2 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Shapiro, I think
3 you may proceed when you are ready.

4 MR. SHAPIRO: Thank you, Mr. Chief Justice.

5 CRAL ARGUMENT OF ROBERT J. SHAPIRO, ESQ.,

6 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER

7 MR. SHAPIRO: May it please the Court, this 8 case is here on a writ of certiorari to the Second 9 District Court of Appeal of the State of Florida.

10 The question presented is whether the equal 11 protection and due process clauses of the Fourteenth 12 Amendment prohibits a court from considering or from 13 relying upon a subsequent interracial marriage of the 14 custodial parent as a ground for ordering a change of 15 custody.

16 Now, if I may, the facts are straightforward 17 in this case, and I would like to go through them very 18 quickly and get right to the argument.

19 QUESTION: Is it your contention that that's 20 the only ground on which the judgment is based?

21 MR. SHAPRIC: Yes, sir. In this case, 22 absolutely.

23 And I'd like to explain how that occurred. We 24 had a final judgment of dissolution of marriage in this 25 case between the petitioner and the respondent, both of

1 whom are white. The custody of their three-year-old 2 daughter was awarded to the petitioner, the mother here.

3 Subsequently, the husband -- the father, I'm 4 sorry -- filed a petition for modification. He alleged 5 in his petition that the mother was living with a black 6 man who she later married, that the child had two bouts 7 of head lice, and that the child had been seen wearing a 8 mildewed dress.

9 Now, at the hearing on this matter, the final 10 hearing, the parties and their new spouses testified, 11 and the report of the Circuit Court counsel was 12 accepted. The Order which the Circuit Court entered on 13 March 1, 1982 changed custody and awarded it to the 14 father.

15 There were no findings made regarding the 16 father's secondary allegations -- and it was called 17 "secondary allegations" by the trial judge -- of the 18 mildewed dress or the head lice. The court noted that 19 she had lived with man before marrying him.

20 But the court also held that each of the 21 parents, the father and the mother here, were devoted 22 parents and that each had remarried respectable spouses.

23 And then in the important phrase in this case, 24 the court stated: "This Court feels that, despite the 25 strides that have been made in bettering relations

1 between the races in this country, it is inevitable that 2 Melanie will, if allowed to remain in her present 3 situation and attain school age and, thus, more 4 vulnerable to peer pressures, suffer from the social 5 stigmatization that is sure to come."

6 Now, it's important to note that this is not a 7 neglect case. There was no finding of neglect, contrary 8 to respondent's arguments in his brief. There was no 9 finding about lack of health care, lack of hygiene, lack 10 of clothing or any type of neglect, and certainly no 11 finding of any inability to cope on the part of the 12 mother.

13 It's important to remember that in Florida,
14 once a custody degree has been entered, the noncustodial
15 parent has an extraordinary burden in order to change 16 that. That person must, by competent substantial 17 evidence, show that there has been a substantial change 18 in circumstances, and, No. 2, that there have been 19 adverse effects on the child. And this is because the 20 focus is the best interest of the children, the best 21 interest of the child.

22 And if it cannot be shown that there was a 23 substantial change in circumstances and an adverse 24 effect on the child, then it has not been shown that the 25 original determination as to what was in the best

1 interest of the child should be disturbed.

2 And the reason for this is that the custody 3 determinations are not res judicata, but they must be 4 given some measure of finality. Otherwise, people would 5 be changing custody on a regular basis.

6 QUESTION: How old is the child today?

7 MR. SHAPIRO: The child is six years old today.

8 QUESTION: And is presently living with the 9 natural father?

10 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, Ma'am. Living with the 11 natural father in Texas, where he moved immediately 12 after the custody determination was made in March of '82.

13 Now, our position is, and I believe that it's 14 clear from the plain meaning of the words in the Order, 15 that the Order was tainted with race, racial 16 consideration, which renders it presumptively invalid.
17 No other case so clearly rests a custody determination 18 on racial considerations, at least that I can find in my 19 search of cases.

20 The child court took the remarriage of the 21 mother into consideration solely because her new husband 22 was black. He did not consider the impact of the 23 father's remarriage because his new wife was white.

