CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: We will hear arguments first this morning in Migra against Warren City School District Board.

Mr. Vintilla, you may proceed whenever you are ready.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF JOHN R. VINTILLA, ESQ.,
ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER

MR. VINTILLA: Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the Court, in this civil rights action brought under Sections 1983 and 85, the Sixth Circuit held that res judicata principles barred the petitioner from presenting her constitutional claims in the District Court because she failed to raise them in a prior state court proceeding.

The central issue before the Court is whether a litigation of statutory issues in a state court precludes a party from pursuing her federal civil rights claims which were not raised, litigated, or decided in the prior state court litigation.

This central question gives rise to two, we believe, two subsidiary questions. First, does the Chicago rule of res judicata bar the petitioner from pursuing the instant action in the federal court, and secondly, should a federal court, consistent with the

1 Congressional policy underlying 1983, deny a civil 2 rights plaintiff a federal forum because he or she 3 litigated, and incidentally prevailed, on a narrow state
4 issue in a state court against the same parties.

5 The factual history or posture of this case, 6 we believe, is critical to a consideration and 7 determination of the issues before the Court. The 8 petitioner, Ethel Migra, was employed by the Warren City 9 School District Board of Education as a supervisor of 10 elementary education. She was employed on a yearly 11 basis, what is designated in Ohio as a limited contract.

12 In Ohio, a state board of education is, I
13 imagine, in most jurisdictions, is granted very broad 14 discretion in the renewal or non-renewal of a teacher.
15 Now, in the event that the respondent board determines 16 that a teacher should not be renewed, the board is 17 required under Ohio law to notify the teacher on or 18 before April the 30th of the year in which the contract 19 is to expire.

20 And then recently our Supreme Court of Ohio in 21 Tracey versus O'Steigel Board, Six Ohio State Third 305, 22 also held that in that notification, the board must set 23 forth the basic reason for the non-renewal, although the 24 teacher is not entitled to what they call cause and a 25 hearing, cause and hearing mandate.

1 QUESTION: That would be a doctrine of state
2 law that you are --

3 MR. VINTILLA: Yes, Your Honor, the Supreme
4 Court. It was believed that since non-tenured -- 5 non-tenured teachers are not entitled to reasons for 6 non-renewal, since they are on a yearly basis, and each
7 year, at the end of the school year, their contract
8 terminations unless the school board on or before April 9 30th determines it should be renewed, and the teacher 10 has until June the 4th, I believe, of that year to 11 determine whether he or she will accept, and then they 12 are entered into a written contract.

13 In our situation here, the respondent board
14 held a meeting on April the 17th of 1979, and adopted a 15 resolution unanimously to renew the contract of the 16 petitioner for the ensuing year, and subsequent to that 17 resolution or offer to continue her employment, the 18 petitioner duly accepted and notified the board that she 19 accepted the offer to serve for another year.

20 One week after the initial meeting of April 21 17th, the board called a special meeting on April the 22 24th, at which time it rescinded, reconsidered the 23 renewal of the petitioner and rescinded its earlier 24 resolution to renew her, with a majority of three, a 25 three to one vote, and one member was absent because he

1 was not notified of the -- of the special purpose of the 2 meeting, and he was at that time -- in fact, two members
3 were sent to Florida as delegates of the board at a 4 national education conference.

5 Now, as a result of the action of the board in 6 terminating the petitioner, she filed suit in the Common
7 Pleas Court of Trumbull County, Ohio, and in that suit 8 she challenged the validity of the board's action in 9 terminating her, and her complaint in essence set forth
10 a breach of contract, and the second count, or second 11 cause of action, a tort action in the nature of a 12 conspiracy to violate her contract of employment.

13 The trial judge held trial. It was a bench
14 trial. At the trial time he upon his own motion
15 reserved and continued the tort action, the second cause 16 of action, and held trial only on the narrow issue as to 17 whether or not the board, respondent board acted in 18 conformity with the state law as to its non-renewal or 19 termination of the -- of the petitioner.

20 The court then rendered its judgment, found 21 that the petitioner had a binding contract with the 22 school board, that the school board breached the 23 contract, and therefore granted damages to the 24 petitioner in the amount of the salary she lost for the 25 year and ordered her reinstated to her position, but

1 inasmuch as the decision was rendered on March the 20th,
2 and her contract expired in June, she never entered into 3 her position again for one reason or another.

4 QUESTION: Mr. Vintilla, I guess there is no
5 question but that your client could have raised these 6 claims in the state court proceeding, could have filed 7 the 1983 and 1985 claims there?

8 MR. VINTILLA: Oh, no question about it, under 9 concurrent jurisdiction, and Congress has granted to the 10 states concurrent jurisdiction to entertain a civil 11 rights, and the civil rights suitor, plaintiff obviously 12 had a choice. If she felt comfortable with state
13 court --

14 QUESTION: And you would agree that if under 15 Ohio law your client would thereafter be precluded 16 because she had not brought them, that that would be 17 binding on the district court, the federal district
18 court? Is that right?

