1                                P R O C E E D I N G S

2                    CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments
3 first this morning in Escondido Mutual Water Company
4 against LaJolla.

5                    Mr. Engstrand, you may proceed whenever you 6 are ready.

7                    ORAL ARGUMENT OF PAUL D. ENGSTRAND, ESQ.,

8                    ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS

9                    MR. ENGSTRAND: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
10 please the Court, it is an honor today for us to share 11 our time with Solicitor Feit of the Commission, who will 12 explain why Section 4(e) of the Federal Power Act does 13 not give the Secretaries authority to veto licensing 14 decisions of the Commission by imposing unreasonable
15 conditions.

16                    I shall background the case and explain why 17 the Indian bands have not been given the right by 18 Congress to veto licensing decisions of the Commission, 19 and I shall discuss why water rights are not similar to 20 reservation lands.

21                    In southern California, between Los Angeles
22 and San Diego, at Oceanside, the San Luis Rey River
23 empties a 565-square mile watershed into the Pacific 24 Ocean. In 1895, western movement pioneers constructed 25 an intake in a deep canyon in the LaJolla Reservation

1 and a canal over precipitous mountain terrain to Lake
2 Woford near Escondido.

3 In 1915, they added a power plant at Bear 4 Valley, and in 1916, a power plant at the Rincon site.
5 The canal and its works traverses three Indian 6 reservations and occupies a tiny fraction, less than 1 7 percent of those reservation lands. The project -- In 8 1922 Henshaw Dam was constructed, and later the canal 9 was enlarged in order to convey the water stored by the 10 dam as well as the natural flow of the river above the 11 intake and below the dam.

12 These physical works were constructed by 13 reason of legal arrangements made with the bands and the 14 Secretary of the Interior on their behalf by contracts 15 made in 1894, 1914, and 1922, a permit from the 16 Secretary of the Interior in 1908, and a Federal Power 17 Commission license in 1924.

18 Prior to 1969-1970, the bands or Interior made 19 no objection to these works except by the filing of a 20 claim before the Indian Claims Commission which was 21 opposed by the government. In 1971, Escondido sought 22 relicensing, and at that time the bands sought to revoke 23 our license, sought a non-power license for themselves.
24 Interior fully support the bands' position and even 25 recommended that the United States recapture.

1           In accordance with their authority under 2   Section E, they sought to impose conditions which would 3   have molded the project into a non-power contract not 4   best adapted for development of the river as found by 5   the Commission, but in the words of the Administrative 6   Law Judge, to destroy the project.

7           Interior candidly admits that it is not acting 8   in the scope of its role in the best interests of the 9   United States, but that it is totally blinded by its 10   role as a guardian for the bands. The project and its 11   works are small, on average 14,500 acre feet of water 12   and four million kilowatt hours of power produced, but 13   in this semi-arid region, the water is important and the 14   power in these energy-short times is consequential.

15           The Commission in 1979 in two orders granted a 16   license jointly to Escondido and Vista. Petitions for 17   review were heard by the Ninth Circuit, who reversed and 18   remanded, and in October you granted cert. There is no 19   rational basis for the benefits of Project 176 to be 20   taken away from the 110,000 citizens of Escondido and 21   Vista.

22           The bands bottom their contentions in notions
23   about tribal sovereignty. But this is a false bottom, 24   because we all recognize the plenary power of Congress 25   over these tribal lands, and we know that Congress in

1 the public interest has long determined that tribal 2 bands' lands are frequently necessary for use by 3 non-tribal interests.

4 Congress has provided for railroads, tramways,
5 canals, reservoirs, electric lines, hot water power
6 projects to use tribal lands. We know that the broad 7 plan and purpose of Congress in the Federal Power Act 8 was to centralize and provide for the development of the 9 water power resources of the country. We know that 10 under the Act of March 3rd, 1891, the general 11 right-of-way statute, Congress provided for the use of 12 tribal lands to encourage the western development.

13 We know that under the Mission Indian Relief 14 Act, MIRA, Congress provided that canal companies and 15 citizens could use tribal lands for canal right-of-ways.

16 The conflict here before Your Honors is, who 17 did Congress designate as the final decision-maker about 18 these tribal lands? I do not choose to forsake the many 19 amici who have appeared on our behalf before Your Honors 20 by focusing on tribal lands. The result would be the 21 same if we were dealing with any other reservations, for 22 if the Commission is not the final arbiter, the final 23 decision-maker, then we will have to return to the same 24 processes that were followed before the turn of the 25 century, when special bills had to be introduced for the

1 development of water power projects and use of tribal 2 lands.

3           The first hydro plant was built in 1890. We 4 all know the Congressional struggle that eventuated in 5 the 1920 Power Act. In Tuscarora, this Court noted that 6 the Congress did not overlook, did not exclude, but 7 specifically dealt with the tribal lands. The 8 question: Who should be the final arbiter?

9           The Congress provided in Section 3(2) that 10 tribal lands were to be covered by water power 11 development. Section 4(e) gave to the Commission the 12 authority to license project works on tribal lands. We 13 know that the Senate amendment specifically was rejected 14 by Congress, which would have given Indians tribal 15 consent necessary.

16           The Congress also followed the traditional 17 safeguards for Indian lands. In Section 4(e) there is a 18 requirement of the non-interference finding. In Section 19 10(e) there is a requirement that reasonable 20 compensation be paid for the use of tribal lands. In 21 Section 10(i), where the Commission is given authority 22 to waive conditions for other projects, they cannot do
23 that over tribal lands. And we know that under Section 24 17(a) they provided that proceeds from the compensation 25 for the use of tribal lands is assigned to the tribes

1 involved.

2           It is difficult to conceive how the drafters
3 of Congressional will could be more specific. As Judge 4 Leventhal in the Montana Power case said, Congress was 5 aware of the conflict of the Secretary of Interior 6 between the landowners of the tribal lands and the 7 interests of licensees. The Commission was meant to be 8 the arbiter of the general interest. If the Commission
9 is not -- decisions are not final, Congress's whole plan
10 will be frustrated. It will be like an orchestra 11 without strings, like a baseball team without a pitcher.
12 Tribal consent would be destructive and not helpful.