24 Bear in mind that this was foreshadowed by the 25 fact that the court ordered a social investigation only

1 of the mother, despite the fact that a motion for social 2 investigation requested a social investigation of both 3 parties.

4 Having taken consideration of the remarriage, 5 he, then, assumed that certain consequences would occur
6 as a result of the interracial marriage. And by this, I
7 mean that the child would suffer social stigmatization 8 as a result of the interracial marriage.

9 There is not one scintilla of evidence, nor is 10 there a finding of fact that there is any adverse effect 11 as a result of this interracial marriage. The Equal 12 Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment embodies 13 the belief that all persons are created equal. Racial 14 hatred and prejudice have no place in our system of law, 15 but when this trial court held that Melanie, the child, 16 would suffer social stigmatization as a result of the 17 interracial marriage, he gave the racial bias of few the 18 force of law.

19 Now, it's clear from this Court's cases, such 20 as Cooper v. Aaron, Shelley v. Kraemer, Watson v. City
21 of Memphis, that a court cannot bow to pressure, public 22 pressure to protect potential victims of race 23 discrimination from prejudice; that the desire to 24 protect a person from racial prejudice does not justify 25 departing from the fundamental command of the 1 Constitution that there be equal justice under law.

2 And the concept of equal justice under law is 3 so central to this country that it is engraved, carved 4 into the stone of this building.

5 QUESTION: Mr. Shapirc, do you think that a 6 state could, in placing a child for adoption, consider 7 the biological characteristics of the adoptive parents 8 in an effort to place the child in a family with similar 9 characteristics of the baby or child being placed?

10 MR. SHAPIRO: Of course, as you know, Your 11 Honor, the question of adoption is much different than 12 we have here because --

13 QUESTION: I know that.

14 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, Ma'am.

15 QUESTION: What is your position?

16 MR. SHAPIRO: All right.

17 My position is that with -- and I think the 18 courts have said this -- that the concept of adoption is 19 different, because the state is conferring a right upon 20 a person who is not a biological parent and, therefore, 21 as long as there is no racial slur involved in taking 22 that into consideration, that it may -- and as long as 23 this is not automatic, as it was here, consideration of 24 race -- that it may take race into consideration.

25 And this was in the Drummond case, which was

1 the Fifth Circuit case, which made reference to this 2 Court's case in Smith v. Foster Family case, O-f-f-e-r.
3 And there's a very, very big distinction between the 4 biological relationship and the state-conferred 5 relationship.

6 QUESTION: Of course, if your client regains
7 custody, Mr. Palmore may seek to adopt, might he not?
8 Then you would have the problems that Justice O'Connor 9 has suggested.

10 MR. SHAPIRO: Well, but the problem there is, 11 there would be, then, a conflict between the two 12 biological parents. And he is free to petition for 13 modification again in the state courts at the conclusion 14 of this proceeding, but we ask that the slate be wiped 15 clean. That's what we're asking for.

16 QUESTION: Does he have other children, 17 incidentally?

18 MR. SHAPIRO: Who are we talking about:

19 QUESTION: Mr. Palmore.

20 MR. SHAPIRO: Yes, he does.

21 QUESTION: By a prior marriage?

22 MR. SHAPIRO: I don't think it was a 23 marriage. I'm not absolutely certain. I know that he 24 does have another biological child of his.

25 But I can say that whatever is in this trial

1 court's Order determined this custody determination.
2 And he found the man to be respectable, as was the 3 spouse, the new spouse of the father.

4 There's no question, he says in the first 5 paragraph, about the respectability of these new spouses.

6 Now, the other major point in this case, aside 7 from importing racial prejudice of society into the 8 Order of a court, is the aspect that the mother was 9 being punished for having exercised her right to marry a 10 person, without regard to race.

11 In Loving v. Virginia, this Court stated that 12 a statute which provided imprisonment for interracial 13 marriage violated the Equal Protection Clause. In that 14 case, the interracial remarriage itself triggered the 15 penalty of imprisonment. In this case, the interracial 16 marriage itself triggered the forfeiture of the child, 17 with no facts to justify the penalty.

18 The respondent misconstrues the Loving case by 19 suggesting that the mother here is -- cannot invoke the 20 Equal Protection Clause because she is not black. The 21 fact of the matter is, Loving makes it very clear that 22 either party of an interracial marriage can invoke the 23 Fourteenth Amendment if the marriage is being infringed 24 upon.