19 MR. VINTILLA: Well, I take the position, we 20 take the position that the Congressional intent in 21 granting plaintiffs -- a civil rights plaintiff the 22 choice to go to federal court or the state court, we 23 believe that that grant by Congress is unconditional. I
24 think as we understand the intent the Congress intended 25 to allow the suitor to determine whether he feels

1 comfortable in the state court, for whatever reason, for 2 local prejudice problems, and go to federal court.

3 QUESTION: Despite the clear requirement that 4 federal courts give full faith and credit to state court 5 judgments?

6 MR. VINTILLA: Well, I believe that if -- 7 although in our case here, we will argue that Ohio res
8 judicata would not preclude, but I would say that -- I
9 would say that if there were a state law to that effect, 10 which I would construe as making it mandatory, taking 11 away this free choice of which court to go to, and 12 making it mandatory, I would say that that law or that 13 policy would clearly contravene this Congressional 14 intent of allowing you, a civil rights plaintiff, to 15 choose without explanation.

16 QUESTION: How do you reconcile that with our 17 decision in Allen against McCurry?

18 MR. VINTILLA: Well, Allen versus McCurry
19 dealt only with collateral estoppel. Now, I say if a -- 20 as I understand Allen versus McCurry, I say if a civil 21 rights plaintiff voluntarily presents his claims to a 22 state court or presents some issue that is material or 23 relevant to the determination of a civil rights action, 24 then he certainly has waived it or has foregone the 25 right, or if he is confronted with collateral estoppel,

1 I agree, he should not relitigate an important material
2 issue.

3 QUESTION: Well, Allen against McCurry and, I
4 think, Herring against Proceze last year, too, involved
5 -- the original state adjudication was a criminal one, 6 wasn't it, where certainly the appearance of the 7 defendant couldn't be called voluntary.

8 MR. VINTILLA: Well, it is not voluntary,
9 except in Herring, I think, I think there was a strong
10 motivation for Herring -- or to say in Herring, if you
11 follow that, adopt that rule, there was a strong
12 motivation to say in Herring, here, I am faced with a 13 criminal conviction that is going to go on my record, 14 and I have a constitutional defense. I have a 15 constitutional defense. I am going to raise that 16 defense rather than risk being convicted or -- and 17 having a criminal record, or rather than risk this 18 voluntarily pleading guilty, and I think -- but I think 19 the principle is the same.

20 I think as Justice Marshall said, that they 21 argued -- the petitioners in that case argued like our 22 respondents are arguing here. They say if the civil 23 rights plaintiff had an opportunity to litigate, to 24 raise, to litigate and decide, then they should be 25 barred and precluded from filing a subsequent civil

1 action, and Justice Marshall said, if we adopt such a
2 rule, it would be anomalous.

3 And then Justice Marshall also goes into 4 running afoul of this clear and established
5 Congressional intent, of this grave concern of Congress
6 that a civil rights suitor should have the selection.
7 His very valuable civil rights should be, if he chooses,
8 should be considered by a federal court.

9 QUESTION: Did Justice Marshall at any time
10 say you could go to both courts?

11 MR. VINTILLA: Excuse me, Your Honor?

12 QUESTION: Did Justice Marshall say at any 13 time that the statute gives you the right to go to both 14 courts on the same point?

15 MR. VINTILLA: No, Your Honor.

16 QUESTION: I didn't think so.

17 (General laughter.)

18 MR. VINTILLA: Your Honor dealt with the 19 collateral estoppel statute of Virginia, but as a 20 further argument, I would -- I would -- I would, as an 21 answer, like to adopt the statement of Justice Harlan in 22 Monroe versus Pape, where he said, "A deprivation of a 23 constitutional right is significantly different from and 24 more serious than a violation of state right, and 25 therefore deserves a different remedy, even though the

1 same act may constitute a state tort and the deprivation
2 of a constitutional right."

3 And in Ohio, incidentally, under the -- not 4 incidentally, it is an important aspect of our case -- 5 the tort, the second count or second cause of action in 6 the complaint in the state action was a tort action in 7 the nature of conspiracy. When the trial judge
8 dismissed that cause of action and -- that is, reserved 9 -- dismissed it, he dismissed it without prejudice, and 10 the language of "without prejudice" in Ohio means that 11 that is to be construed as an adjudication not on the 12 merits.

13 QUESTION: Well, now, to the extent that 14 you're -- I think you said at the beginning of your 15 argument you were making two points: one, that the Ohio 16 law of res judicata would not bar relitigation of your 17 client's claim --

18 MR. VINTILLA: Yes.

19 QUESTION: -- and two, that even if it did,
20 the federal statute would prevent it from having that 21 effect. Now, so far as the Ohio law of res judicata is 22 concerned, Judge Manos wrote an opinion -- he is an Ohio
23 federal judge. The Court of Appeals for the Sixth 24 Circuit affirmed it. Are you asking us to disagree with 25 their conclusions as to what Ohio law was?