13           MIRA in 1891 provided for the use of tribal 14 lands. It provided in 1891 that the consent of the 15 tribal bands were necessary, and the approval of the 16 Secretary of Interior, but three months later, in the 17 general right-of-way statute of March, 1891, the 18 Congress provided that right-of-ways could be given with 19 only the requirement from the Secretary of Interior.

20           In 1898, the Secretary of Interior interpreted 21 this to apply to tribal lands, and the Ninth Circuit in 22 1914 approved this interpretation. Ever since 1898, 23 under the Act of 1891, and under the 1920 Power Act, the 24 administrative officials charged with the responsibility 25 to enforce these Acts have consistently interpreted the 1 provisions as applying to tribal lands.

2 And, Your Honors, I choose to reserve five 3 minutes, if I may, for closing.

4 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Feit.

5 ORAL ARGUMENT OF JEROME M. FEIT, ESQ.,

6 ON BEHALF OF FERC

7 MR. FEIT: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
8 please the Court, as has been stated, this case involves 9 the reach and scope of the proviso, the licensing 10 proviso in Section 4(e) of the Federal Power Act. Of 11 principal concern to the Commission today is the context 12 involving the distribution of authority under that 13 proviso between FERC and Interior.

14 The proviso is set out at Pages 2 and 3 of our 15 main opening brief, and requires that before issuing a 16 license over reservation lands, the Commission must find 17 that the license, and I quote, "will not interfere or be 18 inconsistent with the purpose for which such reservation 19 was created or required, and should be subject to and 20 contain such conditions as the Secretary of the 21 department under whose supervision such reservation
22 falls shall be deemed necessary for the adequate 23 protection and utilization of such reservation."

24 The majority of the Court of Appeals below, 25 purporting to rely on, and we believe erroneously, on

1 the plain language test, held that the Commission may 2 not alter those conditions in any way. If the 3 Commission is of the view that the terms are 4 inappropriate or improper for the license it wishes, it 5 may simply not issue the license.

6 The court further held that this conclusion
7 did not grant the Secretary "an unconditional veto 8 power" since the reasonableness of the conditions was 9 subject to judicial review under Section 313 of the 10 Federal Power Act.

11 It is our view that the position of Interior
12 and the court below seriously misapprehends the intent 13 underlying the Section 4(e) proviso and undercuts in 14 that regard the thrust and purpose of the Act, the 15 licensing thrust. Surely at most times there is no
16 problem. Both provisions work together. The Commission 17 protects the physical homeland, and that is what the 18 inconsistency and interference finding is all about, the 19 security of the physical land, the population, the 20 number of homes in the area, the overall impact on the 21 reservation qua a place for Indians to live.

22 The Secretary, on the other hand, in our view 23 has a lesser but -- not a lesser in importance, 24 certainly, but lesser in scope. He must see to it that 25 the project works, the project works be not so placed

1    which would interfere with the health, safety, 2    recreation, water flow, access roads, all of those 3    things to protect the reservation and see that the works 4    are properly utilized.

5               But beyond this, and there is an inherent 6    tension between the two provisos, the interference, 7    inconsistency proviso and the protection proviso. The 8    tension arises because in a sense they both work with 9    another. That is, the Secretary supports the absolutist 10   theory, saying that the conditioning power has no 11   bearing on the interference, inconsistency authority.
12   The two functions are separate.

13              That is not true as we read those two 14   provisions. One may well be at war with the other, and 15   it seems to us the protection provision may try to take 16   over the interference, inconsistency provision. Two 17   examples suffice, I think.

18              The Pidgeon River case, which is an old 19   administrative case in which Secretary Ickes wished that 20   a dam not be built on an Indian reservation, and he 21   submitted evidence in support of the view that the 22   inference, inconsistency determination should be 23   exercised by the Commission in a way against issuance of 24   a license, but he said in any event I am going to submit 25   conditions which will not permit the dam to be built at 1 all.

2 This case, I think, also further illustrates 3 where the Secretary seeks to impose upon the authority, 4 the inconsistency, interference authority of the 5 Commission. What has happened here is, Proviso 4, for 6 example -- excuse me, Condition 4 submitted by the 7 Secretary would require the Commission to recognize the 8 reserved water rights of the Indians.

9 Well, the water rights issue is essentially 10 not our business in terms of defining rights. That 11 question is now in the Federal District Court, where it 12 has been since 1969. We have an open-ended condition in 13 the license which provides that the ultimate resolution 14 of that issue by the District Court will ultimately 15 inform the license that we issue, so it is hard for us 16 to perceive how this case involved a proper invocation
17 of a power by the Secretary.

18 Let me just turn --

19 QUESTION: Mr. Feit, what effect would such a 20 recognition have on the water rights litigation that is 21 pending in the District Court?

22 MR. FEIT: A recognition of the reserve
23 interest rights? I don't think anything in that sense 24 of the word. I think that our statute precludes us from 25 making such a finding. It would be ultra vires of our

1 authority. To that extent, I think the District Court
2 opinion would be the one that is cold sway in the day, 3 that is, that courts make that determination, and this 4 Commission, if it tried to do so, it seems to me, would 5 be exercising absolute power that it just doesn't have.

6 I would like to turn to the legislative 7 history which I think supports our view. First of all, 8 I want to point out there is an error at Page 5 of our 9 second supplemental brief in which we attribute to 10 Congressman -- excuse me, to Senator Walsh a statement
11 made by Congressman Walsh in an effort to distinguish 12 Senator Walsh's apparent approval of the veto 13 authority.

14 That is an unfortunate error. I am sorry for 15 it. But in any event it seems to us that Senator 16 Walsh's statement is not all that persuasive. It was 17 made in terms of a discussion with regard to the 18 appropriateness of giving the Indians the authority to 19 stop a project and the Senator was responding to that.
20 Also, Congressman Walsh, the statement we attribute to 21 the Senate, did make that statement. He made it to 22 Congressman Rayka, who in fact was the House proponent of 23 the Administration's bill and made clear that he thought 24 one vote could not terminate a project with two votes on 25 the Commission, which was then comprised of the three

1 Secretaries, War, Agriculture, Interior.

2           There are statements in the Secretary's brief
3 regarding the notion in the debate for the '20 Act
4 indicating that there was the view that a Secretary
5 could veto it. On the other hand, we think the evidence 6 of legislative intent is spelled out more in our favor 7 by other remarks which we have adduced in our brief, and 8 it seems to us that this one aspect, this aspect, we 9 think, as our brief points out, we have the better of 10 the day.