25 Now, we're not asking this Court to substitute

1 its discretion for the trial court regarding any fitness 2 determination or any determination of the like. The 3 trial court has already made these findings regarding 4 the fitness of the parties. There is no doubt about 5 this.

6 We seek a ruling that the Circuit Court's 7 Order applied an unconstitutional rule of law by relying 8 on the fact of the interracial marriage and by allowing 9 the existence of racial prejudice in society to dictate 10 the nature of this custody proceeding and the Order it 11 produced.

12 We're not asking for a ruling that the mother 13 should be the custodial parent for all time. This we 14 cannot have, because of what I indicated earlier about 15 the fact that custody determinations are not res 16 judicata.

17 But again, we ask that the slate be wiped 18 clean, and again the father is entitled to file another 19 petition for modification if he so desires, but one 20 which does not contain racial grounds, and contains 21 other legitimate grounds for change of custody, if he so 22 desires.

23 Therefore, we seek an Order revising and 24 vacating this case, with instructions to the Second 25 District Court of Appeal to set aside the trial court's

1 Order on modification, thus restoring the parties to 2 their original status under the original dissolution of 3 marriage final judgment.

4 I have some more time, and I'd like to reserve 5 it for rebuttal, if I may, unless you have some 6 questions of me right now.

7 QUESTION: Mr. Hawtrey.

8 ORAL ARGUMENT OF JOHN E. HAWTREY

9 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENT

10 MR. HAWTREY: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it 11 please the Court, I think before we can determine that 12 there is an impermissible classification in this 13 particular case, there's at least six questions that 14 have to be answered in favor of the petitioner's 15 position -- the first one being, and probably the most 16 important -- is what relationship was before the trial
17 court? The second one is, to what extent did the state 18 have any interest in that relationship? The third, did 19 the trial court classify the relationship? The fourth, 20 did the classification, if any, result in some form of 21 action by the state without reasonable relation to the 22 classification?. Fifth, and alternatively to the last 23 question, was the classification, if any, suspect as the 24 rules dealing with suspect classes tell us? And, if 25 suspect, was there a compelling state interest to 1 classify?

2 As I've indicated, I think that the most 3 important question to determine whether this is an 4 impermissible classification is the first one: What 5 relationship was before the trial court?

6 We would suggest that the relationship before 7 the trial court was the parent-child relationship; that 8 the parent-new spouse relationship was collateral, was 9 secondary.

10 The cases that deal with the relationships in 11 custody cases, in adoption cases, in the foster care 12 cases, all seem to indicate that the parent-new spouse 13 relationship is secondary.

14 I think the best one is the situation that 15 existed in the Smith v. the Organization --

16 QUESTION: May I just ask, Mr. Hawtrey, if the 17 parent-new spouse relationship is secondary, as you 18 argue, it nevertheless was what controlled the decision 19 in this case, wasn't it?

20 MR. HAWTREY: I believe that the position of 21 the petitioner is that it controlled in this case.

22 QUESTION: Well, isn't that what the trial
23 judge said?

24 MR. HAWTREY: I differ from that opinion. I
25 think that the trial judge was dealing with more facts

1 than merely the fact of race.

2 MR. HAWTREY: But he was dealing, was he not, 3 with the new spouse relationship as the reason for 4 changing custody? The mother's new relationship with 5 the man who moved into the home and then later married 6 her.

7 MR. HAWTREY: It would be the respondent's 8 position, Your Honor, that the relationship was how the 9 mother treated that new relationship as regards to the 10 child, and not the new relationship per se.

11 I think it's clear from the reading of that 12 paragraph that counsel refers to, that there are three 13 parts to that paragraph. The first part takes the new 14 relationship out of consideration per se -- the 15 relationship per se out of consideration. The middle 16 part deals with how the mother reacts to that 17 relationship, and the third one is how the mother reacts 18 to the child, or how the court expects the mother to 19 react, the interplay between the mother and child as it 20 relates to the new marriage.

21 I think that's significant, in that the court 22 is progressing, if you would, through the requirements 23 of classification.

