Supreme Court Building Highlights

Sculpted by William Wetmore Story, this ground floor landmark pays tribute to the nation's longest serving Chief Justice, who served for 34 years from 1801 to 1835.

2 Spiral Staircases

Tucked in the side corridors on the ground floor are two architectural marvels designed by Cass Gilbert. Each self-supporting staircase has 136 steps and seven spirals.

3 Building Model

The John Donnelly Company created the original plaster model for the Supreme Court Building in 1929.

4 Portraits of Notable “Firsts”

Among the many portraits of past Justices displayed on the ground floor are those of Louis D. Brandeis, the first Jewish Justice; Thurgood Marshall, the first African American Justice; and Sandra Day O'Connor, the first woman Justice.

Note: By tradition, only portraits of Justices who have retired or are no longer serving are displayed in the building.

5 John Marshall’s Bench Chair

Mahogany bench chair used by Chief Justice John Marshall from 1819 to 1835. Since 1972, the chair has been part of the investiture ceremonies for new Justices. Prior to taking the Judicial Oath, the new Justice sits in the Marshall chair in the Courtroom.

6 The Warren Court Sculpture

7 Original Models for the Courtroom Friezes

8 John Jay Bust

This terracotta bust of Chief Justice John Jay, sculpted from life by Giuseppe Ceracchi in 1792, is the oldest bust in the Court’s collection.

9 The Great Hall

Located on the first floor, the Great Hall is a grand and majestic space. Busts of all 16 former Chief Justices line the sides of the hall.

10 The Courtroom

Located on the first floor, the Courtroom is the heart of the building and where the Justices meet as a body to hear oral arguments and announce decisions. It is the only courtroom in the building.