11           The one area of the legislative history which 12 is not referred to at all in the Secretary's brief, it 13 seems to us, is that the legislative history focuses 14 again on no water control, no water control by the 15 Commission, a focus on property rights, property rights, 16 not broad interests, Indian concerns in the broadest 17 sovereignty sense, and I think one illustration again 18 here is good.

19           The legislative history stems from the 20 rights-of-way statute. It is clear that the 1920 Act 21 took those rights-of-way statutes as their base, 22 developed on them, built on them, provided for them in 23 the Act. At that time, under those rights-of-way 24 statutes, the particular Secretary had control over what 25 we call now the interference, inconsistency finding

1 within those particular statutes. He also had the 2 conditioning authority, but the conditioning authority,
3 of course, was not meant to overcome the broad licensing 4 authority that that rights-of-way statute provided. On 5 the contrary, it was to be exercised reasonably, and 6 that is all we say here, that when Congress enacted the 7 1920 Act, what was a single power in each of the 8 Secretaries under the statutes they enforced became 9 bifurcated. The Commission was given the licensing
10 power. The Secretary was to retain the conditioning 11 power, the impact of the project works on the 12 reservation, that power to be exercised with reason.

13 The Secretary says, however, yes, we agree 14 with the reasonableness approach to this case. However, 15 that is a matter for the Court of Appeals to deal with, 16 and all the Commission has to do is simply include the 17 Secretary's condition, and if it is unreasonable or 18 arbitrary, the Court of Appeals will remedy the 19 situation.

20 We don't think this really answers the 21 question. In our view, it turns the review statutes on 22 its head. Section 313 of the Power Act, A and B, deals 23 with review. The court -- I might say the court below 24 realized the difficulty of using 313. Initially on the 25 opinion it relied upon the APA saying the Secretary's

1 condition will be reviewed under the APA, the 2 Commission's under the Power Act. On rehearing, the 3 court retreated, saying, well -- recognizing that under 4 this Court's decision in the City of Takoma case that 5 the review provisions of Section 313 are absolute, 6 unconditional, and all issues must be resolved therein.

7 Let me illustrate the problems of such a 8 review provision. Under 313(a), the Commission in its 9 own judgment may take a case back before a record is 10 filed from a Court of Appeals. What do we do? Does 11 Interior -- We obviously can't do that. The Commission 12 may change its rule on rehearing. We have a statute 13 which requires a rehearing requirement after the 14 issuance of the order.

15 The Commission -- the language is absolute in 16 the statutory provision. Obviously we can't do that.
17 We have an obligation under the statute to establish a 18 record evidence, substantial evidence test. The 19 Secretary's conditioning authority, if it is 20 unalterable, imposes no requirement of a hearing or a 21 discussion of any sort. How do we determine that? We 22 have the obligation to enforce our orders as well as our 23 statute. How do we do that? The Secretary says, well, 24 the third party may raise the issue. The third party
25 doesn't represent the public interest. The Commission

1 does, and the Commission is, it seems to us, in a 2 bifurcated, unreal position, a distortion of the 3 statutory terms.

4 In sum, it is our position that the licensing 5 authority of the Commission is the central power to 6 weigh and balance those interests which the Congress in 7 its wisdom gave the Commission to decide in determining 8 whether to issue a license. The Commission is obligated 9 under statutory terms to make a determination that the 10 license is not inconsistent with nor does it interfere 11 with the purpose for which the reservation was created 12 or acquired. That is the central power of the 13 Commission. The Secretary, it seems to us, has the 14 lesser power, which we normally give great deference to, 15 and the problem rarely arises to make such conditions 16 which relate to the way the project works impact on the 17 reservation, and it seems to us that that kind of 18 decision-making resting with the Commission, at that 19 time, the Secretary having made a record the other way, 20 can seek review.

21 QUESTION: Mr. Feit, you haven't said much
22 about the statutory language. It is pretty strong. It 23 is mandatory language, "shall be subject to and contain 24 such conditions as the Secretary shall deem necessary."

25 MR. FEIT: Yes, I will turn to that right now,

1 Your Honor. It seems to us, of course, that this Court 2 has said, the statutory language must really -- even the 3 use of "shall" may not be absolute. People were 4 saying --

5 QUESTION: It doesn't even have the word
6 "reasonable" in it.

7 MR. FEIT: They didn't put the word
8 "reasonable" in, but I think it was implicit in the 9 situation in which the statute was enacted. It seems to 10 us what happens is this. To the extent that the 11 Secretary performs in this area where there is no 12 tension, and most of the situations are not, we will 13 accept that condition, and I think that is what they 14 were trying to say in the '20 Act.

15 It seems to me if they were trying to say
16 something else than that, then they would have said 17 that. They wouldn't have give the Commission the 18 licensing authority. And the way the Commission -- the 19 Commission must have the power, it seems to us, to 20 assure that the conditioning authority is not used to 21 defeat the interference, inconsistency determination.
22 It is there where the statute is not absolute. It is 23 there where "shall" does not mean a veto. That is where 24 "shall" simply means in the context of the exercise of 25 clear authority. Otherwise, Mr. Justice, as I said,

1 313(b) is turned on its head.

2 QUESTION: May I ask this question?

3 MR. FEIT: Sir.

4 QUESTION: One of the briefs suggests that 5 Section 15 of the Federal Power Act controls with 6 respect to relicensing.

7 MR. FEIT: That is issue we believe is not 8 properly before the Court in this case, since the 9 Commission specifically treated this license as an 10 original license. And under the Chenery case and other 11 cases, it seems to us the Court cannot reach out and 12 decide that case where the Commission has not decided 13 it.

14 Thank you.

15 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Schulder?

16 ORAL ARGUMENT OF ELLIOTT SCHULDER, ESQ.,

17 ON BEHALF OF THE SECRETARY OF INTERIOR

18 MR. SCHULDER: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it 19 please the Court, I would like to begin my remarks by 20 focusing on the reservation proviso of Section 4(e) of 21 the Power Act. The language of that proviso clearly 22 shows in our view that Congress sought to ensure that 23 reservations would be protected from the adverse effects 24 of power development. It is only after considering the 25 import of the Section 4(e) proviso that the legal issues

1 presented here can be properly addressed.