24 QUESTION: I must say I'm puzzled.

25 I thought your brief had, in essence, assumed

1 that that was what caused the change of custody, the new 2 marriage. But you now seem to be saying that, really, 3 there are other factors involved.

4 And I had read the sentence that your opponent
5 read, "The Court feels about the strides in race 6 relations" and the like, as indicating that the judge 7 was concerned about the fact that the child would be 8 living in a home with a mixed marriage, an interracial 9 marriage.

10 You don't think that influenced his decision?

11 MR. HAWTREY: I think it influenced his 12 decision --

13 QUESTION: Well, then, isn't it -- don't we 14 have the question whether it is a proper factor for him 15 to have considered? Isn't that before us?

16 MR. HAWTREY: In part. It's a very secondary 17 part, however.

18 QUESTION: What was the primary part?

19 MR. HAWTREY: The court -- the trial court's 20 primary, in our opinion, the primary feeling was that 21 the mother couldn't cope with the new relationship.

22 QUESTION: You think he said that in his 23 opinion?

24 MR. HAWTREY: I think that that paragraph, 25 when read together as a single paragraph, says that.

1 Yes, Your Honor.

2 QUESTION: I see.

3 QUESTION: Would you mind telling me where --

4 we're looking at paragraph 5 of page 26. Is that what 5 you have reference to?

6 MR. HAWTREY: The father's evident resentment?

7 QUESTION: Yes.

8 MR. HAWTREY: Yes, Your Honor.

9 QUESTION: Well, where is it -- the paragraph

10 there is the interpretation that you just suggested?

11 Where is that?

12 MR. HAWTREY: I think that the --

13 QUESTION: That he was concerned that the 14 mother could not cope with the new relationship. Where 15 does that appear?

16 MR. HAWTREY: Your Honor, I'm reading that 17 into that paragraph because --

18 QUESTION: Well, that's what I'm asking.

19 Where are you reading it in?

20 MR. HAWTREY: Because the court first struck

21 the respondent -- my client's resentment to the 22 mother's choice. That's the first sentence.

23 The second sentence --

24 QUESTION: The first simply says that his

25 resentment of the mother's choice is not sufficient to 1 rest custody.

2 MR. HAWTREY: Precisely, Your Honor.

3 The court was saying that we're not going to 4 consider this on a racial ground, purely racial ground.

5 QUESTION: And then he goes on to consider it 6 on purely racial grounds.

7 MR. HAWTREY: And the second -

8 QUESTION: Doesn't he? Doesn't he?

9 MR. HAWTREY: Excuse me?

10 QUESTION: Then the judge goes on to consider 11 it on purely racial grounds.

12 MR. HAWTREY: I don't think so. The second 13 and third sentences both deal with the mother's conduct 14 and the mother's ability to cope.

15 The third sentence, or the fourth sentence is 16 the one that deals with the future. But if we relate it 17 to the first -- one of the first three sentences -- we 18 have to, in my way of thinking, relate it to the two 19 immediately preceding sentences, rather than relating it 20 back to the first sentence.

21 It doesn't logically go with the first 22 sentence.

23 QUESTION: I understand your argument.

24 QUESTION: But Mr. Hawtrey, in view of the 25 opening -- if we're going to parse this thing, in view

1 of the opening clause of the fourth sentence, I would 2 think your argument is rather difficult to sustain.

3 If this is the -- is it the fourth sentence 4 that begins the fourth line from the bottom of page 26?
5 "This Court feels that, despite the strides that have 6 been made in bettering relations between the races in 7 this country, it is inevitable that Melanie will, if 8 allowed to remain in her present situation and attain 9 school age, and thus more vulnerable to peer pressure, 10 suffer from the social stigmatization that is sure to 11 come."

12 Now, if the circuit judge was talking about 13 the things mentioned in sentences one, two, and three, 14 rather than the race business in sentence one, why would 15 he begin the fourth sentence with about "Despite the 16 strides that have been made in bettering relations 17 between the races"?

18 MR. HAWTREY: Because I think he's referring 19 back to the mother's incapability of handling that.

20 QUESTION: Where, specifically, does he speak 21 to the mother's incapability?

22 MR. HAWTREY: I don't think he -- he 23 definitely doesn't say it say it specifically. But when 24 he talks about -- first talking about the mother 25 bringing the man into the home, and the business about

1 carrying on sexual relationships with him, the court
2 goes on to say, "Such action tended to place
3 gratification of her own desires ahead of her concern 4 with her children's future welfare."