1 MR. VINTILLA: Of course. Of course. Judge
2 Manos did not consider the legal aspects or legal 3 consequences of a voluntary dismissal without prejudice, 4 and in Ohio that is clear. That is not adjudication on 5 the merits. And I think one of the first and most 6 important elements of traditional res judicata is that 7 you must have a determination on the merits by a court 8 of competent jurisdiction, and if you don't have -- and 9 of course, of course, the -- in Ohio there is no problem.

10 That's why we brought it in federal court 11 under, under that situation, where a matter is 12 voluntarily dismissed, you can immediately turn around 13 and refile it the next day. It is a -- Dismissal 14 without prejudice is not considered a determination on 15 the merits. It is not -- it is not adjudication at 16 all.

17 So, in Ohio, there is no Ohio -- there is no
18 present rule in Ohio that would bar -- in my 19 understanding, which would bar the petitioner from 20 filing a subsequent state court action or filing a civil 21 rights action in any court of competent jurisdiction 22 which has jurisdiction of the subject matter and 23 jurisdiction over the person.

24 And this Court can very well, if it agrees
25 with me, just stop there and say, since Ohio doesn't

1 consider it --

2 QUESTION: Well, did the district court -- did 3 the district court decide that further litigation in the 4 Ohio courts would have been barred?

5 MR. VINTILLA: Well, the district court took a 6 very simplistic -- and the court of appeals --

7 QUESTION: Well, suppose instead of filing 8 this 1983 suit in the federal court, the plaintiff had 9 gone back to the state court and filed a 1983 suit, a 10 separate 1983 suit. Did the district court decide that 11 under Ohio law that suit would be barred by res 12 judicata?

13 MR. VINTILLA: The district court didn't go
14 that far. It didn't entertain --

15 QUESTION: It didn't even address what Chic
16 law would do, did it?

17 MR. VINTILLA: No. No, though we argued Chic
18 law and argued Norwood versus McDonald, which expresses 19 Chic law, which is still the law of Chic.

20 QUESTION: And the court of appeals just 21 affirmed by order?

22 MR. VINTILLA: One order -- one-page order.
23 One paragraph.

24 QUESTION: Mr. Vintilla, how do you explain
25 the comment in Justice -- or, rather, Judge Manos's

1 opinion at C-29 of the petition that the plaintiff could 2 have brought her First Amendment claim in state court,
3 and she is therefore barred from asserting it here,
4 citing Coogan against Cincinnati, which was a Fourth --
5 rather, a Sixth Circuit case that came out of Ohio?

6 MR. VINTILLA: Well, as I read Judge Manos's
7 opinion, Judge Manos -- and he cited another Sixth 8 Circuit opinion -- he just was -- took the position that 9 since state courts can entertain constitutional, full 10 constitutional issues, that there is no reason why he 11 should litigate them there, and since they can, you are 12 barred. It is simple as that.

13 Now, the Coogan case, I mean, there are many 14 areas, and sometimes you have to make a fine distinction
15 where the courts confuse collateral estoppel with res
16 judicata, and there are many areas, and in most cases, 17 as I read them, what really happens is, the plaintiff in 18 the subsequent action or the civil rights plaintiff, he 19 is a disgruntled party. He lost in the first instance.
20 He is seeking some way to get a second trial. And if 21 you analyze it closely, what he is really trying to do, 22 he wants to relitigate the issues that he lost on.

23 Now, I believe in that situation, if you adopt
24 Allen versus McCurry, he runs into collateral estoppel,
25 and so he lost on the state level, he says, now I am

1 going to frame the same issue on a constitutional basis
2 and see if I can't get the state court to be more
3 sympathetic, and that is Coogan, too, and I have no
4 quarrel with that. I have no quarrel with that. But I 5 think in a situation like ours, when you have -- where 6 -- what in effect the lower courts have said, as I 7 understand it, they are making it mandatory. They are 8 taking away this choice. They say, since you sued these 9 same people in the state court on state issues, wouldn't 10 it be better if you brought your civil rights case and 11 we wrapped this up all in one, prevent a multiplicity of 12 suits, and that's their position.

13 QUESTION: Let's assume the district court had 14 addressed state law expressly, and said that any 15 subsequent litigation about a claim you could have 16 raised but you didn't, any subsequent litigation in the 17 state court would have been barred by state law.
18 Suppose that -- or would not have been barred. Would 19 not have been barred. Would that preclude the federal 20 court from saying, well, the state courts might have 21 heard this, but we don't have to? We must give as much
22 full faith and credit to a judgment as the state courts
23 would, but we can't give any less, but we can give more.