2 It is the Secretary's position here that the 3 statute, Section 4(e), means exactly what it says. The 4 statute provides that licenses may be issued for 5 projects on reservations, but only if the Commission 6 make a finding that the license will not interfere or be 7 inconsistent with the purposes for which the reservation 8 was created, but also licenses are specifically made to 9 be subject to and to contain such conditions as the 10 Secretary of the department under whose supervision the 11 reservation falls shall deem necessary for the adequate 12 protection and utilization of the reservation.

13 QUESTION: Mr. Schulder, do you still concede 14 that if you are correct, that the conditions imposed by 15 Interior have to be reasonable conditions?

16 MR. SCHULDER: Absolutely, Your Honor.

17 QUESTION: And how is the -- what is the 18 process for review of the legality of those conditions?
19 How does it work in light of Section 313? It is very 20 unclear to me how you think the issue would be raised.
21 Does it go to the Commission in the first place, the 22 Power Commission in the first place to decide? And how 23 is the judicial review triggered?

24 MR. SCHULDER: The issue could not go to the 25 Commission to decide, because that would negate the

1 clear intent of Section 4(e). Section 4(e), which is 2 the substantive grant of authority that is before the 3 Court in this case clearly provides that it is the 4 Secretary who shall determine which conditions should be 5 included within the license, so it makes no sense to say 6 that the Secretary can merely recommend conditions to 7 the Commission. That would read the second part of the 8 reservation proviso out of the Act.

9 Now, it is true that the Commission and the 10 petitioners have argued that this would create some 11 problems for judicial review. There are several 12 responses that I have to that. First of all, it seems 13 to me that this would be a case of the tail wagging the 14 dog. I mean, it is the substantive provision in 4(e) 15 that gives the Secretary the power. If there are any 16 difficulties, and I don't concede that there are in 17 terms of reviewing the Secretary's condition, it seems 18 to me that the accommodation should be made on the 19 judicial review end of the spectrum rather than cutting 20 back the Secretary's authority.

21 QUESTION: Well, as a practical matter, how do 22 you see the review taking place, and how mechanically 23 would it work?

24 MR. SCHULDER: Okay. The Secretary's 25 conditions must be included in the license that the

1 Commission issues. The Commission's order issuing the 2 license is subject to review in the Court of Appeals
3 under Section 313 of the Power Act.

4 QUESTION: Well, suppose the Commission thinks 5 that they are unreasonable. How is the issue joined and 6 put before the Court?

7 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the Commission can do one 8 of two things at the licensing stage. The Commission 9 can either issue the license with the conditions and 10 make clear in its order that it does not agree with the 11 reasonableness of those conditions. The applicant at 12 that point certainly could challenge -- the applicant 13 for the license certainly could challenge those 14 conditions in the Court of Appeals, and the Secretary 15 would be obligated to defend those conditions under the 16 statutory standard that is laid out in 4(e).

17 In other words, the Secretary must show that 18 the conditions that he prescribes are reasonably related 19 to the purpose of ensuring that the purposes of the 20 reservation are adequately protected, and that the 21 reservation is adequately utilized.

22 QUESTION: The review in the Court of Appeals 23 contemplates some sort of a record having been made 24 somewhere, doesn't it? If the Commission can't examine 25 it all under the reasonableness of the Secretary's

1 conditions, where would the record be made on which the 2 Court of Appeals would review reasonableness?

3 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the record, as in this 4 case, would be the same record that was before the Court
5 of Appeals. In other words, the applicant could present 6 whatever evidence or information with respect to the 7 adequacy of the conditions --

8 QUESTION: Presented to the Commission?

9 MR. SCHULDER: Presented as part of his case.

10 QUESTION: Where?

11 MR. SCHULDER: Well, there are several ways in 12 which this could be done. First of all, the Secretary, 13 as he did in this case, notified the parties of the 14 proposed conditions that he intended to issue. He then 15 asked for comments upon those conditions, and I believe 16 one of the applicants did file certain comments. That is 17 one way in which the parties would have an opportunity 18 at the administrative level to make their views known.

19 Second, in the course of presenting evidence 20 to the Commission on other aspects of the license, the 21 parties would be, certainly with respect to the 22 interference, inconsistency finding, would present 23 evidence that would be relevant to the Secretary in his 24 determination of whether the conditions that he proposes 25 to include are proper. In fact, in this case the

1 Secretary modified the initial conditions in order to 2 take into account the evidence that had been brought out
3 before the Administrative Law Judge.

4 QUESTION: Well, you are suggesting that all 5 the evidence would be presented to the Commission, but 6 that the Commission can't make a finding on it. They 7 can't weigh it. They can't consider it. They can't 8 make a finding. So what is the Court of Appeals 9 review? It is just confusing to see how it would work.

10 MR. SCHULDER: It may be confusing, but the 11 problem here is with -- the problem here is not with 12 4(e). If there is any problem, it may be with the 13 judicial review provision of the statute. Now, it seems 14 to me that --

15 QUESTION: Well, you do agree there is a 16 problem, don't you, on judicial review?

17 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the Commission under 4(e) 18 has no power to make any finding with respect to the 19 Secretary's conditions, and has no power to alter or 20 modify those conditions, if you look at the language of 21 4(e) itself. It seems to me that it would be 22 permissible or proper for the Secretary's conditions to 23 be reviewable before the Court of Appeals under the APA 24 review standards as part of the same procedure in which 25 the Court of Appeals is considering the Commission's

1 order issuing the license.

2 QUESTION: But APA review ordinarily goes to 3 the District Court.

4 MR. SCHULDER: It ordinarily does, but it does 5 not in every case, Your Honor. The provisions of the 6 APA specifically provide that it would go to the 7 appropriate court to hear that matter, and here, since 8 the whole case is going to the Court of Appeals to 9 review the Commission's order, it certainly seems 10 appropriate that it would be the Court of Appeals that 11 would pass upon in the first instance the reasonableness
12 of the Secretary's conditions.