5 And then the court immediately talks about the 6 child's future welfare. And it seems evident to me -- I 7 wasn't at the trial court level, but it seems to me, in 8 reading the decision, that when the court talks about 9 the mother's intending to place her own gratification 10 before her child's future welfare, and then talks about 11 the future welfare, the court is saying, in essence, 12 that there is an ability of the mother to cope, and 13 therefore the child will suffer.

14 I think additionally, that the relationship, 15 the parent-spouse relation -- new spouse relationship -- 16 hasn't, to my way of thinking, a recognized liberty 17 interest or a right in family privacy, both of which are 18 dealt with in the cases dealing with classification of 19 family interests.

20 I don't think there's been a showing that 21 there is either a recognized liberty interest or a 22 recognized right to family privacy.

23 QUESTION: Well, but you don't need a 24 recognized liberty interest if your claim is under the 25 Equal Protection Clause, rather than the Due Process

1 Clause, do you?

2 MR. HAWTREY: That's correct. But the way
3 that I have read the briefs that have been filed for the 4 mother, there lacks a distinction between due process 5 and equal protection; that the tendency is, is to 6 create, I think it's been classified as a per se 7 impermissible classification, which I would classify in 8 the nature of a suspect class, rather than merely 9 investigating whether or not there was a classification.

10 At this point in time, when I'm dealing only 11 with -- when I'm dealing with the relationship before 12 the court, I'm trying to isolate that question.

13 I think that it's clear that if we look at a 14 scales of justice analogy in this particular case, and 15 we put the parent-child relationship on one side, we can 16 put either the best interests doctrine or the material 17 and substantial change doctrine, as it applies in the 18 Florida law, on the other scale.

19 But if you put the parent-new spouse 20 relationship in one scale, I don't think that there has 21 been a showing at least of what we're weighing that 22 against, what the trial court was weighing that against 23 on the other side.

24 QUESTION: If you suggest that this judgment 25 really didn't substantially rest on a racial

1 consideration, you must inevitably claim that there were 2 nonracial grounds for the action.

3 And if that's the case, you should be able to 4 win another custody case where it's made perfectly clear 5 that there's no racial factor be involved.

6 MR. HAWTREY: That's correct, Your Honor.

7 QUESTION: Is that right?

8 MR. HAWTREY: That's correct.

9 QUESTION: I take it your colleague on the 10 other side suggests that there could be another custody 11 case here. And you seem to think there are ample 12 nonracial grounds for leaving custody where it is now.

13 MR. HAWTREY: I believe that's correct.

14 There's no question that ongoing litigation in 15 this area could take place.

16 QUESTION: Well, what nonracial matter were 17 you talking about when you said she couldn't cope?

18 MR. HAWTREY: Justice Marshall, I understand 19 that there was -- that the thing that she was coping 20 with was a racial matter. But as regards to the 21 parent-child relationship, it was her inability to 22 relate to her child, not her inability to relate to the 23 marriage.

24 I think that her ability or inability to 25 relate to the marriage falls in the category of the 1 Loving case.

2 QUESTION: I thought you admitted that she 3 couldn't cope with the racial problem.

4 Now, do you or do you not take that position?

5 MR. HAWTREY: I don't think that she can 6 relate that to her child. I think that's what the court 7 was saying. Since I wasn't at the --

8 QUESTION: If we don't agree with you as to 9 the reading of the judge's remarks, and if there is 10 really a racial slur, as your colleague says, in the 11 case -- let's just assume that we disagree with you and 12 say, counsel, we just disagree with that reading.

13 Now -- and just assume that we're right in 14 reading the judge's remarks that way. What would be 15 your suggestion to us as to what we ought to do?

16 MR. HAWTREY: I think the next step is to look 17 to see if there is either a compelling or rational 18 reason for the court's action, whether there has been a 19 showing that there has been an adverse -- I think it's 20 been characterized as coercion not to marry or a penalty 21 for marriage -- whether or not there is anything in the 22 trial court's decision or in the record of the state 23 courts of Florida to show that.

