, he had a 10 feeling that nothing could be done to save Washington, 11 and that this feeling was behind his failure to do an 12 independent investigation on petitioner's background and 13 potentially mitigating emotional and mental reasons for 14 the killings.

15           QUESTION: Mr. Shapiro, in that regard, do you 16 agree that counsel could have been called at the 17 ineffectiveness hearing to testify what his client told -- 18 him in the course of preparing the defense?

19           MR. SHAPIRO: Pardon me, Your Honor?

20           QUESTION: Can the attorney himself be called 21 at the hearing --

22           MR. SHAPIRO: Yes.

23           QUESTION: -- on the ineffectiveness claim?

24           MR. SHAPIRO: Yes.

25           QUESTION: To testify as to what his client

1 told him? Is there a waiver of the attorney-client
2 privilege?

3 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, there is a waiver of the 4 attorney-client privilege in those circumstances. The 5 record is no doubt --

6 QUESTION: Was that evidence admitted in this 7 case as to why the attorney did what he did?

8 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, Your Honor. Mr. Turnkey
9 testified at the District Court hearing, and the record
10 of that hearing and the findings of the District Court 11 leave no doubt that any argument that there was a 12 strategic or tactical choice for this total lack of 13 investigation is without merit. The state never cross 14 appealed these factual findings. There is no 15 demonstration that they are clearly erroneous.

16 QUESTION: Does your case turn -- To what 17 extent, I will put it this way, does your case turn on 18 the failure to call the family, the former employers, 19 and friends in the mitigation?

20 MR. SHAPIRO: No, Your Honor. It turns on two 21 things, Your Honor. It turns on the fact that counsel 22 -- It turns on one essential overarching principle and 23 two supporting factual assumptions. The overarching 24 principle is that counsel's lack of investigation left 25 him utterly unprepared to present essential factual

1 support for his arguments that David Washington's life
2 should be spared. At the sentencing hearing --

3 QUESTION: That is the mitigation, what we are 4 talking about.

5 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, the mitigation hearing.

6 QUESTION: Well, now, how should he have 7 demonstrated that?

8 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, Your Honor, at the 9 sentencing hearing, Mr. Tunkey argued at Page 322 of the 10 joint appendix that David Washington "possesses a spark 11 within him which is good, which is decent," yet he could 12 not point and did not point when his client's life was 13 at stake to a single shred of independent evidence that 14 would have advised the judge of a fuller understanding 15 of who David Washington is. Who is this individual who 16 has a spark of decency within him? He did not point to 17 anything within him, Your Honor, but just made that bald 18 assertion. David --

19 QUESTION: Well, Mr. Shapiro, I would think 20 that perhaps in a sentencing hearing the colors are a 21 good deal more blurred and the contours less distinct 22 than when you are talking about proving the elements of 23 a crime, that counsel's judgment in a case like that to 24 do something or not do something should much less 25 readily be faulted than it might be where you are

1 talking about you could have produced this witness that 2 would have definite negative element B of the crime.

3 MR. SHAPIRO: That might be in a case, Your 4 Honor, where counsel exercises that judgment, and where 5 that is indicated by the record, but in this case, as I 6 have pointed out, the District Court found that the lack 7 of investigation and consequently the inability to 8 present mitigating evidence was due to counsel's sense 9 of hopelessness and a lack of investigation.

10 QUESTION: Did the District Court also find 11 that this lack of investigation amounted to ineffective
12 assistance of counsel?

13 MR. SHAPIRO: The District Court did not make 14 that specific finding --

15 QUESTION: It didn't.

16 MR. SHAPIRO: -- but we submit that under 17 Pullman --

18 QUESTION: Well, I just asked you to answer
19 the question.

20 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, Your Honor. And under 21 Pullman Standard versus Swint, the record leaves no 22 doubt that this was a basic defect in counsel's 23 performance.