13 QUESTION: Mr. Schulder, it seems to me that 14 there is nothing in 4(e) that prevents the Commission 15 from making -- giving its opinion as to the 16 reasonableness of the Secretary's or -- I thought you 17 said that a while ago --

18 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

19 QUESTION: -- that they could voice a 20 disagreement.

21 MR. SCHULDER: Absolutely.

22 QUESTION: And I would suppose the parties
23 before the Administrative Law Judge could introduce any 24 evidence going to the reasonableness of the Secretary's 25 conditions.

1 MR. SCHULDER: I agree with you.

2 QUESTION: And I would think 4(e) would be 3 satisfied if the Commission said, we have to incorporate 4 these conditions. We have hassled around with the 5 Secretary. He won't give an inch. These are the 6 conditions he insists on, so we have put them in the 7 license, but we think they are improvident, 8 unreasonable, and that they will in effect destroy this 9 project.

10 MR. SCHULDER: Well, that is precisely what 11 Congress intended when --

12 QUESTION: Well, you agree with that.

13 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

14 QUESTION: So why do you say they have no 15 power to make a finding about -- or to -- as to 16 reasonableness?

17 MR. SCHULDER: Well, I was just talking in 18 terms of the technical language of the statute.

19 QUESTION: Well, so you concede that based on 20 the evidence in the record as the Commission reads it, 21 it could say the Secretary is out of his mind.

22 MR. SCHULDER: Certainly.

23 QUESTION: And then the Court of Appeals would 24 be in a position to review it.

25 MR. SCHULDER: That's right, and this is

1 precisely, if we look at the legislative history of the 2 Federal Water Power Act prior to its enactment in 1920, 3 this is exactly what Congress had in mind. If we look 4 at the statements on Pages 26 and 27 of the --

5 QUESTION: So where does that leave us in this 6 case, Mr. Schulder?

7 MR. SCHULDER: Where does --

8 QUESTION: The Commission didn't include those 9 conditions. Is that right?

10 MR. SCHULDER: That's right. The Court of 11 Appeals remanded the case to the Commission with 12 directions that it follow the statute and include the 13 Secretary's conditions.

14 QUESTION: And if it does, there would still 15 be left over the reasonableness of those conditions.

16 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

17 QUESTION: So we shouldn't reach that issue
18 now, I take it.

19 MR. SCHULDER: Oh, it is absolutely not before 20 the Court at this point, Your Honor.

21 QUESTION: But sooner or later it likely will 22 be.

23 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct. But the 24 Secretary's conditions have not been -- they are not 25 part of the Commission's order, because the Commission

1 refused to include them.

2 QUESTION: I understand.

3 QUESTION: Well, Mr. Schulder, no one else
4 wants to initiate review of the Commission's order,
5 including now, as you tell us you must, the Secretary's 6 conditions. May the Commission, disagreeing with the 7 reasonableness of the conditions, initiate that review?

8 MR. SCHULDER: No, Your Honor, because the 9 whole process under 4(e) is a process in which an 10 applicant goes to the Commission requesting the license.
11 Presumably if the applicant is not sufficiently 12 interested to pursue the matter, then that is the end of 13 it. The Commission has no affirmative authority to 14 issue licenses where there are no applicants.

15 QUESTION: So it is disagreement with the 16 conditions. It is fearing that they are unreasonable.
17 It is not something that the Commission can ask the 18 Court of Appeals to review.

19 MR. SCHULDER: Not on its own initiative. It 20 can certainly make its views know.

21 QUESTION: The applicant can.

22 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

23 QUESTION: If the applicant wants to accept 24 the conditions, of course, that -- I suppose there won't 25 be any case left.

1 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

2 QUESTION: But you would say the Commission
3 could appear in the Court of Appeals.

4 MR. SCHULDER: Oh, certainly.

5 QUESTION: And give its view.

6 MR. SCHULDER: Absolutely.

7 QUESTION: And here.

8 MR. SCHULDER: In this regard, I would like to 9 point out that of course Section 4(e) refers not only to 10 reservations within the jurisdiction of the Secretary of 11 the Interior, but also to reservations within the 12 jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture and the 13 Secretary of Defense.

14 In fact, if Your Honors would take a look at 15 the map that has been provided by Petitioners, it does 16 not appear on the map, but several miles north of 17 Oceanside is a very large Marine base called Camp 18 Pendleton. It seems to us that if there were any 19 adverse effects of any project with respect to Camp
20 Pendleton, the Secretary of Defense should be free --

21 QUESTION: Well, but Mr. Schulder, what about 22 the word "within" in 4(e)? Camp Pendleton is not -- the 23 power project is not within Camp Pendleton, nor is it 24 within three of the reservations here, as I understand 25 the record.

1 MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

2 QUESTION: You rely on the plain language for 3 part of your argument, but I don't suppose you do for 4 those three reservations.

5 MR. SCHULDER: It is not exactly that we don't 6 rely on the plain language. The problem is that the 7 plain language doesn't really make sense. When you 8 think of the broad definition of the term "reservation" 9 in the statute, the term "reservation" includes tribal 10 lands, but it also includes interests in lands owned by 11 the United States, and a water right, as the Court of 12 Appeals held in this case, at Pages 25 to 26 of the 13 appendix to the petition, a water right clearly is an 14 interest in land.

15 Now, certainly there is an ambiguity. It 16 doesn't sound right to say that a license is issued 17 within a water right.

18 QUESTION: It is your position that the plain 19 language is plain when it helps you, and is ambiguous 20 when it doesn't help you?

21 (General laughter.)

22 MR. SCHULDER: Not exactly, Your Honor.

23 QUESTION: Not exactly. But close.

24 MR. SCHULDER: Well, I think that there is a 25 real ambiguity here, because of the broad definition of

1 the term "reservations" in the definitional section of 2 the Act. And if you take that into consideration with 3 Section 23(b), which states that the Commission shall 4 issue licenses where a project will have an effect on a 5 reservation, that suggests to us that in fact given the 6 protective nature of the definition of reservations, the 7 protective nature of Section 4(e) itself, that in fact
8 the Secretary of Defense would be entitled to impose 9 conditions on a license if an upstream project were 10 threatening to impair the utilization of that military 11 base.

12 QUESTION: Mr. Schulder, is there an issue
13 before us as to the power of the tribes to veto?

14 MR. SCHULDER: Well, the issue about whether 15 Section 8 of the Mission Indian Relief Act has been 16 impliedly repealed by the Federal Power Act is the third 17 issue in the case, and it is our position, as we stated 18 in our brief, that it has not been repealed by the 19 Federal Power Act.