24 MR. VINTILLA: I wouldn't carry that that 25 far. But we are talking about fundamental

1 constitutional rights, and extend the state authority to 2 contravene federal constitutional rights, and I can say
3 in this situation --

4 QUESTION: No, the federal court just says, we 5 couldn't care less what the state courts would do, we 6 are going to -- we are going to give full faith and -- 7 we are going to apply res judicata independently to this 8 case.

9 MR. VINTILLA: Well, unless -- I take the -- 10 the statements this Court has made about Congressional 11 intent to assign to a federal court a paramount rule in 12 protecting, or that the federal court is a primary 13 protector. I think that that is very important.

14 Now, in our case, Your Honor, in our case 15 especially, I think a lawyer would be remiss if he took 16 the subsequent action in the state court either under a 17 state court action or under federal action in light of 18 the circumstances in that community, the sharp, heated 19 controversy in the community about whether or not this 20 petitioner should be continued or not, and having in 21 mind that you have a state court judge who has to go 22 before perhaps some of these citizens who took the 23 position against the petitioner. He must rely upon 24 those citizens to get re-elected. This judge, I can 25 tell you, that was very reluctant and very disturbed at

1 having to determine this action, and that is why he 2 confined it to a very narrow statutory issue, because he 3 was --

4 QUESTION: Will you point to the record for 5 what you are now talking about?

6 MR. VINTILLA: Please?

7 QUESTION: Would you point to the record for 8 what you are now talking about?

9 MR. VINTILLA: Well, I am construing his -- I
10 am construing the state court's --

11 QUESTION: Is there anything in the record
12 about the judge wouldn't be elected or something?

13 MR. VINTILLA: I construed that from the fact 14 that he could have.

15 QUESTION: Well, where is that in the record?

16 MR. VINTILLA: From the fact that he separated 17 and reserved and didn't indicate any reason why he 18 didn't try both cases.

19 QUESTION: That is your conclusion.

20 MR. VINTILLA: That is my conclusion, and 21 also --

22 QUESTION: Well, are you sure we are 23 interested in your conclusions?

24 MR. VINTILLA: Not necessarily, Your Honor.

25 QUESTION: Or are we interested in the record?

1 MR. VINTILLA: It is not in the record
2 except --

3 QUESTION: I, for one, am interested in the 4 record.

5 MR. VINTILLA: Please?

6 QUESTION: I, for one, am interested in the 7 record, what the record shows.

8 MR. VINTILLA: The record shows that the state
9 court judge reserved and continued the second count,
10 which reasonable minds would say he should have heard
11 all at once. He should have adopted this theory, this 12 principle, let's decide all things together, let's not 13 have repetitive suits. There is nothing in the record.
14 The judge did not indicate why he did not hear that -- 15 try that second action. Moreover, the defendants did 16 not object. The defendants could have said, Your Honor, 17 as you are saying here, we do not want to be subjected 18 to a second suit, to the expense and the aggravation, 19 the vexation. We want everything, and if the judge had 20 -- judge had overruled them, they could have appealed 21 that. They could have appealed, and as we are saying 22 today, they could have said in the state court.

23 Now, we -- my argument is that as I understand 24 it when Congress enacted the civil rights, it wanted to 25 remove a civil rights plaintiff from the local

1 prejudices and the provincial influences.

2 We were subjected to the same local political 3 prejudices and influences, and therefore we thought, we 4 are not going to get a full and fair hearing if we go 5 here, and we understand the position of the judge. We 6 understand that he is thinking about future election, 7 and that's the realities of life, and if he can avoid 8 antagonizing anybody, and we have no idea how widespread 9 the opposition -- we know that the respondents were 10 vehement in their opposition, but we do not know -- it 11 may very well involve other prominent citizens.

12 We do know that the state court judge had some 13 -- had some papers that respondent Swan had gathered,
14 and we have a companion related case in the district 15 court, and we felt perhaps those papers may reveal some 16 information or some relevant evidence or may lead us to,
17 give us information, and we have waited two and a half 18 years to have a determination as to whether or not we 19 can have discovery with those papers.

20 So, there are circumstances here, I think,
21 that could reasonably construe from what is in the 22 record that it would not be wise to go back to a court 23 in that community, and fortunately, the wisdom of 24 Congress said, you have a selection. If you feel, 25 without having to justify, you feel you are not

1 comfortable there, you feel your rights may not be given 2 consideration as a federal court would, you are free to 3 go to federal court, and that is what we have done.
4 That is what we have done.

5 And we place great weight on civil rights, on 6 the dignity of the human being. I think there isn't 7 anything more sacred in a person's life than his right 8 to his good name, honor, and reputation, and to his 9 right to make his livelihood in a vocation or profession 10 of his own choosing.