24 QUESTION: You seem to be arguing that 25 counsel's performance violated some standard, but isn't

1 the fundamental issue before us what the standard is for 2 performance of counsel?

3 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, Your Honor, but I think it
4 is important to consider first of all that Mr. Tunkey 5 advanced certain positions at the sentencing phase and 6 was unable to present the evidence that would support 7 those positions, because the basic difference between 8 the state and our position in this case is that the 9 proper standard of prejudice focuses on impairment to 10 the defense and not just on the effect on outcome. To 11 get -- To demonstrate --

12 QUESTION: Yes, but what if you are wrong on 13 that? You have to convince us first about that.

14 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, Your Honor, I think that 15 beyond the record demonstrating that counsel failed to 16 present the evidence that would have supported his 17 sentencing argument, the record also demonstrates that 18 counsel failed to fulfill the basic responsibilities of 19 an advocate, and this substantially undermined his 20 ability to present his case at the sentencing hearing.

21 QUESTION: Well, that is --

22 MR. SHAPIRO: Now, the --

23 QUESTION: Mr. Shapiro, that is what my 24 question was directed to. It is the other side of the 25 coin of what Justice White has presented. He asks you

1 what is the standard. I put to you, what is the 2 evidence that you think could have been presented in 3 mitigation that could have made the trier of the 4 sentencing issue forget the grisly, horrible
5 slaughtering of three people?

6 MR. SHAPIRO: Your Honor, under Florida law,
7 non-statutory mitigating circumstances have often made a 8 difference between life and death, evidence of 9 non-statutory mitigating circumstances. Had Mr. Tunkey 10 conducted an investigation, he could have supported two 11 premises in his argument for David Washington's life, 12 which he did try to advance.

13 One was that David Washington had a spark
14 within him which was good, which was decent. Another 15 was, in his argument, counsel states that no one 16 understands why Mr. Washington might have done what he 17 did or did what he did, and yet there was evidence of --- 18 psychiatric and psychological evidence that could have 19 been available to him upon reasonable investigation, 20 that would have established that the combination of 21 child abuse, deprivation, and neglect as a youth 22 combined with the extraordinary pressures that were 23 placed on Mr. Washington at the time of the crimes led 24 to the severe mental and emotional distress which 25 resulted in his breakdown during that period of time.

1 This is precisely --

2 QUESTION: How likely do you think a jury 3 would have been to buy that?

4 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, Your Honor, in this case
5 we can only go by what the Florida Supreme Court has 6 said is the appropriate law in these cases, and by what 7 this Court has said the Florida Supreme Court process 8 is. For one, the Florida Supreme Court has stated in 9 numerous cases which are cited in the brief that 10 non-statutory mitigating circumstances can make a 11 difference between life and death.

12 QUESTION: I don't --

13 MR. SHAPIRO: The Florida --

14 QUESTION: I don't doubt that they can be 15 introduced, but I said how likely do you think a jury 16 would have been to buy this analysis that you are 17 suggesting?

18 MR. SHAPIRO: I think, Your Honor, if 19 sentencing -- sentencing in capital cases is what this 20 Court has stated, and that is a series of judgmental 21 factors, a myriad of factors that are responsive to the 22 particular individual circumstances of the defendant and 23 of the offense, then we can't know that unless we 24 speculate. We do know that a witness --

25 QUESTION: Mr. Shapiro, what if you had had a

1 history of about 20 cases identical to this in Florida.
2 In every one of them the defense lawyer did exactly what 3 you did, and in every one of them the jury had come back 4 saying no recommendation of mercy. Wouldn't you think 5 that the defense lawyer on the 21st time might be spared
6 that job, and you could say juries just aren't buying 7 that kind of thing?