20 QUESTION: And if it hasn't been, what is the 21 authority of the tribe?

22 MR. SCHULDER: If it has not been, than any 23 water conveyance facility that will be going across a 24 reservation land must be approved by the bands before 25 that facility can be operated.

1           QUESTION: Well, if you are right in that 2 regard, does that render the rest of the case almost 3 beside the point?

4           MR. SCHULDER: It might as a practical matter, 5 Your Honor.

6           QUESTION: It might? What could they veto in 7 this case?

8           MR. SCHULDER: Well, they could state that 9 they do not agree to the canal going across their 10 reservations. That is --

11          QUESTION: You mean to the extent it is going 12 to be changed? There is already a canal across their 13 reservations, isn't there?

14          MR. SCHULDER: That's correct, but to the 15 extent that it is going to continue in operation, and 16 also to the extent that it may be changed in the future.

17          QUESTION: So you treat this as a new 18 licensing.

19          MR. SCHULDER: That's correct. We agree with 20 the Commission that this case should be treated as an 21 original license.

22          QUESTION: So that if the tribes have a veto, 23 why, the case is really over.

24          MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

25          Thank you, Your Honors.

1                   QUESTION: Mr. Schulder, I am a little 2     bothered by the posture of the case that Justice White 3     just adverted to. It seems to me that if one is seeking 4     an original license for a project that has never been 5     built before, it is one thing to say that the Indian 6     reservation, federal reservations generally should have 7     a veto power, and shouldn't -- you shouldn't put it in 8     where they don't want it, and that sort of thing, if it 9     is basically their jurisdiction. But if substantial 10    outlays have already been made for pipes and canals and 11    that sort of thing, then is the inquiry exactly the same 12    at the relicensing stage?

13                  MR. SCHULDER: Well, we believe that it is, 14    because every applicant at the relicensing stage is at 15    an equal level. Congress specifically provided in the 16    Federal Power Act that there would be a 50-year term to 17    the license, and I believe the bands' brief in its 18    introduction to the summary of argument sets out the 19    statutory scheme. In fact, the Commission in this case 20    concluded that the net investment in severance would 21    have to be paid to the license. The original licensee 22    in this case was zero, because --

23                  QUESTION: It had all been returned.

24                  MR. SCHULDER: That's correct.

25                  Thank you.

1 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Mr. Pelcyger.

2 ORAL ARGUMENT OF ROBERT S. PELCYGER, ESQ., 3 ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT INDIAN MISSION BANDS

4 MR. PELCYGER: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it
5 please the Court, I would like to begin by addressing a 6 few of the issues that were raised previously.

7 First of all, with regard to the judicial 8 review question, I agree with Justice White's analysis
9 of that. Let me just add that I see no difference
10 between the Court of Appeals' review of the Secretary's 11 conditions as opposed to the Commission's own conditions.

12 The record is compiled before the Federal 13 Power Commission -- the Federal Regulatory Commission, 14 and an applicant, based on that record, can contest 15 either the Commission's conditions based on their lack 16 of reasonableness, or the Secretary's conditions based 17 on their lack of reasonableness, so I don't see that it 18 presents any problems or any difficulties.

19 With regard to relicensing, Justice Rehnquist, 20 I would point out that Section 15, which is their 21 relicensing provision, specifically says that the 22 Commission is authorized to issue a new license to --

23 QUESTION: Is that in one of the briefs, the 24 section you are quoting from?

25 MR. PELCYGER: Is the --

1 QUESTION: What you are just reading, is it in 2 one of the briefs where one could find it?

3 MR. PELCYGER: I think I have a footnote on my 4 brief on that, Your Honor. I can put my --

5 QUESTION: What section are you quoting from?

6 MR. PELCYGER: I am quoting Section 15(a). It
7 is 16 USC Section 808(a).

8 QUESTION: Of what Act?

9 MR. PELCYGER: It is in the -- I'm sorry.
10 It's in the petitioners' appendix.

11 QUESTION: What Act are you --

12 MR. PELCYGER: Of the Federal Power Act. It's 13 in the petitioner's appendix at Page 386.

14 QUESTION: Thank you.

15 MR. PELCYGER: And this is the relicensing
16 provision, and I don't understand why there's a 17 controversy about whether this is an original licensing 18 or a relicensing, because the relicensing provision 19 specifically says that the Commission can issue either a 20 new license or an original license under the then 21 existing laws and regulations, and obviously the 22 reservation proviso is an existing law.

23 So, as the Court of Appeals for the District
24 of Columbia Circuit held in the Lac Courte Oreilles 25 case, which is cited in the briefs, the whole concept of

1 relicensing was that it would be a new proceeding, and 2 it would take place under the terms of existing laws, 3 and this Court -- this Court's only decision dealing 4 with this relicensing question was United States against 5 Appalachian Electric Power Company in 311 USC 76, where 6 the Court specifically referred to the relicensing 7 provisions and upheld their constitutionality against 8 the claim that they would constitute an unlawful taking 9 of land without providing just compensation.

10 Justice O'Connor, the Secretary's conditions
11 would not be an adjudication of water rights by the back 12 door. The whole point of the Secretary's conditions is 13 to set forth that which would be necessary to provide 14 for the adequate protection and utilization of the 15 reservation. Those conditions can be considered as if 16 one assumed that there were no water rights of the 17 reservations. The Secretary is simply saying, this is 18 what is necessary to protect those reservations and to 19 ensure their adequate utilization.

20 QUESTION: And it would have no effect on the 21 pending water rights litigation?

22 MR. PELCYGER: That's right, unless the 23 petitioners -- it would not affect the existing water 24 rights dispute unless the petitioners were not able to 25 utilize their water right, in which case the dispute

1 would not be resolved, but would become moot
2 essentially.

3 Now, the petitioners are seeking here to enter 4 three Indian reservations to gain use and control of 5 Indian lands without obtaining the Indians' consent for 6 the purpose of diverting water away from six 7 reservations. The reason that they are invoking the 8 Federal Power Act, despite the fact that the 9 hydroelectric aspects of this project are incidental and 10 de minimis, is that without a license from the 11 Commission, they would be required to bargain with the 12 bands and the Secretary of the Interior for the use of 13 reservation lands.