11 This is what is involved here. These 12 respondents were free and protected by the law. If they 13 felt that the performance or the conduct of the 14 petitioner did not conform to what they thought would be 15 in the best interests of the school district or the best 16 interests of the children and the students, they were 17 free to come to a board meeting and say openly. Even if 18 what they said was not accurate or true, they would have 19 been protected, and I say, I don't think that Dr. Migra
20 ought to be renewed because of this and that, and I
21 don't think she's good for our system, and I don't like 22 her philosophies, and I don't like her political 23 beliefs, or I don't like how she selects books for the 24 curriculum, or I don't like how aggressive she is in 25 desegregation, and they could have said that openly,

1 because in their heart they were genuine.

2 They had a right to say that. That is why
3 they were elected, to express what they felt, and they 4 felt, to protect my constituents who put me on this 5 board, I have an obligation to see that we do not 6 continue, we do not continue Dr. Migra. They could have 7 done that, not to call a meeting -- call a meeting when 8 they sent two delegates to Florida, and not to 9 reconsider when they had a contract, they had a binding 10 contract. They had counsel, they had local counsel, the 11 city solicitor. They could have said, counselor, can we 12 call a special meeting? Can we validly reconsider what 13 we did a week ago unanimously and rescind? Can we do 14 that? They didn't do that. Now, when they had --

15 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well.

16 Mr. Messenger?

17 ORAL ARGUMENT OF JAMES L. MESSENGER, ESQ.,

18 ON BEHALF OF THE RESPONDENTS

19 MR. MESSENGER: Mr. Chief Justice, and 20 Justices of the United States Supreme Court, the issue
21 before this Court is whether or not a state court
22 petitioner who claims that she has had her contract 23 rights violated and files a law suit in state court to 24 get her job back, and also alleges conspiracy among the 25 board members to deprive her of her job, that once

1 having tried that lawsuit, can then embark upon a second
2 lawsuit in federal court alleging essentially the same
3 facts, the same causes of action, but tacking onto it a 4 First Amendment or 1983 claim.

5 Both the United States District Court for the 6 Northern District of Ohio and the Sixth Circuit Court of 7 Appeals felt that she should not, and that the 8 preclusive effect of res judicata barred the second 9 lawsuit that was filed in federal court. The U.S.
10 District Court in Ohio applied 1738, the full faith and 11 credit clause, which essentially requires that federal 12 courts give preclusive effect to state court judgments
13 if in fact they would be a bar in federal court.

14 We believe that both lower federal courts were 15 right, and that this Court should affirm the opinions 16 below. Both the state court action, Your Honors, and 17 the federal court action spawned from the same set of 18 facts.

19 The petitioner had her job abolished. The 20 reason her job was abolished was that at this time in 21 northern Ohio, in Youngstown and Warren, we saw the loss 22 of 25,000 or 30,000 jobs in a two-year period of time.
23 All of our schools had to cut back on personnel. At 24 this time, we had one of the finest school systems in 25 Ohio, but jobs like Dr. Migra had, which was a

1 supervisor of elementary education, had to go by the 2 wayside, because they were a luxury.

3 Dr. Migra was well respected and well liked in 4 the Warren community. An effort was found to keep her 5 in the school system, but there was no place for her.
6 Simply because of economic, financial reasons, her job
7 had to be abolished.

8 QUESTION: Is this all in the record?

9 MR. MESSENGER: Yes, Your Honor. It is not 10 only in the complaint, but also in the answer filed both 11 by the board and by the individual defendants.

12 Dr. Migra sued in state court to get her job
13 back, alleging a procedural difficulty at the board 14 meeting in which her non-renewal took place. She was 15 right, and she won.

16 QUESTION: She was reinstated and got back 17 pay?

18 MR. MESSENGER: She was reinstated, and with 19 back pay, and from that, Your Honor, we appealed to the 20 appellate court and to the Supreme Court of Ohio, and 21 the procedural difficulty that the board encountered was 22 basically held to be too bad. You didn't do it right, 23 the woman is entitled to her job back, and back pay, and 24 in fact she was paid back pay.

25 QUESTION: Well, just for that year. Just for

1 that year.

2 MR. MESSENGER: Just for that one year. The 3 following year, Your Honor, she was non-renewed pursuant 4 to the procedures and the statute, and that was not 5 contested in the state court posture. She won her
6 case. Essentially, she alleged five causes of action, 7 one of which was the board violated the sunshine law.
8 They anticipatorily breached a contract and did other 9 things that were procedurally wrong in the non-renewal
10 of a public employee's contract.

11 At this time, she had the full opportunity to 12 allege any other types of claims that she may have. She 13 did allege conspiracy to deprive her of her contractual
14 rights. She could have alleged at that time a 1983
15 action, a Title 7 action, a Title 9 action, or if she 16 wanted, even an age discrimination action, because Dr.
17 Migra was into her fifties at this time, and certainly 18 an argument could be made that one of the reasons that 19 her position of employment was removed was because of 20 age.