8 MR. SHAPIRO: Your Honor, I think that if he 9 did do that as a tactical choice, it would be a 10 different situation. In this case, Mr. Tunkey made 11 those precise non-statutory mitigating arguments. What 12 he didn't do was present the factual predicate for 13 arguments that he was asserting the sentencing judge 14 should have bought. He was saying to the judge, these 15 are the reasons why David Washington's life should be 16 spared. He wasn't providing the judge with the facts, 17 though, and the facts are what make the difference.

18 QUESTION: The defendant had waived the jury
19 here, had he not? The defendant had waived the jury 20 here?

21 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, Your Honor.

22 QUESTION: We are just talking about the 23 judge.

24 MR. SHAPIRO: He had presented these facts to 25 the judge, and he was telling the judge, these are why

1 David Washington's life, these are the reasons why his 2 life should be spared, but he presented none of the 3 factual predicate. It is like getting up in front of 4 the judge and saying, not guilty, not guilty, not 5 putting on any evidence, and then coming back and 6 saying, well, there was an alibi. He is asking the 7 sentencer to buy an argument or the jury to buy an 8 argument without presenting the factual predicate. That 9 is the defect.

10 Now, any standard to consider ineffective
11 assistance of counsel in these kinds of circumstances 12 must take into account the values that this Court has 13 established in Sixth Amendment cases.

14 First, the standard must preserve the 15 fundamental nature of the right to counsel and our 16 system of justice. Second, the standard, if it is going 17 to work in the myriad of situations that courts are 18 faced with, must provide clear guidelines and criteria
19 for its application in what is essentially case by case 20 adjudication. And third, the standard must accommodate 21 society's interests in the administration of criminal 22 justice and in the finality of judgments.

23 Under any or all of these factors, we suggest 24 that a test focusing on the impairment of the defense, 25 the adverse effect on the defense, and not on the 1 outcome, is far superior.

2 First of all, the outcome determinative test
3 does not preserve the fundamental value of the Sixth
4 Amendment. It simply doesn't. It shifts the focus away 5 from the adequacy of counsel's performance towards an 6 almost exclusive concentration on the trial result. It 7 is a reversal, and has to be faced as a reversal of 8 developments in Sixth Amendment jurisprudence since 9 Gideon.

10 Rather than adequate legal assistance being 11 essential or critical as a requirement for a fair trial, 12 the outcome determinative test assumes the defendant 13 could have a fair trial with incompetent counsel. This 14 is Fetts v. Brady in another guise. And frankly, I 15 don't see the difference, Your Honor, between adopting 16 an outcome determinative test in this situation and if a 17 judge and prosecutor get together before a case and say 18 to the defendant, listen, we have looked at the case,
19 the evidence is against you, you are not going to win
20 this anyway, so we don't even have to bother to appoint 21 counsel. The same principle is equally relevant if you 22 are going to start looking at outcome. If substance of 23 counsel is deprived and removed from the case, then the 24 form of counsel is meaningless.

25 QUESTION: May I ask just one question? Do

1 you think a different standard applies to retained
2 counsel and appointed counsel?

3 MR. SHAPIRO: No, Your Honor. I think Cairo
4 makes that clear, that the same standard should apply.

5 QUESTION: So that if this had been retained 6 counsel and he had made these judgments, you would make 7 the same argument?

8 MR. SHAPIRO: If he made the judgments without 9 the essential factual predicates, without conducting the 10 essential -- without performing the basic attributes of 11 counsel, yes, Your Honor.

12 QUESTION: Do you think the standard should be 13 different on collateral review than direct?

14 MR. SHAPIRO: No, Your Honor. I think the 15 Constitution says that the defendant is entitled to the 16 assistance of counsel, and this Court has said that that 17 includes the effective assistance, and in fact, our test 18 at all stages of the proceeding would balance society, 19 the fundamental importance of the Sixth Amendment right 20 to counsel and society's interest in finality of 21 judgments. So there would be no need to shift the 22 standards back and forth.