24 QUESTION: No. If we read what the judge said 25 as saying the mother loses custody here because she

1 married a black man -- suppose we just read it that way.

2 What should we do about it?

3 MR. HAWTREY: If that's the sole question 4 before this Court, that the sole reason, that there was 5 no others, then the trial court has classified the 6 mother.

7 QUESTION: Has made a racial -- has used a 8 racial reason, anyway, for determining the case.

9 MR. HAWTREY: Determining -- yeah. She's been 10 put into a classification.

11 The next question is whether there's any 12 showing in the case or not, has there been a adverse or 13 a state action that does not either have a rational 14 relationship to the classification, or a compelling 15 state interest.

16 QUESTION: Would you apply the arguments 17 you're advancing to every interracial marriage, without 18 respect to what races were involved?

19 Suppose, to take an extreme, you had American 20 citizens, one of China Mainland, and one of -- or Taiwan
21 -- and an American, or Korean, or Vietnam, or Thailand, 22 whatever. Would you advance these same arguments?

23 MR. HAWTREY: I think that the question is, if 24 we're going to classify, then how are we going to use 25 that classification? In an adoption suit or a state

1 custody suit, where it is the state taking custody, or 2 as in the Smith case where we're dealing with foster
3 families, I think that there are -- there has been shown 4 to be reasonable state relationships, that the best
5 interest of the child is a compelling state interest 6 that override the classification.

7 QUESTION: Well, isn't your argument, when 8 it's boiled down, really almost this: that assuming, 9 accepting the idea that this is a racially-based 10 decision, it is -- it should be approved because of the 11 interests of the child in the present attitudes that you 12 suggest in your brief exist about these problems?

13 MR. HAWTREY: That the state may justifiably 14 classify that relationship, yes. I believe that's 15 true. And I believe it would apply to any mixed race 16 marriage.

17 QUESTION: Don't you think the court in this 18 case thought so, to?

19 MR. HAWTREY: I'm not sure of your question.

20 If the question is do I think that the court 21 changed the relationship merely because of the 22 interracial marriage, and that the best interests of the 23 child would not be served but for that decision, I don't 24 agree with that.

25 I think that the court can classify the 1 relationship and still consider the child. After all,

2 the court was -- had the opportunity to view the mother,
3 to listen to arguments, to listen to all the evidence, 4 and to read that in as a adverse relationship, that the 5 modification was an adverse relationship, in other 6 words, it was either coercion or a penalty, it isn't in 7 the record and it certainly isn't in the judgment of the 8 court.

9 QUESTION: Mr. Hawtrey, I don't think I 10 understand yet.

11 If all that we had was a finding by the court 12 of the interracial marriage, and that alone was the 13 basis for changing custody, do you support that and 14 think that any of our cases would permit that?

15 MR. HAWTREY: I hope I'm not supporting that.
16 What I am suggesting is, is that unless there is --

17 QUESTION: It sounded like you were. And do 18 you think any of our cases permit that?

19 MR. HAWTREY: To answer your second question, 20 no, I don't believe that any of the cases support that.
21 But what I think that there has to be is a showing that 22 that is a adverse effect on the child or a penalty or 23 coercion to the mother.

24 This is -- we don't have a case here we have a 25 state action that's going to throw the mother in jail or

1 fine her. We have to read into

2 QUESTION: No. All you're going to do is take 3 her child away.

4 MR. HAWTREY: We have to read into it that 5 that is a penalty or coercion --

6 QUESTION: And that's not as important, is 7 it? Taking the child away from the mother? Are you 8 suggesting that's not an important interest?

9 MR. HAWTREY: I think it's secondary to the 10 interest between the parent and the child.

11 QUESTION: Mr. Hawtreys, let's try it another 12 way.

13 Using a scale of 1 to 10, what number would 14 you put on race in this case?

15 MR. HAWTREY: Ten being the highest and 1 16 being the lowest?

17 QUESTION: Yes, sir.

18 MR. HAWTREY: From the standpoint of 19 classification between the mother and the child, I'd say 20 5.

21 QUESTION: That's a substantial point, isn't 22 it?

23 MR. HAWTREY: I would say it was equal towards 24 the mother -- between the child and the mother.

25 The extent of the relationship, when we look

1 at it between the parent and the child, and not the 2 parent and the new spouse, I think, is the interest that 3 the state has. I think that the parent and the new 4 spouse relationship was one of either quality or 5 quantity that relates to the parent-child relationship.
6 We're only dealing with one-half of it.