21 QUESTION: Mr. Messenger, now, her conspiracy
22 claim was ultimately dismissed without prejudice.

23 MR. MESSENGER: That's correct.

24 QUESTION: What was the effect of that? Did
25 that incorporate any portion of her civil rights claim?

1 MR. MESSENGER: I don't believe so, Your
2 Honor. I think that the claims that they alleged, that 3 she alleged in the state court was conspiracy to violate
4 contract rights. Being dismissed without prejudice
5 could have, under Ohio's saving statute, been refiled
6 within a one-year period of time, but she could not use
7 the cause of action on conspiracy to deprive of contract
8 rights to then open up the entire spectrum of any other 9 cause of action that she had neglected to file in the 10 first place.

11 Essentially what we are talking about are 12 policy reasons as to why the lower court judgment should 13 be affirmed. It is certainly within the judicial 14 process to keep all of our claims and all of our cause 15 of action in one place. This is not only, I believe, 16 the feeling of the Ohio state courts, but also of the 17 federal courts.

18 QUESTION: You mean those claims arising out 19 of the same operative set of facts?

20 MR. MESSENGER: Yes, Your Honor, same
21 transaction, the same causative effect, in this 22 instance, the non-renewal of a contract of employment.
23 From this springs the rights that the plaintiff claimed 24 were violated. She may allege one or all of the rights
25 that she claims were violated in the state court

1 action. We have concurrent jurisdiction of 1983 actions
2 in state courts. She could have alleged anything that 3 she wanted in that lawsuit. She didn't miss much, I 4 might say, because there were five particular causes of 5 action that were filed as to why she was entitled to get 6 her job back.

7 QUESTION: Are you making an argument about 8 what federal res judicata principles should consist of?
9 Or are you saying -- or are you arguing about Ohio law?

10 MR. MESSENGER: I believe, Your Honor, that 11 you have to look at Ohio law, the federal courts must 12 look at Ohio law to determine whether if the case were 13 in the state court --

14 QUESTION: What if the Ohio law wouldn't bar 15 it at all? Do you think the United States District
16 Court would have to entertain it?

17 MR. MESSENGER: I am sorry, Your Honor? I
18 didn't follow the question.

19 QUESTION: Well, assume Ohio law, under Ohio
20 law this plaintiff would not be barred from relitigating
21 in -- and from filing a 1983 suit in the state court
22 after this first judgment.

23 MR. MESSENGER: Yes.

24 QUESTION: Assume that it was not barred by 25 Ohio law. Do you think the United States Supreme -- or

1 the United States District Court would have to entertain 2 it?

3 MR. MESSENGER: I think they should follow the 4 Ohio law and allow the suit in.

5 QUESTION: You mean, either way, whether it is 6 barred or not.

7 MR. MESSENGER: I think they have to look at 8 the state law. Yes, Your Honor. The state law on res
9 judicata, whether or not that state court --

10 QUESTION: Well, where did -- tell me, where 11 did the district court consider Ohio law and the effect 12 of 1738? Did it even cite 1738? I'm not sure it did.

13 MR. MESSENGER: The -- On Page 23 of the 14 petition, where the lower court begins the discussion on 15 res judicata and why it acts as a bar. It continues on 16 Pages 24 and 25, and there is a number of string cites 17 there, Your Honor, that --

18 QUESTION: Yes.

19 MR. MESSENGER: And it basically comes to the 20 conclusion that -- and cites Allen versus McCurry also 21 of this court that 1983 actions are subject to the 22 defense of res judicata, and that under the Coogan
23 versus Cincinnati Bar Association, that if --

24 QUESTION: Yes, but where is it -- does it 25 ever cite 1738? Or consider what the Ohio courts would 1 do with respect to res judicata?

2 MR. MESSENGER: I believe that's what the 3 whole opinion is about.

4 QUESTION: Well, it never says so.

5 MR. MESSENGER: You mean specifically using --

6 QUESTION: I figure you can just as well
7 interpret it as an independent res judicata policy 8 announced by the federal court, and what's wrong with 9 that?

10 MR. MESSENGER: They have federal --

11 QUESTION: 1738 doesn't on its face prevent 12 the federal court from applying a stricter rule of res 13 judicata than the state courts would.

14 MR. MESSENGER: Well, I would think, Your 15 Honor, that the federal courts would --

16 QUESTION: And I would, I suppose, I would 17 think you would take that position.

18 MR. MESSENGER: I would think, Your Honor,
19 that the federal courts would look at the substantive 20 law of the state courts in determining whether or not 21 the res judicata applies.

22 QUESTION: Well, this one didn't. This one
23 didn't. It sounds to me like you are confessing error.
24 If a federal court must address Ohio law in 1738 and 25 didn't, it must have made a mistake. I am suggesting

1 that regardless of what state law would do, the federal 2 court can impose its own stricter rule of res judicata.