23 For example, under our test, first of all, or 24 the test proposed in our brief, first of all, the 25 petitioner, the defendant, would have to show a serious

1 error. Secondly, even if he shows a basic failing of 2 counsel, what is essentially removal of a basic 3 attribute of assistance from his trial, he would have to 4 show that that impaired the presentation of the defense.

5 Now, by showing the impairment in the 6 presentation of the defense, we are first of all 7 focusing on outcome in this standard. It is the first 8 glimpse of outcome, and the test really says that the 9 integrity of the adversary process must be preserved and 10 can only be preserved by competent counsel, but if in 11 that case there was no effect or adverse effect on the 12 defense, the adversary system functioned. It may have 13 had a few warts, in that counsel didn't do --

1                                    AFTERNOON SESSION

2                    CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Shapiro, you may 3 resume your argument.

4                    CRAL ARGUMENT OF RICHARD T. SHAPIRO, ESQ., 5                    ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT - RESUMED

6                    MR. SHAPIRO: Thank you, Your Honor.

7                    Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the 8 Court, there are three basic principles in this Court's 9 Sixth Amendment decisions that must be considered in 10 deciding whether to adopt a standard of prejudice that 11 assesses -- that focuses on the effect on outcome or one 12 that focuses on the effect on the defense.

13                   First, the standard must preserve the 14 fundamental nature of counsel in our system of justice.
15 Seccond, the standard should provide guidelines for the 16 lower courts to apply the Sixth Amendment in a variety 17 of situations. And third, as United States versus 18 Morrison points out, in the Sixth Amendment area, the 19 standard should accommodate society's interest in the 20 administration of criminal justice and finality of 21 judgments.

22                   I have already explained why the outcome 23 determinative test is an utter failure in preserving any 24 sense of the fundamental nature of the right to 25 counsel. In contrast, a standard that looks at the

1 effect on the defense breathes much needed substance
2 into the formal right of counsel. This is not a 3 question of undermining the adversary system by 4 questioning counsel's adequacy. It is a matter of 5 preserving an adversary system that assumes competent 6 counsel, and that assumes and indeed requires competent 7 counsel.

8           Secondly, the outcome determinative
9 concentration on result will not provide any guidelines 10 for the lower courts in Sixth Amendment analysis. It is 11 uniquely unsuited to develop a body of precedent that is 12 so necessary to develop standards as to the adequacy of 13 counsel's performance. In fact, the outcome 14 determinative test brings the Court full circle into the 15 subjective morass of the farce and mockery standard, and 16 it would be ironic and it is ironic for petitioners to 17 argue three weeks after the last circuit, the Second 18 Circuit, in Trapnel versus United States, rejected in an 19 en banc form, although it was a panel decision, the 20 farce and mockery standard, for the petitioners to argue 21 that this Court should resurrect what is nothing less 22 than an artifact of that outmoded standard.

23           QUESTION: Well, do you suggest that those are 24 the only two alternatives, the old Second Circuit case 25 and something else?

1                   MR. SHAPIRO: No, Your Honor. With respect to 2 the standard of competency of counsel, every circuit in 3 the country now has rejected farce and mockery for a 4 standard that focuses on the reasonably competent -- 5 whether counsel was reasonably competent suggests that 6 the experience -- this is an area, as the Court well 7 knows, where the circuits are -- have uniquely dealt 8 with most of the cases, most of the problems, and have 9 really functioned as laboratories for a long period of 10 time in dealing with questions of ineffective assistance 11 of counsel, and every circuit in experimenting with 12 different standards and looking at different tests has 13 ended up now --

14                  QUESTION: Supposing you have the correct
15 test, reasonable competence. Did this lawyer fail or 16 pass that test?

17                  MR. SHAPIRO: Your Honor, we would suggest 18 that in three basic respects Mr. Tunkey did not satisfy 19 that test. First of all, a counsel laboring under a 20 sense of hopelessness, as Mr. Tunkey was, is not the 21 zealous advocate that the Constitution requires and that 22 the sacred professional trust of an attorney requires.