14 So, they are attempting to use the Power Act
15 to circumvent or avoid the requirements of other laws.
16 This is doubly ironic because in the first place the 17 power aspects of the projects are, as I indicated, so 18 small and incidental, and secondly because the Power Act 19 so explicitly ensures that the interests of Indians as 20 well as other federal reservations will not be sacrificed 21 to the development of hydroelectric power.

22 There are two aspects of this case that I want
23 to stress. The clearly expressed --

24 QUESTION: You are not challenging, are you,
25 Mr. Pelcyger, the jurisdiction of the Federal Power

1 Commission --

2 MR. PELCYGER: No, we do not --

3 QUESTION: -- because of the thin reed that 4 the power thing is hinged?

5 MR. PELCYGER: We did not cross-petition on 6 that ground. That is correct. But I think that that 7 issue is still relevant when addressing the question of 8 which Act is controlling in these particular and unique 9 circumstances. The more general statute of the Federal 10 Power Act, which only tangentially applies to this 11 project, if at all, assuming it applies at all, or the 12 much more specific provision of Section 8 of the Mission 13 Indian Relief Act, which is what this case is all about.

14 QUESTION: Well, I don't think there is any 15 halfway house. It seems to me if you concede that it is 16 before the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Power
17 Act certainly applies. That doesn't say it overrides 18 the Mission Indian Act.

19 MR. PELCYGER: I agree with that, but the 20 question of whether it overrides the Mission Indian 21 Relief Act may turn in part of whether this case is 22 really a power project, in which case it would come 23 squarely within the Federal Power Act, or whether it is 24 really a water diversion project, and that is its 25 principal effect.

1                   QUESTION: Do you say then if it were 60
2 percent power and 40 percent water diversion, which I
3 take it this is not, the bands would have a weaker 4 case?

5                   MR. PELCYGER: To put that issue in context,
6 our first position is that the provision of the Michigan 7 Indian Relief Act must be given effect because the 8 reservation proviso specifically protects against 9 interference the purposes of Indian reservations.

10                   The Mission Indian Relief Act defines the 11 purposes of Indian reservations, and therefore pursuant 12 to 4(e) must be given effect, but if the Court disagrees 13 with that, and if the Court concludes that somehow the 14 Indian consent requirement may under some circumstances
15 be inconsistent with the Federal Power Act, then one 16 looks to the particular project involved, and since this 17 case is first and foremost and primarily a water 18 diversion project, the Mission Indian Relief Act should 19 control here even if it wouldn't control if this were a 20 real, true to life, honest to goodness power project.
21 That is our position.

22                   This is not, let me stress, a case in which 23 the Indians must ask the Court to presume that the 24 federal government intended to deal fairly with the 25 Indians or to implement an assumed solicitous attitude.

1 Rather, both the Federal Power Act and the Mission
2 Indian Relief Act manifest on their faces and in their 3 histories the clear and specific intent to preserve the 4 integrity of Indian reservations and fully to protect 5 Indian property rights and Indian sovereignty.

6 QUESTION: What business does the Commission
7 have or what authority does it have over a straight 8 water diversion project? None, does it?

9 MR. PELCYGER: That's correct. But this 10 project has two minimally --

11 QUESTION: I understand.

12 MR. PELCYGER: -- midsize power plants.

13 QUESTION: But wasn't one of the power plants
14 built and isn't it run by water taken out of a reservoir 15 by a canal?

16 MR. PELCYGER: Both of them are, yes. One of 17 them is directly from a canal, and one of them is 18 through a reservoir.

19 QUESTION: And the canal takes water for 20 metropolitan use.

21 MR. PELCYGER: No, this is --

22 QUESTION: Just a straight power --

23 MR. PELCYGER: Well -- Oh, I'm sorry. For 24 municipal use. Yes.

25 QUESTION: Yes.

1 MR. PELCYGER: Yes.

2 QUESTION: Down to Escondido?

3 MR. PELCYGER: Yes, and to Vista.

4 QUESTION: And do you say that that project is 5 at risk now too, that -- just the metropolitan water 6 use?

7 MR. PELCYGER: The canal that crosses the 8 reservations. Yes, we say that the right-of-way was 9 granted, Justice White, in 1924 for 50 years. That 10 right-of-way expired in 1924. They have had it for 60 11 years. They got all that they bargained for. They got 12 more than they bargained for. Their investment is fully 13 paid off, and now it is a new proceeding --

14 QUESTION: And this is wholly aside from 15 whether it is a power project or not.

16 MR. PELCYGER: Yes, although as I explained to 17 Justice Rehnquist, I think that the incidental nature of 18 the power aspect can come into play if the Court 19 concludes that under certain circumstances if this were 20 a true honest to goodness power project, Indian consent
21 would be overridden by the Act.

22 The fact that this is not a real power project 23 means that effect can and must and should be given to 24 the very specific statute. After all, it was the first 25 and only time that Congress specifically addressed the

1 issue of what should happen with regard to water
2 conveyance projects across the lands of the Mission
3 Indian reservations. It enacted Section 8, and Section 4 8 requires the consent of both the Indian tribes and the 5 Secretary of the Interior, and that intent is what is 6 controlling in this case.

7 QUESTION: Was the original 50-year license 8 for the water project at that time tied up with the 9 power project too, or wasn't it?

10 MR. PELCYGER: Yes. The conveyance system is 11 the same. The water is conveyed, and it both 12 generates --

13 QUESTION: Well, this was long before the 14 Federal Power Act.

15 MR. PELCYGER: Yes, that's right.

16 QUESTION: And so from whom did the easement
17 for right-of-way run?

18 MR. PELCYGER: Well, there are a combination
19 of those sources. Originally there was -- the Secretary 20 of the Interior granted a permit in 1908. There was one 21 contract with an Indian band that was approved pursuant 22 to Section 8.

23 QUESTION: For both the power and the water?

24 MR. PELCYGER: No, at that time there was no 25 power.

1 QUESTION: Just water?

2 MR. PELCYGER: Just water. Let me also point
3 out that both the Escondido and Vista areas, there is no 4 issue in this case that those areas are going to be 5 deprived of their only supply of water. Both of them
6 have alternate sources of water from the Metropolitan 7 Water District of Southern California that bring in the 8 water from the Colorado River and northern California.