3 MR. MESSENGER: Of res judicata? Well --

4 QUESTION: Isn't that inherent in the 5 authority of the federal court with respect to its own 6 jurisdiction?

7 MR. MESSENGER: I think I would have to argue
8 that that is so, that it is, but it seems that the cases 9 appear to state that the federal court will look to what 10 the state law does on a particular matter such as res
11 judicata and then use that to fashion its remedy, but I
12 would certainly think, like in the field of labor law, 13 that the federal courts could fashion their own body of 14 law and their own system of whether or not res judicata
15 in fact would apply, but I believe this would only 16 amplify our position, that if the state court would 17 have --

18 QUESTION: But it couldn't give any less
19 effect than the state law.

20 MR. MESSENGER: Right. Yes. Yes, Your Honor.

21 QUESTION: But is that what the Court did in 22 Allen against McCurry?

23 MR. MESSENGER: My understanding of Allen and 24 McCurry, Your Honor, was that this Court stated that res 25 judicata principles apply in 1983 actions, that prior to

1 that time the argument was that only issue preclusion or 2 collateral estoppel applied, but the claim preclusion or 3 res judicata might not apply.

4 QUESTION: But did it apply a federal rule of 5 res judicata or a Virginia rule?

6 MR. MESSENGER: I can't answer that, Your 7 Honor. I don't know from memory whether -- whether it
8 was, and I wouldn't want to guess at it, but at least 9 the holding of it seemed to say in our research when we 10 were preparing for this case was that the doctrine of 11 res judicata does apply in 1983 actions, and in fact the 12 petitioner has admitted that in its reply brief, that it 13 applies. So what we are saying is, if in fact it is 14 acknowledged that 1983 actions -- or res judicata
15 applies to 1983 actions, then certainly it should apply 16 in this case, because this was a 1983 action that was 17 filed in the federal courts in Ohio.

18 If it does apply, then it bars the 19 petitioner's claim in this particular lawsuit, and the 20 lower courts were in fact dead right in dismissing the 21 case. I think there is another policy --

22 QUESTION: Isn't that oversimplifying it? You 23 say the doctrine of res judicata applies, but there are 24 different doctrines of res judicata. There could be one
25 that requires that the issue be raised in the other case

1 and one that does not. I mean, your example in your own
2 case of a property damage claim and a personal injury 3 claim arising out of the same accident, one could have 4 different rules on that, and you have said the rule in 5 Ohio is clear, and therefore the case is barred. You
6 have not even argued, as I understand your brief, that 7 there is a federal rule that is more strict than the 8 Ohio rule.

9 MR. MESSENGER: No, we haven't. We have 10 rested entirely on the Ohio --

11 QUESTION: You think the statute applies, and 12 you win on Ohio law, but Justice White, it seems to me, 13 is correct in saying the lower court didn't really 14 decide the Ohio law question, though, or do you take 15 issue with that?

16 MR. MESSENGER: I believe that the lower 17 court, and again, Your Honor, I don't mean to postulate
18 for the Court, but I believe that the district court
19 looked at what the law of Ohio was, the substantive law
20 of Ohio --

21 QUESTION: But they don't cite a single Ohio
22 case.

23 MR. MESSENGER: I realize that. They cite the 24 federal cases, and the Coogan versus Cincinnati case.
25 And I do realize that our brief was structured along the 1 lines of the state law barring the present suit.

2 QUESTION: Well, if we had -- I would think 3 that if state law is critical to this case, and the 4 district court didn't decide it, nor did the court of 5 appeals, that we would have to remand. We don't 6 normally decide state law questions in the first 7 instance. But it didn't sound to me like the district
8 court, as long as it was going to hold res judicata
9 applied, apparently didn't feel bound by state law. It 10 was just a federal policy.

11 MR. MESSENGER: Well, that is certainly an 12 argument, Your Honor, but to expand on that, and as 13 Chief Justice Burger said, why couldn't the federal law
14 -- federal courts have their own doctrine of res
15 judicata that may be even more strict than the state?

16 QUESTION: I am suggesting that is what the 17 district court thought, and did.

18 MR. MESSENGER: But certainly if it were 19 barred under applying state law, they would even be more 20 barred than under federal law, so that --

21 QUESTION: You would have to -- Under 1738, 22 you would have to hold it barred then.

23 MR. MESSENGER: Right.

24 QUESTION: Your friend's central thesis of his 25 argument, as I got it, was that he was appealing to

1 federal law, not state law, when he got into the federal 2 courts. Therefore, federal law should take over with 3 respect to all the issues, should it not?

4 MR. MESSENGER: I don't believe so, Your
5 Honor, for a number of reasons. Number One, I believe 6 that our local courts are perfectly able to determine 7 questions that arise under --

8 QUESTION: Yes, but you have been in the local 9 courts. You have finished in the local courts. Now he 10 has brought an action in the federal courts, in which no 11 state law question is raised, but only federal law.