23                  QUESTION: Eliminating perhaps two-thirds of 24 all the criminal cases that come to trial. At least 25 half.

1           MR. SHAPIRO: Your Honor -- well, a counsel
2     laboring under a sense of hopelessness is, if he fails 3     then as a result of that, he fails to conduct any 4     investigation into critical information that is 5     necessary for that particular case, he is totally 6     incapable at that point of either presenting a case or 7     of adequately advising his client.

8           Mr. Tunkey had -- Mr. Washington was deprived 9     of all the essential attributes of counsel, and we 10    suggest that under the reasonably competent standard, 11    this is far below what the range of competence
12    demanded --

13           QUESTION: Well, Mr. Shapiro, the Court of 14    Appeals below didn't apply the standard that you 15    suggest, did it?

16           MR. SHAPIRO: It applied the reasonable 17    competency standard, Your Honor.

18           QUESTION: Do you think it did?

19           MR. SHAPIRO: With respect to assessing the 20    standard of prejudice -- with respect to assessing 21    counsel's performance. With respect to the standard of 22    prejudice, it applied a test that it extrapolated from 23    United States versus Fradey, and as we pointed out in 24    our briefs, the principles in procedural default cases 25    are inapplicable when assessing Sixth Amendment rights.

1 QUESTION: Well, I know, but are you content
2 with -- are you defending the standard that the Court of 3 Appeals applied here?

4 MR. SHAPIRO: Your Honor, we are defending the 5 result. The result --

6 QUESTION: No, I am asking if you are 7 defending the standard.

8 MR. SHAPIRO: We are defending the Court of 9 Appeals' focus on the adequacy of counsel's performance 10 as the relevant --

11 QUESTION: Please, Mr. Shapiro. Are you
12 defending the standard the Court of Appeals applied?

13 MR. SHAPIRO: We would suggest that the legal 14 standard should be modified.

15 QUESTION: All right. If that is so, we don't 16 apply it here, do we? Don't we send it back and tell 17 them to correct it, if we agree with you, to apply the 18 correct standard?

19 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, Your Honor.

20 QUESTION: So that is what we ought to do then?

21 MR. SHAPIRO: You --

22 QUESTION: If we agree with you.

23 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, if you agree with me, you 24 will remand the case to the Court of Appeals for 25 application of the correct standard. Yes, Your Honor.

1 The outcome determinative test not only resurrects farce
2 and mockery, but it compounds the farce and mockery
3 problems by forcing courts to engage in speculative 4 recreations and revisions of trial records to determine 5 what the hypothetical result would be of the new 6 procedure.

7 QUESTION: How is that different -- How is 8 that different, counsel, from a motion for a new trial 9 on the grounds of newly discovered evidence?

10 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, it is different in two 11 basic respects, Your Honor. One is that the motion for 12 new trial is not a motion that attacks or deals with the 13 Sixth Amendment right to counsel, so that's -- Second is 14 that a motion for new trial assumes that the defendant 15 had a fair trial, competent counsel. Then what it does 16 on the basis of newly discovered evidence, it says that 17 there was something wrong with the judgment, something 18 wrong with the integrity of the verdict, and in that 19 case the focus should be directly on the integrity, 20 whether the new evidence would have changed the verdict.

21 That is not what we have here. This Court has 22 already said in Gideon you can't have a fair trial
23 without adequate counsel. So a motion for a new trial 24 ignores the major premise of Gideon -- The motion for 25 new trial analogy of the Solicitor General ignores the

1 major premise, the major constitutional premise of 2 Gideon.

3 QUESTION: Well, let me just be sure I
4 understand you. You would apply in the constitutional 5 presentation of omitted evidence because counsel was 6 incompetent, as you contend this counsel was, you would 7 say that that should more readily result in relief than 8 just a motion for new trial based on evidence that could 9 not be obtained, newly discovered evidence?