7 The classification, if any, that we have in 8 the case is, again, a classification of the spouse -- 9 new spouse-parent relationship -- and it would fall into 10 the same category, I believe, in this type of custody as 11 a custody by state, as in the Smith v. Organization of 12 Foster Families. I think that it's the same type of 13 consideration as we have in the Drummond case, which is 14 an adoption case.

15 We're not dealing with the marriage per se.
16 It's not a relationship like we have in Loving. The 17 court is not -- the trial court is not making the same 18 type of presumptions. I don't believe that the court is 19 making the same type of presumptions as in the Kramer v.
20 Kramer case, which is probably very close in factual, in 21 the factual basis.

22 QUESTION: Kramer against Kramer was a movie, 23 wasn't it?

24 (Laughter.)

25 MR. HAWTREY: Your Honor, it's the case cut of

1 Iowa that's reported in 297 N.W. 2d 359 -- is the one 2 I'm referring to.

3 (Laughter.)

4 MR. HAWTREY: In that case, I believe there 5 was an effort to exclude race entirely from the case, 6 but the judge then inserted it in a similar fashion as 7 in this case.

8 But the court, in the Kramer case, was making 9 presumptions. I think that the court, in the Kramer 10 case, was making the same kind of presumptions that we 11 had in the Stanley v. Illinois case, where we were going 12 to decide -- where Illinois decided that an unwed father 13 was presumptively incapable of having or fathering or 14 being the father of the child, and that he would have to 15 seek his child in some other fashion.

16 I think, in addition to looking at what may 17 have been a classification, we have to look at what is 18 the action taken by the state court. The action taken 19 by the state court was a modification.

20 As counsel for the petitioner has pointed out, 21 we can go back in and review this again and again, I 22 guess from the time the child is age six till the child 23 is age 18, but unless there is a showing, and I don't 24 believe at this point in time that there's been a 25 showing of either correction or penalty, that the state

1 action taken necessarily is anything other than what is 2 permissible under the state law.

3 The Arlington Heights v. Metropolitan Housing 4 case indicates to us that if we're -- if we're going to 5 have an allegation of racial discrimination, that there 6 has to be a showing of intent and purpose in the racial 7 discrimination or classification that I don't believe 8 has been shown in this particular case.

9 I think one of the elements necessary to show 10 an impermissible classification lacks in that instance.

11 The other alternative view could be that the 12 classification is suspect, but all of the custody cases 13 seem to take that type of classification or racial 14 classification out of the suspect nature and place them 15 in a framework of rational relationship between the 16 classification authorities.

17 Finally, again looking at the Kramer case and 18 quoting from it: "It is best said, just as no 19 assumptions are automatically warranted based on gender 20 of parent or child, we believe no assumptions are 21 automatically warranted by racial identify."

22 QUESTION: Have you cited the Kramer case in 23 your brief?

24 MR. HAWTREY: I don't believe I have, Your 25 Honor.

1 QUESTION: What's its citation again?
2 MR. HAWTREY: 297 N.W. 2nd 359.
3 QUESTION: Iowa Supreme Court?
4 MR. HAWTREY: It's Iowan Supreme Court, 1980.
5 QUESTION: Not the Court of Appeals?
6 MR. HAWTREY: Excuse me, Your Honor?
7 QUESTION: Not the Court of Appeals, the 8 Intermediate Court in Iowa.
9 MR. HAWTREY: I'm not sure, Your Honor.
10 QUESTION: You don't know.
11 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Do you have anything 12 further,
13 Mr. Shapiro?
14 MR. SHAPIRO: Mr. Chief Justice, unless one of 15 the members of the Court has another question from me, I 16 don't have any further comments.
17 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.
18 The case is submitted.
19 We'll hear arguments next in the Limbach
20 against Hoeven & Allison Company.
21 (Whereupon, at 11:52 o'clock a.m., the case 22 in the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