12 MR. MESSENGER: I don't believe that's 13 entirely so, Your Honor. Because of the allegations
14 contained in the federal complaint, they basically 15 rehash the same causes of action that were brought in 16 the state court regarding the procedural deficiencies
17 and the non-renewal, the violation of the contract
18 rights. The only thing different in the federal court
19 is the First Amendment claim, the constitutional claim, 20 and our case is simply, they could have alleged that in 21 Trumbull County Common Pleas Court.

22 QUESTION: Of course they could.

23 MR. MESSENGER: And that judge there could 24 have decided that case, that issue, but for some reason
25 they neglected to do that, and then have filed another

1 claim in federal court alleging essentially the same
2 thing, emanating from the same facts, the non-renewal of 3 a contract, but this time alleging 1983 rights. That is 4 why the doctrine, I believe, of res judicata, is even 5 present in our legal system. It is to stop doing what 6 the petitioner has done. If that doctrine is not 7 applied to this case, what would prevent the petitioner 8 from filing an ADEA claim in another district court, or 9 a Title 9 or a Title 7 claim in yet another district 10 court? We could hopscotch through the state and the 11 federal forums, depending upon the whims of the counsel 12 for the petitioner.

13 I think that the public policy arguments
14 dictate that there be an end to litigation, or certainly 15 a streamlining to litigation, that we are not saying to 16 Dr. Migra that you don't have a number of causes of 17 action or a number of claims to allege, but if you have 18 them, put them all in one place. Be fair to both 19 sides. Fairness applies not only to petitioners and 20 plaintiffs, but also to respondents and defendants.

21 QUESTION: That is what the district judge
22 said, isn't it?

23 MR. MESSENGER: I think essentially that's 24 what he said, Your Honor. I think that you have to 25 evoke the doctrine of fairness to defendants, too. We

1 didn't know that we had to prepare a defense for a 1983
2 claim or a constitutional right claim until 3 approximately 14 and a half months after the first claim
4 was brought. Now, this puts the defendant at a
5 disadvantage. We now have to begin --

6 QUESTION: That is ordinarily a question of 7 the statute of limitations. I mean, you are protected
8 against that sort of thing not by doctrines of res
9 judicata, but by statute of limitations.

10 MR. MESSENGER: That is true, Your Honor.
11 That is true. But it would certainly streamline the 12 judicial system, and also for the element of fairness to 13 put, if you will, all your eggs in one basket, or all 14 your claims in one court, but don't subject defendants 15 to defending cases in various courts depending upon the 16 theory of the case when the local courts have the 17 jurisdiction to decide these very issues.

18 I think, Your Honor, that anything else I 19 might add would just be repetitive. I believe that the 20 issue is clear. We believe that the lower court was 21 absolutely right in applying the doctrine of res 22 judicata, both lower courts, that Dr. Migra could have,
23 if she had wished, alleged her 1983 action in the state
24 court, that she didn't do it, the doctrine of res bars
25 the instant action, and that the lower court judgment

1 should be affirmed.

2 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Very well. Do you have 3 anything further, Mr. Vintilla?

4 ORAL ARGUMENT BY JOHN R. VINTILLA, ESQ.,

5 ON BEHALF OF THE PETITIONER - REBUTTAL

6 MR. VINTILLA: May it please the Court, first, 7 I think we must straighten the record out, and I -- with 8 all due respect to counsel, there is nothing in the 9 record as far as a determination by the trial court that 10 the basis for which the board did not renew because they 11 did away with the job or any other reason, that was a 12 very easy way out for them. If that was their position, 13 there was no need for them to engage in this wave of 14 scandal --

15 QUESTION: That is not before us any more.
16 You prevailed on that issue, didn't you?

17 MR. VINTILLA: Yes, Your Honor. Yes, Your 18 Honor. I just --

19 QUESTION: This is a simple contract matter.

20 MR. VINTILLA: Yes, and we are not seeking to 21 relitigate the contract. We are seeking to litigate
22 rights which were not before the court, federal rights,
23 the right to be notified of charges, and to a fair 24 hearing, to defend, the inviolate right to a person's 25 good name, honor, and reputation in the community, the

1 right to express one's --

2 QUESTION: They arise -- They all arise out of 3 the same set of facts, do they not?

4 MR. VINTILLA: Yes, they were -- it is 5 analogous. If the court had determined the tort action, 6 we would have lost. We would have been in great 7 difficulty, and I don't think it's necessary for this 8 Court to remand to determine Ohio law, this Court and 9 federal courts, unless there is a conflict, there is a 10 reason to abstain. Ohio law is clear as to what 11 voluntary dismissal means, and I think there is no need
12 for that, and so I want to tell this Court it has been a 13 privilege and an honor for me to appear before this 14 Court.

15 CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER: Thank you, gentlemen.
16 The case is submitted.

17 (Whereupon, at 10:47 o'clock a.m., the case in 18 the above-entitled matter was submitted.)