10 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes. If the -- 11 QUESTION: You would say even though the 12 evidence would not suffice to support a motion for new 13 trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, 14 nevertheless, as a constitutional matter, a new trial is 15 compelled because the lawyer failed to assemble that 16 evidence.

17 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, Your Honor. I suggest we 18 are dealing with apples and oranges. A motion for new 19 trial assumes the very facts that are in issue.

20 QUESTION: I understand it assumes competent 21 counsel, but the impact on the fairness of the 22 proceeding is exactly the same in the sense that there 23 is evidence omitted, isn't it?

24 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, the evidence was omitted, 25 but the --

1           QUESTION: For a different reason.

2           MR. SHAPIRO: The evidence was omitted. By 3 the admission of that evidence, the entire basis of this 4 Court's Sixth Amendment decisions has been undermined.
5 There has been a flaw in the adversary system, and there
6 has been a --

7           QUESTION: Yes, but you are assuming a lawyer 8 who was competent in all other respects except that he 9 failed to assemble this evidence, if I understand you 10 correctly.

11          MR. SHAPIRO: Well, and we are also assuming 12 that you have to speculate about how the failure to 13 investigate, not the failure to discover, because if 14 counsel conducts a reasonable investigation, there is no 15 claim of ineffective assistance of counsel. It is only 16 when he fails to --

17          QUESTION: No, but you know what he would have 18 found here.

19          MR. SHAPIRO: -- conduct --

20          QUESTION: There is no dispute, is there, 21 about what he would have found here with a reasonable
22 investigation?

23          MR. SHAPIRO: Yes.

24          QUESTION: So why should there be a greater 25 chance for success on collateral attack when the man was

1 represented by an otherwise competent counsel than if he 2 just couldn't find the evidence? I don't understand it.

3 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, for one, Your Honor, it is 4 because the failures of counsel bring into question the 5 integrity of the entire judgment in the same way, and 6 that is the teaching of Gideon, the teaching of Gideon
7 that you don't have a fair trial without adequate 8 counsel, in the same way that the lack of the newly 9 discovered evidence called into question the integrity 10 of the final judgment. The analogy is a pure analogy.
11 You can't have a fair, fundamentally fair judgment 12 without adequate counsel.

13 The second respect is that the test that we 14 propose and the test in the Court of Appeals would 15 ensure that even if there was no, if there was 16 absolutely no effect on the outcome, that is, the state 17 could demonstrate that the undiscovered evidence was 18 harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, the defendant would 19 not be entitled to relief. It preserves --

20 QUESTION: Well, I understand the harmless
21 beyond a reasonable doubt, but you would draw a 22 distinction in this case between two lawyers, one who 23 says what this man said, that I was so discouraged I
24 didn't pursue this lead, and another lawyer who said, I 25 didn't think it would do any good even if I could have

1 found exactly what I now know was available. They would 2 produce different results in your constitutional --

3 MR. SHAPIRO: No, Your Honor. I think that if 4 the attorneys -- if the attorney did not conduct a 5 reasonable investigation, there would be a difference
6 between an attorney who conducted --

7 QUESTION: Well, he didn't assemble the 8 evidence that's omitted here. That's --

9 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, if he conducted a 10 reasonable investigation and did not assemble this 11 evidence, that would be something different than if 12 counsel conducted -- failed to -- if counsel conducted a 13 reasonable investigation and made strategic or tactical 14 decisions, and that is because the counsel in the second 15 situation has fulfilled the essential attribute of an 16 attorney. He has conducted the investigation and made 17 decisions predicated on that investigation.

18 QUESTION: Couldn't a very experienced counsel 19 confronted with that simply analyze it and say that even 20 if we got the man's minister of his church, his Sunday 21 school teacher, his Boy Scout leader, his mother, and 22 his father, it wouldn't do any good in view of the 23 grossness of the evidence, and make that as a tactical 24 decision?