9 QUESTION: They might also strike a deal with 10 the tribe.

11 MR. PELCYGER: That's right.

12 QUESTION: They just might have to pay a 13 little more money.

14 MR. PELCYGER: That's absolutely right, and 15 the issue here is that the San Luis Rey River supply is 16 somewhat cheaper than the alternate supply that is 17 imported through the Metropolitan Water District, but 18 there is no evidence in this record to indicate that the 19 welfare or the economies of these areas would be 20 adversely affected in the slightest bit if they had to 21 obtain all of their water from the alternate source 22 where they are now obtaining most of their water.

23 QUESTION: Through how many reservations does 24 the canal go?

25 MR. PELCYGER: Three.

1 QUESTION: Three.

2 MR. PELCYGER: And the project diverts waters
3 away from six reservations -- six Indian reservations.

4 QUESTION: And how -- what's the total mileage
5 of the canal as it runs through the reservations? Do 6 you know?

7 MR. PELCYGER: Those figures are -- I don't 8 have them immediately available. They are in the 9 Commission's opinion, I am sure.

10 Now, so far as the applicability of the 11 Mission Indian Relief Act is concerned, the petitioners' 12 primary contention is that Section 8 can and should be 13 ignored because it was effectively repealed by the 14 Federal Power Act, because they claim that Section 8 is 15 inconsistent with the Federal Power Act, but the fatal 16 flaw in this argument is that it entirely overlooks the 17 reservation proviso itself which expressly prohibits any 18 interference with the purposes for which the 19 reservations were established.

20 This proviso, as the Court of Appeals pointed 21 out, would be totally meaningless if Congress intended 22 to sanction the abrogation of the rights and powers 23 guaranteed to Indian tribes by preexisting treaties and 24 statutes.

25 Now, the other --

1           QUESTION: Of course, even if you are wrong on 2 that, if the Secretary happens to be right on his side 3 of the case, he will have the authority to put all the 4 conditions in he wants to.

5           MR. PELCYGER: That's correct. There is dual 6 protection, dual safeguards.

7           The petitioners' other argument on the Mission
8 Indian Relief Act is that Section 8 in the Federal Power 9 Act should be viewed as alternate mechanisms for 10 obtaining canal rights of way across Mission
11 reservations. That makes no sense whatsoever.

12           The one point on which all parties in this 13 case are agreed is that the use of Indian lands for a 14 power project, and this is assumedly a power project, 15 requires a Commission license. Now, it may also require 16 Indian consent, and that is the issue, but it certainly 17 requires a Commission license.

18           So since a Commission license would be 19 required and necessary in any event, obtaining the 20 consent of the Indians on the Secretary of the Interior 21 under Section 8 is not a true alternative. It would be 22 entirely superfluous and unnecessary, because it would 23 never be utilized if the Commission's license had to be 24 obtained in any event.

25           By contrast, requiring, as both the bands and

1 the Secretary contend, requiring both a Commission
2 license as well as compliance with Section 8 of the 3 Mission Indian Relief Act gives effect to both statutes 4 while preserving their overall sense and purpose, and 5 does not subordinate one to the other.

6 On the definition of reservations, I agree 7 with Mr. Schulder. The ambiguity that is created here is 8 that water rights are expressly concluded, and there is 9 no doubt about that, within the Act's definition of 10 reservations. That much is clear and unambiguous. The 11 ambiguity arises because the reservation proviso applies 12 to licenses within a reservation, and the question is, 13 how can a license be within a water right?

14 That doesn't really make sense, and so that is 15 a real true to life ambiguity, and our contention is 16 that that ambiguity has to be resolved in favor of the 17 downstream reservations for several reasons.

18 First and foremost is that that interpretation
19 carries out and furthers the evident protective purpose 20 toward reservations in the Federal Power Act, both in 21 the reservation proviso itself as well as in the broad 22 definition of reservation in the Act, and secondly, as 23 Mr. Schulder pointed out, because of the provision in 24 Section 23(b) that indicates that the word "effect" -- 25 that uses the word "effect" in a synonymous context with

1 the word "within" in Section 4(e), and thirdly, because 2 Section 10(e) of the Act expressly uses the term "tribal 3 lands embraced within Indian reservations" in defining 4 when manual charges are to be fixed by the Commission.

5 So, when Congress wanted to limit the term
6 "Indian reservations" to lands that are physically 7 within reservation boundaries, it knew very well how to 8 do that, and it did it in Section 10(e).

9 Thank you.

10 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Do you have anything 11 further?

12 ORAL ARGUMENT OF PAUL E. ENGSTRAND, ESQ.,

13 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONERS - REBUTTAL

14 MR. ENGSTRAND: Your Honor, if I may on this 15 question of water rights, the reason the land needs to 16 be protected is because of a physical imposition on the 17 land. The reason water rights need not be protected is 18 because the courts protect the water rights, and the 19 Congress said in Section 27 that nothing in the Federal 20 Power Act would interfere with the water rights given by 21 the states for the control and use of water.

22 This complex arrangement that Mr. Schulder
23 talked about, of course, Congress didn't lay that out.
24 Where would the fact-finder be that you were going to 25 weigh the substantial evidence rule against if you don't

1 read "reasonable" in front of the word "shall." And I
2 think that is what Justice McKinnon said in Lac Courte 3 Oreilles. He said that you must -- probably he was 4 saving that until later. It wasn't ripe for decision.
5 But that Congress must have meant substantially or 6 reasonable in --

7 QUESTION: Well, I take it the United States
8 agrees the Secretary's conditions must be reasonable.

9 MR. ENGSTRAND: Yes, Your Honor, and I --

10 QUESTION: And that even the Commission may 11 say what it thinks about his conditions. They just have 12 to put them in.

13 MR. ENGSTRAND: Yes. I don't see how that can 14 work, like Justice O'Connor suggested. I think that one 15 thing that is clear that overrides all this is that the 16 Congress was explicit in the role the Commission should 17 play in water power development. The Congress was 18 explicit that tribal lands were to be available for 19 water power projects. The Congress was explicit that 20 the decision-maker should be the Commission, the 21 independent body.

22 Thank you.

23 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, counsel.
24 The case is submitted.

25 (Whereupon, at 11:02 a.m., the case in the 1 above-entitled matter was submitted.)