25 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, for one, Your Honor --

1 QUESTION: Would you say that is ineffective?

2 MR. SHAPIRO: For one, Your Honor, that is not 3 what this Mr. Tunkey did. And secondly --

4 QUESTION: Well, I am asking a hypothetical
5 question.

6 MR. SHAPIRO: Secondly, Your Honor, I would 7 say if he did not conduct any investigation, any 8 reasonable investigation into the evidence that is 9 critical to a capital sentencing decision, then I think 10 he is in no position to make the kinds of judgments that 11 are appropriate for what evidence to present and what 12 evidence not to present. It is a basic failing of 13 counsel that is clear in this Court's Sixth Amendment 14 decisions.

15 QUESTION: Lawyers do this all the time, do 16 they not? When clients say, go do this, go do that, 17 lawyers make tactical decisions based on their own 18 experience and what has been suggested as the value of 19 some undisclosed piece of evidence.

20 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, if they exercise sound 21 professional judgment in making that decision, then, 22 Your Honor, it is not incompetent assistance.

23 QUESTION: How do we know that he didn't do 24 that here?

25 MR. SHAPIRO: Because he said the reason the

1 District Court found as a reason for his failure to 2 conduct an investigation was a sense of hopelessness.

3 QUESTION: No, that's --

4 MR. SHAPIRO: Not --

5 QUESTION: We are right where we started, at 6 least in my hypothetical. If he concludes that it is 7 hopeless and useless to put in that evidence, then you
8 would say that he must do it on pain of being found 9 guilty of ineffective assistance?

10 MR. SHAPIRO: Your Honor, that is not what Mr.
11 Tunkey did. He failed to conduct an investigation out
12 of a sense of hopelessness. But in his closing argument
13 he tried to make the very points that his investigation 14 would have allowed him to factually support. Finally --

15 QUESTION: Mr. Shapiro, at least twice you 16 have said that the Gideon decision says that the 17 defendant must have adequate assistance of counsel. I 18 don't find that language in Gideon. All it says is 19 assistance of counsel.

20 MR. SHAPIRO: It says, Your Honor, in Gideon, 21 it says that the right to counsel is fundamental to a 22 fair trial. In Cairo versus --

23 QUESTION: You said that Gideon referred to 24 the term "adequate assistance of counsel."

25 MR. SHAPIRO: No, Your Honor. If I said that,

1 I misspoke, but in Cairo versus Sullivan, the Court has 2 made clear that the states are precluded from conducting 3 trials without adequate legal assistance.

4 QUESTION: Mr. Shapiro, did you cross
5 petition?

6 MR. SHAPIRO: No, Your Honor.

7 QUESTION: And yet you are attacking the 8 standard the Court of Appeals proposed?

9 MR. SHAPIRO: Your Honor, we are saying,
10 stating that the legal standard was incorrect. We agree
11 with the judgment of the Court of Appeals which rejected 12 an outcome determinative standard and adopted the 13 standard that focuses --

14 QUESTION: But you want -- But the result of 15 your proposal would be a different judgment.

16 MR. SHAPIRO: Your Honor, well, I am
17 suggesting that the same judgment --

18 QUESTION: I thought if you wanted a different 19 judgment, you would have to cross petition.

20 MR. SHAPIRO: No, Your Honor, it wouldn't be a 21 different judgment, because the case would still have 22 to --

23 QUESTION: I thought we would send it back to 24 the Court of Appeals to reassess it.

25 MR. SHAPIRO: The case would still have to 1 be --

2 QUESTION: The Court of Appeals has now
3 remanded to the District Court.

4 MR. SHAPIRO: The case would still have to be 5 remanded, Your Honor, under our test because --

6 QUESTION: Not to the District Court.

7 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, it would, Your Honor, 8 because there has been no determination of whether the 9 counsel's error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, 10 which is the third feature of our test, and which also 11 is the way in which our test accommodates society's 12 interest in finality in the same way and in a much more 13 compelling way it accommodates the Sixth Amendment right 14 and society's interest in finality by focusing on 15 outcome at the appropriate stage in the analysis, when 16 requiring the prosecution to establish that the result 17 would not have been different beyond a -- that the error 18 was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt.

19 The state's test does not accommodate at all.
20 What it does is, it establishes that no matter how 21 severely defense counsel impaired the defense, how 22 incompetent counsel was, there is no relief under the 23 Sixth Amendment if the result would not have been 24 different. This is not an accommodation of the Sixth 25 Amendment and the goal of finality. It is an utter

1 disregard for the fundamental nature of the Sixth 2 Amendment.

3           In contrast, the test that we have suggested 4 is rigorous, it has functioned well in the circuits, it 5 has been adopted by virtually -- by every circuit except 6 the D.C. circuit as a way of assessing prejudice or 7 focus on counsel's performance, and it has been applied
8 with rigor. There are few cases where counsel's 9 performance has resulted in the reversal of conviction, 10 and there has been no indication in the circuits that 11 they should abandon such a focus on the impairment of 12 the defense because of any problems they are 13 experiencing with the standard. It is a standard that 14 is rigorous, it is workable, it has functioned
15 effectively, and it has accommodated the Sixth Amendment 16 values and the fundamental nature of the right to 17 counsel and finality.

18           The wealth of experience that has been 19 developed in the circuits and the unanimous consensus in 20 the laboratories that have functioned in this area of 21 assessing claims of ineffective assistance of counsel 22 should be embraced wholeheartedly by the Court and not 23 abandoned.

24           Thank you.

25           CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Do you have anything

1 further counsel? You have two minutes remaining.

2 ORAL ARGUMENT OF CAROLYN M. SNURKOWSKI, ESQ.

3 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS - REBUTTAL

4 MS. SNURKOWSKI: I just have -- oh, thank 5 you. Thank you, Your Honor.

6 The state would contend that the assessment
7 here that there was a failure to investigate or produce 8 witnesses, that is a limited review of what 9 investigation is supposed to be. If you look at this 10 record, you will find that Mr. Tunkey did on numerous 11 occasions talk with Mr. Washington with regard to the 12 case.

13 He did discuss, as a matter of fact, at the 14 close of the state's case, at the proceeding, the 15 sentencing proceeding, Mr. Tunkey and Mr. Washington 16 spoke with regard to what evidence should be presented.
17 At that point the court asked, well, are you going to 18 present any evidence? He said, no, Your Honor. And 19 then he proceeded to go through why certain aggravating 20 circumstances were appropriate, why certain mitigating 21 circumstances may or may not be appropriate, through 22 what he had produced in his sentencing brief.

23 And I might add, we need to look not just at 24 what the allegation is, but what the man did, what Mr.
25 Tunkey did in behalf of Mr. Washington with regard to

1 sentencing. The record reflects that he produced a 2 sentencing brief which detailed those aggravating and 3 mitigating circumstances and non-statutory mitigating 4 circumstances which Mr. Tunkey felt were appropriate in 5 his case. As a matter of fact, he went so far to 6 suggest that remorse, the fact that Mr. Washington pled 7 guilty, that he cooperated, those were all non-statutory 8 mitigating factors that the court should consider.

9 He also argued vehemently with regard to what 10 aggravating circumstances should not be applicable, and 11 indeed he, prior to the sentencing proceeding, was able 12 to get a rap sheet of Mr. Washington's excluded. He was 13 also instrumental in getting the trial court to not 14 consider one aggravating circumstance which would have 15 been appropriately applied in this particular case. He 16 convinced them of that.

17 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Your time has expired.

18 MS. SNURKOWSKI: That was it. That was 19 quick. Thank you.

20 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, counsel.
21 The case is submitted.

22 (Whereupon, at 1:18 o'clock p.m., the case in 23 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
